

Johannes Vrry
Armiger Aedus Christi Alumnus
Obijt Anno Dom. 1714. Aet. 51.

THE WORKS
OF GEOFFREY CHAUCER,

Compared with the Former EDITIONS, and many valuable MSS.

Out of which, Three TALES are added which were never before Printed;

By JOHN URRY.

Student of Christ-Church, Oxon. Deceased : March, 17. 171 $\frac{4}{5}$.

Together with a

GLOSSARY,

By a Student of the same College. Jim. Thomas.

To the Whole is prefixed

The Author's LIFE, newly written, and a PREFACE, giving an Account of this Edition.

LONDON,

Printed for BERNARD LINTOT, between the Temple Gates. MDCCXI.

*Anglia Chaucerum vocatur nostra Poetam
Cui veneranda debet patria lingua suas*

The English Chaucer. A monument erected by the City of London. Geo. Kneller Sculp. 1717.

To the Trustees of the British Museum.

This Book (bound in 2 Volumes) was put into my hands by the Rt Honble Edward Earl of Oxford, &c. not long before his Death, in order to my transcribing into it some of the most material
Readings I had collected out of Mss. & old printed Editions of this Author; which I performed as far as my Time & Leisure would then permit: And as it may, on acct of those Notes be properly reputed to belong to the Hatleyan Mss. Library, purchased for the use of the Publick, it is thither returned accordingly.

I cannot now pretend to proceed further in that Work; but to make some amends for that Deficiency, I take the liberty to offer my own Copy of the same Author (in 2 Volumes) in which the various Readings were originally Entered, together with such Remarks as occurred to me (particularly in the Glossary) if it be judged worthy to be admitted into that most valuable Collection.

x an. at. 88.

Nov^r 19. 1764.

W. Thomas

*x Digested into this order, from various Collections of Mr Bart, &c;
by my Br. William Thomas. T. T.*

THE L I F E O F GEOFFREY CHAUCER.

IT is observable that great Men, remarkable for the same Excellencies in different Ages, have generally several Circumstances in their Lives which bear a near resemblance to each other. Homer and the Father of our English Poetry are not more like in their Perfections of writing, than in the particulars of their Birth, and the uncertainty of their Parents and of the place of their Nativity. That Parallel which is drawn between the former and Virgil doth not square near so well as this; nor does the Roman Imitator come up to the resemblance of the Britain. The Parents of both were uncertain; the first having (as usual in such cases) his Genealogy drawn from Heroes, Dæmons, and River Deities; the other, on the contrary, boasting no other extraction than what is deduced by conjecture from mean persons. Different places contend for the honour of their Birth; a number of Cities for the one, and several Provinces the other. The near similitude of their Genius's and Excellencies is easily discovered by their Readers. They differ in nothing so much as in their Fortunes; the first being generally press'd with necessity, and disregarded; the latter favoured and rewarded by Princes, and for the most part abounding in wealth.

Many particulars relating to our Author having, through the negligence of our fore-fathers, been suffered to sink in oblivion, it is the more necessary to preserve what remains of him, and to attempt the recovery of some parts of his History: I shall therefore digest the confused common places left concerning him in as regular a method as I can, and with such additions as have been rescued from Time endeavour to clear up his Birth, and by the assistance of such particular Æra's as are on Record concerning him, trace him through the most remarkable Passages of his Life.

Leland, of all those who professedly write his Life, came nearest to his time, but at too long a distance to make any certain discoveries concerning his Birth, though he had the best opportunities of doing it, being commissioned by King Henry VIII. to search all the Libraries of Religious Houses in England, when those sacred Archives were preserved, before the Flood of Destruction, which soon after broke in upon them, and swept them away with their Buildings; even before Polydore Virgil had destroyed such curious pieces, as would have contradicted his fram'd and fabulous History. He for some reasons believed Oxfordshire or Berkshire to have produced this great Man: What those reasons were he has not informed us; there appears at present no other, but that the Seats of his Family were in those Counties.

* Quibusdam argumentis adducor ut credam, Italicam, vel Berochensem provinciam illius natale solum fuisse. Lel. in vitâ Chauceri.

The LIFE of

If we fix upon Berkshire, Dunnington must be the place, which Mr. Camden^b says was a Seat of Chaucer's; but he himself seems to have been the first of that name that possess'd it, and that not till the latter part of his Life. For in the Reign of Edw. II. it was in the possession of Walter Abberbury, Son and Heir of Thomas Abberbury (who gave the King C. s. for the same) and it continued in the possession of that Family till the latter part of the Reign of Rich. II. in whose time it was in the possession of Sir Richard Adderbury, or Abberbury, who had a grant from that Prince for rebuilding the Castle^c, and another for building a Religious House^d; which he endowed with two acres of Land, and the Manor of Tiftly. This was part of the Honour of Wallingford, of which Thomas Chaucer was Constable, and was probably bought by Geoffrey Chaucer, not many years before his death, of Sir Richard Adderbury the younger.

If this be all the Plea for Berkshire, there seems to be no farther room to insist upon it. Oxfordshire indeed has upon this account a better claim; there being no less than three Seats in that County belonging to his Family, Ewelme, Hocknorton and Woodstock. Leland does not expressly point at any of these, but Pits positively asserts (without giving any reasons) that Woodstock was the Place, which opinion Mr. Camden^e seems to hint at, where he speaks of that Town. Pits's authority is not so well established as to deserve credit on his bare word; but on the contrary, he and his Collegue Bale (who are poor Copiers from Leland) abound with such numerous falsities, that it is not safe even to quote them in some particulars. I suspect Pits had no other grounds for his assertion than Chaucer's House at Woodstock, and his mentioning the Park in his Works; and therefore with a turn too frequent with Biographers, raises an assertion upon a very slender supposition, and thought the darkness of the times would conceal the deceit, and leave no footsteps to trace the contrary. Ewelme^h and Hocknorton have an equal right with Woodstock, both belonging to Chaucer's family, and the first is said by Leland to be the inheritance of the *Chaucers*ⁱ, though others think it was given him by Rich. II.^k But after all these different pretensions, he himself seems to point out the place of his Nativity to be the City of London^l. And Mr. Camden, though he mentions the claim of Woodstock, evidently gives no credit to it; for speaking of Spenser (whom all allow to be born in London) he calls him Fellow-Citizen to Chaucer^m.

The name of Chaucer [or Chaucier, Chaucieris, Chaussier, Chausir, &c.] is originally French, signifying a Shoemaker: But the family which he descended from had long enjoyed an honourable name in England; the Founder being a Chief attending the Duke of Normandy in his Expedition to England, as appears by the Roll of Battle Abby. And as the Original seems to have been a Person of Honour, so several of the Nameⁿ, who may reasonably be supposed to be descended from him, are mention'd in Records; but the descent of our Author is no where particularly described.

Mr. Speght thinks that one Richard Chaucer was his Father, and that one Elizabeth Chaucer, a Nun of St. Helen's, in the second year of Rich. II. might have been his sister, or of his kindred. But this conjecture seems very improbable; for this Richard was a Vintner^o living at the corner of Kirton Lane, and at his death left his House, Tavern and Stock to the Church of St. Mary Aldermary, and was there buried in the year of our Lord 1348. At which time our Poet being a young Student in the University, this supposed Father must have been an unnatural Bigot to give all he had to the Church, and leave his Son unprovided for, unless he designed to dedicate him to Religion, as well as his supposed Sister. It is more probable that this Vintner had neither Children, nor near Relations; which frequently happens among Citizens, who leave bulky estates to charitable uses, for want of kindred: Nor is it likely that he should be possessed of the Family-Estates, mentioned by Leland, in Oxfordshire, and at the same time follow such an Occupation; and therefore passing by this conjecture, and the merry jokes which Dr. Fuller (according to his custom) makes upon his Arms,

^b Chauceri quondam & postea Delapolorum castellum existimant. Brit.

^c This appears by a MS. in the Cotton Library.

^d This Sir Richard Adderbury, or Abberbury, or Atterbury, was a great Favourite of Rich. II. and was immediately after his Coronation sent with a Message to the Citizens of London. He was likewise made Constable of the Castle of Brest; and was in the year 1387. expelled the King's Household by the seditious Lords. There was one Adderbury returned for Dunnington in a List of Gentry, in the Reign of Hen. VI.

^e Records collected by Mr. Rymer, now in the House of Lords.

^f Dugdale's Mon. Ang.

^g Oppidum ipsum, cum nihil habeat quod ostendet, Home-rum nostrum Anglicanum Galfridum Chaucerum alumnum suum fuisse gloriatur.

^h Ewelme olim Chauceri aed. Camd. Brit.

ⁱ Lel. Itin. Vol. II. p. 5. & Vol. VII. p. 62, 63.

^k Peacham's Compl. Gent. p. 82. Perhaps he took it from the Author of the Arte of English Poesie, printed in 1598. who says, it was supposed that Rich. II. gave to Chaucer the Manor of New Holme in Oxfordshire. p. 12.

^l In the Test. of Love, p. 486, a. Also the Cytie of London that is to me so dere and swete, in which I was forth grownen, and more kindly love have I to that place, than to any other in yerth; as every kindly creature hath full appetite to that place of his kindly ingendrure, and to wilne rest and pece in that stede to abyde; thilke pece should thus there have ben broken, and of all wise it is [al. which — is] commanded and desired.

^m Edmundus Spenserus, patriâ Londinensis, Musis adq. ar- ridentibus natus, ut omnes Anglicos superioris ævi Poetas, ne Chaucero quidem concepe excepto, superaret. Camd. Eliz. Edit. Hearn. p. 783. in An. 1598.

ⁿ In the Reign of King John there was one le Chausir, as appears by the Records in the Tower; and in the Reign of Henry III. one Elias Chaucefir, who in the Reign follow- ing (viz. Edw. I.) had a Grant of Ten Shillings from the Treasury. There was also one John Chaucer, of whom King Edw. I. heard a Complaint for a 1000 l. &c.

^o See Stow's Survey of London.

G E O F. C H A U C E R.

as if they alluded to his Father's profession of dashing white and red Wine^p, we shall endeavour to find out a Father more worthy of such a Son; and though I cannot implicitly believe with Pits that his Father was a Knight, yet it is likely his Parents were something superiour to a common Employ. We find one John Chaucer attending upon Edw. III. and Queen Philippa in their Expedition to Flanders and Cologne, who had the King's Protection^q to go over Sea, in the twelfth year of his Reign. It is highly probable that this Gentleman was the Father of our Geoffrey, which I am the more inclined to believe, because Chaucer's first application, after leaving the University and Inns of Law, was to the Court; nor is it unlikely the services of the Father should recommend the Son. As this is proposed with submission to better Judgments, so I lay no greater stress upon it than the reasons suggested will bear.

I proceed to a Particular less controverted, that is, the time of his Birth, which was in the second year of the Reign of King Edw. III. A. D. 1328. His first studies were in the University of Cambridge; where he was in the eighteenth year of his Age, when he wrote his Court of Love^r, and was at those early years no indifferent Poet, having before written several pieces^s: But of what College he was is uncertain, there being no footsteps of him in the Records of that University. It is not unlikely that he was of that Hall, where he lays the Story of the Miller of Trompington, so exactly describing the place, and the humours and Northern dialect of his Fellow-Collegians^t. How long he continued there is not known: It is certain he removed from thence to compleat his Studies at Oxford; but in what College is as uncertain as the former. The Writer of his Life fixes upon Canterbury, or Merton College. Canterbury College, now part of Christ-Church College (which Polydore Vergil calls the most celebrated of his time) is unlikely to be the place, not being founded till the year 1363, at which time Chaucer must be Five and Thirty years of age, and had been for some time launched into the world of business. Merton College is the more likely; for tho' his name does not appear among the celebrated Members of it at that time, yet we find most of his Contemporaries, as Strode, Occleve, &c. were of that College, where one of his Sons was likewise educated. After a considerable stay here, and a strict application to the Publick Lectures of the University, he became (says Leland) a ready Logician, a smooth Rhetorician, a pleasant Poet, a grave Philosopher, an ingenious Mathematician, and a holy Divine^u. That he was a great Master in Astronomy (tho' he modestly pleads "ignorance in it) is plain by his Discourse of the Astrolabe: That he was versed in the Hermes-tick Philosophy (which prevailed much at that time) appears by his Tale of the Chanon's Yeoman: His knowledge in Divinity is evident from his Parson's Tale, and his Philosophy from the Testament of Love.

Thus qualify'd for that considerable Figure he afterwards made, he began his approaches by degrees into the world; and leaving that learned Retirement, he travell'd into France, Holland, and other Countries, where Leland says he spent part of his younger days, and returning home, enter'd himself in the Inner Temple^v, where he studied the Municipal Laws of this Land. Leland intimates that he prosecuted those studies towards the latter part of his Life; which is improbable for the following reasons: Leland owns that at the Inns of Court he became acquainted with John Gower, at that time an eminent Lawyer; that this acquaintance was long before the latter end of the Reign of Rich. II. (as Leland places it) appears by the Poem of Troilus and Cresseide, which is inscribed to Gower^w, and mentioned in his Legend of good Women^x, which was written before the Death of the first Queen of Rich. II. he being directed to carry it to the Queen at Eltham, or at Shene^y: Now Rich. II. demolished the Palace of Shene upon her Death, nor was it repaired during his Reign. The places which Chaucer held would not allow him at that time to apply himself to those studies; nor is it likely that at such an advanced age, when he was near Seventy, and (as Leland confesses) found age burthensome, he had either will or strength to prosecute a hard, intricate, and to him at that age an useless study. It is therefore more probable that he acquired the

^p Fuller's Church. Hist. p. 152.

^q Johannes Chaucer qui cum Rege in obsequium Regis, per preceptum Regis ad partes transmarinas profecturus est, habet Literas Regis de protectione, cum clausula Volumus usque ad festum Natalis Domini proximo futurum duratur. Teste Rege apud Walton duodecimo die Junii 1338. Aleman. 12 Edw. 3. p. 1. m. 8. Rymer's Fœd. Vol. V. p. 51.

^r See CL. 43. & 911, &c. where being asked his name, he makes this answer;

My name —————
Philogenet I cal'd am ferre and nere,
Of Cambrige Clerke —————

^s Ib. 897, &c.

In art of love I write, and songis make
That maie be song in honour of the Kyng

And Quene of Love —————

^t See the Gloss. in Solere Hall.

^u Hinc acutus Dialecticus, hinc dulcis Rhetor, hinc lepidus Poeta, hinc gravis Philosophus, hinc ingeniosus Mathematicus, hinc denique sanctus Theologus evasit. Lel. in vitâ Chauceri.

^v See the House of Fame. L. 1.

^w To prove this Mr. Speght mentions a Record seen by Mr. Buckley in that House, where Geoffrey Chaucer was fined Two Shillings for beating a Franciscan Fryer in Fleetstreet.

^y L. 5. 1855.

^x Y. 332 & 441.

^z The Countess of Pembroke is there introduced directing Chaucer to recover the favour of the Ladies by writing this Book; and thus goes on, Y. 496, &c.

And when this boke is made yeve it the Quene,
On my behalfe, at Eltham or at Shene.

The LIFE of

knowledge of our Laws in his youth, in order to qualify himself for publick Affairs, in which he afterwards was concerned.

But he had not long followed those studies, before his singular accomplishments were discovered by some persons at Court, whither he next made his approaches. A glorious and successful Reign, as it affords subjects for the praises of the Learned, so it gives them encouragement to employ their abilities on such occasions; and Edw. III. who was a discerning Prince to judge of, and generous to reward Learning, invited Men of Letters to him, and by his example induced his Court to encourage them: So that in his Reign Valour was not more esteemed than Learning, and Cowardice and Ignorance were equally despised. The Court at that time consisted of all that was great and splendid, and every thing that could be desired contributed to make it the most glorious in Europe. A long and happy Reign, successful in Victories abroad, filled it with Heroes, and a just Administration at home supply'd it with Men of Learning. These are so inseparably linked together for the encouragement of each other, that where there are men of Valour, there can be no Slavery and Oppression, and where there is Slavery and Oppression, there can be no Men of Learning. They equally flourished in this Reign, being encouraged by a Prince who was Master of both, and applauded by a Court of Ladies remarkable for Beauty, Wit and gaiety. In short, there was nothing going forward in that Court but perpetual Mirth, Tilts and Tournaments, and Romantick Gallantry, which has been only parallel'd by the late Reign of K. Charles the Second. And how well qualify'd our Poet was to be a Member of such an Assembly, we may judge by his learning, wit, amorous disposition, gay humour and gallantry: To which his Person gave no small addition, being about the age of Thirty (as appears by a Picture^b of him about that age) of a fair, beautiful complexion, his lips red and full, his size of a just medium, and his port and air graceful and majestick. So that every Ornament that could claim the approbation of the Great and Fair, his Abilities to record the Valour of the one, and celebrate the Beauty of the other, and his wit and gentle behaviour to converse with both, conspired to make him a compleat Courtier.

His first station, 'tis very probable, was that of Page to the King, a place of honour and esteem, and so much regarded by Princes at that time, that Rich. II. leaves particular Legacies in his Will to his Pages, when few others are taken notice of. But this was only the first step to preferment; as the King himself intimates; and therefore by his Letters Patents dated in the Forty first year of his Reign, he grants to him for his good Services, by the Title of dilectus Valettus noster^c; an Annuity of Twenty Marks per Annum payable out of the Exchequer, till he could otherwise provide for him. How mean soever such a Pension may seem now, it was then very considerable, and in Chaucer's case was still the more valuable as being an earnest of future Favours: For not long after we find him Gentleman of the King's Privy Chamber, and by that Title the King granted to him by Letters Patents dated in the Forty fifth year of his Reign, the further Sum of Twenty Marks per Annum during life. In this station he did not long continue, being next year made Shield-bearer to the King^d, a Title at that time (tho' now extinct) of great honour; such persons being always next the King's person, and generally upon signal Victories rewarded with military Honours.

Our Poet being thus placed near the King, found respect and encouragement from all the chief persons of the Court: Queen Philippa, a Princess of extraordinary merit, esteemed him; John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster had a singular value for him^e, as had likewise his Dutchesse Blanch, at whose request he made the Poem called La Priere de notre Dame. The Lady Margaret, the King's Daughter and Countess of Pembroke, was the chief of his Patronesses, and would frequently complement him upon his Poems. But this is not to be meant of his Canterbury Tales, they being written in the latter part of his Life, when the Courtier and the fine Gentleman gave way to solid Sense and plain Descriptions. In his Love-pieces he was obliged to have the strictest regard to Modesty and Decency; the Ladies at that time insisting so much upon the nicest punctilio's of honour, that it was highly criminal to depreciate their Sex, or do any thing that might offend Virtue: The first of these Chaucer had been guilty of, which he afterwards atoned by the Legend of Good Women; a Task enjoined him by the Lady Margaret^f, whom he veils under the name of the Daisy, as he does in several seent or Quality. Mr. Camden takes Valettus hospitii, to signify a Gentleman of the Privy Chamber; and by this name of Valettus the King before had entitled the Lord Abergavenny. Sp.

Oxfordshire

^b Now in the possession of George Greenwood of Chastleton in Oxfordshire, Esq; x

^c Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Sciatis quod de gratia nostra speciali, & pro bono servitio quod dilectus Valettus noster Galtridus Chaucer nobis impendit & impendet in futurum concessimus ei viginti marcas percipiendas singulis annis ad Scaccarium nostrum — per aequales portiones, ad totam vitam ipsius Galtridi, vel quousque pro statu suo aliter duxerimus ordinandum, &c. — Teste Rege apud Castrum de Queneburgh vicesimo die Junii, &c. 41 Ed. 3. pat. 41. p. 1. m. 13. This Poet of Valettus or Valettus, says Mr. Selden in his Titles of Honour, Part. II. ch. 5. §. 47. was conferr'd upon young Heirs designed to be Knighted, or young Gentlemen of great De-

^d The King in the 49th year of his Reign granted him the Lands and Body of Sir Edmund Staplegate, by the Title of Scutifer Regis, and he is so called in the King's Commission to treat with Genoa. Sp.

^e Upon whose account he made the Book of the Dutchesse, or the Dreme of Chaucer, the Complaint of the Black Knight, and the Dream.

^f See the Legend of Good Women.

other

b. but it is by no means to be taken for granted, that this is a picture of him: when I was shown it.
for such, I was of opinion, that it was not a picture of Chaucer. G. J.

GEOF. CHAUCER.

other pieces^s. The Poems which gave offence were The Romaunt of the Rose and Troilus and Creseide^h; tho' he seems to hint at a particular offence he had given by preferring the Flower to the Leaf, which he gayly turns offⁱ.

Thus beloved, esteemed and honoured, he spent his younger years in a constant attendance upon the Court, and for the most part living near it, when residing at Woodstock, in a square stone house near the Park Gate, still called Chaucer's House^k. That this was the chief place of his abode, appears by his frequent descriptions of the Park; as particularly a Park^l walled with green stone, that being the first Park walled in England, and not many years before his time. In most of his pieces, where he designs an imaginary Scene, he certainly copies it from a real Land scape: So in his Cuckow and Nightingale, the Morning walk he takes was such as at this day may be traced from his House through part of the Park, and down by the Brook into the Vale under Blenheim Castle^m, as certainly as we may assert that Maplesⁿ instead of Phylireas, were the ornaments round the Bower; which place he likewise describes in his Dream, as a white Castle standing upon a hill^o; the Scene in that Poem being laid in Woodstock Park.

But to return; Queen Philippa being a native of Hainault, and bringing over with her several persons of that Country, there was a frequent intercourse between England and that Province, which was increased by a fresh Alliance with the Duke of Bavaria, Earl of Hainault, Zeland and Holland, who married Maud, Daughter and Coheir of Henry Plantagenet Earl of Launcester, whose sister Blanch was married to John of Gaunt, afterwards Duke of Launcester. The Dutchess Blanch (whether by the recommendation of her sister, or by what other means is not material) entertained in her service one Katherine Rouet, daughter of Sir Payne or Pagan Rouet a Native of Hainault and Guien King at Arms for that Country, who was afterwards married to Sir Hugh Swynford^p a Knight at Lincoln. He dying not long after their marriage, the Duke and Dutchess continued her as Guardianess to their children. This Lady had a younger Sister, whom the Duke and Dutchess recommended to our Chaucer for a Wife; and he married her about the Thirty second year of his age. Brooks calls her Anne, but her name was Philippa (as shall be made appear hereafter) a name much used at that time in Hainault, in regard of it's being the Queen's name.

Our Poet being thus fixed by marriage, the King began to employ him in more publick and advantageous Posts; for in the Forty sixth year of his Reign we find him in Commission with others to treat with the Doge and Senate of Genoa^q; but for what purpose, or with what success doth not appear. And now he began every day to rise in greatness, having the Duke of Launcester for his Patron, who indefatigably espoused his interest, and that for several reasons: One was the application of the Lady Katharine Swynford, his wife's sister, who was a woman of singular^r Beauty, and not only an attendant on the Dutchess, but Mistress to the Duke, and extremely in his favour, as appears by the Grants made to her in the Fifty first year of K. Edw. III. of the Lordships of Gringly and Wheatly^s, which were confirmed by the King. Nor was this the only reason of the Dukes favour: His ambition requiring all the assistance of Learned men, to give it a plausible appearance, induced him to do Chaucer many good offices, in order to engage him in his Interest.

About this time (perhaps for his services at Genoa) the King granted to him by Letters Patents dated at Windfor in the Forty eighth year of his Reign, by the Title of Armiger noster^t, one Pycher of Wine daily, in the Port of London; and soon after made him Comptroller of the Customs in that Port of Wool, Woollfells and Hides, with a particular Proviso, that he

^s See the Flower and the Leaf, and the Ballad beginning In Feverere, &c. p. 556.

^h See LW. 329, &c.

ⁱ See Ib. 188, &c.

^k Speght observes that it was passed by Q. Eliz. by that name to the Tenant who then dwelt in it. There is now chained in the Parlour of that House a printed Copy of Chaucer's Works, with the following Inscription written at the beginning of it;

Ædium harum
Quas olim vivus incoluit,
Ut per hæc ingenii monumenta,
In quibus æternum vivet
Una cum antiquæ prosæpæ, fidei, fortitudinis Viro Nicolao Bayntun
rursus incoletet,

GALFRIDO CHAUCER,
Poetarum sui temporis facile Principi,
Principum Poeta, amico, adfini,
A priori hospite vi dejecto,
Lato lubenti, latus lubens
Possessionem restituit

CAROLUS PERROT LL. D.
MDCLXXVIII.

^l Bl. Kn. 42.

^m See Ib. 273, &c.

^p Mr. Sandford calls him Sir Otes Swynford, and Mr. Tyrel, Sir Robert.

^q Rex, &c. salutem. Noveritis, quod nos de fidelitate & circumspessione provida dilectorum & fidelium nostrorum Jacobi Pronan, Johannis de Mari civis Januensis, & Galfridi Chaucer Scutiferi nostri plenam fiduciam reportantes, ipsos Jacobum, Johannem & Galfridum, & duos ipsorum (quorum presatum Johannem unum esse volumus) nuncios & procuratores nostros facimus & constituimus speciales, dantes & committentes eis plenam tenore presentium potestatem & mandatum speciale tractandi pro nobis & nomine nostro cum nobili viro Dominico de Campo Fergoso, Duce Januensi, & ejus consilio, nec non civibus, probis hominibus, & communitate civitatis Januæ, &c.

^r Eximia pulchritudinis summa. Upon the Duke of Launcester's Tomb in St. Paul's Church before the Fire.

^s Pat. 51. Edw. 3. m. 33. Dugdale's Baron.

^t Rex, &c. salutem. Sciatis quod de gratia nostra speciali concessimus dilecto Armigero nostro Galfrido Chaucer unum pycher. vini, percipiend. quolibet die in portu civitatis nostre London. per manus Pincerne nostri vel haredum nostrorum pro tempore existentis — ad totam vitam ipsius Galfridi, &c. Teste Rege apud Windfor vicesimo tertio die Aprilis, &c. A.D. 1374. 48 Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 20.

should

The LIFE of

should personally execute that office, and write the Accounts relating to it with his own hand^u. This Post he filled with honour and integrity, as himself declares that no wight of of his administracyon coude non yvels^w, and that he never defouled his conscience for no manner dede^x: Nor do we find, that at that time when the Customs were farmed and the People imposed upon, the King in his dotage and misled, Chaucer was ever concerned in the Impositions with Lyon, Ellis and others prosecuted for those crimes. Leland observes that there were at Exwelme Woolfacks painted in token of Merchandize, and that it was said Thomas the Son of Geoffrey Chaucer was a Merchant: To which Speght adds, that it was for this reason believed that Chaucer's Ancestors were Merchants of the Staple, but contradicts it by asserting, that the Merchants of the Staple had no Arms granted them till the Reign of Hen. VI. It is more probable that the Woolfacks were Devices of Chaucer (in frequent use at that time) alluding to the Office he held relating to the Customs of Wool, Woolfells, &c. The King, in the Forty ninth year of his Reign, and the Forty seventh of Chaucer's age, granted to him the Lands and Body of Sir Edmond Staplegate, Son of Sir Edmond Staplegate in the County of Kent, in Ward, who afterwards paid him One hundred and four Pounds for the same^y: And the year following he granted to him, by the Title of dilectus Armiger noster, the sum of Seventy one Pounds four Shillings and six pence, arising from a certain quantity of Wool therein mentioned, which was forfeited by one John Kent of London, for Non-payment of Customs^z. By these means, and the repeated favours heaped upon him, he grew exceeding rich, having (as Speght^a says) at one time, almost a Thousand Pounds per Annum; a very large Estate for those times, and scarce credible to have been acquired by a person in his station: But that he grew wealthy in the Employments he enjoyed, he himself confesses; I had comfort (says he) to be in that plight that both profit were to me and my friends^b: He also confesses, that in dignity of office he made gathering of thilk godes, and had a faire parcel for the tyme, in forthbering of his sustenance, richesse sufficiently to weerve nede, dignity to be reverenced in worship, power to kepe fro his enemies; so that he seemed to shine in glory of renome, as manhode asketh in men^c. These and the like passages in the Testament of Love are proofs of the favour of that Prince to him, and of the advantages which attended it.

But as he was thus advanced to higher places of Trust, so he became more entangled in the Affairs of State, the consequence of which proved of the utmost prejudice to him. The Duke of Launcester having been the chief Instrument of raising him to Dignity, expected the fruits of those Favours in a ready compliance with him in all his Designs. That Prince was certainly one of the proudest men of his time; nor could he patiently bear the name of a Subject, even to his Father. Nothing but Absolute Power, and the Title of King could satisfy his Ambition; and therefore took up with a Foreign Title, and the ruins of a scatter'd Family, marrying Constance, Daughter of Peter the Cruel, King of Castile and Leon, which Title he assumed. But this was not sufficient, for upon the Death of his elder Brother Edward the Black Prince, he fixed a longing eye upon the English Crown, and seemed to stretch out an impatient hand to reach it. This was plainly intimated by his Device of an Eagle endeavouring with his Bill to undo a Foot-lock.

In this view he sought by all means possible to secure his Interest against the Decease of the old King; and being sensible that the chief obstacles in his way were the Clergy (who would be most strenuous in opposing an irregular Succession) he omitted nothing that might lessen their power and esteem with the People. For this purpose a fair opportunity now offered by Wickliffe's first appearing at Oxford; who being a Man of singular Learning and Esteem, not only in that University, but also at Court (having been employed as Ambassador by the King) found no small number of Followers. The Common People, always fond of Novelty, readily followed him, being pleased with a new Scheme which discharged them from the heavy Impositions of the Clergy of those times. The University of Oxford it self favoured him for this reason: The Fryers of Osney and S. Frideswide enticed most of the young Students of that University to enter into Orders, insomuch that Parents were fearful of sending their Sons to study, whereby the number of Students in that University diminished; which being complained of in Parliament, there was an Act made that none should be admitted into Orders under the age of eighteen years. The Nobility and Courtiers supported him, out of an ^u Rex omnibus, &c. salutem. Sciatis: quod concessimus dilecto nobis Galfrido Chaucer officium Contrarotulatoris customarum & subsidii lanarum, coriorum & pellium lanarum in portu London. habendum quamdiu nobis placuerit, percipiend. &c. Ita quod idem Galfridus Rotulos suos dictum officium tangentes manu sua proprie scribat, & continue moretur ibidem, & omnia qua ad officium illud pertinent in propria persona sua, & non per substitutum suum, faciat & exequatur, & quoddam altera pars sigilli, quod dicitur cocket, in custodia ipsius Galfridi remaneat, quamdiu officium habuerit supra dictum, &c. Teste meipso apud Westmonasterium octavo die Junii. Pat. 48. E. 3. p. 1. m. 7.

^w Test. p. 502, a.

^x Ib. p. 488, b.

^y Records collected by Mr. Rymer, in the House of Lords.
^z Dilecto Armigero nostro Galfrido Chaucer LXXI lib. iv fol. lid. & vi denarios de pretio vii. sacc. & dimidii trium petrarum & vi librarum lane nobis forisfactarum pro eo quod Johannes Kent de London lanas illas usque Durdraught absque Customa, seu subsidio nobis inde solutis, seu licentia inde a nobis habita duxit, habend. de dono nostro, &c. F. R. apud Westm. xii. die Jul. Per ipsum Regem nunciantem Rogero de Bellocampo Cancellario Reg. Pat. 50. Ed. 3. p. 1. m. 5.

^a In the Life of Chaucer.

^b Test. p. 486, a.

^c Ib. p. 502, a.

inveterate

GEOFF. CHAUCER.

inveterate hatred to the Clergy, who had all the Places of Trust and Honour ^d in their Possession. Most of those about the King countenanced Wickliffe in a particular manner, as the Lord Latimer, Sir Richard Sturry, Sir Lewis Clifford, &c. And Capgrave asserts that the King himself was a Favourer of his Opinions.

And now the Parliament intermeddling with the Affairs of the Church, Pope Gregory IX. thought it high time to put a stop to those Proceedings, and therefore issued out a Bull directed to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishop of London, for apprehending Wickliffe; whereupon the Bishop convened a Synod at St. Paul's, where, upon citation Wickliffe appeared, and with him his Patron the Duke of Lancaster, and Piercy Lord Marshal. A Quarrel happening between the Duke of Lancaster and the Bishop of London about Wickliffe's sitting down, the Duke told the Bishop he would pull down his pride, and that of all the Prelacy in England, with other opprobrious words; upon which the Londoners rose, and plunder'd his Palace of the Savoy, and reversed his Arms, the Duke himself hardly escaping their fury.

Our Chaucer had no small hand in furthering these Proceedings, both by his publick Interest, and his Writings; tho' I cannot go so far as to suppose he scurrilously reviled the Established Religion of those times, and therefore cannot think that either the Plowman's Tale or Jack Upland were written by him, as shall be further discussed in the Account of his Works: But that he was a Favourer of the Lollards (as were likewise most of his friends, and particularly Occleve) is evident from several places in his Writings, where he bitterly inveighs against the Priests and Fryers: Not that he disliked all of that Order; for he mentions Fryer John Some and Fryer Nicholas Lenne, or Lynne, with respect, calling them Reverent Clerkes, and expresses his regard for the secular Clergy who lived up to their Profession, in his Description of the Parion. Nor was he disesteemed by the Clergy of those times; Lidgate, who was a Monk of St. Edmondsbury, and several others entertaining a great reverence for him, and speaking of him with the utmost respect: Nor was he less esteemed by Gower, tho' a violent Bigot to the Church of Rome, and a perpetual exclaimer against Wickliffe and his Followers.

The King perceiving the aims of the Duke of Lancaster, presently put a check to his hopes by declaring Richard of Bourdeaux, Son of Edward the Black Prince, Heir to the Crown, which was no small mortification to the Duke; and from that time he was never easy, nor contented in any station, nor ever without uneasinesses from the jealousies and suspicions of the Prince upon the Throne, in which his friends bore a share.

In the last year of the King's Reign, the French (notwithstanding a Truce which had been made with them) got out to Sea and disturbed the Coast, whereupon the King endeavoured to prolong the Truce; in order to which he sent Chaucer and other Commissioners to treat with those appointed by the French King, before the Pope's Legates; but nothing being concluded, the Legates proposed a Match between the Lady Mary, Daughter to the King of France, and Richard Prince of Wales. Whereupon the King sent Sir Guiscard Dangle ^f Knight of the Garter and afterwards Earl of Huntington, Sir Richard Sturry a noted Wickliffe, and our Chaucer, Embassadors to Monstreuil; but this Embassy had no other effect, than the prolonging of the Truce with France till the first of May following ^g. This is the last publick Embassy that we find Chaucer employed in, tho' he was afterwards in France, and several other Countries, as shall hereafter be observed. What other Posts he held during this Prince's Reign is uncertain, there being no further account (that I can discover) upon Record of his publick Stations: But doubtless he passed through many honourable Employments, as appears from several passages of the Testament of Love; and in that Picture of him in Gloucestershire (which hath been mentioned before) he hath a double Chain round his neck, and hanging to the middle of his breast, which seems to be a mark of distinction then used in regard of some publick Offices he bore.

Oxfordshire

Nor was he less concerned in the close intrigues of the Court-Party at that time. For the King being superannuated, all Affairs were managed by Sir Thomas Latimer, Sir Richard Sturry (both Chaucer's Friends) and the Lady Alice Pierce ^h whom the King entirely loved, not as a Mistress (as some have maliciously asserted) but because she had been Lady of the Bed-Chamber to the Queen, and a great Favourite with her. This Lady managed every thing

^d The Archbishop of Canterbury, was Lord Chancellor; the Bishop of Bath and Wells, Lord Treasurer; the Archdeacon of Lincoln, Privy Seal; David Weller, Parson of Summersham, Master of the Rolls; Ten Beneficed Priests, Civilians, Masters in Chancery; William Mulse Dean of St. Martin's le Grand, Chamberlain of the Exchequer, Privy Purse and Master of the Jewel-House; William Ashby Archdeacon of Northampton, Chancellor of the Exchequer; William Dighton Prebendary of St. Martin's, Clerk of the Privy Seal; John de Troy Priest, Treasurer of Ireland; Snatch Parson of Oundle, Master of the Wardrobe; John Newham Parson of Fenny Stanton, one of the Chamberlains of the Exchequer; John Rousbie Parson of Harwick, Comptroller and Surveyor of the King's-Buildings, and Thomas Brunningham Parson of Ashby, Treasurer for Guien, and Marshal of Calais.

^e Astr. p. 440.

^f This Sir Guiscard Dangle was remarkable for his Valour in France, and a great Favourite of the King.

^g Hollinshead, Barnes, &c.

^h This Lady was afterwards married to Sir William of Windsor, a Favourite at that time, and Lieutenant of Ireland, in whose Grave, at Westminster Abby, the late Rebel Ireton was buried.

The LIFE of

in a very indirect manner; influencing the Courts of Judicature, causing Sir Peter Delamare the Speaker of the Commons to be imprisoned, and for bribes persuading the King to pervert the course of Justice: In all which matters, Speed says the Duke of Lancaster was concerned; but it is not likely that Prince should appear publicly at the head of that Party, he himself having not long after no small hand in punishing several of the Actors in that Corruption. Chaucer was so nearly engaged in friendship with them; that there is reason to suspect he was not altogether unconcerned.

The old King being dead, Richard his Grandson succeeded him; being under the Governance of the Duke of Lancaster, who now endeavoured all he could to compose the Differences which had been long fomented; and being reconciled to the Londoners, he proceeded to prepare every thing for the most splendid Coronation that England had ever seen; insomuch that there are several Volumes in the Cotton Library written upon that affair: In one of which, there is a Petition of Chaucer to be admitted to serve as Chief Butler; in right of his Ward Sir Edmond Staplegate, for the Manor of Billington in Kent, which was held of the King by that service; but the Earl of Arundel put in another Petition, wherein he shews that Honour to have been formerly possessed by his Ancestors, and that Staplegate had never till now claimed it, and being a Minor was unqualified for it; which Petition was granted, reserving to Staplegate the right of making his Claim afterwards.

Chaucer was in some degree of favour at the beginning of this King's Reign. In the first year of it, by Letters Patents under the Great Seal bearing date the Twenty third day of March, the King confirmed to him, by the Title of Dilectus Armiger noster, the Grant made by the late King of Twenty Marks per Annum; and by other Letters Patents, bearing date the Eighteenth day of April in the same year, he confirmed the other Grant of the late King for a Pycher of Wine to be delivered him daily in the Port of London.

King Rich. II. in the second year of his Reign took Chaucer and his Lands into his Protection, which Mr. *Speght*ⁱ believes was occasioned by some trouble into which he was fallen, by siding with the common people. But he doth not seem to have been involved in that trouble till some time after, and therefore it is more likely this Protection was to secure him from his Creditors; as was likewise another Protection granted by the same Prince. It doth not appear by what means he was reduced to such low Circumstances, unless it was by the loss of his interest at Court, and of Advantages he enjoyed under his Master and Patron the late King. The Writer of his Life supposes he expended most of his wealth in Foreign Embassies, but it should rather seem that they were the means whereby he acquired it, he being generally well rewarded, as is before observed.

This King in the fourth year of his Reign confirmed the Grants made to Chaucer and Philippa his Wife of the several Annuities granted to them^k. And now this Lady being mentioned, for whose name we have this authentick Record, it will not be improper to cast an eye upon the Domestick affairs of our Poet. By her (for we find no other Wife mentioned) he had two Sons, Thomas^l, and Lewis. Thomas was about this time married to one of the greatest Fortunes in England, Maud, Daughter and Heir of Sir John Burghershe, Brother to Sir Bartholomew Burghershe Knight of the Garter, and Dr. Henry Burghershe Bishop of Lincoln, Chancellor and Treasurer of England. Mr. Speght says, this Lady was given him in marriage by King Edw. III. at his Father's request, in return for his great services done in his Embassies in France; but it is very much to be doubted whether at the Death of that Prince, Thomas Chaucer was of age to be disposed of in marriage.

His second Son Lewis was born in the year 1381. for he was ten years old^m when his Father wrote the Treatise of the Astrolabe, which was in 1391ⁿ. He was then a Student in Merton College in Oxford, and Pupil to the famous Nicholas Strode; but we have no farther account of him. It has been observed, that in the latter part of the late King's Reign, the Duke of Lancaster (for several reasons) encouraged the Opinions of Wickliffe, as did likewise Chaucer, the consequence of which began now to appear; for every ignorant fellow, who could neither read nor write, set up for a Teacher and Instructor in new Opinions, and particularly one Smith, who was followed by the Populace, and carried about by Great Men, as Sir Lodowick Clifford, Sir Thomas Latimer, Sir John Trussel, Sir Richard Sturmy and others, who appeared armed where he preached; and therefore, says Knighton, the modestest Writer of that time, What they could not convince by Reason they terrified into Opinion.

The common people thus encouraged to shake off the yoke of the Clergy, began to feel that of the Government too heavy; and being now ripe for Insurrection (upon laying on some new Taxes) rose under Straw, Tyler, and Littester; which had like to have entirely overturned the Constitution. Their spite was chiefly directed against the Clergy, as appears by their ⁱ In the Life of Chaucer.

^k Records collected by Mr. Rymer, in the House of Lords.

^l Some hold (says Speght) that Thomas Chaucer was not the Son of Geoffrey Chaucer, but rather some Kinsman of his,

whom he brought up; but he rejects that opinion upon the authority of Mr. Glover, alias Somerſes, who in the Pedigree makes him his Son.

^m Astr. p. 439. a.

ⁿ Ib. p. 442. b. & p. 433. a.

behead-

GEOF. CHAUCER.

beheading the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Prior of St. John's by Smithfield, who was Lord Treasurer, and by their burning that stately Priory, and plundering the Abbies of St. Albans, Bury and several others. As soon as this Rebellion was somewhat abated, the Parliament began to enquire into the cause of it; nor were there wanting Enemies of Wickliffe, who charged him and his Followers with being the Encouragers of it: But that is unlikely to be true; for had the Rebels been Wickliffe's friends, they would never have burnt the Savoy, the Palace of his Patron the Duke of Lancaster. However, some of his Followers gave too much cause for such a surmise; as Dr. Hereford, who asserted that Archbishop Sudbury deserved that Death he found; and the King the year following empowered the Bishops to arrest Wickliffe, and forbid his Subjects to encourage any of that Persuasion. Wickliffe appeared, and seemed partly to satisfy the Bishops with his Opinion.

The Duke of Lancaster finding his hopes of greatness check'd and his Life in perpetual danger from the King, began to grow more cautious of intermeddling in these matters; and therefore when Dr. Hereford and Dr. Rapynodon came to him, he in a passion told them their Doctrine was a Doctrine of Devils, and that he had hitherto been imposed upon in the representations made to him of Wickliffe's Doctrine, and bad them go and submit themselves to the Archbishop.

Chaucer how much soever he had espoused those Opinions, thought it prudence to conceal them more than he had done, seeing the inconveniences and danger they had occasioned; so that after the Prosecution by Rich. II. and the Duke of Lancaster's changing his mind, he thought it proper to be more circumspect. Nor doth it appear that at any time he ran all the lengths of that Opinion. His resentments were chiefly against the personal Vices of the Clergy, not their Doctrines; for the Pilgrimage to Canterbury is spoken of with reverence; and he calls Becket the holy blissful Martyr: And the Parson, tho' he would not run to St. Powles to procure Livings, makes one in the Expedition to Canterbury. This I say, not as if that Journey was real; but Chaucer would never have been guilty of so great an impropriety as to make Persons act contrary to their Opinions. Nor did even the Leaders of that Party scruple the Ceremonies then used: They opposed them in opinion, but seldom differed from them in practice. Even Wickliffe himself always conformed, and held his Living of Lutterworth without interruption, and died in it of a Fit of the Palsy; which seized him while he was saying Mass. But Chaucer differed much from them even in Opinion; for in his Testament of Love, he confesses the Real Presence; which passage, because it exposes the neglect of Religion in his time, and shews his regard for Divine Worship, shall be here set down at large. Lo! it accordeth, for soche there ben that voluntarie lustes haunten in courte with ribaudrie, that til midnight and more wol playe and wake, but in the church at matins he is behinde, for evil disposicion of his stomake. — His auter is broke, and lowe lithe in pointe to gone to the yerthe, but his horse must ben esy and hie, to here him over grete waters. His chalice pore, but he hath riche cuppes. No towaile but a shete, there God shall ben handelid. And on his mete-bord ther shall been bordeclothes and towelles many paire. At masse serveth but a clergion: five Squiers in hall. Pare chauncell, open holes in every side: Beddes of silk, with tapites going al about his chambre. Pore masse-boke and leude chapelaine, and broken surplice with many an hole: gode boundes, and manye, to hunte after harte and hare, to fede in ther festes. In the House of Fame we find him again going on Pilgrimage. We may gather his opinion of the Invocation of Saints, from his Priere de nostre Dame, his Ballad in commendation of our Lady, and several other Pieces. But however Chaucer might despise some extravagancies of the Church of Rome, yet that he died a Member of it, seems plain by his Retraction.

The King, taking the Government upon himself, and giving way to the advice of a set of young profligate Courtiers, began to hate and despise most of the late King's friends; and particularly he endeavoured by all possible means to take off the Duke of Lancaster, whose Interest was now at a very low ebb. In order to which, one Latimer, an Irish Fryer, Bachelor of Divinity, accused him of an attempt to kill the King. Whether there was truth in the accusation, or whether it proceeded from the malice and revenge of that Order, is doubtful; but the Fryer was privately murdered, before he could make out the charge, by the Lord John Holland and others, to whose custody he was committed; and that in a shameful and barbarous manner. This Lord John Holland, called Lord of Huntington, and Duke of Exeter, was half brother to the King, and had married Elizabeth, Daughter of the Duke of Lancaster. He was a great Patron of Chaucer, and was much respected by him.

The Duke having escaped that storm, was not yet secure; for if Evidence failed, the King had an entire confidence in the Compliance of the Lord Chief Justice Tresilian, before whom it was attempted to have him tried. But the Duke stood upon his guard at his Castle of Pontefract, till by the King's Mother matters were brought to some temperament. With the

^o Frol. 17.

^p Ib. 511.

^q P. 492, h.

Mon. 1634. Vol. II. p. 42.

^r Mr. Fox seems to be of a contrary opinion. Acts and

^s In the Beginning of the First Book.

^t P. 213.

The LIFE of

Duke's Interest, that of Chaucer's entirely sunk: His Patron being now incapable of serving or supporting him, he found the want of a hand able to lead him safely through the difficulties of Publick Stations.

The Duke passing over Sea, his Friends felt all the malice of the opposite Party, which had long waited for revenge, and in order to it; sought all possible means of oppressing them. This put the others upon calling in a number of the Populace to their assistance, which is the general refuge of an oppressed Party. By these means several popular Commotions ensued, and particularly that in the City of London. As in this affair our Poet was no unartful Prompter behind the Curtain, so he felt the consequences of it in his downfall and ruin. One John of Northampton, a Creature of the Duke of Lancaster, was at the head of those Disturbances, who having been Lord Mayor the year before, made strong interest to be again chosen^u, and therefore opposed the following Election, securing to his party most of the Citizens, and crying out upon the extravagant mismanagement of the City, suggesting that there was no possible way of securing them from ruin but by re-electing him. This occasioned Insurrections; and our Poet being then Comptroller of the Customs in that Port, and joined in Party with Northampton, as being both in the Duke's Interest, encouraged them: But this Disorder did not continue long; for upon Sir Robert Knolles's beheading one of the Rioters it was quell'd, and Northampton taken into Custody. Strict search was made for Chaucer, but he made his escape into Hainault, and afterwards into France, and finding the King resolved to get him if possible into his hands, (as the fittest person to discover the Abettors of those Commotions) he fled thence into Zealand, with this intent chiefly (as he says) their privitie to concele^w.

Several of the Accomplices in this affair were with him, whom he supported^x in their Exile, while the chief Ringleaders (except Northampton, who was condemned at Reading, upon the evidence of his Clerk) had here at London made their peace, by acknowledging their Crime, and making Submission, and had now forgot the Honour and Integrity of Chaucer, who suffered Exile to secure their Secrets. Nay, to such a base height of Ingratitude were they arrived, that they wished his death, and endeavoured it, by keeping all supplies^y of Money from him: And while he expended his Fortune in removing from place to place, and in assisting his Fellow-exiles, he was so far from receiving any assistance at home, that his Apartments were let, and the Money received for Rent was never accounted for to him; nor could he recover any from those who owed it him, they being fully perswaded it was impossible for him ever to return into England. The Government still pursuing their Resentment against him and his friends, they were constrained to leave Zealand; and Chaucer having no possible means left of struggling longer with the difficulties of Exile and Poverty, and finding no security wherever he fled, chusing to submit his Life to the Laws of his Country, rather than lose it through hunger and want in foreign parts, returned into England.

He had not been long here before he was arrested^z by order from the King, and imprisoned (as it is probable) in the Tower of London. And now the Government thought they had it in their power to make a full Discovery of the late Rebellion, and sending for him, told him that in order to obtain Mercy of the King, his only way was to confess the secrets of his Treason, and discover the Confederates in it; desiring him to propose in what manner those differences might be composed^a. But he a long while evaded all the arts used to make him confess, and was very unwilling to bring the malice of so powerful a Party upon him by betraying their secrets; which he says he conceal'd longer^b than he ought; but the King and his Princes (to use his words) having obliged him upon Oath to declare what he knew, and with huge words and grete^c urged him to confess, and watching his words strictly and narrowly to catch him, if they could, varying in his Confession, he very freely disclosed all he knew, and impeached the Persons concerned with him; and not only so, but (according to the custom of Trials at that time) offered to prove the truth of his Confession by Combat^d.

^u The Records are silent as to the reason of Chaucer's falling under the displeasure of the Government; but this seems to be the occasion; for in his Testament of Love, he every where alludes to the Commotions of the City; and says; that he was drawn to be assentant, and in his mightes helping to certain conjurations, and other grete matters of rulyng of citizens, p. 485, b. and seems to have an eye particularly to the design of this man, by these words; But than shilke Governour sayninge toforne his undoinge for misrule in his tyme, shope to have letted shilke election, and have made anewe himselfe to have been chosen, and undir that moky l rore have arered. p. 486, b. And again he expresses his offence to be against the Government of the City, and says; He rough lytel of any hase of the mighty Senatours in shilke cite, no of communes malice. p. 485, and 486, b.

^w Test. p. 488, a.

^x Owen not some of hem money for his [i. ther] commons? Paidst not thou for some of ther dispences, till they were turned out of Seland? Test. p. 487, b.

^y Loke now what peple haste thou served, whiche of hem all in tyme of thine exils ever The refreshed by the value of the lest coigned plate, that walketh in money? Test. p. 487, b.

^z When thou wer arested and first tyme enprisoned, thou wer loth to change thy waie. Test. p. 495, b.

^a And ever I was sought, if me lyst to have grate of my lyfe and frenesse of that prison, I shulde openly confesse howe pece might be endused to enden al the firste rancours. It was fullie supposyd my knowing to be ful in the matters. Ib. p. 486, a.

^b I wene thou fleddest, as long as thou might, ther privitie to concele, whiche thyng thou helesse lenger then shouldest. Ib. p. 488, a.

^c Ib. p. 495, b.

^d It is well wist both amongst the gretest and other of the relme, that I profered my body so largely into provinge of the thinges, that Mars shuld have judged to end; but for sorbnesse of my wordes they durst not so shilke Judge trust. Ib. p. 487, a.

GEOF. CHAUCER.

What the consequence of this Discovery was with respect to his Accomplices doth not appear. It brought upon him the ill will of most people, who (as he says) called him false, lyer, base, ingratefull, &c. But the King regarding him as a person beloved by his Grandfather, and a faithful servant to himself, pardoned him.

This miserable condition, so different from his former prosperity, as it is a proof of the uncertainty of human Happiness, so it gave occasion to his writing that excellent Treatise called The Testament of Love: In the beginning of which he thus reflects upon his former glory and his present misery; Alas! Fortune, alas! I that some tyme in delicious houres was wont to enjoy blisfull stoundes, am now dryve by unhappy hevyness to bewaile my sondrie yvils in tene. Mirth is chaunged into tene, &c. Thus witleffe, thoughtfull, sightlesse lokinge, I endure my penaunce in this derke prisoun, caitifed fro frendshippe, and acquaintaunce, and forsaken of all that any worde dare speke. And a little further; O! where art thou now frendship, that some tyme with langhande chere madest bothe face and countenance to me wardes? And in another place; How am I now cast out of all sweteness of blisse, and mischevously stongen by passed joye! Sorrowfully must I bewaile and live as a wretch. Every of tho joyes is turned into his contrary: for riches now I have povertie, for dignitie now am I enprisoned, instede of power, wretchednesse I suffre, and for glory of renome I am now dispised, and fouliche hated; thus bath farne fortune, that sodainly am I overthromen, and out of all welth dispoiled, &c. Nor did he for some time recover the shock this gave him, having lost his best friends at Court for meddling in those affairs, and brought the clamours and malice of the Commons upon him by betraying their Designs: And his continual expences in encouraging and maintaining those Parties having exhausted most of his substance, he was reduced to the lowest degree of poverty, inso-much that when he was restored to his liberty, he was so incumbered with debts, that he durst not appear for fear of arrests. And to compleat his misery, he not only lost his interest with the King, by the disgrace of his Patron the Duke of Lancaster, but also his influence on the Duke by the means of Katherine Swynford his Wife's Sister was now much lessened. For the Duke, being dejected at the troubles in which he was involved, began to reflect on his vicious course of life, and particularly his keeping that Lady as his Concubine (whom, says Knighton^e, he had kept long in his house, neither fearing God, nor blushing at Man) and therefore he now resolved to put her out of his house, and made a Vow to that purpose. Our Poet thus reduced, knew not which way to turn himself for support; he was therefore constrained to dispose of the Pensions granted him by the late King, by a surrender in Chancery, to the use of one John Scalby, as appears by the King's Grant of the same^h.

Thus dispossessed of places, power and wealth, through a misapplication of them and an unguarded conduct, he retired to Woodstock; and weary of a long series of hurry, noise, danger and confusion, he shifted it for quiet and the calm pleasures of a studious safety, which produced his excellent Treatise of the Astrolabe, which is calculated for the Latitude of Woodstock, being a small matter different (as he says) from that of Oxfordⁱ. It appears from that piece, that the severe treatment which Chaucer received from the Government did not make him a firm Malecontent; for he strictly enjoins his Son to pray for the King^k.

It may not be improper to observe, that during Chaucer's troubles, in the Tenth year of Rich. II. there was a dispute in a Case of Chivalry depending between Sir Richard Grosvenour and Sir Richard le Scrope, concerning their Arms; which the King directed John Staple and Walter Leycester Heralds, to examine. They accordingly met at the Preaching Fryers in London, on Monday the last day of May, where appeared as Witnesses most of the chief Nobility in England, and other persons of distinction; among whom was our Chaucer, who gave in evidence "That he saw Scrope armed at Rottes in France, Azure with a bend d'or,

^e And I made thou haddest grace of thy King in soryevenesse of mikil misdede: to the gracious King art thou mikil holden, &c. lb. p. 495, b.

^f lb. p. 502, a.

^g Habebat namque Dominam Katherinam de Swynforde alienigenam in familiâ cum uxore suâ, unde suspicio sinistra maxime de eo oriebatur; & votum vovit Deo, quod cum citius posset dictam dominam à familiâ suâ amoveret cum effectu ulterius non offensurus. Knighton 2642. n. 40. Walsingham. 368. n. 10.

^h Ricardus, &c. salutem. Sciatis quod cum nos vicefimo tercio Martii, Anno Regni nostri lmo. literas nostras patentes sub magno sigillo nostro aprobavimus & confirmavimus concessionem factam dilecto Armigero nostro Galfrido Chaucer per Dominum E. nuperum Regem Angliæ Avum nostrum, de viginti marcis percipiend singulis annis ad Scaccarium — ad totam vitam ipsius Galfridi, vel quousque idem Avus noster pro statu suo aliter duceret ordinand. ac postmodum decimo octavo Aprilis anno predicto per quasdam literas nostras patentes sub magno sigillo nostro concesserimus eidem Galfrido in recompensationem unius Pycher. [vini] per diem per presatum Avum nostrum eidem Galfrido alias concessi percipiend. in portu civitatis nostre London. — ad totam vitam ipsius Galfridi, & — viginti marcas percipiend. singulis annis ad Scaccarium nostrum ad totam vitam predicti Galfridi, &c. Nos ad supplicationem presati Galfridi pro eo quod ipse dictas literas nostras nobis in Cancellariâ nostrâ restituit Cancellario, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, & pro bono servicio quod dilectus Johannes Scalby nobis impendit in futuro concessimus eidem Johanni dictas quadraginta marcas percipiend. — ad totam vitam ipsius Johannis, vel quousque pro statu suo aliter duximus ordinandum, &c. Teste me ipso apud Westm. 1. die Maii A. R. nostri xi. Burton.

ⁱ Ast. p. 447, a.

^k lb. p. 439, b.

The LIFE of

“ and that Coat was by publick voice and fame taken for Scrope's Coat ¹⁷. By this it should seem that Chaucer was some time in the Wars in France, the Scene of War being at one time near that place; to which we may add the Character given him, that he was famous in arms as well as Letters ^m.

The Duke of Lancaster surmounting his troubles, his Party gathered new life; particularly the Sentence against Northampton was repealed, and he himself cleared by a Certificate under the hands of the Mayor and Aldermen of London. Nor were the Dukes Resolutions of long continuance in regard to Katherine Swynford, for soon after his Vow before mentioned, he received her into more favour than ever, and granted her (by the Title of most dear and well-beloved) the Wardship of Bertran de Sanby's Heir, for being Guardianess to his Two Daughters ⁿ Philippa and Elizabeth; and by the same appellation, and upon the same consideration, he granted her likewise an Annuity of Two hundred Marks per Annum, payable out of his Honour of Tickhill. These Pensions were exceeding large at that time, and it may seem profuse in the Duke to bestow so many favours upon this Lady; but it is to be considered that they were not only Rewards for her being Mistress to his Daughters, but were intended for the maintainance of five Children he had by her, who were born at Belfort (or Beaufort) Castle in Anjou, which came to the house of Lancaster by Blanch of Artois Queen of Navarre. She was delivered there probably for privacy, for she lived at Lincoln after the Death of Queen Philippa, in whose Life-time she was in the house with the Duke, but not publicly known to be his Mistress, much less that he had Children by her; therefore Knigh-ton says, there was only a strong suspicion of their intimacy. But the Duke, about the Twentieth year of this King, resolved to make amends at once for his former course of life, and when she had now no charms left to recommend her, married her at Lincoln; a Match which gave great offence to the Dutcheffs of Glocester, the Countess of Derby and Arundel, and other Ladies of the Blood Royal, because hereby she took place of them. She was however much esteemed by King Richard, who appointed her to receive his Queen Anne, and attend her at her landing in England. Nor did the Duke think it sufficient to repair her Honour only, but likewise that of her Children: Accordingly the next year he procured them to be legitimated in Parliament ^o. The Children the Duke had by this Lady were, John Beaufort Earl of Somerset, Henry Beaufort Cardinal of St. Eusebius, first Bishop of Lincoln and afterwards of Winchester, and several times Chancellor of England, Thomas Beaufort Duke of Exeter and Earl of Dorset, and Joan Countess of Westmorland: So that by this Marriage Thomas Chaucer became allied to most of the Nobility, and to several of the Kings of England.

And now the Sun began to shine upon Chaucer with an Evening ray after a stormy Afternoon; for at the Sixty fourth or Sixty fifth year of his age, the King granted to him, by the Title of dilectus Armiger noster, an Annuity of Twenty Marks per Annum during Life, as a Compensation for the former Pension granted to him by Edw. III. which by his ill conduct he was obliged to part with. But that (how sufficient soever it might be for a present support) could not discharge the many Debts in which Chaucer was engaged; and the King willing to skreen him till he should recover himself, granted him his Protection^p dated at Westminster the fourth day of May in the Twenty first year of his Reign; setting forth that the King had occasion to employ him in several affairs of moment. And the year following he granted to him by the Title of Armiger noster, by Letters Patents dated at Westminster the thirteenth day of October, in compensation of the Pycher of Wine daily, one Pipe of Wine annually in the Port of London, to be delivered to him by his Chief Butler^q; which Office was that year granted to his Son Thomas, who now growing in great favour, it will not be improper in this place to relate what we have concerning him.

It was before observed that Thomas Chaucer, by his marriage with Maud Daughter of Sir John Burghershe, attained to great wealth. The Office of Chief Butler to the King, granted to him this year, was afterwards given him for Life by Letters Patents from King Henry IV. and confirmed by Henry VI. In the second year of Henry IV. we find him Speaker of the House of Commons, Sheriff of Oxfordshire and of Berkshire, and Constable of Wallingford Castle and of Knaresborough Castle during Life. In the fourth year of the same Reign, the King

¹ Roll in a Cause of Chivalry between Scrope and Grosvenour, 10 R. 2. communicated to Mr. Urry by John Anstis Esq; Garter Principal King at Arms. Sir Richard Grosvenor of Eaton in Cheshire has a Folio Book in Velum, wherein all the Proceedings in this Dispute are copied from the Records in the Tower; and Chaucer's Evidence is amongst other things there set down. This was communicated by Richard Mestyn Esq; of Penbedw, to Mr. T. Hearne of Edmund-Hall, Oxon.

^m Vir belli pacisque artibus mirè florens. Pits. in vitâ Chauceri.

ⁿ Pour le bon & greable service que nostre treschier & bien aimee Dame Katherine Swynford Maistresse de nos tresames filz ad fais a nos dites filles lui avoir grauntes, &c. Ex libro nigro in Cam Duc. Lanc. fol. 96.

^o Lord Coke 4 Instit. Chap. 1.

^p Rex, &c. salutem. Sciatis quod cum dilectum Armigerum nostrum Galf. Chaucer ad quamplura ardua & urgentia negotia nostra tam in absentia quam in presentia nostris in diversis partibus infra regnum nostrum Angliæ facienda & expedienda ordinaverimus; idemque Galfrid. timeat se, per quosdam amulos suos, per quamplures querelas sive sectas, dum sic negotiis nostris intenderit, inquietari, molestari sive implacitari, & nobis supplicaverit ut sibi in hac parte subvenire velimus: Nos volentes pro securitate ipsius Galfridi prospicere gratiosè suscepimus ipsum Galfridum ac homines, terras, res, redditus, & omnes possessiones suas in protectionem & defensionem nostras speciales, nolentes quod ipse à data presentium per duos annos integros ad cujuscunque persona sectam nullatenus arrestetur, seu aliquid qualiter implacitetur, &c.—In cujus, &c. per biennium duratur. Teste Rege apud Westm. quarto die Maii, &c. Pat. 21 R. 2. p. 3. m. 26.

^q Pat. 22 Ric. 2. p. 1. m. 5.

G E O F. C H A U C E R.

directed an Order to him as Chief Butler to deliver 100 Tuns of Wine to the Duke of Burgundy. In the sixth year of the same Prince, he was sent Embassadour into France; and the year following he went over Sea, joined in Commission with the King's Brother and G. Chaucer's Nephew, Henry Beaufort Bishop of Winchester. In the ninth year of the same Reign, on Tuesday the Twenty fifth of October, the Commons presented him their Speaker; as they did likewise in the eleventh year, on Wednesday the Twenty eighth of January. In the twelfth year of that Reign, Queen Jane granted to him for his good service, the Manor of Woodstock, Hannebrough, Wotton and Stuntesfield during Life; and in the thirteenth year, on the fifth of November, he was again presented Speaker, as he was in the second of Henry V. on Wednesday the second day of Parliament. And in the same year he was sent by the King, in joint Commission with Hugh Mortimer, to treat of a Marriage with Katherine Daughter to the Duke of Burgundy. He was likewise Embassador in the fifth and sixth years of the same Reign with Walter Hungerford, Steward of the Household, in the same affair: And again, in the sixth year of the same Reign he was Embassador for Peace with France; and he passed through several other publick Stations, as appears by Records.

Mr. Stebbing intimates that he was Knighted, and calls him Sir Thomas Chaucer, but no such Title is given him in any Record: And if he received that Honour at the latter part of his Life, it would have been applyed to him after his death, which no where appears; but on the contrary, in an Entry of Lands held in Capite by his Daughter, and in the Epitaph on his Tomb he is only written Armiger.

The chief place of his Residence was at Ewelme in Oxfordshire, where he dyed in the year 1434, and lies buried in that Parish Church, under a Black Marble Tomb, in a fair Chapel the South side of the Quire, with the Effigies of him and his Wife upon the Tomb in brass plates, and round the verge of the Stone is this Inscription; Hic jacet Thomas Chaucer Armiger, quondam Dominus istius villæ & patronus istius ecclesiæ, qui obiit 18. die Mensis Novembris Anno D. 1434. & Matildis uxor ejus, quæ obiit 28. die Mensis Aprilis Anno D. 1436.

By his Wife Maud, or Matilda, who survived him two years, he had one Daughter named Alice, who was thrice married; first to Sir John Philips Knight, and afterwards to Thomas Montacute Earl of Salisbury, who dying left her very rich: Her third Husband was the famous William de la Pole, Earl and afterwards Duke of Suffolk, who was first secretly married to the Countess of Hainault, by whom he had one Daughter; but procuring a Divorce from her he married this Alice, by whom he had one Son, John Duke of Suffolk. Duke William lived chiefly at Dunnington and Ewelme; at the first of which Stow says he built an Hospital, but he seems to mistake it for that founded by Adderbury, as before-mentioned, for Dugdale takes no notice of any other; but at Ewelme he founded one called God's House. He was an instance of the danger of a Prince's Favour, and the envy that attends it: For influencing the Notions and the Will of his Master Henry VI. too much, and abusing the Power he had over that easy Prince, he enraged the Commons to that degree, that nothing less than his Banishment could appease them; which being agreed to, the Yorkists fearful of his return, seized him in his passage in Dover Road, and cut off his head upon the side of a Cock-boat; and his Body was buried at the Charterhouse at Hull. The Dutchess survived him several years, and after an honourable Life dyed at Ewelme in the year 1475¹.

Their Son John had issue (according to Leland *) John Earl of Lincoln, Edmond, after Duke of Suffolk, Richard, William, and who was a Scholar in Gunvil-Hall in Cambridge. Edmund de la Pole, the last of that name Duke of Suffolk, for being in Treason against Henry VII. (for which he had been once pardoned) forfeited his Life to the Crown, and was beheaded in the seventh year of that King's Reign; whereby the Estates which Chaucer's Family was possessed of came to the Crown; and particularly the Hospital of Ewelme, which was by King James the First annexed to the Physick Professor of Oxford, who is always Master thereof.

But to return to our Chaucer: The King, about the Twenty second year of his Reign, confirmed again to him the Grant for the Pipe of Wine annually; and by means of these Grants and the Influence he recovered by the Duke of Lancaster's Marriage, he again grew to a considerable share of wealth. But being now near Seventy years of age, and tired with a tedious view of hurried greatness, he thought it high time to withdraw from the Court Stage, where he had acted so considerable a part and with such various success, to consider and at distant leisure reflect upon what he had been doing. In order to which, he retired to Dunnington Castle near Newbury, where he spent the two or three last years of his Life; which

* Lel. Itin. Vol. VIII. p. 12 and 131.

¹ Lel. says, that for love of her and the commodite of her Landes, he fell much to dwelle in Oxfordshire, and Berkshire. Itin. Vol. II. p. 6.

² She lies buried in the Parish Church of Ewelme, on the South side of the High Altar in a Tomb of Alabaster, with an Image in the Habit of a Vowels crowned lying on the same, and (as Spreight says) another Image under the Tomb, so near as may be like unto her at the time of her death, with this Epitaph; Orate pro animâ serenissimâ Principissæ Aliciæ Ducissæ Suffolciæ hujus Ecclesiæ patrona, & primæ fundatoris hujus Eleemosinaria, quæ obiit 20 die mensis Maii, Anno Domini 1475. Litæa Dominicali A. Lel. Itin. Vol. II. p. 6. lb.

being

The LIFE of

being the last place of his Retirement; some account of it may not be unacceptable. It was in Mr. Camden's time (when in it's Glory) "a small but neat Castle, situate upon the brow of a rising Hill, having an agreeable prospect, very light with Windows on all sides, said to be built by Sir Richard Adderbury Knight, who likewise founded an Hospital beneath it, called God's House: it was afterwards the Seat of Chaucer, then of the De la Pole's, and in our Father's memory the dwelling of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk". At the beginning of the Rebellion in the Reign of King Charles the First, it was a Garrison for the King under the valiant Sir John Boys, which commanded the Western Road and Town of Newbury, and was therefore of considerable advantage to the Royal Party, as a safe Retreat; and the Cannons playing from it, much annoyed the Parliament Forces. This place his Majesty honoured by lying one night in it; but after a rough assault, and as bold a resistance (during which several of the Towers were battered down) it was surrendered upon honourable conditions. This was the ancient state, and the occasion of the late ruin of that pleasant Structure. At present there is nothing to be seen of it, but what raises horror and concern; a battered Gateway with two Towers, and some small part of the shattered Walls being all that remains thereof. The ground about it and the Ruins of it are choaked with Brambles, and overrun with Ivy; but lest even the place of it's situation should in a few years more be forgot, I shall as plainly as I can describe it. It lies half a mile to the right of Spinhamstead (the ancient Spina of Antoninus) and a mile beyond Newbury, on the same side; as you go from London, you pass over the River Kennet to the Village of Dunnington, from which there is a pretty steep but pleasant Ascent through a Lane to a Hill under the Castle, where stands a Seat (as I remember) of the Countess of Sandwich. From hence rises the Castle-Hill very steep, and not unlike that whereon the Observatory stands at Greenwich; and from this Hill there is a very fine Prospect of several Counties. On the back of the Castle are level Grounds, Woodlands and Enclosures. It stands in a pleasant Park, and is at present the Estate of Robert Packer Esq; in right of his Wife, one of the Daughters and Coheirs of Sir Humphrey Winchcombe of Bucklebury. In this Park stood an Oak called Chaucer's Oak, under which he is said to have written several of his Poems. Mr. Evelin gives a particular account of this Tree, and says there were three of them planted by Chaucer; the King's Oak, the Queen's Oak, and Chaucer's Oak. In this pleasant Retirement Chaucer spent the few last years of his Life, living in honour, and esteemed by all, famous for his Learning, not only in England, but in foreign Countries.

He was universally beloved, and even Party-Zeal could not raise him Enemies. Of Friendships he selected the best, being familiar with, and received by all the Men of Learning at that time. Of these Gower was the chief, who was of an honourable family, and by some counted a Knight: He studied the Laws, and seems by a Collar of SS. upon the Statue on his Tomb, to have been in some considerable Station at that time. He wrote several Pieces, in which he makes honourable mention of our Poet, and addresses him as a Judge of his Works. He was a Man of singular Learning, and great Piety; but much given to change with the turns of State: He lived to a great age, and survived Chaucer two years, and was * stone blind before his death. He lies buried in St. Mary Overies Church in Southwark ¹.

With Gower he joins another of his friends in the Inscription of Troilus and Cresseide, whom he calls the Philosophical Strode; whose Christian name, according to Leland and Bale, was Ralph; but according to others, Nicholas. He was a celebrated Philosopher at that time of Merton College, and Tutor to Chaucer's Son Lewis, as appears by a Note at the end of a MS. Treatise of the Astrolabe, amongst the Books of the late Bishop of Ely ². Bale says, he wrote several pieces of Poetry, and particularly four Books of Elegiacs. He was a great Follower of Wickliffe.

There can be no doubt of Chaucer's intimacy with Wickliffe; being probably of the same College with him, a Follower of his Opinions, and both Retainers to the Duke of Lancaster.

Thomas Occleve, or Hocklife, was a particular favourite of our Poet, and is said to be his Scholar; but it may be doubted whether strictly speaking he was his Pupil: It is more probable that Chaucer might be his Master (as Lidgate and others call him theirs) because Occleve took his Works for his pattern in writing, or submitted his Writings to his correction;

¹ Castellum exiguum sed elegans, memorosi collis supercilio prospectu ameno positum, & quod interius omne fere lumen admittit, conditum vero ferunt à Ricardo Adderbury Equite Aurato, qui etiam sub eo Domum Dei pauperibus fundavit; postea fuit Chauceri, inde Delapolorum; & patrum memoria Caroli Brandon Ducis Suffolciæ habitatio. Camd. Brit.

* As appears by his own words;

Henrici quarti primus regni fuit annus,
Quo mihi defecit visus ad acta mea, &c.

² In the Chapel of St. John Baptist in St. Mary Overies Church in Southwark, to the Rebuilding of which Church Gower had been a considerable Benefactor, there is a fine Monument in the Wall of the North Isle, where his Statue lies in a Gown flowered with greenish Damask, with a Crown of Roses, and a Collar of SS. his three Books lying under his Head. See Stow's Survey.

³ The words in the MS. are these; Explicit Tractatus de conclusionibus Astrolabii compilat. per Galfredum Chauciers ad filium suum Ludewicum scholarem tunc temporis Oxoniæ, ac sub tutela illius nobilissimi Philosophi Magistri N. Strode.

GEOF. CHAUCER.

and perhaps he might receive some particular Instructions ^a from him, and upon that account might shew him such respect as Mr. Pope does to the Memory of the late Mr. Walsh ^b. This Gentleman (who next Chaucer was one of the politest Wits in England) was of the Office of the Privy Seal. He wrote a Book called Cupid's Letter, printed with Chaucer's Works, which is a curious Defence of, and at the same time an artful Satyr upon Women: This piece is by some ascribed to Chaucer, but by mistake; it being written in the year 1402 (as appears by the Date at the end of it) which was two years after Chaucer's Death. He was (as Bale says) a strict Follower of the Opinions of Wickliffe, and Berengarius, which he had imbibed at Merton College, of which he was some time Student. To this Person we are particularly obliged for Chaucer's Picture, which he caused to be drawn in his Book De regimine Principis dedicated to King Henry V.

It is highly probable that Lidgate was intimately acquainted with our Poet, he being about Thirty years of age at Chaucer's Death. He is a close Imitator of our Poet in his Works, and frequently uses his very Expressions, copying whole lines together in some places. In his Story of the Siege of Thebes (which Pits says was written by Chaucer, and turned into English Verse by Lidgate) he shoves himself into the Company of Chaucer and his Pilgrims, laying the Scene at Canterbury, where that Story is told. He was no small Refiner of our Language; and his Pieces seem much more modern, than several of those of his Contemporaries. He had by Travel acquired all parts of Learning, and lived and died a Monk of Bury ^c. We have as much reason to believe that Scogan had a share in Chaucer's friendship, being (as Leland says) an admirer and imitator of him.

Chaucer had in the former part of his Life been acquainted with Francis Petrarch, the famous Italian Poet and Refiner of that Language. This acquaintance is supposed to have commenced at Milan in 1368. the Forty third year of King Edward III. and about the Fortieth of Chaucer's age, when Lionel Duke of Clarence married with Violante, or Iolantis, Daughter of Galeazzo Prince of Milan, and Sister of John Galeazzo first Duke of Milan. The Duke of Clarence went over attended with the chief Persons of the Court, and at Milan he gave them one of the most splendid Entertainments we meet with in History. Petrarch was present ^d at this Marriage; and some write that Chaucer was there ^e: But whether this was the place or time of their interview, I cannot determine; there can be no doubt but they were known to each other; and Chaucer in the Prologue to the Clerk of Oxenford's Tale seems to hint at himself in that Character (as he does very often on the like occasions) where the Clerk says, he learned the Story of Grisild at Padua from Petrarch. Mr. Dryden in the Preface to his Tales says it was the Invention of Petrarch, by him sent to Boccace, from whom it came to Chaucer; but Petrarch only translated it from Boccace into Latin, and dedicated it to him. Nor is there any reason to doubt of our Poet's acquaintance, or at least friendship, with Boccace (from whom he borrowed many things) who at that time bestowed a great deal of pains in refining the Italian Tongue, as Chaucer did the English, and Alan Chartier the French.

Chaucer had not long enjoyed this Retirement before he lost his Patron and Brother, the Duke of Lancaster, who dyed in the year 1399. and was buried at St. Paul's in London, where his Tomb stood until the late Fire; and upon it an Inscription, wherein his last Marriage was mentioned ^f. His Wife survived him four years, and dying at Lincoln, was there buried ^g.

Not long after the Death of this Prince that Revolution happened in England wherein Rich. II. was deposed, and Henry IV. assumed the Crown. Whether Chaucer was concerned in this doth not appear; but doubtless as he was a Follower of the Fortunes of the House of Lancaster, it could not be disagreeable to him to see the Son of his old Patron and Brother, the late Duke of Lancaster, obtain that Crown which his Father reached at in vain. But the respect he retained for his former Master Richard, and Gratitude for the Favours he had received from him, kept him from trampling upon his Memory, and basely flattering the new King; as most of his Contemporaries did, and particular Gower, who, notwithstanding the obligations he had to Rich. II. ^h yet when old, blind, and past any hopes of honour or advan-

^a Occleve, in his Book De regimine Principis;

*My dere maister. (God his soule quite)
And fader Chaucer fain would have me taught,
But I was yong and lered lise or naught.*

^b In his Essay on Criticism.

^c Prob. to History of Thebes.

^d Paulus Jovius in vitâ Galeas. II. p. 152.

^e Speght in his Life.

^f Tertiam uxorem duxit Catherinam ex Equestri familia & eximia pulchritudine feminam, ex qua numerosam suscepit prolem, unde genus ex matre duxit Henricus Septimus Rex Angliæ prudensissimus. This Inscription was fixed in the Reign of Henry VII. Sandford.

^g She lieth in the Cathedral Church of Lincoln, on the South side of the Quire, under a Marble Monument, built Altar-wise, inlaid with her Effigies in brass; and on a Fillet of the same is this Epitaph; ici gist dame Katherine Duchesse de Lancastre, filz a tresnoble Roy Edward le tierce, la quelle Katherine moreut le x jour de May l'an de grace Mil cccc sierz, de quelle alme Dieu eyt mercy & pitie. Amen. Sandford.

^h In the Prologue to his Confessio Amantis he tells how kindly King Richard called him on the Thames to come out of a Boat into the Royal Barge, where he commanded him to write that Book. This is omitted in the printed Editions, but supplied in an Advertisement to the Reader in the Edition of 1554.

The LIFE of

rage, unless the view of keeping what he enjoyed, basely insulted the Memory of his murdered Master, and as ignominiously flattered his Murderer.

Tho' Chaucer no where mentions the name of Hen. IV. no doubt he was very well with that Prince, whose precarious Title wanted the assistance of the learned Men of those times to support it: And we find that in the first year of his Reign he confirmed to Chaucer the Grants of the Pipe of Wine and of the Annuity (which had been accidentally lost) by an Exemplification of the former Patents of Rich. II. Nor did he think this sufficient to shew the value he had for his Father's Friend and Brother; but in the same year he granted to him an Annuity of Forty Marks per Annum during Life.

Mr. Dryden says that Chaucer was employed abroad and favoured by Edward the Third, Richard the Second, and Henry the Fourth, and was Poet (as he supposed) to all Three of them^k. But with submission to that great Man, I find no grounds to believe he was Poet Laureat to any of them; and there is this reason for the contrary opinion, that there is not one Court Poem in all his Works. The words Anglorum Vates ter maximus upon his Tomb imply no such thing; the like being said of other Poets, who never had the Title of Laureat. The same may be said of the Title given him by Lidgate of chiefe Poete of Brytayne; which perhaps might induce others to think he was Poet Laureat. But Mr. Selden could find no Poet honoured with that Title in England before the time of Edward the Fourth, to whom one John Kay dedicated The Siege of Rhodes in prose, by the Title of his humble Poet Laureat^l. If any Poet bore that Title then, it is more likely to be Gower, though Dr. Fuller floutingly says, he was neither Laureated nor Hederated, but Rosated, alluding to what Pits says concerning him^m; yet it hath the head bound with a Filler, in allusion to the ancient Custom: To which may be added what Gower says of the King's commanding him to write upon several Subjects, as is observed before. And Chaucer was so far from being employed by Henry IV. that he had scarce time to receive any marks of Favour from him, dying in the second year of his Reign; tho' Mr. Collier and others fix the time of his Death in 1400, which was the nineteenth year of Henry VI. If so, he could be but ten years old at the death of Edw. III. and therefore unfit to be employed by him, or to hold the Offices he enjoyed under him.

But how pleasing soever the change of Government might be to him at first, he afterwards found no small inconveniencies attending it. The Measures and Grants of the late King were annulled, the Acts of Parliament for a whole year (i. e. the Twenty first of his Reign) totally repealed; and Affairs were in so dangerous a posture, that no man thought himself secure, who had been concerned in the late Administration. Chaucer thought it high time to secure his Affairs, and get fresh Grants of his Pensions. In order to which, he left his Retirement and applied to Court; where tho' he gained a Confirmation of some Grants, as is before mentioned, yet the fatigue of attendance and his great age prevented him by Death from enjoying them: Nor that he had any view of further honour, or desire of publick Employments; for Leland says he found age burthensome, and while he followed his Causes at London he fell sick, and with a truly Roman Courage, and at the same time with a calm and Christian resignation, ended his days in the Seventy second year of his age, and left the World as tho' he despised it, shewing a scorn of worldly affairs in the Song of Flie fro the prese, &c.ⁿ which he wrote in his last hours^o. He dyed the Twenty fifth of October in the year of our Lord 1400. in the second year of the Reign of Henry IV. and was buried in Westminster Abby, in the great South cross Isle. Some Writers have affirmed that he was first buried in the Cloysters^p; and lay there till some years after; but this is a mistake, for Caxton in his Edition of Chaucer (which was long before the time of his removal, as they place it) says that he was buried in the Abby Church of Westminster before the Chapel of St. Bennet: And it is very probable he lay beneath a large Stone of grey Marble in the Pavement where the Monument of Mr. Dryden now stands, which is in the Front of that Chapel; upon the erecting of which, this Stone was taken up and sawed in pieces to make good the Pavement. This seems best to answer Caxton's description of the place. Speght and others say the old Verses written upon his Grave were these^q;

ⁱ Rex, &c. salutem. Constat nobis per inspectionem Rotulorum Cancellarie Domini Ricardi nuper Regis Angliæ secundi post conquestum, quod idem nuper Literas suas patentes fieri fecit in hac verba, &c. [Reciting the Patent for the Wine] Constat etiam nobis per inspectionem Rotulorum Cancellarie ejusdem nuper Regis, quod idem nuper Rex alias Literas suas patentes fieri fecit in hac verba, &c. [Reciting the Patent for the Annuity] Nos pro eo quod idem Galfridus coram nobis in Cancellaria nostra personaliter constitutus sacramentum prestavit corporale quod litera predicta casualiter sunt amissa, tenorem irritamentum earundem literarum duximus exemplificandum per presentes. In cuius, &c. Teste Rege apud Westm. 18. die Octobris, &c. Pat. 1 H 4. p. 1. m. 18.

^k In the Preface to his Fables.

^l Selden's Titles of Honour. Part II. Ch. 1. §. 43.

^m Eique [Gowero] erecta est statua, que duplicia gerit ornamenta, torquem videlicet auream, insigne militis & Equitis aurati: ex Hedera rosis intermixtam coronam, honorarium Poete laureati ornamentum. In vita Goweri.

ⁿ See Page 548.

^o In a MS. in the Cotton Library (O THO. A. XVIII. these words are inserted before that Ballad; A Balade made by Geoffrey Chaucyer upon his deshe bedde lying in his grete Anguysse.

^p Fox's Acts and Mon. 1684. Vol. II. p. 41.

^q Leland says they were put upon his Tomb by Caxton the Printer, at whose request Steph. Surigennus of Milan made that Copy of Verses upon Chaucer's Death, inserted among the Testimonies, out of which these two Verses are taken.

GEOFF. CHAUCER.

*Galfridus Chaucer, vates, & fama Poesis
Maternæ, hæc factū sum tumulatus humo.*

But about the 1555, Mr. Nicholas Brigham a Gentleman of Oxford, who exercised his Muse much in Poetry, and took great delight in Chaucer's Works, and honoured his memory, at his own charge erected a handsome Monument for him not far from the said Chapel; for in the same place he could not then conveniently erect it, by reason of the Cancelli, which the late Duke of Buckingham obtained leave to remove to make room for Mr. Dryden's Tomb. Upon that Monument Mr. Brigham caused Chaucer's Picture to be painted, from that which was in Occleve's Book before mentioned, together with the following Inscription which still remains:

M. S.

Qui fuit Anglorum vates ter maximus olim

Galfridus Chaucer conditur hoc tumulo:

Annum si quæras Domini, si tempora vitæ,

Ecce notæ subsunt quæ tibi cuncta notant.

25. Octobris. 1400.

Ærumnarum requies mors.

N. Brigham hos fecit Musarum nomine sumptus.

1556.

About the Ledge of the Tomb were these Verses now quite worn out;

*Si rogites quis eram, forsitan te Fama docebit;
Quod si Fama negat, mundi quia gloria transit,
Hæc monumenta lege.*

He was, as before observed, of a middle stature^r, the latter part of his Life inclinable to be fat and corpulent, as appears by the Host's bantering him in the Journey to Canterbury, and comparing shapes with him^w. His face was fleshy, his features just and regular, his complexion fair, and somewhat pale, his hair of a dusky yellow, short and thin; the hair of his beard in two forked tufts, of a wheat colour; his forehead broad and smooth; his eyes inclining usually to the ground, which is intimated by the Host's words^x; his whole face full of liveliness, a calm easy sweetness, and a studious venerable aspect. As in the Characters of his Pilgrims he so naturally described them, that the nicest pencil could not possibly give us so full an Idea of them as his words; so likewise he has given us as just a Picture of himself: And as Mr. Dryden observes, he saw all the Pilgrims in the Canterbury Tales, their Humours, their Features, and the very Dress as distinctly as if he had supped with them at the Tabard in Southwark^y; so one may from the Testament of Love conceive as perfect an Idea of Chaucer's behaviour and actions in conversation, as if one were sitting in the Prison with him, while he discoursed with Philosophy. The down-cast look, the strict attention, the labouring thought, the hand waving for silence, the manner of address in speaking, the smooth familiar way of arguing, the respectful way of starting his objections, and in short every expression in that dispute figures a lively Image of him in the mind of the Reader.

As to his Temper, he had a mixture of the gay, the modest, and the grave. The spright-

^r So says Weaver, Fun. Mon. p. 489. who adds that Brigham buried his Daughter Rachel near to Chaucer's Tomb the 21. of June 1557. But A. Wood says that Brigham removed Chaucer's Bones into the South cross Isle or Transept of St. Peter's Church in Westminster, in the year 1556.

^s See a Plate of the Monument in the Title Page.

^t So say Speght and Weaver. These Verses were probably written upon a Ledge of Brass, which may have been fixed upon the Marble Table, but is now taken away, and not upon the Stone it self, there being no footsteps of any writing upon the edge of it.

^u In Greene's Vision, written by Robert Greene Master of Arts in Cambridge, there is a lively Description of Chaucer, who is introduced as appearing to the Author in this form;

*His stature was not very tall,
Lean he was, his legs were small,
Hos'd within a stock of red;
A button'd bonnet on his head,
From under which did hang 1 weene,
Silver haires both bright and sheene,
His beard was white, trimmed round,
His countenance blithe and merry found;*

*A steevless Jacket large and wide,
With many pleights and skirtes side,
Of water Chamlet did he wear;
A whittel by his belt he beare;
His shoes were corned broad before;
His Inckhorne at his side he wore;
And in his hand he bore a booke:
Thus did this ancient Poet look.*

^w The words of the Host to Chaucer. p. 144.

*Now ware you, Sirs, and let this man have place;
He in the wast is shapen as wel as I,
This were a popet in armes to embrace, &c.*

^x lb. — What man art thou? (quoth he)
Thou lookist as thou wouldist find an hare,
For evir on the ground I se The floure.

^y In the Preface to his Fables.

The LIFE of

linefs of his humour was more diftinguifhed by his Writings, than by his Appearance; which gave occafion to Margaret Countefs of Pembroke often to rally him upon his ſilent Modesty in company, telling him, that his abſence was more agreeable to her than his converſation^a, ſince the firſt was productive of agreeable Pieces of Wit in his Writings, but the latter was filled with a modeſt deference, and a too diſtant reſpect. We ſee nothing merry or joſe in his behaviour with his Pilgrims, but a ſilent attention to their mirth, rather than any mixture of his own; and when he is called upon by Harry Baily the Hoſt, and rouzed out of his thoughtful Lethargy to tell a Tale, he endeavours to put it off by ſinging an old Ballad; but that not ſatisfying the Company, the Tale he tells is grave, moral and inſtructive.

In his early years his Temper and Inclination were ſomewhat too gay and looſe; nor did even Marriage confine his amorous humour, as appears by the Banter which paſſed between him and his Man in ſome Verſes written by them with a Diamond in the glaſs Window where he lived^a; and he himſelf ſpeaks with a^b penitent concern of the many wanton Songs he had writ in his younger years. Towards the latter part of his Life, the gay Gentleman gave way to the grave Philoſopher and pious Divine.

When diſengaged from publick Affairs, his time was entirely ſpent in ſtudy and reading: So agreeable to him was this exerciſe, that he ſays, he preferred it to all other ſports and diverſions^c. He lived within himſelf, neither deſirous to hear nor buſy to concern himſelf with the affairs of his Neighbours^d. His courſe of living was temperate and regular; he went to reſt with the Sun, and roſe before it^e, and by that means enjoyed the pleaſures of the better part of the day, his morning walk and freſh contemplations. This gave him the advantage of deſcribing the Morning in ſo lively a manner as he does every where in his Works: The ſpringing Sun glows warm in his lines, and the fragrant Air blows cool in his deſcriptions; we ſmell the ſweets of the bloomy Haws, and hear the Muſick of the feathered Choir, when ever we take a Forreſt walk with him. The hour of the day is not eaſier to be diſcovered from the Reflexion of the Sun in Titian's Paintings, than in Chaucer's Morning Landſkapes. 'Tis true, thoſe Deſcriptions are ſometimes too long, and (as it is before obſerved) when he takes thoſe early rambles, he almoſt tires his Reader with following him, and ſeldom knows how to get out of a Forreſt, when once entered into it: But how advantageous this beautiful extravagance is, moſt of his Succeſſors well know, who have very plentifully lopt off his exuberant Beauties, and placed them as the chief Ornaments of their own Writings.

His Reading was deep, and extenſive, his Judgment ſound, and diſcerning; but yet (a thing rarely found in Men of great Learning and poignant Wit) he was communicative of his Knowledge, and ready to correct or paſs over the Faults of his Cotemporary Writers^f. He knew how to judge of, and to excuſe the ſlips of weaker Capacities, and pitied rather than expoſed the Ignorance of that Age.

In one word, he was a great Scholar, a pleaſant Wit, a candid Critick, a ſociable Companion, a ſtedfaſt Friend, a grave Philoſopher, a temperate OEconomist and a pious Chriſtian. He was not unacquainted with the ancient Rules of Poetry, nor did he diſdain to follow them, tho' he thought it the leaſt part of a Poet's perfections. As he had a diſcerning Eye, he diſcovered Nature in all her appearances, and ſtrip'd off every diſguiſe with which the Gothick Writers had cloathed her: He knew that thoſe Drefſes would change as Times altered; but that ſhe her ſelf would always be the ſame, and that ſhe could never fail to pleaſe in her ſimple attire, nor that Writer who drew her ſo; and therefore deſpiſing the mean aſſiſtances of Art, he copied her cloſe. He knew what it was to be nimis Poeta, and avoided it as the moſt dangerous extreme. His Strokes are bold, and his Colours lively; but the firſt not too much laboured, nor the other too ſhowy or glaring. There is a wild Beauty in his Works, which comes nearer the Deſcriptions of Homer, than any other that followed him: And though his Pieces have not that regular diſpoſition as thoſe of the Grecians, yet the ſeveral Parts ſeparately compared, bear an equal value with theirs; and Mr. Dryden, than whom there was no better Judge of the Beauties of Homer and Virgil, poſitively aſſerts that he exceeded the latter, and ſtands in competition with the former^g. Whoever reads the Knight's Tale, which is the beſt of his Performances, being a finiſhed Epick Poem, and examines the Characters, the Sentiments, the Diction, Diſpoſition and Time, will find that he was not unacquainted with the Rules of that way of Writing; but this requires an abler hand, and longer time to enlarge upon it.

That he was a true Maſter of Satyr, none will deny. It is true the Perſons levelled againſt, and the Crimes expoſed, would not allow of the ſevere Scourge Juvenal made uſe of, nor was there ſuch a variety of Follies as Horace facetiouſly exploded: Not but that Chaucer had

^a See the godely Balade. p. 358.

^b I am a married man, and yet — quoth Chaucer.
Thou art a merry man, quoth Wat.

^c In his Retraction. p. 214.

^d In the beginning of the Dreame of Chaucer, and Leg. of gode Women. y. 29, &c.

^e So he deſcribes himſelf in the ſecond Book of Fame. y. 140, &c.

^f Leg. of gode Women. y. 45, &c.

^g Occleve and Lidgate bewail the loſs of him on this account. See the Teſtimonies.

^h In the Preface to his Fables.

GEOFF. CHAUCER.

a Scene of Vice in the Court of that time, capable of supplying him with matter sufficient for the sharpest strokes of Satyr; but he was wise enough not to exasperate a Court by which he was supported, and in which he had interest little enough to screen himself from malice, without provoking it: He knew he had a fair Province for the exercise of that Talent without exposing himself to it's resentment; and having a Court to back him, he has shewn by severely lashing an ignorant and corrupt Clergy, that he could (had it been safe) have applied as severe a lash to a vicious irreligious Laity. Yet there are some strokes which shew he was not uncapable of writing in the Horatian way; of which the Physician whose studie was but litle in the Bible^b, the Lawyer who semed besier than he was^c, the libidinous Wife of Bath^d, and the testy cholerick Reve^e, and several other Characters are sufficient Instances.

That in the Elegiac kind of Poetry he was a compleat Master, appears plainly by his Complaint of the Black Knight, the Poem called La belle Dame sans mercy, and several of his Songs. He was an excellent Master of Love-Poetry, having studied that Passion in all it's turns and appearances; and Mr. Dryden prefers him upon that account to Ovid. His Troilus and Cresseide is one of the most beautiful Poems of that kind; in which Love is curiously and naturally described in it's early appearance, it's hopes and fears, it's application, fruition, and despair in disappointment.

It is thought by some that his Verses every where consist of an equal number of feet, and that if read with a right accent, are no where deficient; but those nice discerning Persons would find it difficult, with all their straining and working, to spin out some of his Verses into a measure of ten Syllables^m. He was not altogether regardless of his Numbers; but his thoughts were more intent upon solid sense than gingle, and he tells us plainly that we must not expect regularity in all his Versesⁿ.

His Language, how unintelligible soever it may seem, is more modern than that of any of his Contemporaries, or of those that followed him at the distance of Fifty or Sixty years, as Harding, Skelton, and others; and in some places it is to this day so smooth, concise and beautiful, that even Mr. Dryden would not attempt to alter it, but has copied some of his Verses almost literatim: And Chaucer was the first that adorned and amplified the English Tongue from the Provençal^o, which was the most polished of all the Languages used at that time^p. It would require a just Dissertation to trace the old French Idiom through all his Works; but some notice being occasionally taken of it in the Glossary, the Reader must be referred thither.

I proceed to give some account of his Works, in the order wherein they were written, so far as it can be collected from them.

Mr. Phillips supposes a great part of his Works to be lost, above what we have extant of him^q; of that number may be, manye a Song, and many a lecherous lay^r, which might perhaps have been written by him while he was a Student at Cambridge. Bale and Pits give (after their manner) a very long Catalogue of his Works, by repeating the same Pieces under different Titles, which has lead others into the like mistakes.

The Court of Love was written while he resided at Cambridge, in the eighteenth year of his age^s.

The Craft of Lovers was written in the year of our Lord 1348. which was the twentieth year of his age^t; and it is probable the Remedy of Love was written about that time, or not long after^u.

The Lamentation of Mary Magdalen, taken from Origen, was written by him in his early years^w. And perhaps Boethius de Consolatione Philosophiæ was translated by him about the same time^x.

The Romaunt of the Rose, is a Translation from the French. This Poem was begun by William de Lorris, and continued by John de Meun, both famous French Poets in their time^y. It seems to have been translated by Chaucer while he was at Court, and about the time of the Rise of Wickliffe's Opinions, it consisting of violent Invectives against the Religious Orders. It is left imperfect at the end, and there are some Lacuna's in other places of it.

The Complaint of the Black Knight, was written (as some do conjecture) during John

^b Prol. 324.

ⁱ Ib. 440.

^k Ib. 460, &c.

^l Ib. 589.

^m See Mr. Dryden's Preface to his Fables, p. S. quoted in the Testimonies.

ⁿ In the third Book of the House of Fame, v. 9, &c. See Misse-metre in the Gloss.

^o See the Testimony of Mr. Rymer, and Mr. Dryden's Pref. to his Fables.

^p Winstanley says, that herein he followed the Example of Dante and Petrarch, who had done the same for the Italian Tongue, Alanus for the French, and Johannes Alena for the Spanish. England's Worthies p. 119.

^q Theatrum Pict. Part II. p. 51.

^r See his Retraction, p. 214, b. and the Leg. of good Women. v. 422, 423.

^s Court of Love. v. 43, 911, &c.

^t Page 552, 553.

^u See the Prol. to the Rem. of Love. p. 526.

^w See the Leg. of good Wom. v. 427, 428.

^x Ib. 425.

^y Recueil l'Origine de la Langue & Poësie Française. A Paris. 1581. Menagiana, Tom. 3. p. 67.

The LIFE of

of Gaunt's Courtship with Blanch; and Chaucer's Dreame is supposed to be written upon account of the Duke of Lancaster's Marriage.

The Poem of Troilus and Cresseide was written in the former part of his Life, and translated (as he says) from ^a Lollins, an Historiographer of Urbane in Italy; it is called Trophe in the Lombard Tongue. He has not contented himself with a bare Translation of his Author, but hath added several things of his own, and borrowed from others what he thought proper for the Embellishment of this Work; and particularly the Song of Troilus in the First Book is a Translation of that Song in Petrarch, which begins, S'amor non è, che dunqu' è quel ch'io sento? And that Discourse of Predestination in the Fourth Book is an addition of his own; in which Controversy, he seems by this Passage and that in the Priest's Nonne's Tale beginning at Y. 1349. to be so well versed, that Sir Henry Savil thinks he had perused Archbishop Bradwardine's learned Book De Causâ Dei published at that time ^b. Sir Francis Knahton, who translated this Poem into Latin Rhimes, in his MSS. Notes upon it, says that it was not improbably conjectured that Chaucer, in writing the Lives and Loves of Troilus and Cresseide, glanced at some private persons in the Court of King Edw. III. and did not follow Homer, Dares, Diclys, or any Historian of those times. However (says he) Chaucer has taken the liberty of his own inventions; he hath made an admirable and inimitable Epick Poem, describing in Troilus a compleat Knight in Arms and Courtship, and a faithful constant Lover, and in Cresseide a most beautiful and coy Lady, which being once overcome yields to the Frailty of her Sex.

The House of Fame. From this Poem Mr. Pope took part of the Design of his Temple of Fame.

The Book of Blanch the Duchesse, commonly called the Dreame of Chaucer, was written upon the Death of that Lady. It is called The deth of Blaunche the Duchesse in the Leg. of gode Women, Y. 418. and by Lidg. in his Prol. to the Fall of Princes.

The Assembly of Fowls (or Parlement of Briddis ^c, as he calls it in his Retraction) was written before the Death of Queen Philippa.

The Life of St. Cecilia seems to have been first a single Poem ^d, afterwards made one of his Canterbury Tales, which is told by the second Nonne; And so perhaps was that of the Wife of Bath, which he advises John of Gaunt to read ^e, and was afterwards inserted in his Canterbury Tales.

The Canterbury Tales were written about the year 1383. It is certain the Tale of the Nonne's Priest was written after the Insurrection of Jack Straw and Wat Tyler, which was in the year 1381. it being mentioned in that Tale ^f. It is probable that most of the Tales were written as so many distinct Poems at different times (as it has been before observed of the Second Nonne's Tale, and that of the Wife of Bath) and afterwards collected into one Body in Imitation of Boccace's Decameron, whence the Arguments of some of them were taken.

The Flower and the Leaf, was written by him; as appears by his own words in the Prologue to the Legend of gode Women. This is judged by Mr. Dryden to be of our Author's own invention, after the manner of the Provençals ^g; and he was so particularly pleased with it both for the Invention and Moral, that he recommends it to the Reader in a modern Dress.

Chaucer's A. B. C. called La Priere de nostre Dame, was written for the use of the Duchess Blanch.

The Book of the Lion is mentioned in his Retraction, and by Lidg. in the Prologue to the Fall of Princes; but it is now lost, as is that

De Vulcani veru, i. e. Of the Broche of Vulcan, which is likewise mentioned by Lidgate ^h.

La belle Dame sans mercy, was translated from the French of Alain Chartier, Secretary to Lewis the Eleventh, King of France.

The Complaint of Mars and Venus was translated from the French of Sir Otes de Grantson a French Poet. This Poem is supposed to have been written upon the account of the Lord John Holland before mentioned, who married the Lady Elizabeth (Daughter of the Duke of Lancaster) and that Lord is thought to be meant by Mars, and by Venus the Lady of York, Daughter to the King of Spain.

The Complaint of Annelida to false Arcite.

The Legend of gode Women (called The Assembly of Ladies, and by some The Ninetene Ladies) was written to oblige the Queen, at the request of Margaret Countess of Pembroke.

The Treatise of the Conclusions of the Astrolabie was written in the year 1391 ⁱ.

^a Tr. l. 1. v. 305.

^a See the Gloss. in Agre.

^b See the Passage among the Testimonies.

^c It is called The Parliament of Fowles in the Leg. of gode Wom. Y. 419. and by Lidg. in the Prol. to The Fall of Princes.

^d See the Leg. of gode Wom. Y. 426.

^e See the Envoy to the Duke of Lancaster after the Loss of Blanch. Y. 29. p. 413.

^f See p. 173. Y. 1509.

^g In the Pref. to his Fables.

^h In the Prol. to the Fall of Princes.

ⁱ See p. 442, b. and p. 443. a.

GEOF. CHAUCER.

Of the Cuckow and Nightingale. This seems by the Descriptions to have been writ at Woodstock.

The Ballade beginning In Feverere, &c. was a Compliment to the Lady Margaret Countess of Pembroke^k.

Verles beginning, The long nyghtis, &c.

Several other Ballads are ascribed to him; some of which are justly suspected not to have been written by him; as that beginning, O maffie Quince^l, &c. and that beginning I have a Ladie^m, &c. which must needs be written long after his time; for the Marriage of Queen Jane with King Henry IV. which is therein mentioned, did not happen till after Chaucer's Death.

The Comedies ascribed to him, seem to be nothing else but his Canterbury Tales, and the Tragedies were those his Monk tells in his Taleⁿ; and they are so called in the Title of that Tale in some MSS.

The Testament of Love was written in his Troubles, in the latter part of his Life.

The Song beginning Fly fro the presẽ, &c. was written on his Death-bed, as it is before observed.

The Testament and Complaint of Cresseide, are by Bale and Pits (after Leland) ascribed to Chaucer^o: But as to the Author of them, the Reader may be referred to the Note prefixed to them.

Leland says, that by the consent of the Learned in his time, the Plowman's Tale was attributed to Chaucer, but was suppressed in the Editions then extant, because the Vices of the Clergy were therein exposed. Fox is of the same Opinion^p, who also ascribes the little Piece called Jack Upland to him; as some have that Poem called Piers Plowman's Visions, confounding it with the Plowman's Tale.

Mr. Speght in his Life of Chaucer printed in 1602. mentions a Tale in Mr. William Thynne's first printed Book of Chaucer's Works, more odious to the Clergy than the Speech of the Plowman, which began thus;

*In Lincolnshire fast by a Fenne
Standeth a religious house, who doth it kenne, &c.*

The Argument of which Tale, as also the occasion thereof, and the cause why it was left out of Chaucer's Works, he promised should be shewed in Mr. Francis Thynne's Comment upon Chaucer^q; but neither the one nor the other have been since published.

One thing more is to be observed of his Works; that they were so universally valued, that we do not find them in the Catalogues of Books prohibited by the Bishop of London, in the year 1526. nor of those prohibited by the King, at the Instigation of the Bishops, by Proclamation in 1529^r. But on the contrary, in an Act of Parliament in the 34 Hen. VIII. Cap. I. For the advancement of true Religion, and for the abolishment of the contrary, the Canterbury Tales, Chaucer's Works, are excepted from the Prohibition of that Act.

As to the Tales added in this Edition; an Account of them comes within the Design of the Preface, to which the Reader is referr'd; as he is to the following Testimonies for a fuller account of the Judgment of Learned Men, both in Chaucer's time and since, concerning Him and his Works.

^k Page 556.

^l Page 558.

^m Page 557.

ⁿ See the Prol. to the Monke's Tale, N. 85, &c.

^o Dr. Hicks calls the Testament of Cresseide, Carmen Chauceri. Gram. AS. p. 65. in marg.

^p AEs and Mon. Vol. II. p.

^q See Wood's Athenæ in Francis Thynne.

^r Fox's AEs and Mon. 1684. Vol. II. p. 233, &c.

TESTI-

TESTIMONIES

Of Learned Men concerning

CHAUCER and his WORKS.

Jo. Gower De Confessione Amantis,
Printed by Thomas Berthelette, 1554.
Fol. CXC. a. where Venus speaks to Gower;

— G Rete well Chaucer, whan ye mete,
As my disciple and my poete,
For in the floures of his youth,
In sondrie wise, as he well couth
Of ditees, and of songes glade,
The which he for my sake made,
The londe fulfilled is over all;
Whereof to hym in speciall
Above all other I am most holde.
Forthy nowe in his daies olde
Thou shalt hym tell this message,
That he upon his later age,
To sette an ende of all his werke,
As he whiche is myn owne clerke,
Do make his Testament of love,
As thou hast done thy shriste above,
So that my courte it may recorde.
Madame, I can me well accorde,
(Quod I) to telle as ye me bid.

John Lidgate in his Prologue to the Story of Thebes, speaking of the Canterbury Tales;

AS openly the Story can you lere
Word by word, with every circumstance
Echone i writ and put in remembrance
By him that was, if [that] I shall not faine,
Floure of Poetes, throughout all Britaine,
Which sothely had moſte of excellence
In Rhetorike and in eloquence.
Rede his making who liſte the trouthe find,
Which never ſhall appallen in my mind,
But alwaie freſhe been in myne memorie,
To whom be yove priſe, honour and glorie

Of well ſeyng firſt in our language;
Cheefe Regiſtrer in this pilgrimage,
All that was told foryeting nought at all,
Feined tales, nor thing hitoriall,
With many Proverbs, divers and uncouth,
By reherſaile of his ſugred mouthe,
Of eche thyng kepyng in ſubſtaunce
The ſentence hole withoutin variaunce,
Voidyng the chaffe, ſothely for to ſeine,
Enlumining the true piked greine,
By craſtie writyng of his ſawes ſwete,
Fro the tyme that they did mete.

The ſame Author in the Prologue to his Tranſlation of Boccace of the Fall of Princes.

MY Maſter Chaucer with his freſh comedies
Is dede, alas! chiefe Poete of Britayne,
That whilom made ful piteous tragedies,
The Fall of Princes he did alſo complayne,
As he that was of making ſoverayne:
Whom all this londe ſchulde of ryght preferre;
Sith of our langage he was the lode-ſterre.

And ſemblably as I have told toſorne
My Maſter Chaucer did his beſineſſe,
And in his dayes hath ſo well him borne
Out of our tong t'aroyden all rudeneſſe,
And to reforme it with colors of ſweteſſe:
Wherefore let us yeve him laude and glorye,
And put his name with Poetes in memorye.

Of whoſe labour to make mencion,
Wherethurgh of right he ſhulde commendid be,
In youthe he made a tranſlacioun
Of a boke which called is Trophe
In Lumbard tong, as men may rede and ſe,
And in our vulgare, long or that he deyde,
Gave it the name of Troilus and Creſſeyde.

Which

TESTIMONIES, &c.

Which for to rede lovers them delite,
They have therein so grete devocioun;
And this Poete also himfelfe to quite,
Of Boecius boke the consolacioun;
Made in his tyme an hole translatioun;
And to his Sonne that called was Lewis
He made a tretise, ful noble and of gteat prife/

Upon th' Astrolabour in full noble forme
Set them in ordre with ther divisions,
Mennys wittes t'applien and conforme,
To understond by full expert retons,
By domifieng of suidrie mansions,
The rote out sought at the Ascendent,
Toforne or he gaf any jugement.

He wrote also ful many a day agone
Dante in English, himself so doth expresse;
The piteous Story of Ceix and Alcion,
And the deshe eke of Blaunche the Duchesse;
And notably did his besinesse,
By grete avyse his wittes to dispose,
To translate the Romans of the Rose:

Thus in vertue he set all his entent
Ydelnes and vices for to fle:
Of fowles alle he wrote the Parliament,
Therin remembring of royall Egles thre,
Howe in their choyse they felte adversite,
Tofore nature profered the batayle
Eche for his partie, if it would awayle.

He did also his diligence and payne,
In our vulgare to translate and endite
Origene upon the Maudelayne;
And of the Lyon a boke he did write;
Of Annelida and of false Arcite
He made a complaynt doleful and piteous;
And of the broche which that Vulcanus

At Thebes wrought full divers of nature;
Ovide writeth who therof had a sight
For high defyre he shuld not endure
But he it had never be glade ne light;
And if he had it onys in his might,
Like as my maister saith and writeth in dede,
It to conserve, he shuld aye live in drede.

This poete wrote, at the request of the quene,
A legende of perfite holynesse,
Of good women to synd out nynetene
That did excell in bounte and fayrenes;
But for his labour and besinesse
Was imporrable his wittes to encombre,
In all this world to synd so grete a nombre.

He made the boke of Caunterbury Tales,
Whan the pylgryms rode on pylgrymage
Throughout Kent, by hylles and by dales,
And all the stories told in their passage,
Endited them full well in our langage;
Some of knighthode, some of gentilnesse,
And some of love, and some of perfitenes.

And some also of grete moralite
Some of disporte including grete sentence:
In prose he wrote the tale of Melibe
And of his wife, that called was Prudence;
And of Grifildes perfite patience;
And how the Monke of Stories new and olde
Pitous tragedies by the weye tolde.

This sayed Poete my maister in his dayes
Made and compiled ful many a fresh dite;

Complaintes, ballades, roundeles, virelaies,
Ful delectable to heren and to se;
For which men shulde of right and equite,
Sith he of English in making was the best;
Pray unto god to yeve his soule good rest.

The same Author, ibid. L. i. C. 6.

BUT if ye list have clere inspeccion
Of this story upon every side,
Reade the Legende of Cupide,
Which that Chaucer in order as they stode,
Compyled of women that were called gode.

Touchyng the Story of Kyng Pehdion
And of his godely fayre doughters twayne,
How Thereus false of condicion
Them to deceive did his besy payne:
They bothe named of beauty soverayne,
Godely Progne, and yonge Philomene;
Bothe Innocentis of intent full clene.

Their pitous fate in open to expresse,
It were to me but a presumption,
Syth that Chaucer did his besinesse
In his Legende as made is mencion,
Their martyrdome, and their passion
For to reherse them did his besy payne;
As chiefe Poete called of Brytayne.

Of good women a boke he did write,
The number uncomplete fully of nynetene;
And there the story plainely he did endite
Of Thereus, Progne and Philomene,
Where ye may se their legende; thus I mene,
Do them worshyp, and forth their life do shewe
For a clere myrror, because there be but fewe]

The same, On the Praise of the Virgin Mary, Printed by Wylllyam
Caxton, Cap. xxxiii. A commendation of Chauceres.

AND eke my master Chauceris now is grave,
The noble rethor poete of brytayne,
That worthy was the lawrer to have,
Of poetrye, and the palme attayne,
That made first to dystylle and rayne
The gold dewe dropys of speche and eloquence
Into our tunge through his excellence.

And fonde the flouris first of rethoryke
Our rude speche only to enlumyne,
That in our tunge was never none hym lyke;
For as the sonne doth in heven shyne
In mydday spere down to us by lyne,
In whos presence no sterre may appere;
Right so his ditees withouten ony pere

Every making with his light distayne,
In sothfastnes whoso takyth hede;
Wherfore no wonder though myn herte playne
Upon his deth, and for sorow biede,
For want of hym now in my grete nede,

TESTIMONIES concerning

That shold alas! conveye and directe,
And with his supporte amende and correcte

The wronge traces of my rude penne,
There as I erre and goo not lync right;
But for that he ne may me not kenne,
I can nomore but with al my myght,
With al myn herte and myn inward sight,
Prayeth for hym that now lyeth in cheste,
To God above to yeve his sowlc good reste.

And as I can forthe I wyl procede,
Sithen of his helpe ther may no socour be, &c.

~~~~~

*Occleve in the Prologue to his Book
De Regimine Principis;*

BUT welaweye so is myn herte wo
That the honour of English tong is dede,
Of which I wont was han, counsail and rede.

O mayster dere and fadir reverent,
My mayster Chaucer, floure of Eloquence,
Mirroure of fructuous entendement,
O universel fadir in science,
Alas that thou thyn excellent prudence
In thy bed mortel mightest nought bequethe!
What eyld deth? Alas! why would he sle the?

O deth, that didist nought harm singulere
In slaughtre of him, but all the lond it smertith:
But nathelless yit hastow no powere
His name to sle; his hie vertue assertith
Unslayn fro the, which ay us lifely hertith
With bokis of his ornat enditing,
That is to al this lond enlumyning.

~~~~~

The same Author, ibid.

MY dere mayster (God his soule quite)
And fadir Chaucer faine wold han me taught;
But I was a yong and lerned lyte or naught.

Alas my worthy maister honorable,
This londis verray tresour and richeffe,
Deth by thy deth hath harme irreparable
Unto us done; ^bhir vengeable dureffe
Dispoiled hath this lond of the swetenesse
Of Rethoryke; for unto Tullius
Was never man so like amonges us:

Also who was heyre in philosophy
To Aristotle, in our tonge, but thou?
The steppis of Virgil in Poesie
Thou suedest eke; men know well inow
That combre-world, that thee my mayster slow.
Wolde I slain were! Deth was too haste
To renne on thee, and reve thee thy life;

She might have carried her vengeaunce a while,
To that some man had egal to the be:
Nay let be that; she knew well that this Ille
May never man forth bryng like unto the;
And her of office nedis do more she;

God bad her so, I trust all for the best:
O mayster, mayster, God thy soule rest.

~~~~~

The same in the Title De consilio habendo in omnibus factis.

THE firste fynder of our fayre langage
Hath seyde in caas semblable and othir mo
So hyly well, that it is my dorage
For to expresse or touche any of tho.
Alas my fader fro the world is go!
My worthy mayster Chaucer, hym I mene;
Be thou advocate for hym, hevenes quene.

Astow wel knowist, O blessid virgyne,
With lovyng herre and hie devocioun
In thyn honour he wroot full many a lync;
O now thyn help and thy promocioun;
To god thy sone make a mocion,
How he thy servaunt was, mayden Marie,
And late his love floure and fructifie.

Although his life be queynt, the ressemblaunce
Of hym hath in me so fresh lifynesse,
That to put other men in remembraunce
Of his persone, I have heere his lykenesse
Do make, to this end in soothfastnesse,
That they, that have of hym lost thought and mynde,
By this peynture, may ageyn hym fynde.

~~~~~

Anonymous Verses taken by Mr. Speght
out of a Book of Mr. Stow's.

O Fathers and founders of enornat eloquence,
That enlumined have our grete Britaine,
To sone we have lost our lauriat science.
O lustie licour of that fulsome fountaine,
O cursed death, why hast thou those poets slaine?
I mene Gower, Chaucer, and ^c*Gaulfride*;
Alas the time that ever they fro us dide!

~~~~~

Gawin Douglas Bishop of Dunkeld, in the Preface to his Translation of Virgil's Æneis, Printed at Edinb.
1710. p. 9.

THoch venerabill Chaucere, principall poete but pere,
Hevinly trumpet, orlege and regulere,
In eloquence balme, condict and diall,
Myky fountane, clere strand, and rois riall,
Of fresche endite throw Albioun Iland braid,
In his legend of notabillis ladyis said,
That he couth follow word by word Virgill, &c.

<sup>a</sup> Al. dul.

<sup>b</sup> Al. his.

<sup>c</sup> Geoffrey Vinevalve. See the Gloss. in Gaulfride.

GEOF. CHAUCER.

Leland in his Encomia illustrium Virorum, Coll. Vol. V. p. 141.

In laudem Gallofridi Chaucer, Isiaci.

DUM juga montis aper, frondes dum lata volucris,
Squamiger & liquidas piscis amabit aquas,
Maonides Græca lingua clarissimus auctor
Aonio primus carmine semper erit;
Alcisonusque lyra, Phæbo applaudente, Latina
Gloria Virgilius maxima semper erit:
Nec minus & noster Galfridus summa Britannæ
Chaucerus musæ gratia semper erit.
Illos quis nescit felicia secula tulisse?
Hunc atas tantum protulit illa rudis.
Tempora vidisset quod si florentia Musis,
Æquasset celebres, vel superasset avos.

Idem ibid. p. 141.

PRadicat Aligerum merito Florentia Dantem,
Italia & numeros tota (Petrarcha) tuos:
Anglia Chaucerum veneratur nostra Poetam,
Cui veneres debet patria lingua suas.

Idem ibid. p. 152. This was written by Leland, at the request of Thomas Bertbelet, a diligent and learned Printer, who first printed Chaucer's Works, put out by Mr. Thynne<sup>d</sup>.

QUUM ° vivum teres Atticus leporem
Invenisset, & undecunque Græcam
Linguam perpoliisset, insolenter
Audebat reliquos, rudes vocare;
Cujus & judicium impiger Quirinus
Intenso studio sequens Latinum
Sermonem<sup>1</sup> quoque reddidit venustum,
Et cum Græco alios rudes vocavit.
At quanto mihi rectius videtur
Fecisse officium suum disertus
Chaucerus, brevitate primus apta
Linguam qui patriam redegit illam
In formam, ut venere & lepore multo,
Ut multo sale, gratiaque multa
Luceret, velut Hesperus minora
Inter sidera; nec tamen<sup>2</sup> superbus
Lingua barbariem exprobravit ulli
Genti: tam facilis fuit benignusque.
Ergo, vos juvenes, manu Britannii
Leta spargite nunc rosas<sup>3</sup> suave
Spirantes, violasque molliores;
Et vestro date candido poeta
Formosam ex hedera citi coronam.

Mr. William Thynne's Epistle Dedicatory to King Henry the Eighth before Chaucer's Works.

To the Kinges Highnesse, my most gracious soveraigne Lord, Henry the Eight, by the grace of God, King of England, and of France, Defensor of the Faith, and Lord of Ireland, &c.

AMonges all other excellencies, most gracious soveraigne lord, wherewith almighty God hath endowed mankind, above the residue of earthly creatures, as an outward declaration of reason or reasonableness, wherein consisteth the similitude of man unto angels, and the difference between the same and brute beasts, I verayly suppose, that speech or language is not to be reputed amonges the smallest or inferiours. For thereby is expressed the conceit of one to another, in open and plaine sentence, which in the residue of lively creatures lacketh and is not shewed amonges them, but by certaine covert and derke signes, and that in few thyngs, having course and operation onely of nature. This speech or language, after the confusion of tongues sent by God's punishment for pride and arrogancie of people, hath been by a certaine instinct and disposition naturall devised and invented in fundrie parts of the world, as fellowships or companyings of folks one with another chaunced, much to the outward expressing of the thing in word or sound, according to that whereof it had meaning or signification. But in proccesse of time, by diligence or policie of people, after divers formes, figures and impressions in metall, barks of trees and other matter used for memorie and knowledge of thyngs then present or passed, sundry letters or caracteres were first amonges the Phenices devised and found, with such knittings and joynings of one to another, by a marvellous subtiltie and craft, as countervailed was and is equivalent to the same languages. So as the conceit of man's mind, which at the beginning was used to be declared by mouth only, came to such point, that it was as sensibly and lively expressed in writing. Hereupon ensued a great occasion and courage unto them that should write, to compone and adorne the rudenesse and barbarietie of speech, and to forme it to an eloquent and ordinate perfection; whereunto many, and many great Poets and Oratours have highly employed their studies and courages, leaving thereby notable renoume of themselves, and example perpetuell to their posteritie.

Amonges other, the Greekes in all kinds of sciences seemed so to prevaile, and so to ornate their tongue, as yet by other of right noble languages cannat be perfetely imitated or followed. The Latines, by example of the Greekes, have gotten or wonne to them no small glorie in the forming, or-

<sup>d</sup> Leland in Chaucer's Life.

<sup>e</sup> Al. vestigia.

<sup>f</sup> Deest hic versus.

<sup>g</sup> Lel. in vita Chauceri. al. novum brevis.

<sup>h</sup> Al. Ter certo pede persequens.

<sup>i</sup> Al. bene.

<sup>j</sup> Al. Suave-Spirantes.

<sup>k</sup> Al. Barbaros reliquos vocare cepit.

<sup>l</sup> Superbe.

TESTIMONIES concerning

der and uttering of that tongue. Out of the which two, if it be well searched, that is to say, Greek and Latin (though by corruption of speech it should seem much otherwise) have been derived the residue of the languages, that be written with the letters or characters of either of them both. But of all speeches, those which most approach to the Latine be the Italian and Spanish tongues; of whome the one by the corruption of the Goths and Longobardes had her beginning, as Latine spoken by strangers of a barbare understanding: The other, being also Latine, was by Vandales, Goths, Moors, Saracens and other so many times blemished, as marveile it is to see now unto what perfection these two formed out of the Latine and Barbares speeches be reduced. Next unto them in similitude to the Latin is the French tongue, which by diligence of people of the same is in few years passed so amended, as well in pronunciation as in writing, that an Englishman, by a small time exercised in that tongue, hath not lacked ground to make a Grammere or rule ordinarie thereof. Though of trouth (which some shall scarcely believe) the Germanes have so formed the order of their language, that in the same is both as much plentie and as nere concordance to the phrase of the Latin, as the French tongue hath. And veraily like as all these and the rest have ben thus vigilant and studious to meliorate or amend their languages; so hath there nat lacked amonges us Englishmen, which have right well and notably endeavored and employed themselves to the beautifying and bettering of the English tongue.

Amonges whome most excellent Prince, my most redoubted and gracious soveraigne lord, I your most humble vassal, subject and servaunt William Thynne, cheef clerke of your kechyn, mooved by a certaine inclination and zeale, which I have to heare of any thing sounding to the laude and honour of this your noble realme, have taken great delectation, as the tymes and layfers might suffer, to rede and heare the boke of that noble and famous clerke Geoffray Chaucer, in whole workes is so manifest comprobation of his excellent learning in all kindes of doctrines and sciences, such fruitfulness in wordes, well accordynge to the matter and purpose, so swete and pleasaunt sentences, such perfection in metre, the composition so adapted, such freshness of invention, compendiousnesse in narration, suche sensible and open style, lacking neither majestie ne mediocritie covenable in disposition, and such sharpnesse or quicknesse in conclusyon, that it is much to be marvailed how in hys tyme (when doubtlesse all good letters were laide asleepe throughout the world, as the thinge whiche either by the disposition and influence of the bodies above, or by other ordinance of God, seemed like and was in daunger to have utterly perished) such an excellent poet in our tong shuld (as it were nature repugning) spring and arise. For though it had been in Demosthenes or Homerus times, when all learning and excellencie of sciences flourished amonges the Greeks, or in the season that Cicero prince of eloquence amonges Latines lived, yet had it ben a thinge right rare and straunge and worthie perpetuall laude, that any clerke by learninge or witte coude then have framed a tonge, before so rude and imperfect, to such a swete ornature and composition; likely, if he had lived in these dayes, beinge good letters so restored and revived as they be (if he were not empeched by the envie of such as may tolerate nothing, whyche to understande their capacite doth not extend) to have brought it unto a full and finall perfection.

Wherefore, gracious soveraigne lord, taking such delight and pleasure in the workes of this noble clerke (as is afore mentioned) I have of a long season much used to rede and visite the same, and as bookes of divers imprints came unto my hands, I easily and without great studie might and have comprehended in them many errours, falsities and depravations, which evidently appeared by the contrarieties and alterations found by collation of the one with the other, whereby I was moved and stirred to make diligent serch where I might find or recover any true copies or exemplaries of the said bookes; whereunto in proesse of time, nat without cost and pain, I attained, and nat onely unto such as seeme to be very true copies of those workes of Geffrey Chaucer, which before had beene put in print, but also to divers others never till nowe imprinted, but remaining almost unknown and in oblivion: Whereupon lamenting with my selfe the negligence of the people that have been in this realme, who doubtlesse were very remisse in the setting forth or avauncement either of the histories thereof, to the great hinderance of the renoume of such noble princes and valiant conquerours and captaines as have been in the same, or also of the workes of memory of the famous and excellent clerks in all kinds of sciences, that have flourished therein (of which both sorts it hath pleased God as highly to nobilitate this Isle, as any other region of Christendome) I thought it in matere appertenant unto my dutie, and that of very honestie and love to my country I ought no lesse to doe, than to put my helping hand to the restauration and bringing againe to light of the said workes, after the true copies and exemplaries afore said. And devising with my self who of al other were most worthy, to whom a thing so excellent and notable should be dedicat, which to my conceit semeth for the admiration, noveltie and straungenesse, that it might be reputed to be of in the time of the author (in comparison as a pure and fine tried precious or polished jewel out of a rude or indigest masse or matere) none could to my thinking occur that, since or in the time of Chaucer, was or is sufficient, but only your Majesty Roiall, which by discretion and judgement, as most absolute in wisdome and all kinds of doctrine, could and of his innate clemencie and goodnesse would adde or give any authoritie hereunto.

For this cause, most excellent, and in al vertues most prestante Prince, I as humbly prostrate before your Kingly estate, lowly supplie and beseech the same, that it woll vouchsafe to take in good part my poore studie and desirous minde, in reducing unto light this so precious and necessarie an ornament of the tongue of this your realme, overpitous to have been in any point lost, falsified or neglected: So that, under the shield of your most royal protection and defence, it may goe forth in publick, and prevaile over those that would blemish, deface, and in many things clearly abolish the laud, renoume, and glorie heretofore compared and meritoriously acquired by divers princes, and other of this said most noble Isle, whereunto nat onely straungers under pretext of high learning and knowledge, of their malicious and perverse mindes, but also some of your owne subjects, blinded in follie and ignoraunce, doe with great studie contend.

Most gracious, victorious, and of God most elect and worthie prince, my most dread soveraigne lord, in whom of very merite, dutie, and succession is renewed the glorious title of Defensor of the Chrysten faith, which by your noble progenitour, the great Constantine, sometime king of this Realme and Emperour of Rome, was next God and his

G E O F. C H A U C E R.

his Apostles cheefly maintained, corroborate and defended. Almighty Jesu send to your Highnesse the continuall and everlasting habundaunce of his infinite grace. Amen.

Thus endeth the Preface.

The Publisher of John Lidgate's History and Chronicle of the Trojan War, Printed MDLV. in the Pistle to the Reader.

AS the verye perfect disciple [speaking of Lidgate] and imitator of the great Chaucer, the onely glorye and beauty of the fame. Nevertheles, lykewyse as it hapned the same Chaucer to lease the prayse of that tyme wherein he wrote, beyng then when indeede al good letters were almost aslepe, so farre was the grosenesse and barbarousnesse of that age from the understandinge of so devyne a wryter. That if it had not bene in this our time, wherein all kindes of learnyng (thancked be god) have as much floryshed as ever they did by anye former dayes within this realme, and namely by the dyligence of one Wylliam Thynne a gentelman, who laudably studyouse to the polysing of so great a Jewell, with right good judgment, travail, and great paynes causing the same to be perfected, and stamped as it is now read, the sayde Chaucer's works had utterly perished, or at the lest bin so depraved by corruption of copies, that at the laste there shoulde no parte of hys meaning have ben founde in any of them.

Roger Ascham in his Schole-Master, Printed 1571. Fol. 60, b.

SOME that make Chaucer in English and Petrarch in Italian their Gods in verses, and yet be not able to make trew difference, what is a fault and what is a just prayse in those two worthie wittes, will much mislike this my writyng [against Riming.] But such men be even like followers of Chaucer and Petrarke, as one here in England did folow Syr Tho. More, who, being most unlike unto him in wit and learnyng, nevertheles in wearing his gowne awrye upon the one shoulde, as Syr Tho. More was wont to do, would needs be counted like unto him.

The same Author in his Toxophilus, Printed 1571. Fol. 13, b.

WHose horriblenes [speaking of Gaming] is so large that it passed the eloquence of our Englishe Homer [Chaucer] to compass it: — I ever thoughte his saynges to have as much authoritye as eyther Sophocles or Euripides in Greke.

The same Author in his Book of the State of Germany. Written about 1552. Fol. 1.

Diligence also must be used [by an Historian] in keeping truly the order of tyme, and describyng lyvely both the site of places and nature of persons not only for the outward shape of the body, but also for the inwarde disposition of the minde, as Thucydides doth in many places very trimly, and Homer every where, and that always most excellently, which observation is chiefly to be marked in hym: And our Chaucer doth the same very praise worthely; mark hym well and conferre hym with any other that writeth in our tyme in their proudest tounge, whosoever lyst.

Sir Philip Sidney, in his Defence of Poesie, Printed 1598. p. 492.

IN the Italian language, the first that made it to aspire to be a Treasure-house of Science were the Poets Dante, Boccace and Petrarch. So in our English wer Gower and Chaucer; after whom encouraged and delighted with their excellent foregoing, others have followed to beautifie our mother Tongue, as well in the same kind as other Artes.

Ibid. p. 513.

Chaucer undoubtedly did excellently well in his Troilus and Creseid; of whom truly I know not whether to marvell more, either that he in that mystie time could see so clearly, or that we in this clear age go so stumblinglie after him. Yet has he great wants, fit to be forgiven in so reverent an Antiquitie.

The Arte of English Poesie, Printed 1589. p. 48. supposed to be written by one Puttenham, a Gentleman Pensioner to Q. Eliz. See Wood's Athenæ Oxon. Vol. I. col. 184. in Sidney.

I Will not reach above the time of King Edward the Third, and Richard the Second, for any that wrote in English meeter; because before their times, by reason of the late Normane Conquest, which had brought into this Realme much alteration both of our langage and lawes, and therewithall a certain martiall barbarousnes, whereby the study of all good learning was so much decayed, as long time after no man or very few entended to write in any laudable science: so as beyond that time

TESTIMONIES concerning

time there is little or nothing worth commendation to be founde written in this arte. And those of the first age were Chaucer and Gower, both of them as I suppose Knights. After whom followed John Lidgate the Monke of Bury, and that nameles, who wrote the Satyre called Piers Plowman.

the Church of Rome, in every point and degree? And therefore no great marvel, if that Narration was exempted out of the Copies of Chaucer's Works; which notwithstanding now is restored again, and is extant for every man to read that is disposed.

Ibid. p. 187.

SIR Geffrey Chaucer, father of our English Poets.

~~~~~

Mr. Fox in his Acts and Mon. Lond. 1684. Vol. II. p. 42.

I Marvel to consider this, how that the Bishops condemning and abolishing all manner of English Books and Treatises which might bring the people to any light of knowledge, did yet authorise the Works of Chaucer to remain still, and to be occupied; who (no doubt) saw in Religion as much almost as ever we do now, and uttereth in his Works no less, and seemeth to be a right Wicklevian, or else there was never any, and that all his Works almost, if they be thoroughly advised, will testifie (albeit it be done in mirth and covertly) and especially the later end of his third Book of the Testament of Love: for there purely he toucheth the highest matter, that is, the Communion; wherein, except a man be altogether blind; he may espie him at the full. Although in the same Book (as in all other he useth to do) under shadows covertly, as under a Vizour, he suborneth Truth in such sort, as both privily she may profit the godly-minded, and yet not be espied of the crafty Adversary. And therefore the Bishops, belike, taking his Works but for Jests and Toys, in condemning other Books, yet permitted his Books to be read.

So it pleased God then to blind the Eyes of them, for the more commodity of his people, to the intent that through the reading of his Treatises, some fruit might redound thereof to his Church, as no doubt it did to many. As also I am partly informed, of certain which knew the Parties, which to them reported, that by reading of Chaucer's Works, they were brought to the true knowledge of Religion: And not unlike to be true; for to omit the other parts of his Volume, whereof some are more fabulous than other, what Tale can be more plainly told than the Tale of the Ploughman? Or what finger can point out more directly the Pope with his Prelates to be Antichrist, than doth the poor Pellican reasoning against the greedy Griffon? Under which Hypotyposis, or Poetrie, who is so blind that seeth not by the Pellican, the Doctrine of Christ and of the Lollards to be defended against the Church of Rome? Or who is so impudent that can deny that to be true which the Pellican there affirmeth, in describing the presumptuous Pride of that pretended Church? Again, what Egg can be more like, or Fig, unto another, than the words, properties and conditions of that ravenous Gryphon resembleth the true Image, that is the Nature and Qualities of that which we call

~~~~~
Stephanus Surigonus Poet Laureat of Milan, wrote the following Epitaph upon Chaucer at the desire of William Caxton, which anciently was hung up upon a Pillar over against the place where he was buried. See Leland in the Life of Chaucer, and Stow's Survey. Edit. 1720. B. 6. P. 31.

*P*erides Musa, si possunt numina stetus
Fundere, divinus atque rigare genas,
Galfredi Chaucer vatis crudelia fata
Plangite; sit lacrymis abstinuiffe nefas.
Vos coluit vivens, at vos celebrate sepulchrum:
Reddatur merito gratia digna viro.
Grande decus nobis est docti musa Maronis,
Qua didicit melius lingua Latina loqui:
Grande novumque decus Chaucer famamque paravit,
Heu quantum fuerat prisca Britannia rudis!
Reddidit insignem maternis versibus, ut jam
Aurea splendescat, ferrea sacra prius.
Hunc latuisse virum nil, si tot opuscula vertes,
Dixeris, egregiis quae decorata modis.
Socratis ingenium, vel fontes philosophiae,
Quicquid & arcani dogmata sacra ferunt;
Et quascunque velis tenuit doctissimus artes
Hic vates, parvo conditus in tumulo.
Ab! laudis quantum praclava Britannia perdis,
Dum rapuit tantum mors odiosa virum.
Crudeles Parcae, crudelia fila sororum;
Non tamen extincto corpore fama perit:
Vivet in aeternum, vivent dum scripta poeta,
Vivant aeterno tot monumenta die,
Si qua bonos tangit pietas, si carimine dignus,
Carmina qui cecinit tot cumulata modis;
Hac sibi marmoreo scribantur verba sepulchro,
Hac maneat laudis sarcina summa sua:
GALFRIDUS CHAUCER, vates, & fama poesis
Maternae, hac sacra sum tumulatus humo.
Post obitum Caxton voluit te vivere cura
Guilhelmi, CHAUCER, clare poeta, tui:
Nam tua non solum compressit opuscula formis,
Has quoque sed laudes jussit hic esse tuas.

~~~~~
Camden in his Britannia; in Dobunis.

*O*ppidum ipsum [Woodstock] cum nil habeat quod ostentet, Homerum nostrum Anglicum Galfredum CHAUCERUM alumnus suum fuisse gloriatur. De quo & nostris Poetis Anglicis illud vere asseram quod de Homero & Gracis eruditus ille Italus dixit;

— Hic ille est, cujus de gurgite sacro
Combibit arcanos vatum omnis turba furores.

Ille enim extra omnem ingenii aleam positus, & poetastros nostros longo post se intervallo relinquens,
— jam

G E O F. C H A U C E R.

—jam mente potitus
Rider anhelantem dura ad fastigia turbam.

Idem in Trinobantibus.

Quique minime tacendus Poetarum Anglorum princeps
Galfredus CHAUCER.

Edmund Spenser in his Fairy Queen,
L. 4. Canto 2. St. 31, &c.

Courageous Cambel, and stout Triamond
With Canace and Cambine link'd in lovely bond.

XXXI.

Whilom as antique Stories tellen us,
Those two were foci the fellonest on ground,
And battle made, the draddest dangerous,
That ever shrilling trumpet did refound:
Though now their Aēs be no where to be found,
As that renowned Poet them compil'd,
With warlike numbers, and heroick sound,
Dan Chaucer (well of English undefil'd)
On Fame's eternal Bead-roll worthy to be fil'd.

XXXII.

But wicked Time, that all good thoughts doth (waste,
And works of noblest Wits to nought out-wear,
That famous Monument hath quite defac'd,
And robb'd the world of treasure endless dear,
The which might have enriched all us here.
O cursed Eld! the Canker-worm of Wits;
How may these Rhymes (so rude as doth appear)
Hope to endure, sith works of heavenly Wits
Are quite devour'd, and brought to nought by little (bits.

XXXIII.

Then pardon, O most sacred happy Spirit,
That I thy labours lost may thus revive,
And steal from thee the meed of thy due merit,
That none durst ever while thou wast alive,
And being dead, in vain yet many strive;
Ne dare I like, but through infusion sweet
Of thine own spirit (which doth in me survive)
I follow here the footing of thy feet,
That with thy meaning so I may the rather meet.

Ibid. L. 7. Canto 7. St. 9.

SO hard it is for any living wight
All her array and vestiments to tell,
That old Dan Geffrey (in whose gentle spright
The pure well-head of Poetry did dwell)
In his Fowles Parley durst not with it mell;
But it transfer'd to Alane, who he thought
Had in his Plaint of Kinds describ'd it well;
Which who will read set forth so as it ought,
Go seek he out that Alane, where he may be sought.

~~~~~

The same Author in the Shepherd's
Calendar, in February.

Thenot. BUT shall I tell thee a Tale of Truth,
Which I con'd of **Tityrus* in my youth,
Keeping his Sheep on the hills of Kent?

Cuddy. To nought more, Thenot, my mind is bent,
Than to hear Novels of his devise:
They been so well thewed, and so wise,
Whatever that good old Man bespake.

Thenot. Many meet Tales of Youth did he make,
And some of Love, and some of Chivalry;
But none fitter than this to apply:
Now listen a while, and hearken the end.
There grew an aged Tree on the Green, &c †.

~~~~~

Ibid. in June.

THE God of Shepherds Tityrus* is dead,
Who taught me homely as I can to make:
He whilst he lived was the sovereign head
Of Shepherds all, that bene with love ytake;
Well couth he waile his woes, and lightly slake
The flames, which love within his heart had bredde,
And tell us mery tales to keep us wake,
The while our sheepe about us safely fedde.

~~~~~

Ibid. in December.

THat Colin hight, which well could pipe and sing,
For he of **Tityrus* his Songs did lere.

~~~~~

The same in the Poem called, Colin
Clout's come home agen.

The Shepherd's Boy (best known by that name)
That after Tityrus* first sung his Lay,
Lays of sweet Love, without rebuke or blame.

~~~~~

Verflegan's Restitution of decayed Intelligence. Chap. vii.

SOME few ages after came the Poet Geffery Chaucer, who writing his Poesies in English, is of some called the first Illuminator of the English tongue:
Of their opinion I am not, though I reverence
Chaucer, as an excellent Poet for his time. He was indeed a great mingler of English with French, unto which language (by like for that he was descended of French, or rather Wallon race) he carried a great affection.

* Chaucer is meant by Tityrus; and by Colin the Poet means himself.

† In this Eclogue Spenser seems to imitate Chaucer's style and numbers, which are often unequal.

TESTIMONIES concerning

Mr. Francis Beaumont's Letter to Mr. Speght, pressing him to print his Observations upon Chaucer, dated the last of June 1597. From the Edition of Chaucer 1602.

Touching the incivilitie Chaucer is charged withall; what Romane Poet hath less offended this way than he? Virgil in his Priapus is worse by a thousand degrees, and Ovid in de Arte Amandi, and Horace in manie places as deep as the rest: but Catullus and Tibullus in uncleane wantonesse beyond measure passe them all. Neither is Plautus nor Terence free in this behalfe: But these two last are excused above the rest, by their due observation of Decorum, in giving to their comicall persons such manner of speeches as did best fit their dispositions. And may not the same be said for Chaucer? How much had he swarved from Decorum, if he had made his Miller, his Cook, and his Carpenter, tell such honest and good tales, as he made his Knight, his Squire, his Lawyer, and his Scholler? But shewing the disposition of the baser sort of men, he declareth in their Prologues and Tales, that their chief delight was in undecent speeches of their owne, and in their false defamations of others. — No man can imagine in his so large compasse, purposing to describe all Englishmen's humours living in those daies, how it had been possible for him to have left untouched their filthy delights; or in discovering their desires, how to have exprest them without some of their words.

And now to compare him with other Poets: His Canterbury Tales containe in them almost the same Argument, that is handled in Comedies: his Stile therein for the most part is lowe and open, like unto theirs; but herein they differ: The Comedie writers doe all follow and borrowe one from another; as Terence from Plautus and Menander; Plautus from Menander and Demophilus; Stattius and Cacilius from Diphilus, Apollodorus and Philemon; and almost all the last Comedians from that which was called antiqua Comædia. Chaucer's devise of his Canterbury Pilgrimage is meere his owne: His drift is to touch all sorts of men, and to discover all vices of that Age, and that he doth so feelingly, and with so true an ayme, as he never failes to hit whatsoever marke he levels at.

Sir Henry Savil in the Preface to his Edition of Bradwardine De Causâ Dei. Lond. 1617.

DE Galfrido Chaucero illorum fere temporum aquali, poetarum nostrorum principe, acris judicii, non lepidi tantum ingenii, viro, qui de Thoma hoc nostrate non tacuit, nobis nefas sit hic tacere. Is, cum esset philosophicis Theologicisque haud mediocriter imbutus, ac hæc Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi lucubrationes jam tum recens emissas, ut videtur, pervolvisset, pro more suo jocis seria intertexens, in fabella quadam Cantuariensi arduam de Dei præscientia, rerumque contingentia questionem obiter attingit; ac Augustino Bradwardini annumerat, ex iis unum scilicet, qui in difficili hac controversia exagitanda farinam usque ad furtutes (sic enim familiariter eleganterque ille noster) excusserunt, hoc est, veritatem in profundo demersam elicuerunt. Ipsum, si placet (placet autem antiqua Anglicana etiam styli simplicitas) focco suo indutum in medium deducamus.

dinum annumerat, ex iis unum scilicet, qui in difficili hac controversia exagitanda farinam usque ad furtutes (sic enim familiariter eleganterque ille noster) excusserunt, hoc est, veritatem in profundo demersam elicuerunt. Ipsum, si placet (placet autem antiqua Anglicana etiam styli simplicitas) focco suo indutum in medium deducamus.

But what that god afore wote, must needs bee,
After the opinion of certain clerkis.
Witnesse of him that any clerk is,
That in schoole is great altercation
In this matter, and great disputation,
And hath been of an hundred thousand men,
But I ne cannot boult it to the bren,
As can the holy doctour S. Austin,
Or Boece, or the Bishop Bradwardin,
Whether that God's worthy foreweting
Straineth me needly to do a thing,
(Needly clepe I simple necessite)
Or if the free choice be granted me
To do the same thing, or do it nought,
Tho God forewot it or it was wrought.
Or if his weting straineth never a dele,
But by necessite conditionele,
I woll not have to done of such matere.

Which he thus renders into Latin;

Non evenire non potest quicquid Deus
Præcivit; ita fert crebra Doctorem cohors.
Hic literatum quemlibet testem voco
Quantis utrinque fluctibus lis hæc Scholas
Trivit, teritque, pene inextricabili
Ingenia nodo centies mille implicans.
Excutere nudos hæc ad usque furfures,
(Quod ab Augustino præstitum, & Boethio;
Ac BRADWARDINO Episcopo) non sum potis.
Utrumne me divina præscientia
Ad aliquid unum, ut exequar, necessitet;
(Necessitatem hic absolutam intelligo)
An mihi stet hujus sive agendi seu minus
Electionis salva libertas, licet
Præcierit ipsum hoc, antequam fieret, Deus.
An præscientis obliget necessitas
Illa una, quam supposita conditio struit,
In tam profundum baud ego insiliam mare.

Mr. Selden in his Preface to Drayton's Polyolbion. See the Glossary in Dulcarnon.

Sir John Denham on Mr. Abraham Cowley; in his Works printed 1709. p. 84.

OLD Chaucer, like the Morning Star,
To us discovers Day from far,
His Light those Mists and Clouds dissolv'd,
Which our dark Nation long involv'd;
But he descending to the Shades,
Darkness again the Age invades.
Next (like Aurora) Spencer rose,
Whose purple Blush the Day foreshews.

Milton

GEOF. CHAUCER.

~~~~~

Milton in his Poem entitled Il Penseroso.

BUT, O sad Virgin, that thy power
Might raise Musæus from his bower,
Or bid the Soul of Orpheus sing—
Or call up him that left half told
The Story of Cambuscan bold,
Of Camball, and of Algarisse,
And who had Canace to wife,
That own the vertuous Ring and Glas,
And of the wond'rous Horse of Brass,
On which the Tartar King did ride—

~~~~~

Dr. Sprat (late Bishop of Rochester) in his History of the Royal Society,
Printed 1668. p. 41, 42.

THE Truth is, it [the English Language] has been hitherto too carelessly handled; and I think has had less labour spent about it's polishing, than it deserves. Till the time of King Henry the Eighth, there was scarce any man regarded it, but Chaucer; and nothing was written in it, which one would be willing to read twice, but some of his Poetry. But then it began to raise it self a little,
and to sound tolerably well.

~~~~~

Dr. Skinner in the Preface to his Etymologicon Linguae Anglicanae. p. 5.

Chaucerus poeta, pessimo exemplo, integris vocum plausibus ex eadem Gallia in nostram Linguam invectis, eam, nimis antea à Normannorum victoria a-duleratam, omni fere nativa gratia & nitore spoliavit, pro genuinis coloribus fucum illinens, pro vera facie lar-vam induens.

~~~~~

Sir Richard Baker in the History of England, Printed 1684. p. 134.

SIR Geoffrey Chaucer the Homer of our Nation;
found as sweet a Muse in the Groves of Woodstock, as the Ancients did upon the banks of Heli-con. And p. 167. The next place is justly due to Geoffrey Chaucer, and John Gower, two famous Poets in this time [of Hen. IV.] and the Fathers of English Poets in all the times after.

~~~~~

Peacham's Compleat Gentleman Printed 1661. Chap. x. Of Poetry. p. 94.

OF English Poets of our own Nation, esteem Sir Geoffrey Chaucer the Father; altho' the Style for the antiquity may distaste you, yet as under a bitter and rough rinde, there lieth a delicate kernell of conceit and sweet invention. What Examples, Similitudes, Times, Places, and above all, Persons with their speeches and attributes do (as in his Canterbury Tales, like the threads of Gold, the rich Arras) beautify his work quite through? And albeit divers of his works are but meerly translations out of Latin and French; yet he hath handled them so artificially, that thereby he hath made them his own. In brief, account him among the best of your English Books in your Library.

~~~~~

Will. Winstanley in his England's Worthies, Printed 1684. p. 117. [Taken out of Mr. Beaumont's Letter to Mr. Speght.]

OF whom [Chaucer] for the sweetness of his Poetry, may be said that which is reported of Stesichorus; and as Cethegus was tearmed
Suade Medulla, so may Chaucer be rightly called the pith and sinews of Eloquence, and the very life it self of all mirth and pleasant writing: Besides, one gift he had above all other Authors, and that is, by the excellencies of his descriptions
to possess his Readers with a stronger imagination of seeing that done before their eyes, which they read, than any other that ever writ in any Tongue.

~~~~~

Edw. Phillips in the Preface to his
Theatrum Poetarum. p. 13, 14.

TRUE it is that the Style of Poetry till Henry the Eighth's time, and partly also within his Reign, may very well appear uncouth, strange and unpleasant to those that are affected only with what is familiar, and accusom'd to them; not but there were even before those times some that had their Poetical excellencies if well examin'd, and chiefly among the rest Chaucer, who through all the neglect of former-aged Poets, still keeps a name, being by some few admired for his real worth, to others not unpleasing for his facetious way, &c.

~~~~~

The same Author in the Second Part of that Book. p. 50, 51.

SIR Geoffrey Chaucer, the Prince and Corypheus
(generally so reputed till this Age) of our English Poets, and as much as we triumph over his old fashion'd phrase, and obsolete words, one of the first refiners of the English Language, &c.

~~~~~

Sir Tho. Pope Blount in his Characters and Censures of the most considerable Poets. 1694. p. 41.

THIS is agreed upon by all hands that he [Chaucer]
was counted the chief of the English Poets, not only of his time, but continued to be so esteemed till this Age, &c.

TESTIMONIES concerning

Mr. Rymer's Short View of Tragedy.

1693. p. 78.

They who attempted Verse in English, down till Chaucer's time, made an heavy pudder, and are always miserably put to't for a word to clink; which commonly fall so awkward, and unexpectedly as dropping from the Clouds by some Machine or Miracle. Chaucer found an Herculean labour on his hands; and did perform to admiration. He seizes all Provencal, French or Latin that came in his way, gives them a new garb and livery, and mingles them amongst our English: turns out English gowty, or superannuated, to place in their room the foreigners, fit for service, train'd and accustomed to Poetical Discipline.

And a little further;

Chaucer threw in Latin, French, Provencal, and other Languages, like new Stum to raise a Fermentation: In Queen Elizabeth's time it grew fine, but came not to an Head and Spirit, did not shine and sparkle till Mr. Waller set it a running,

Mr. Dryden in the Preface to his Fables.

As he [Chaucer] is the Father of English Poetry, so I hold him in the same degree of Veneration as the Grecians held Homer, or the Romans, Virgil: He is a perpetual Fountain of good Sense; learn'd in all Sciences; and therefore speaks properly on all Subjects. As he knew what to say, so he knows also when to leave off.

Chaucer followed Nature every where, but was never so bold to go beyond her. — The Verse of Chaucer, I confess, is not harmonious to us; but 'tis like the Eloquence of one whom Tacitus commends, it was, auribus istius, remparis accommodata: They who liv'd with him, and some time after him, thought it musical; and it continues so even in our Judgment, if compared with the Numbers of Lidgate and Gower his Contemporaries: There is the rude sweetness of a Scotch Tune in it, which is natural and pleasing, though not perfect. 'Tis true, I cannot go so far as he who published the last Edition of him; for he would make us believe the Fault is in our Ears, and that there were really Ten Syllables in a Verse, where we find but Nine: But this opinion is not worth confuting; 'tis so gross and obvious an error, that common Sense must convince the Reader that Equality of Numbers in every Verse which we call Heroick, was either not known, or not always practised in Chaucer's Age. It were an easy matter to produce some thousands of his Verses, which are lame for want of half a Foot, and sometimes a whole one, and which no Pronunciation can make otherwise. We can only say that he lived in the Infancy of our Poetry, and that nothing is brought to Perfection at the first.

And further;

He [Chaucer] must have been a man of a most wonderful comprehensive Nature, because, as it has been truly observed of him, he has taken into the Compass of his Canterbury Tales the various Manners and Humours (as we now call them) of the English Nation in his Age. Not a single Character has escap'd him. All his Pilgrims are severally distinguish'd from each other; and not only in their Inclinations, but in their very Physiognomies and Persons. Baptista Porta could not have described their Natures better, than by the Marks which the Poet gives them. The matter and manner of their Tales, and of their Telling, are so suited to their different Educations, Humours, and Callings, that each of them would be improper in any other Mouth. Even the grave and serious Characters are distinguished by their several sorts of Gravity: Their Discourses are such as belong to their Age, their Calling, and their Breeding; such as are becoming of them, and of them only. Some of his Persons are Vicious, and some Vertuous; some are unlearned, or (as Chaucer calls them) Lewd, and some are Learn'd. Even the Ribaldry of the Low Characters is different: The Reeve, the Miller, and the Cook, are several Men, and distinguish'd from each other, as much as the mincing Lady Priores, and the broad-speaking, gap-tooth'd Wife of Baith.

a. I mean more particularly William Broms Esq^r of Swythington in Hertfordshire, a most intimate friend of Mr. Urry while alive, and left Executor at his Death.
T. T.

b. Dr. Smalridge, B^p of Bristol, and Dean of Christ.
Church. T. T.

c. chiefly B^p Atterbury, then Dean of Christ Church, who did by no means judge rightly of Mr. Urry's talents in this case, who though in many respects a most worthy person, was not qualified for a work of this nature. T. T.

T H E P R E F A C E.

(By Timothy Thomas, then Student of Christ Church, Oxon.)

THE Reader will meet with no more interruption here, than will be necessary to acquaint him in some measure with Mr. Urry's Design in this Edition, and the Methods he took for the accomplishment of it. This might have been better performed by others; of themselves inclined to this sort of Study, who upon that account, as well as their particular intimacy with Mr. Urry, were thought to have been made acquainted with his whole Scheme, and to have been consulted by him upon every part of it. It were to be wished that such Persons could have been prevailed upon to give the World an Account of this Work, and at the same time to do Justice to the Merit and Memory of their Friend, who was taken away in the midst of it.

As for my self, I was equally a stranger to Mr. Urry and his Undertaking, till some time after his Death; when a Person, whose Commands I was in all Duty bound to obey, put the Works of Chaucer into my hands, with his Instructions to assist in carrying on this Edition, and to prepare Matter for a Glossary to it. Mr. Thomas Ainsworth of Christ Church had been employed by Mr. Urry in transcribing part of the Work for the Press, and was therefore thought qualified to proceed in preparing the rest for my perusal. This Gentleman likewise dyed in August 1719. soon after the whole Text of Chaucer was printed off. Had he lived, he could have given a fuller account of this Work than is to be expected here, which I am perswaded he would not have declined; but as he always had the greatest veneration for the Memory of Mr. Urry, would have readily embraced such an opportunity of expressing it. What I have to say on this Subject is chiefly owing to his Information; but as I did not expect to have this Task enjoined me, I took no Notes of what I heard from him from time to time relating to this matter: I shall therefore acquaint the Reader with every thing just as it occurs to my memory upon a Recollection; adding such particulars as I find noted in those Papers of Mr. Urry which have come to my hands. who imagined themselves

About the latter end of the Year 1711. some Persons, well acquainted with Mr. Urry's Qualifications (who, he thought, had a right to command him) proposed to him to put out a new Edition of Chaucer; which he was perswaded to undertake, though much against his inclination: "For, though (as he says) his skill in the Northern Language spoken in the Low-lands of Scotland qualified him to read this Poet with more ease and pleasure than one altogether bred be-South Trent could do without more than common Application, yet he assures us, he had not the least thought of publishing his private Diversions.

Having thus undertaken the Work, he proposed to proceed in this Method, viz. to correct the Text of Chaucer, and add what he could find of his Works in MSS. which had not been printed; to make some Observations upon the Author, and among other things to shew where he had imitated or borrowed from the Greek or Latin Poets; to add a more copious Glossary than had been printed before; to write a fuller Account of his Life than had been yet published; and to acquaint the Reader in a Preface what he should have performed in this Edition.

Having not lived to finish the Work, it was not to be expected that he should leave Materials for a Preface: Nor was there any thing found for that purpose amongst his Papers, but a very short Sketch couched in very general words, not at all entering into the main Subject which was proposed to be explained in it; and an Account of such MSS. of Chaucer's Works as he had seen and perused, which shall be taken notice of hereafter. He left some Extracts out of Records, which were intended for Chaucer's Life; but as they were very few, and those for the most part relating to Thomas Chaucer, who is supposed to be his Son, it was judged necessary to employ a Gentleman who had made some Collections that way, to draw up the account of our Author's Life, which is prefixed to this Edition. But I could never find that Mr. Urry had made any progress in the Notes or Observations which he intended, nor have I seen any Comparisons with, or References to the ancient Poets; except a Reference to Ausonius against the Eight godely Questions with their answers; which makes it probable that he never proceeded further in that matter. Nor had he done any more towards a Glossary, than collecting a few words, which was done in such a manner that it could be of very little service to any body but himself.

The PREFACE.

His chief business was to make the Text more correct and compleat than before. He found it was the opinion of some learned Men that Chaucer's Verses originally consisted of an equal number of Feet; and he himself was persuaded that Chaucer made them exact Measure, and therefore he proposed in this Edition to restore him (to use his own Expression) to his feet again, which he thought might be performed by a careful Collation of the best printed Editions and good MSS.

He had observed that several Initial and Final Syllables in use in Chaucer's time, and since, had been omitted or added at pleasure in the MSS. by unskilful Transcribers, from whence the same Errors crept into the Printed Editions, whereby many Verses were rendered unjust in their Measure; so that the lameness of many of them might easily be remedied by the discreet Addition or Omission of such Syllables.

The Initial Syllables were chiefly a, i, and y, which were to be prefixed to Verbs (for the most part in the Preter Tenses) and Participles: as Ago for Gone, Ilast for Last or Left, Yrunn for Run, &c. And a was sometimes to be put before Adverbs, as Abak for Back; and i, or y; were often to be put before Nouns; as Iliche, or Tliche, for Like: And sometimes they were to be omitted as the measure of the Verse required.

The Final Syllables were for the most part such as might be said rather to be added in the Pronunciation, than by Writing: The chiefest of which, and the most frequently made use of to help out a Verse otherwise deficient, was the Final e, which he always marked with an accent when he judged it necessary to pronounce it; as sweetè, halvè, smallè, Prol. 5, 8, 9. for sweet, halve or half, small; of which there are many Instances in every page. Whether the assistance of this Final e be not here too frequently, and sometimes unnecessarily, called in, is not my business at present to enquire into: But it seems beyond contradiction that it was anciently pronounced; and I have seen a Note of Mr. Urry's, wherein he affirms that in some parts of England it is still used, and instances in the words pipè, buttonè, don't finè, &c. wherein the Final e is pronounced in Dorsetshire at this day.

The next thing to be taken notice of as used for lengthening of words, is the distinct pronouncing of the Termination ed or id in the Preter Tenses of Verbs, and in Participles; as Percid, Bathid, Harnisid, for Pierc'd, Bath'd, Harness'd: Not that Mr. Urry thought this Termination was always to be pronounced as a distinct Syllable, but only as the measure of the Verse required; and therefore he contrived this Distinction to run through the whole Text, that it should be written ed, when it is not to be taken as a distinct Syllable, and id when it was to be pronounced as such. The same thing, under the proper restrictions, is to be observed of est and ist, eth and ith, the Terminations of the second and third Persons Singular in the Indicative Mood, and the latter also very often a Termination of the Imperative Mood from the AS. as, Holdith, Drawith, for Hold, Draw.

Another help he saw might be gained by making a discreet use of en, or in, a Termination of Verbs, Nouns and Adverbs; but most frequently of Verbs; as Servin, Wendin, Wouldin, Iverin, &c. for Serve, Wende, Would, Were, &c. Selfin for Self, and Selvin in the Plural Number for Selves, Withoutin for Without, Aboutin for About, Abovin for Above.

And again the pronouncing of es or is, the Plural Termination of Substantives, and sometimes of Adverbs, and also of is the Termination of the Genitive Case Singular has contributed no small assistance towards the supply of a Foot to many Verses, which must otherwise have halted; as Croppis, Bootis, instead of Crops, Boots; Oftimis, Sometimis, Thryis, for Oftimes, Sometimes, Thrice; Shir'is end, Godd'is name, Mann'is wit, for Shire's end, God's name, Man's wit. And here likewise it must be observed, that these Terminations are not always to be pronounced, but only where the Metre is deficient without it; and whenever the Plural Termination is to be quiescent it is printed es; as Londes, Strondes, Sleves, in one Syllable, not Londis, Strondis, Slevis, as they are in other places, where they are to be pronounced as distinct Syllables. The same thing must be understood of the Genitive Case Singular, and the Adverbs. And here it may be proper to acquaint the Reader that the Genitive Case Singular is throughout the whole Book distinguished from the other Terminations in is by an Apostrophe thus ['is] which perhaps might proceed from an opinion that is in such cases is a Contraction of his (as some write it) and not a proper English Termination of the Genitive Case derived to us from the Saxon. The same Mistake has induced some Learned men to write write her instead of the Termination 's, after a Feminine Noun, as The Wife her Prologue, or Tale, &c. instead of The Wife's Prologue, or Tale, &c.

The PREFACE.

There are also some Syllables in the middle of words, which though not sounded at this time, were thought anciently to have been left in Poetry to the discretion of the Reader to pronounce, or not, as it should be most agreeable to the Measure of the Verse; as Semely, Daiësey, Juggement, Commaundement, &c. for Seemly, Daisy, Judgment, Commandment, &c.

Mr. Urry had observed particularly, that the word which was sometimes written whiche, and very frequently followed by that, and that without the one or the other, or sometimes both, the Verse was lame, but that with one or both it would have it's just number of Feet; and therefore he added them accordingly as he found it requisite. And in short I find it acknowledged by him, "That whenever he could by no other way help a Verse to a Foot, which he was perswaded it had when it came from the Maker's hands, but lost by the Ignorance of Transcribers, or Negligence of Printers, he made no scruple to supply it with some Word or Syllable that serv'd for an Expletive": But I find at the same time that he had once a design of enclosing such words in hooks thus [] to distinguish them from what he found justified by the authority of MSS. but how it came to pass that so just, useful and necessary a Design was not executed, I cannot satisfy the curious Reader.

Besides all those Methods for lengthening out Verses, which was the thing generally wanted, he had occasion sometimes to shorten them; and for that purpose he frequently makes use of an Apostrophe where he would have a Syllable dropt in the pronouncing of a word, as, Sove'rane prize, Carry'a morsel, Prol. 67, 130. for, Soverane prize, Carry a morsel. And oftentimes he contracts two words after the modern fashion, by throwing out a Letter or two; as That's, He's, Th'art, Prol. 180, 182, 856. for, That is, He is, Thou art: But besides this method of reducing to it's proper measure a Verse which had a redundancy of Syllables, it must be remembred that he reserved to himself a discretionary power of retaining or omitting the Initial, Middle or Final Syllables before mentioned for the lengthening or shortning of a Verse.

But that the use of all these helps for compleating the measure of Verses might be made with more Judgment and Authority, and for the correcting and improving a great number of places, where the Text had been corrupted in the common Editions, and so made unintelligible, and sometimes downright Nonsense; and that such Pieces as were judged to be Chaucer's, which had not been before printed, might be recovered and appear in this Edition; and in short to make the Book in all respects more correct and compleat, it was thought necessary to collect not only all the printed Editions of value, but also all the MSS. that could be procured. I find no account of the printed Copies which Mr. Urry had perused; but he has left a Catalogue of the MSS. made use of in this Edition, which is very particular, both with respect to the Contents and Condition of them, and also the names of the Persons from whom they were borrowed, or by whose means they were procured: An Abstract of which is thought proper to be here inserted, not only to inform the Reader of the Advantages of this Edition above the former ones, but also to inform any person that may hereafter undertake a new Edition of this Author, where to make his Enquiries in order to a further Improvement of him.

I. In the first place he mentions Two MSS. belonging to the Right Honourable the Earl of Oxford. One of them is a large Folio, written on Velom in a fair hand, marked 93. B. 2. and in the Glossary, H. 1. containing the Canterbury Tales, but it is imperfect in several places. It has the Tale of Gamelyn (which wants the beginning) as spoken by the Coke; and the Coke's Tale is the running Title of it. The MS. begins thus; Here beginneth the book of the tales of Caunterburie compiled by Geffraie Chauciers of Brytayne chef poete. It hath the Retraction after the Parson's Tale; and at the end of it this Note; Here endeth the book of the tales of Caunterburie. Compyled by Geffraie Chaucers. Of whos soule Jhu Crist have mercye. Amen quod Cornhylh, which seems to be the Transcriber's Name. This Book has some particularities in the Orthography; as sch for sh (so sch for she) w sometimes for u or v; y very frequently for i. The first Letters of such Tales as are perfect at the beginning, are beautifully illuminated in this MS. and it is probable that the Pictures of the Pilgrims were intended to be inserted before their Tales, there being a void space left capable of containing them: But none of them were finished, unless we may suppose that of the Knight to be done, which might be the occasion of cutting out the first Leaf of that Tale.

II. The other Harleyan MS. is likewise written on Velom in a long Folio, marked 67. C. 3. and contains, besides the Poem of Troilus and Creseide, part of the Knight's Tale, and the Tales of the Man of Law, the Wife of Bath, the Clerk of Oxenford, and the Frankelein, which last differs in the beginning from the Printed Editions. In the first Letters of Troilus and Creseide (which begins the Book) are the Arms of Speke and Shepey impaled, and at the end of the Tales, which are written in another hand is this Note, which seems to be added by the Writer of the latter part of it; Vestre magnifice & generosissime dominatio- k nis

The PREFACE.

nis humilimus serviens & orat. heremita de Grenewych, mundo qui totaliter segregatus ac mentibus suorum fortune amicorum & hominum peroblitus.

III. In the next place he describes two MSS. which he had borrowed of the worthy and learned Dr. Sloan, now Sir Hans Sloan; one of them written on Velom, the other on Paper. The former is imperfect at the beginning, and ends with the Tale of the Nonne's Priest; it hath the Legend of Gamelyn, but imperfect, as it is in other places.

IV. Sir Hans Sloan's Paper MS. besides other imperfections, wants all the Parson's Tale, but the Legend of Gamelyn is there told by the Coke.

V. He then acknowledges the favour of the Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon, now Duke of Chandos, in allowing him the perusal of a very fair MS. on Velom, well preserved, containing all the Tales, and ending with the Retraction. It may be proper here once for all to advertise the Reader, that the Plowman's Tale is not in any of the MSS. which Mr. Urry describes, nor in any other that I have seen or been informed of.

VI. He borrowed from the Honourable Colonel Hen. Worsely a Paper MS. imperfect at the beginning and end, containing all the Tales, but in a different order.

VII. He saw two MSS. in the Royal Library, one on Velom, N^o. 1541. Lumley. which contains all the Tales with the Retraction. The Story of Gamelyn is thus introduced (as it is in several other MSS.) after that of the unbriсты Prentice;

*But hereof woll I passe as now,
And of yong Gamelyn I wol tell you.*

The Shipman's Tale, by the Transcriber's mistake is in this MS. entitled the Marchand's Tale; the Marchaunt's being before written in it's proper place.

VIII. The other MS. in the Royal Library is on Paper, and contains the Tales as in the other, but is much torn in the Manciple's and Parson's Tales. Before Gamelyn it has this Rubrick; Here endeth the Tale of the Cook, and here followeth another Tale of the same Cook. a long Legend of yong Gamelyn.

IX. He borrowed, by the means of the Reverend Mr. Harbin and Mr. Tarborough, of Mr. Edmond Canbey of Thorn in Yorkshire, another fair MS. well preserved: This Book wants the Coke's Tale and Gamelyn, and also the Squire's and the Marchaunt's Tales, and is imperfect in the end.

X. He borrowed of Mr. Norton of Suthwic in Hampshire, by the favour of John Chicheley Esq; a MS. which he guesses to have been written in the time of Rich. II. the Writing being very like that in the Patent of that King to Chaucer for a Pycher of Wine daily: But it is most miserably mangled, a great many leaves being cut out, in every part of it; so that there is scarce one Tale or Prologue entire; and particularly the Parson's Tale has neither beginning nor end. The Legend of Gamelyn is introduced in this Book by the same Verses which have been before set down out of the Velom Book in the Royal Library.

XI. The Reverend and Learned Dr. Jenkins Master of St. John's College in Cambridge, and Margaret Professor in that University, procured from the Publick Library there, a very fine MS. for his perusal; in which are many leaves wanting, which are supplied by a Modern hand (as he thinks) out of the printed Books. It hath before the Tales Chaucer's A. B. C. Littera de Scogan, Balad de bon conseil, A Poem beginning,

*In them when any hert is light,
And flouris freshly spred and spring;*

De amico ad amicum responsio, V Bookis of Troilus and Creseide. Then follow the Tales in their order: But Mr. Urry does not take notice of the Tale of Gamelyn, nor the Retraction in this Book. After the Tales are the following Poems; The Legend of Good Women, Legenda Cleopatre Regine, The Legend of Pyramis and Thisbe, The Legend of Dido Q. of Carthage, The Legend of Hipsiphile and Medea, The Legend of Lucrece of Rome, The Legend of Philomene, The Legend of Phyllis, The Legend of Hypermetre, The Parlement of Foulis in die Sancti Valentini tent. The Temple of Glas (but this is Dan Lidgate's Supplicatio Amantis) La Compleyn. There are in this Book Figures of some of the Pilgrims on horseback illuminated, which Mr. Urry had not seen in any other MS. of this Author, and he doubts not, but this Book originally had them all. Before it is the Picture of Chaucer drawn by Sir Thomas Occleve on a leaf of his Book De Regimine Principis; and Mr. Urry had been informed of another upon the Margin of one of the same Books; and there is a third in the Cotton Library at the end of OTHO. A. XVIII. From which Mr. Urry very justly infers that Occleve, to preserve his Master Chaucer's memory, caused his Picture to be limn'd in every Book that was presented by him to his friends; of the number of which, seems to be that beautiful Copy of it in the Royal Society's Library [N^o 38.] which, besides a Picture of Occleve presenting a Book to Henry V. had doubtless Chaucer's Picture on a Leaf, where that honourable mention is made of him, which has been cut out, perhaps to adorn adorn some MS. of Chaucer, such as that here described in the Publick Library at Cambridge, or that in the Cotton Library, which last contains no more of Chaucer than those Poems beginning, Flie fro the prese, &c. and Sometyme the worlde so stedfast was and stable (which is there entituled Balade Ryalle made by Poeticall Chaucer) Chaucer's Song to his empty purse, and the first Stanza of Troilus's Song, in the first Book of that Poem.

The PREFACE.

XII. Mr. Urry gives an account of a MS. of the late Bishop of Ely which he had collated, containing all the Tales with Gamelyn, and the Retraction thus introduced at the end of the Parson's Tale, Here takith the maker of this book his leave; and after it this Rubrick, Here endith the Canterbury tales compiled by Geoffrey Chaucer, of whose soule Jhu Crist have mercy. Amen.

XIII. The Honourable Mrs. Thynne, Widow of the Honourable Henry Thynne Esq; Son to the late Lord Viscount Weymouth, was pleased to lend him a MS. purchased by her, which had belonged to Mr. Long a Prebendary of the Church of Exeter. It is a fair Book, but is imperfect at the beginning and end, and wants the Coke's Tale, and that of Gamelyn: But this Defect is sufficiently compensated by the addition of two new Pieces, not extant in any of the other MSS. which are there inserted between the Tale of the Chanon's Yeman and Chaucer's Tale of Melibencus, viz. The Adventure of the Pardoner and the Tapster at the Inn in Canterbury, and the Merchant's Tale in the Pilgrim's Return from thence, of which more hereafter.

XIV. The last MS. mentioned by Mr. Urry is a fair and perfect one, borrowed from Sir Nicholas L'Estrange. This he says was the best preserved of any he had seen, and not deficient in any leaves that he had observed. He supposes it had been Sir Henry Spelman's, by the Characters of S^r H. S. on the outside of the Cover, the Book having been newly bound in 1623. He gives no further account of it, but that it contains the following Tales, which being not set down as in his Description of the other MSS. it should seem he did not live to go through it.

With these helps Mr. Urry had made several Corrections throughout the greatest part of Chaucer's Works, and had prepared a fair Copy for the Press, written partly in his own hand and partly by Mr. Ainsworth, to the end of the Frankelcin's Tale. He also printed Proposals for Subscriptions some time before his Death, which happened in March 1714.

In the Proposals it was published that Three new Tales of this Author, never yet printed, were recovered, and would be added to this Edition: By which were certainly meant The Coke's Tale of Gamelyn, The Merchant's Second Tale, or The History of Beryn, and The Adventure of the Pardoner and Tapster at the Inn at Canterbury. Though the latter is not properly a Tale, but an Account of the Behaviour of the Pilgrims, and particularly of the Pardoner, at their Journey's end, and a kind of Prologue to a set of Tales to be told in their Return; it was not judged proper to make any Alteration in that part of the Title Page, lest it should be thought that any thing is omitted in this Edition, which was intended by Mr. Urry.

As to the Tale of Gamelyn, Mr. Urry's Sentiments concerning it may be seen in the Note before it. Mr. Selden was of opinion that what is called the Tale of the unthrifty Prentice, was only a kind of Prelude, and not the Tale it self which the Coke intended to tell; and that those two Verses which immediately precede it, viz.

*And therewithall he lough and made [^bglad] there, are misplaced, and should have come after it, as an Introduction to the Tale of Gamelyn; and he says they were so placed in a very fair MS. which he had, and in some others.
And seid his Tale, as you shall after here,*

It were to be wished that this Tale had been more carefully collated with the several MSS. wherein it is found. It may be made much more perfect and correct from the two MSS. which I have had an opportunity of collating, viz. the Harleyan MS. H. 1. and Mr. Cholmondeley's MS. which shall be described in it's proper place. I shall not take notice here of the minute Variations; some of them which affect the sense being noted in the Glossary as occasion offered: I shall only make a few Remarks out of them in this place.

The Reader will observe a Lacuna after Verse 477. which may be made up out of those MSS. thus;

*Thanne seyde yong Gamelyn
Unto the Champioun:
Thou art faste aboute
For to brynge me adoun.*

And Y. 530, 531. are thus read in MS. Ch.

^a De Synedriis Ebraeorum. Amst. 1679. L. II. C. 2. §. 3. p. 36c.

^b So it is in MS. Ch.

The PREFACE.

*There weren two gentellmen,
God yeve hem gode grace,
That comen to Gamelyn,
Were keperis of the place.*

Y. 540, 541.

*Thanne seyde the Champioun,
So browke I my swere.*

After Y. 555. MS. Ch. proceed thus ;

*And seyde have Gamelyn, thee ring and the ram
For thee beste wrastelere, that evere here cam.
And thus wan, &c.*

which may be made very good Metre, with very little Alteration.

Instcad of hesle Y. 647. should be read cheste, i.e. Quarrel, debate, &c. See Gower's Conf. Amantis. L. 2. fol. 49. b. Edit. 1554.

Y. 706. may be read,

Of fiftene plowis land the prowre. See Y. 713.

Instcad of bonde Y. 865. H. 1. hath bound; but MS. Ch. hath it handefast. In Y. 972. both MSS. want be, which is only an Explanation of worthe. After rout, Y. 1192. should follow,

*Adam seyde Gamelyn,
What ben now thy redis?
Here comith the Shiregereve,
And wolde have our bedis.
Adam seyde to Gamelyn
My rede is now this, &c.*

Instcad of say, Y. 1226. the MSS. have see; and Y. 1413. Both husbande and wif; and Y. 1629. And with the Justice speke. And Y. 1692 and the following Verses may out of them be thus read ;

*Gamelyn sette hym adoun
In the Justic's fete,
And Adam and Ote his brother
Settyn at his fete.
Whanne Gamelyn was sette
In the Justic's stede;
Will ye herin of a bourde,
That Gamelyn [tho] dede?
He lete^a fetre the Justice, &c.*

These are some of the most material Amendments that may be made out of these MSS. I doubt not but many more as considerable may be made by an exact Collation of all the MSS. wherein this Tale is to be found.

There is very little to be added to what has been said before concerning the other Two Pieces added in this Edition. As they are printed from the single MS. of Mrs. Thynne, the Reader is to expect no more than an exact Transcript from it, which Mr. Ainsworth assured me he had made. It may (perhaps with some shew of reason) be suspected that Chaucer was not the Author of them, but a later Writer, who may have taken the hint from what is suggested in Y. 796. of the Prologues, that the Pilgrims were to tell Tales in their Return homewards; but as to that the Reader must be left to his own Judgment. But supposing they

^a H. 1. hath these Verses thus ;

^d So it is in MS. Ch.

And Sir Ote his brother by hym, and Adam at his fete.

The PREFACE.

were not writ by our Author, we are however obliged to Mr. Urry's diligence for finding out and publishing Two ancient Poems, not unworthy our perusal: And they have as good a right to appear at the end of this Edition, as Lidgate's Story of Thebes had to be printed in former ones.

When the greatest part of the Tales were printed off, there came to my hands another MS. of the Canterbury Tales, which Mr. Urry had not seen. It belongs to Charles Cholmondley Esq; of Vale-Royal in Cheshire, whose Name should be mentioned with particular respect for his readiness in communicating this MS. without any previous application, as soon as he understood where a new Edition of Chaucer's Works was preparing. It is imperfect at the beginning and in most of the Tales; but those of the Frere and Sompnour are entirely lost. This MS. hath the Retraction at the end of the Parson's Tale. Though this was the first Copy of it which I had seen, yet I had an opportunity of collating it with other Copies before it went to the Press; and therefore the Reader may expect to find it more compleat and correct than any single MS. represents it. The valuableness of it will appear by the use which has been made of it in the Glossary. It was indeed designed that some of the different Readings of it should have been set down at the bottom of the Page in those Tales, which were not printed off when I received it; but my direction being misunderstood at the Press, some of them were inserted in the Text: But this is more particularly taken notice of in the Glossary, where other material differences are also observed as occasion offers. This MS. is quoted by the Abbreviation [MS. Ch.]

The Reader will observe MS. Sp. often quoted in the Glossary, by which is meant a MS. in Octavo partly written on Velum and partly on Paper, containing the Five Books of Troilus and Cresseide. This I found amongst Books and Papers left by Mr. Urry; but I could not perceive that he had made any use of it. It came not to my hands till a long time after that Poem was printed off: But where upon collating I found any material variations in the Reading, I have inserted them in the Glossary. When I made this use of it, I did not know to whom it belonged, and therefore quoted it in the manner mentioned above; because it seemed to have once belonged to that Learned Antiquary Sir Henry Spelman, his name [Henrici Spelman] being written in fair hand on the first leaf of it, and at the beginning of other Tracts contained in that Volume. But I have been since informed that it belonged to the late Lord Viscount Weymouth, from whom it is probable Mr. Urry borrowed it not long before his Death; which might be the reason that no notice is taken of it in that Catalogue he left of the MSS. which he had seen and perused.

There is another MS. of this Poem in the Lord Harley's Library, which has been occasionally consulted when any difficulty occurred in revising the Glossary, and is there meant by H. 3.

It may be of use in this place to give the Reader notice of another MS. in the Harleian Library [34. B. 18.] which, though it contains but Two small Pieces of our Author's, viz. How pyte is dede, &c. p. 421. and that beginning, The longe nyghtis, &c. p. 558. it may be worth an Editor's while to collate for the many Improvements and Corrections that may be made from it, especially in the former Poem; one of which is observed under Herennus in the Glossary, wherein this Book is designed by H. 4.

And it may be equally useful to a future Editor to be advertised, that Chaucer's Tale of Melibeus and his Wife Prudence may receive considerable Improvements from a Fragment of it at the end of a Paper MS. [Nº. 140.] in the Arundelian Collection belonging to the Royal Society; which is the only MS. there that contains any of our Author's Works. This is mentioned here to prevent any future Loss of time in searching amongst those MSS. for the Continuation of the Squier's Tale, which some have pretended to have been compleat in Arundel-House Library: Nor is it likely the curious Enquirer should be more successful in his Researches elsewhere for the Remainder of that Tale, which no doubt was left imperfect by the Author, as it is mentioned in some MSS. and in that MS. of Mr. Selden in the Bodleian Library [Archiv. B. 30. 3360.] after the two Verses which we have of the third part of that Tale, these Eight Verses follow;

But I here now wol maken a knotte,
To the tyme it come next to my lotte;
For here ben felawes behynde an hepe truly,
That wolden talke full besily,
And have here sport as well as I;
And the day passith certaynly:
Therefore, Oste, taketh now good hede
Who shall nexte telle, and late him spede.

The PREFACE.

And certainly Spenser was of opinion that Chaucer never finished it, when he undertook to carry on that Story, so far at least as it made for his purpose, in his Fairy Queen^f; which gave occasion to others to fancy he wrote a Continuation of it. That indeed was attempted by one John Lane in Q. Elizabeth's time: How well he succeeded in his performance is left to the Judgment of such as have leisure to peruse it in the Ashmolean Museum, N^o. 6937.

I had also an opportunity by the favour of an ingenious Friend, of collating a MS. of Jack Upland, on Vellum in a very small Volume, which was of use to explain some, and correct other Passages in it; but the Text is generally so different there from that which is exhibited in this, as well as former Editions of Chaucer, that it may deserve to be printed entire as it is in that MS. which is now in the possession of that indefatigable Collector, Thomas Rawlinson Esq.

I had likewise the assistance of my friends in collating most of the old, and all the valuable Editions; some of which the Reader will find often mention'd in the Glossary, especially those of Caxton and Pynson, which are designed by Ca. 1. 2. and Py. 1. 2. And here it may not be unacceptable to give a short account of such Editions of Chaucer as have come to my hands, or have been collated for me by my friends, not omitting in their proper places such as I find mentioned by others, and particularly by the late industrious Mr. John Bagford in his Collections towards the History of Printing, in the Lord Harley's Library.

Mr. William Thynne in his Dedication of Chaucer's Works to King Henry VIII. says that divers Imprints of them came to his hands, in which he apprehended many errors, falsities, and depravations: But when his Edition came out, which was much more complete as well as more correct than the former ones, they were totally neglected, and therefore it is very rare to meet with any Copies of them but what are imperfect, especially at the beginning and end; so that the Reader is not to expect here an exact account of the Dates of the first Impressions.

We are told by Mr. Stow in his Survey of London, that the Works of Chaucer were first printed by William Caxton in a thin Folio in 1466. but this is a mistake, for (as Mr. Bagford well observes) Caxton did not print so early. But I have seen Two Editions of the Canterbury Tales published by that Printer, both in a small Folio, in single Columns: The first in a fair large Character, without Cuts, Running Title, or distinction of Stanza's: But the Copy^g which I perused being imperfect both at the beginning and end, the Date of it no where appears. The other hath rude wooden Cuts of most of the Pilgrims, and of the Supper at the Tabbard Inn, and is printed in a smaller Letter, which is the same with that used in Caxton's Edition of Troilus and Creseide^h, at the end of which he put his name thus; Explicit per Caxton. But the Copyⁱ which I saw of this Edition being likewise imperfect, there appears no Date. But that this was not the first Edition of Chaucer; cannot be doubted; many omissions in the former being supplied in this, and several Corrections made where that was very erroneous.

William Caxton, or rather Wynkin de Werde (as Mr. Bagford thought) printed in 4^o. amongst other things, several small pieces of Chaucer's, as The Counsel to [f. of] Chaucer, His Envoy to Scogan, Little John called the Book of Courtesy, Annelida and false Arcyte, The Complaynt of Chaucer to his empty purse, &c. This seems to have been intended as a Supplement to his Editions of the Tales, and is supposed by Mr. Bagford to have been printed in 149... &c.

Mr. Stow^k also mentions the English Translation of Boethius set forth by Caxton with Surigonus's Verses.

Richard Pynson was the next that printed Chaucer's Works, of which he published Two Editions. The first is in a small Folio, containing only the Canterbury Tales, printed in a large and fair Letter, in one Column, except the Tale of Melibeus and that of the Parson, which are printed in a smaller Character and in two Columns. This seems to have been printed from Caxton's Second Edition; and he acknowledges in the Prohemye to this Edition that it was printed by a Copy of his Master William Caxton^l. But the Copy of it which I per-

^f See the Passage in the Testimonies.

^g In Lord Harley's Library. ^h Ibid.

ⁱ Amongst Mr. Aston's Books in the Royal Society's Library. B. II. 19. ^k Survey of London.

^l The Prohemye is as follows;

Grete thankes, laude and honoure ought to be yewyn unto the clerkes, poets and historiagraphs that have writen many noble boke of wisdom, of the lyves, passions and miracles of holy seyntes, of histories of noble and famous actes and faittes, and of the cronicles sithen the begynnyng of the creacioun of the worlde unto this present tyme; by whiche we ben daily enfourmed and have knowlege of manye thynges, of whom we shuld nat have knowen yf they had nat left to us theire monuments writen. Emong whom and in especial tofore alle other we ought to gyve a singaler laude unto that noble and gret philosopher Geoffrey Chaucer, the whiche for his ornate writing in our tonge may wel have the name of a laureate poete. For tofore that he by his laboure enbelisshid, ornated and made faire our englishe, in this Realme was hadde rude speche and incongrue, as yet it apperithe by olde boke; whiche at this daie ought nat to have place ne be compared emong his beauteous volumes and ornate writings: Of whom he made manye a noble historye as wele in metre as ryme and prose, and theym so craftely made, that he comprehended his maters in short, quicke and high sentences, eschewing prolixite, and casting away the chaf and superfluite, and shewing the pyked grayne of sentence, uttered by crafty and sugred eloquence. Of whom I, among alle other of his boke, the boke of the tales of Canterburie (in whiche ben manye a noble historie of wisdom, policie, mirth and gentilnes, and also of vertue and holynes) which boke di-

a. the ^{pt} Kstraction was printed once more, as appears from the 4.th paragraph of this page.

The P R E F A C E.

used^m wanting the Title Page, I cannot determine the year wherein it was published, but Mr. Bagford says it was in 1520, or 1522. This is adorned with wooden Cuts of most of the Pilgrims and of the Supper, differing from those in Caxton's Second Edition, but not much improved.

Pynson's Second Edition came out in 1526. and is printed in two Columns, and contains, besides the Canterbury Tales, and the Retraction at the end of the Parson's Tale (which was the first, and I believe the only time it was printed before the present Edition of it) the Poems following;

The Boke of Troylus and Cresseyde, *The Boke of Fame*ⁿ, The Assemble of Foules, otherwise called saynt Valentine's day, La bele Dame sauns mercy translate out of Freuche into Englyshe by Geffray Chaucer, flour of poetes, &c. Bonum consilium Galfredi Chaucer, contra fortunam; Flye fro the preace, &c. Morall proverbes of Christine, beginning, The great vertues of our elders notable, and ending, Wo may be be that to God endeth mys, The Complaynt of Mary Magdaleyn, The Letter of Dido to Encas, Proverbes of Lydgate: What other pieces it may contain I know not, the Copy which I had the use of^o being imperfect at the end.

The Cuts in this are generally the same in the Tales with those in the former Edition of Pynson, and some of them are a little improved. There are also Cuts before most of the other Poems contained in this Edition, which have some relation to the subject matter of them. It has this Note after the Retraction; Thus endeth the boke of Caunterbury tales. Imprinted at London in fletestrete, by me Rycharde Pynson, printer unto the kynges noble grace: and fynished the yere of our lord god a. M. CCCCC. and xvi. the fourth day of June. This Edition was printed from a Copy of one of Caxton's, which he had corrected for the Press; and the Prohemye to this Edition differs in that part from that to his first Edition^r.

The next to these in Antiquity is a large Folio in two Columns. This has for the most part the same Cuts which were used in Caxton's second Edition, but worn and much damaged, and therefore most of the Borders of them are cut off; the Cuts of the Knight and Parson are new. Besides the Tales and other Works of Chaucer mentioned in the foregoing Article, it contains the Retraction, (which is in none of the subsequent Editions that I know of) The Romaunt of the Rose, The Complaynt and Testament of Crescide, The Legend of good Women, The Translacion of Boethius de Consolatione Philosophiæ, The Dreame of Chaucer, The flour of Curtesy, How pite is ded, &c. Of quene Annelida and false Arcite, The Assemble of ladies, The Conclusions of the Astrolabe, The Complaynt of the Black knyght, A Prayse of Women, and The Testament of Love, which is imperfect in the Copy^q I perused, both the beginning and end of the Book being lost; so that I cannot determine whether this be the first Edition put out by William Thynne, printed (as Leland says) by Berthelet, to which Brian Tucca added an elaborate and elegant Preface^r; or the second, increased by Mr. Stow; and printed by Thomas Godfray in 1532. Cum privilegio à Rege indulto^s.

In 1542. William Bonham dwellynge at the sygne of the Kinges Armes in Paul's Church-yarde put out The Workes of Geffray Chaucer, wyth dyvers workes whych were never in print before, Cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum. This has Mr. Thynne's Preface to King Henry VIII. and is the first printed Book that I have seen with the Plowman's Tale, which ligently oversen and duely examined by the polittike reason and oversight of my worshipful master William Caxton, accordinge to the entent and effecte of the seid Geffrey Chaucer, and by a copy of the seid master Caxton, purpos to imprint, by ye grace, ayde and supporte of almighty god; whom I humbly beseeche, that he of his grete and habundant grace wil so dispose that I may it fynishe to his plesure, laude and glorie: And that alle we that shalle therein se or rede may so take and understande the gode and vertuous tales, that it may so profite to the helth of our soules, and in especial of the soule of the seid Geffrey Chaucer, first autour and maker of this forseid boke, that after this short and transitorye lyfe we may comme to the everlastyng lyf in hevynne. Amen.

By Richard Pynson.

^m It belongs to the Royal Society. C. III. 24.

ⁿ At the end of the Boke of Fame there is this Note;

There is no more of this foresaid worke, for as it may be ule understande, this noble man Geffray Chaucer, fynished it at the said conclusyon of the metyng of leysyng and sothsaue: where (as yet) they ben checked and may nat departe. Whiche worke as me semeth, is craftely made, and digne to be written and known: for he toucheth in it right great wysedome and subrell understandyng, and so in all his workes he excelleth in myn opinyon all other writers in Englyshe, for he writeth no voyde wordes, but all his mater is full of hys and quicke sentence, to whom ought to be gyven laude and praise, for his noble makynz and writyng: And I humbly beseeche and pray you among your prayers, to remembre his soule, on whiche, and on all christen soules, I beseeche Iesu have mercy. Amen.

^o In the Harl. Library. 31. A. 5.

^p The principal difference is in the latter part, which is as follows;

I purpose to emprinte by the grace of Iesu, the boke of the tales of Canterbury, in whiche I fynde many a noble historie, of every estate and degre. Fyrst reberfing the condicions and the aray of eche of them, as properly as possible is to be said, and after their tales, which ben of noblesse, wysdome, gentlesse, myrthe, and also of very holynesse and vertue, wherein he fynysbeth this sayde boke; whiche boke is diligently and truly corrected, by a copy of William Caxton's imprintyng, accordyng to the true makinge of the sayd Geffray Chaucer, as hereafter shall followe all along by the helpe of almighty god: so whom I humbly beseeche, that I maye it so archyve and accomplyshe, that it be to his laude, honour and glory; and that all ye that shall in this boke rede or here, wyll of your charite amonge your dedes of mercy, remembre the soule of the sayd Geffrey Chaucer fyrste autour and maker of this boke; and also, all we that shall se and rede therein, maye so take and understande the good and vertuous tales, that it may so profite unto the helth of our soules, that after this shorte and transitorye lyfe, we may come to everlastyng joye in heven. Amen.

^q In Lord Harley's Library.

^r In visâ Chauceri.

^s Mr. Bagford in his Collections.

in

The PREFACE.

in this follows that of the Parson, whereas in other Editions it immediately precedes that Tale. The Cuts in this are the same with those in the Edition last mentioned, except one which represents the Knight and the Squier attending him.

In this Edition the following Poems are added;

The Remedy of Love, The Complaynt of Mars and Venus, The Letter of Cupyde; A balade in commendation of our Lady, John Gower unto the worthy and noble kynge Henry the fourth, Of the Cuckow and the Nightyngale, A Poem beginning, O leude boke with thy foule rudenesse, &c. Scogan unto the lordes, &c. The Poem beginning, Sometime the worlde so stedfast was, &c. Balade of the vyllage wythout payntyng, Chaucer unto his empty purse, Chaucer unto the kynge, The Poem beginning, Consyder wel every circumstance, &c. and Chaucer's Epitaph by Surigonus.

Mr. Bagford mentions another Edition in 1542. by John Reyne at the signe of the St. George in Paul's Churchyard; and says that about this time Chaucer's Works were printed by Thomas Petit living in Paul's Churchyard without Date, with Mr. Thynne's Preface to Henry VIII. at the beginning, and Surigonus's Verses at the end, without Cuts.

In 1555. The Works of Geffray Chaucer newly printed, with divers works which never were printed before, were printed by Richard Kele in Lombard street, Cum privilegio. This Edition has only a Cut of the Knight. The great Initials are finely cut in Wood, and the A hath I. R. in it.

There is another Edition printed by Robert Toye dwelling in Poule's Churchyard at the sign of the Bell, very like this, having I. R. in the A, as the former; but it has no Date. It has the Plowman's Tale before the Parson's; and the Contents are the same with those of Bonham's Edition 1542. and seems to be the same with that of 1561. at the end of which is printed the Story of Thebes by Lidgate, after which is this Note; Imprinted at London by Jhon Kyngstone for Jhon Wight dwelling in Poules Churchyard. Anno 1561. which was the Edition which Mr. Stow says was increased by his labour. It is thought he received great helps in this Work from the Collections of John Shirley Esq; who was a great Traveller in divers Countries, and among other labours, had painfully collected the Works of Geffrey Chaucer, and John Lidgate and other learned Writers, in sundry Volumes, which Mr. Stow owns he saw, and partly possessed. This Gentleman dyed the twenty first of October 1456. and was buried in the Parish Church of St. Bartholomew the Less, London. Mr. Bagford says, Chaucer's Works were printed by John Kingstone, and George Bishop in 1561. and the year following by Adam Islip.

Mr. Stow tells us, that they were the Third time put forth with Notes by him collected out of divers Records and Monuments, which he delivered to his loving and learned friend Mr. Thomas Speght, who having drawn them into a good form and method, printed them in 1597. Mr. Stow's additions begin at Fol. CCCXL. and are as follows;

A Balad of gentilnesse, A Proverb against Covetise and Negligence, Against unconstant women, In the praise (or rather dispraise) of women for their doubleness, The Craft of Lovers, A Poem beginning, Of their nature they greatly them delite, The X Commaundments of Love, The IX Ladies worthie, The Poems beginning, Alone walkyng, &c. In the season of Feverere, &c. O mercifull and o merciabie. How Mercury with Pallas, Venus, and Minerva appered to Paris of Troie, &c. I have a Ladie, &c. O mossie Quince, &c. Loke well aboute, &c. A Poem beginning, The long nyghtes when every creature, and that beginning, In womanhede as auflours all write, The Court of Love. There were also added in this Edition Chaucer's Dreame, beginning, When Flora the Queene, &c. and The Floure and the Leaf.

This was printed by Adam Islip, at the charges of Thomas Wight, and was begun in 1597, but not published till the year following. It was dedicated by Mr. Speght to Sir Robert Cecil afterwards Earl of Salisbury; after which follows Mr. Beaumont's Letter to Mr. Speght (pressing him to hasten this Edition with his Notes) and the Life of Chaucer drawn up by Mr. Speght from Mr. Stow's Collections, together with a Print of Chaucer from his Picture in Occleve's Book: And at the end is added an Explanation of old and obscure Words, a Translation of the French in Chaucer, a Declaration of the Authors cited by him, together with some Corrections and Annotations; and after the Story of Thebes there is a Catalogue of Lidgate's Works. This was reprinted in the same year by Richard Kele, and (as Mr. Bagford says) by George Bishop towards the end of the year.

There is a Copy of the Edition 1597. with MS. Notes of Junius in the Bodleyan Library amongst his MSS. [N^o. 5121. 9.] but neither did those Notes nor his other Papers there of that nature (which I likewise consulted) afford that assistance which might be expected from so

^c Mr. Bagford in his Collections.

^a In his Survey of London and Westminster. Last Edit. B. 6. p. 15, 18.

^w Ibid.

^x Ibid. B. 4. p. 232, 233.

The PREFACE.

great a Name; most of them being very imperfect, or drawn up rather for his own use than for the information of others.

In 1602. Mr. Speght put out another Edition with some Improvements; in which was first printed the Treatise intituled Jack Upland. He also inserted the Notes of the former Edition amongst the old and obscure words, and added a Translation of the Latin in Chaucer.

Mr. Francis Thynne, Lancaster Herald, Son to Mr. William Thynne, intended to have put out an Edition of Chaucer with Notes, as the Italians had Petrarch, and others, in their Language; having, besides the helps left him by his Father, made Collections of his own for that purpose: But whether Mr. Speght had the use of them for this Edition, or what became of them doth not appear. Mr. A. Wood says Mr. Thynne assisted Mr. Speght with his Notes and Directions, as also with considerable Materials for writing of Chaucer's Life: But that is very improbable, since Mr. Speght doth not acknowledge any such assistance where he mentions Mr. Thynne's intention of undertaking a new Edition of Chaucer.

The last Edition in 1687. scarce deserves a mention here, having all the defects of the former ones, with many additional Errors of it's own. It is furnished with a pompous Title Page only for Sale, pretending that it was compared with the best MSS. and that several things were added never before in print, which are only Two Advertisements; one at the beginning, that the Pilgrim's Tale could not be found; the other at the end, pretending to have found the Conclusion of the Coke's and Squier's Tales. To the former he directs these Lines to be added;

*What thorow himself and his felaw that fought,
Unto a mischief both they were brought,
The one ydamned to prison perpetually,
The tother to deth, for he cou not of clergy,
And therefore yong men learne while ye may,
That with many divers thoughts beth pricked all the day,
Remembre you what mischief cometh of misgovernance,
Thus mowe ye learne worschip and come to substance;
Think how grace and governaunce hath brought aboune
Many a poore man's Son chese state of the Town.
Ever rule thee after the best man of name,
And God may grace thee to come to the same.*

At the end of the Squier's Tale, after the two Verses of the third part which are extant, he directs to add the Lines before set down out of Mr. Selden's MS. with the addition of the two following Lines between the sixth and seventh Verses;

*So on this mattere I may no lenger dwell,
But stint my clack, and let the other tell,
Therefore oft [l. oft] taketh, &c.*

Besides these Editions of Chaucer's Works together, several of his Poems have been printed separately, at several times.

The Description of the Plowman and his Tale, were printed in 1606. in 4°. with Notes which are thought by some to be Mr. Francis Thynne's.

In 1635. Sir Francis Kinaston of Otely in Shropshire published the First and Second Books of Troilus and Cresseide, with an elegant Latin Version of them in Rhime, dedicated to Pat. Junius, Library Keeper to the King: And in the Epistle to the Reader, he promises to translate the remaining Books in the same manner; and in case that Essay met with the Approbation of the Learned to publish the whole, with a Comment or Notes for the fuller Illustration of that Poem. And it seems he lived to finish this Work, though not to publish it; for I have been informed that there was a MS. of it in the hands of the late Dr. Henry Aldriche, Dean of Christ-Church, Oxon. (whose Name is never to be mentioned by a Member of that Society without the utmost Respect and Gratitude) out of which Mr. Urry procured some of the Notes to be transcribed, which have been made use of in the Glossary. I could never learn what became of that MS. but I am perswaded if it falls into the hands of a person capable to judge of it, he will not grudge the Learned World the use of so valuable a Piece by suppressing it, or delaying it's Publication.

An Anonymous Writer published a Comment on the Miller's Tale, and on the Prologue and Tale of the Wife of Bath in 1665. at the instance (as he says) of several Persons of Qua-

¹ Speght to the Reader, before this Edition.

² Ath. Oxon. Vol. I. col. 319. in Francis Thynne.

³ In his Epistle to the Reader, as before.

The PREFACE.

lity, who importuned him to go on with the rest; but the Author excuses himself, on account of his Age, from proceeding any further in that Work.

Mr. Asbmo printed the Chanon's Teman's Tale with some Notes, in his Theatrum Chemicum in 1652.

Mr. Dryden turned into modern language the Knight's Tale, the Wife of Bath her Tale, and the Nonne's Priest's Tale, and also the Poem Of the Floure and the Leafe, which are printed amongst his Fables in 1700. and at the end of that Book, those Poems are printed as they were written by Chaucer. He also wrote the Character of a Good Parson, in Imitation of Chaucer's Description of the Parson in his Prologues, with some Enlargements, which is printed in the same Volume.

Mr. Pope also modernized two of the Canterbury Tales, viz. The Merchant's Tale of January and May, and the Wife of Bath her Prologue, which are among his Works printed in 1717. And some other of our Author's Poems have been attempted by other ingenious Persons in the same manner.

I shall not trouble the Reader in this place with a particular Enumeration of the other Books which I had occasion to make use of in compiling the Glossary, many of them being mentioned in the Explanation of the Abbreviations, &c. before it, and the rest quoted at length where they are referr'd to in the Body of it. He will easily observe how much this Work, such as it is, owes to the Harleyan Libraries: But I must not omit making my particular Acknowledgments to the Right Honourable the Lord HARLEY, not only for his readiness in communicating such MSS. and printed Books as were necessary to be consulted in the progress of it (a Quality which he enjoys in common with other learned Collectors of Books) but for his personal Directions in very many Particulars relating to it, without which the use of his numerous and valuable Collection could not have been so available to my Design. Had I consulted his Lordship's Inclinations more than the Advantages which the Learned may receive from his Communicative Disposition, I should have concealed this, as I do many other uncommon Favours I have received from him: But it may be of no small service to such as may be hereafter engaged in a Task of the like nature, to be informed where they may receive the best Instructions, as well as Materials, for the accomplishment of it.

Before I proceed to make an Apology for the Defects of the Glossary, I should acquaint the Reader, that many of the Ancient English Poets have been read over in order to make it the more perfect, many words occurring frequently in them, which we read but once, or very seldom, in our Author; and therefore the sense could not be well determined without looking into other Writers of the same Age. Amongst these Gower and Lidgate were of most use, the latter being a close Imitator of Chaucer's Language, as He was of that of the former; and as they borrow Thoughts and Expressions from one another, so they give light to the mutual Illustration of one another. What is said of Lidgate holds true in a great measure of Occleve: And had there been time allowed for more Reading in this way, the Glossary might have been made more universal; but as it is, it will be found useful for the understanding of most of the Old English Poets as well as Chaucer.

Some will no doubt account it a Defect in this Glossary, that I have not entered further into the Etymologies of Words: To which I shall only answer, that I was at first enjoined to be as short as possible in the Explanation of them; which has been scrupulously observed, where it was not necessary to give the Origine of a Word in order to determine it's signification. But to make amends for the Compendiousness of it, in this respect, I have very frequently referred to the Authors where a fuller Explanation may be found.

It was once intended to have prefixed to the Glossary some general Rules for the better understanding of Chaucer's Language: But as there was not time allowed for drawing them up in a proper Method, the Reader must be content to take them as he finds them occasionally dispersed through it. For the same reason another Design was laid aside, which would in some degree have compensated the want of Notes upon Chaucer; and that was to give a short History of Persons and Places so far as they were referred or alluded to in his Works: But that would have taken up more time to do it to the learned Reader's Satisfaction, as well as my own, than has been spent in putting out this Edition, as long as it has been in hand: For besides the hints out of the Greek and Latin Authors, there are frequent Allusions to Romances and Legends in several Languages well known in Chaucer's time; so that to make that Work tolerable, the Undertaker must be Master of all that sort of Learning and Knowledge which was peculiar to that Age. The Reader must therefore be contented with the few Notions of that kind which he will find interspersed in the Glossary, and the Account of Authors subjoined to it, printed out of the former Editions with some Improvements.

The Reader will find at the end of the Glossary a compleat Collection of the French and Latin Expressions used in Chaucer, which are not only translated, but more fully explained than in the former Editions: And some Corrections are also attempted where there are manifest Corruptions.

I must

a. The Rev. Mr. Anth: Hall, Fellow of Linn's Coll: Oxford.

The PREFACE.

I must not leave this Subject without doing justice to that ^aworthy Gentleman, whose Name was mentioned in the last Proposals for this Edition, as having undertaken a more useful and copious Glossary for the better understanding of this Poet. Such a Work performed by a Person of his extensive Learning and uncommon Knowledge in this particular Study, would have fully answered that Character: But as we are deprived of the Benefit of his Labours in this kind (for what reasons I am not at this time satisfied) I would not have his Reputation suffer by the imperfection of this Performance, and therefore am bound to acquit him of having any hand in compiling this Glossary.

Some may possibly expect in a Preface of this kind an Account of the Original of English Poetic, and of its Progress to our Author's time: But this hath been so fully and accurately performed by the learned Dr. Hickes, that I need not be ashamed to own I had nothing to add, nor do I care to transcribe.

Nor shall I be more solicitous to vindicate this Author from the Imputation of Smut and Obscenity. It has been very well observed by others that he has put it into proper mouths; and that having proposed to himself to describe the Manners of all Degrees of Persons in his time, he was under a sort of necessity to introduce this Character. I shall only add, that our present Words of Ribaldry, which are of English growth, were anciently Words of Decency, and had then a clean and modest signification.

The Number of Errata's needs no Apology to such as are acquainted with Works of this nature; especially if it be consider'd that my distance from the Press could not, without very much retarding the Work, allow me to revise the Sheets more than once: But I chose rather to run the risk of Censure by giving a full List of the most material ones, than impose upon the Reader by concealing them. Many of them had passed unregarded in the former Editions, and were propagated from one of them to another: But I made a scruple of correcting any of those in the Text without express Authority, but I have in the Glossary given my Conjectures concerning some of them as occasion offered, and the rest are corrected among the Errata. Those parts of our Author's Works which are written in Prose abound most with Errors of this sort; but none more than his Translation of Boethius de Consolatione Philosophiæ: But upon collating the several passages which are corrupted with the Latin Original, it will be found not very difficult to restore most of them. The Reader will find in the Glossary some Specimens of what may be done by that means.

I cannot conclude this Preface without expressing my Regret that I have not sufficient Materials for enlarging upon the Character of Mr. Urry, a Gentleman so remarkable, not only for his Learning and Industry, but more particularly for his great Charity, constant Integrity, and a peculiar Happiness of being always most agreeable to his private Friends. But I must not omit the mention of his Gratitude to the Place of his Education, which he intended to express by a Legacy of Five hundred Pounds towards the new building of Peckwater: And he often took occasion to tell his Friends, with what cheerfulness he went on with this Work, as it would enable him the better to perform his pious and generous Intention; which since he did not live to accomplish, must however be gratefully acknowledged to be in some measure made good by his worthy Executor William Brome Esq; formerly of Christ Church (who was likewise Mr. Urry's intimate Friend, and at the same time with him an Ornament to that Society) by appropriating a Third part of the Profits of this Edition to the carrying on of that Building.

Having finished what I had here to offer to the Reader's consideration, I shall dismiss him from any further trouble, with Mr. Urry's own words to him in the short Sketch of a Preface, which was mentioned before: "If this is the First Edition of Chaucer that ever thou didst read, " it will be to little purpose to tell thee what pains I have been at to fit out this Edition for " thee. Thou wilt, may be, not thank me for what I have done, and complain of me for " having left so much undone. All this I do believe thou mayst do justly: But if thou hast read " any of the former Editions, thou wilt be my witness that I have been at some trouble in " settling the Text, and giving Metre to the Poet's Verse, in collating many MSS. and not " a few Printed Books, writing out Indexes, looking over a great many Dictionaries for words " I could not find, as well as for words I could. In short, if thou ever wert an Editor of " such Books, thou wilt have some compassion on my failings, being sensible of the toil of " such sort of creatures; and if thou art not yet an Editor, I beg truce of thee till thou art " one, before thou censuresst my Endeavours.

THE CONTENTS.

T HE Prologues of the Canterbury Tales.
The Knight's Tale.	Page 1
The Miller's Tale.	8
The Reve's Prologue and Tale.	24
The Cooke's Prologue, and Tale of an unthrifty Prentice.	30, 31
The Coke's Tale of Gamelyn.	34, 35
The Man of Lawe's Prologue and Tale.	36
The Squier's Prologue and Tale.	49, 50
The words of the Marchaunt to the Squier, and the words of the Host to the Marchaunt.	59, 60
The Marchaunt's Prologue and Tale.	65
The Wife of Bath's Prologue.	66, 67
The Wife of Bath's Tale.	76
The Frere's Prologue and Tale.	82
The Sumpnour's Prologue and Tale.	86, 87
The Clerk of Oxenford's Prologue and Tale.	90, 91
The Frankelein's Prologue and Tale.	96, 97
The Second Nonne's Prologue and Tale.	107, 108
The Chanon's Yeman's Prologue.	115, 116
The Chanon's Yeman's Tale.	120
The Doctour of Phisike's Prologue and Tale.	122
The wordes of the Hoste.	128
The Pardoner's Prologue and Tale.	130
The Shipmann's Prologue, and Tale.	132, 133
The wordes of the Hoste.	138
The Prioress's Prologue and Tale.	141
The wordes of the Hoste to Chaucer.	142, 143
The Rime of Sir Thopas.	144
The Hoste interrupteth the Rime of Sir Thopas	145
Chaucer's Tale of Melibens.	146
The Monke's Prologue and Tale.	147
The Nonne's Priest's Prologue and Tale.	160, 161
The Manciple's Prologue and Tale.	168, 169
The Plowman's Prologue and Tale.	174, 175
The Parson's Prologue and Tale.	178, 179
The Retraction.	190, 191
The Romaunt of the Rose.	214
The First Boke of Troilus and Creseide.	215
The Second Book.	269
The Third Book.	277
The Fourth Book.	291
The Fifth Book.	305
The Testament of Creseide.	318
The Complaint of Creseide.	333
The Legende of good Women.	336
The Legende of Cleopatra Quene of Egypte.		338
The Legende of Thisbe of Babylone.		342
The Legende of Dido Quene of Carthage.		343
The Legende of Hyppisyle and Medea.		345
The Legende of Lucrece of Rome.		348
The Legende of Ariadne of Athens.		350
The Legende of Pholomela.		352
The Legende of Phyllis.		354
The Legende of Hypermnestra.		356
A godely Balade of Chaucer.		357
The Boke of Boethius De Consolatione Philosophia.		358
The Dreame of Chaucer.		359
An Envoy to the Duke of Lancaster after his Loss of Blanch.		404
The Assemble of Foules.		413
The Floure of Courtesie, made by John Lidgate.		ib.
How pyte is dede, &c.		419
La belle Dame sans mercy.		421
Of Quene Amelida, and false Arcite.		422
The Complaint of Amelida to false Arcite.		430
The Assemble of Ladies.		432
The Conclusions of the Astrolubie.		433
The Complaint of the blacke Knight.		439
A Praise of Women.		451
The House of Fame, First Book.		456
The Second Book.		458
The Third Book.		461
The Floure and the Leafe.		465
The Prologue to the Testament of Love.		473
The Testament of Love. Book I.		478
Book II.		479
Book III.		491
The Lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine.		507
The Remedie of Love.		520
The Complaint of Mars and Venus.		526
The Complaint of Mars.		530
The Complaint of Venus.		532
The Letter of Cupide.		533
A Balade in commendacion of our Ladie.		534
John Gower unto the noble King Henry IV.		538
A sayng of Dan John, Ther be the fewe thinges, &c.		540
Balade de bon conseil.		543
Of the Cuckowe and the Nightingale.		ib.
Scogan, unto the Lordes and Gentilmen of the King's

The CONTENTS.

Kinge's House.	546	O merciful, and o merciable.	556
Sometyme the worlde so stedfast was, &c.	547	How Mercurie with Pallas, Venus and Minerva ap-
Gode counsaile of Chaucer, Flie fro the prese, &c.	548	pered to Paris of Troie, &c.	557
Balade of the village without paintyng.	ib.	A balade plesaunte, I have a Ladie, &c.	ib.
To brokin ben the statutes, &c.	549	O Mossie Quince, &c.	558
Go forthe kyng, and rule, &c.	ib.	A balade warnyng men to beware of deceitfull
Chaucer to his emptie purse.	ib.	women, Loke well aboute, &c.	ib.
Chaucer unto the kinge.	ib.	The longe nyghtes when every creature.	ib.
A Balade of gode counseile translated out of Latine		A balade declaring that womens chastite docth
verfes into Englishe by Dan Jhon Lidgate.	ib.	moche excel all trefure worldly, In womanhede,
A balade in praise of Maister Geffray Chaucer, &c.	551	&c.	559
A Balade teching what is gentilnes, &c.	ib.	The Court of Love.	560
A Proverbe agaynst Covetise and Negligence.	ib.	Chaucer's Dreame, When Flora, the quene, &c.	572
A Balade agaynst Women unconstaunt.	ib.	Chaucer's A. B. C. called La Priere de nostre Dame.
A Balade made in the praise, or rather dispreise, of			588
Women for ther doublenes.	ib.	Jacke Upland.	590
The Craft of Lovers.	552	The mery Adventure of the Pardonere and Tap-
A Balade, Of ther nature they, &c.	553	stere at the Inn at Canterbury.	594
The X. Commaundements of Love.	554	The Marchant's second Talc, or the History of
The IX. Ladies worthie.	555	Beryn.	600
Alone walkyng, &c.	ib.	Chaucer's Wordes unto his own Scrivenere.	626
A Ballade, In Feverere when that, &c.	556

N. B. The followⁱⁿg Cut should have been placed before the Rhime of Sir Thopaz.

Eight godely QUESTIONS with their ANSWERS*.

Sometime in Grece, that noble region,
There were eight clerkis of full grete science,
Philosophers of notable discrecion;
Of whom was asked, to provin their prudence,
Eight questions of derke intelligence:
To which they answered after their entent,
As here doth appere plaine and evident.

Thee first question was, What erthly thing
Is best, and unto God most commendable?
The first clerke answered without tarying,
A mann's soule ever firme and stable
In right, [and] from the trouth not variable.
But now alas! full sore may we wepe;
For covetise hath broughte trouth asleepe.

The second, What thing is most odious?
A double man, sayed the Philosopher,
With virgine face, and a taile venomous,
With a fair view, and a false profer:
A corrupt carien in a golden tree.
It is a monster in natures linage,
One man to havin a double visage.

The third [question,] What is the beste dower
That may be to a wife appropriate?
A clene life, was the clerkis answer,
Without sinne, all chaste, and inviolate
From all deceits, and speches inornate,
Or countenaunce, which shall be to dispise:
No fire make, and then no smoke woll arise.

The fourth question [was,] What maiden may
Be called clene in chastitie?
The fourthe clerke answered, which alway
Every creature is ashamde on to lie,
Of whom men reporten great honestie:
Good maidens kepe youre chastitie forth,
And remember that good name is gold worth.

[The fifth] Who' is a pore man ev'er full of wo?
A covetous man which is a nigon,
He that in his herte can never say ho;
The more gode, the lesse distribution;
The richer, the worse of condition:

Men in this coast clepen him a niggard,
[And] Sir Guy the bribour is his steward.

[The sixth] Which is a rich man without fraud?
He that canne to his gode suffise;
Whatever he hath, he yeveth God the laud,
And kepeth him clene from all covetise;
He desires nothing in ungodly wise;
His body is here, his mind is above:
He is a rich man, for God doth him love.

Who is a foole? is the seventh demand;
He that wolde hurt, and hath no powere;
Might he mikell, much wolde he command;
His malice grete, his might nought were;
He threteth full fast, full little may he dere:
He thinketh not how men have sayed beforen,
God sendeth a shreude Cowe a short horn.

Who is a wise man? is the eight question;
He that might noye, and doth no annoiance;
Might punish, and leaveth punission;
A man mercifull, without vengeaunce:
A wise man putteth in remembraunce
[This] Saying, Had I venged all mine harme,
My cloke had not been furred halfe so warme.

Explicit.

To the Kinges most noble grace, and to the Lords and Knightes of the Garter.

TO you welle of honour and worthinesse,
Our Christen King, the heire and successour
Unto Justinian's devout tenderesse,
In the faith of Jesu our redemptour;
And to you, lordis of the Garter, floure
Of chevalrie, as men you clepe and call,
The lord of verrue, and of grace authour,
Graunt the fruit of your lose never appall.

* Septem Sapientum Sententia apud Auson.

BIAS PRIENEUS.

*Quenam summa boni? Mens que sibi conscia recti.
Perniciis homini que maxima? Solus homo alter.*

*Quis dives? Qui nil cupiat. Quis pauper? Avarus.
Quae dos matronae pulcherrima? Vita pudica.
Quae casta est? De qua mentiri fama veretur.
Quod prudentis opus? Quum possit, nolle nocere.
Quid stulti proprium? Non posse, & velle nocere.*

O liege lorde, that have the likenesse
 Of Constantine, th'ensample and mirrour
 To princes all, in humble buxomnesse
 To holy church, O veray sustainour
 And pillar of our faith, and werriour
 Againe of herefies the bitter gall:
 Doe forth, doe forth, continue your succour,
 Hold up Christis banner, let it not fall.

This Ile or this had ben but hethenesse,
 N'ad be of your faith the force and vigour;
 And yet this day the fiendis crabbednesse
 Wenith fully to catch a time and houre,
 To have on us your lieges a sharpe shoure,
 And to his servitude us knitte and thrall:
 But aye we trust in you our protectour,
 On your constaunce we awaitin all.

Commaundith that no wight have hardinesse,
 O worthy king, our Christen Emperour,
 Of the faith to disputin more or lesse
 Openly emonges peple: Her errour
 Springeth all day, and engendrieth rumour.
 Makith such law, and for ought may befall,
 Observe it wele, thereto be ye doctour;
 Doth so, and God in glorie shall you stall.

Ye Lordis eke, shining in noble fame,
 To which appropred is the maintenaunce
 Of Christis cause, in honour of his name,
 Shore on and put his foes to utteraunce;
 God wolde so, and so wolde eke your legiaunce;
 To the two aye prickith you your dewte.
 Who so nat kepeth this double observaunce,
 Of merite and honour naked is he.

Your stile sayith [that] ye ben foes to shame:
 Now kith of your faith the perseveraunce,
 In which an hepe of us ben halt and lame.
 Our christen king of Englonde and of Fraunce,
 And ye my lordis with your alliaunce,
 And other faithful peple that there be,
 Trust I to God, shall quench al this noifance,
 And this lond set in high prosperite.

Conquest of high prowesse is for to tame
 The wild wodenesse of all this miscreaunce;
 Right to the rote daily repe ye that same.
 Slepen nat this, but for God's plesaunce
 And his mother, and in signifaunce
 That ye ben of saint George's livere,
 Doth him service, and knightly obeisaunce;
 For Christis cause is his, well knowin ye.

Stiffe stand in that, and ye shall greve and grame
 The foe to pece, the norice of distaunce;
 That now is earnest, turne it into game;
 Now kith of your belve the constaunce,
 Lord liege and lordis, have in remembraunce,
 Lord of all is the blisfull Trinite,
 Of whose vertue the mightie habundaunce
 You herten and strengthen in faithfull unite.

Explicit.

† Chaucer's Prophecie.

W^Hen faith faylieth in Priest's sawes,
 And lordes hestes are holde for lawes,
 And robberie is holde purchase,
 And lecherie is holde solace;
 Then shall the lond of Albion
 Be brought to great confusion.

I^T falleth for a gentleman
 To say the best that he can
 Alwaies in mann's absence,
 And the sooth in his presence.

It commeth by kind of gentil blood
 To cast away all hevinesse,
 And gadher together wordis good,
 The werke of wisdom beatech witnesse.

† So this Stanza is entitled in a Book in the Asmolean Museum. No. 6926. 781. p. 162.

The

ANNE R.

WHEREAS Our Trusty and Well-beloved John Urry, Student of Christ-Church College in our University of Oxford, hath humbly represented unto Us, that he hath with great Labour and Expence prepared for the Press a compleat and correct Copy of the Works of Geffrey Chaucer, with a Glossary, and in order thereunto has carefully perused and compared not only all the former Editions of Value, but many rare and ancient Manuscripts not hitherto consulted; from the collating of which he hath in a great measure restored and perfected the Text, amending many Errors and Corruptions that have crept in, and continued in all the Editions hitherto printed, remarked many Pieces in them falsely ascribed to Chaucer, and added several entire Tales never yet printed, as well as many single Lines hitherto omitted in former Editions of this Work; by which Alterations, Amendments and Additions, the Work is in a manner become new; and has therefore humbly besought Us to grant him Our Royal Privilege and Licence for the sole Printing and Publishing thereof for the Term of Fourteen Years: We being graciously inclined to encourage the said Undertaking, are pleased to condescend to his Request, and do therefore by these Presents grant unto him the said John Urry, his Heirs, Executors, Administrators and Assigns, Our Royal Licence and Privilege for the sole Printing and Publishing the Works of Geffrey Chaucer as he hath collated them with the Manuscripts, and the Glossary aforesaid, for the Term of Fourteen Years from the Date hereof, strictly forbidding and prohibiting all Our Subjects within Our Kingdoms and Dominions to reprint the same, either in the like, or in any other Volume or Volumes whatsoever, or to import, buy, vend, utter or distribute any Copies thereof reprinted beyond the Seas, during the aforesaid Term of Fourteen Years, without the Consent or Approbation of the said John Urry, his Heirs, Executors, Administrators and Assigns, under his or their Hand and Seals first had and obtained, as they will answer the contrary at their Péril. Whereof the Master, Warden, and Company of Stationers are to take notice that the same may be entered in their Register, and that due Obedience be rendred thereunto.

Given at Our Court at Kensington the Twentieth Day of July 1714. in the Thirteenth Year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command,

W. Bromley.

N. B. This Licence was Assigned by Mr. Urry unto Bernard Lintot Bookseller, the Seventeenth Day of December 1714.

A GLOSSARY

Explaining the Obsolete and difficult Words

IN CHAUCER.

An Explanation of the Abbreviations used in the following G L O S S A R Y.

ABC.	C haucer's A. B. C.	Page 588	J. Upl.	Jacke Uplande	590
AF.	The Assemble of Foules	413	Kyn.	Sir Francis Kynaston's Version of Troilus and Creseide into Latin Rhyme, and his Notes thereupon. See Mortier in the Glossary.
AL.	The Assemble of Ladies	433	La.	The Man of Lawe's Tale	49
An.	Of Quene Amelida and false Ar-cite	430	Lar.	Latin.
Ar.	The Legende of Ariadne of Athens	352	Leg.	Legendum , To be read.
AS.	Saxon or Anglo-Saxon.		Luc.	The Legende of Lucretia of Rome	350
Astr.	The Conclusions of the Astrolabie	439	LW.	The Legende of good Women	338
Bal.	Certaine Balades	549	Magd.	The Lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine	520
Bal. Lad.	A Ballade in commendacion of our Ladie	538	Men. Fr.	Menage de l'Origine de la langue Francoise .
BD.	La Belle Dame sans mercy	422	Men. It.	Menage delle Origini della Lingua Italiana .
Ber.	The Merchant's second Tale, or the Hilto-ry of Beryn	600	Mo.	The Division containing the Monke's, the Nonne's Priests, the Manciple's and the Plowman's Tales p. 160. to 189
Bl. Kn.	The Complaint of the Blacke Knight	451	MR.	The Division which contains the Miller's and the Reve's Tales, and the Coke's Tale of an unthrifty Prentice p. 24 to 35
Blo.	Blount's Glossography.		MS. Ch.	Mr. Chulmondely's MS. See the Preface.
Blo. L. D.	Blount's Law-Dictionary.		MS. Sp.	A MS of Troilus and Creseide , in which is written Henrici Spelman . See the Preface.
Boeth.	The Boke of Boethius , De Consolatione Philo-sophie .	359	MV.	The Complaints of Mars and Venus	532
Ca. 1, 2.	Caxton's first and second Edition of Chaucer's Works.		No.	The Division which begins p. 115. and contains the Second Nonne's, the Chan-non's Ycoman's, the Doctour of Phisike's, the Pardoner's, the Shipman's, the Prio-ress's Tales, and the Rime of Sir Thopas ; ending	146
CB.	Cumbr-Britan. or Welsh.		Pars.	The Parson's Tale	190
CCr.	The Complaint of Creseide	336	Ph.	The Legende of Philomela	354
Ch.	Chaucer's Tale of Melibeus	147	Phyl.	The Legende of Phyllis	356
Ch. Dr.	Chaucer's Dreine	572	Pi.	How Pyte is dede	421
Cl.	The Legende of Cleopatra	343	PP.	Piers Plowman's Visions.
CL.	The Court of Love	560	Prol.	The Prologue to the Canterbury Tales , to-gether with the Knight's Tale, from p. 1. to 24
CM.	The Complaint of Mars	532	Pr. RL.	Prologue to the Remedy of Love	526
CMV.	The Complaint of Mars and Venus	530	PT.	The mery Adventure of the Pardoner and Tapstere, &c.	594
CN.	Of the Cuckowe and the Nightingale	543	PW.	A Praise of Women	456
Com.	A Comment on the Plowman's Tale, printed in 1606.		Py. 1, 2.	Pyntson's first and second Edition of Chaucer's Works.
Cr.	The Testament of Creseide	333	Ray's Coll.	Mr. Ray's Collection of English Words used in the Northern and Southern Countries. 2 Edit. 1691.
CV.	The Complaint of Venus	ib.	Rich.	Richet's Dictionary.
Cup.	The Letter of Cupide .	534	RL.	The Remedy of Love	527
D.	Dutch.		RR.	The Romaunt of the Rose	199
Di.	The Legende of Dido Quene of Carthage	345	Sc.	Scogan unto the Lords and Gentlemen of the King's House.	546
Dr. Ch.	The Dreine of Chaucer	404	Scot.	Scotch.
f. forte,	Perhaps.		Sk.	Skinner's Etymologicon Lingua Anglicana.
Fa. L. 1.	The first Book of the House of Fame	458	Somn.	Sommer's Saxon Dictionary.
Fa. L. 2.	The second Book	461	Sp.	Speght's Glossary to Chaucer's Works.
Fa. L. 3.	The third Book	465	Spelm.	Spelmanni Glossarium Archaologicum.
Fl.	The Floure of Courtisie	419	Sq.	The Division containing the Squier's and the Marchaunt's Tales p. 59 to 75
FL.	The Floure and the Lease	473	Test.	The Testament of Love	478
Forr.	Plaintife to Fortune	548	Th.	The Legende of Thibe of Babylone	343
Fr. French:	But when it is followed by a Number, it stands for the Division beginning p. 86. and ending p. 114. Containing the Frere's, the Sompnour's, the Clerke of Oxenforde's , and the Frankelins's Tales.		Tr. L. 1.	The first Book of Troilus and Creseide	269
Fr. Gl.	Glossarium ad Scriptores Mediae & Infimae Latinitatis , Autore Carolo du Fresne , &c.		Tr. L. 2.	The second Book	277
Gam.	The Coke's Tale of Gemelyn	36	Tr. L. 3.	The third Book	291
Gl. Lob.	The Glossary to Lobineau's Histoire de Bretagne .		Tr. L. 4.	The fourth Book	305
Gl. V.	The Glossary to Douglas's Virgil . Edinb. 1710.		Tr. L. 5.	The fifth Book	318
Gr.	Greek.		V.	Vide , See. When it follows a Word, it refers to it in the Glossary.
H. 1, 2, 3, 4.	MSS. in the Earl of Oxford's and the Lord Harley's Libraries. See the Preface.		WB.	The Wife of Bath's Prologue and Tale	76
Hen.	A Balade to King Henry IV.	540
Hib.	Hibernic . Irish.
Hick.	Hicke's Thesaurus Linguarum Septentrionalium .
Hick. Somn.	Dr. Hicke's MS Additions to Sommer's Saxon Dictionary in the Lord Harley's Library.
Hyp.	The Legende of Hypsipyle and Medea	348
Hyper.	The Legende of Hypermuestra	357
Ib.	Ibidem , in the same place.
It.	Italian.

A

GLOSSARY, &c.

- A, Sometimes signifies In; as, Agame; in Game, or Jest. Tr. L. 3. 651. Sometimes, On or In; as, A Goddis half; On God's part, or behalf; A morrow; On the morrow, or In the morning. Tr. L. 5. 14. Anight; In the night. Arno; In two. It is often put before Verbs in the Perfect Tense, as i and y are; as Ago, Gone; Aknowe, Known, &c. and sometimes in other Tenses; as Arede, Aslide, Astaf. It is put before Verbs instead of To, as Ado, Adine. It is sometimes prefixed to Nouns; as Avisionn, Avom, &c. And to Adverbs; as Anowe; Now; Anye; Nigh. Sometimes it stands for Have; as, awedded, &c. A per se; A by it self, An extraordinary and incomparable person, A Nonpareil. Cr. 78.
- Abacke*, Abak, Abake: Back, backwards, behind. Shede abake; Shed, spread or flowing down behind, or on the back. Cr. 222.
- Abashed*, Fr. 1347. [Or, Al bashed, as in MS. Ch.] Cast down, ashamed; Astonished, amazed.
- Abate*, abatin, To overthrow, to cast down. p. 205, a. To lessen. RR. 1061. Abated; Cast or thrust down. p. 193, a; from the Fr. Abbatre, Abbatu.
- Abawid*: Astonished, confounded. RR. 3646. Ashamed. Dr. Ch. 614.
- Abedge*, Abegge, Abigg: To abide; To suffer.
- Aber*: Abetting, assistance. Tr. L. 2. 357. where MS. Ch. reads Abetyng; but Ca. Counsayl.
- Abide*, Fr. 3076. To forbear, refrain.
- Abie*: To abide; To suffer for. It is used indifferently in a good and bad sense; as in RR. 5888. To find or receive benefit or advantage: But in MR. 1285. No. 715. &c. To suffer hurt, &c. And in this sense it comes from Buy, which is used in the same manner. See Abought.
- Abiecte*: Cast away, removed, layd aside. RL. 345. Vile, mean, base. Boeth.
- Abie*: Abideth. RR. 4977.
- Abite*: an Abode, Habitation. RR. 1914. Abideth. Tr. L. 1. 1092. where Ca. reads abydyth. Also Habit. CL. 1094. RR. 4914.
- Abitt*, Abitte: Abideth, dwelleth, stayeth. RR. 5012, 4989.
- Able*: Fit, proper. RR. 986. Fr. Habile. Also, To fit or qualify. Sc. 32. Abled: Enabled, qualified. p. 497, a.
- Ablyng*: Enabling, qualifying, fitting. p. 364, b. Lat. Aptans; and perhaps it should be there read apryng.
- Abusions*: Frequent washings used by Chymists. No. 877.
- Abnormeth*: Disfigureth, disguiseth. Tr. L. 1. 328. From the Lat. Abnormis, Out of rule or order. But Ca. instead of it reads He bourneth.
- Abode*: Delay. Abodie: Delays. Tr. L. 3. 856.
- Above*: Cast down, daunted. Ch. Dr. 1290. See Abate.
- Abought*, Abonghie, Abonghin: Bought; Suffered, paid dear for. See Abie.
- Abounin* for Aboutin, MR. 1040. About. Ms. Ch. has the whole Verse better, thus;
And about midnight wenten thei to rest.
- Abraide*. Awaked, Raised up. Out of her madness abraide, Fr. 2082. Awaked, raised out of her surprize; from the A. S. Abpebian, Aufere, eximere, eruer, liberare.
- Abpoden*, let free, delivered, and Metaph. Awaked. See Abreide.
- Abrede* (for so it should be read in one word. RR. 2563.) Abroad. It is also used as Braide, breyde, Fr. 17. Out of his wit abrede; Run mad, or out of his senses. Cr. 45. See Abraide, Abreide, and Breide.
- Abredge*, Abregge: To abridge, shorten, lessen, abate. Tr. L. 3. 263. which is better read in MS. Sp.
But only to abregyn thy distres.
- Abreide*, Abreyd: To start up; To awake. Also Awaked, arose. See Breide.
- Absolute*: Absolved, freed. Boeth.
- Abuson*: An Abuse. Tr. L. 4. 990.
- Aby*, Abyin, Abyish. See Abie, and Abedge.
- Abytte*: Abideth, continueth. Hen. 285. See Abitt.
- Accesse*: A Fever, an Ague. Bl. Kn. 136. Fr. Accès de fièvre is a Fit of an Ague. The Acces of an Ague is the approaching or coming on of the Fit, and the Reces, when the Fit is over and leaves the Patient: In Lancashire they still call the Ague it self, The Acces. Blo.
- Accidie*: Sloth, Laziness, an Indisposition to Devotion. Accidia, Acidia, pro Acidia. Gr. Auidia, Vacuitas curæ, vel Mororis abundantia.
- Accord*. See Acord.
- Accordant*: According, agreeing, agreeable to. Accordance: Accord, agreement. Boeth. Accordidin: Agreed. LIV. 168.
- Accuse*: To discover, betray. RR. 1591. Accusement: Accusation. Tr. L. 4. 556.
- Achate*: A contract, bargain; Buying. p. 362, a. Achates: Purchases. Test. L. 2.
- Achekid*: Choaked. Ar. 123.
- Accheve*, Acheve: To accomplish. RR. 4600. To act. lb. 5882. Acheved: Atchieved, obtained, attained. BD. 588. RR. 2049. Finished, ended. Fr. Achever, To finish, &c.
- Achoken*: To choak. Also, Surfeited.
- Achele*, CL. 1076. (or as it is in Gower, L. 4. Akle) To cool.
- Acheyeth*: Cloyeth, surfeiteth. AF. 517.

Accie: To quiet, ease, relieve. RR. 3564, 3718. See Coye.
Acomber: To encomber; To lye down, to wallow. Prol. 510.
Acomberous, Acombrous: Cumbersome, troublesome. CV. 42.
Acombris, Ber. 2910. Acomered, Test. L. 3. Encombred, brought into great streights; Disturbed.
Acorde, Acordment: An agreement, bargain. Ber. 1837. Consented. She fell of his accorde; She consented. Fr. 2287.
Acquite: To discharge one's duty. Fr. 1957. See Aquite.
Acroke: Crooked, awry; Wrong. CL. 378.
Actis: Publick Acts; Histories, Chronicles. Mo. 1251.
Adassid: Dashed, put out of countenance. Fr. 2212.
Adawe: To awake. Tr. L. 3. 1126. Sq. 1932. In Spenser's Shepherd's Cal. it is used for Daunted.
Adele: Added, annexed. CL. 446.
Adewe: Adieu, farewell. Adewe bliff. Farewell happiness. p. 506, a.
Adherande: Adhering, cleaving together. Test.
Adine: To dine. Fr. Donner à diner; To entertain one at dinner. See A.
Admoneste: To admonish. See Amonested.
Adnull: To disannull, make void.
Ado, Adoe: An affair; To do. Nè're ado; Never to do. RR. 3036. Han alo; Have to do. lb. 5080. There men shuld have ado; Where any difficulty should happen. See A.
Adon: Done, finished, at an end; Undone. Hyper. 32. Also, Adonis, the Favorite of Venus.
Adornemente: Ornament. Test. L. 2.
Adoune, Adowne: Down, downwards; Below. Mo. 1682. In Tr. L. 2. 199. MS. Sp. reads, adoune, instead of al down.
Adowne, Bl. Kn. 645. Adonis.
Adradd: Afraid, in great concern or trouble. RR. 1228.
Adriane for Ariadne, Ar. 261. Metri gratia.
Adue: Adieu, Farewell. Magd. 680.
Adventaille. See Aventaille.
Adversarie: Contrary. p. 204, a.
Adverie: To think, consider. Adverience: Consideration, thought, attention.
Advise, Advisement, are often printed for Avise, Avise-ment, V.
Advocacies: Law-Suits. Tr. L. 2. 1469.
Advoca's: Advocates, Patrons, Defenders. No. 1805.
Advonrie: Adultery.
Afare: Affair, business. With so grete afare, Boeth. p. 370, a. Tanto strepitum; With so much noise. Perhaps it should be read, with so grete a fare; With so much ado. See Fare.
Affecte: Affection. Frende of affeete, and frende of chere; A truly affectionate or sincere friend, and one that is so only in countenance or appearance. RR. 5486. Affectis: Affections; Passions, desires, inclinations. Tr. L. 3. 1397.
Afede: To feed.
Aferde: Afraid. Tr. L. 2. 606. Where instead of Why that she ought aferde be, MS. Sp. hath Why she ought aferd to be; Which runs more smoothly.
Afere: In fear, afraid. RR. 4073.
Afered, Affered: Afraid. In No. 1798. it seems to signify Tormented with the Worm of Conscience mentioned before; Or the Poet might allude to the Custom of setting Fines and Amerciements in Court-Leets by Afferers. See Blo. L. D. in Afferers; and Spelm. in Afferatores.
Affiance: Promise; Assurance, engagement. Hyper. 182. See Fr. Gl. in Affidare.
Affie: To promise, engage; To assure; To trust or put confidence in. RR. 3155.
Affirm: To confirm. Tb. 85. Fr. 1485. Fr. Affermir.
Affray: To affright, disturb; To assault; Also, Fear. RR. 4397. Disturbance, danger, quarrel, fright.
Affrikan: An African. AF. 41. Scipio Africannus, the Roman General.
Afile: To file, polish. Well afile his tongue; Speak smoothly. Prol. 714. So in Gower. L. 1. When he hath his songe afiled With soft speche; and Spencer, Fairy Queen. Cant. 1.
That old man of pleasing words had fore,
And well could file his tongue as smooth as Glas.

Afine, seems to be put for and fine in RR. 3690. and often in Ber. where sometimes we read, and fine, as in Verse, 570, 1233, &c. It may proceed from the Transcriber's mistaking a for a, which may easily happen, especially if the Copy be wore.
Aforced: Forced, ravished. p. 210, b.
Aforeyne: Afore; Overagainst. Tr. L. 2. 1188. asor-yenst, Ca.
Aforne: Before. Aforne casse; Premeditated. Mo. 1332.
Afors: Of necessity. Ber. 1384.
Afoundie, PT. 631. f. leg. Afoundrit: Foundered.
Afraide, Afraied: Frighted. Perhaps in Dr. Ch. 296. it should be read, abraide [i. e. awaked] me out of my slepe. See Abraide.
Afraie. See Affray.
Afrete: Full freighted; Set full. Sk. in Fret. Perhaps it may signify Fretted, looking like Fret-work. RR. 3204. See Fret.
Afcer kinrede: Remote Kindred or Relations. p. 153, b. Perhaps it should be read a fer kinrede. MS. Ch. has it, a feer.
Affyched: Affected. Test. L. 2.
Again, Againe: Against.
Against: Instead of. Mo. 2443, 2457.
Agast: To frighten, terrify. Tr. L. 2. 901. Afraid.
Agathrid: Gathered. Mo. 3265.
Agé, Ageynes, Ageyns: Against; Again.
Ageyne: Against.
Aghast: See Agast.
Agilir, Bal. 74. Perhaps it should be read a gilir, or A Guilor, as in MR. 1213. or as it is often in PP. A Gylor, i. e. A deceiver.
Agile, Agille: To offend; Offended. WB. 392. RR. 5833.
Ago, Sq. 1280. Agone. Tr. L. 4. 1180. Gone; Past.
Agramed: Grieved, displeased. Mo. 2283. See Grame.
Agre, Agrein: To please, content; To be pleased. Fr.
Agreer. Also, In good part, kindly. RR. 4349. Fr. A gré. See Gré.
If harme agre me, whereto plaine I thenne? Tr. L. 1. 410.
If my Misfortune please me, to what purpose do I then complain? If this Reading of Chaucer be genuine, he seems to have read the passage differently from what it is in the Printed Editions of Petrarch, from whom this Song of Troilus is translated. The Passage is this,
S'a mia voglia ardo; ond' è'l pianto e'l lamento?
S'a mal mio grado; il lamentar che vale?
If I burn with my good will, whence this complaining and lamenting? If against my will what avails it to lament? Here is a plain opposition between a mia voglia, with my good will (or, as Chaucer translates it very significantly, at my own lust) and a mal mio grado, Against my will; which is quite lost in the present Reading. It is therefore probable that the place is corrupted, which may be thus restored;
And if that at mine owne lust I brenne,
From whence comith my wailing and my pleinte?
If that maugre me, whereto plaine I thenne?
This Conjecture is rendered probable by another Reading of this place which appears in the first Editions of this Poem by Caxton and Pynson;
If harme angre me——It will at first sight appear to any one ever so little conversant with MSS. considering the Ignorance of Transcribers and Similitude of Letters (particularly r and e, n and u;) how easily that maugre might be corrupted into harm angre. The last word angre coming in proceſſe of time to be writ agre, the neglect or omission of the Dash introduced the present Reading. There is another Reading of Petrarch, which may favour that of Chaucer, If harme agre me——S'a mal mio grido——But the other seems preferable, as being more natural.
Agreabilite: Easiness of temper, Equanimity. Boeth.
Agredge, Agrege: To aggravate. p. 208, b. 210, b.
Agrese: Unkindly. Take it nat agrese; Take it not ill. Tr. L. 3. 864.
Agreve: To grieve. LIV. 345. RR. 4629. To provoke, exasperate; Exacerbate. Boeth.
Agrimoy: A Plant very useful in Obstructions of the Liver, Spleen, &c. and of a healing nature, being outwardly applied.
Agriſe: To affright; To fear, to be terrified. Mo. 2300; 2781,

Acoie: To quiet, ease, relieve. RR. 3564, 3718. See Coye.
Acomber: To encumber; To lie down, to wallow. Prol. 510.
Acomberous, Acombrous: Cumbersome, troublesome. CV. 42.
Acombrit, Ber. 2910. Acomered, Test. L. 3. Encombred, brought into great streights; Disturbed.
Acorde, Acordment: An agreement, bargain. Ber. 1837. Consent. She fell of his accorde; She consented. Fr. 2287.
Acquite: To discharge one's duty. Fr. 1957. See Aquite.
Acroke: Crooked, awry; Wrong. CL. 378.
Actis: Publick Acts; Histories, Chronicles. Mo. 1251.
Adassid: Dashed, put out of countenance. Fr. 2212.
Adawe: To awake. Tr. L. 3. 1126. Sq. 1932. In Spenser's Shepherd's Cal. it is used for Daunted.
Adele: Added, annexed. CL. 446.
Adewe: Adieu, farewell. Adewe bliff. Farewell happiness. p. 506, a.
Adherande: Adhering, cleaving together. Test.
Adine: To dine. Fr. Donner à diner; To entertain one at dinner. See A.
Admoneste: To admonish. See Amonested.
Adnull: To disannull, make void.
Ado, Adoe: An affair; To do. Ne're ado; Never to do. RR. 3036. Han alo; Have to do. Ib. 5080. There men shuld have ado; Where any difficulty should happen. See A.
Adon: Done, finished, at an end; Undone. Hyper. 32. Also, Adonis, the Favorite of Venus.
Adornemente: Ornament. Test. L. 2.
Adoune, Adowne: Down, downwards; Below. Mo. 1682. In Tr. L. 2. 199. MS. Sp. reads, adoune, instead of al down.
Adowne, Bl. Kn. 645. Adonis.
Adradd: Afraid, in great concern or trouble. RR. 1228.
Adriane for Ariadne, Ar. 261. Metri gratia.
Adue: Adieu, Farewell. Magd. 680.
Adventaille. See Aventuraile.
Adversarie: Contrary. p. 204, a.
Adverte: To think, consider. Advertence: Consideration, thought, attention.
Advise, Adviseement, are often printed for Avise, Avise-ment, V.
Advocacies: Law-Suits. Tr. L. 2. 1469.
Advocacs: Advocates, Patrons, Defenders. No. 1805.
Advontrie: Adultery.
Afare: Affair, business. With so grete afare, Boeth. p. 370, a. Tanto strepitum; With so much noise. Perhaps it should be read, with so grete a fare; With so much ado. See Fare.
Affekte: Affection. Frende of affekte, and frende of chere; A truly affectionate or sincere friend, and one that is so only in countenance or appearance. RR. 5486. Affektis: Affections; Passions, desires, inclinations. Tr. L. 3. 1397.
Afede: To feed.
Aferde: Afraid. Tr. L. 2. 606. Where instead of Why that she ought aferde be, MS. Sp. hath Why she ought aferd to be; Which runs more smoothly.
Afere: In fear, afraid. RR. 4073.
Afered, Affered: Afraid. In No. 1798. it seems to signify Tormented with the Worm of Conscience mentioned before; Or the Poet might allude to the Custom of setting Fines and Amerciaments in Court-Leets by Afferers. See Bl. L. D. in Afferers; and Spelm. in Afferatores.
Affiance: Promise; Assurance, engagement. Hyper. 182. See Fr. Gl. in Affidare.
Affie: To promise, engage; To assure; To trust or put confidence in. RR. 3155.
Affirm: To confirm. Th. 85. Fr. 1485. Fr. Affermir.
Affray: To affright, disturb; To assault; Also, Fear. RR. 4397. Disturbance, danger, quarrel, fright.
Affrikan: An African. AF. 41. Scipio Africanus, the Roman General.
Afile: To file, polish. Well afile his tongue; Speak smoothly. Prol. 714. So in Gower. L. 1. Whan he hath his tonge afiled With soft speche; and Spencer, Fairy Queen. Cant. 1.
*That old man of pleasing words had store,
 And well could file his tongue as smooth as Glass.*

Afine, seems to be put for and fine in RR. 3690. and often in Ber. where sometimes we read, and fine, as in Verse, 570, 1233, &c. It may proceed from the Transcriber's mistaking a for a, which may easily happen, especially if the Copy be wore.
Aforced: Forced, ravished. p. 210, b.
Aforeyne: Afore; Overagainst. Tr. L. 2. 1188. asor- yent, Ca.
Aforne: Before. Aforne casse; Premeditated. Mo. 1332.
Afors: Of necessity. Ber. 1384.
Afoundit, PT. 631: f. leg. Afoundrit: Foundered.
Afraide, Afraied: Frighted. Perhaps in Dr. Ch. 296. it should be read, abraide [i. e. awaked] me out of my slepe. See Abraide.
Afraie. See Affray.
Afrete: Full freighted; Set full. Sk. in Fret. Perhaps it may signify Fretted, looking like Fret-work. RR. 3204. See Fret.
After kinrede: Remote Kindred or Relations. p. 153, b. Perhaps it should be read a fer kinrede. MS. Ch. has it, a feer.
Affyched: Affected. Test. L. 2.
Again, Againe: Against.
Against: Instead of. Mo. 2443, 2457.
Agast: To frighten, terrify. Tr. L. 2. 901. Afraid.
Agathrid: Gathered. Mo. 3265.
Agé, Ageynes, Ageyns: Against; Again.
Ageyne: Against.
Aghast: See Agast.
Agilt, Bal. 74. Perhaps it should be read a gilir, or A Guilor, as in MR. 1213. or as it is often in PP. A Gylor, i. e. A deceiver.
Agilt, Agille: To offend; Offended. WB. 392. RR. 5833.
Ago. Sq. 1280. Agone. Tr. L. 4. 1180. Gone; Past.
Agramed: Grieved, displeased. Mo. 2283. See Grame.
Agre, Agrein: To please, content; To be pleased. Fr. Agreeer. Also, In good part, kindly. RR. 4349. Fr. A gré. See Gre.
If harme agre me, whereto plaine I thenne? Tr. L. 1. 410.
If my Misfortune please me, to what purpose do I then complain? If this Reading of Chaucer be genuine, he seems to have read the passage differently from what it is in the Printed Editions of Petrarch, from whom this Song of Troilus is translated. The Passage is this,
S'a mia voglia ardo; ond' è 'l pianto e'l lamento?
S'a mal mio grado; il lamentar che vale?
If I burn with my good will, whence this complaining and lamenting? If against my will what avails it to lament? Here is a plain opposition between a mia voglia, with my good will (or, as Chaucer translates it very significantly, at my own lust) and a mal mio grado, Against my will; which is quite lost in the present Reading. It is therefore probable that the place is corrupted, which may be thus restored;
*And if that at mine owne lust I brenne;
 From whence comith my wailing and my pleinte?*
If that maugre me, whereto plaine I thenne?
 This Conjecture is rendred probable by another Reading of this place which appears in the first Editions of this Poem by Caxton and Pynson;
If harme angre me—It will at first sight appear to any one ever so little conversant with MSS. considering the Ignorance of Transcribers and Similitude of Letters (particularly r and t, n and u.) how easily that maugre might be corrupted into harm angre. The last word angre coming in proceffe of time to be writ agre, the neglect or omission of the Dash introduced the present Reading. There is another Reading of Petrarch, which may favour that of Chaucer, If harme agre me—S'a mal mio grido—But the other seems preferable, as being more natural.
Agreabilitie: Easiness of temper, Equanimity. Boeth.
Agredge, Agrege: To aggravate. p. 208, b. 210, b.
Agrese: Unkindly. Take it nat agrese; Take it not ill. Tr. L. 3. 864.
Agreve: To grieve. LW. 345. RR. 4629. To provoke, exasperate; Exacerbate. Boeth.
Agrimony: A Plant very useful in Obstructions of the Liver, Spleen, &c. and of a healing nature, being outwardly applyed.
Agriſe: To affright; To fear, to be terrified. Mo. 2300; 2781,

2781, 2901. Tr. L. 2. 1435. To look horrible; Inhor-rescere. Boeth. AS. Aguiran, Horrere. Agrosc: Was frighted, startled. Th. 125. Tr. L. 2. 930. Was grie-
ved. Pb. 87.
Agratid: Surfeited. Phyl. 61.
Agruche: To grudge. Agruched mache of this matere; Resented this matter very much. p. 148, a.
Aguiler: A needle-case. RR. 98. Fr. Aiguillier.
Aie: An Egg. Mo. 2802.
Aien: Again. Tr. L. 3. 720.
Aju? To adjust, apply; Admovere. Boeth. p. 367, b.
Akehorn: Acorns. p. 364, b.
Aknone: Known. CL. 1199. To be aknone; To be conscious. I am aknone; I confess. Boeth.
Al, All, Alle: Although; Altogether, quite. CL. 252.
Al and some: One and all, every one. Al in one: All one, all the same. Ch. Dr. 670. The whole of the matter. Fr. 3160. Al new: Anew. No. 2836. All ones:
All one. lb. 2212. Al astance.
PT. 361. In all: Wholly, altogether.
In alle wise: By all means. No. 2769. In Tr. L. 3. 334.
instead of all thy daies, MS. Sp. and Ca. have at thy day;
On the day appointed. See lb. 193, 194, 195, and 341.
In No. 1509. MS. Ch. reads a lither jape, instead of all the jape. Alle seems to be mistaken for alle, PT. 14.
See Hope.
Alandes: Greyhounds. Prol. 2150.
Alargid: Bestowed. Ch. Dr. 156.
Albe, or Al be: Albeit, although.
Albification: A Term in Chymistry for whitening of Liquor or Metal. No. 826.
Alcaly, No. 831. is a Chymical Term used in opposition to Acid; And all substances that raise a Fermentation
when mixt with Acids, are called Alkalions.
Alchamifer: A Chymist, Alchymist.
Alder, Aldir, Alhir: Of all. At our alder cost; At our common expence. Prol. 801. Aldir prise; The praise of all. LW. 298. Alhir last; Last of all. Bl. Kn. 504.
Sometimes they are joyned to the following Superlative; as, Aldirlevist; The dearest of all. Tr. L. 3. 240.
In Tr. L. 3. 1271. instead of most away, read (as it is in MS. Sp.) Alhirmost; Most of all.
Adrian: A Star in the Neck of the Lyon. Sp. It is called Alderan.
Aledge, Alege: To diminish, lessen, abate, allay, alleviate; To ease, relieve. CN. 306. To exempt, excuse.
RR. 6626.
Alegeance, Alegement, Aleggement: Ease, relief; Ceasing; Diminution; Abatement; Release.
Aleide: Layd or Led, i. e. Brought about. CL. 1005.
From the AS. Alæban, Ducere.
Aleis: Aloes. RR. 1377.
Alembekis: Limbeckes, Stills. No. 815.
Alessandre, Alisaunder, Alisaundrie: Alexandria, a City of Egypt.
Alestake: A Maypole. Sp. f. A Sign-Post before an Ale-house. In No. 1835. it is called an Ale-house stake.
See Sk.
Algate, Algates, Algate: Always, every way; by all means. Algate by sight or apert violence; Whether by fraud or open force. Fr. 167. Although, nevertheless.
Algezir, Prol. 57. A City of Spain, supposed by some to be Gibraltar.
Alie, Aliance. See Allie, Alliance.
Alisaunder: Alexander. See Alessandre.
Alite for a lite: A little. CL. 1043.
All, Alle: See Al.
Allective: Alluring, enticing. RL. 14.
Allegance, Allegiance: See Alegeance.
Aley: An Alley, a Walk. Fr. Allée.
Alight: To condescend. Fr. 1930.
Allie: To marry. No. 303. To make an Alliance. Also,
Allied, having Friends or Allies. Mo. 555. Alliance:
Friendship. RR. 4964. For our alliance; To be related to us. ABC. H.
Almagest: A Work of Astronomy written by Ptolemy. Sp.
Almandris: Almond-Trees. RR. 1363.
Almesse, Almessis, Almofo, Almous: Almshouses.
Almofo: Almoft.
Almight: Almighty. Hen. 362.
Almoigner: An Almoner.
Alnath: The first Star in the Horns of Aries, whence the first Mansion of the Moon takes its Name. Sp.

Alggit: Lodged. PT. 374.
Alonde: Upon land. Alonde for to sette; To land, to put to shore. Ar. 281.
Alonely: Only, solely. Boeth.
Alonge: On him alonge; Long of him, for his sake, on his account. Tr. L. 3. 784.
Alofe: To praise, commend. Alofid, RR. 2354. Praised.
Alonh, Sq. 696. is interpreted To praise: It seems rather to be two words, Alon the (as it is in MS. Ch.') contracted in pronunciation to Rhime to Towthe; of which many Instances occur in this Author; as By me, No.
1226. Bel. 1115, &c. (for By me) to answer to Time;
and Tr. L. 2. 991. to Prime; To th (for To the) No. 684.
rhymes to Soth; Fro'y (for Fro you) Tr. L. 1. 5. to Jo.
So in Gower. L. 3. Tome is put for To me;
To speke a goodly word tome
For all the gold that is in Rome.
Or perhaps it may be read to me distinctly, and then Rome must be pronounced Ro--mé, to answer it. See Sone. This Passage in Chaucer should be thus read,
— consideryng thy yowthe,
So feelingly thou spekest, I alon' The
As to my dome—
That is, Thou speakest so sensibly, that I allow thee, in my judgment, there is none, &c.
Alone: To allow, approve; To make allowance for,
excuse, pardon. For my writing me alone, Mo. 3309.
is the same with, Of my writing have me excused, lb. 3296.
It also signifies Low, down. CL. 1201.
Alpes, RR. 658. Bulfinches. See Ray and Will. of Birds.
Als, Alse, Alswa: And, also.
Also: As. Also sikir as; As sure as. Mo. 1278.
Alterac: Altered, changed. Cr. 227.
Alteracion: Strife, contention, brawling, debate, dispute. RL. 132.
Althir: See Alder.
Altitude is often put for Latitude in Astr.
Alye: See Allie.
Amaid, Ch. Dr. 202. Amayide, Ber. 2645. Amazed, sur-prized.
Amalstrie, Amalstrien: To master, get the better of.
Amalgaming: A Chymical Term signifying the mixing of Quicksilver with some melted Metal. No. 792.
Amased: Dark, confused. See Amaid.
Amate: Daunted, confounded; Distressed. See Mate.
Amayide: See Amaid.
Ambolise, Embolise, Embolyse: Oblique. p. 445, a. l. antep.
And perhaps Embolise, p. 442, a. l. 25. should be so read; as most of the Old Editions have it in that place.
Amende: To recover, cure. PIV. 70.
Amendis: Amendments. In Mo. 3031. it may be read a- mendin; The common Editions having the Verse thus,
With strength to amend such be made,
i. e. Such must be made to mend, or reformed, by force.
Amensuse: To diminish. Fr. Amensuser, To mince, make small or thin.
Amercid: Fined. Amerciements: Fines.
Amerous, Bal. Lad. 230. Amirous, RR. 2901. Amorous.
Ameved: Moved; Changed.
Anias: Perhaps for Amiens, A City of Picardy. RR. 3826.
Amidder, Amiddis: In the middle, in the midst of.
Amiled: Enamelled. RR. 1080.
Aminishe: To diminish.
Amindes for Amendes. Dr. Ch. 526.
Amirous. See Amerous.
Amis: To miss, fail. Fr. 2852.
Amoneied: Admonished. p. 201, b. But perhaps it should be read Amonessid, as in MS. Ch.
Among, RR. 2842. See Emong. Evre among; Oftentimes, every now and then. RR. 3771, 3381. Dr. Co. 295.
Amonishe: To admonish, advise. Amonition: Admonition.
Amoretes: Love-Stories. RR. 892, 4755.
Amorily: Amorously. CL. 1383.
Amorrew: In the morning. Tr. L. 2. 405.
Amorised: Dead; Killed; Mortified.
Amored: Moved. p. 364, a.
Amphibologies: Forms of speaking, wherein one Sentence hath contrary senses. Sp. Ambiguity. Tr. L. 4. 1406.
Amysid:

Amirid: Taken out of the mire, helped at a dead lift. Ber. 2072.
Amys afe: Ambes Acc. Ber. 2220.
An: If, if so be. FL. 528. On. RR. 2270. Ber. 2438.
Anaie, No. 883. Read A! Naie: Ah! Nay.
Anane: Anon, presently, very soon.
Ancille: A handmaid. ABC. Lat. Ancilla.
Ancre: An Anchor. RR. 3780.
And for On. Fort. 74. It occurs often for If; but then it should perhaps have been An; as, Fr. 3025. No. 155, 279, &c. p. 485, b. l. 29. FL. 528. PT. 614. But and; But if. No. 1267.
Anenst: Against. PT. 442.
Angir: Anger; Anguish; Smart, pain. RR. 1926, 3185. CB. Angerdd. Angirliche: Angrily. Mo. 2586. Rathly.
Anguis, p. 502, b. Anguishous: Full of anguish and pain, or trouble. RR. 1755. Anxious.
Anguish: Anxiety. p. 375, a. Narrowness of Fortune; Angustia. Boeth.
Anie: Nigh, near.
Anight: In the night-time. Hyp. 108.
Anker: An Anchor. Fort. 38.
Anlas, Prol. 359. or rather Anlace: Anelacius, Anelatus, Hanelacius; often mentioned in Mat. Paris. sometimes as synonymous with Sica, a short sword or dagger; and sometimes as a distinct weapon from it: It was worn hanging at a girdle. Wals in his Gloss. thinks it was something like the Irish Skein, or our Wood-Knife.
Annexid: Tied, bound to. RR. 4811.
Anny, Annoie, for Annoie: Uneasiness, concern, vexation, trouble; Harm. Also, To hurt, to damage, to be troublesome; To be vexed; Pigere. Boeth. Annoied of his own life; Weary of his life. p. 204, b. Fr. Ennuy, Ennuyer, Ennuyé.
Annoius: Hurtful, troublesome, difficult.
Annuelle: Secular, one that receives a yearly stipend. No. 1033.
Annunciate: Foretold. Mo. 127.
Anointen with worde: To flatter. RR. 1057.
Anowe: Now. Ber. 1792.
Anoynt: Anointed. Hen. 274.
Anem: An Anthem. No. 3169.
Antilegius, Dr. Ch. 1064. Antiochus, the Son of Nessus and Eurylice, killed in the Trojan War.
Antiphonere: A Book of Antiphones, or Anthems sung alternately in Choirs. No. 3028.
Anvelt: An Anvil. Dr. Ch. 1165.
Anye: See Anie.
Apaide: Payd, satisfied; Content. Tr. L. 5. 1248. Ill apaide; Dissatisfied. Sp. 1081.
Apaire: To impair, hurt; To injure, abuse; To be hurt, to suffer, to fare worse. Tr. L. 2. 339.
Aparaille, Aparailin, Aparayle: To prepare, adorn. Aparailing: Preparation. Fr. Appareil, Preparation, provision, furniture.
Aparences: Appearances.
Apassed, Apass: Passed, past.
Ape is used for a Fool. MR. 281. Put on his head an ape; Made a Fool of him, imposed upon him. No. 1510.
Apeche: To impeach, accuse. Bal. 277.
Apeide. See Apaide.
Apeire. See Apaire.
Apeise: To appease. BD. 393.
Apende: To appertain, belong. Mo. 2606.
Apere: To appear. See Apaire.
A per se. See A.
Apert: Open; Openly. Privy and apert; In private and in publick. WB. 1114. Apart. Al ne're he in al aperte; Tr. L. 3. 87. is better read in MS. Sp. Allnere he Malapert, i. e. Although he were not malapert or over-forward. Aperily: Openly, plainly.
Apered: An appetite. Test. p. 505, b.
Aperitith: Coveteth, desireth. Hyp. 215.
Apies: Opiates. Hyper. 109.
Aplace: In place, i. e. In esteem, honour, respect. Hen. 50.
Aplide: Applied. BD. 413.
Apocalipse, Apocalyps: The Revelation of St. John.
Apoinet: To appoint; To resolve, determine. Tr. L. 2. 621. Apoinetidin: Appointed. Ib. L. 3. 455.
Apose, Aposin: To examine, to ask questions. No. 374. See Apose.

Apostata: An Apostate. Apostates: Apostates. I. Upl. Appaire. See Apaire.
Appallid: Grown pale, pined away, decayed.
Apparail, Apparelling. See Aparaille.
Apparaunce, Apparence: Appearance.
Apparelmens: Ornaments. Boeth.
Apparene, Ber. 2040. f. for Apparence; i. e. Shewing Appearances or Sights by Juggling, &c.
Appaire. See Apaire.
Apperceiving: Perceiving.
Appert. See Apert.
Appertinaunt, Appertinent: Appertaining, belonging.
Appointid: Resolved. Appointid him in one; Fixed upon one. Sq. 1111.
Apose, Aposin: To oppose or object against. Fr. 333. See Apose.
Apprise for Emprise: An Enterprize, a Trial.
Appropried, Appropried: Appropriated.
Approve: To prove. CL. 96. Approvis: Informers. Fr. 79.
Apprentise: An Apprentice; A novice. RR. 687.
Apresse: In a presse or crowd, together. Fort. 52.
Aprise, as Apprise. In BD. 577. it should perhaps be read a prese. I have made a prese; I have given proof.
Appropir: To appropriate. RL. 284.
Apies, p. 519, a. A Contraction of Aptitudes, says Sk. It seems rather to be a Corruption of Apetites, which follows a few lines after.
Aqueintable: Easy to be acquainted with, easy of access, affable, complaisant. RR. 2213. It is expressed by Gode of aqueintance, Ib. 3892.
Aqueinte: To acquaint, to make acquaintance with. Dr. Ch. 532. Acquainted. RR. 3080, 5200.
Aquilone: Aquilo, the North Wind.
Aquite: To acquit, quit; To requite, recompense. RR. 6742.
Ar, Are. Test.
Arace: To tear, pluck off, pull down, draw out by force; Abripere. Boeth. Fr. Arracher.
Araied: Drest. Fr. 2076. Furnished. Ib. 2743. See Aray.
Araised: Raised. Ch. Dr. 1136.
Aray, Araye: To prepare. Fr. 1982. To set in order. Ib. 2001. Preparation. Ib. 1305. Clothing, raiment, habit. WB. 927. Case, condition. Ib. 902. Mo. 509. Order. Fr. 1292. Pomp, shew, splendor. Ib. 1966. Baggage. No. 578. See Aray.
Arbitre, Arbitree, Arbitrement: Choice, free-will. Boeth. See Ib. p. 398, a. l. 7.
Arblast, PT. 241. A Sling, a warlike Engine to cast or shoot stones or darts withall. See Men. Fr. in Arblast.
Arblastis: Engineers, such as use Arblasts. RR. 4196.
Archangel, RR. 915. The Herb so called, a dead nettle.
Archdiacre: An Archdeacon. Ch. Dr. 2136. Fr. Archidiacre.
Arche, Bal. Lad. 127. An Ark, in allusion to Noah's Ark.
Archibishop: An Archbishop. Fr. 239.
Archidekin: An Archdeacon. In Fr. 54. read Archidekeni's. H. 1. bath Erchedekenys; all the old Edd. Archedekynis or Archedekinis.
Archwivis (or, as in MS. Ch. Archer wyvis) Fr. 2228. seems, by being opposed to Feble wivis, to mean Strong, lusty Termagants, Virago's. See WB. 225, &c.
Ardaunt: Ardent, hot. Boeth.
Areche: To speak; from the AS. Aneccan, Asequi; Nar-rare. Unneth might he areche O word; He could scarce get out or speak one word. Ber. 3000.
Ared, PT. 152. for Ared, Guessed; from Arede. See Rede.
Aredy, for Al redy, or Ready. PT. 659.
Average: Arrcar. Prol. 604.
Arere: Backward; Behind; After. Fr. Arriere. I set arere; I postpone, set light by. Cr. 355. Arere sopor; After Supper. PT. 365.
Arerid: Reared, raised. Ber. 3030.
Arefoneth: Reasoneth, discourseth, talketh with; Answereth. RR. 6220.
Arrest, Arreste: To stop; To seize upon. Fr. Arrester. Also a Seizure; Respite, delay; Confinement; A Charge, engagement; A Judicial Sentence or Decree. Fr. Arrest. To ben arrest, LW. 397. To forbear, or refrain from doing a thing beneath him. Fr. S'arrester.

Arrest:

Areit: To impute unto, accuse, charge one with; To account. Areit, Areitid: Imputed.

Areyse: To raise. p. 201, 4.

Argill: Clay. Sk. Potter's earth. No. 834. Clay used by Chymists for Luting or closing their Vessels, to prevent the Evaporation of their Contents.

Argumentid: Argued, reasoned. Tr. L. 1. 378. But Ca. reads it, Thus argued he in his begynnyng.

Arid: Plowed. Fa. L. 1. 485.

Ariete: Aries, one of the twelve Signs of the Zodiack. Tr. L. 5. 1189.

Arist: Arose.

Arite: Tr. L. 4. 1592. for Ariete, V.

Arivale: Arrival. Bl. Kn. 485.

Arived: Driven to land. Boeth. Also, Riven, split asunder. Evill arived mate thei be; A Curie, May they be split asunder. RR. 1068. See Rive.

Ark: An arch, compass. Ark diurnal; The arch which the Sun makes in it's daily course. Bl. Kn. 591.

Armelesse: Without an arm. Mo. 317.

Armen: An Armenian.

Armgrete: Very great or large; f. As thick as a man's arm. Pro. 2147.

Armine: Ermine, A furr. AL. 527.

Armipotent: Powerful or mighty in Arms. Pro. 1984.

Armitage: A Hermitage. Ch. Dr. 930.

Armonie: Harmony. RR. 4247.

Armorike Britaine. Ff. 2275. Basse-Bretagne in France, anciently called Britannia Armorica; called Britaine. Ib. 2538.

Armes: Arms; Armour.

Arne: Arc. Vide Hick. Gr. AS. p. 35.

Aron: To assemble together. La. 541.

Arowe: In a rowe, successively, one after another. IVR. 1254. RR. 7606. An arrow. Ib. 963.

Arowme: Roaming, wandering. Fa. L. 2. 32. See Romin.

Arpies: Harpies, Furies, RL. 81.

Arraie, Array: Furniture. Sp. See Aray.

Arreste. See Arest.

Arrete, Arrette. See Arest.

Arismetrike: Arithmetick. Fr. 958.

Arst: Erst, before, formerly.

Arte, Artin: To force, constrain. Tr. L. 1. 389. CL. 46. the word is so used in Lidgate's Life of St. Edmynd. MS. Harl. Fol. 59. where the Saint is introduced speaking to Hingiar,

*It passeth thy myht and pomptous violence
In cristes feith to arte my conscience.*

That is, It passeth your power, &c. to force my Conscience in any thing relating to the Christian Faith.

Aryn: Brazen. PT. 569. from the AS. Ape, Brais, copper.

Ascape: Escape. RR. 6515.

Ascaunce, Ascauncis: Askew, aside, sideways; In a side view.

Ascendant, is that part of the Heavens which ascends above the Horizon in the East. See Horoscope.

Astakid for Astakid, Ber. 494. See Astake.

Aseruid: Deserved. Ber. 1637.

Ashate: Buying, dealing. Pro. 573. Acate, MS. Ch. from the Fr. Achat, Acheter; whence Catour, Caterer, Fr. Acheteur, A buyer, anciently written Acatour. Gl. Lob.

Ashin: Ashes. Tr. L. 2. 539.

Askape: Escape. p. 201, a.

Askawncis. See Ascaunce.

Askeis for Askin: To ask. Mo. 2883. Or perhaps for atke us. So Com.

Askid: Required. BD. 356.

Askis: Ashes. Mo. 2883.

Astake: To slacken, abate. Astakid was his mode; His anger was appeased. Pro. 1762.

Astide: To slide; To depart, pass away. Fr. 2548.

Aslope: Awry, cross; Wrong; Sloping with a byass, not going directly to the mark. RR. 4464. Contrary to expectation.

Afondry: Asunder.

Afontid: Befotted. BD. 682.

Asperance: Hope. CL. 1033. Fr. Esperance.

Aspie, Aspien, Aspyin: To spy, see; to find out by diligent search and enquiry. No. 3010.

Aspis: Asps, or Aspin-trees. Hyper. 87. A sort of Poplar.

Aspre: Rough, sharp, harsh; Angry, ill-natured. Aspreness; Roughness, &c.

Asquare, PT. 596, 643. On the square, clear; On his guard, at a distance.

Assaic: To try, tempt; Trial, experience; Endeavour.

Assaies, Assays: Essays, trials.

Assant: An assault. RR. 7338.

Assc, Mo. 686. This was printed by mistake out of MS. Ch. it being only intended as a different reading. All the old Editions, and some MS. give the common reading, which is this;

Thy sice fortune hath turned into an ace.

Asscious: Ascension, ascending. Asscious: Ascended.

Assent: Consent; Combination; Judgment; Sentence.

Assentant: Consenting.

Assib: Assent. Sp. RR. 5600. f. To answer; from the AS. Ape-dian, Assimare.

Assige: A Siege. Tr. L. 1. 465.

Assine, Assyne: To assign, appoint.

Assise, Assize: Order; size. Sk. Place, size, situation. RR. 1238. Mo. 2783. Assised: Sure. Sp. Confirmed.

Boeth. Settled. Hen. 236.

Assuile, Assuilein, Assuile: To absolve; To answer, resolve. Assuiling: Absolution.

Assomoned: Summoned. CL. 170.

Assure: To confirm, establish; To confide in. Tr. L. 1. 681. Assurance. An. 334. Assuren, Assurid: Assured.

Assured: Azure, sky-colour'd.

Assure. See Asserie.

Assure: Estate.

Assure. See Al.

Asserlagour, or (as in MS. Ch.) Asserlabore: An Astro-labe. MR. 101.

Assert, Asserte: To escape; To let go, or pass; To leap, To shun; Also, Escaped. In Pro. 1707. it should be two words, At a sert; At a start, on a sudden.

Assined, Assined: Astonished, in a consternation.

Astrangled: Strangled.

Astrolabe: A Mathematical Instrument, serving to take the height of the Sun or Stars. See Harris's Lex. Techn.

Astrologens: Astrologers.

Assrynd betwene hope and fere: Distracted between hope and fear. Ber. 2429.

Assure. See Assured.

Assure: Aware. PT. 586.

Assured: Amazed, confounded, as in a dream. Fa. L. 2. 41. See Sweven.

Assuith, Assuith: Presently; Greatly, exceedingly. AS. Spide.

Assuorn, Assuorn: In a swoon. Sp. 494.

Assuorn. See Assuorn.

Assuorn: To taste. Test. L. 3.

Assuere: To achieve, obtain. Tr. L. 4. 79. MS. Sp. reads the Verse thus;

The town is bent, and all your lust shall cheer;

That is, All your desire shall succeed. See Assuere.

At day; At break of day. No. 2717.

Atemper: Moderate, modest. Atemper stylneß, Boeth. Atesta taciturnitas.

Atenes: At once, altogether. MR. 966.

Ateynt: Attainted; Calt in Law. Ber. 2673, 2852, 2 18. See Attainte, Attainte.

Atinkin me: Seem to me; as Atethinks, Atethought.

The whiche right fore wouldin atinkin me,

Tr. L. 5. 878. Which I should be very sorry to think; Or, Which would be very disagreeable to me; Perhaps, from the AS. Dangerian or Dancian, Gratiscian.

At this halfe. See Halfe.

Atire: Asunder; Into three parts. Pro. 2935.

Atroted: Strangled, choaked. p. 496, a.

Atire, Tr. L. 1. 181. for Atire, V.

Aone, Aoon: Being at one, agreed. Also, Tunc. CCr. 125.

Aones, as Aienes.

Attaine: To effect. Fr. 2320. Attained is printed wrong for Attained, Ch. Dr. 596.

Attaint: Afflicted, indisposed, disordered; from the Tr. Attaint. See Attaint.

Attamed, Atamel: Set on broach. Sp. In Mo. 931. (where H. 1. reads it tamed) it seems to signify Begun; from the Fr. Entamer, which also signifies To cut, to have the first cut. Also, To disparage. Ch. Dr. 1128. It is printed wrong attained. Ib. 526.

Atte: At, and sometimes At the; as, Atticfull, MR. 1197. Atte the full, MS. Ch.

Attainte: Attained; Perceived, understood. Boeth. See Acynt, A'tainte.

Attemper: To moderate. See Atemper.

Attemperate: Moderate, temperate. p. 209, b.

Attemperaunce: Temperance. Pars. p. 207, a. AL. 508.

Attempre: Tempered. See Atemper. In Ch. p. 147, b. some read Attempre wepyng, instead of A temperate wepyng.

Attemprid: Temperate; Calm. Ch. Dr. 1100.

Attendaunce: Attention. BD. 650.

Attentife: Diligent, ready to attend, observant. Sq. 804.

Atterly, p. 201. b. Grievous, heinous, terrible. AS. Atceplic from Acep, Poyson.

Attire: Clothing, drefs. Simple of attire. Tr. L. 1. 181. Dressed plain; Simplex munditijs. Hor. But the plainness of Creseide's Drefs being described before, the reading of MS. Sp. seems better; Simple of Berynge, i. e. Of an easy carriage, or behaviour, which is expressed by Simple of Port. in Gower, L. 4. f. 69, b. c. 1.

Atwain, Atwinn, Atwinne: In two; Afunder. Went a-twinne; Parted from one another. No. 1191. See Twinne.

Atwene: Between.

Atwinn. See Atwain, and Twinne.

Atwite: To twit, upbraid, reproach. Bal. 1068.

Atwixte: Betwixt.

Atwo, Atoo: In two, afunder. Read atwo, p. 208, b. 1. 43.

Atryd: Dressed. AL. 81.

Availe: To descend. Sk. To fall down. Tr. L. 3. 627. (Canale. Ca.) To sink. p. 394, b. To bring down. Alfo, Profit, advantage. CL. 1253. Value. Of esyer a-vaile; Of less value. Ib. 116.

Availen. See Availe.

Availin: To unveil, uncover. MR. 14.

Avale: To send or let down. RR. 1803. See Availe.

Avaricious: Covetous.

Avauce: Advancement, power. Mo. 2155. Profit. Prol. 246. To advance, prefer. Tr. L. 5. 1434.

Avauit: To bragg or boast; Improved. RR. 4790. Forward. Ib. 3958. Before. No. 2808. Also, Vaunting, bragging, boasting.

Avauitage: To profit. Experience Avauntageth him; Is usefull, profitable to him. Prol. RL. 95.

Avauntir, Avauntir, Avauntour: A vain boaster, a Braggadocio. Tr. L. 3. 309, 310. But perhaps it should be two words, A vauntour.

Auelkour: An Author.

Audience: Hearing.

Avenaunte: Agreeable, beautiful, comely, decent. RR. 1263. Fr. Avenant.

Aventaille, Tr. L. 5. 1557. The forepart of the Armour. Sk. A Surcoat worn over the Armour. Kyn. Ventail is used by Spenser for that part of the Helmet which is lifted up. See the Glossary to his Works.

Aventrous: Adventurous, bold.

Aventure: Adventure; Chance, accident; Fortune.

Aventurous. See Happes.

Aver: Riches, bribery. Sk. Goods, chattels, possessions.

Averel: The Month April. I should chuse to read Averel or Apparaille (as MS. Sp. hath it for Aprilis, Tr. L. 1. 156.) in the first Verse of the Prologues; thus, Whanne Averel, or,

Whanne Apparaille had with his shouris sote
The drought of March ypercid to the rote.

Aught: Ought, from Owe. Tr. L. 3. 1801. Any thing. For aught; Notwithstanding all. Aught-where; Any where. Hyp. 173.

Augrim seems to be a Corruption of Algorithm; by which is meant the Sum of the Principal Rules of Numeral Computation or Common Arithmetick. Augrim Stones, MR. 102. Pebbles to cast accounts. Sp. Nombrs of Augrim; Arithmetical Numbers, p. 440, b.

Avise: To consider. FL. 187. To observe. Tr. L. 2. 276.

Also, Advice, opinion; Deliberation, thought. In Prol. 1987. it should be two words, A vise, or as MS. Ch. a veze, i. e. A voice or noise. Avise of words; Deliberate in speaking. Hyp. 154. Avised: Lookt after, taken care of. p. 153, a. Avisee: Well advised, considerate. Fl. 215. Avisement, Aviseness: Counsel, consideration, deliberation. Aviseend, Avising: Considering. Aviseh, or Avise you: Consider, be advised. Full avised: Well considered, well advised. Tr. L. 2. 605.

Avision: A vision. Avisions: Visions. Tr. L. 5. 374.

Aulter: An Altar.

Aumere: A border; Fringe. RR. 2271.

Aumener, RR. 2087. A store-house, a store-room, or more generally any place to lay up things in; as, a Cupboard, &c. In Lat. Almarium, corruptly for Almarium; In some places it is called Aumbry, or Aumery. Ray's Coll. PP. useth Almarie in the same sense, Past. 14.

Avarice hath almaries and iron-bounden cofers.

Auncetirs: Ancestors. Prol. 143. Auncitre: Ancestry. WB. 1156. Fr. Ancêtres.

Auntrith: Ventureth, runneth a risk. MR. 1097.

Avoid, p. 480, b. for Void, V.

Avontir: An Adulterer. Avontirers: Adulterers.

Avow: A vow, a promise; To vow; To profess; To espouse a cause. Hen. 243. Avowable form; An allowed form or manner, that may be avowed, or publicly owned, as being lawful. RL. 262.

Avowries: Religious Professions. J. Upl. p. 593, a.

Austrine, Cr. 154. Perhaps it should be read, with a sterne [or, austere] loke and chere. Asterne is used by Douglas, for Aultere.

Autentike: Authentick, of good authority.

Auriate: Golden; Gilt.

Aurore: Aurora, the dawn, or the morning.

Auer, p. 208, b. An Author; Also, An altar, in old Fr. Aulter. Gl. Lob.

Autremite, Mo. 486. Another attire. Sk.

Awaite: To wait, expect; To watch, observe. Also, Lying in wait; Observation, watching; Caution, circumspexion. Tr. L. 3. 458. Delay. Ib. 580. Observation. Bl. Kn. 409. Have her in awaite; Have a watchful eye upon her. Mo. 750. Sitteth in awaite; Sitteth, or lieth in waite. Fr. 393. Instead of, without awaite, Tr. L. 3. 580. Ca. hath, without naying, i. e. naying, saying nay. Awaiting on; Observing. Fr. 788. Awaiteth for Awaiteth.

Awaiwarde: Aside. Mo. 1839. Awaiwarde I me drowe; I withdrew aside. BD. 89.

Award: To determine, give judgment.

Awaytour: One that lieth in waite. Boeth. See Awaite.

Awedded: Have wedded. p. 485, a.

Aweynyd: Weaned. Ber. 512.

Awhaped, Awhapid: Astonished, amazed, daunted. Tr. L. 1. 316. Awhapid and amate; In great confusion and distress. Bl. Kn. 160.

Awreke, Awrekin: To revenge. Also, Revenged. AS. Ppican, appican, Uleisci.

Axed, Axid, Axit: Asked. Axist: Askest. Axith: Asketh.

Axen, Axes, Axeffe, Axis: A Fever. See Accesse.

Ay: An Egg. Gam. 1207. Ever, always. Ay in one: Continually. No. 3089.

Aye: Again. Ber. 641. It should have been printed, Ayé.

Ayel, Prol. 2478. Always, ever. Sk. Sp. Saturn there speaks to Venus;

I am thine ayel, redy at thy will.

Perhaps Ayel may there signify Ancestor, Progenitor, Fr. Ayenl. MS. Ch. hath it thus;

I am thyin redy all at thy wille.

H. 1. & al. thyin all [or al] redy. From these Readings compared together, we may guess at another, which perhaps is the right;

I am thyn ay, al redy at thy wille.

Ayen, Ayenist, Ayenste: Against; Instead of. Mo. 2444, &c.

Ayenward: Back. Tr. L. 3. 751. p. 441, b. On the other side. BD. 18.

B.

- Bachelrie: A company of young men or Batchelors. Fr. 1300.
Backhalfe: The back-side, the back-part.
Backir more: More backwards. BD. 85.
Baft, Ber. 1687. Abast or Ast; A Sea-Term, signifying those parts which are towards the Stern of the Ship. AS.
Be-aptan, baytan, Behind, after.
Bagge: To swell; To disdain. Sk. Baggish soule and lo-kith faire, Dr. Ch. 624. She swells with pride and disdain, though she looks fair. Sk. Baggingly, RR. 292. Haughtily, disdainfully. Sk.
Baighted: Baited. Mo. 2588.
Baillie: A Governour; The Office or Jurisdiction of a Bailly or Governour; Government, management, care. RR. 4217, 4302, 7574. See Men. Fr. in Bailif.
Baine. See Bane.
Baiten: To feed; To bait. Tr. L. 1. 192. Baited: Taken by a bait. RR. 1612.
Balais of entaille, AL. 536 Precious stones engraved. Sp. Balay is a Bastard Ruby, so called from the place whence it is brought, said by some to be Balassia, a Kingdom on the Continent higher up than Pegn and Bengal; by others, the City Balafani. See Men. Fr. in Balay, and Men. It. in Balascio.
Balaunce: Doubt, suspense. To put in balaunce; To hazard, to put to an uncertainty; To waver, to entertain any doubt. Fr. Mettre en balance. Lay in balaunce; Lay a wager on my Master's side. No. 622.
Bale: Harm, misfortune; Trouble, sorrow. Balefull: Hurtfull, miserable, wofull. Balis: Troubles, &c.
Balies. See Balais, &c.
Balk: Mr. Ray in his Coll. says, that Balk is the same with Scamnum in Lat. i. e. a piece of Land which is either casually overslipped and not turned up in plowing, or industriously left untouched by the Plow for a Boundary between Lands, or some other use. Whence it is that Com. says, that the meaning of In Goddis worde tillesh (as he reads it according to some Editions) many a balke, is, They break up the limits and bounds that God hath set in his word to keep them in. Mo. 2428.
Balkes, MR. 518. Ph. 26. Poles layd over a Stable or other Building for the Roof. The Balk or Bawk; The Summer-Beam or Dorinant. Ray's Coll.
Ball: Ball within their hode; The Ball which their Hood covers. i. e. The head. Ber. 3126. Her that tournith as a balle, i. e. Fortune. Sc. 227.
Ballid: Bald. P. ol. 2520.
Balfaffe, PT. 153. A Quarter-Staff, a great Staff like a Pole or Beam. Ray's Coll.
Bande. See Bende.
Bandon: Scella, Sodalitium. Sk. It may secondarily signify a Band, Company or Retinue, RR. 1163. though primarily it signifies a Banner. Du Fresne gives several instances, where the old Fr. Poets use the word for Arbitrium, Will, pleasure; as à votre, à son bandon, At your, at his pleasure, which sense suits very well here; and thence it may signify, Custody, possession. p. 496, b. But a bandon, in RR. 3242. should be read abandon, in one word; and to give his gode in abandon is the same with Dare in abandonum, i. e. To deposit one's Goods or Estate as a Pledge to be forfeited in case of Non-performance of Promise or Agreement. Fr. Gl. in Abandonum. See also Men. Fr. in Abandonner, and Men. It. in Abbandonare. The Fr. Phrases, Mettre tout à l'abandon, To put all things in disorder; Laisser tout à l'abandon, To leave all at random, To forsake or neglect, may serve to give some light to this Passage.
Bane: Mischief, prejudice, destruction. AS. Buna.
Banir: A Banner. An. 30.
Baraine, Barcin: Barren; Void, destitute.
Barbe: A mask, a vizard. Sk. Sp. It seems to be a Dress wore by Widdows, perhaps some Wimple or Muffler wrapt about the Chin. Tr. L. 2. 110. where Ca. hath Wympyl instead of Barbe.
Barbican: A Fortrefe, a Watch-Tower.

- Bargaret, FL. 348. Tripudium pastorium; A Dance used by Shepherds from the Fr. Berger, a Shepherd. Sk. It seems to signify a Song in praise of the Daizy, which in Fr. is Marguerite, or as it is called, Ab. 350. Marguerite, to which the word may allude. The Burden of the Song seems to have been, Si d'uce est la margarete; So sweet is the Daizy.
Barkfate: A Tanner's Vat for Bark. Bal. 901.
Barne: The bosome, the lap. Sq. 651. AS. Bayme: Hence Barne-cloth: An Apron.
Baronage: Barons; Nobility. La. 240.
Barr, in the North signifies the Gate of a City; as Rotham Bar. &c. in Tork. Ray's Coll. Heave the barr, al. Heve of barr, Pro. 552. Heave the Bar, or Lift the door off the hinges. According to H. 1. this Verse should be thus read;
Ther nas no dore that he nolde heve off barre.
There is an Expression not unlike this (but corrupted) in Lidgate's Life of St. Edmund, where speaking of Thieves breaking in to rob the Shrine, he says,
Oon with a leuour to leffe the dore on barre.
f. One with a Leaver lift the door off the Bar.
Barring. See Paling.
Basse, CL. 797. A kiss. Fr. Baiser. Lat. Basium. The Poet seems here to have in his eye a Distick in the First Elegy of Maximianus, commonly ascribed to Corn. Gallus;
Flammea dilexi, nudicumq; tumentia labra,
Que mihi gustanti balia plena darent.
Basclardis: Daggers. Mo. 2858.
Batailed: Embattled. RR. 4162.
Bataillous: Ready for battle or fighting. RL. 327.
Bath: Both. MR. 1083. Bathe, Mo. 1382. seems to be corrupted from Baske.
Battelled: Indented like Battlements. Mo. 973.
Bande: Bold, brave. RR. 5674.
Bauderie: Pumping. Tr. L. 3. 398.
Baudrick: Furniture. Sp. Sk. A Girdle, a Belt: Hence Spenser calls the Zodiack, The Bauldrick of the heavens.
Baudrie, or (as it is in the common Editions) Brandrie: Embroidery. See Sk. in Baudry.
Bandy: Filthy, nasty, slovenly. No. 646.
Bawfin buttokid, Bal 897. Having large brawny buttocks: Sk. Fromem albam in Virgil's Description of Priamus's horse, is by Douglas translated, Bawfand face. See Gl. V. Spenser in Mother Hubbard's Tale has ----- Stare on him with big looks bawfand; That is, (as the Glossary explains it) Extended as with wonder.
Bay window; f. A Bow-window. CL. 1058.
Bayard: A horse. No. 1434. Perhaps it properly signifies a Bay horse. See Men. Fr. in Bay.
Be: A Bee; By; Been. But he that weddled be, Fr. 2319. perhaps should be read, But that he weddled be, or as H. 1. But he had wedded be; Unless he be, or had been married. Let the sompneur be; Let the sompner alone, Do not mind him.
Beau semblant, Fr. Fair appearance. CL. 1085.
Beau sire, Fr. Fair Sir, or Good Sir. RR. 6053.
Bebledde: Bloody, stained with blood. Pro. 2204.
Bebloite: To blot, stain. Tr. L. 2. 1027.
Becke: To becken. No. 1910. Beckende: Beckoned. AL. 438. Beckid, Tr. L. 2. 1260. Ca. Beckened: Beckoned.
Beclappe: To bind; To entrapp. No. 9.
Bedde: Bad, commanded. Mo. 3159.
Bede: To bid; To offer. Sq. 1200. To ask: To pray. Bede up our bills; Present our Petitions. ABC. O. Beddis: Beads; Prayers. Her bedis bede; Said her prayers. RR. 7374.
Bedeweth: Wetteth. Boeth.
Bedolwin: Dug in; Buried.
Bedore: To caule to doat; To bewitch; To enamour. Hyp. 180.
Bedradde: Dreaded.
Bedreine: Drenched, wetted. CL. 577. Drowned.
Been, Tr. L. 2. 193. Beis, AF. 353. Bees.
Befall, Fr. 1289. Become, be fitting.
Befill: Befell, happened; Came. Sq. 1650. It is often used impersonally without f.
Beforene: Before.

Begone:

Beggare: A Beggar. CG. 67.
Begiled: Cast into Goal, imprisoned. No. 1783.
Beginnyng: A Principle. Boeth.
Begon, Begonne: Begun; Gone. It often signifies the State or Condition of a person or thing; as Well begon, WB. 606. In good humour, or plight; Fortunate. No begon; Overwhelmed with sorrow. Worse begon; In a worse condition. Tr. L. 5. 1327. With gold begon; Adorned with gold. RR. 943. See Faring.
Behated: Hated, odious. Boeth.
Behest: A promise. Sq. 718. Also, A command.
Behangid: Hanged, hung. KL. 207.
Behet: Promised. AL. 436.
Behete, Behote: To promise.
Behewe: Coloured. With gold behewe; Gilt. Fa. L. 3. 216.
Behight: To promise; Promised. Also, Called, named.
Behongit: Hung. Ber. 100.
Behove: Behoof, use, advantage. RR. 1090, 7584. Behovely, Behovily: Useful. Behovid nedis; Must needs. Ib. 1479.
Besapid: Tricked, deceived, imposed upon. No. 1406. Laughed at, made a jest of. Tr. L. 1. 532. See Jape.
Bele: To buy.
Bein: Be, are.
Bekid me about, Cr. 36. Warmed me. Kyn. Bekis, warms, Gl. V.
Beknowe: Made known.
Beknowe, Beknowin: To acknowledge, confess. p. 211. a. 376. a.
Belamy: Good Friend. No. 183.
Belchir, Belle chere: Good cheer, pleasant countenance. AL. 322. For belle chere; To make good cheer withal. No. 2917.
Beleve See Rileve.
Belvid: Left. Gans. 172.
Belive. See Ilive.
Belle, Fr. the Fem. of Bel, Beau: Fair. Tr. L. 2. 288.
Bellechose: Pretty thing. Pro pudendo muliebri usurpatur. Sk.
Belle lsaude: Well, or prettily said. Fa. L. 3. 707. See Sk.
Bellis clink: The Tinkling of Bells. Mo. 1980.
Bellish: Belloweth, roareth. Fa. L. 3. 715.
Bellous: Bellows.
Belmary, Prol. 57. Taken to be that Country in Barbary, called by Vassens, Benamarin. Sp. See Sk.
Bemis: Beams; Trumpets. RR. 7605. from the AS.
Bema, a Trumpet.
Ben: Be, been.
Benched: Made up with Seats or Benches. LW. 204.
Bend, Bende: A Band, a knot, a fillet; Any thing that bindeth. RR. 1079.
Bendes: Bonds; Burdens. Mo. 2477.
Bending, p. 198, a. See Paling.
Bene: A Bean; Be, been.
Benes: Bones. MR. 965.
Benebreide: Bread made of Beans.
Benigne, Beningne, Benynge: Kind, meek, gentle, courteous, favourable, gracious. Benignely: Kindly, &c.
Benignity: Kindness, favour.
Benimme: To take away. Benimmeih us the coulpe; Taketh the blame from us. Pars. AS. Benymman, Eripre, &c.
Benison, Fr. A blessing. Sq. 881.
Benomen, Benommen: Taken away. RR. 1509. Benommeth; Taketh away; Intercepteth. p. 203, b. See Benimme.
Bent, Prol. 1983. A Precipice; perhaps from the Fr. Pente, The Bending or Declivity of a Hill. The CB. Pant signifies a Valley, or Low place between two Risings. Browis bent; Arched Eyebrows. RR. 1217.
Benymyth: Depriveth, taketh away. p. 201, a. 203, b.
Benynge. See Benigne.
Beoce: Boethius, the Author of the Treatise De Consolatione Philosophie.
Bequath, Bequethe: Bequeathed.
Bequeste: Whatever is bequeathed, a Legacy. Gam. 128.
Ber: To bear. PT. 614.
Berained: Rained upon, wet with rain. Tr. L. 4. 1172.
Berd, Berde: The beard. In the berde, Tr. L. 4. 41. Full in the face. Make his berd, Ber. 436. Fr. Faire la barbe à quelqu'un; To impose upon, or abuse one. Berdus ymade, Fa. L. 2. 181, 183. Imposed upon.

Bere: A Bier. No. 3189. Tr. L. 2. 1638. A bear. Ib. L. 4. 1453. To bear or carry; To accuse. Boeth. Also, Bore or carried. RR. 7372. A Pillow-bear. Dr. Ch. 254. Instead of Bere the belle, Ib. L. 2. 1498. MS. Sp. and Ca. read — yf that thou conne Bere she wele to morrow, &c.
Berefe: To deprive, bereave.
Bering, Beryng: Behaviour.
Berin: To bear; To behave. Berin on, or in bonde, WB. 326, 232. To bear in hand, to make believe. Also, Bore, did bear. That berin life, WB. 997. Living, having life.
Beris: Bears. Mo. 375.
Berne: Barn, yell. No. 835.
Berne: A barn. MR. 150. Also, To bear, or carry. RR. 5617.
Berft: Burt. Ber. 270.
Besauite: A piece of Gold so called, because first coined at Byzantium, now Constantinople. Sk. Besauite wight, RR. 1106. The Weight of a Besauite. See Blo. in Bzantine.
Bescorned: Scoffed at, mocked, despised. Pars.
Bescratchin: To scratch. RR. 323.
Besegit: Besieged.
Beseie, Besey, Beseyn: To behold. Also, To be seen. Well beseie; Well-looking. RR. 821. Richily beseie; Rich to behold. In Tr. L. 1. 167. instead of, Full well beseyn, &c. Ca. hath, Full well arayed both meit and left.
Beseke: To beseech.
Besene: Well besene; Of a good appearance, well looking. See Beseie.
Beset: Spent, layd out, placed, disposed of. Fr. 688. Also, To place, lay out, &c. Bal. Lad. 148. Lithirly beset his while; Ill spent his time. MR. 191. Beset his witte; Set his wits at work. Beset his wordis and his werke; Ordered his words and actions well. Tr. L. 3. 472. So well her beset, Tr. L. 3. 1558. Disposed of her to well. Ill beset; Ill ordered. Mo. 2980.
Besey, Beseyn. See Beseie.
Bisbet: Shut up. RR. 4488. Tr. L. 3. 603.
Beshrewe, WB. 844, 845. I beshrewe me, I beshrew thy face; A Form of Exccration; Malum me fascinum corripit. Sk. See Shrewe. Beshrewed: Ill-natured, wicked, false; Accursed. RR. 7394.
Beshyne: To shine upon. Ber. 381.
Beside: By; By the side of. WB. 15. Near, hard by. Fr. 2126.
Besene: To trouble, to disturb. Boeth. L. 1. To busy one's self.
Besily: Officiously. Fr. 2597.
Besines, WB. 933. Officiousness; Care, endeavour. To don her besines; To take the utmost care. Fr. 1612.
Besmiteth: Smiteth; Murdereth. Test.
Besmottid: Smuttid, bedawbed. Prol. 76.
Best: A beast; A living creature. Lat. Animal, p. 365, a.
Bestis: Beasts. Tr. L. 3. 621. But I should prefer the reading in MS. Sp. To us best is the cause ywrye, i. e. It is best for us that the cause be hid.
Bestad, Bestadde, Bestede: Beset, surrounded; Oppressed, distressed. In nede bestad, RR. 5796. Oppressed with need. Hard bestad; Gam. 1338. Hard put to it. Foule bestad, or bestede, Mo. 2343. In a bad condition.
Bestiallicke: Beastly. Test.
Bestly: Belonging to a living creature. p. 493, a.
Bestwink: To labour.
Besy: Busie; Careful; Officious. Besy cure; Officious, very great care. Tr. L. 3. 1044.
Bet, Bette: Better.
Betake: To give up, deliver. MR. 642. To commit to. Fr. 1190.
Betaught: Recommended. RR. 4438.
Bete, Betin: To make. Sk. To prepare, make ready; from the AS. Betan. Bete nets, MR. 819. Make, or mend nets. Bete fire; To make a fire. Prol. 2255. No. 529. To amend, restore, repair; To heal, or cure. RR. 4441. from the AS. Betan, To abate. Tr. L. 1. 666. Also, Boor. Sk.
Beteche: To recommend. No. 3428.
Beter: A market beter at the full, MR. 828. f. One that fought in full, or open Market.
Beth: Both. Also, Be, are.

Beside:

x now commonly call'd Bocton blosn, or simply Bocton.

- Beide: To happen. What so beide; Let what will happen, or, as it is in Tr. L. 5. 796. Happin what happin may. Also, Happened. No. 3268. Beilde, Tr. L. 2. 55. Happened. Also, Succeeded. Fa. L. 2. 172.
- Betrappid: Intrapped, taken in a trap. Cup. 252.
- Betrassid, Betrassid, Betrassid: Deceived, betrayed. Be-trassit, Dougl. Virg.
- Bewrage, Be. 359. Drink; Any liquor that may be drunk. Fr. Bewraige; anciently writ Bewraige. Gl. Lob.
- Bewepe: To bewail, weep, lament. Tr. L. 1. 763. Bewepi: Mixt with tears. Magd. 553.
- Bewet: Wetted.
- Bewond: Imposed upon; Puzzled, embarrassed; from the AS. Bepyndan, Involvere, implicare, intricare.
- Bewraien, Bewraien, Bewray: To discover. Prol. 2233. Bewraynge, or Bewrayinge: Discovering. p. 150.
- Bewreke: To revenge; Revenged. WB. 809.
- Bewrie, Bewrien: To bewray, betray. RR. 3879. To hide, conceal. Tr. L. 2. 537.
- Bewte: Beauty.
- Bey, Beje: To buy. No. 648, 1315.
- Beyete: Begotten. Tr. L. 1. 978.
- Bialacoil, RR. 2984, &c. Kind reception, or, as it is lb. 5856. Fair Wellcomming; from the Fr. Bel accueil.
- Bibbid: Sucked up, drank.
- Bible: A Book. No. 878.
- Biche: A birch. Mo. 2879.
- Bid: It most frequently signifies To pray or intreat. I bidde God, that I never mote have joie, Tr. L. 3. 877. In MS. Sp. I pray to God y never, &c. Biddish for them, Tr. L. 1. 30. Pray for them. Rad mercy, lb. 111. Beg'd mercy. Bidde I God; I pray to God. Tr. L. 5. 1007. See Bede.
- Bide, Tr. L. 2. 118. To abide, to dwell; or it may be To bid, as in MS. Sp. and the sense will then be, It became me better to bid [i. e. to say my prayers] in a Cave and read the Legends of Saints. Bide a fownd; Stay for a time. Tr. L. 1. 1068. Bide thine adventures; Wait or stand your chance. Tr. L. 2. 1519.
- Biddin, Tr. L. 3. 1411. for Diddin; or Dede, as in MS. Sp. Did.
- Bidden for Biden: Tarryed, abode.
- Biforne: Before.
- Bigge: To build up. Mo. 2415. From the AS. Byrgan.
- Bigine, RR. 7368. Bigins, lb. 6861. Fr. Beguines; A sort of Religious persons of both sexes; See Men. Fr. and Fr. Gl. in Beguini, and Beghine.
- Bigon, Bigone. See Begon.
- Bihests: Promises. Tr. L. 5. 1430. Also, Commands.
- Bihete: To promise. Biheting the hope of welfulnesse [i. welfulnesse] Under pretence of happiness. p. 373, b.
- Biker: A bickering, quarrel. Hyper. 100.
- Bil, Bill, Byl: A Petition. AL. 610, 603, &c. Any writing or Instrument. ABC. H. Sj. 1487. Tr. L. 2. 1130.
- Bilde: To build. Bal. Lad. 111. The ground of life into [i. in to] bilde, i. e. to build on. Bildir: A builder. The Bildir oke; The Oak fit for building. AF. 176.
- Bileve: Faith, belief; Also, To believe. No. 270.
- Bilis: Biles, boils. Cr. 395.
- Bimene: To bemoan. RR. 2667.
- Bineth, Binethen: Beneath, below. AS. Beneoðs, beneoðan.
- Binomed, p. 376, a. Taken away. See Benimme.
- Bini him: Bound himself. CMV. 47.
- Birast: Bereaved, deprived.
- Birde, Mo. 2917. signifies a Mistress or Wench.
- Birell, Birill: A Biril. Bl. Kn. 37. Bal. Lad. 51.
- Bismare: Abuse, scandal. MR. 857. From the AS. Birmepian; To scoff at, to disgrace. Birmop, Reproach. Also, Libels, Lampoons.
- Bispreint: Besprinkled.
- Bit: Bid or commanded. MS. Ch. reads Bit instead of Did, Prol. 187. which is printed wrong for Bid. Py. 1. reads byd leth.
- Bitande: Biting; Sharp.
- Biraught: Recommended. RR. 4438. Committed. Gam. 666. See Gl. V. in Betauchit.
- Bize: To smart. Prol. 633. To provoke. Biting point; A sharp cutting point. lb. 2548. Desire so biitch me, Tr. L. 3. 1488. so freyneth me. MS. Sp.
- Bitrent: Plaited or twisted about. Tr. L. 3. 1237. Encompassed, surrounded. lb. L. 4. 870.
- Birresbid. See Betrassid.
- Birrsfall: Bitter; Sorrowful. Magd. 53.
- Bitwene, Bitwixen: Between, betwixt.
- Binopin: Weeping, all in tears. Tr. L. 4. 916.
- Blackburied, No. 1920. Gon a blackburied; In nigras et in-auspicias domos missus, Sk. Which answers to the Description of Hell in Pars. p. 193, a.
- Blake: Black. In Tr. L. 2. 1320. instead of, Loke on all these blake (where the Substantive is wanting) MS. Sp. has it, Loke on thes Lres blake, i. e. black Letters.
- Blakid: Blackened.
- Blande: Kind; Flattering. RL. 23.
- Blandise: To sooth, flatter. Pars. Blandishing: Flattering. Boeth. L. 1.
- Blankmanger, Prol. 389. A kind of white meat or curdard. Fr. Blancmanger. Rich.
- Blase: To Blazon Arms. PT. 150.
- Blasours: Such as blaze forth ones praise. Test.
- Blanuche fièvre, Tr. L. 1. 917. In Fr. Fievre blanche signifies a white Fever. The Poet means Palenets, the Green-sickness, &c.
- Ble, Magd. 391. Sight, look; Colour, hue; Favour. Sk. Sp. Gl. V. AS. Bleo, Color.
- Blee, is by Sk. supposed to come from the AS. Bled, Fr. Bled, ble, Corn; and so he makes Boughion under Blee, No. 567. (or, which I take to be the same, Boh up and down. under the blee, Mo. 1579, 1580.) to be Boughion near the Corn; Whereas Bleane (anciently written Blene, and easily corrupted to Blee by omitting the Dash for n) is a Forreft in Kent, which gives name to the adjacent Town, which is at this day called Boughion under the Bleane, and is in the Road to Canterbury. x
- Bleine: A blain, a bile. RR. 553.
- Bleint, MR. 645. Blent, Tr. L. 3. 1352. Looked. Gl. V. in Blent.
- Blend: To mix, mingle; To blind, or deceive. Tr. L. 2. 1496. Mo. 2792.
- Blent: Ceased; Blinded. Sq. 1630. Also, Deceived, disappointed. Tr. L. 5. 1194. See Bleinte.
- Blere: To dim, darken, cloud the eyes. Blerid is myne eye; My sight is grown dim. No. 751. RR. 3912.
- Bliss: Bliss, happiness. Dr. Ch. 1039. RR. 3643.
- Bleve, Blevin: To abide, tarry. Tr. L. 4. 1357. from the D. Blyven, Kilian.
- Blife. See Blive.
- Blin, Blinne: To desist, cease, give over. No. 1192. From the AS. Blinnan, Cessare. CB. Blino; To be weary.
- Blinkis amorous: Amorous winks or looks, ogling. Cr. 226.
- Bliss, Fr. 1572. To bleis. Also, Happiness, joy. Blissfull: Happy, blessed, joyfull.
- Blish: Merry, pleasant. Blishness: Joy, mirth. Cr. 4. Alacritas. Boeth. Irenne blische, LW. 60. or perhaps it should be Irenne belife, or blife, for blive. i. e. I run presently. For blithe cannot rhyme to Life which ends the foregoing Verse.
- Blive, Blyve, Belive: Quickly, immediately; Briskly. Tr. L. 4. 1355. Belive; Anon, by and by, or Towards night, Ray's Coll. who supposes it to be a Contraction of By the Eve; it being frequent in the North to mollify the into le. Bl'ue, Confessum, protinus. Hick. Gr. AS. p. 225. Extempld is translated Belife by Dougl. Virg. p. 163. f. ab AS. Be lyp, With lile, vigorously.
- Blober: To blubber. Test.
- Bloderit, perhaps for Bloberit: Blubbered. Be. 464.
- Blome, Blome: Blooms, blossoms. Test. L. 3. Blomie: Blooming, blossoming. lb.
- Blondrin, No. 691. To toil, bluster. Sp. f. To blunder. lb. 1435.
- Blont: Dull; Heavy; Cowardly. p. 204, a.
- Blosme: Blossom. Bal. Lad. 47. Blosmis: Blossoms. LW. 143.
- Blowin up and down: Blown about; Talked of. Prol. 2243.
- Blynched, PT. 669. f. Flinched: Kept off; or perhaps, Blynched: Looked askint.
- Blyfyng: Blazing, flaming. Be. 561.
- Blyve. See Blive.
- Bob under the blee. See Blee.

Boche, p. 376, b. Pastors of [l. or] boche; An Impostume or Butch, i. e. An Ulcer.

Bockour: A Butcher. Mo. 2524.

Bode: Bid, commanded. It is also put for Abode, the Preter Tense of Abide, WB. 1030. Ne bode I never, &c. I could not abide, or bear to go from thence. RR. 791. Abode, continued. Tr. L. 5. 29. Also, An Omen, a foreboding, a sign, or token. AF. 343. Delay. An. 127. See Abode. In Bal. Lad. 45. it is misprinted for Blode; to which mistake, the Editor was led by its being printed Bood in former Editions, particularly that of 1561, out of which this Edition was prepared for the Press.

Bodkins, Mo. 727, 732. MR. 853. Bodkins; Poniards, daggers.

Bodin: Commanded, charged, bid or bade.

Boilews: Halting, from the Fr. Boileux; Rude, plain, ignorant. Mo. 1788. p. 478, a. Homely and hard. Ib. 2992. It seems to be sometimes the same with Boistrous; Blustering, noisy. See p. 479, b. l. 17. It may come from the Scot. Boist: To boast, threaten, frighten. Gl. V. As boistrous as here at baie; As fierce, boisterous as a Bear at bay. Mo. 2079. See Gl. V. in Bustuous. Boistously: Roughly, rudely, &c. Boistousness: Rudeness; Ignorance. Ch. Dr. 64.

Bokeler: A buckler. Pro. 112.

Boker: A bucket. Pro. 1535.

Bokill: A buckle. Bokiling, Pro. 2505. Buckling on.

Bolas: Bullace or Bullis, a sort of wild Plum. RR. 1377.

Bole: A Bull. Tr. L. 2. 55. Bolis: Bulls. CMV. 86.

Bole Armeny: Bole Armeniack, Armenian Earth used in Medicine. No. 811.

Boll, bolle: A bowl; A bottle. The throte boll, MR. 1165. The Protuberance in the Throat, commonly called Pomum Adami.

Bollen, Boln: Swollen. Bl. Kn. 101.

Bolne: To swell; To boyl up. Bol, Kilian. Tumidus, turgidus, &c.

Bolt: An arrow. Upright as a bolt; As straight as an arrow. MR. 156.

Bone: A Boon, request, petition. AS. Bene. Bad a bone; Made a request. Sq. 1134. I bidé the a bone; I ask a favour of thee. Tr. L. 1. 1028.

Bonis: Bones. Bonis two, No. 2172. A pair of Dice.

Bood: Abode, stay'd, tarried. Ber. 762.

Boon: A bone.

Borace, Pro. 632. "Borax, a white or greenish Substance like Salt-Petre, wherewith Goldsmiths use to solder Gold and Silver; some say it is the Gum of a Tree, which is very unlikely; Others affirm it to be made of old Lees of Oyl, by Art and drying in the Sun, brought to be white; Others, a Mineral. Bo. But others more truly say, that it is an Alkalious Salt made from the Stone called Tingal, brought from the East-Indies; It is a strong Hystrick Medicine, and is much used in soldering.

Bord, Bordis: A board, a table; Boards, tables; The Bord begon, Pro. 52. Begun the Board; Sat at the upper end of the Table; This Knight, says Sp. "being often among the Knights of the Dutch Order, called Ordo Teutonius, in Prussia, he was for his worthiness placed by them at the Table, before any of what Nation soever. If any desire to know the Profession of these Knights called Teutonici, it was thus; They having their dwelling at Jerusalem were bound to entertain Pilgrims, and at occasions to serve in War against the Saracens; They were apparelled in white, and upon their uppermost garment did wear a black Cross: And for that this Order was first begun by a rich Almaine, none were received into the same, save only Gentlemen of the Dutch Nation. After Jerusalem was last taken by the Saracens, Anno 1184, these Knights retired to Prolemaida; and that being taken, into Germany their own Country; And when as there also the People of Prussia used incursions upon their confines, they went unto Frederick the Second then Emperor, Anno 1220, who granted them leave to make wars upon them, and to turn the Spoil to the maintenance of their Order. After this Conquest of Prussia, these Knights grew rich, and built there many Temples and places of Residence for Bishops, who also were enjoyed to wear the "Habit of the Order. Chancer will have his Knight of such fame that he was both known and honoured of this Order.

Bordclothes: Table-cloths. Test.

Borde: A jest. Also, To jest. No. 2294. See Bourde.

Bordels: Brothels, Bawdy-houses. Parf. Bordell women: Lewd women, common strumpets. p. 210, b. Bordael, Kilian. Lupanar.

Bordillers: Those that keep or haunt Brothels. RR. 7084. Bordure, Fr. A hemme or border. Boeth. L. 1. The edge or extremity of a thing.

Borell: Ignorant, rude, unlearned. Fr. 2262. Plain, Boorish, clownish. Borell folk, Fr. 610. Borel men, Mo. 67. Laymen. Borel signifies a sort of coarse cloth. Gl. Lob. It seems to be a Diminutive of Boor. Kilian. Boer, Agricola, ruricola; from Bouwen, To plow. See Gl. V. in Burell.

Borill, WB. 356. perhaps should be read Parrill, i. e. Apparel, fine clothes, as the word is used, Ib. 561.

Borrow, Borrowe: A pledge, a pawn. Tr. L. 2. 963. Bail, surety. And I your borrow, Tr. L. 2. 134. And I will be bound for you. I am under a borrow, Gam. 1576. I am under Bail. Have here my faith to borrow; I pawn my faith. Fr. 2790. Venus to borrow, Tr. L. 2. 1523. St. John to borrow, Sq. 616. Venus, St. John, assisting or speeding; or perhaps St. John to borrow may be a Form of Protestation then used, i. e. St. John be my surety. Also, To Bail one. Gam. 953. Borrowes: Sureties; Pledges. RR. 7309.

Borue, for Borrow, in the MSS. generally written Borwe; as Sorwe, morwe, &c. for Sorrow, inorrow, &c.

Bosard, Bosardes: A buzzard, Buzzards. Mo. 3267. RR. 4033. Bostance: Boasting, bragging. WB. 569.

Boffe: Boasting. Mo. 213. Pride; Vain glory.

Bot: But. La. 210. He na's bot dede; He was, or would be certainly dead. A form of Speech frequently used in Chancer to denote the greater certainty of a thing.

Bote: Help; Ease, remedy; Recompence, amends, satisfaction. To do bote on her bale, Tr. L. 4. 739. To ease her of her misfortune. To findin bote for wo, Ib. 1259. To find a remedy for misery. Bote of his bale, No. 1502. Ease of his misery. Also, Benefit, advantage, profit. Also, A boat. Test.

Botelesse. See Botileß.

Bote off: Bit off. Boeth.

Bother (so Ca. reads it in Tr. L. 4. 168.) Of both. Your bother love; The love of you both.

Bothom, Mo. 1216. Bottom. Also the same with Bothum, RR. 3050.

Bothum: A bud. RR. 1721, &c. It is the same that is before called a Kuopp, i. e. A Rose-bud. Ib. 1675, 1685, 1691.

Botileß, Botelesse: Bootless, fruitless; Without remedy. Tr. L. 1. 783.

Botill: A bottle. Fr. 667.

Botifflis: Butterflies. Ber. 2879.

Botomless, Tr. L. 5. 1430. MS. Sp. Botmeles: Groundless; perhaps for Boteles bihests, i. e. Fruitless, insignificant promises.

Boton: A button. Ber. 2962.

Boucheff, Ber. 43. seems to signify Good, it being there opposed to Myscheff; and Ib. 3166. synonymous to Comfort: Perhaps it should be read Boucheff.

Bove, Ber. 1989. Above. In Ch. Dr. 745. Cupid is called the great lord of bove. It may be put for bawe, metri causa. See Ib. 754.

Bouffe: A Note of Belching. Fr. 670.

Bougerons: Buggerers, Sodomites. RR. 7072.

Boughte, Boughtin: Bought. Boughtin bei it derre, Tr. L. 1. 130. They bought it dear, or payd dear for it.

Boughton under blee. See Blee.

Boute it to the bren, Mo. 1355. To examine to the bottom of any thing, to sift it thorowly: A Metaphor taken from the sifting of Meal, till the fine flower and the bran are separated.

Boun: Good, Ready. CCR. 184. Ber. 965. From the Fr. Bon. Also, Bound. Cl. 1151. See Gl. P.

Bouuche: A bunch; A bundle. CCR. 28.

Bounte, Bountie, Bounny: Goodness. Fr. Boné. It is often used in Boeth. for Probity, Lat. Probitas. So Bounteous, sometimes signifies Good. No. 1624.

Bounteous, for Bounteous, Ber. 3277. See Bountie.

Bowle

Bourde: A jelt; A trick. Gam. 1694. from the Fr. Bourde,
A lye, sham. See Men. Fr. in Bourde, and Men. It.
in Burlare.
Bourdon, Burdon: The Drone of a Bag-pipe; Hence the Burden of a Song. MR. 1057. The Miller's Wife in snoring bore the Burdon to her husband. It also signifies A staff. RR. 3401, 4092. A burden. lb. 4092. See Men. Fr. in Bourdon.
Boure: A house, a habitation, a chamber. MR. 259.
from the AS. Bup, bupe, A chamber, a parlour, a bower. Belg. Bust, A cottage, a shed. See Sk. in Bower.
Bouffous, Cr. 166. Sturdy, stiff, strong. See Boiffous.
Boute: About. Boute ybore; Brought about. Br. 3141.
Bowe: A dogge for the bowe, Sq. 1520. Perhaps a Dog that attended a Sportsman with a Bow and Arrows, as we call that a Gun-dog which follows one that carries a Gun.
Bowke: Bulke; The body; The belly; The Romack. AS.
Buce, Venter, &c.
Bowne: Bound, obliged. Br. 945. It may be the same as Boun, V.
Boys, p. 214, b. Boethius de Consolatione Philosophie.
Boysfly, for Boisfly: Rudely; Roughly. PT. 104.
Bracer: Armour for the Arms. Prol. 111. The Fr. Bras- fart signifies the same; from Bras, an Arm.
Bracyd: Clapsed, embraced. PT. 25. Br. 926.
Braide: Arole, awaked, MR. 1177. Took off. La. 838.
Braide out of his witt, Mo. 563. Run out of his senses.
Also, To pull out, to draw. AS. Braedan, Abpædan,
Auferre; Exerere. Also, A start. RR. 1336.
Braied, Di. 241. for Braide: Made many a braide; Started often in her sleep.
Brakit, MR. 153. Bragget. CB. Bragod. A sweet Drink made of Honey, Spices, &c. used in Wales, and in Cheshire, Lancashire, &c.
Branchilet: A little branch, a twig. Bal. Lad. 44.
Brande, Cr. 180, 190. may signify a Sword, which, it is said lb. 188. Mars had in his hand: It is so used by Douglas in his Virgil. See Hick. Gr. Fr. p. 93. in Brando.
Brasse: To burst; Did burst.
Bratte, No. 902. A mantle; A rag. It is used in Lin- colnshire for a courie Apron: Sk. See Sonn. in Bpætt.
CB. Bratt, Lacina, panniculus.
Brandrie, Prol. 2500. Embroidery; Graven work. Sp.
Bravie: The Prize or Reward of Victory in Games or Sports of Activity. Lat. Bravium. Gr. Βραβιον.
Braun, Brawn: A sinew. Bramnis: Sinews; The braw-ny parts of the Body, as the Calves of the Legs, the Thighs, part of the Arms, &c.
Braying, Mo. 2106. Sounding. Com.
Brecke, Brige, Brigge, Brike: A breach, a rupture.
Brede: Breadth. Tr. L. 5. 1656. In brede, lb. L. 1. 531.
Abroad. To breed, engender. lb. L. 3. 1552. Also Bread.
Breff, Br. 139. Breve, RR. 2350. Brief, short. Fr. Bref, item. Breve.
Breide. See Braide.
Bremie: Fiercely. Sp. Fierce. Prol. 1701. f. ab AS.
Bpyme, Solennis, clarus, notabilis. See Men. It. in Bramare.
Bren, Brende, Brennin: To burn: Brennande, Brennende: Burning. Test.
Bren, Brenne: Bran.
Brenningly: Warmly; In a hot, burning manner.
Brent, Brende: Burnt; Also Burnished. RR. 1109.
Brere: A bryar. Breris: Bryars. RR. 1836.
Brefte: To burst.
Bretfull: Quite full, brim full, top full. Prol. 689.
Bretherne, Nq. 1030. Brethren.
Breve. See Breff.
Breyde: To run away. Br. 1093, 3041. See Braide.
Brid, Tr. L. 3. 10. Bride, CN. 260. Bridde: A bird.
Briddis: Birds.
Bridale: A Wedding.
Brige, Brigge. See Brecke.
Brigg, Brigge: A bridge.
Bright for Brighneß, Tr. L. 2. 864.
Brike. See Brecke.
Brimme: Sharp, fierce, violent. RR. 1836. Tr. L. 4. 184.
See Bremie.

Bringis: Bringest. Fa. L. 3. 818.
Brinne: To burn. WB. 52.
Britaine, Fr. 2538, &c. See Amorike.
Brocages, RR. 6971. Broker's, Factor's or any Agent's
Butinels, or Profit; Pimping.
Broch: A Gold Pyramid. Sk. A Jewell set with precious Stones, perhaps of a Pyramidal form. It was worn sometimes on the Arm. Prol. 160. and sometimes on the Collar. Tr. L. 5. 1660.
Brode: Abroad. Brode ikend, Mo. 2470. Known all abroad. Com.
Brodir: Broader. Also, Brother.
Brobolme, MR. 1178. for Brombolme: A Priory in Norfolk. See Man. Ang. To. I. p. 632. To. II. p. 909.
Broidid: Braided, twitted, twined; Tyed up. Prol. 1051.
Broke, Brokin. See Brouk.
Broking: Throbbing; Quavering. MR. 269. Singing with a broken, hoarse voice, called Craking. Sq. 1367.
See Crakil and Crakil.
Brokin-harm, Sq. 941. Perhaps it should be read in two words, So mochil brokin harm [sc. they cunnin, lb. 941]
i. e. They can brook, or bear so much harm, or inconvenience, when they list. MS. Ch. hath it So mochil harm thei can, &c. They can do so much harm.
Bronde, Ph. 25. A brand, a torch. Brondis, Prol. 2340.
Torches, firebrands.
Brost, Broffin, Bruffin: Broke, tore. Prol. 2693. Bait a-funder. Tr. L. 2. 976.
Brotherbed: Brotherhood; Friendship like that of Brothers. No. 2550.
Broill: Brittle; Fickle; Frail. Sq. 795.
Broilneß: Brittleness; Inconstancy, fickleness. Sq. 795, 1759.
Brondrid: Embroidered; Adorned. Mo. 495.
Brouke, Bronkin, Broke: To brook, to bear; To enjoy;
To use. So bronkin I mine eye, myne bede, my chynne;
As I hope to preserve, or enjoy the use of my eye, my head, my chin. As evir mote I bronke my tressis, Sq.
1826. Or my n ceris, as in MS. Ch. which may be the true reading, if Jangleris be right in the preceding Verse, and not rather Janglethessis, the feminine of Jan-
gleris, which will answer to tressis. Well bronkin thet ther service, LW. 194. They brook, bear, or perform their service well. Right wel broke ye your new, AL.
259. Your new habit becomes you very well.
Bruffin. See Brost.
Brutlneße, Cr. 86. See Broilneße.
Buggys, Mo. 1051. Bugbears.
Bugle, Bugle-horn, Fr. 2809. A black horn. Sp. A little horn. Sk. qu. Bucula cornu.
Buie: To buy. Buie it full dere; Pay dear for it. RR.
6094. See Abie.
Bukis horn: A buck's horn. Blow the bukis horn; Do any trifling business; Go a whittling. MR. 279.
Bumpith: Maketh a humming noise. WB. 972.
Burdown. See Bourdon.
Burel, AL. 455. Fine Glass; A precious Stone. Sp. A Betyl.
Burgyn: To bud, to shoot, or sprout out. PT. 691.
Fr. Bourgeonner.
Burlg: Large. Cr. 180.
Burnel the asse, Mo. 1427. Nigellus Wireker a Monk and Precentor of Canterbury wrote a Latin Poem, Intituled,
Speculum Stultorum, Dedicated to William Longchamp,
Bishop of Ely, and Lord Chancellor; wherein, under the Fable of an Ass (which he calls Burnellus) that desired a longer Tail, is represented the Folly of such as are not content with their own condition. There is introduced a Tale of a Cock, who having his leg broke by a Priest's Son (called Gundulfus) watched an opportunity to be revenged; which at length presented itself on this occasion: A day was appointed for Gun-
dulfus's being admitted into holy Orders at a place remote from his Father's Habitation; He therefore orders the Servants to call him at first Cock-crowing, which the Cock over hearing did not crow at all that Morning. So Gundulfus over-slept himself, and was thereby disappointed of his Ordination; the Office being quite finished before he came to the place.
Burnette seems to have been a rich Stuff worn by Persons of Quality, which was therefore forbid to be used by Monks. Monachi Camisij lincis vel Burnettis non utan- tur.

sur. Match. Par. See Wats. Gl. and Men. Fr. in Brunette.
Burnyd: Burnished, polished. Prol. 1985. Gold burnid;
 Shining like burnished gold. Bl. Kn. 34.
Bush for Puslb, PT. 156.
Busie: Sollicitous. p. 370 b. See Besy.
Buske, RR. 54. A bush. Buskie, lb. 102. Bushes.
Buskid, Cr. 255. Adorned, decked, dressed. Gl. V.
But, But and, But if, But that if: Except. Tr. L. 2. 1561.
 which should be read from MS. Sp. thus;

But God and Pandare wist none what it ment.

Also, Without; Unless. AS. Bute, Butan. Sometimes it signifies Quite, utterly. In're but lost: I were utterly undone. No. 2693. I n'am but dead, Tr. L. 4. 1498. Hen'as bot [or but] dede. La. 210. I, He were quite dead. Which am but lorne, Fr. 2583. Who am utterly undone. Not but for Only. I speke it not but stedfastly, Not proudly, No. 485. Not but inough, lb. 612. Enough and to spare.

Buxionen, Buxioning, Buxions, for Burjonen, Burjoning, Burjons: To Bud, Budding, Buds. Test. L. 2. and L. 3. The x and r, are very often so like in the MSS. and old printed books, that they might be easily mistaken one for the other. Fr. Bourgeon, a Bud. See Burgoyne.

Buxome, Buxum: Obedient, pliant, dutifull, meek; Amiable. Buxomeneß: Obedience, humility, submission. Sc. 233. RR. 4419.

Buxumly: Obediently, humbly, dutifully.
By: To buy. RR. 7159. Also, Be, arc. PT. 446.
Byeshope: A Bishop. p. 210. b.

Byd: See Bid.

Byforne: Before.

Byhere: To promise.

Byl, Byllis: See Bil.

Byleve, Bylevin: To stay, to abide, to tarry. Tr. L. 5. 478. See Bleve.

Byme for By me. See Alouth.

Bynemme, Bynome, Bynym, Ber. 1247. To bereave, to take away. Boeth. See Benimme.

Byraft: Bereaved, taken away. Prol. 1363.

Bysegid: Besieged, surrounded. Boeth.

C.

CAs, Cace, Cas: Case; Fortune. Percaus: By chance. Ar. 82. Also, a Quiver.

Cach: To catch. Cach a clowt, PT. 554. seems to be the same as our Phrase, To catch a Tartar.

Caitife, Caitiffe: A Captive, a Slave; from whence it comes to signify any person in miserable circumstances. Fr.

Cheit, Mean, despicable, &c. from the Lat. Captivus.

Caitifnesse: Slavery; Misery. Test. L. 1.

Caitifned, p. 479, b. Sk. thinks it is corrupted from the Lat. Catenatus, Chained, tyed up.

Cakeling: Cackling. AF. 562.

Calcination: Calcination is the Solution of a mixt Body into powder by Fire or any corroding things, as Mercury, Aqua fortis, &c. No. 825.

Calculid: Calculated. Fr. 2840. Calculing: Calculation, computation.

Cale: Cold. A cale: A cold, very cold; as in Gower, L. 8.

Her bert is bot as my fyre,

And other while it is a cale:

In Mo. 2011. it seems to signify Miserable in general, or as Cow. Much plinched with misery, cold and hunger. The very Expression is in Gower, L. 8. where speaking of a young Prince escaped alone out of a Shipwreck, he says,

He was so fore a cale,

That he wist of himself no bote.

Calenit, RR. 7093. Calvert. Sk. Calure, as Salmon or other red fish. Sp.

Calidone, No. 2121. f. Chalcedonia in Asia Minor.

Calot: A lewd Woman, a Drab; perhaps so called from the Fr. Calote, which was a sort of Head-dress wore by Country-girls.

Camalle: A Camel. Fr. 2229.

Cameline: Camel. RR. 7367.

Camlin: Came. No. 150.

Camise, Camised: Flat-nosed. MR. 826, 866. Fr. Camus.

Can: Knoweth, understandeth. Prol. 1900. W. B. 231. It is also used for Gan. CL. 224. In Tr. L. 3. 56. Ca. reads Gan, V.

Canel-bone: The Channel-bone of the Throat. Dr. Ch. 943.

Canell: Cinnamon. RR. 1370. Fr. Canelle.

Cankedort: A wofull case. Sk. Sp. Perhaps A doubtful case. Tr. L. 2. 1752. Kankerdort, Ms. Sp. Ca. and Py.

Cannat: Cannot. AF. 538.

Cannon, ne no Fenne, No. 2408. Avicenne's Canon Medicine is divided into Fens, i. e. Sections.

Cannys: Cans, pots. PT. 566.

Cantill: A cantle, a piece, a part. Prol. 3010.

Cap. To set one's Cap; To outwit one, to make a fool of one. Prol. 588.

Cape: To trudge, caper, or dance up and down after one. Tr. L. 3. 559. Perhaps it should be read Gape, as in MS. Sp. Py. and other Editions.

Capell, Capill, Caple: A horse. Lat. Caballus.

Capitain: A Captain, a General. Fr. Capitaine.

Captife: A Captive, a Prisoner. Tr. L. 3. 383.

Caraine: Carrion, a dead body. Mo. 649.

Carbocke, No. 3376. for Carboncle: A Carbuncle.

Cardiacle, Cardiakill: A Pain about the Heart, a Heart-aking; which is expressed in another place by Dost myne bert to yerne. Gr. Kardiakia, Cordis dolor, Passio Cardiac.

Care: Pain, disorder, indisposition. Tr. L. 1. 661.

Careckes: Characters, marks.

Carfe: Cut off; from Carve. Carvid so and bore; Did so cut and bite. Mo. 626.

Caricke, Carike: A large Ship of burden. Fr. 424. f. from the It. Carica, Burden, &c. See Men. It. in Cargare.

Cake: To care. Mo. 2190.

Carle: A Boor, a Clown, a Country-fellow. Prol. 547. from the AS. Teopile, Agricola.

Carmis: Carmelite Fryars. RR. 7462.

Caroll: A Dance; A Song beginning and ending alike. We call a Christmas Carol, A Song usually sung at that Festival. See Sk. Carolling: Singing a Carol. CCr. 32. Dancing. No. 1366.

Carpe: To jelt. Prol. 476. To desire. Test. It is frequently used in PP. for To speak or talk in general.

Carrein: Carrion. Prol. 2015.

Cart: A Chariot. Cartir: A Charioteer. Prol. 2024.

Cas, Case. See Caas.

Cassidony, A L. 478. A Stone growing in Aethiopia, which shineth like fire. Sp. A Carthaginian Stone. Sk.

Cast, Caste: To think, contrive, foresee. Also, Contrivance, deliberation, design; An act or deed. Cast- ing: Vomit. RR. 7240. Castin all the gruil in the fire; Mar the whole affair. Tr. L. 3. 712. Castidin: Cast or did cast. Ar. 49. Castis: Projects, contrivances.

Prol. 2470.

Casteloigne: Catalonia in Spain. Fa. L. 3. 158.

Caswell: Casual, accidental. Tr. L. 4. 419.

Catapuce, Mo. 1082. A sort of Spurge.

Catchende: Catching. p. 491, b.

Catife, Catives. See Caitife.

Catours: Caterers. Prol. 570. Instead of all Catours, MS. Ch. reads a Catonre; but H. 1. achators. See Asbate.

Catrewawed: Caterwauling. WB. 354.

Cattell-catching: Using all means to procure wealth. Mo. 2796.

Caucir: A cause, one that causeth. CL. 847.

Caught: Took, taken. Apite caught, Fr. 2286. Caught routh, lb. 3:74. Took pity. Caught eyen her countenance, lb. 2131. Recovered her countenance.

Cavilla:oune: Cavil, cavilling. Fr. 872.

Cautels, Cautell: Caution, wariness. Cautelis: Cautions.

Cecily, No. 130. St. Cecilia. By The life of Jalnt Cecile, LW. 426. is meant The second Nonne's Tale.

p. 114, &c.

Ceife: To seize. RR. 7258.

Celebrable, Celebrate: Illustrious, famous, celebrated.

Boeth. p. 395, b. But p. 379, b. l. 49. instead of celebrate, as it was in the former Editions, it is cele- bricit (for so it should have been printed, not cele- brien.)

- bruen*) in this Edition, that is, Famousness, Lat. Glēbritas.
- Celerere*, Mo. 48. Celerarius, or the Cellarer was one of the chief Officers in the Monasteries, who had the care of all Provisions, and seems to answer to the Butler in our Colleges. Sometimes it signifies only a Butler. See Wals. Glo. in Celerarius and Obedientia.
- Censur*, MR. 233. Burning of Incense: A Practice still used by the Roman Catholics in their Churches on certain Festivals. It is called Smoking the Tempel, in Pro. 2283.
- Centure*: The Center of a Circle. Al.
- Cerclub*: Encompasseth. RR. 1619.
- Cerkle*: A circle. Boeth.
- Cerrial*, Pro. 2292. Belonging to a sort of Oak called Cerrus, described by Pliny, in his Nat. Hist. L. 16. cap. 5. 6.
- Certain*, Certaine, Certeyne: Certainly. It is often used for a certain Sum or Quantity, and the like.
- Certente*: Certainty.
- Certes*, Certus: Certainly, surely. Fr. Certes.
- Cervelle*, Fr. The Brain. Pro. 1378. MS. Ch. instead of it, reads jelle, and H. 1. celle.
- Ceruse*: White Lead, often used by Chirurgeons in Ointments and Plaisters; It is with Painters a principal white colour, and is much used by Women in painting their faces; Hence Martial, Cerussa tunc Sabella solem. Blo.
- Cese*: To seize. AF. 481. To that he be cesid; Until he be seized, or taken. CM. 87.
- Cesen*: Season. p. 364, b.
- Cesse*, Cessin: To cease, desist. Cesse cause, cessus malady; When the cause ceaseth, the distemper ceaseth. Tr. L. 2. 483. Cessit, Cess: Ceased.
- Cite*, Cite, Cite, Cite: A city.
- Chace*: To drive away, chase, pursue. Fr. Chasser. Also, a Term at Tennis-playing. Hen. 295.
- Chafare*, Chaffare: Trading; Wares, Merchandize. La. 139. To trade. ib. 140.
- Chaffren*: To cheapen, buy. Chaffrin churchis; Make Simoniackal Contracts for Advowsons, or Presentations to Livings or Preferments. Mo. 2086.
- Chamberere*: A Chamber-maid. Fr. 1839. A Chamberlain. ib. 1998.
- Champartie*, Pro. 1951. It is a Law-Term, signifying a Maintenance of a Person in his Suit, upon condition to have part of the Lands or Goods in dispute, when recovered, from the Fr. Champ, A field, and Parti, Divided; because the Land, or Field, in question is commonly divided between the Champartor, who maintains the Suit, and the Person in whose name and right he sues. Blo. L. D.
- Chanons*, Canons, Mo. 3002. The place seems to be corrupted. I find Chanons or Chartons in PP's. Crede, i. e. Neither Canons nor Carthusians. If we suppose our Author wrote Chanons, Chartons, the later might easily be corrupted to Chanons, and afterwards turned to Canons, to make some difference, as if it were intended to mean Canons Regular and Secular.
- Chantepleure*: One that sings and weeps (Fr. Chante et pleure) in the same moment. It seems to be the Burden of a Song. An. 323.
- Chantid*: Enchanted, bewitched. IVB. 575.
- Chapmanbode*, Chapmanbode: The Profession or Business of a Merchant or Tradesman, &c.
- Char*, Chare: A Chariot.
- Charge*: Hurt, damage. Sp. A burden or load; Weight. No charge what so these clerks ysaine; Whatsoever these Clerks, or Scholars, say is of no weight with me. Cap. 218. Of that no charge; No matter for that. No. 770. To weigh or incline. Fa. L. 2. 237. To behave. Chargish not so say; Is not necessary to be related. Tr. L. 3. 1582. But Ca. hath it, nedys not. Charge in RR. 4366. should perhaps be change. Chargeous: Troublesome. p. 152, a.
- Charmereffes*: Women using Charms. Fa. L. 3. 171.
- Chase*: Chole. Hen. 31, 33. Also, as Chace, V.
- Chast*, Ber. 326. Chastie, RR. 6993. To chastise, punish; To reprove.
- Chastelaine*: The Governor of a Castle. Castellanus; Præfetus Castri, Domini vice. ibidem agens. Spelm. In RR. 3740. it signifies properly such a Governor's Lady, or in general, any Lady of Quality under the Degree of a Countess.
- Chanfinges*: Heats, motions. p. 208, a.
- Chancellor*: A Woman-Chancellor. AL. 507.
- Chanteclere*: One that sings clear: A cock.
- Chantements*: Incantments. p. 489, a.
- Chanterie*, (Fr. Chanterie) "A Chappel (commonly annexed to some Parochial or Cathedral Church) endowed with Lands or other yearly Revenues, for the maintenance of one or more Priests, daily to sing Mass for the Souls of the Donors, or such others as they did appoint; Of these Chantries, there were forty seven within S. Paul's Church, London. Blo. Chantiers: Singers; Priests officiating in Chantries.
- Chicke-mate*: A Term at Chess, when the King cannot be moved without being taken. Shall no husbande fynde unto me chicke-mate; No husband shall check or controul me. Tr. L. 2. 754.
- Checkere*: A Chess-board. Dr. Ch. 660.
- Chiefestain*: A Commander in chief.
- Cherite*, Cherte, Chierie: Charity, love, affection; Fondness.
- Cherffis fat*, RR. 7091. Calves fat, or Cherffins fat, i. e. The fat of a Mullet. St.
- Cherne*: A Chain laid cross a street. Tr. L. 2. 618.
- Chek*: An unlucky trick. Br. 182. Fr. Eebec.
- Chekelaton*: A stuff of Checker-work made of Cloth of Gold. Sp. A stuff like Motley. St.
- Cheker*: The Sign of the Chequer-Inn. PT. 14.
- Chelaundre*, RR. 81. A Goldfinch, a sort of Lark. St.
- Chere*: Cheapside in London. Pro. 756. MR. 1269. Also, To buy, cheapen. IVB. 268. Cheapness of Provisions. Fa. L. 3. 885.
- Cherche*, Chirche, Chyrch: A Church.
- Chere*: Chier, countenance; Shew, appearance. Tr. L. 1. 312. Behaviour; Gesture. It also signifies a Feast or Entertainment. He maketh fest and chere; He lives well, or splendidly. No. 2835.
- Chereliche*, Mo. 2990. In some MS. and printed Edd. it is Cherike, as well in this as the following Verse; and in Com. it is explained thus; Use rude [plain] and coarse meat and apparel.
- Cherice*: To cherish, to comfort. Cherifance, Cherish: Cherishing, comfort, any thing comfortable. Nel cherished: Well-bred. AL. 135.
- Cherle*, Churl. See Churle.
- Chese*: To chuse. Ches: Chose. Hyp. 88.
- Chest*: Chased, pursued. Tr. L. 5. 1367.
- Chesse*: A coffin. Fr. 1059. Sirise and chesse, p. 201, a. f. Chastisement, reproof, brawling, debate.
- Chessen*: A chestnut-tree. Pro. 2924. Chesseins: Chestnuts. RR. 1375. Fr. Chastaigne.
- Chewe*: To thrive, prosper. No. 1246.
- Cherfaisle*: A Gorget. St. A necklace. RR. 1082.
- Cherifance*, Cherifance: Merchandising; Advantage or Profit in Trade. Pro. 284. Also, An Agreement or Composition; Payment of money according to agreement. No. 2837, 2899. It is used in an ill sense. Bal. 53. f. Cheating, an unlawful bargain. In Mo. 1627. it seems to be taken for an Action or Achievement.
- Cherice*: To redeem, to effred. St. Sp. Perhaps it should be Cherice, CM. 136.
- Chiche*, Fr. A covetous, niggardly fellow. RR. 5588.
- Chicheface*: A meager, hungry, greedy Starveling. Fr. 2209. It seems to signify a Hobgoblin or Bugbear, such as Nurses frighten Children withall. See St. in Chicheface.
- Chidireffe*: A scold. RR. 4266.
- Chike*: A chick or chicken. RR. 541.
- Childyng*: Conceiving. Bal. Lad. 132.
- Chimbe*: The Rim of a Cooper's vessel on the outside of the Head, or Bottom. The end of the Staves from the Groove outward are called the Chimes. MR. 787.
- Chinche*, RR. 5998. for Chiche, V. So Chinche for Chiche: Covetousness, Hunginess. Paris. Chinche for Chiche or Chiche, V. Chinche grade: A greedy, covetous person. RR. 6022.
- Chirch*: A Church. Chirchhamis: Churchyards. p. 206, b.
- Chirking*, Pro. 2006. Fa. L. 3. 853. Any disagreeable noise; properly the Jarring or Creaking of a door upon the hinges. There is no dove which may chirke, says Gower in his Descr. of the House of Slope, Conf. Am. L. 4. f. 79. The feld chirking agryeth of cold, Boeth. p. 364.

- p. 364, b. Stridens campus inhorruit. It is here applied to the Wind.
- Chirkeith*: Chirpeth. Fr. 540.
- Chite*: Chideth; Scolded. No. 942.
- Chivalrie*: Knighthood; Skill in Arms; Valour, courage; Valiant Exploits, Feats of Arms.
- Chivalrons*: Valiant, stout, warlike; Famous for Acts of Chivalry. Tr. L. 5. 802.
- Chivaunche*, CMV. 144. for Chivauché: Chivalry; Riding in State.
- Chiver*, Chvir: To shiver, shake. Bl. Kn. 231. RR. 1732.
- Chokeling*: Chuckling, quavering in the throat. PT. 413.
- Chorle*. See Churle. Chorlich. See Churliche.
- Christen*, Christin: A Christian. Christenmesse, Christinmesse: Christmas. Christendom: Christianity, the Christian Religion.
- Churle*: A country clown; A slave or vassal. p. 205, b. AS. Ecopl. Rusticus, colonus.
- Churliche*: Plain, homely. Mo. 2991. Clownish, rude, simple. See Cherliche.
- Churlish*: Like a Churl, rude, unbecoming a Gentleman. Fr. 3077.
- Chyns*, Ber. 1619. f. Chinks.
- Ciergis*: Wax-Tapers; Lamps. RR. 6248.
- Cipion*: Scipio, a famous Roman General. RR. 10. Macrobius wrote a large Comment on Tully's Scipionis. See Mo. 1238, 1239.
- Cipris*: Venus, Queen of Cyprus. Fa. L. 2. 16.
- Cie*: A City.
- Cirin*: Yellow. Sp. Lemon or Citron-colour. Lat. Citrinus.
- Cirination*, No. 837. Perfect Digestion; the Colour proving the Philosopher's Stone. Sk. Sp. Turning to a Citrine colour by Chymistry.
- Citryn*. See Cirin. Instead of citryn, Prol. 2169. MS. Ch. hath certeyn.
- Clambe*, Clambin: Climbed. Fa. L. 3. 1061.
- Clapers*: Rabbit-holes or Burrows. RR. 1405. Fr. Clapier.
- Clappe*, Clappen: To chatter, prate. Test. Who mocketh clappeth, gabbieth oft; He that talketh much, lieth often. Cup. 142. Aye clappeth as a mille; Maketh a continual noise like the Clapper of a Mill. Fr. 2233. Clapping: Noisy talking. Id. 2020.
- Clappir*: A Clapper; The Cover of a Cup, with which Beggars used to make a noise by shaking it. Cr. 343; 387. CCr. 63, 76.
- Clappid*: Claped; A Transposition of Letters very common in Chaucer.
- Clarie*, Clarre, Clarrie: Hippocras-Wine made with Spices, &c. Vinum clarificatum; seu à claro colore, quia per manicam Hippocratis transcolatur. Sk.
- Clatardin*, or (as MS. Ch.) Claterede: Clattered. Prol. 2425.
- Claw*, WB. 940. Claw us on the gall; Make us angry by saying disagreeable things. Claw'd him on the bak; Coax'd by clapping him on the back. MR. 1218.
- Cled*: Clad, dressed. Tr. L. 3. 1527.
- Clemeth*: Claimeth.
- Clenenesse*: Purity; Holiness. Fr. 619, 646.
- Clepe*: To call, to name. Clepid: Called, named.
- Clepuh*, Sq. 1955. Klyppih, MS. Ch. Clippeth, embracing. See Clippe.
- Clere*: Clear. For Bemis clere, Tr. L. 5. 9. read Bemis elene (as in MS. Sp.) which rhymes to grene and Quene, Id. 11, 12. But the mistake hath run through all the Editions which I have seen.
- Clerge*, Ber. 252. Clergy, Id. 2015. Learning; Skill. Clergial: Learned. No. 773. Clergian: A young Clerk or Scholar. Id. 3011.
- Clerke*: A Scholar; A person in holy Orders.
- Clevis*: Cliffs, rocks. Hyp. 103.
- Cleft*, Fr. 881. The Cleft of the Fundament.
- Ciket*: A key. Sq. 1562. An Instrument of Iron to lift up a Latch. Sp.
- Clip*: To cut hair. MR. 218. It is put for Clepe: To call. Bal. 65.
- Clippe*, Clippen: To embrace. Tr. L. 3. 1350. Clippyng: Embracing. Magd. 163. RL. 130. AS. Elyppun, Ampletti.
- Clips*, Clipes: An Eclipse. Test. Clipsy: Eclipsed. RR. 5349.
- Cloistre*: An Inclosure. In the cloistre of thy blisful fadis; In thy blessed womb. No. 43.
- Clombe*, Clomben, Clombin: Climbed, mounted, ascended. Cloos: Clote. RR. 6104.
- Clofe*: Any place inclosed, as a Yard. Mo. 1475. Also, To include, comprehend. RR. 40.
- Clofir*: An Inclosure. RR. 4069.
- Clofit*: Inclosed. Bal. Lad. 36.
- Clorelse*: A Burdock leaf, a leaf of the great Clot-bur. No. 588.
- Clobleffe*: Without clothes, naked. p. 196, a.
- Clotterid*: Clotted.
- Clove gelfer*, No. 3271. A Plant commonly called Clove-Gilli-flower, Caryophyllus hortensis. Perhaps Clove, Gilofre in RR. 1368. should be read Clove-gilofre. See Gilofre.
- Clove*. See Clove gelfer, and Gilofre.
- Clubid*: Having a club-head. Mo. 10.
- Clum*, MR. 530. A Note of Silence.
- Coaction*: Constraint, compulsion. Test.
- Coarred*: Forced, compelled. p. 486. b. Coarter in Old Fr. is to Restrain. Palserave's Eclaircissement de la Langue Françoise. And Lidgate useth Coarten in that sense, in the Life of St. Edmund;
- He could the reynes coarten and refreyne.*
- Cockis bones*, Mo. 339. An Oath used in Chaucer's times and since by King Hen. VIII.
- Cod*, No. 2050. O sinkin [i. sinking] cod. By Cod is here meant the Belly; from the AS. Cobbe, which signifies any Bag; Whence it is that in the North they call a Pillow, a Cod; A Pin-cushion, a Pin-cod. Ray's Coll. p. 16.
- Coffer*: A chest. Prol. 300. A coffin. AF. 177. The Elm-tree is so called, because Chests or Coffins were usually made of it.
- Cofrin*: To put into a Coffer or chest; To hoard up. Mo. 2047.
- Cogge*: A cock-boat. Hyp. 114. It is called a Coggle in some parts of the North. See Spelm. in Cogones.
- Cognifance*. See Conifance.
- Coigne*: To coin.
- Coilons*: Stones, Testicles. No. 2480. Fr. Coillons.
- Coines*: Quinces. RR. 1373. Fr. Coin or Coing, a Quince.
- Coint*, Ch. Dr. 1824. for Quint: Odd, strange.
- Cokewold*, Cokold: A Cuckold. See a pleasant Etymology of it, RL. 290, &c.
- Cokney*: The Fr. Cognin, from which this word seems to be derived, signifies a Rogue, a Knave, a lazy Beggar, a slothfull fellow. And it is probable that Citizens are called Cockneys, because they generally lead a less active life than Country people do. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 231. in marg. It seems to be used in a different sense in PP. Pass. 6. — I have no salt bacon, Ne no cokney colopes for to make. Perhaps it signifies there a sort of a made Dish of meat, from Cognina; unless the meaning be this; Nor am I a Cockney to make collops, &c. I am not nice to make or desire dainty Dishes or Kickshaws.
- Col*, Col foxe, Mo. 1330. A blackish fox, as if it were Colefox. Sk. Coll is a Dog's name. Id. 1498. It seems to be a sort of a Nick-name. Fa. L. 3. 187.
- Cold*, Tr. L. 3. 801. Bal. Lad. 151. Cole, Colin: To cool, to grow cold.
- Colerable*: Colourable, pretended. Pr. RL. 55.
- Colere*: A collar. Tr. L. 5. 1659.
- Coll*. See Col.
- Collaris*: Collars. FL. 215.
- Collation*: A conference. Fr. 1355. A deduction, an inference. Also, A comparison. Boerb.
- Colling*: Embracing about the neck. Covetous collings; Wanton embraces. p. 506, b.
- Coloure*, Mo. 1043. Choler.
- Colours*: Rhetorical Figures. Fr. 1046, 2269, 2272.
- Columbe*: A dove. Bal. Lad. 79. Lat. Columba.
- Columbine*: Belonging to a dove. Eyin columbine; Dove's eye. Sq. 1658.
- Columpne*: A column, a pillar. Bal. Lad. 129.
- Colyn snerde*, PT. 621. f. A sword made at Cologne in Germany.
- Combirmen*, Combraunce: An incumbrance, trouble. Ber. 1870.
- Combre*: To cumber, to trouble, I combre world, MS. Sp. the world. Tr. L. 4. 279.
- Combush*:

- Combust. Burnt. Ab. 892. But in Tr. L. 3. 718. it is a Term in Astronomy: When a Planet is not above 8 Degrees and 30 Minutes distant from the Sun, it is said to be Combust. or in Combustion; but MS. Sp. reads it Combrid. i. e. Encumbered, in distress.
- Comeliche. Commonly. Br. 253.
- Comittee. Joined; put together; Committed. p. 209, b.
- Commence. Community. Sk. Holding commence; Having all things in common. RR. 5209. Perhaps it should be communis; and that would complete the Verse, which wants a Syllable.
- Commend. Coming. Br. 1717.
- Commens. To comm. Alld, Common. Given things, p. 362, a. Commonwealsh. Lat. Republice.
- Commend. Coming, proceeding. Test. L. 3.
- Commendidin. Recommended. Tr. L. 3. 17. Commended. Id. 218.
- Commendment. A recommendation. Test.
- Commensal. A boarder. Test. One that eats at the same Table. p. 484, a.
- Commensid. Moved. Tr. L. 5. 1597.
- Commis. Common. RR. 6237.
- Committal. The Commonalty, the Commons. Mo. 2594.
- Commisid. Committed. p. 211, b.
- Communing. Communicating; receiving the Communion.
- Commoue. To move, excite.
- Communabie. Commonly. RR. 7189.
- Communalities. Communities. Test.
- Communa. Common, vulgar, general.
- Commyns. The Common people, the Mob. Pro. 2511.
- Comparison. To compare. Boeth.
- Compas. No. 45. Trine compas; The Trinity. See Trine.
- Compasment. Contrivance. Hyp. 49.
- Compensable, Compinable. Sociable; Fit for company, or conversation; A company-keeper.
- Compendiously for Compendiously. RR. 2953. Briefly.
- Compere. A fellow, an equal; A partner, consort; A companion, a comrade. Pro. 672. See Blo. in Comper.
- Compiler. A compiler.
- Compinable. See Compensable.
- Complyn. It signifies properly that Evensong which completed the whole Service of the Day; but it is taken for any Chorus, or Consort of Musick. MR. 1063. See p. 197, a.
- Compounid; Compounded. Hyper. 24. Fa. L. 2. 521. Composed. p. 439, a.
- Compromis for Compromis. A Compromise, which in Law signifies a mutual Promise of Partys at difference to refer their Controversies to one or more Arbitrators. Blo. L. D. An. Bal. 44. it signifies simply, a Promise.
- Compte. To account. RR. 5026. Comptid: Accounted. CCr. 192.
- Comynly. Commonly.
- Can. To understand, learn, know; To be able, can. RR. 7136. It is used for Can. V.
- Concurbit. No. 815. It is a glass, earthen or copper Vessel, in shape resembling a Gourd [Lat. Cucurbita] which with the Head is most commonly used in Distillations, or Rectifications; and is usually called a Body, and sometimes a Subliming Vessel.
- Cond. To conduct. RR. 3261.
- Conduise. Conduits. RR. 1414.
- Condit. Conduct. Sav. or J. ff. condit; A Passport. Br. 3238, 3246.
- Conduite. To conduct, guide, govern; To behave. BD. 536.
- Confecture. A composition of Medicines. No. 238.
- Confedrid. Confederate; Joyned in a confederacy or combination.
- Confirme. p. 158, b. I confirme; I am resolved.
- Confuse. Confounded. Tr. L. 3. 356.
- Congir. To conjure; To bewitch. PT. 339.
- Conjecte. To conjecture, guess; To project, contrive.
- Conjcting. Conjecture, guessing. Conjectements: Contrivances, Projects. p. 493, a.
- Conissance. Knowledge. RR. 5465. It signifies also a Waterman's or other Servant's Badge: Hence it is taken for any Badge or Mark of Distinction. Fr. Connoissance.
- Conjumper. To jumble or joyn together. p. 478, a. Perhaps it should be read conje jumper in two words, i. e. Be able to Jumble, or perhaps to Jabber.
- Conjurre The. Tr. L. 3. 193. I adjure thee: Or it may be read, as in MS. Sp. and Ca. I adjorne the And the, Id. 104, l. c. I appoint a day for your meeting; from the Fr. Ajourner.
- Conne. To be able, RR. 5889. Conith, Connith: Can. Id. 3269. Conne thanks; Acknowledge an obligation, Take it as a favour. Tr. L. 3. 1466. Conne maygre; Of ill will. RR. 4559. See Alangre.
- Conning. Art, skill, knowledge, experience. Connyng: Wisely. So connyngly: With so much affectation of art. Bal. 860.
- Conserve. To preserve, save. No. 398. Conservative: Proper to preserve. Fa. L. 2. 339. Consevratrice: A preserver, sem. She who preserveth. Bal. Ltd. 117.
- Constitutor. It is commonly used for a Council-house of Ecclesiastical persons, or the Place of Justice in the Court Christian; Also a Session or Assembly of Prelates. Blo. L. D.
- Conste. A conceit. Also, To conceive, or express one's meaning. Ch. Dr. 1238. Con conste; Began to declare, or Declared, expressed. See Con.
- Constablerie. The Apartment of the Constable or Governor of a Castle, The Keeper. RR. 4218.
- Constr. Construction, interpretation. Br. 68.
- Constraint. See Constrict.
- Constreine. To torment, vex, make uneasy. Fr. 2466. To hinder; To restrain. Bal. 24. To torture. Mo. 1175. To confine to proper offices; Coercere, Boeth. p. 364, b.
- Constreinaunce. Constraint, force. RR. 7438. Constraint: Torment. Tr. L. 4. 741.
- Conte. Contention, strife, discord. Pro. 2004.
- Contrair. Contrary. No. 4. Fr. Contraire.
- Contrariauntes. Things contrary to, contradicting, contradictory.
- Contrarious. Contrary; Different. WB. 698. Froward, perverse. Id. 785. Averie to. Di. 435.
- Contrariouste, Contrariouste: Contrariety, opposition. Test.
- Contrary. An adversary. Pro. 1861. To contradict. Also, Contradiction.
- Contrayned for Constrayned. Boeth. See Constreine.
- Controve. To invent, feign, devise. RR. 4249, 7547. Fr. Controver.
- Contubernial. p. 205, b. Equal. The Lat. Contubernalis signifies a Comrade, a Companion. Id.
- Contune. To continue. RR. 4354.
- Convail. To recover. RR. 277. See Sk.
- Convert. To change one's mind. Tr. L. 2. 903; Tr. 4. 1412. Convertible. Youth and experience are not convert, i. e. Are not convertible Terms, It cannot be said of the same person that he is both young and experienced. Pr. RL. 111.
- Cope. "A large outward Vestment [used by Ecclesiastical persons] covering the Shoulders and the whole Body like a Cloak; Of this kind I take to be those rich Copes still preserv'd and made use of by the Bishop and Gospeller in the Cathedral Church of Durham, App. to the AS. Homily published by Mrs. Elstob. p. 38. See Fr. Gl. in Caps.
- Coppe. The End of a thing. Pro. 556. The tip of the nose; The top of any thing; Cacumen, Boeth. p. 309, b.
- Corage. The mind, thought; Courage, Spirit; Temper; Affection. Fr. 1729. Will, pleasure. Filled had his corage; Had obtained his will, gained his pleasure. Strength; Robur, Boeth. p. 360, b. Coragion: Muted, resolved. RR. 4116.
- Corare. p. 493, a. l. antep. seems to be mistaken for Corage; but it is corare in all the Editions which I have seen.
- Corbett. Fr. L. 3. 214. Stones wherein Images stand. Sk.
- Corse. See Corse.
- Cordenant. No. 3241. Cordovan, Fine Spanish Leather, so called from Corduba in Spain where it was dressed. Id.
- Cordale. See Cordale.
- Cordeliers. RR. 7461. Cordeliers, Grey Fryers of the Order of St. Francis; so called because they wear about their middle a Rope, or Cord full of twisted knots. Blo.
- Cordi. Accorded, agreed. Cordi, Cordis: Appetite, Tr. L. 2. 143.
- Connuale.*

Cornewale, RR. 4250. Cornwall.

Corniculaire for Corniculere, No. 380. There were under the Roman Empire both Civil and Military Cornicularij. The former is meant in this place; concerning whose Office, as well as the Reason of the Name, Civilians and Criticks differ in their opinions. The most probable is, that the Cornicularius was the Officer who registered and published the Acts, Orders or Decrees of the Præfectus Prætorio; and this Cassiodorus seems to imply, Var. L. II. 36. Præfuit [Cornicularius] juribus [al. curibus] Secretarij. Vide Calv. Lex Jurid. & Pufci Lex. Antiq. All the Editions which I have perus'd have instead of it, Cuncelere or Cuncellere: But H. 1. reads it, Cronculere, and MS. Ch. Croniculere; nor is it to be doubted but Mr. Urry had more express Authority for rectifying Corniculere, of which the other is but a Corruption, introduced by the ignorance of the Transcribers, who not understanding the meaning of the word, substituted another in it's place, as Cuncellere, by changing ni into un, and u into e. The Reading of the MSS. abovementioned retains more of the true one, only n, r, are transposed to make Croniculere, q. d. A Chronicler, a Register of Publick Acts. In the Not. Dign. Imp. Rom. the Cornicularius is frequently mentioned, and is generally the Second Established Officer in the Offices of the Chief Governours of Provinces.

Cornmuse, Fa. L. 3. 128. A Bag-pipe. Fr. Cornemuse.

Corny ale: Strong, nappy ale. No. 1829, 1970.

Coron, Corown: A crown. ProL. 2291. A garland. No. 232.

The crown of the head; The shaved crown of a Monk.

Gam. 1036.

Corouse: Curious. Ber. 3190.

Corrige: To correct. p. 395, a. Corriged: Corrected. p. 390, a.

Corruptable: Corruptible.

Corrumpe: To corrupt. ProL. 2748. To stink. Ph. 10.

Corse, Corfe: A Corps, or dead body: Also, A body. No. 1819, 3413. To curse. Tr. L. 3. 1707. A Course in Navigation. Ber. 864.

Cosinage: The relation of Cousins. It is used for any kindred. No. 2544. p. 493, a.

Cosshon: A cushion. Ber. 927.

Costage: Cost, charges. WB. 249. Fr. 2147.

Costel: To coast along, to pals by the side of. Bl. Kn. 36.

Fr. Cofeyer.

Costlewe: Costly, Chargeable.

Cote: A cott or cottage. Fr. 1428. Also, A coat.

Cote-armours, Cote-armures: Coats of Arms. ProL. 1018, 2502.

Cotelere: A cutler. Ber. 2561.

Corbe for Corih: Could; Understood. RR. 749.

Coidien: A Quotidian Ague. RR. 2401.

Couche, Couchen, Couchin: To submit; To lay on. No. 1173.

RR. 6903. Couchid: Set, as Jewels are. ProL. 2163.

Layd. AF. 216.

Cond, Tr. L. 1. 661. or rather Conth (as in MS. Sp.) Knoweth; Knew, understood; Can; Could. lb. 666: L. 2. 1178.

Coveiten: To covet. RR. 6173.

Covenable, Covinable: Convenient, usefull, proper. p. 205,

a. Suitable, agreeable. Covenably: Suitably, &c.

Competenter, Boeth. p. 394, a.

Cover for Recover, p. 449, a. l. 5.

Coverchiefes, ProL. 455. or (as MS. Ch.) Kerchevis: A woman's Head-clothes. Ar. 317. A Head-dress. Fr. Cover-

chief; whence by Contraction, Kerchief.

Coverte: Covered; Close, reserved, secret. RR. 6149.

BD. 177.

Covertours, Covertures: Coverings. Mo. 2045. Robes.

Covetise: Covetousness.

Coughin: Caught, took up. Lnc. 175.

Covine: Fraud, cheat. ProL. 606. Intreagues. RR. 3799.

Any wicked combinations. Boeth. L. 1. It is properly

a deceitful Compact or Agreement between two or more persons to prejudice another. Bl. L. D.

Covirle: A Cover or Lid. Fr. Covercle.

Covirtly: Privately, secretly. RR. 6111.

Covitise, as Covetise.

Conlpe: A fault; Guilt. p. 196, a. Conlpable: Culpable, blameable; Guilty. Pars. Boeth.

Conmp: To account. Tr. L. 5. 363.

Connsaile, Connsaile: Counsel, advice; A secret. No. 2337.

In connsaile be it seide, i. e. As a secret, in confidence, not to be told again. Fr. 2248.

Countenance. See Countinaunce.

Counterfaitours: Deceivers, dissemblers, Hypocrites.

Counterfete. See Countrefete.

Counterpleie: To contradict; To reply.

Counterpaise, Counterpeise: To counterpoize: A Coun-terpoise, a weight put in the contrary Scale. Tr. L. 3.

1413. See Countirpeise.

Counterwayte: To watch against. p. 211, b.

Countinaunce, Countenaunce: A pretence. No. 1285. Make countenance; Make a sign. p. 148, b.

Countirpeise. See Counterpaise. In Fa. L. 3. 660. Py. reads,

To counterpeyse ease and travayle,

That is, To counter-balance ease and labour: The other Reading is scarce intelligible; though it has obtained in all the Editions published since, that have come to my hands.

Countirpleied: Counterpleaded. Sk. Contradicted, See Count-

terplee in Bl. L. D.

Countour: An Accountant; An Auditor of Accounts. Mo.

2742. RR. 6812. One that counts well. Dr. Ch. 435.

A Counter, or Counting-house. lb. 436. Fr. Contoir.

Countrefete: To counterfete; To imitate. No. 1961. Mo.

1436. To pretend.

Countretaille: A Counter-tally, One part of a Tally answering to, or tallying with the other: And thence it is in Fr. 2210. applied to the Echo's exactly answering to what is spoke.

Conpegorge, Fr. A Cut-throat; A dangerous place by reason of Assassins, Robbers, &c.

Conre: To crouch, cringe, bow, Mo. 2147. Conrid:

Crouched, squatted down. RR. 465. See Sk.

Corfin: A fine, deceitfull or cunning heart, says Sk.

from the Fr. Cor fin: But it can scarce bear that sense in Bal. 325. O corfin figure, which perhaps should be read Corfin, or corvin figure, that is, A carved figure, As compleat as a Statue.

Conrse, Tr. L. 2. 970. Ca. and Py. read the Verse thus;

And spreaden out theyr colours kyndly by rowe;

which gives a very easy and natural sense, viz. Flow-ers, which being closed up through the coldness of the night ly drooping upon their stalks, recover themselves against the Sun-shine, and spread their colours

naturally in their order. Colours seems to be corrupted to Conrs, by the negligence of the Copyers.

Courtepy, ProL. 292. A short upper garment, which did not reach to the feet. Sk.

Courteman: A Courtier. Sq. 1008.

Conth: Known; Famous. ProL. 15. AS. Lu8, Notus.

Also, Can; Could; Knoweth; Knew. See Can.

Covercheffe. See Coverchiefes.

Coye: Quiet. Coyen, Tr. L. 2. 801. Koy, MS. Sp. Coy,

Ca. To coax, soothe, appease, keep quiet. Fr. Coy, Calm, quiet.

Craftie: Skillfull. No. 1311.

Crakid: Cracked, boasted. MR. 893. Crakish: Maketh

a hoarse quavering in the throat. See Crakil.

Crakil: To crackle, to make a cracking noise. In CN.

119. it signifies a disagreeable quavering in singing, as

Crakish is used in Sj. 1367.

Crallit: Engraven. Sp. Sk. Harneis quaintly crallit; Furniture curiously embroidered.

Crampishish: Gnaweth. Sp. A word made from the sound of the cranching of the teeth in chewing. Sk.

Perhaps Crampish signifies To cramp or bend violently.

An. 170. and from thence is translated to signify the effect produced in the heart by Anguish of Mind in Lidgate, Fl. 49. There is a parallel Passage in the same

Author's Life of St. Edmund;

Constreint of rygour made hem sore smerte,

Which as they thowhte craumpysilhed al here herte.

And perhaps at mine herte in Fl. 49. should be read

al mine herte, as here al here herte.

Crased: Cracked. No. 955. Fr. Ecraser, To crack.

Creauce: Faith, belief; Trust, credit; Confidence. Fr.

Creance. Also, To buy upon credit or trust, or rather

To settle Accounts. No. 2797, 2874.

Creauise, No. 2811. as Creauice.

Crede: Cred. Mo. 3006. It signifies a Treatise bearing

that

that Title;

*And of Freris I have before
Told in a making of a Crede.*

There is nothing extant under Chancer's name that bears the Title of a Crede. But there is a Poem, Intituled Piers Plowman's Crede, which is a Satyr against the Fryars; whether that be the Crede here meant, or Jack Upland (as some think) or some other Piece on that Subject, I will not pretend to determine: If the Author of this Tale means the first, it follows that either that Crede was written by Chancer, or that the Plowman's Tale is not his. It is wanting in some MSS. as MS. Ch. and H. 1. and in them (as in the printed Editions that want this Tale) the Parson's Prologue, which immediately follows the Manciple's Tale, begins to this effect;

*By that the Manciple had his Tale endid,
The Sunne fro the South side is descendid, &c.*

Crenclid: Crinkled; Full of windings and turnings: Ar. 127.

Crepil: A cripple. Tr. L. 4. 1458.

Crepusculis: The Twilight. p. 144, b. Lat. Crepusculum.

Crevasse, Fr. A crevis or chink. Fa. L. 3. 996.

Criande: Crying. RR. 3138.

Crips for Crisp or Crisped: Curled. Fa. L. 3. 296.

Crispe. See Gips.

Croce, Croice, Crois, Croise: A cross.

Croisery, Mo. 2385. Those for whom Christ suffered on the Cross. Sp. and Com. Christians, called in the next Verse, Christis Christen creatouris. i. creatonris to rhyme to honouris and labouris in the following Verses; Creature being in MSS. often writ creature. The It. Crocceria signifies a Company of Soldiers belonging to a Crusade. Here it may signify the Company or Society of Christian people: And perhaps this place should be read,

— Croiserie
Of Christis Christen creatouris.

Croke: To bend; To grow crooked. Test. In croking of the moon; When the moon was crooked or horned, as it is upon the Increase and Decrease of it. PT. 398.

Crockettes: Locks of hair. Sk. f. Crosses. Thei kembe their crokettes with cristal; They adorn their Crucifixes with Chrystal. Mo. 2246. But Com. explains it, They combe their locks with chrystal combs.

Crokid: Crooked. Crokidly: Crookedly. An. 172.

Cromes, Grommes: Crumbs.

Crommid: Crammed. Fa. L. 3. 1039.

Crone: An old woman. La. 433. See Sk. Old ewes are called Crones in some parts of England. See Ray's Coll.

Cronique: A Chronicle, Annals, History. Hen. 338.

Crop, Crope: The top. Croppis: The tops of trees, or twigs. RR. 1396. Pro. 7. Crope and rote; Top and bottom. This Phrase generally expresses the Perfection of a thing; as, The crope and rote of beaute, Tr. L. 2. 348. The crope and rote of gile, Cup. 17. The perfection of beauty — guile. I know crop and rote; I know it thoroughly, perfectly.

Crope, Cropin: Crept. Fr. 3168. Test.

Croset, Crosselet, Crosselet: A crucible. Fr. Crenset.

Crouch: To cross, to make the sign of the Cross. Sq. 1223.

Croude: To play on a Crowd, or any Musical Instrument. Also, To sing to make any melody.

Croule: Curled.

Croupe: The crupper. Fr. 295.

Crowis feet: Crow's feet. Tr. L. 2. 404. By this are meant the Wrinkles under the Eyes which are the effect of Age, and resemble the impressions of Crow's feet. Instead of growin, in that Verse, MS. Sp. hath be wox, i. e. be grown.

Cruk, MR. 1050. A crock, an earthen pot or cruse. AS. Ipocca. CB. Gochan. Vide Baxter's Gloss in voce Bascauda.

Crull: Curled. MR. 206.

Cry, Ber. 2345. The shuldris and the cry; f. The head and shoulders. Perhaps Cry may be writ for Cryn, Fr. Crane. Lat. Cranium, The skull; the e and the Dash for n being omitted by the Transcriber, as well as that over sey, at the end of the foregoing Verse.

Cryance: Faith, belief. ABC. H. See Creeance.

Cryden: Cried. Crydislow: Cryett thou.

Culle: To pick and chuse; To distinguish. In Mo. 2207. perhaps it is put for quell, V. as cullish for quellish, Ib. 2533, 3244. Com. explains Culle [al. culleib] all her ad- versaries; Pluck out and drive away all that are against them.

Culpons: Strikes, heaps, small parts. Sp. In Pro. 681. the Pardoner's hair is said to lie by culpons, i. e. here and there one. The Italians say Colpo colpo, Now and then.

Culver: A dove, a pigeon. Ph. 92. AS. Culpepe.

Cum: To come. Cr. 361. Came. Test. L. 3.

Cunning, as Conning.

Cupp, Fr. 2488. Withouthin cupp dranke he all his penance; He swallowed down his grief by wholesale; A form of Speech taken from Sots who drink out of the Pot, without making use of a cup.

Curation: Cure; A remedy. Tr. L. 1. 792.

Cure: Care. Take no cure: Take no care. WB. 138. I do no cure; I care not. LW. 152. Busy cure; Officious, diligent care. Magd. 207. Endeavour. Tr. L. 1. 370. A good office. RR. 6752. Also, A cover. Bl. Kn. 53. To cover. Cr. 10.

Curfew-time: The time for covering the fire. MR. 537. William the Conqueror, in the First year of his Reign, commanded that in every Town and Village a Bell should be rung every night at Eight of the Clock, and that all persons should then put out their fire and candle, and go to bed; the ringing of which Bell was called Curfew, Fr. Couvre-fen, i. e. Cover-fire.

Curious: Carefull. RR. 6578. Curious besinesse; Business which requires great care and application. No. 2733.

Curriden: Courted, curried favour. Test.

Currouns: Couriers, messengers. Fa. L. 3. 1038.

Curfiness: Wickedness, execrable villany.

Curteise, Curteys, Curteise: Courteous; affable. Pro. 99.

Curry-favel: Flattery. PT. 362. The Author of the Art of English Poetrie, printed 1589. calls the Figure Paradi- asole, Curry-favell, which is (as he explains it) "when we make the best of a bad thing, or turn a signifi- cation to the more plausible sense; as to call an un- thrift, a liberal Gentleman: the foolish-hardy, va- liant or courageous: the niggard, thrifty: a great riot or outrage, a youthfull prank, and such like terms; moderating and abating the force of the mat- ter by craft, and for a pleasing purpose."

Curryfye: Curiosity.

Cusky, PT. 423. The words [to slepe] which follow it, seem to have been at first a Gloss in the margin for explaining the CB. Cusky or Cysen, To sleep.

Customable: Customary, accustomed, used. BD. 551. Ac- quainted with the world, or custom in such cases.

Customance: Custom. Mo. 537. But instead of a custo- mance, Py. 1. hath accustomance, in one word.

Customere, RR. 4936. as Customable.

Cuth for Couth, V.

Cypride, AF. 276. Venus Queen of Cyprus. In the former Editions it was Cupide; which is wrong, as is plain from what goes before and what follows, Ib. 279.

Cyte: A city.

Cyezins: Citizens. Boeth.

D.

Daffe: A Daffard, a coward. MR. 1100. In Ray's Coll. To Daffe is To daunt; and Dafe is Stupid, blockish, daunted.

Daggies: Latchets [or Slips] cut out of leather. Sp. Sk. It also signifies the Skirts of a Fleece that are cut off. Dagging: Cutting into small slips, sins or pieces. p. 198, a. Dagged: Cut into daggies. Ib. All to sincere, as it is expressed in RR. 840. To Dagge sometimes signifies To daggie.

Dagon: A piece, a remnant. Fr. 487. from Dagge. It seems to have an affinity with the CB. Doyn, A cer- tain quantity, or proportion.

Date: Day. It is put for the Day or Time of one's death;

death; as, His father's daie; His father's decease. Mo. 298. After his daie; After his death. Fr. 3001. And sometimes for An appointed time. To grauntin him daies of [f. for] the remenaunt; To grant him certain Terms for the payment of the remainder. Ib. 3129. See No. 1062.

Daine: To vouchsafe.

Dainous, as Deignous.

Daintouse: Dainty, delicate, nice. Fr. 1295.

Dainty: Daintiness; Respect, esteem, value. Told no dainty of their love; Regarded, or valued not their love. Wb. 208. See Deinte.

Dalfe: Dug up, tilled; from Delue, To dig.

Daliaunce: Dalliance; Conversation; Pleasant, humorous conversation. Magd. 533.

Damascene: Damascius, or the Country about it. Feld of Damascens is put for Paradise. Mo. 119. So Lidgate in the Fall of Princes, &c. L. 1. Ch. 1. useth Damascene the felde.

Dame: Mother. A maid to dame; A virgin to his mother. Mo. 3291. Damis tonge; Mother's tongue. Teff.

Dammageous: Hurtfull, prejudicial. p. 198, b.

Dampne: To condemn. Damnid, Dampnid: Condemned.

Dan: An old Appellation for Master, put before Proper Names; as, Dan John, Dan Arcite, &c. and answers to the Spanish Don. It comes from the Fr. Dame, which was anciently used indifferently for Men and Women.

Dare: To stare. Sk. To be in pain. See Ray's Coll.

Dareyn, Darreigne, Darreyn: To attempt; To dare; To reclaim; To challenge; To set in array, to prepare for fight. See Sk. and Spelm. in Adramire.

Darn: Dare.

Dasil: Amazed. Mo. 3256. Dazzled, blinded.

Dasin: To twinkle; To grow dim-sighted. Mo. 1608.

Dates: Evidences, Writings. Old dates; Antient History, Antiquity. Mo. 2007.

Daungere, Daungir: Coyness, shyness, scruple, difficulty; Frugality, parsimony. RR. 1147. Power, reach. Ib. 1470. With daunger; Sparingly. Daungers: Nice, coy, shy; Niggardly, sparing; Difficult, scrupulous.

Daunt: To conquer. Pars.

Daway: To away, i. e. Take away, or Away with it.

Dawe: Day; Time. By eldir dawe; In antient time, In former days. Mo. 2583. Also, To dawn. MR. 1141. Dawis: Days.

Dawning: The dawn, or break of day. Ar. 300.

Deanrat: Golden, gilt. Bl. Kn. 598.

Debate: To fight, contend. Also, Strife, contention; Uneasiness. BD. 698.

Debonaire: Gentle, meek, affable, courteous, mild; Mitis, Boeth. Debonairly: Humbly, meekly, &c. Debonaire: Kindness, meekness, &c. Clemency.

Decerneth: Discerneth.

Decopid: Peaked. Sk. Pinked, cut in figures, as of the Windows of St. Paul's. MR. 210. From the Fr. Decouper, To cut.

Decorate, p. 376, b. Decoratus, A man's name.

Ded: Did. Ber. 3098.

Dede: Dead; Did; An Act, or Deed. Also, Death. CN. 131.

Deedly: Deadly; Devoted to death. Fr. 2586.

Deden: Did.

Dedliche: Deadly, mortal.

Deed, as Dede.

Dees. See Deis and Des.

Defaute: To decay, to alter in one's countenance; Also, Lean, wasted, thin in the face. Fr. Defait.

Defaitid, as Defaute.

Defame: Infamy, an ill name. Fr. 1750. Mo. 573. BD. 705.

Defaute: Defect, want; Default, fault. Fr. Defaut. In his defaute; Through his fault. BD. 270.

Defence: Prohibition; Hindrance. Your defence; Whatsoever you forbid. Tr. L. 3. 138. Fr. Defense.

Defende: To forbid. Fr. Defendre. Also, to preserve, keep. RR. 5800. Defendid: Forbad, forbilden.

Defame, as Defame.

Deficate, f. for Deificate, Cr. 288. Deified, made Gods; Divine.

Definishe: To define.

Definitive: Final; Positive, determined.

Defoiled: Defiled. Bal. 1073. Foiled, cast down, trampled upon. p. 193, a. From the Fr. Fouler, To tread under feet.

Deformate: Deformed. Cr. 349.

Defoule: To defile, pollute. Defoulid: Defiled.

Degre: Stairs. RR. 485. Footsteps. p. 386, b.

Deid, Deide: Dyed. Tr. L. 1. 56. Dy'd or coloured. Boeth.

Deidin: To dye; Dyed. Fr. 637.

Deigneliche, as Digneliche. In Tr. L. 2. 1024. Ca. reads clerkly (i. e. Learnedly) instead of digneliche.

Deignous: Disdainfull; Angry, coy.

Deine: To dye. Di. 256. Also, To vouchsafe.

Deinows, as Deignous.

Deinte, Deinty: A rarity, what seldom happens. Tr. L. 2. 164. Pleasure, desire. Also, Desirable, pleasant. Fr. 2133. See Dainty.

Deis: A Throne; A seat. Sq. 79. It properly signifies a Canopy, or Cloth of State. Fr. Dais.

Deite: Deity; Divine Power or Dominion. Fr. 2593.

Dekins: Deacons.

Del, Dele, Dell, Doile, Dyll: A part, share, portion. Eve-ry dell, or dyl, AL. 227. Every whit, every part. Nevir a dele; Nothing at all, Not a jot. No. 2186. Not a dele; Not in the least. RR. 6897. No more a dele; No more at all. Ib. 7041. Also, To share, divide, distribute. Dele, Ber. 451. for Dole, V.

Delectable: Delightfull, pleasant.

Delectation: Delight. Magd. 306.

Delibered: Deliberated, considered; Thought.

Deliberen: To deliberate, to consider. Tr. L. 4. 169. But MS. Sp. hath Dyrysyn, which signifies the same thing.

Delicacie: Pleasure. Mo. 505.

Delices: Delights, pleasures. No. 3.

Delie: Small, thin, slender. Right delie threde; Very fine thread; Tenuissimis filis, Boeth.

Delitable, as Delectable.

Delites, Ber. 123. should be Delice, V.

Delitous, as Delectable.

Deliver: Nimble, active. RR. 831. Deliverliche, Deliverly: Nimble, quickly. Deliverneß: Agility of body, activity.

Dell. See D:l.

Delue: To dig. See Dike.

Deluge: Deluge. p. 207, b.

Delyver. See Deliver.

Demain, D:maine, Demeine: To govern, to rule. Also; Government, dominion, empire, power.

Demande: A question. Bl. Kn. 566. Also, A petition, a request; Desire. Fr. Demande.

Deme, Demen, Demin: To judge, determine; To condemn. Mo. 2585.

D:mening: Demeanor, behaviour. Magd. 226.

D:moniack: One possessed with a Devil.

Dent: Dint, a stroke, a blow; An impression, a mark. Dent of lovis dart; The stroke, or wound of love's dart. CL. 826. Also, Din, noise. A thunder dent, MR. 699. Dente of thunder, Fa. L. 2. 26. A clap of thunder. AS. Dyn.

Dentour: An Indenture, any thing indented. As a dentour wryeth; Windeth like an Indenture. Ber. 2057.

Denude: To untie a knot; To extricate, or disengage; from the Fr. Denouer. RL. 140. seems to be corrupted: The difficulty arises from the word ridde, which is synonymous to denude. There is certainly a mistake in the Verse following of Flatirris for Flatirisse, A flattering woman; the Poet alluding to Prov. II. 16, 17.

Denvere: Doubt. See Sk.

Deol, as Dole.

Depaint: Painted; Bedawbed. No. 2478.

Depardeur, as Parde, V.

Depart, Departin: To depart; To part, separate, divide, share, distribute; To take part. Also, To be separated. p. 207, b.

Depe: Deep. Depir: Deeper. Depliche: Deeply.

Depeinted, as Depaint.

Depe loupe, Bal. Lad. 92. Transparent, giving thorough light. Sp. Sk. thinks it should be read Develoupe, from the Fr. Developpé, Unfolded, &c. as if it meant, Discovered, manifest. Though this is far from giving satisfaction, I shall forbear offering any Conjectures grounded upon the supposed Corruption of the place (which death; as, His father's daie; His father's decease. Mo. 298. After his daie; After his death. Fr. 3001. And sometimes for An appointed time. To grauntin him daies of [f. for] the remenaunt; To grant him certain Terms for the payment of the remainder. Ib. 3129. See No. 1062.

Daine: To vouchsafe.

Dainous, as Deignous.

Daintieuse: Dainty, delicate, nice. Fr. 1295.

Dainty: Daintiness; Respect, esteem, value. Told no dainty of their love; Regarded, or valued not their love. Wb. 208. See Deinte.

Dalfe: Dug up, tilled; from Delve, To dig.

Dalliance: Dalliance; Conversation; Pleasant, humorous conversation. Magd. 533.

Damascene: Damascus, or the Country about it. Feld of Damascus is put for Paradise. Mo. 119. So Lidgate in the Fall of Princes, &c. L. 1. Ch. 1. useth Damascene the felde.

Dame: Mother. A maid to dame; A virgin to his mother. Mo. 3291. Damis tonge; Mother's tongue. Tess.

Damnable: Hurtfull, prejudicial. p. 198, b.

Dampne: To condemn. Damid, Dampnid: Condemned.

Dan: An old Appellation for Master, put before Proper Names; as, Dan John, Dan Arcite, &c. and answers to the Spanish Don. It comes from the Fr. Dame, which was anciently used indifferently for Men and Women.

Dare: To stare. Sk. To be in pain. See Ray's Coll.

Dareyn, Darreigne, Darreyn: To attempt; To dare; To reclaim; To challenge; To set in array, to prepare for fight. See Sk. and Spelm. in Adramire.

Darn: Dare.

Dasil: Amazed. Mo. 3256. Dazzled, blinded.

Dasin: To twinkle; To grow dim-sighted. Mo. 1608.

Dates: Evidences, Writings. Old dates; Ancient History, Antiquity. Mo. 2007.

Daugere, Dauagir: Coyness, shyness, scruple, difficulty; Frugality, parsimony. RR. 1147. Power, reach. Ib. 1470. With daunger; Sparingly. Daungerous: Nice, coy, shy; Niggardly, sparing; Difficult, scrupulous.

Daunt: To conquer. Pars.

Daway: Do away, i. e. Take away, or Away with it.

Dawe: Day; Time. By eldir dawe; In antient time, In former days. Mo. 2583. Also, To dawn. MR. 1141. Davis: Days.

Dawning: The dawn, or break of day. Ar. 300.

Deaurat: Golden, gilt. Bl. Kn. 598.

Debate: To fight, contend. Also, Strife, contention; Uneasiness. BD. 698.

Debonaire: Gentle, meek, affable, courteous, mild; Mitis, Boeth. Debonairly: Humbly, meekly, &c. Debonairte: Kindness, meekness, &c. Clemency.

Decerneth: Discerneth.

Decopid: Peaked. Sk. Pinked, cut in figures, as of the Windows of St. Paul's. MR. 210. From the Fr. Decouper, To cut.

Decorate, p. 376, b. Decoratus, A man's name.

Ded: Did. Ber. 3098.

Dede: Dead; Did; An Act, or Deed. Also, Death. CN. 131.

Declix: Deadly; Devoted to death. Fr. 2586.

Deden: Did.

Dedliche: Deadly, mortal.

Deed, as Dede.

Dees. See Deis and Des.

Defaite: To decay, to alter in one's countenance; Also, Lean, wasted, thin in the face. Fr. Defait.

Defaitid, as Defaite.

Defame: Infamy, an ill name. Fr. 1750. Mo. 573. BD. 705.

Defaute: Defect, want; Default, fault. Fr. Defaut. In his defaute; Through his fault. BD. 270.

Defence: Prohibition; Hindrance. Your defence; Whatsoever you forbid. Tr. L. 3. 138. Fr. Defense.

Defende: To forbid. Fr. Defendre. Also, to preserve, keep. RR. 5800. Defendid: Forbad, forbidlen.

Defame, as Defanie.

Deficate, f. for Deificate, Cx. 288. Deified, made Gods; Divine.

Definishe: To define.

Definitive: Final; Positive, determined.

Defoiled: Defiled. Bal. 1073. Foiled, cast down, trampled upon. p. 193, a. From the Fr. Fouler, To tread under feet.

Deformate: Deformed. Cx. 349.

Defoule: To defile, pollute. Defoulid: Defiled.

Degre: Stairs. RR. 485. Footsteps. p. 386, b.

Deid, Deide: Dyed. Tr. L. 1. 56. Dy'd or coloured. Boeth.

Deidin: To dye; Dyed. Fr. 637.

Deigneliche, as Digneliche. In Tr. L. 2. 1024. Ca. reads clerly (i. e. Learnedly) instead of digneliche.

Deignous: Disdainfull; Angry, coy.

Deine: To dye. Di. 256. Also, To vouchsafe.

Deinous, as Deignous.

Deinte, Deinty: A rarity, what seldom happens. Tr. L. 2. 164. Pleasure, desire. Also, Desirable, pleasant. Fr. 2133. See Dainty.

Deis: A Throne; A seat. Sg. 79. It properly signifies a Canopy, or Cloth of State. Fr. Dais.

Deite: Deity; Divine Power or Dominion. Fr. 2593.

Dekins: Deacons.

Del, Dele, Dell, Doule, Dyll: A part, share, portion. Every dell, or dyl, AL. 227. Every whit, every part. Nevir a dele; Nothing at all, Not a jot. No. 2186. Not a dele; Not in the least. RR. 6897. No more a dele; No more at all. Ib. 7041. Also, To share, divide, distribute. Dele, Ber. 451. for Dole, V.

Delectable: Delightfull, pleasant.

Delectation: Delight. Magd. 306.

Delibered: Deliberated, considered; Thought.

Deliberen: To deliberate, to consider. Tr. L. 4. 169. But MS. Sp. hath Dywyssin, which signifies the same thing.

Delicacie: Pleasure. Mo. 505.

Delices: Delights, pleasures. No. 3.

Delic: Small, thin, slender. Right delic threde; Very fine thread; Tenuissimis filis, Boeth.

Delitable, as Delectable.

Delites, Ber. 123. should be Delice, V.

Delitous, as Delectable.

Deliver: Nimble, active. RR. 831. Deliverliche, Deliverly: Nimble, quickly. Deliverneß: Agility of body, activity.

Dell. See D:l.

Delve: To dig. See Dike.

Deluve: Deluge. p. 207, b.

Delyver. See Deliver.

Demain, D:maine, Demeine: To govern, to rule. Also, Government, dominion, empire, power.

Demande: A question. Bl. Kn. 566. Also, A petition, a request; Desire. Fr. Demande.

Deme, Demen, Demin: To judge, determine; To condemn. Mo. 2585.

D:mening: Demeanor, behaviour. Magd. 226.

Demonlake: One possessed with a Devil.

Dent: Dint, a stroke, a blow; An impression, a mark. Dent of love's dart; The stroke, or wound of love's dart. CL. 826. Also, Din, noise. A thonder dent, MR. 699. Dente of thonder, Fa. L. 2. 26. A clap of thunder. AS. Dyn.

Dentour: An Indenture, any thing indented. As a dentour wryeth; Windeth like an Indenture. Ber. 2057.

Denude: To untie a knot; To extricate, or disengage; from the Fr. Denouer. RL. 140. seems to be corrupted: The difficulty arises from the word ridde, which is synonymous to denude. There is certainly a mistake in the Verse following of Flattirirs for Flattirisse, A flattering woman; the Poet alluding to Prov. II. 16, 17.

Denvere: Doubt. See Sk.

Deol, as Dole.

Depaint: Painted; Bedawbed. No. 2478.

Depardewx, as Parde, V.

Depart, Departin: To depart; To part, separate, divide, share, distribute; To take part. Also, To be separated. p. 207, b.

Depe: Deep. Depir: Deeper. Depliche: Deeply.

Depeinted, as Depaint.

Depe loupe, Bal. Lad. 92. Transparent, giving thorow light. Sp. Sk. thinks it should be read Develoupe, from the Fr. Developpé, Unfolded, &c. as if it meant, Discovered, manifest. Though this is far from giving satisfaction, I shall forbear offering any Conjectures grounded upon the supposed Corruption of the place (which (which hath passed through all the Editions I have perused) having no MS. to consult upon it. Loupe, in Fr. signifies, A magnifying Glass.

Depir, Depliche. See Depe.

Deprave, Depravin: To defame, to slander.

Dequace: To dash. Sp. To quash, overcome. See Sk. in Quash. Perhaps it may come from the Lat. Decussare, or Decutere.

Dercked: Darkened. Boeth.

Dere: To hurt. Mo. 113. Dear. He maie not holde his treasure dere; He should not think his money ill layd out, or the Treasure of friendship bought too dear. RR. 1180.

Dearer. Tr. L. 1. 174. which Ca. reads thus;

Nus neuer seen thyng to be preyed derre.

Dereworth: Dear, precious. Dere worthy digned, Bal. Lad. 39. perhaps should be read Dereworth ydigned, i. e. Esteemed most precious and valuable.

Derk: Dark. Fr. 2390.

Derne: Secret; Earnest, careful; Cruel, severe.

Derre: Dear; Dearer. See Dere.

Des: A Canopy of State. Fr. Dais. See Deis.

Desceivance: Deceit, deceiving; Mistake. Boeth.

Deserie, Deserive: To describe.

Dejerne: To discern. Tr. L. 4. 390.

Desidery: Desire. Bal. 382.

Define for Define, Tr. L. 4. 390. MS. Sp. and Ca. Dyffine: To determine, conclude.

Desire: Delirable. Bal. Lad. 229.

Deslavie: Lecherous, lascivious. See Sk.

Desolate: Ruined, undone. No. 2114.

Despight, Despise: An Affront, injury, spite, contempt. See Dispise.

Despoiten, f. leg. Bespoiten: To bespot, stain, defile; Commuculant. Boeth. p. 376, b.

Destinable: Fatal, ordered by Fate; Fatalis. Boeth.

Destrier: A War-horse. No. 3418. Fr. Destrier. See Sk. and Sp. Some think it first signified, a Led Horse from the Lat. Deavra, The right hand. Gl. Lob.

Destrie: To destroy. Mo. 3084.

Determination: Determination; Distinction. p. 505, b.

Detellese: Free from debt. Prol. 584.

Deviant: Deviating, wandering, out of the way.

Devide: To divide, to part; To depart. Mo. 304.

Devineresse: A Witch, a Prophetess.

Dvir: Endeavour; Duty. Fr. Dvoir.

Devise: To direct, to order; To declare, tell, rehearse;

To describe. Also, Will or pleasure. RR. 1326, 1974.

Devised: Divided. Hen. 235.

Devide: Void. Also, To remove, put away. See Vuide.

Dvoir, as Devir.

Divorse for Divorce, Magd. 284.

Dvoir for Dvoir, p. 205, b. Duer, MS. Ch.

Dysjonne: Division; Discord. Ber. 720.

Dwe: Duc. Dente: Duty.

Dey, Mo. 959. A Dairy-woman. Sk:

Dye: To dye. Dyde: Dyed. Dydist: Didst dye.

Drynouse, MR. 833. Dens, Dionysius, A man's name; or perhaps it may signify Proud, haughty, as Dionysus, V.

Diaper. "Diapering is a Term in Drawing, when you lightly trace or run over with a pen, in Damask-branches or such like, your other work when you have quite done. It chiefly serveth to counterfeit Cloth of Gold, Silver, Damask branch, Velvet, Chamlet, &c. with what branch, or in what fashion you list. Peacham's Comp. Gent. p. 345. Diaprid: Diversified with flourishes, or sundry figures varied. Prol. 2160. RR. 934.

Dike: A Ditch. Also, To dig, to fortify with a ditch. Th. 3. Dichid: Inclosed with a ditch.

Did, for Bit, Prol. 187. See Bit.

Dide, Didin: Did: Dyed.

Died: Perfumed. RR. 1705.

Diete, perhaps for Dite: Deity. RR. 5656.

Dietes for Dietes: Ditties, Songs. See Dite.

Diffame: To defame, to slander, to disgrace, to reproach. Of ther mishap he diffame; Upbraid them with their misfortune. RR. 5500.

Diffence: Defence; Resistance. Ber. 1247.

Dyffynished: Defined. Boeth.

Digestible: Easy of digestion. Prol. 439.

Digestives: Medicines to help digestion. Mo. 1076.

Dight: To deck, adorn; To dress; To prepare. In Tr. L. 5. 37. instead of dight, read dresse (as in MS. Sp.) which rhymes to wreidnesse and redresse. See Dress. It also signifies Decked, dressed, &c. He him dight, Mo. 553. He betook himself.

Digne: Worthy; Gentle; Disdainful, coy. Prol. 510.

Dirty, nasty, MR. 856. qu. Dingy, from Dung, AS.

Dincg. It is also put for Deigne: To vouchsafe. Tr.

L. 3. 139. Digneliche, Dignely: Worthily; Properly.

Dike: To dig, to cast up a ditch. Dike and delve, Prol. 538. f. Dig with mattock and spade. See Ray's Coll. in Dig.

Dilatation: Enlargement. La. 233.

Dilectable, as Delectable.

Diminicion (or as MS. Sp. Tr. L. 3. 1341. Diminucion)

Abatement.

Dine, RR. 6500. Dinir, Tr. L. 2. 1489. Dinner. See Aline.

Ding: To beat, to knock or thrust down, drive, squeeze, oppress.

Dint, Tr. L. 5. 1504. See Dent.

Diourne denarie, Bal. Lad. 66. Daily pay or wages.

Dirige, Magd. 641. A Psalm or Hymn sung at Funerals; whence Dirge signifies any mournful Song.

Disable: Unable. Bal. 572.

Disacordant: Disagreeing.

Disavaunce: To distress; To stop, or hinder the progress of. Tr. L. 2. 511. To cast down.

Disaventure: Misfortune, mischance. Tr. L. 4. 297.

Disblame: To excuse, or clear one from blame. Disblame me; Blame not me. Tr. L. 2. 17.

Discein, Disceinte: Deceit, falsehood.

Disceivable: Deceitful, treacherous. RR. 4836.

Disceidid: Alighted. Fr. 2798. Descended; Condescended. p. 149, a.

Disceusson: Dissention, discord.

Disceusories: Stills used for Distillation per descensum, that is, when the matter to be distilled is placed under the fire, whereby the Spirits are precipitated and forced downwards. No. 817.

Disceution: Dissention, discord. Se. 199.

Disception: Deception, deceit, dissimulation. Cr. 197.

Discever for Dissever: To distinguish; To consume, dissipate. No. 896. To separate, or depart. Magd. 707.

Disceveraunce: Separation. Tr. L. 3. 1430.

Disceving: Deceit. RR. 1590.

Dischance yewe not, P. T. 471. perhaps for Dischance yewe not; Give not over your charge.

Dischevel: Dishevelled, having ones hair hanging loose. Prol. 686. Fr. Dechevelé.

Disclaunder: To slander, to reproach. Mo. 2273, 3203.

Disclaundre: Slander, scandal. Tr. L. 4. 564.

Discomfite: Disconsolate, comfortless. RD. 35. RR. 4067.

Discomfure: A defeat, or overthrow in battle. Prol. 1010. Sorrow. An. 328.

Discomfortin: To discourage.

Discordable, Discordant: Disagreeing, different; Contrary.

Discorden: To disagree, differ. Boeth.

Discoverie: Open, bare, naked, uncovered. p. 204, a.

Discovered. BD. 405. Fr. Découvert.

Discoveryn: To discover; To explain.

Diserivin: To describe. Tr. L. 5. 1313. MS. Sp. hath Discoveryn instead of it.

Disdeinous: Disdainfull, haughty. RR. 7412.

Discrese: To diminish, to fail. Boeth. Diminution. Bl. Kn. 203.

Disceidid: Descended. Tr. L. 5. 1479.

Disese: Uneasiness, trouble, hurt. Mo. 3190. Misfortune, affliction; To disturb, incommode, make uneasy. Also, To dislize, dispossess, deprive. RR. 2076.

Disesely: Uneasy, troubled; Indisposed.

Disetirly: Deformedly; Indisguise. Dight him effe a-gyns right disetirly, Ber. 1781. He pretently placed his fingers again in a deformed manner by distorting them, as in the following Verse.

Disguisene: Disguise. Ber. 1789.

Disguish in quintice: To dress neatly. RR. 2200.

Disbrie, Prol. 2923. (Disbrie, MS. Ch.) Disbried,

Di. 142. Disembarked; Dispossessed, deprived.

Disguine,

Disjointe, Disjoynt: A hard case, danger. Sk. Stunt in such disjointe, No. 2919. qu. in malo articulo constitutus. Sk. In what disjoint be more stondu; In what danger he must be. Hyp. 264. In Lidgate's Story of Thebes, Part II. 32. it plainly signifies Difference or Discord. The Poet there describes the inveterate Quarrel of the two Sons of Oedipus about the Crown, in this manner;

*So hate brent of hatred and envie
Of bothe two through pompous surquedie,
That neither wolde plainlie in o pointe
Other forbere, they stode in such disjointe,
Like as they had of birth bene foreins.*

Diskenynge hym, PT. 20. Withdrawing or keeping out of the notice of others; Concealing or hiding himself.

Diskenyng hym: Discover yourself. Ber. 1497.

Diskenyng the peyntur, PT. 151. It should be Diskenyng, i. e. Discovering, or explaining the Painting.

Disobediant: Disobedient. AF. 429.

Disordinaunce: Disorder, confusion. Fa. L. 1. 27.

Dispairid: Despairing, in despair. Tr. L. 1. 42.

Disparage: Disparagement. Fr. 1929.

Dispartin: To divide, to share, to distribute.

Dispelrid, Mo. 873. as Dispairid.

Dispence, Dispens: Expence. ProL. 443. WB. 1263.

Dispend: To spend, consume. Fr. 2144. To divide. p. 153, b. Dispendours: Spend-thrifts.

Disperance: Despair. Tr. L. 2. 530. which in MS. Sp. is thus read; — But from derke desperance, That, &c.

Dispise for Dispise: To despise.

Dispite: Spight, revenge. ProL. 949. Aversion, hatred; Contempt, disdain. See Despise. Dispitous, ProL. 518. Spightfull, severe, having no pity or compassion. Dispitously: Spightfully, angrily; Without pity. Fr. 1565.

Displeasance: Displeasure. RR. 3436.

Dispoill: To undress. Fr. 1404. To spoil, rob. RR. 5066.

Dispone: To dispose.

Disport: Sport, diversion, pleasure. ProL. 137. To take one's pleasure; To make sport, to divert. Tr. L. 2. 1673. But this and the following Verses are thus read in Ca.

*And hym with al hyr hert she gan disport
As she best cowde of sorow hym to comfort.*

See lb. L. 3. 1139, 1140.

Disposicion: Disposal. ProL. 2366.

Dispraise: To undervalue, to despise. Dispraising: Contempt.

Dispravin, Cup. 265. as Deprave.

Dispyit, as Despight, and Dispite.

Disruly: Irregularly, in a disorderly manner. RR. 4900.

Disseite: Deceit, treachery. Bal. 936.

Disseiving: Deceiving. Boeth.

Dissever: To separate. Dissevered from holie church; Excommunicated. Mo. 3172.

Dissevin: To deceive. CL. 1038.

Dissewabill: Deceitfull. Ber. 925.

Dissimulate: Dissembling. Cr. 225.

Dissemble: To dissemble, feign.

Disolucoun: Dissoluteness, debauchery, lewdness. Mo. 4898.

Dissonid: Dissonant, disagreeing. RR. 4248.

Disstaine: To stain, defile. Tr. L. 2. 840. Magd. 165.

Disstauce: Difference, discord. Mo. 3106. Sc. 162.

Dissemper: To discompose. Dissemper you not; Be patient. Fr. 931. Dissemper not your heart; Do not discompose your mind. p. 151, b. Dissemperance: Intemperance. p. 387, b.

Disseynid: Stained, defiled. PT. 341.

Disstinct: To distinguish. RR. 6199.

Disstinguid: Distinguished. Boeth.

Disstointe, Tr. L. 3. 497. for Disjointe, V.

Disstourbe, Disstourbin; To disturb, interrupt; To disappoint, hinder, prevent. Tr. L. 4. 1103.

Disstourblid: Disturbed. RR. 1713.

Disstrain: To constrain. p. 191, b. To distress, to torment; To catch, take hold fast; To obtain. p. 151, b. To take away by force. Mo. 1738. Disstrained: Tormented, afflicted, &c. Bl. Kn. 134.

Disfrakt, Ber. 2645. Disfranght, Magd. 149. Disfracted.

Disfreine, as Disfrain.

Disfreite: Distress, extremity. In Ber. 2910. perhaps it should be read in their own disfreite, i. e. In that deceit, or snare which they treacherously designed for others: Or else Disfreite may signify a District, Liberty or Jurisdiction, as the Fr. Desfrete is used, Lob. To. II. col. 446. O toutes jurisdictions e desfretes; With all jurisdictions and Districts, or Liberties.

Disfreie, Mo. 3165. as Desfreie.

Disstourbeleth: Disturbeth, hindereth. Disstourblid: Disturbed. Dr. Ch. 524. See Disstourbe.

Disstryve, f. for Discryve: To describe. Ber. 1924.

Dissturbleth, as Disstourbeleth.

Dissturne: To turn away, to avert. Tr. L. 3. 719. Fr. Detourner.

Disware: Not aware. Ber. 2311. Unwary, careless.

Disware of his lyve; Regardless of his life. lb. 1992.

Dite: Dislys Cretensis, who wrote of the Trojan War. Also, a Tract or Treatise either in Prose or Verse, but most commonly the latter. Also, To write or endite. RR. 6786. Ditees: Dittys, Songs. p. 359, a.

Ditte, as Dite.

Diversif: Diversifieth; Varieth. Tr. L. 3. 1758.

Divine: To imagine. Mo. 1381. Also, Divinity. RR. 6488. See lb. 6553.

Divinistre: A Divine. ProL. 2813.

Divison, Divisoun: Distinction, difference. Fort. 33. p. 152, a. Mart's divisoun; That part of the Painting wherein the Misfortunes of War were represented. ProL. 2026.

Do: Done. Also, To cause a thing to be done. I will do you so much; I will order matters so, that, &c. p. 149, b. Do inough; To satisfy, p. 207, a. Doande: Doing. RR. 2708.

Dobil: Double. Ber. 153.

Doers, Ber. 101. f. corrupted from Doores. Ducia in It. signifies a Leaden Pipe to convey water from the top of a house.

Doe: Done. The world is doe; The world is at an end. Bal. 931. See Do.

Doin: To do.

Dole: Sorrow; Moan, lamentation, mourning. RR. 2956. To grieve. It dolith me; It grieves me. No. 1114. Fr.

Dolil, Mourning, from the Lat. Doleo, To grieve. Also, A share or part. Withoutin halvin dole; Without dividing. lb. 2364.

Dolour: Sorrow, grief, pain. RR. 5016.

Dolvin: Dug; Buried. RR. 4070.

Doly, Cr. 1. Dolefull, melancholy, from Dole, V.

Dombe: Dumb.

Dome: Judgment; Opinion. As to my dome; In my opinion. Sq. 697. A Judicial Sentence. Domis day; The Day of Judgment. Mo. 2271. What evill the dome, &c. No. 2913. See The dome. Domis: Judgments. Domisman: A Judge. Mo. 526. p. 201, b.

Domus for Domis, Ber. 35. See Dome.

Don, Dine: To do; Done. Also, Of a dun colour. AF. 334. Done honouris; To do honours. In former Editions it was printed, done boures or houris, by mistaking the Abbreviation of honoures or honouris.

Donet, p. 504, b. signifies a Grammar (as the CB. Dynod, likewise does) from Aelius Dynatus, who wrote several Tracts in Grammar and Criticism.

Donnow, WB. 218. Dannow, a Priory in Essex, where there was a Custom, That any person who had been married a year and a day, upon taking an Oath before the Prior and Convent, That he had not repented of it in that time, was intituled to a Gammon or Flich of Bacon; which being delivered to him he was conducted out of the Town with great solemnity. See Wearer's Fun. Mon. and Mon. Angl. To. II. p. 78.

Donne: To do; Done. Also, Of a dun colour. Tr. L. 2. 908.

Doo, Doon: To do; Done.

Dormaunt: Standing or lying always ready, never removed. His table dormaunt, i. e. Always covered. ProL. 355.

Dorr: A door. PT. 135.

Dortour: A Dormitory; A common Sleeping-room in Monasterys, &c.

Doseperis.

Doseperis, Dosperis, Fr. Les Douze Pairs; The Twelve Peers of France. The French Antiquaries and Historians are not agreed as to their Original: Some carry it up as high as Charlemagne. Such as would be more particularly informed concerning them may consult Valefij Not. Gal. p. 280, b. Hist. de France par le Pere Daniel. To. I. col. 1355. Mezeray. To. II. p. 2, 3, 9, 84. L'Etat de France, Ed. 1718. To. II. p. 126, &c. Fr. Gl. in Pares Francia. In Ber. 44. 51. some Legendary Governors of Rome are so called in allusion to those of France.

Big looking like a doughty Douzeperere.

Spenser's Fairy Q. L. 3. Canto 10. St. 31.

Doffer, Fa. L. 3. 850. A Doffer or Dorfer [Lat. Dorsarium] is a Cratch, or Basket, carried on the back; from the Fr. Dos, Lat. Dorsum, The back.

Dotaunce: Fear; Reverence, respect. Ber. 6. Perhaps from the It. Dottanza, Fear. See Men. It. in Dotta.

Dorb: Do you. WB. 1248.

Doubt, RR. 1089. See Dout.

Doughti: Valiant, brave; Generous; Proud. See Sk.

Doughtirin: Daughters. Ar. 78.

Donle, Mo. 3202. for Dale, V.

Dout: Fear, Jeopardy. RR. 4513. Also, To fear; It. Dottare. See Men. It. in Dotta.

Doutaunce: Doubt. Tr. L. 4. 963.

Doute, as Dout.

Doutileß, Doutlees: Doubtless.

Doutous: Doubtfull. Tr. L. 4. 992.

Doutremere (Fr. D'outre mer) Brought from beyond Sea.

Dr. Ch. 253.

-ai- Dowiae, Dowale, i.e. Do away; as we say, Away, away. Tr. L. 2. 893.

Dowaire, Fr. Douaire: A dowry. Fr. 1869.

Drad, Dradde: Dreaded, feared; Afraid; To be afraid. Mo. 3027. Dreadfull, terrible. RR. 4200. unless it should be there read, brade.

Drasse-fak: A Sack full of drass. MR. 1098.

Drastie, No. 3427. Tedious, irksome, troublesome. Sk.

Drame: A dream. AF. 31.

Drat: Dreadeth. Tr. L. 3. 329. Dredyth, Ca.

Dred, Drede, Dreed: Dread, fear; Reverence, respect. p. 151, a. Also, Doubt. No drede; No doubt. With- outin drede; Without doubt. Instead of, But he have love of the people and drede, p. 151, a. l. 36. read, But he have more love of the people than drede. Dredfull: Timorous. Prol. 1481. Fr. 2863. Dutifull, submissive. LW. 404. Also, Doubtfull. Tr. L. 2. 426. Dredel- leß, Dredileß: Doubtless. Tr. L. 1. 1035. Dredidin: Dreaded.

Dreeshed, Mo. 1002. for Dretched: Disturbed; Oppressed. See Dretche. This Reading is confirmed by MS. Ch. which hath it Drethed. It was Drenched in former Editions.

Dreint: Drowned. MR. 412. Fr. 817, 2932.

Drenche: To be drowned. MR. 413. Sq. 1718.

Drerie, Drery: Sad, sorrowful. Tr. L. 1. 13. Drerihed, Drerineß: Sorrow, sadness. RR. 4728. AS. Dryymian, Tristitia afficere.

Dreshfold, MR. 375. (or rather Dreshfold, as in Fr. 1318.) A threshold.

Dress, Dresse, Dressin: To prepare. Tr. L. 2. 71. To order or put in order, direct. Se. 107. To address, ap- ply. Fr. 2028. To distribute. Gam. 71. See Dight.

Dretche: To delay, to tarry. Tr. L. 2. 1264: L. 4. 1446. To vex, to trouble, oppress. Tr. L. 2. 1471. AS. Dpeccan, Molestare, &c.

Drey: Dry.

Drie, Drien: To endure, suffer. RR. 4390. AS. Abne- organ, Pati.

Drife: To drive. RR. 1874.

Drinkileß: Drinkless, without drink. Tr. L. 2. 718.

Dronkelewe: Drunk, a drunkard. Fr. 779.

Dronkin: Drunk. Fr. 634.

Drough: Drew. Hyp. 92. Tr. L. 5. 1557.

Droune: Draw; Traherent, Boeth. p. 361, a. Drawn.

Drovy: Muddy. p. 207, a.

Drowe, Drowge: Drew. PT. 477.

Drurie, Drury: Sobriety, modesty. Sp. RR. 844, 5064.

Drucric, Gower. f. 78, a.

Dryn, as Drie, V.

Dryve dure, Ber. 1769. Perhaps it should be read Dry or dure. See Drie and Dure.

Dubbe, p. 205, b. When he [a knight] is new dubbed, i.e. made. Dubban to pibbene, Equitem cingere. Chron. Sax. ad Ann. MLXXXV. Islandið Dubbadi risbare, Equus cataphraetus. Hick. Somn.

Dure: Duty.

Dul, Dullin: To grow dull. RR. 4792. To stupify; Hebe- tare. Boeth. It dullith me; It makes me mad. No. 1193. Dullin of the rudeness. Tr. L. 4. 1489. Dullyn al [i. l. ar] the rudeness, MS. Sp. Be mad at the rude- nels. Sk. Perhaps, Be angry at, or ashamed of the sil- ly behaviour of the Trojans, in comparison of the more polite Greeks.

Dulcarnon, Tr. L. 3. 933, 935. This word hath puzzled the Readers and Interpreters of Chaucer; I shall give the several opinions about it in the words of the Au- thors. "Dulcarnon (says Sp.) is a Proposition in Eu- clid. Lib. 1. Theor. 33. Prop. 47. which was found out by Pythagoras after a whole years study, and much beating of his brain: In thankfulness whereof he sacrificed an Ox to the Gods; which Sacrifice he called Dulcarnon. Alexander Neckam, an ancient Writer, in his Book, De naturis rerum, compoundeth this word of Dulia, and Caro, and will have Dulcar- non to be quasi Sacrificium carnis. Chaucer aptly ap- plyeth it to Creside in this place; shewing that she was as much amazed how to answer Troilus, as Py- thagoras was wearied to bring his desire to effect. Which opinion of Sp. is rejected by Sk. in Dulcarnon; Dominus *Speight egregie hallucinatur dum exponit celebre illud Pythagoræ Theorema, quod postquam summo cum la- bore tandem excogitasset, præ gaudio Exoritur exclamavit, & Hecatombam sacrificavit; ex contextu enim patet non felix aliquod inventum, sed è contra hominem ad dilemma & incitas redactum, consilij inopem, ἀπορία signare, cre- do vel ab AS. Dole, nostro Dull, Heber, obfus, fatuus, vel à Belg. Dül, Döl, Insanus, furiosus, & AS. Ces- pan, geceppan, Belg. Kæren, Tent. Kehen, Ver- tere, q. d. I am at the point or ready to run mad or distracted, I am at my wits end, quod etiam à Poetâ ipso subjungitur. Mr. Selden in his Preface to Drayton's Polyolbion, having occasionally mentioned Chaucer, pro- ceeds to explain this word. "I cannot but digresse (says he) to admonition of abuse which this learned allusion in his Troilus, by ignorance hath endured; "I am till God, &c.*

"It's not Necham or any one else that can make me entertaine the least thought of the signification of "Dulcarnon to be Pythagoras his Sacrifice after his Geo- metrical Theorem, in finding the Squares of an Or- thogonal Triangle's sides, or that it is a word of La- tine deduction; but indeed by easier pronunciation "it was made of D'hul Karnayn, i. e. Two horned: "which the Mahometan Arabians use for a Root in "Calculation, meaning Alexander, as that great Di- ctator of Knowledge Joseph Scaliger (with some An- cients) will; but by warranted opinion of my learn- ed friend Mr. Lydyat. in his Emendatio Temporum, it "began in Seleucus Nicanor XII years after Alexan- der's death; The name was applyed, either because "after the time that Alexander had perswaded himself "to be Jupiter Hammon's Sonne, whose Statue was "with Ram's hornes, both his owne and his Successors "Coines were stampd with horned Images; or else in "respect of his II Pillars erected in the East as a Nihil ultra of his Conquest, and some say because he had "in Power the Easterne and Westerne World, signified "in the Two Hornes. But howsoever, it well fits the "Passage, either as if he had personated Creside at the "entrance of Two wayes, not knowing which to take; "in like sense as that of Prodicus his Hercules, Pytha- goras his Y, or the Logicians Dilemma expresse; or "else, which is the truth of his conceit, that she was "at a Nonplus, as the interpretation in his next Staffe "makes plaine. How many of Chaucer's Readers ne- ver so much as suspect this his short Essay of Know- ledge, transcending the common Rode? and by his "Treatise of the Astrolabe (which, I dare swear, was "chiefly learned out of Messahalab) it is plaine he was "much acquainted with the Mathematiques, and amongst their Authors had it.

Dure: To endure, to last.
Durense, Ch. Dr. 1199. Sk. judges from the Context, that it signifies a sort of Apple, and seems to have an affinity with the Fr. Duracines, The Peaches, Plums, Cherries, &c. whose pulp cleaves fast unto their Stones; Also such as are of a hard or firm pulp, and thereby long-lasting. Duraines signifies the same. Cotgrave.
Dures, Dureffe: Hardship, uneasiness, hurt; Severity, cruelty, hard-heartedness; Confinement, imprisonment; Constraint.
Duris: Endures, lasts.
Durkid his eyen wey: Both his eyes grew dim. Prol. 2808.
Dute: Duty.
Dwale, MR. 1053. Night-shade; Solanum somniferum; It is given inwardly to cause sleep.
Dwelle: To stay or tarry. Tr. L. 3. 931.
Dwinid: Wasted, consumed, pined away. RR. 360. AS.
Dyman, Tabescere, evanescere; whence Dwindle, Dyl. See Del.
Dyrkid: Darkened. p. 375, a.
Dyte, Bl. Kn. 668. See Dite.

E.

Ebraike, Ebraik, Ebrake: Hebrew. Ebraik Pepil; The Jews.
Ecclesiast: A Clergyman; A Preacher. Prol. 710. Also, The Book of Ecclesiastes, or Ecclesiasticus. Mo. 1344.
Eche: Every, each. Eche a dele; Every whit. Tr. L. 3. 695. Also, To eke, add, contribute. Fa. L. 3. 975. To encrease. Tr. L. 1. 706. To stretch out. Echid: Added, &c.
Eclimpassere: A Fictitious Name for the Successor of Sleep. Dr. Ch. 167. See Sk.
Edippe: Oedipus King of Thebes. Tr. L. 4. 300.
Eene, Eien, Ein, Eyen, Eyin: Eyes.
Effatid: Puffed up. CCR. 133.
Effunde: To pour forth. CN. 305.
Eft: Again; After. Efifone, Efifones, Efifonis: Again; Presently.
Eftirs, Eftiris: Ways, walks; Entries, galleries; Walls, hedges. Sk. See Eftiris.
Egall, Fr. Egal, Even, equal; Equitable. Pr. RL. 94.
Egallity: Equality.
Eger, Egir, Egre: Sharp, eager; Angry. Woundid egre, RR. 5475. Sorely wounded.
Egg: Edge. PT. 587.
Eggement: Egging, promoting, setting forward; Means, procurement. La. 843.
Eglatere, Eglentere: Eglentine, Sweet-bryar, or Dog-bryar.
Egre. See Eger.
Egremony. See Agrimony.
Equal: Equal. Boeth. See Egal.
Eien. See Eene.
Eiger, Eigre: Eager, sharp; Fierce, cruel. Fr. 1693. p. 191, b.
Eigh, Eighe, RR. 1779. An Eye; Ah! Hey! Tr. L. 2. 87.
Eigre. See Elger.
Eilith, Eylith: Aileth.
Ein. See Eene.
Eire. See Eyre.
Eisil, RR. 217. Vinegar. Sk. See Blo.
Eith, Eithe: Easy. RR. 3955. Ready, willing; Gentle, meek, soft. AS. Ca. 8. Whence Unnethe, Unnethes, Unnetbis: Hardly, scarce, with difficulty.
Eitber, for Othir: Or. RR. 5490.
Eke: Also; To add. See Eche.
Eld, Elde: Old age. In Tr. L. 4. 1369. instead of Is, holdin olde and ful of covitise, MS. Sp. has, Is old, and Eld is full, &c. Eldefater: Grandfather. Boeth. Elde fathers: Ancestors. p. 493, a.
Elde, Elden, Eldin: To grow old. Boeth. To make old. RR. 395. Eldish: Maketh old. lb. 391, 392.

Elenge, Elyng: Strange; odd. Elyng fare; Odd manner or behaviour. Ber. 235. Elengeneß: Strangeness, oddness. RR. 7406. From the Fr. Eloigner, To remove, estrange, &c.
Elis: Eels. RR. 7089.
Elle: An Eell. Bal. 240.
Elles, Ellis, Els: Else, otherwise. Ellifwhere: Elsewhere. AS. Elley, Allys, aliqni.
Elquene: Queen of Elves, or Fairies. WB. 860.
Els, PT. 153. Also. See Ellis.
Elsh: Old age. WB. 1215.
Elvisb: Wicked, hellish; Morose, furly. Mo. 3212. Chymistry is in the Chanon's Yeoman's Tale often called Elvisb, i. e. Fantastick, in opposition to Real. No. 772, 863.
Elynge. See Elenge.
Embassade, Embassadrie: An Embassy. La. 234.
Embellissid: Embellished, adorned. Luc. 58.
Embolde: To embolden, or make bold. CL. 1147.
Embolise, Embolysse. See Ambolise.
Embroudid: Embroidered; Variously coloured. LW. 119.
Eme: An Uncle, the mother's brother. Tr. L. 2. 162. It is still used in the Northern parts, as Lancashire. AS. Eame, Uncle.
Emeraudis: Emeralds. FL. 144.
Emerton, AF. 611. A Merlin, a sort of Hawk. Fr. Emetillon.
Emforth: According to. Emforth my wit, Tr. L. 2. 243. According to the best of my understanding. With my ful wyt, Ca. Astir my myght, MS. Sp. See Sk. AS. Em in composition signifies Equal, from Emne, or Epen. In Prol. 2236. it is written in MS. Ch. Evenforht; whence Enforth, Ar. 247.
Emiddis, Fa. L. 2. 206. as Amiddis.
Emisphere: The Hemisphere. Emispheres: Hemispheres.
Emong, Emongis: Amongst. It is frequently used Adverbially, and signifies Commonly; Sometimes, now and then; Interea. Also, In common, or together with others. RR. 690. Likewise, also.
Empaire, Empairin: To impair. Empairement: Impairing, hurt, damage. RL. 135.
Emplaster: To paint, set forth with advantage.
Empoison: To poison. Empoisonner: A poisoner; Empoisonning: Poisoning.
Empress: To imprint, make an impression. Sq. 1094. To press into. No. 1092. Empression: Impression. Sq. 1494.
Emprise, LW. 185. An Emprise, a Princess. Also, An enterprize, an undertaking. It. Impresa. Of feble emprise; Faint-hearted, mean-spirited. Mo. 2900. Also, Favour. RR. 2008. Design. lb. 2147, 2186.
Empie: To empty, to make empty. No. 762.
Enbibe: Proper to imbibe. No. 835.
Enbolned, Bal. 894. Swelled. Sk.
Enboset, Dr. Ch. 354. Embost; A Term in Hunting, when a Deer is so hard chased that he foams at the mouth, and hangs out the tongue. Blo.
Enbossid, Di. 275. Embossed or Raised work in Embroidery.
Enbrase: To embrace. In Mo. 1737. it seems to signify To attempt, undertake. Fr. Embrasser.
Enbraudin: To embroider. Ph. 125.
Enbraudid: Embroidered. AL. 85.
Eubroudid, Di. 274. as Embroudid.
Enbushment: Ambush, lying in wait. p. 152, b.
Encence: To burn or offer Incense. No. 406, 424.
Encens: Incense. Tr. L. 5. 1465.
Enchace: To chase, or drive away. BD. 418.
Enchafeth, Boeth. p. 363, b. and p. 364, b. should be read Enchafeth, i. e. Burneth, heateth. Seirius alias urat segetes; Cancris sydus inestuat. And Enchafed, p. 364, b. 1. 10, 11. should be read Enchafed. Lat. Incanduit. See Enchaufen.
Enchaufen: To warm. Fr. Echauffer. Enchaufing: Chafing, heating. Pars.
Encheinen: To be chained, joyned or knit together. p. 497, a.
Encheson, Tr. L. 1. 349. Cause; Occasion. Encheson, Acheson or Acheison were the old Fr. words for Occasion, still preserved in our Law-Books. Get encheson, RR.

RR: 2504. Take an occasion or opportunity.
Encline: To bowe. Mo. 14. Enclinid: Bowed. FL. 344.
Enclose th' enter [l. entre.] To shut up the entrance.
Test. L. 3.
Encombrance, Ber. 3051. Encombrance, BD. 284. Incumbrance, disturbance, hindrance; Trouble, distress; Inconvenience.
Encombrid: Wearied; Troubled, disturbed. RR. 1389, 7629. Encombrith, lb. 6675. Troubleth, is trouble-
 som to.
Encorporing: Incorporating. No. 836.
Encounterwaite, p. 152, b. It is otherwise read thus; En- counter waite, ambushmentes; Be prepared against treachery, &c. See Awaite and Counterwaite.
Endelonge, Endlong: End-ways; Long-ways. Prol. 1993.
Headlong; Along; Down, downwards. Hyp. 131.
Fr. 2538. From top to bottom, from end to end.
Fa. L. 3. 368.
Endeming every pafe, Ber. 1118. Indenting every step, i. e.
 Reeling.
Endetid: Indebted, in debt.
Endileß: Endless, infinite.
Endite: To indite, to dictate. Boeth. p. 359, a.
Endlong. See Endelonge.
Endomagen: To endamage, to hurt.
Endoute: To doubt, to fear. RR. 1664. See Doute.
Endreyte, PT. 404. A place; A Bit, or Cut of a Joint or Dish of Meat. Fr. Endroit.
Endry: To endure. CL. 727. See Drie.
Ene: Aeneas. La. 64.
Eneidas: Virgil's Aeneis. Mo. 1474. Called Eneados by Douglas.
Enewed, Cr. 110. Renewed. Sk. Or rather, Annoyed; troubled, afflicted, vexed. Fr. Ennuyé.
Enfame: Infamy. p. 485, b.
Enfamed: Famished. Phyl. 36.
Enfaunce: Infancy, youth, RR. 5006.
Enfelle: Infected. CL. 217.
Enfessid: Possessed, put in possession. BD. 366.
Enfireth: Sets on fire. Bal. 550.
Enforce: To endeavour; from the Fr. S'efforcer, To strive, endeavour, or S'enforcir, To gather strength. Enforce my might, Prol. 2236. Use all my endeavour: But it may be read there, as it is in MS. Ch. Evenforth my myght thy trewe servaunt bee. See Emforth. Ne enforce
I me, Tr. L. 4. 1016. I do not trouble my self. Enforce
The, WB. 340. Strengthen thy self. But MS. Ch. reads
 it Enforce mee, i. e. Urge upon me, press me.
Enforme: To inform, instruct; To form after.
Enforth. See Emforth.
Enfortunid it so: Gave it that unfortunate quality. CM.
 106.
Engendrin: To engender, to beget. Engendrure: Generation, procreation; Offspring, issue. p. 201, a. WB.
 134.
Engin, Engine: Wit; Contrivance. Lat. Ingenium.
Engined: Racked, put upon the Torture. So it is read in former Editions in Mo. 1175. But in this, Constreyn-
ed, as in MS. Ch. in which the foregoing Verse ends with peynede.
Engluing: Gluing; Joining close, fastening together;
 Stopping close. No. 787.
Engrevith: Grieveth; Displeaseth. RR. 3444.
Engnyed: Outwitted. Ber. 2746. See Engined.
Enhabite: To inhabit; To accustom ones self; To keep company with. RR. 6555. Habituated, accustomed;
 Settled; from the Fr. Habituer, To use, accustom, &c.
Enhaunfin: To enhance, advance. Enhaunfid: Advanced. Sq. 890.
Enlaced: Covered over with snares or traps; Complicated.
p. 396, a. Implicitus, Entangled; from the Fr. Enlacer.
Enlangoured: Languid, faint. RR. 7399.
Enlaseith: Entrapeth. Boeth. See Enlaced.
Enleven: Eleven. Mo. 3316. AS. Enslupan, anlupon.
Enlumined: Illuminated; Enlightened. Fr. 1063.
Enmoised, p. 483, a. Comforted, encouraged; f. from the Lat. Animosus.
Ennoying: Annoying, hurtfull. Boeth. See Anoie, &c.
Enpaire: To be impaired, or damaged. CN. 170. from the Fr. Empirer. To make worse, to grow worse, to decay. Enpaired, p. 148, b. Aggravated; Made the matter worse.
Enpeche: To impeach, to accuse.

Enpight: Pitched; Settled. p. 481, a. See Pight.
Enpried: Pitied; Concerned; Compassionate. p. 495, b.
 Delighted. Sk.
Enplede: To implead, to sue at Law. Mo. 2674.
Enprinid: Imprinted. CC. 92.
Enprise, RR. 2636. See Emprise.
Enprison: To imprison. Enprisonment: Imprisonment.
Enquest: Enquiry. RR. 6977. It is in Law especially taken for Inquisition by a Jury.
Enquirance: Enquiry. Magd. 96.
Ensamplir: A sampler, an example, a pattern. Boeth.
Enselid: Sealed up. But this enselid, Tr. L. 5. 151. But this is enselid, MS. Sp. This is Sealed up, not to be spoken of till another time.
Ensenfid yewe, Ber. 1672. Informed you, apprised you. To Inse is a word in common use for To make one sensible of, To acquaint, &c.
Ense: Quality, kind, order, stamp. Sp. Sk. f. Encise, from Incidere.
Enspirid: Blown or breathed. Prol. 6.
Ensure: To assure. No. 2549.
Entaile: To carve; Carving, Sculpture. RR. 162, En- tailed: Carved. lb. 140. from the It. Intagliare, To carve, &c. and Intagli, Stones finely cut, &c. Also, Stature. Of good entaille, RR. 3711. seems to be the same with the Fr. Expression, De belle taille, Proper, handsome.
Entalenten: To create a desire, to move, excite, affect;
Afficiant, Boeth. p. 400, a.
Entalentic corage, Cup. 339. A mind full of sincere affection. See Talent.
Entame, ABC. K. 7. See Attamed.
Entayle, Ch. Dr. 11. as Entaille.
Entendaunce: Attendance. CL. 353. Attention, regard.
Sc. 174.
Entende: To intend; To attend, to mind, to take pains about a thing. Fa. L. 2. 475. To hearken. Sp. 709.
 To tend. RR. 5309. To expect. Tr. L. 4. 1649. MS.
Sp. Attende. Fr. Attendre.
Entendement: Intention, intent; Attention; Thought, understanding.
Entendidin: Intended.
Entent, Ententing: Mind, intent; Attention.
Ententive, Ententive: Attentive; Earnest, diligent; Intentional. Ententive desire, p. 206, a. A desire with diligence to perform. Ententive besneß, p. 152, a. Utmost endeavour. Ententifelicke, Tr. L. 1. 333. Attentively, diligently.
Enter. See Enclose, &c.
Enterchanges: Vicissitudes; Courses, turns; Vices, Bo-
eth. p. 363, b.
Enterchaungidin: Exchanged. Tr. L. 3. 1374. which in
MS. Sp. is thus; And plying enterchaungeably her thinges,
 i. e. alternately, mutually.
Enterdited: Interdicted, forbidden.
Entere: Entire, sincere. Fl. 163.
Enterlacing: Intricate, full of windings and turnings.
Fr. Entrelasser, To twist one within another.
Entermedlid, RR. 906. Intermixed. See Meddle.
Entermett, RR. 2966. See Entremete.
Enterminid: Undermined. Magd. 109.
Enterpartin: To divide, to share, to bear a part with
 one. Tr. L. 1. 593.
Enterynge: Interment, burial. Ber. 314.
Enteiche: To affect; To stain. Fr. Entacher. Also spotted: In Boeth. Afficio is frequently translated by En-
teiche, which is used indifferently in a good or bad sense, as the Lat. word is. When it is taken in an ill sense, the Translator generally adds another Verb to determine the signification of it; as, p. 389, a. Entetched and defouled. In Tr. L. 2. 832. Best entetchid signifies Best disposed. In MS. Sp. it is Tatchid.
Entre: An Entry, entrance; A gate; A door. Tr. L. 2.
 77. Fr. Entrée.
Entrechaungen, Entrechaungin: To change, to make an exchange. Boeth.
Entrecommunin: To converse, or correspond, to have communication or commerce with one another. Tr. L.
 4. 1554. Entrecommuninge: Intercourse, correspondence. Boeth.
Entremees, RR. 6831. Entremes, AF. 665. Intermesses;
 Dainty dishes or plates. Fr. Entremets.
 Entremete,

- Entremete, Entremette*: To intermeddle. Tr. L. 1. 1027. where instead of Why, entremete of that thou hast to done, which is scarce capable of any sense, it may be read from MS. Sp.
Why entremetest of that thou' hast noght to done,
 i. e. Why dost thou meddle with that thou hast nothing to do with. Verse 1019, is likewise better in the same MS.
Let me alone, it shall be for the best,
 not for thy best, as in this and the common Editions.
Entremetten: To intermix, to join together. Test. p. 484. b.
Entresse, Fort. 71. Bal. 864. Interest, concern, business. So Interesse is used by Lidgate in the Life of St. Edmund;
Pride in his persone had noon Interesse.
Entresse and Entresse are taken in the same sense in others of his Works.
Entrete: To treat, or discourse of. Entretedin: Talked of.
Entrike: To trick, deceive. RR. 1642. AF. 403. or perhaps, To embarrass, engage; from the Fr. Intriguer.
Entune: To tune, to sing. Also, Singing, Melody, Music, Poetry. Bal. Lad. 160. Entunes: Songs, Tunes. D. Ch. 309. Entunid: Tuned; Sung. ProL. 123.
Envelopid: Veiled; Wrapt up; Involved. No. 2460.
Envuene: To poison; To destroy. RR. 7472.
Envirailed: Painted with Vermilion; Of a Vermilion colour. Bal. Lad. 45.
Environ, Environ: Round about. CL. 1031. Fr. Environ, About. Environing: Compass, Circumference; Ambitus, Boeth.
Envoy. See L'envoy.
Enurrd. See Ure.
Envye: To strive, contend. Dr. Ch. 406. It alludes to the Fr. Expression, A' l'envi, Certatim.
Envye: Enmity. Bl. Kn. 258.
Epistilis: Epistles.
Equipolencies: Equivalents. RR. 7126. Equipolent: Equivalent, equal in power, value, &c.
Equivocus: Equivocal, or double meaning. p. 519, a.
Er, Ere: Ever; Before. Er in one; Always, continually. Ere mo, No. 3063. Ever, or still the more.
Erace, Tr. L. 3. 1017. for Arace, V.
Errand: An errand. Dr. Ch. 134.
Erberis, Mo. 1080. Arbours.
Erborowe, RR. 7495. See Herberowe.
Ere: An Ear. Also, To plow. p. 378. A large feld' to ere, ProL. 888. Large matter for discourse. In Ber. 618. it seems to mean here, i. e. hair. See Er.
Eris: Ears.
Erke, RR. 4867. Weary; Loathing: Hence Irksome. Sk.
Erlich: Early.
Ernefull: Sorrowful. Earnestfull, or rather Ernestfullest manne, as MS. Sp. and Ca. The most earnest manner. Tr. L. 2. 1727.
Ernes: Affection, fondness, earnest desire. RR. 4838. Serious promise. Sk.
Eros: Cupid; Love. It is used for the Dissemper of Love. ProL. 1376. Gr. Eros.
Erratick steres: Wandring stars, the Planets. Tr. L. 5. 1811.
Erre, Hen. 185. Out of erre; Out of the way: Sk.
Erse: Arise. Fr. 426.
Erst: Before; some time ago; Earnest. At erst, Fr. 2006. At first sight. Now at erst, No. 275. Now the first time, or first of all. Then at erst, p. 388, b. Then and not before.
Erthelesse: Without soil or earth. Tr. L. 4. 770.
Ertly: Earthly. Ber. 443.
Erve Ive, Mo. 1081. The generality of the former Editions have the Verse thus; Of herbe yve growing in our [Ca. your] yerde that [H. 1. ther] mery is; and Edd. 1602, and 1687, Of yvie growing, &c. So that Erve may be corrupted from Herbe, which the Poet perhaps added to signify Ground-Ivy. This Edition by mistake presents the reading of MS. Ch. which was not intended to be introduced into the Text, but to be printed as another Reading, which may in some measure hint to us the true one. Perhaps herbe yve, erve yve may have been originally verveyne.
- Eschaufe*: To warm, to heat; To desire earnestly. Boeth. Eschaufed: Heated, hot; Angry. Fr. Eschaufet, To warm.
Eschaunge: Exchange. Tr. L. 4. 146.
Escheatour: Escheator, An Officer appointed to take care of Lands, &c. that Escheat, or, casually fall to the Crown.
Eschevith, for Eschenith, CN. 114.
Escrie: A Writing. Fr. Escrie.
Ese: Ease; Pleasure. Mo. 1402. It is your ese; It is easy for you, It is at your pleasure, or choice.
Esliche: Easily. Tr. L. 1. 317. Softly. Aleasily, Ca.
Esperes. See Specer.
Esperance, Fr. Hope.
Esperus, Bl. Kn. 613. Hesperus, the Evening-star.
Espeiale, Espie: A Spy. Fr. 59. Spying; Observation.
Espide: Espied, found out. Hyp. 55.
Espiruall: Spiritual. RR. 650. Ingeniously contrived; Witty. Fr. Spirituel. Esprituelles: Spiritual Persons, or Things. p. 206, a.
Esplote, Bal. Lad. 191. Accomplishment, perfection. Sk. See Expleiten.
Espoire, Espoir: Hope. Fr. Espoir.
Estate: State, condition; Honour, dignity. During his estate; In the time of his Magistracy, or Administration. Fr. 754. Estately: Splendid, pompous. Estaily honeste; Honorable Pomp, or State. Mo. 737.
Estimates: Precepts, established Rules; Instituta, Boeth. p. 366, a.
Estris: Lodgings, apartments. ProL. 1973. MR. 1187. Ber. 105. From the Fr. Hostellerie may come Hostrie, Oftrie, Estrie.
Esyir: Easier. Of esyir availle; Of less value. CL. 116.
Eterne: Eternal; Durable. Also, Eternity. Tr. L. 4. 978. MS. Ch. reads yowre eternal, ProL. 1308.
Ethe, Tr. L. 5. 850. See Eithe.
Ethimologise: To give the Etymology, or derivation of a word. RL. 301.
Evangele, Evangely, Evangile: The Gospel. RR. 5453. Hen. 217. In Mo. 2037. it is put for Evangelist; for it follows, Ib. 2038. He likeneth, &c. Evangelis: Gospels. La. 667.
Evenaunte, Ber. 105. as Avenaunte.
Ever for Never, p. 446, b. 1. 24.
Everich: Each; which is a Contraction of it.
Everichone, Everychone: Every one.
Everidel, Everidele. See Del.
Evese: The Eves of a house. Ber. 1620.
Evill, Tr. L. 5. 1624. On [not No] will ye ne take; Take it not in ill part, or amiss.
Evin: The evening. Also, Fellow, Equall. Evin-christen; A fellow-christian. AS. Epen or epn, Aequalis, &c.
Evindistant: Equidistant. p. 441, b.
Evinliche: Evenly; Equally.
Evir: Ever. Evir in one; Always. Fr. 1697. No. 2535. Continally; Altogether.
Evirmore: Evermore.
Evirmo: Evermore. It should be read Evir mo, RR. 1787. Ever the more. So Evirmore should be Evir more, Ib. 2472.
Evr in one, as Evir in one. See Evir.
EWage: Hue, colour. Bal. Lad. 92, 93. Perhaps it may signify the Water of a Precious Stone, from the Anglo-Normannic word Ewe, Fr. Eau, Water.
Exaltate: Exalted; Ascended.
Executour: An executioner. Fr. 746.
Executrice: An-executrix.
Exerceth: Exerciseth. Boeth.
Exercitacion: Exercise.
Exilin: To banish. Bl. Kn. 509.
Exiltre: An axle-tree.
Existence: Reality. RR. 5549.
Exiten: To excite, stir up. Exitors: Promoters, encouragers.
Exorcisaciouns: Exorcisms, Prayers or Charms superstitiously used against the power of the Devil. Fa. L. 2. 174.
Expans yres, Fr. 2831. Lidgate hath the same Expression in the Story of Thebes, Part I. where he describes the Astrologers calculating the Fate of that City;

*In tables correct, deuide of all error
Justly sought, and founde out of bothe two
The yeres collecte, and expanse also.*

Expectaunt: Expecting. RR. 4571.

Expleiten: To accomplish, perform. RR. 6174. Hence Exploit, A signal action. See Men. Fr. in Exploits militaires.

Expone: To expound, explain. Gr. 369.

Expressid, Tr. L. 3. 1035. [Repressid, MS. Sp. and Ca.] Retrained. See lb. 1040.

Expulse: Expulsion. Gr. 119. A repulse.

Extende: Extent. In extende; In the utmost extent. Mo. 2599. In value.

Extremistes: Extreams. RR. 6526.

Eye: An egg. No. 827. Mo. 858. Ay, ever; Yea. Sq. 1819. Ah!

Eyen, Eyin: Eyes. Pro. 201.

Eygre. See Eiger.

Eylith: Aileth.

Eyre: The air. CL. 143. Also, An heir.

Eyrishe: Airy, aerial, belonging to, or living in the Air. Eyrishe bestis; Animals living in the Air, or rather, The Constellations which are called by the Names of Animals, and so figured in Maps of the Heavens:

F.

Fable: Discourse. RR. 1439. Vain, empty, flattering, talk. lb. 6603. Lying. Hyper. 203. Fabling: Fawning, flattering. lb. 5544.

Faconde: Speech; Elocution; Eloquence. AF. 558. Eloquent. Gr. 268.

Facyon, Facyoun, Fassion: Fashion.

Faic. See Fay.

Faiesh for Faith, AF. 24.

Faile: To deceive; To lye. Also, Failure.

Fain, Faine: To feign, dissemble. Fr. 243. RR. 3089. To disguise. lb. 6342. Fained, Fainid, Faint: Feigned, disguised, pretended. lb. 5563. Fain: Glad, desirous. No. 2559. Fainir: More glad; Gladlier. Bal. 1025.

Faire: Happiness, good fortune. Faire mote you besalle; May you have good luck, in opposition to Foule mote the besal, Mo. 16, 17. Ill fortune, or mischance attend thee.

Faith: Credit. Make faith; To give one credit, To pass one's word. Faithid: Having faith, believing. Streng-ist faithid ben; Have the strongest faith, are best established in the Faith.

Faitours: Deceivers, Impostors; Vagabond cheats. In Tr. L. 1. 927. instead of Lovirs, MS. Sp. hath Faitours, i. e. Dissemblers.

Fal, as Fall.

Falding: A kind of course cloth. Sk. Pro. 393. in MS. Ch. runs thus;

In a gowne of falding unto the knee;

Which makes the Verse compleat without pronouncing the Final e in gowne. In MR. 104. instead of Folding rede, MS. Ch. hath Falding rede, i. e. A red Falding.

Fale: Failure, fault.

Fall: Fallen; Cast down; Humble. RR. 881.

Fallace, Fallas: A Fallacy; Treachery, perfidiousness, deceit. Ber. 1210. p. 506, b.

False, Falsin: To deceive, to be false to.

Falset: Falshood. Falsetes: Falstities.

Fame: To defame. PIV. 83. Falsly famed; Falsly accused, slandered. Mo. 2281.

Famulers: Menial, or domestic Servants. Test. L. 2. Lat. Famulares.

Fande: Found. RR. 2707.

Fanrafie, Fr. Fancy.

Farce: To paint the face, or use beautifying Compositions. RR. 2285. Sk. thinks it comes from the Fr. Fard, Facuz.

Fardils: Burdens. RR. 5683.

Fare: To go; Gone. Fr. 1917, 3100. Also, Condition; Welfare; Way or manner; Behaviour. The fare of me; How I do. Tr. L. 5. 1365. Made fare; Made a great stir, or ado. MR. 891. See Asare. Leave thy nice fare; Leave off thy simple behaviour. Tr. L. 4. 532. Strawge fare; A behaviour like that of strangers to one another. No. 2771. For fare, Gam. 147. Should be read forfare, in one word.

Farforth. See Perforth.

Faring, as Begon, V. Beste faring; Best accomplished, or qualified.

Farne: Fared. See Fare.

Fashe: A bundle. A fashe of flaines; A sheaf of arrows. Gr. 168.

Fassoun, Fasson: Fashion. Gr. 245. RR. 708.

Fasé by: Near, hard by. RR. 2494.

Faster: Stronger. Boeth. p. 365, a. Firmior.

Fast-freies. See Freie.

Fathe, Fa. L. 3. 1050. It is rath, or rathe in all the Editions I have seen before 1602.

Father kin. See Kin.

Favours: Favourable. RR. 2902.

Faw: Fain, glad, chearfull, joyfull. WB. 210. He desirith faw; He much desireth, he would fain. Tr. L. 4. 887.

Fay: Faith, truth. Par fay, Par ma faye; By my faith. In fay; In faith. No. 655.

Fayours. See Faitours.

Fee: Fee; Money. Mo. 2277. So it should be read in RR. 6544. (not Se) where it seems to signify Land of Inheritance, in opposition to Mooble, Moveables, in the following Verse.

Feblesse: Weakness. Tr. L. 2. 863. Fr. Foiblesse.

Fed: Brought up, educated. Fr. 1427.

Federasy: A confederacy; A bargain.

Fendly, as Fendly.

Fere: Fire. Ber. 1621. Also, A companion. See Fere.

Fesse, Fosse: To infeoffe, to settle an Estate upon one, to put one into possession. Tr. L. 5. 1698. CL. 932.

Feine: To feign. Bl. Kn. 512.

Feimise, Fr. Feigning, hypocrisy, dissimulation. BD. 387.

Fair, Feire: Fair. Also, Fine. PT. 78. Feire fell; Fair skin. Gam. 152. Feire is omitted in H. 1. See Fell.

Fel, Felle: Many, manifold. Felle colours, Boeth. p. 465, b. Multiformes fucos. AS. Fela, Mulri, plures. Fel, Felenous, Fell, Felon, Felonous, Feloun: Villainous, wicked; Cruel, fierce.

Felaship, Felaship: Fellowship, company, society.

Felaw: A fellow, or companion.

Felawship, as Felaship. Felawshipeth: Joyns in fellowship, or company. Boeth.

Felde: Fallen; A field. In felde and tonn; In Town and Country. RR. 6234. The felde of snowe, &c. Mo. 800, 801. The Blazon of a Coat of Arms; In a Field Argent, an Eagle Sable, caught with a Linetwig, Gules.

Feldefare: A Feldfare, called Frosty, AF. 364. because they come in hard weather. In RR. 5510. Tr. L. 3. 863. (where MS. Sp. reads Feld y fare, i. e. f. The Field is gone, or the Battle is lost) it seems to be the Beginning or Burden of some known Song in Chaucer's time.

Feldin: Fell. RR. 911.

Feldis: Fields.

Fele, Felen, Felin: To feel; To know, perceive; To smell. RR. 8844, 3012. To relish. Fr. 2273. Fele, CCr. 117.

Feeling, fense, preception; Knowledge.

Felenous. See Fel.

Felship, as Felaship.

Fell, Felle: The skin flay'd off. Lat. Pellis. AS. Felle.

Fell and bonis; Skin and bones. Tr. L. 1. 91. Ca. hath fell instead of foule, Tr. L. 3. 592. Also, Many, &c. See Fele, &c.

Fellie: Cruelly. RR. 3251. Madly. Boeth.

Felon, Felonous, Feloun. See Fel, Felenous, &c. Felony Cruelty. RR. 165.

Felownshipeth: Keepeth company with, followeth; Com- sator, p. 389, a.

Felship, PT. 370. as Felaship.

Feltrid, Cr. 163. Entangled. See Liart.

Femetere: The herb Fumitory.

Femine: Female. Fa. L. 3. 275. which should be read thus;

A Feminine creature.

Feminie, Prol. 868. seems to signify The country of the Amazons. The Reign of Feminie; The Kingdom of Women; Regnum fæmineum.

Femininite: The form, or shape of a woman. La. 361.

Feminite: Womanhood, the sex, state, dignity, weakness, or any Quality or Property of a woman. Gr. 80. Fl. 148.

Fenaunce, Finaunce, Fynaunce: An end; A fine, a forfeiture: Hence Finance, or Finances signifies a Prince's Treasury, or Exchequer, and is sometimes used for Treasure, or Wealth. To make fenaunce for your wrongs; To pay a Fine, or make reparation for the injuries done to you. Ber. 1800. See Men. Fr. and Fr. Gl.

Fende: An enemy, a fiend. The Devil is so called καὶ ὁ ἐχθρὸς. Fendly: Devilish, hellish, wicked; Ugly; Hostile, hurtfull, dangerous. Fr. 2414.

Fenne, No. 2408. See Cannon.

Feeble: Feeble. Boeth.

Feoffid: Infeoffed. Sq. 1214. See Feffe.

Fer: Far.

Ferd, Ferde, Ferdin: Fared, sped; Went; from Fare, V. Also, Afraid; Frightned. No. 245. Tr. L. 2. 124.

Ferdeih: Is afraid. p. 498, b. Fear. p. 481, a. For ferde; For fear. Sq. 547.

Ferdfull: Fearfull. p. 498, b.

Ferdneß: Fear, dread; Awe, reverence. p. 481, a.

Fere: Fear; Fire. RR. 5086. In Tr. L. 1. 229. it should be read Fere (as in MS. Sp.) to rhyme to tere, in the preceding Verse. It is put for Ferre, i. c. Far. p. 364, a. l. 32. and for Fare, i. c. Behaviour. Tr. L. 1. 13. A companion. AS. Γερεπα. In fere, ifere, yere; Together, in company. Playing fere; A play-fellow, a companion in sports. So Lidgate in the Story of Thebes, Part 1.

*This Edipus among his playing feres
Was in porte passing full of pride.*

Amongst other Instances of Corruption in the Secular Clergy, that of Pluralities is thus described in the Plowman's Tale; That besides many Cures and Prebends, they had A Parsonage to ben a playing fere, Mo. 2663. i. c. (as it is explained in Com.) "They have their Parsonages for sport, not as a charge; or else, their Parsonages are bestowed upon them, that they may be idle companions in Hawking and Hunting, and as jesters to make their Patrons merry."

Ferforth, Ferforth, Ferforthly: Far, far forth; For as much as. Instead of As faithfully, &c. Tr. L. 3. 101. it is better in MS. Sp.

As ferforthly as I have had konning;

i. c. As far as I had any knowledge, To the utmost of my understanding.

Feris: Companions. See Fere.

Ferk: Fear. Gam. 515. MS. Ch. and H. r. instead of it have Serke: A sort of Coat. See Fr. Gl. in Sarica. Men. Fr. in Serge. Men. It. in Surgia.

Ferme: Firm; To affirm. Ber. 1881. A farm; To farm or let. They takin i. ferme their sompnours; They farm out the Office of Sumner. Mo. 2265.

Fermerere: An Overseer, or Curator of an Infirmary. Fr. 595.

Fermour: A farmer. LIV. 378.

Ferne yere, Tr. L. 5. 1176. February. Sk. Fferneyere, MS. Sp. perhaps corrupted from the Fr. Fevrier, February.

Ferre: Far.

Fers: Fierce. Fers, Dr. Ch. 654, &c. Fersis, Ib. 723. Chels-men; from Fere, A companion.

Ferthing: A farthing, a thin scale. Sp. The AS. Feorðling is the Fourth part of any Quantity or Number; and from thence it is taken to signify any small part: So the Mites, cast into the Treasury by the poor Widow in the Gospel, are called Feorðlingas. No ferthing of grece; i. Not the least spot of greace. Prol. 134.

Feribir: Further; More.

Fesauunce, Fesauunt: A Pleasant.

Fes: A fitt. No. 2320. Also, A feast; Mirth. Fr. 2130.

Festivally: Jocosely; Wittily. Boeth.

Festlick: Merry, gay. Sq. 301.

Fete: Feet. Also, as Fetis.

Fetely: Handsomely; Dextrously. See Fetie.

Fetirs: Features. RR. 2813.

Fetis, Fetise: Handsome, neat, decent.

Fetours, Ber. 162. as Fetirs.

Fette: Fetched.

Fettes: Fats or Vats. Sackes fettes, Mo. 2411. Sacks and Fettes, that is, Fattes, Dry-fattes, and other such Vessels. Com.

Feverire: February. Fr. Fevrier.

Fey: Faith; Credit. Ne to the [l. thy] word there n'is no fey certain; There is credit to be given to what thou sayest. Phyl. 126.

Fiance: Affiance, confidence; Dependence. RR. 5481.

Fiers: Fierce.

Fifty: Fifty. Ch. Dr. 422.

Fil, Fill: Fell; Befell. Prol. 1671. Fell, or Did fall. RR. 5813. Became. Phyl. 81. Also, Cruel. Prol. 1561. See Fel.

Fillin, RR. 6648. Fell.

Filth, RR. 7532. Foul play. See Fylth.

Finaunce, Magd. 497. See Fenaunce.

Finch, Prol. 654. To pull a finch: A Proverbial Expression, signifying To fleece a Man.

Findish, La. 752. (MS. Ch. Feendly) Findliche. See Fendly.

Fine: An end. Gam. 1093. To cease, to make an end. WB. 788. RR. 5356. Never gan to fine, Tr. L. 3. 1460. Never stoop. Fr. Fin, Finir; from the Lat. Finis.

Fire leven, WB. 276. (Fyeris leven, MS. Ch.) Lightning. See Sk. in Fyre leven.

Fisnamy, Ber. 2461. Physiognomy. It is falsely printed Finsnamy.

Fithell: A fiddle. Prol. 298.

Fittingist: Most fitting, fittest. AF. 551.

Fivith: Fifth. Fa. L. 3. 613.

Fixe, Tr. L. 1. 298. Fixed. See Fyxe.

Flaie: Flew. CN. 213.

Flaines, Cr. 168. Arrows. Dougl. uses Flane, Flaine for Arrow, and Flanes, Flanys for Arrows. AS. Fla, Sagitta, whence Flo, an Arrow. Pl. Flone, Arrows. The AS. Flane signifies a Lance, Spear, or some such Weapon. Sonn.

Flambe (Flaume, MS. Sp.) Flame. Flambe funeral; The Funeral flame, or fire wherein the body was to be burnt. Tr. L. 5. 302. Also, To flame, shine; To cause to shine. Bal. Lad. 55.

Flash. See Fash.

Flawe: Yellow. CL. 782. from the Lat. Flavus.

Flebring: Calumny, slander. Test. p. 500, b. See Sk.

Fleckid: Spotted, speckled.

Fleen: To fly from, to avoid. Also, Fleas. Mo. 1594.

Flees, Fleise, Flese: A Fleece.

Fleeten: To flow, to pass away; To abound. Willsten, Kilian. Fluere, fluicare, labi, abundare. See Flore.

Fleme, Flemin, Mo. 1759. To banish, put to flight, rout, drive away. AS. Flyma. Profugus, Flyman, In exilium mittere. Flemed, Flemid, No. 58. Banished, &c.

Flemere: One that drives away, or puts to flight. La. 461. the same with Banishir, Cr. 199. Instead of Flemin, Tr. L. 2. 852. Ca. hath Eschewe.

Flene: To flee. RR. 4595. Fouly flene, Di. 382. [not foul flene] Fly away basely.

Fleshly, RR. 2506. Lovely, dear; Dearly, affectionately. p. 193, b.

Flet, RR. 2372. See Flit.

Flet, Flete: To swim, to float, to wave up and down. Tr. L. 3. 1227. Floated. Flete this creature, La. 464. (or Flette this creature, as in MS. Ch.) Floated, was driven to and fro. AS. Fleotan.

Fleting, Fletynge: Floating, flowing down, swimming, abounding. See Fleeten and Flet.

Flicker: To flutter. Tr. L. 4. 1221. Toufe wanton dalliances. p. 208, a. 496, b.

Flid: To fly from, avoid. Boeth.

Flight, Flite: To strive, contend. AS. Flitan, Contendere, rixari. In Mo. 3289. instead of Fight or flight, others read Fight or flight.

Flit: To fly away. RR. 5359. See Flete and Fleeten.

To

To move. RR. 1812. To turn aside. p. 308, a. Lat. Deflecto.
Flite. See Flight.
Flittering, p. 380, b. as Fleting, V.
Flo, Flone, Bl. Kn. 469. See Flaines.
Flockmele: All together, all in a flock, or body. Fr. 1116.
AS. Flocc-mælum, Gregatim.
Floists: Flutes.
Floraie: Flora, The Goddess of Flowers. Cr. 20.
Flore: A floor. AL. 64.
Florin, No. 2286. A Gold Coin, in several Countries of different Values, first coined in Florence, with the Stamp of a Flower-de-Luce, from whence it has its Denomination. Edw. III. A. D. 1344. alter'd it from a lower value, to 6 s. and 8 d. which Sir Hen. Spelman thinks to be the same with the George Noble. It was in France about 2 s. Sterl. and in Langudoc, and the Parts adjacent 18 d. Sterl. See Spelm. Men. Fr. in Florin, Men. It. in Fiorino, and Fr. Gl.
Florouns, Florounis: A Border of Flower-work. Fr. Fleuron.
Flouten, p. 383, b. as Flete.
Floure: To flourish. Flourid: Flourished. Flouring: Flourishing.
Flourelle: Without flowers. Dr. Ch. 1860.
Flourettes, RR. 891. Fine Flower-work, embroidery. Fr. Fleurettes. It. Fioretti.
Fleyinge: Fluting, Whistling. Prol. 91.
Flyte, as Flit.
Folles: Leaves. Bal. Lad. 38. Fr. Feuilles.
Foin, Foinin: To make a pass. Prol. 1656. To fight.
Foin, Fomen, Fone, Foomen: Foes, enemies.
Fole: A fool; foolish. Folie: Folly; Rashness, unadvisedness; Temeritas, Boeth. Folily, Follie: Foolishly, rashly.
Folelarge: Foolishly liberal, extravagant, prodigal. p. 156, b. 207, a.
Folien: To fail, to be mistaken. Boeth. p. 375, a. Labantur. f. leg. failen.
Follue: to follow.
Foly: Folly; Foolish, Any lile foly countinaunce, RR. 4299. Any little foolish appearance.
Fomen. See Foin.
Fond: To find. Magd. 31. Found. La. 577. To endeavour, to try. No. 3395. Tr. L. 3. 11. Fonding, Gam. 293. A trial. AS. Fandian, Tentare.
Fone, Cr. 128. f. Feign. See Foin.
Fong: To take, to receive. Mo. 2907. AS. Fengan.
Fonne: Fond; A fool. MR. 981. To fondle, to be fond of. CL. 458.
Fontstone: A Font for Baptizing.
Footmantill: A womans Riding-coat, coming down to the feet. Prol. 474.
For, in Composition sometimes enhanceth the Signification of the Simple word, and sometimes turns it to an ill sense. It is also put in Composition for Fore: It is put for Far in Ch. Dr. 676.
Forbere: To bear up, to support. RR. 4751.
Forbit: Forbiddeth. Test. L. 3.
Forbode: A Prohibition. Goddis forbode; That which God hath forbidden. Mo. 3245.
Forbolin: Forbidden. RR. 6616.
Forbrake: Broke off; Disturbed.
Forbrusid, Mo. 639. See Forebrusid.
Force. I do (or yeve) no force; I care not, Value not, make no account of, Regard not. WB. 1234. RR. 4672. Of force, Cr. 202. Of necessity. Thereof no force, No. 673. No matter for that. Doth no force; Taketh no care, or pains. p. 204, b. Do no force of their own governance; Take no care of their own conduct, lb. Thei yeve no force; They do not mind. RR. 4826.
Forcir: A coffer, or chest. BD. 65. A strong box. It. Forziere.
Fordid: Undid; Murthered. Phyl. 164. from Fordoe: Fordoem, Fordon: To undo, to destroy; Undone, lost, destroyed. Fr. 3116. Broke. Mo. 2771.
Fordrive: Driven away by force. RR. 3782.
Fordrined: Waited away. RR. 366. See Dwined.
Fore (the Preter Tense of Fare) Gone. Lake out of lande thou be not fore, RR. 2710. See thou go not out of the Country. Also, For. Mo. 2669, 3113. In Composition it signifies Before.

Forebrusid: Sorely bruised. Perhaps it should be read Sorebrusid.
Forefare: Faring ill, forlorn. RR. 5388. To decay, to to ruine. Gam. 147.
Fortine, Ar. 78. A Jakes. See St. A stranger.
Forward. See Forward.
Foreweier: One that foreknows. Boeth. Foreweier: One that knew. Mo. 2363.
Forgete: Forgotten. BD. 64.
Forgit: Forged; Coined. MR. 148.
Forgiste: Pardon, forgiveness. Luc. 174.
Forgive: Forgiven.
Forge, Forgone: To lose, to forfeit; Lost.
Forgrowin: Overgrown. FL. 45.
Foristen: To forget. p. 365, a.
Forjugid: Prejudged, condemned unheard. Bl. Kn. 275.
Forkeve: To carve, to cut.
Forlaste: Left off. No. 1597.
Forlaine, Cr. 140. Destitute, left alone. Gl. V.
Forlete: To lose; To leave off, give over; To forsake, to neglect; Lingere, Boeth. p. 363, b. To lay down; Deponere, p. 377, b.
Forleven: To leave, to depart. Also, To degenerate. p. 378, a.
Forleven: To mistake; Errare, Boeth. p. 375, a.
Forlith: Forceth, ravitheth. Hen. 108. AS. Forlith, To commit adultery, or fornication.
Forlore, Forlost: Lost, undone, forlorn.
Forloyne, Dr. Ch. 386. A Term in Hunting, when the Dogs are called off from a wrong scent, or game.
Forlyved, for Forleved: Degenerated. p. 378, b. See Forleven.
Formell: The Female of an eagle, or hawk. It is used for the Female of any lowl, AF. 371.
Formelliche: Formally.
Former, Fourmer: Maker, Creator.
Formous: Beautiful, fair. Bal. 605. Lat. Formosus.
Forne: Before.
Fornefather, Fornfathir: A Forefather, an Ancestor.
Forpined: Pined away, waited. P. ol. 205.
Forfake, p. 362, a. Forfaken, p. 368, a. To deny; Inficiari. AS. Forfecgan.
Forshapin: Transformed. Tr. L. 2. 66.
Forshronke: Dried, or shrunk up. FL. 358.
Forfinge, Mo. 2847. To sing, or say Mass. See lb. 2908.
Forstewethed and forstugged: Slothful and sluggish. p. 204 a.
Forstonthin: To neglect. Mo. 1211. To lose through sloth.
Forfongin: Tired with singing. RR. 664.
Forstraughtin, No. 2613. Distracted, confounded. St.
Forswonk and forfwat: Overlaboured and belweated. Mo. 1954.
Forie: Strong. Bal. 910. Fr. Fort; from the Lat. Fortis.
Fortenid crese, RR. 4875. St. supposes it may come from the AS. Forpceonan, forp cynan, To kindle, and Crese for Increase, i. e. Lull once kindled daily increases more and more: But he suspects the place may be corrupted, which is very probable.
Fortheby as thei go, Phyl. 146. As they pass by.
Forthereth: Furthereth, forwardeth, promoteth, prospereth. Tr. L. 2. 1368. where MS. Sp. hath the whole Verse better, thus;

It is one of the thinges that furthreth most;
i. e. A proper place to discover one's love is one of the things most likely to procure success.
Forthi, Forthy: Therefore. Not forthy, p. 147, a. Notwithstanding.
Forthinke: To repent; To think with regret, or vexation; To be grieved, troubled, or concerned at; To disoblige, to create trouble, or concern. Tr. L. 2. 1414.
Forthwir: A promoter. CL. 1033.
Forthirith, Bl. Kn. 335. See Forthereth.
Forthrought, RR. 1071. Vexed, disturbed, &c. See Forthinke.
Forthren, Forthrin: To further, to promote, to encourage. Tr. L. 5. 1706. Forthring: Promoting. AF. 384.
Forthright: Directly, straightway. FL. 439.
Fortirisse: A Fortrifle. RR. 3942.
Fortroden: Trod down. Boeth.
Fortuit: Accidental. Boeth.

Fortune:

- Fortune: To happen, to chance. Bal. 262. To give good or bad success. ProL. 2379. Fortuned: It happened. RL. 165.
- Fortuncle: Accidental. Boeth.
- Fortunous, in Boeth. perhaps should be read Fortuitous. Lat. Fortuitus, Casual, accidental.
- Forwandred: Tired with wandering. RR. 3336. Perhaps it should be read Forwerie for wandred, i. e. Very weary with wandering; and so in Bal. Lad. 60. it may be read, To werie for wandrid, which is a common way of speaking in this Author.
- Forward: A Contract, a Covenant, a Condition, Agreement. AS. Foppoju. First and forward; First and foremost. Boeth.
- Forwelkid: Full of welks. RR. 361.
- Forwep: All wet with tears. Ch. Dr. 1833.
- Forwered, RR. 2564. Forwerid, Ib. 235. Wore out.
- Forwerie, RR. 3336. Very weary. See Forwandred.
- Forwete: To foreknow. Forweting: Foreknowledge. Mo. 1358.
- Forwoundid, RR. 1830. Dangerously wounded.
- Forwrappid: Close wrapped up. No. 2234.
- Foryelde: To reward. LIV. 457. To repay.
- Foryete, Foryetfulnesse, &c. To forget, Forgetfulness, &c.
- Foryit: To forget. Ber. 623.
- Fose: Foes, enemies. BD. 212.
- Foster, Fostere: A Forrester, a woodman. RR. 6329.
- Fostering: Feeding, nourishment, food. Fr. 581.
- Fostrid: Nourished. All doth waxe and fostrid be; [Time] causeth all things to grow, and be nourished. RR. 389.
- Forthor: La. 439. Fore-hute, RR. 3827. Forthwith, immediately.
- Fother, ProL. 532. "It is properly a Load in Carriage by Land, a Tonne by water, namely 2000 Weight, that is, 2240 Pound, every Hundred weight being 112 Pound. It may seem beyond all likelihood of truth, That the Temple of Mars, cost of gold largely a fother, ProL. 1910. But we must understand that he speaks of tale, not of weight; as if he should have said, it cost full 2000, or 2240 Pound of Money. Com. It is rather to be understood indefinitely of an Immense Sum.
- Foudre, Fr. A Thunder-bolt, or Lightning. Fa. L. 2. 27.
- Foule hem befall: Ill may they speed, Evil befall them. See the Plowman's Tale.
- Foulet for Followeth, Boeth. p. 389, a. l. 18. Comitatur.
- Fouliche: Foully. Test.
- Foulis: Fowls, birds.
- Found, Tr. L. 3. 981. for Fayned or Foned, i. e. Feigned. See Fone.
- Founde, An. 244. f. To try. See Fond.
- Founded, Tr. L. 2. 535. Sounded, Ca. &c. al.
- Foundemaunt, Foundement: A Foundation. Fr. Foundement.
- Foundrid: Stumbled. ProL. 2689.
- Fournice: A furnace. No. 825.
- Fourthirings: Successes. Fa. L. 2. 128.
- Foverie: Forty. RR. 5733.
- Foverie: The cunning of a Fox. RR. 6795.
- Fra, Fram: From.
- Fraelte, Fragilite: Frailty, weakness.
- Frain, Fraine: To ask, to enquire. Tr. L. 5. 126. AS.
- Fpman, fpægman.
- Frainith, Tr. L. 1. 32. (MS. Sp. freynith) seems to be mistaken for fainith, feynith, i. e. feigns. So feyneth be, Ca.
- Franchise: Freedom, liberty; Generosity, frankness. Sq. 1503. Fr. 3078. RR. 1211.
- Frankelcine: A free man, a free tenant, a Freeholder, a Country-Gentleman. ProL. 333.
- Franks: French Coins of different values.
- Frape, Tr. L. 3. 111. A company, a rabble. Sp. f. Stamp, from the Fr. Frappe.
- Franchise, as Franchise.
- Fray and fear, Ber. 281. To fright and scare.
- Fre: Free.
- Freedom: Frankness, a Gentleman-like behaviour. Mo. 1703.
- Fregius, Dr. Ch. 1070. Dares Phrygius, who wrote the History of the Trojan War.
- Freilte, WB. 92. See Fraelte.
- Frele: Frail, weak. RL. 427. Frel witted; Of a weak mind. p. 516, b.
- Fremde, Sq. 449. Fremid, Tr. L. 2. 248. Strange, foreign. AS. Fpæmb, A stranger, or foreigner. Let be to me your fremid manir speche, Tr. L. 2. 248. Do not talk to me as a stranger would. In Tr. L. 3. 530. instead of fremid, Ca. reads wyld. Sometimes frened and frend are used in the same sense, from the AS. Fpænib, So frened a cas, Di. 121. is the same as in the preceding Verse is meant by, so new a chaunce. From all fothnesse thei ben yfrende, i. e. Estranged from all truth. Mo. 2566. In other Editions it is Frend, frende.
- Frendfulliche: Friendly. Tr. L. 1. 691. Frendilyst, Frendlyst: Most friendly, or sociable. Tr. L. 2. 204. Best friend. Bl. Kn. 468.
- Frendnesse: Strangeness. p. 480, a. See Fremde.
- Frenesse: Liberty, freedom, frankness.
- Frenetike: Frantick. Tr. L. 5. 206.
- Frened. See Fremed.
- Frenith: Asketh, enquireth. No. 3109. See Fraine.
- Frenseye: A frenzy. Tr. L. 1. 728.
- Frere: A Fryer. Freris: Fryers. RR. 7463.
- Fresed, Fresid: Freezed, froze.
- Freshe: To refresh. RR. 1513. But it seems to be mistaken for Frenshe, or French, p. 194, a. l. 63.
- Fret: Filled, fraught. Bal. 269. See Lombis. Also, Fretwork. LW. 225, 228.
- Fret, Frete, Freten, Fretin, Frette: To eat, devour. Fretting: Devouring. ProL. 2021. AS. Fpætan, Lurcart, vorare. We still use it of Moth's fretting. Fest fretes, Mo. 2091. Eat hastily.
- Freat, Frente, Fruist, Fruit: Fruit; Issue. Fr. 2011.
- Frewell, Fremill: Freewill.
- Frezid. See Fresed.
- Frise: Worth all the golde in Rome and Frise, RR. 1093. f. Friseland. p. 413. Verse 23.
- Frish, Fryth, La. 124. A wood. Sk. and Somn. But Blo. from Coke upon Littleton, explains it, a Plain between woods.
- Fro: From. Drive fro drede, Drive away fear; Pelle timorem, p. 365, b.
- Frote: To rub. Tr. L. 3. 1121. Frottith: Rubbeth. MR. 639.
- Frounce: A plait; A wrinkle; Ruga, p. 360, b.
- Frouncid: Wrinkled. Cr. 155. Frounciles: Smooth, without wrinkles. RR. 860. Fr. Francer, To gather, to plait.
- Froward: Averse. RR. 4940.
- Fro'y: From you. Tr. L. 1. 5. See Alouth.
- Fruistfull, Fruistuous: Fruitfull; Usefull; Thrifty. Mo. 3383.
- Fruist, Fruit, as Freat.
- Ful, Full: Very. Ful bold; Very bold. Full done, for Fully done; Fulfilled, finished; Perfeceris, p. 389, a. l. 63.
- Fuldrive: Fully driven. This bargain is fuldrive, Fr. 2786. Made up, finished.
- Fulk, Fa. L. 1. 73. A hollow place. Sp. Sk. thinks it should be Sulk, Lat. Sulcus, A furrow, a trench, a ditch.
- Fumis: Smoak; Fumes. Fumofite, Sq. 378. No. 2083. Being affected with Fumes arising from the Stomach to the Head after Excess of Drinking.
- Fundement: Foundation.
- Furneis: A furnace. Fr. Foundement.
- Furrid hode: A Hood lined with Furr. Mo. 2236.
- Furtherin. See Forthrin.
- Fusible: That may be melted. No. 877.
- Fuyre: Fury.
- Fyl: Fell.
- Fylth: Vileness, baseness. p. 381. Lat. Vilitas; from whence the word seems to be derived.
- Fynance, Ber. 1876. See Fenaunce.
- Fync. See Fine.
- Fynt: Findeth; Found. Fynt his horse away; Finds his horse was gone.
- Fynys: Fines. Ber. 3117.
- Fyxe: Fixt, fixed.

G.

Gabb, Gabbe: To tattle, prate. MR. 402. To lye. r. 370, b. It sometimes signifies To speak or talk. RR. 6700.

Gacides Chiron, Fa. L. 3. 116. Perhaps it should be read Eacides Chiron. Chiron was a great Musician as well as Physician, and was Master to Achilles, Grandson to Eacus, thence called Eacides.

Gades: The City of Cadiz in Spain. p. 478, b.

Gadiling, Gadling: An idle fellow that gads and sun-
ters up and down. RR. 938. Gam. 203.

Gafe, Gasse: Gave.

Gage, Fr. A pledge, a pawn, Bail, or surety. Ber. 1404.
Also, To give bail. Ib. 3044.

Gailir: A Jaylor. Ar. 103.

Gaincome: Return. Cr. 55.

Gain for Again: Against; Touching. RR. 6555. There gain; Against that.

Gaitre, Mo. 1080. The Dogberry-tree. See Sonn. in Exte-tyeop. Ray says, Gatteridge-tee is Cornus femi-na or Prickwood; and yet Gatteridge-berries are the fruit of Euonymus Theophrasti, i. e. Spindle-tree or Louse-berry.

Galaxie, AF. 56. Fa. L. 2. 428. The Milky-way, which is a broad white Tract encompassing the whole Heavens, consisting of an innumerable quantity of Fixed Stars, different in Situation and Magnitude; from the confused mixture of whose light it's white colour is supposed to proceed. It is called Walylng-street, Fa. L. 2. 431. which was a Roman way extending from the East part of Britain to the West.

Gale, WB. 832. CL. 1357. To yawl, bawl, or laugh aloud; To hout. Sk.

Galfride, Fa. L. 3. 382. See Gaulfride.

Galianis: The Works of Galen. No. 1820.

Galiard: Gay. Fr. Gaillard, Brisk, merry, pleasant, chearfull.

Galingale, Prol. 383. Long-rooted Cyperus; Cyperus odo-ratus.

Gallice: Galicia, a Province of Spain. Prol. 468.

Gallie: Bitter, as gall. RL. 317.

Galoche: A kind of wooden shoe worn by Country-people in France. See Men. Fr. In Spenser it is called Ga-lage. It is taken for a shoe in general. Sq. 575.

Galp: To yawn; To belch.

Game: Sport, mirth; Pleasure; A jest, a pleasant story, or tale. Fr. 11, 15. In Tr. L. 4. 529. instead of it,
MS. Sp. reads Grame, V.

Gan, Gannin: Began. It is often used as a Sign of the Preter Tense, both with and without the Participle To;
as Gan proceed; Proceeded. Gannin steen; Fled. Tr.
L. 2. 194.

Gange: To go. Cr. 381. AS. Gangan.

Ganilion, Mo. 1342. Dr. Ch. 1121. Sp. says, That he
"betrayed the Army of the Christians under Charle-
"main, to the Saracens, and was therefore torn in pie-
"ces with four Horses: But Hofman thinks that the French call a Traitor Ganelon from Wenilo, Archbishop of Sens, who betrayed Charles the Bold his Benefactor, by calling in Lewis King of Germany, and receiving him into that City. See Hofm. in Wenilo.

Gap-toothid, WB. 603. Sk. reads it Gat-toothed, i. e. Having a Goat's teeth; perhaps to signify her Wantonness:
Others think, that it signifies Having gaps in her teeth,
as growing at a distance from one another; and this might also perhaps be taken as a Sign of Lechery, which is signified by her having a Coltis tooth, Ib. 602.
and the print of dame Venus sele, Ib. 604.

Gardbrace, Ch. Dr. 1554. The same with Bracer, V.

Garifoun: To garrison; To defend. RR. 3249.

Garnere: Properly, A Granary. It also signifies any Store-room, or place to lay up Money or other goods.
RR. 1148, 6810.

Garnison, Fr. Garnison: A Garrison, a Guard. RR.
4204.

Garment: A garment. Madg. 354.

Garunne: The River Garonne in France. Lat. Garumna.
Gat, as Agat. Gatnesf: Terror; Gallinets. Scith.
Gafayne, PT. 280. Perhaps it may signify a Void or Wall place. Lat. Barb. Gafma, Fr. Gafine. See Fr. Gl. in Voffum.

Gate: A way. Any gate; Any manner, in any wife.
RR. 5230. How gate, or Homgates; How, after what manner. MR. 129, 134. Went her gate; Went her ways. RR. 3332. Allò, Got, begot. Hyper. 12.

Gathren: To gather. Gathrid: Gathered. Boeth.

Gaute: Got. RR. 2692.

Gaude, No. 1903. Tr. L. 2. 351. A trifle. Also, Trifling, jesting. Gaudes: Ridiculous tricks, freaks.

Gaudid, Prol. 159. Made gay, or gawdy; Garnished, adorned.

Gaulfride, Mo. 1462. Galsfridus de Vino salvo, or Jeffrey
Vinefals, who wrote a Poem upon the Death of K.
Richard the First, who was slain in France before the Castle of Chalaz near Limoges, on a Friday, to which Chaucer alludes, particularly, Ib. 1457. O Venus, &c.
and Ib. 1466. The Friday, &c.

O Veneris lachrymosa dies! O filius amarum!

Gaure, Gaurin: To stare.

Gawain, Gawein, Sq. 115. "This Gawyn was Sifter's Son
"to Arthur the Great, King of the Britains, a Man
"famous in War, and in all manner of Civility; as "in the Acts of the Britains we may read. In the "year 1082. in a Province of Wales, called Rose, was
"his Sepulchre found, and his Body, affirmed by
"many to have been of the length of fourteen foot. Sp.

Gawrin, as Gaure.

Gaylere: A Jayler.

Geant, AF. 344. A Jay. Sk. But here it must mean some other Bird, perhaps a Bittern; for the Jay is mentioned, Ib. 346.

Gear: Habit, clothes. FL. 26. See Gere.

Gede for Tede, Ber. 2475. Went.

Gests: Gifts.

Gelofer. See Clove gelofer.

Gende, Gent: Gentle, genteel, seemly, fine. Gent faconde; Flowing eloquence. AF. 558.

Generalie: Generality. In generalite; In general, generally, for the generality. Cup. 402.

Genilion, No. 2702. Mo. 806. See Ganilion.

Gent. See Gende.

Genterle, LW. 390. as Gentillese.

Gentiles: Relations, kindred, Fr. 1510.

Gentill: Gentle, noble; Civil, Gentleman-like. Gentil-lesse: Gentility, frankness, generosity; Civility. Gentilly: Civilly, in a genteel, courteous manner.

Gentillesse, as Gentillesse.

Gentles, WB. 1209. Gentlemen; Nobles.

Geomancie: Divination by points, or circles made on the Earth, or by opening the Earth. Blo.

Gerd, Gerdin: To strike, to smite; To pierce; To stab.
See Gl. V.

Gere: Any Instrument or Furniture whatsoever; Apparel, dress, habit; Accoutrement. Prol. 354, 2182. In his gere dress, Tr. L. 2. 635. is better read in MS. Sp.
In his gere hym dress.

Gereves: Guardians, or Governors: Whence Reve signifies a Gentleman's Bailif. Prol. 589. Portreve; a Bai-lif, or chief Officer of a Port-town; Sheriff, i. e. Shiregereve; Church-gereve; A Churchwarden. Fr. 43. AS.
Lepepa, Comes, praefectus. See Sonn.

Gergon: A jargon, chattering. Sq. 1364.

Gerie, Gerisul: Changeable, inconstant. Prol. 1538, 1540.
f. à gyraudo. It sometimes signifies Cruel. Sk.

Gert: Struck. Gam. 598. Where MS. Ch. hath it, Smoot him on the nek. See Gerd.

Gesolrent the haut, Ber. 1104. G solrent in alt; A Note in the Gamut, or Scale of Musick.

Gesse: To guess. To entertain as a guest. Com. explains
Mo. 2109, 2110. thus; "If thou wilt like of their sen-
"tence and stand to it, they will entertain thee as a
"guest in their brave halles; or else they will hear
"and end thy matter without any great enquire, pri-
"vately in their houses. Gessing: Meaning; Opinion.

Gest, Geste: A guest. Also, History, a story. Tr. L. 2. 83.
Where instead of hem redin the gest, the Sense and Numbers are easier in MS. Sp. rede hem all the gest, i. e. Story.

- Gestis*: Acts, Stories, Histories; Noble Actions, or Exploits. Also, Guests. Fr. 2037. Mo. 2471.
Get: Jette. Mo. 974. Also, Got, begotten. PW. 162.
Get: Gotten. BD. 67.
Geth: Goeth. Ar. 260.
Gethering: Gathering. Mo. 2673.
Gettin: Begotten. Hyp. 35.
Geve: Given. Fr. 457.
Geyn: Gain. Her ne gate no geyne; She got nothing, She was never the better. An. 207.
Geyns for Ageyns, Ber. 1921. Against.
Ghest: A guest. Ghestis: Guests. Fr. 1368, 1369.
Gholt: A Spirit; The Soul, the mind. See Gofte.
Gide, Gie: To guide, to direct. See Gny.
Gierfull, as Gerie, Gerifull.
Gigges, Mo. 2699. Harlots, Strumpets; Giglers. Fr. L. 3. 852. Fr. Gigue, a Romp. Gigging: Sounding. Sp. Perhaps from the Fr. Gigue, It. Giga, a sort of Musical Instrument.
Giglotlike: Like a Strumpet. Cr. 83. It seems to come from Gigge. See Gigges.
Gilty: Gilt, golden. Dr. Ch. 838.
Gilefull: Deceitful, perfidious, treacherous.
Giler, Gilir: A deceiver. Giling: Deceiving. Gilid: Deceived. See Agilir.
Gilofre: A Gilly-flower. RR. 1368. Fr. Giroflée. See Clove gelofir.
Gilonr, as Gilcr.
Gilt, Gilte: Gilded; Gold-colour, yellow. LIV. 230. Also, Guilt; A fault. As in my gilt; Through my fault. Fr. 2303. Withoutin gilt; Without remedy. Ib. 2585. Mo. 1488. Giltif: Guilty. Gam. 1626.
Gin: A snare, or trap. Also, A trick, or contrivance: Fr. L. 3. 913. Ginis: Gins, engines. Mo. 2591. Bonds, fetters. Com.
Gingiber: Ginger. RR. 1369.
Ginnc. See Gin.
Ginnin: To begin. Tr. L. 5. 657. Ginning: Beginning. RR. 4332. Tr. L. 1. 378. See Argumentid. Ginnith: Beginneth. Ginnith gone; He goeth immediately. MR. 956. Here Ginnith seems to be used as Gan, V.
Gipe, RR. 7214. A Coat full of plaits. Sk. Fr. Jupe, An upper coat. See Azen. Fr. in Juppe.
Gipon, Gippon: A short doublet, or light coat. Prol. 75. A Diminutive of Gipe, as the Fr. Jupon is of Jupe. See Gipe.
Gipsire: A pouch, or purse; A bag. Prol. 359. Fr. Gibecié.
Gir delide: The Waist, the middle. RR. 826. The place where the Girdle is wore; from the AS. Trýpól, Cingulum, and Stede, Locus, ut sit Locus cinguli.
Girdin. See Gerd.
Gires: Fits. Prol. 1533. See Gyre.
Girt. See Gerd, Gert and Grit.
Gisarme, RR. 5978. A military weapon, supposed by some to be a Pike with Two points, or a Staff with Two pikes within it, which with a Thrust forward came forth, and thought by Spelm. to be the same which in Spanish is called Bisarma, or Visarma; but in the Statute of Winton, he thinks it signifies a Bille, in Lat. Bipennis, a Battle-ax; a Hand-ax with Two edges. See Fr. Gl. in Gisarma.
Gise: Guise, manner, custom, usage. In gise. [MS. Sp. In wife] of courtesy; Under a pretence of courtesy. Tr. L. 5. 64. Fashion of drets, or armour. Prol. 2127. which is better in MS. Ch.
There ne is nowe no newe gyze, that tho nas olde;
 That is, There is no new manner of Arming now, that was not old, and used at that time.
Gisferne: A gizzard, called a Ghizzern in Lincolnshire. In p. 385, b. it is put for the Liver, Lat. Jecur, jecinoris, from whence perhaps it is derived.
Gist: A guest, a stranger. PT. 461. Gistis: Strangers. Ib. 550.
Gite: A woman's gown. MR. 846. WB. 559.
Glad: Content. Glad povert; Poverty with contentment. WB. 1183. Gladly: Commonly. Sk. f. Properly. p. 151, b. 202, a. 208, b. Hyper. 205.
Glade, Gladin: To make glad, to comfort. Fr. 2514.
Gladir: A comforter, cherisher, one that causeth joy, or gladness. Prol. 2224. Also, More glad.
Gladly. See Glad.
Glaising: The glazing of a window. Dr. Ch. 327.
Glase, Tr. L. 5. 469. as Glese.
Gle, Glee: Mirth, rejoicing; Melody, Musick. Tr. L. 2. 1036. Fr. L. 3. 119.
Glede: A burning, or live coal. Prol. 1994. AS. Gleb, Pruna. Gledis: Coles; Embers. Tr. L. 2. 538. Also, Kites. Mo. 3267.
Gleire of an eye: The white of an egg. No. 827. Fr. Glair.
Glent: Glanced. Tr. L. 4. 1223.
Gleve: A spear. Sp. It properly signifies a Sword. Fr. Glaiue, a Cutlace. CL. 545.
Gliterande, Gliterande: Glittering, shining. The Termination—and or—and is frequently used for—ing, in the Old Poets; From the not observing of which arose that mistake in the Editions of Spenser's Fairy Q. L. 1. Can- to 7. St. 29.
His gliter and armour shin'd far away;
 whereas it should be read,
 His gliterand armour shined far away.
Glombe, RR. 4356. To look gloomy; To frown. Sp.
Glofe, Glosin: To deceive, flatter, lye; To interpret. It is generally used in an ill sense for To put a fair interpretation with an intention to deceive. Mo. 3095. Also, A Comment, or Interpretation. Fr. 528. For al the glofe that thei conne; How fair soever a Gloss they may put upon it. Ib. 2782. Glosir, Glosour: A deceiver, a flatterer.
Glotenie, Glotenie: Gluttony. Glotons: Gluttons. RR. 4307.
Gloutous: Gluttonous, ravenous. Gloutous bonde: A greedy hand; Avidæ manu, Boeth. p. 364, b.
Glondin: Glowed, shone. Prol. 2134. Glowedon, MS. Ch. which makes the Verse complicated without pronouncing the final e in beewixt.
Glytrin: To glitter, to shine. Prol. 979.
Gnarr [or Knarre, H. 1.] is a hard knot in a tree, or a Stubb; whence a thick chubby fellow is called a Gnarr, Prol. 551. which MS. Ch. reads thus;
He was thick shuldered, and a short gnarr;
 which is a more natural Description of a thick, short, well-set fellow than it is in the common Editions.
Gnarrie: Stubb'd.
Gnafe: Gnashed with the teeth. Fr. RL. 123;
Gnerring: Snarling. p. 202, b.
Gnuffe: An old Cuff; A Miser. MR. 80.
Go: Gone. Fr. 514.
Gobbet, Gobest: A piece. Prol. 698.
Goddace, Goddes: A Goddess. Cr. 135. 218.
Goddie: Gods; Of God.
Gode: Good. Sometimes it is used by way of Intreaty; as we say, Good now. AL. 346, 689. Also, God.
Gadis: Goods; Gods. Gode-giffing: A good opinion, a good name; Bona existimatio, Boeth. p. 363, b.
Godelest: Without Money, or Goods. No. 2798. But it is better read in MS. Ch. and H. 1.
But goldlees for to be it is no game.
Godelest: Goodliest, handsomest. AL. 384.
Godelich, Godely: Goodly; Kind, courteous, civil, obliging; Gentleman-like, honorable; Honorably, &c. A man may godely, p. 157, a. (so it should be read) i. e. may do it in a goodly manner, as p. 158, a.
Godelibedde, Godelybede: Goodness; Civility. RR. 4604. Comeliness, beauty. Tr. L. 3. 1736.
Godeneß; Goodness. At godeneße; To good purpose. RR. 1453.
Godeße: Goods. RR. 5634. It were better to read it Godes.
Godfib: A Gossip, a Godfather, or Godmother, any Spiritual Relation. Pars. AS. Syb, Relation, Kindred, or Alliance.
Gofish: Foolish, silly. Tr. L. 3. 585. from the Fr. Goffe, a Duncce, an awkward fellow, and perhaps Rude, ill-natured. See Men. Fr.
Gold-hewin: Of a golden hue, or colour.
Goldsmithry: Goldsmith's work.
Gulet: The gullet, or throat. RR. 7096.
Gulier, leis, Prol. 562. Ravenously-mouthed. Sp. But it signifies

- signifies rather a Buffoon, in Fr. Gouliard. See Men. Fr. and Fr. Gl. in Goliardus.
- Gomme*: Gum. LW. 121.
- Gon*, Gonin, Gonnin: Began; To go or proceed; Ago, agone, since. It is sometimes put for Gan, Mo. 1837. Bl. Kn. 32.
- Gon*, Gonne: A gun. RR. 4176. Fa. L. 3. 553. Also, Begun. Pro. 2662. which may be read, falkis beegunne, as in MS. Ch.
- Gonde*: Gone. PT. 574.
- Gonfanoun*: RR. 1201. Gonfenaun, Ib. 2018. Gonfanon, The chief Banner, or Standard. See Men. Fr. and Men. It. and Fr. Gl. in Guntfano.
- Gong*: A house of ease, a Jakes. Mo. 2092. p. 208, b. AS. Gong, Latrina.
- Gonne*, Ginnin. See Gon.
- Goodlese*, Mo. 6. Goodwoman, or as they say in some places, Goody. See Lese.
- Goodship*: Goodness. Ber. 515.
- Gore*, MR. 129. No. 3298. A plait or fold. Sp. An arbour. Sk.
- Gorget*: The throat. Mo. 1450. Fr. Gorge.
- Gose*: Goes, goeth. Ch. Dr. 1286. Also, A goose.
- Gospellere*: An Evangelist. RR. 6887.
- Gossomere*: The white and cobweb-like Exhalations that fly abroad in hot Sunny weather. Bl. Sk. says that in a Book called The French Girdner, it signifies the Down of the Sow-Thistle, which is driven to and fro by the wind.
- Gost*: A ghost, a spirit; The mind. Gostis: Ghosts, &c.
- Goth*: Goeth; Go, in the Imperative Mood.
- Gouvernaunce*, Govirnaunce: Government, management, conduct, care. In Tr. L. 2. 1442. Ca. reads juste-nance.
- Governayle*: Government, management, conduct. p. 365, a. Also, A pilor, a guide, a governor. Mo. 3018. Fr. Gouvernail, The Rudder, or Helin of a Ship, the Steerage.
- Gourde*: A leathern bottle. Mo. 1659. So called either from the form of it; or (as Sk. says) because abroad they use Gourds for Bottles.
- Grace*: Favour. Fr. 2545. God giveth [i. e. give] sory grace; A Curse. No. 686. Save, saving your grace; With your leave, or favour. p. 149, a. For the grace of gode; For the sake of good. p. 382, a. By grace of position; For argument sake. p. 399, a. In RR. 444. it seems to signify Gracefulness or Comeliness, particularly of the Countenance. Makin lene their grace; Make themselves look thin through an Hypocritical fasting, referring to Math. VI. 16. Graces, Fr. Thanks.
- Gracious*: Gracefull, well-favoured. Fr. 1633. Fr. Gracieux.
- Gratich*. See Greith.
- Grame*: Grief, sorrow, vexation, anger, madness; Trouble, affliction. Tr. L. 1. 373. AS. Upam, Furor.
- Grammercy*, as Grantmercy.
- Grane*: A grain. Tr. L. 3. 1028.
- Grantmercy*. See Grantmercy.
- Grapinel*: A Grapling-Iron. Cl. 61. A Diminutive of the Fr. Grapin.
- Gratch*: To behave. Sk. Gan her gratche as a bigine; Dressed herself as a Beguine. RR. 7368. Gratche is perhaps the same with Gratthe, if not mistaken for it. See Greithe.
- Grave*, Gravin: To bury, to engrave, to carve, to cut. Tr. L. 2. 47. To make an impression. Cup. 280. Buried. Fr. 2522.
- Grange*: A Grange, a Granary, Barn, or large Farm belonging to a Religious House, where there are Stables for Horses, Stalls for Oxen and other Cattle. Fr. Grange, A barn.
- Grantmercy*: Great thanks. Fr. Grandmerci; I thank you heartily.
- Gre*, Gree, Fr. Gré. Will, accord, satisfaction, pleasure. Ber. 1326. Take at gre, or agre, RR. 1969, 4349. Take in gre, Ib. 42. Receive in gre, Fr. 2172. Accept in gre, Tr. L. 2. 529. To take kindly, or in good part. Make gre; To oblige one, to do a good turn. Mo. 2274. Also, Degree, Gree superlatif; The Superlative Degree. Sq. 891. In no manir gre; Not in the least degree. RR. 5743. Greable: Agreeable; Satisfactory. La. 768.
- Grede*: To cry, to weep. CN. 133. It. G-illare.
- Greet*: To rejoyce.
- Greife*: Grief. Take it not in greife; Take it not ill.
- Grein de Paris*, RR. 1369. Sk. thinks it to be contracted from Grains of Paradise; The Seed of a Plant brought from Guinea.
- Greined*, Greynyd: Made, sprung up or produced from a grain. Sk. Of colour greynyd; Dyed in grain. Sk. 2330.
- Greinke*: To remove, to bring. Sk. To fix, prepare or make ready. Mo. 619. To contrive. The Lord greined death to all gode menne, Boeth. p. 363, a. Si bonis omnibus necem struere ducemur.
- Grene*: Green. Grene of conscience; Of a tender conscience; Tender-hearted. No. 100. See Pro. 142. -- 150. How full ofin grene; A pale complexion. Tr. L. 2. 6. As grene as gail, Mo. 2102. The moisture in the Gall of living creatures is green; it should seem that he means the Gold was enameled with Green. Com. Grene, Ber. 3160. is put for Grin, or Grin (as in RL. 237.) which is the same with Gin, A mare.
- Grenehode*: Rawnels, rashness of youth, or simply, youth. La. 164.
- Greynrb*, PT. 686. Are or look green.
- Grei*, Gress: Greeted, saluted. Bal. Lad. 100.
- Grete*: To cry. RR. 4116. See Grede. Great, course. Sq. 938. Also, as Gret.
- Greutin*: Snote. See Gerd and Grit.
- Greve*: To grieve, to offend, to hurt, to annoy; Grief, grievance. Also, A grove. Greves: Groves, bushes. RR. 3019. CN. 64. Grevid: Aggrieved; Angry.
- Greynyd*. See Greined.
- Grill*, RR. 73. Cold. Sp. f. as Grifly. See Grife.
- Grin*: A snare. See Grene.
- Grint*: Grindeth. WB. 389. Grintid: Ground; Gnashed. Fr. 897.
- Grife*: To be afraid. Ber. 2067. Grifly: Frightfull, dreadful. See Agriife.
- Grit* for Girt: Snote, struck, stabbed. Through grit, Pro. 1012. [gert, MS. Ch.] Through gyt, Bl. Kn. 292. Thrust, or pierced through. See Gerd.
- Grith*: An agreement. Mo. 2187. AS. Epist., Peace.
- Groche*: To grudge or grutch, to murmur. Mo. 3104.
- Grofe*, Groffing, Grouse, Grouffe, Gruf, Gruff: Groveling, flat on the ground. Now downward grouse, and now upright; Sometimes flat on thy face, and sometimes with thy face upward. RR. 2561.
- Groin*: The snout of a swine. p. 192, b. To grumble. RR. 7099. Fr. Grogner. Also, Grunting, grumbling. Tr. L. 1. 350. Fr. Grogne, A pouting woman.
- Gronin*: To groan. Tr. L. 3. 207.
- Grope*, Gropin: To search, feel, examine. Fr. 550.
- Groubed*: Grubbed up.
- Grouse*, Grouffe. See Grofe.
- Groun*, Ber. 1674. Grumbling. See Goin.
- Groundid*: Ground, from Grind. No. 796.
- Growning*, PT. 651. Growling, inarling. See Groin, Groun.
- Gruf*, Gruffe. See Grofe.
- Grusell*: A gristle. PT. 577.
- Gryt*, Grece, Greece: A valuable Furr of a Beast called by the French Vair. Pro. 194. See Fr. Gl. in Griseum. It also signifies Grey. Fr. Gris. In IP. Ne neither gose ne gryt, it signifies Partridges, says Sk. perhaps from the colour; but probably it there signifies Pig, as Gristis is used by Dougl. En. VIII. for Pigs.
- Gubernatise*: Governing.
- Gude*: Good.
- Guerdon*, Fr. A reward, recompence; Return of a favour or obligation. Also, To reward, to recompence, to requite. For all guerdons, p. 148, b. A form of treaty; Of all loves. Guerdening: Rewarding, &c. Guerdonless: Without reward. Bl. Kn. 400.
- Guisse*, as Gise.
- Gurtheles*: Girdles. Pro. 370.
- Guy*: To guide, rule, govern; To direct, to order.
- Guerdone*, as Guerdon.
- Gyderesse*: She that guides, a woman guide. Boeth.
- Gye*, as Guy.

Gynne, as Gin.

Gyre, Prol. 1374. A trance, a dump, a fit. Sk. Perhaps from the Lat. Gyro, To turn round, it may signify Dizziness, or Swimming of the head.

Gyrl. See Grit.

H.

- H Abandon: To abandon, to forsake. BD. 763.
Habergeon, Haburgeon, Fr. Haubergeon, a Dim. of Hauberg, or Haubert, a Coat of Mail; A little Coat of Mail, or only Sleeves and Gorget of Mail. Bl. No. 3366, 3368.
Habiline: Ability, capacity; Address. CL. 1044. Fr. Habilié.
Habitacles: Habitations; Apartments. Fa. L. 3. 104.
Habiten: To dwell, inhabit. RR. 660.
Habound: To abound; Abounding.
Habundaunt: Abounding with. Fr. 1089.
Haburgeon. See Habergeon.
Hace: Hath. Also, Hoarse; Harsh. Cr. 338. Here and hace; Hoarse and harsh. Cr. 33. AS. Daye, Raussu.
Hackenaie: RR. 1137. Fr. Haquenée, a Pad; but here it signifies a very ordinary Horse (such as we now call a Hackney) in opposition to a Horse of price, Ib. 1134.
Hadnest, perhaps for Badnest, p. 514, a. 1. 42.
Haie: A hedge. RR. 3007, 2971, 3175. Fr. Hays. AS. Daye, Sepes, septum, any Fence or Enclosure.
Hailes: Bliss, happiness. No. 2168. In Sanctis, Sk. Sedibus, being understood; In the Holy Habitations, or Habitations of the Saints.
Hailin: To salute; To embrace. See Halfe. I hailin The, No. 3154. I conjure the, Ca. 2. Py. halonse, Ca. 1. halfe, Fl. 1. halfe, hayse, al. haile, Ed. 1591.
Haine: Hatred. Test. Fr. Haine.
Haire: A hair-cloth. RR. 438.
Haketon: A Jacket without sleeves. Sp. No. 3365.
Halfe: A side, a part. AS. Dealp. A thisshalfe [i. this halfe] God; On this side God. p. 489, b.
Halfindele, Halfindole. See Halve.
Halif node. See Hazil node.
Halke: A corner. Fr. 2675. No. 322. AS. Dealp, A nook.
Hallowes: Saints. Prol. 14. AS. halg, Sanctus.
Halowe: Hollow. Ar. 308. No. 1286.
Halowid: Hollow'd to, called upon. PT. 21.
Halpe: Helped, eased. RR. 1911. Mo. 158. RL. 72.
Halfe: The neck. Sp. 1911. Also, To embrace, to take one about the neck. CL. 1290. Halving: Embracing. RL. 216. AS. halp.
Halfor it to the best: By the Context it should be, I will pray that it turn to the best. PT. 107.
Halt, Halte: Holdeth; Observeth. Dr. Ch. 621. Held, or kept. La. 722. Tr. L. 2. 37. Held, accounted. Also, To halt as a Cripple. Dr. Ch. 622.
Halve, Halvindole, Halfindele, Halfindole: Half. In some halve: In some part, in some degree. Test. Withdrawin them to halves: Drew themselves out into two Parties, some for one side, and some for the other. Gam. 258.
Hameled, Tr. L. 2. 964. Cut off, abated. Ca. bath liffed (i. e. lessened, abated) instead of hameled. It seems to come from Hamelan, To maim, or lame by cutting the hams, or houghs.
Hamirs: Hammers. Dr. Ch. 1164.
Han: Have.
Hanselines: A kind of Breeches. Pars. p. 198, a. f. leg.
Hanselines, Breeches or slops.
Hanten: To haunt, use, exercise. Boeth.
Hap, Happe: Fortune, chance. Happes: Chances. Happes aventureus, p. 365, a. I suspect it was originally writ to the folie of these happes, (without aventureus) and that aventureus was afterwards put in the margin as a Gloss to explain happes, which being in time introduced into the Text, was changed to aventureus; or else it may have been writ happes or aventureus, there being very frequent Instances in Chaucer's Translation of Boeth. of two Synonymous words being put to render the sense of one in the Latin, where one is either obscure, or does not fully answer the force of the Latin word: Besides Aventureus bears a different sense in this Author. See Aventureus. Hape is put for Hap, or Happe, RR. 3284. Happious: Accidental, happening by chance, p. 490, b.
Harbere: An harbour. FL. 465.
Harberowe. See Herberowe.
Hardest: Hardeneth. p. 514, a.
Hardied: Emboldened, encouraged. Test.
Hardily: Bravely, boldly; Verily. Prol. 156. RR. 4.
Hardiment, Hardines: Courage, boldness.
Hardly, Dr. Ch. 1043. Bal. 828. for Hardily, V.
Hardy: Bold, brave, courageous.
Harlor, p. 202, b. It is used indifferently of loose persons of either sex, as Ribaude, V. Prol. 649. Mo. 2273. King of harlots is the same with Rex Ribaldorum, who had the charge of punishing those disorderly people about the King's Court. See an Account at large of his Office in Fr. Gl. in Ribald. The Office of Master of the Revels seems to have some Affinity with it.
Harlotreis: Bawdry. Prol. 503.
Harnis, Harnis: Harnels, Furniture, Armour. Harnis The, RR. 2648. Dress thee.
Harnis, for Hernis: Corners. Mo. 2429.
Harpour: A Harper. Tr. L. 2. 1030.
Harrow: An Interjection. Hars is a form of Exclamation anciently used in Normandy to call for Help, or to raise the Hue and Cry. See Hick. Gr. Fr. p. 96, a.
Harrone: To lay waste, destroy, ravage, plunder. MR. 404. Fr. 843. AS. Depgian, Valfare.
Haryld: Carried out by force, hurried out. Prol. 2728.
Hazardours. See Hazardours.
Hastiness: Rashness. p. 150, a.
Hastily, Hastly: Soon. Fr. 462. Presently, immediately, without delay. Ib. 1170.
Hastow: Hast thou. WB. 903.
Hate, Haste, RR. 38. Be or is called, or named. Also, Hot. RR. 2318.
Havan: A haven. Test.
Hauberk, Fr. Hauberg, Haubert, a Coat of Mail. See Habergeon.
Have, for Behave, p. 488, b. 1. 28. Have the barre. See Barr.
Haven, Havin: To have.
Hannin: To enhance, promote. Bl. Kn. 431. Fr. Hauffer; To lift up. Hannin: Elevation. p. 449, b.
Haunt: Custom, a habit, skill gained by frequent practice. Prol. 449. Hauitidin: Haunted. See Hanten.
Hawpire, RR. 4720. The same with Aver, V.
Hautin, Hantin (Fr. Hautain) Haughty, proud. RR. 3739. Loud. No. 1844. High-flying. Di. 195. Hau-teinly: Haughtily. RR. 5820.
Hawbak, Hawbeck, Hawberk, as Hauberk.
Hawe: Coloured. Cr. 257. A Hawthorn-berry. WB. 659. p. 487, b. A Yard, a hedge. No. 2373. See Haie.
Hay. See Haie.
Hayne. See Haine.
Hazardours: Gamesters, particularly Hazard-players.
Hazardrie: Gaming, playing at Hazard. Mo. 2106.
Hazil wode, Tr. L. 5. 1174. Hazil wode, Ib. L. 3. 892. Hazle trees. Te hazlewoods seems to have been a common form of Exclamation; and Te halif wode, Tr. L. 5: 505. should probably be read, Te hazil wode, or as in MS. Sp. Te hazil wode thought [quod, Ca.] this Pandare.
He, is sometimes put before Proper Names, as the Pronoun Es in Saxon; as, He Tityus, Tr. L. 1. 787. He Moses, Sq. 270. He Epicurus, p. 375, a. So Him, RR. 6781. Bl. Kn. 369. and Her, V.
Heclid, Cr. 244. Wrapped. Sk. See Gl. V. in Hekkyl.
Hed, Hede: Heed, care, attention. Also, The head.
Hedde: Hid, covered. LW. 208.
Hedin of him the name, Gam. 431. This, as it is printed, is not intelligible; MS. Ch. gives us the true Reading, thus; Heede of him they name, i. e. They took particular notice of him, observed him close, and wondred how such a Stripling durst venture himself against an experienced Champion. The same Expression is used in this sense in a Poem in MS. Ch. Entitled Progne & Phi-

Philomene; the Story of which is taken out of Gower, L. 5. No man in Court noon heede of hym name; i. e. No man at Court took any manner of notice of him.

Heed: Head. On his heed; Upon peril of losing his head, Upon pain of death. Prol. 1346.

Heerde: A Shepherd.

Heere and hound: Hare and Hound. Sp. and Sk. Tr. L. 4. 210. Perhaps it may have been a Proverbial Expression signifying One and all. Ca. has it thus, al they sayde and fowne.

Heeres: Hairs. Prol. 557.

Heeste: A command.

Hegge, RR. 481. A hedge. Heggis: Hedges.

Heighe: To halten. Tell.

Height, RR. 2984. for Hight, V.

Heine, for Hine, V. This cursed heine; This cursed slave. No. 1340.

Heire: Hair. MR. 368. A Hair-cloth. No. 143.

Heisugge, AF. 612. Curruca, a little bird in whose nest the Cuckow layeth her Eggs, and when they be hatched and grown to some biguets, they eat the bird that bred them. Sp.

Held: Hold. WB. 272.

Hele: To hide, to cover, to conceal. RR. 6882. WB. 950. AS. Delan. Heled, Hyled, Ado. 1170. Hid, covered.

Hele: Health; Prosperity, welfare. Also, A heel. HLis: Heels. RR. 7488.

Helelesse, Tr. L. 5. 1592. Void of Hele, V.

Helise, Fr. 852. Elisba, the Prophet.

Helise the feld: The Elyfian Fields. CL. 119.

Helmid: Wearing a helmet. Tr. L. 2. 593. But Ca. hath it Helmid nish stele; Crowned with Steel, the AS. Helim, signifying a Crown, as well as a Head-piece.

Helowis. WB. 677. Heloise, the Concubine, and afterwards the Wife, of Abelard. See their Story at large in Bayle's Dict. Lib. Hist. of Bretagne, &c.

Hin, Honne, Hinnis, Hens, Hense: Hence.

Hind, WB. 6218. Hnde, MR. 278, &c. (or rather, as MS. Ch. hath it throughout that Tale) Hendy: Gentle; Near, handsome. RR. 285, 3345.

Heng, Tr. L. 2. 689. as Hing.

Heni, Hinin: To get, to take, to catch. Fr. 236. Caught lifted up, took, taken. AS. Dentan, To pursue, to catch, &c.

Henters: Huntsmen: Pursuers. Poeth.

Hepe: A company, a troop. Halt to hepe, Tr. L. 3. 1770. Holds together.

Her, Here: To hear. Also Hair. It is used very often in the MSS. for Their, from the AS. Thiopa. Of them. It seems to be retained (though not designedly) in this Edition, in Fr. 2380. and Tr. L. 4. 1141. Mr. Urry having in other places changed it into Their or Ther. It is put before Proper Names, as He. CL. 234.

Heraude: To proclaim, to set forth, or celebrate the praise or fame of one, which is the part of a Herald. Fr. Heraut.

Heraudes: Heralds, MR. 276. Feats of activity, or furious parts in a play. Sp. From Heros, a Heroe, or from Herald.

Herbeger, RR. 7585. Herbiger, AL. 268. A Chamberlain, one that takes care of Lodgings. Herbegours: Chamberlains. RR. 5000.

Herber, Herbere, Herbir: An arbour. Tr. L. 2. 1705. An Inn, or place of Entertainment; A Lodging. Also, A place, station. Fr. 2581.

Herbergeon. See Hibergeon.

Herberone, Herbir: To harbour, to lodge, to entertain. RR. 6145. Herberid, Herbrid, Herbroden: Harboured, &c.

Herbigage, Herlorie, Herbrongh, Herbrow, Herbrun: An Inn, a Lodging.

Herd, Herde: A herdsman, a shepherd. Also Heard; Hard. Prol. 229. RR. 3279.

Herdegromes: Herdsmen. Fr. L. 3. 135.

Herdus, RR. 1233. Hurds, Tow, the courtly part of Hemp or Flax when dressed. Also, for Hierdis, Mo. 2279. See Huerde.

Here, Gam. 1039. This place is certainly corrupted. AS. Ch. reads it thus;

And doib him noon harm,
But leye upon the bodyes,
And breke both leg and arm.

But H. i. thus;

— and do hem no harmet.
But breke both her leggis and fiken her armes.

By this it appears that the true Reading is her armes, and that this was unskillfully brought into the Text out of the margin; where it was put to explain her, or here. See Her.

Herenus, Pi. 92. Instead of thou Herenus Quene, it is, Te vertuose quene, in a MS. in the Harl. Library.

Hrie. See Hery.

Hein: Made of hair. Hain clout; A piece of Hair cloth. No. 2252.

Hris: Hairs.

Hrne: A valley; A corner. Fr. 2675. Hrnis, No. 679. Corners. AS. Dypm. Angulus.

Hrnia: A Rupture.

Hron: Hereupon. Fa. L. 3. 45.

Heronere: Di. 195. That kind of Hawk which flies at Herons; or else it may signify a Heron. Instead of Hroner, Tr. L. 4. 413. Ca. hath Hronm.

Heronsews, Sq. 88. f. Young Herons, Fr. Hronneaux, or Heronseaux. The common Heron is called Hronsew. MS. Ch. hath Curlewis instead of Heronsews.

Hronward: Hereupon, upon this condition. Dr. Ch. 248.

Hrt, Herte: Did hurt. Dr. Ch. 533. The Heart. Instead of all mine herte, read ali by herte, RR. 4800. A Hart. Herty: Hearty, sincere. RR. 5433. Hrilefs: Heartless, discouraged.

Herto: Hercunto. Te were not nout herto; You were not used to this. Br. 532. Likewise, also.

Hery: To praise, to honour. AS. Dejan. Hried: Praised, honoured. Heryng: Honour. No. 2967. Praising, honouring. Id. 3187.

Hesperus: The Evening-star.

Hepe: A command. No. 2157, 2163. The Third Commandment, Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain, &c. is called the seconde hepe, or Commandment. AS. Haye. It seems to be put for Beheste, RR. 4475, 4477.

Hei: Heated, warmed. AF. 145.

Heie: To promise. Dr. Ch. 1220. Was called. Id. 200. See Hate.

Heihin: A Heathen, an Infidel; Mockery. Sp. MS. Ch. and H. i. read Heihunge, MR. 1092. The same Expression is used by Dougl. En. 4.

Sal y thus makkis, and to heshyng drive, &c. Lat. Irvisa.

Heihnefs: Paganism, The Heathen world. Prol. 49.

Hewed, Fa. L. 2. 42. Was every werine in me hewed. f. for beved, i. e. every Faculty in me was sunk. See Hevieth.

Hvenishe: Celestial. p. 442, b.

Hevish: Sinks down, maketh heavy. Poeth.

Hevin: To rise, to mount; To heave, to lift up. Di. 271. Thereon was to hevin and to done, Tr. L. 2. 1259. There was great difficulty, qu. heaving and working. Also, Heaven.

Hvinefs: Severity, or an Inclination to be severe, p. 158, a.

Hwe: Colour; Pretence: Hwis: Colours. Tr. L. 2. 21. AS. Dipe, Color. To hwe to hie, p. 489, a. To hwe above the hedde, CL. 158. were Proverbial Expressions, spoken of persons attempting things above their power, or condition; which may be further explained by a passage in Lidgate's Life of St. Fremonde, MS. Harl.

Or who can write the triumphes glorious
Of his martirs in noubre not a 'we?
And I am ferful above myn hed to hwe,
Lyt froward chippis of presumption
Sholde blynde myn eyen in their falsyng doun.

Hwe of Lincoln, No. 3193. This Hwe was a child of Eight years old, crucified by the Jews at Lincoln, A. D. 1255. for which Eighteen of them were hanged. See Leland's Itin. Vol. VIII. p. 82.

Hewil: Coloured. Hwid bright; Of a clear complexion. RR. 1030.

Hennin: Hackt and hewed. Tr. L. 2. 638.
Hewmande, Cr. 186. Newly made, shining. Sp. and Sk.
 A helmet. Gl. V.
Hexameter, Mo. 91. An Hexameter Verse, consisting of six feet.
Hext: Highest. Ch. Dr. 345.
Hidin: To hide. Also, Hastened. Gam. 1103. where MS. Ch. reads it Heyden; but H. 1. better, Hyeden.
Hidous: Ugly, deformed. RR. 1354.
Hie: To hasten. In hie; In halt. Cr. 361. AS. Higan, Festinare. An hie, RR. 4021. for In hie. Also, High.
Hier: Hire.
Hierde: A herdsman, a shepherd. AS. Hiepb, hýpb, Paþor. Hence Hierdes, Tr. L. 3. 620. comes to signify Guides, or Governours; and Christ is called our Hierde, No. 203.
Hierdes: A shepherdess. Tr. L. 1. 654. But instead of an hierdes, Ca. reads and a prynceffe.
Hiere: Her.
High is sometimes put for Height.
Highted: Hastened. PT. 533. See Hie.
Highest, for Height, p. 450. a. l. 55, 58.
Hight, Highte, Hightin: Named, called; Was called; Promised. AS. Daten, Vocatus, from Datan, To say, to b d. Hight is also sometimes put for Height.
Hijen, for Hie: Hasten. Ber. 2435.
Hildeth: Yieldeth; Bettoweth. p. 491, a.
Him, Tr. L. 2. 800. for Hem, MS. Sp. or Them, Ca. See He.
Hindereff: Hindmost. Prol. 624.
Hine: A hind, a servant, particularly in Husbandry. Prol. 605. A clown.
Hing, Hinge: Hung.
Hip, Hipe: A bramble-berry.
Hir, Hire: Her.
Historial: Historical, in opposition to Fabulous. No. 1670.
Hie: Is called. Fa. L. 2. 434. See Hue and Hight.
Hithe, No. 1216. for Hie The, i. e. Hasten thee. See Instances of this nature in Alouh.
Ho! An Interjection used for stopping, or causing to desist, or leave off. Tr. L. 2. 1083. Withoutin ho [al. hoo] seems to be synonymous to endelesse; Without stopping, or leaving off. See lb. L. 3. 190: L. 4. 1242. A Proclamation, or Oyes. CL. 270.
Hokerly: Peevishly, frowardly. Pars. p. 201, b.
Hukir: Ill nature, frowardness, peevishness. MR. 857.
Hold, Holdin: Beholden, obliged. Tr. L. 3. 1265. Hyp. 80. Held, accounted. RR. 1008. Holdin in bonde, Tr. L. 5. 1614. To keep in suspense. Holdin, Tr. L. 3. 1760. should be read Holt [i. e. Holdeth.] in. Holdyn yn, MS. Sp. and Ca.
Holdir: A supporter. Tr. L. 2. 644.
Hole: Whole; Wholly. Mo. 2152.
Holily, Holly, Holy: Wholly.
Hollour, Holour: A whoremonger, an adulterer, a fornicator.
Holowes, for Halowes: Saints. Holowes twelve; Twelve Apostles. Dr. Ch. 831.
Holowness, Tr. L. 5. 1808. It is better in MS. Sp. the hynesse of the seventh sphere, i. e. The height, &c.
Holstanes, Cr. 168. Hailstones; or the word may be divided, Hole stanes, i. e. Whole stones. Sk.
Holt, Holte: Holdeth; Held, accounted. No. 942. Also, A grove, a forest. Prol. 6. AS. Holtz. Holtes, Holtis: Woods, forests. Tr. L. 3. 352.
Homicide, Homicide: A Murderer, an Assassin.
Homely, Homlich: Domestick. Homely for; A domestick enemy. Also, Plain, without disguise. Homely sothe; Plain truth. Tr. L. 2. 1559.
Hand: A hand. Withoutin bonde, Tr. L. 3. 188. Out of hand, presently. Honden: Hands. See Hent.
Honds: Hands. Also, Taketh. Ber. 3212. Hondisbrede; A hand's breadth. MR. 703.
Honeste: Honourable. No. 3070. Honestie: Decency. Mo. 737. p. 198, a.
Heng: To hang. No. 2306. Hanged, hung.
Hongir: Hunger. RR. 6734.
Hongir: Hanged, hung. A palfrey well honght; A horse well accoutred. Ber. 899.
Hont, or Hunt: A huntsman, Dr. Ch. 385.

Honywetnesse, p. 367, b. l. 22. for honey of swetenesse. Lat. Melle dulcedinis.
Hoole: Whole. Hooslich: Wholly. Ber. 457.
Hope, PT. 14. Alle [i. Attie] cheker of the hope; f. At the Chequer-Inn in the Hope, in Canterbury, where the Pilgrims lodged. Hope signifies a Dingle, or little valley, and is retained in Kent, and other parts of England, in the names of Places: But as I find no such place as the Hope in or about Canterbury, I suspect it should be read Hothe, there being (as I am informed) a place called the Hooshe not far from that City; and the mistake might easily arise from the likeness of the Saxon þ [for th] and p, in the MSS.
Hoppen and houten with beve and hale: Hopp and hoot with heaving and haling. Mo. 2812. Leaping, and shouting, haling and pulling. Com.
Hoppoferis, Prol. 2019. Pilots. Sp. But MS. Ch. hath it, the ships upon the series, i. e. There I saw the Ships and their whole Crew burnt as they steered, or sailed along; which must be a much more terrible Image, than barely the Pilots being burnt, and consequently a very proper Ornament to the Temple of Mars.
Hore: Hoary, grey-headed. Sq. 916. Lokkis hore, Fr. 918. Grey hairs. Also, A whore. Sq. 1895.
Horiloge, Horologe: A clock, a dial.
Horifons, p. 519, b. for Orifons: Prayers. Fr. Oraison, A prayer.
Horoscope (Horoscopum, p. 444, a.) is in Astrology sometimes put for a Figure of the Twelve Houses (as the Signs of the Zodiack are called) erected to tell Fortunes; and sometimes for the Degree of the Ascendant, or the Star ascending above the Horizon, at the time the Question is put, any thing enquired for, or a Native born: But most properly it signifies the first House, or Ascendant, and is that part of the Zodiack which is rising at the time of the Scheme.
Horow: Mean, base; Slanderous. Horow tongis; Scandalous tongues. CM. 52. Beatty, filthy, nasty. Mo. 3037.
Horriblete: Horribleness, a horrible thing. RR. 7285. AS. Hopiz, Sordidus, squalidus, mucidus.
Horse: Hoarse. Dr. Ch. 347.
Hospitaliers, Hospitellers, RR. 6693. Hospitalarij, Knights Templars, or Knights of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.
Hostelrie, Hasterie, Hoftrie: An Inn. Hoftery, Prol. 23. should be Hofeltry. Fr. Hoftelserie.
Hofilements, Hofiliments: Furniture, Utensils, Household goods, Suppelletilis, Booth. p. 370, a.
Hofilere: An host, an Inn-keeper; An hostler.
Hofresse of vertue: The hostess of Vertue, One that always entertains Vertue within her breast. Cup. 461.
Hote, Hotin: To promise. See Hete. Also, Be named, or called; Hot; To be heated.
Hove: Lifted up. p. 359, b. Also, To hover. Tr. L. 3. 1433. Hovid: Hovered about, loytered. Tr. L. 5. 33.
Houfe, MR. 803. Set his houfe; Be quit with him. MS. Ch. and H. 1. Set his howne, al. houn, a word often used in PP. for Gown: Perhaps it may be a Proverbial Expression, as set their cap, Prol. 588. though not exactly of the same signification. See Shoufe.
Houge: Huge. Mo. 3049. Ber. 1178.
Hound is used for a Dog in general. Cerberus the bound of hell, p. 395, b. AS. Hunbe, A dog.
Houndfish: The Dog-fish. Sq. 1341.
Houfel: The Eucharist, or Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. AS. Dujel.
Houfelin, Hufil: To ben houfeled; To receive the Holy Communion.
Houfholding: House keeping. RR. 1132.
How: A cap, or hood. To make an how above a call, Tr. L. 3. 775. seems to have been a Proverbial Expression signifying To entertain two Lovers at the same time, qu. To wear a Cap and a Cowl together.
Hongates. See Gate.
Howpede: Hooped, hollowed. Mo. 1515.
Howfo: Howsoever.
Hue. See Hewe.
Huifste: Hush, silent. Also, Hush! A Note of Silence.
Hul by hul, PT. 455. f. Cheek to cheek. Hullid and mollid him, Ber. 745. f. Kissed and fondled him.
Hulfere,

Hulfere, Bl. Kn. 129. Holly, which in some places is still called Hilwer. Sk.
Hilfrid, RR. 6146. Hidden, retired; from the AS. Deolrypa, Spelunca, antra, recessus, latibula.
Humbleffe, Humblest: Humility; Condescension.
Humbling: A humming noise. Fa. L. 2. 531.
Humile: Humble. Humilly: Humbly. LIV. 156.
Hure: Hire.
Hurteleu, Hurilin: To skirmish. Sk. To thrust, run against, dash against; To provoke; Incessire, Boeth. p. 366, a.
Hush, for Hushr: Hush! A Note of Silence. Boeth.
Hye: To hasten. Also, Hatt. In Tr. L. 4. 1199. instead of low or hie, MS. Sp. reads it, now in hye, i. e. Follow her spirit just now, without any hesitation or delay, and dye with her immediately.
Hygh blyve: Make the utmost hast, or come presently. Boeth. 276.
Hyghin: High. Fa. L. 3. 1062.
Hyd: Halted away. RR. 3855.
Hylde, p. 367, a. Fundere; To pour. See Hildesh.
Hyled. See Hile.
Hylce: Highly. Fl. 185. It may not be improper to take notice in this place of a mistake in printing this and the following Verses, which should be read thus;
*I am to blynde so hylce to discerne
 Of her goodenes to make description.*
Hungen: Hung.
Huyt: Hush! Peace! A Note of Silence. PT. 536.

I.

I And r are indifferently prefixed to Verbs in the Preter Tense, and sometimes in other Tenses. See r.
Jacke of Dovyrr, MR. 1279. Jack-a-dover, i. e. A Fowl, or Joint of Meat done over again; as it is explained, ib. 1240.
Jack Strawe, Mo. 1509. One of the Ringleaders of a Rebellion of the common People of Kent in the Reign of Richard the Second, in which the Flemmings or Dutch Strangers were great Sufferers.
Jacobins, RR. 6338. The Fryers of St. Dominick's Order are so called in France, because their Monastery in Paris (formerly an Hospital) is dedicated to St. James, and is seated in the Street called Rue S. Jacques. Blo.
Jamboux, No. 3380. Boots, Armour for the Legs. Sp. From the Fr. Jambe, A leg.
Jane, No. 3244. Halfpence of Fanna, or Galy Halfpence. Sp. A Coin of Gnoa. Sk. It seems to have been of very little value. Fr. 2020.
Jangle, Janglin: To prate, to talk much; To make an empty noise. Jangle, Fr. 143. Prating, babbling. See Pars. p. 197, b: 203, a.
Jangler, Jangleresse, fem. A great talker. Janglers: Praters, idle talkers. Sp. 1822. But perhaps it should be read there, Jangleressis. See Bronke.
Jangling. See p. 197, b. l. 54.
Jape, Fr. 697. A jest. "A word (says Sp.) by abuse grown odious, and therefore by a certain curious Gentlewoman scraped out in her Chancer, whereupon her serving man writeth thus;
*My Mistress cannot be content
 To take a jest as Chaucer ment;
 But using still a Woman's fashion,
 Allows it in the last Translusion:
 She cannot with a Word dispense,
 Although I know she loves the sense;
 For such an use the World hath got,
 That Words are Sins, but Deeds are not.*
Jape, Japis: To jest, to joke, to make sport: To deceive, to impose upon. Prolog. 173. To make a jest of, to laugh at. Tr. L. 1. 529.
Japer: A common jester, a buffoon; A cheat.
Japerie: It is described in Pars. p. 202, a.

Japes, Japis: Jests, fooleries.
Jape-worthy: Ridiculous. p. 398. a.
Ibarrid: Fortified with barrs. RR. 480.
Ibathid: Bathed.
Ibe: Be, are; Been.
Ibete: Beaten. Tr. L. 2. 940. Ibete, Di. 197. Set forth.
Sk. Stamped. Sp. See Bete.
Iblowe in brede, Tr. L. 1. 5310. Blown, or noised abroad.
Ibore: Born.
Ich, Ich: I, my self. CL. 204.
Ieled: Cloathed, clad. RR. 472.
Iclepid: Called, named. Tr. L. 4. 504.
Icoignid: Coined. No. 2286.
Icolerid al with caurelis, Boeth. 925. All coloured with cautions, i. e. Making specious pretences.
Icomen: Come. Tr. L. 3. 1674. But it is rather to be read there, as in MS. Sp. Tha enwyn.
Icond, for Ikend: Known. Dr. Ch. 666.
Icorvin: Cut.
Icought: Caught. Tr. L. 1. 535, 558. Teaught, Ca.
Idampnid: Damned; Condemned. Mo. 3173.
Idartid: Shot with an arrow, or dart. Tr. L. 4. 240.
Idel, Idle: Vain. In idel, or idel, Fr. 2413. p. 201, b. In idilnes, RR. 3323. In vain. MS. On ydel.
Ilo, Idor, Tr. L. 2. 789. Idoen, RR. 1063. To do, to cause; Done. Also, Undone, spoiled.
Idolaster: An Idolater. Sq. 1816.
Itrane: Drawn, extracted. No. 1461.
Iire: The Serpent Hydra. Boeth.
Jemme: A Gem, a Jewel. No. 1737, 3118.
Jeopardie, Tr. L. 5. 1547. MS. Sp. and the old Editions read it Paradye, V.
Jeopardin: To put in jeopardy, to hazard. Tr. L. 4. 1566.
Jeopardise: Jeopardy, danger. Ch. Dr. 666. Jeuperdouslie: With jeopardy or danger. RR. 263.
Jeromie: St. Jerome. No. 2151.
Jellis: Jests. Also, Histories. Tr. L. 5. 1510. Famous actions. Fa. L. 3. 428. See G. jic.
Jeuse: Juice. p. 515, b.
Jenie: A place where Jews were permitted to inhabit, as the Old Jury in London.
Jenise, Prolog. 1741. A reward by revenge. Also a Gibbet. Sp. From the AS. Gepite, Pena, multa, supplicium. Sk. But the Author of the Engl. Exposition rather takes it to be the same that often occurs in Britton by the name of Jenise, where it signifies Judgment, Examination, or Tryal by, or before one having Jurisdiction, and to be corrupted of the Lat. Judicium.
Jfare. See Fare.
Jfellowshipped: Joined in company or fellowship; Accompanied. Boeth.
Jfere, or In jere: In company, together. See Fere.
Jfete: Effect. RR. 4476.
Jflute: Passing, fleeting. Boeth. See Flit.
Jglosed: Flattered. See Glose.
Jgraze: Dug. LW. 204.
Jgrude, Mo. 3266. To fly round, or in a circle. qu. gy-rando volare.
Jheried: Praised; Honoured. See Ilery.
Jholpe: Helped, assisted. RR. 5505.
Jkende: Known. Mo. 2470.
Jknett: Knitt, bound. Tr. L. 3. 1740.
Jknowe: Known.
Jlad (so it should be read, Prolog. 532.) Led, carried; Lay'd. But Com. explains it, He had laden many a load of dung. See Lother.
Jlast: Left.
Jliche, PT. 11. The same.
Jlike, Jlike: Like; Alike.
Jlion: Troy. Lat. Ilium. Mo. 1471. When it is joyned with Troye, as in Dr. Ch. 1248. it signifies the City, and Troye, the Country of Troy. Holman.
Jlike, as Jliche.
Jlogid: Lodged.
Jlorn: Lost. Tr. L. 4. 1250. See Jorn.
Jmaginative: Suspicious, jealous. Fr. 2640. Thoughtfull. Also, Imagination, opinion. Lidg. Life of St. Edmund. Proper, or belonging to the Imagination. p. 400, a.
Jmacked: Masked, wrapt up, covered. Tr. L. 3. 1740.
Jmeme,

- Imeinte, Imente* (so it should be read, Bl. Kn. 458.) Mingled, mixt.
- Iment*: Meant. Fa. L. 3. 652.
- Imoved*: Moved. Boeth.
- Imperciable*: Impenetrable. Test.
- Imperie*: Rule, government. Boeth.
- Impes*: Shoots, young twigs, or branches. Mo. 68.
- Impeiven*: To obtain; To intreat.
- Impid*: Grafted, set.
- Importable*: Impossible; Intolerable. Mo. 627. Fr. 2165. RR. 6902.
- Importune*: Troublesome. RR. 5632. Importunate. Fr.
- Importun*.
- Impossible*: An impossibility. Tr. L. 3. 525.
- In* for On, Tr. L. 3. 968. So H. 2. Ca. and Py. read it.
- Incombrons*: Cumberfome, troublesome. Fa. L. 2. 354.
- Incubus*, WB. 880. A Spirit supposed to have carnal knowledge of Women; The Night-mare.
- Inde*: India; Indian. Inde and Perf. RR. 67. Indian and Persian. Inde, Tnde is used by Lidg. for Azure, or blew; as, His standard of colour ynde, i. e. Azure. Life of St. Edmund. As a sceptre—The hier part of gold and stonis ynde. Ib. So the Saphire Inde. Fall of Princes, L. 1. Ch. 20.
- Indigne*: Unfit, unworthy. Fr. 1389.
- Indulgence*: Forgiveness.
- Inched*: Put in.
- Inferes*, p. 492, a. 1. 35. Perhaps it should be read In-seers. See Infer.
- Inflate*: Blown; Puffed up, swelled. CCr. 48.
- Infortune*: Misfortune, mischance. Infortunil: Unfortunate. Tr. L. 4. 744.
- Inhauncing*: Advancing.
- Inbilde*, Tr. L. 3. 44. To infuse, to inspire. Sk.
- Iniquitance*: Unequality. Sq. 1304.
- Injure*, Fr. An injury. Tr. L. 3. 1020.
- Inly*: Inwardly. Fr. 84. Thorowly. RR. 397. Perfectly.
- Inne*: In. Mo. 115. A house, a habitation; A Colledge; A lodging. No. 2950. Mo. 2917.
- Innerest, Inrest*: Innmost, innermost. Boeth.
- Innuence*: Ignorance. So Ca. reads it in Tr. L. 2. 1048.
- Innocent*: Ignorant. Ib. 1723.
- Innominal*: Not fit to be named. p. 489, b.
- Inobedience*: Disobedience.
- Inome*, Tr. L. 1. 242. Inomen, Mo. 2971. Taken. See Nome, &c.
- Inough*: Enough. To do inough: To satisfy. p. 207, a.
- Input*: Put upon, imposed. p. 493, a.
- Inrest*, p. 478, a. See Innerest.
- Inser*: One that has a good insight into matters. Test. L. 3.
- Inselid*: Sealed up. Ch. Dr. 1014.
- Insit*: Set in; Natural; Insius, Boeth. p. 367, b.
- Insolihill*: Unanswerable. Ber. 1888.
- Intelligence*: The Understanding. Boeth.
- Intennate Fenipre*, Bal. 310. Sweet-smelling Juniper; In suaves halitus intennatus. Sk.
- Intere*: Intire, sincere. Bal. 220.
- Intermeie*: To intermeddle, to interpose. WB. 834.
- Interminable*: Unbounded, infinite. Boeth.
- Intier*, Magd. 568. as Intere.
- Intill*: Into. CCr. 83.
- Intresse*. See Entresse. With her intresse, CL. 811. By her own labour; unless it should be read herin tresse, or here in tresse, i. e. hair dress'd up in tresses.
- Joconde*, No. 607. Pleasant. Lat. Jucundus.
- Jogelours*: Jugglers. RR. 764.
- Joigne*, RR. 2355. To enjoyn. Joignit: Joined. Mo. 519.
- Jolly*, Tr. L. 3. 1612. In all the MSS. and Old Editions which I have seen, it is Joly faire. See Joly.
- Joleining*: Jolly, joyfull. p. 480, b. Perhaps it signifies joining; so that the sense may be this: Though we are at a distance, yet the joining of our wordes, i. e. your being acquainted with my complaints, would administer some relief: Or if we read it solein, the sense may be this: Methinks that by such Melancholy expressions as these my uneasiness begins to abate.
- Jombre*: To joyn, to jumble. Sp. Tr. L. 2. 1037.
- Jonglerie*, Tr. L. 5. 755. (or as MS. Sp. Jangelrie) as Jangling, V.
- Jordanis*, No. 1819. Double Urinals. Sk.
- Jossa*, MR. 993. Turn. Sp. An Interjection, commonly used in catching a Horse.
- Jovis*: Jupiter. Tr. L. 3. 15.
- Journe*: A Day's work. RR. 579. Fr. Journée.
- Joustes*: Jests and Turnaments. Ch. Dr. 1987.
- Jowels*: Jewells. RR. 5420.
- Jowes*: The jaws. Boeth.
- Joyeux*, Fr. Pleasant, joyfull.
- Joynant*: Joining.
- Jperlid*: Set with Pearls. Mo. 2098.
- Iplight*: Pawned, pledged; Plighted. Tr. L. 3. 783. But Ca. hath it better, Ye plight; You plighted.
- Iplited*: Plaited, folded. Boeth.
- Ipcras*, Sq. 1323. Hippocras, a Wine made with Spices; so called, because it is strained through a woollen Cloth, called Hippocrates's Sleeve.
- Iraft, Ireft*: Bereaved, taken away. Hyp. 205.
- Irakid*: Racked up. Mo. 257.
- Ire*: Wrath, anger. Fr. 857.
- Irest*. See Iraft.
- Iren*: Iron. WB. 906.
- Ironne*: Run, or did run.
- Irons*: Passionate, angry. Fr. 750, 752, 753, 779, &c.
- Irons corage*; An angry, hasty temper. Bal. 521.
- Irrecoverable*: Irrecoverable. Test. L. 2.
- Isaude*. See Belle isaude.
- Ise*: Ice. Cr. 168. Also, Sec. Tr. L. 2. 354, 1253. But Ca. and al. read the latter Verse thus;
- And sayd nece, lo who comyth here now ride, i. e. riding.
- Iset*, Tr. L. 3. 1494. Set. Ca. hath it, Shet.
- Ishape, Ishaped, Ishapen*: Shaped, formed; Ordained; Prepared. See Shape.
- Ishene*: Bright, shining.
- Ishoned*, perhaps for Ishoued, or Ishowed: Shewed. Test. p. 503, a. 1. 60.
- Ishore*: Shorn, shaved. Tr. L. 4. 996.
- Ishove*, for Ishove, or Ishown: Set forth, shewed. Th. 23.
- Ilope*, PT. 292. Hyslop. Also, Æsop.
- Ilept in age*, Mo. 934. Advanced or stricken in years; or, as Spenser hath it, Shot in years.
- Ilocked*: Put in the Stocks, confined. p. 480, a.
- Istend*: Stand; Stood. Tr. L. 5. 1611.
- Itronke*: Laboured. See Swink.
- Itaile*: Italy.
- Ibeude*, AF. 47. Well i:beude; Having good qualities. See Thewe.
- Ithrove*: Thrown. Tr. L. 4. 482.
- Itinerarie*: A Guide to Travellers. Bal. Lad. 64.
- Itrissid*: Having her hair dressed in locks, or tresses. Tr. L. 5. 810.
- Jubb*: A jug, or bottle. No. 2578.
- Judge*, p. 209, a. 1. 3, 4. should be juge, as in MS. Ch. H. 1. and al. From Jugum, a Yoke.
- Judicum*: The Book of Judges. Mo. 158. A common way of naming any Book, or the Author of it, as Æneidos, Metamorphoseos, for the Æneis of Virgil, and the Metamorphosis of Ovid.
- Juge*: A Judge.
- Julian*, Prolog. 341. "Mandivil's MS. (says Mr. Urry) has this Note upon the place: Simon Leprosus who her-
"browd our Lord, and was baptized of him, was then
"cleped Julian the good Herberow, and was made Bi"shop of Bethphage; In the same place M. Magdelyn
"had her sins forgiven her, and there she wissh [i. e.
"washed] his feet with the teris of her eyen, and dry-
"ed them with the tressis of her heed, i. e. head.
- July*: Jolly, gay. Ber. 1707.
- Just, Justen*. See Turney.
- Justice*: A Judge; An Officer of Justice. No. 505.
- Justinian eke that made lawes*, &c. RR. 6615, &c. In the Eleventh Book of the Code, De Mendicantibus validis, It is enacted, That if any shall beg, having no cause either by need or maine, the same shall be examined and searched; and who so shall find him to counterfeit, and proveth the same, Dominium ejus consequatur; and and faith Bartol. he shall be punished Ad arbitrium Judicis. Sp.

Justis, array, Prol. 1934. Justs, and Preparation for them, or (as MS. Ch.) Lust and aray; Gallantry, and Dreis; a proper Ornament for the Temple of Venus.
Juventute: Youth. Sc. 11. Lat. Juventus, Juventutis.
Inimplid: Muffled up, covered with a Wimple; Veiled. Th. 92.
Iwis: Verily, certainly, indeed, truly: But very often it is a meer Expletive. See clVis.
Iron, Ironne: Won, gained. To lond ironne; Gained the land, got to shore. Phyl. 34.
Iwie: Hid, covered. Tr. L. 3. 1457. But there it should be read Iwyen, (as in MS. Sp.) which rhymes to eyen and spien in the following Verses. See Wrie.
Iwrithin: Wrapt about. RR. 160.
Iwroke: Revenged. Tr. L. 5. 589. See Wreke.
Iyen, Iyne: Eyes. Boeth.
Iyeve: Given. Tr. L. 3. 1617.

K.

K Alender: A Directory. LW. 542.
Kalendes: Properly the First day of a Month; but is thence taken to signify the Beginning of any thing. He thought it like the Kalendes of eschaunge, Tr. L. 5. 1633. He looked upon it as the beginning of a change. Kalendes of hope, Tr. L. 2. 7. The first prospect of hope.
Kaufe: Carved. Prol. 100.
Karoll, Sec. See Caroll, Sec.
Kars. See Kers.
Kele: To cool. CL. 775. PT. 470.
Kembe: To adorn. Mo. 2246.
Kembit, Cr. 222. Kempid, Prol. 2136. Combed; Adorned. Kempt: Dressed up; Compiu, p. 364, b.
Ken: To learn, to know; To teach, to make known.
Kende: Known. CCr. 169. Taught, made known.
Kene: Keen, sharp.
Kenebowe, Ber. 1105. In kenebowe: A-kembo.
Kenelme, Mo. 1225. Kenelm, King of Mercia, was at the age of seven years slain by the procurement of his ambitious Sister Quendrida: The place of his Burial was (as it is pretended) miraculously discovered; and he afterwards obtained the Title of a Saint, and Martyr. See the Legenda Aurea.
Kepe: Care, heed.
Kepe, Kepin: To keep, to take care, or heed.
Kerchef, WB. 1018. A woman's Head-dress. See Co-verchiefs.
Kernils: Battlements. RR. 4195. from the old Fr. Karnel. (Lat. Barb. Quernellus) now Geneau, a Battlement, or rather the Opening in the Battlements. See Men. Fr. in Quernellus.
Kers, Karse: Water-cresses. Set not a kers; Valued not a straw. MR. 648. Vailith not a karse, Ber. 239. Is not worth a rush. See p. 485, b: 499, a.
Kerve: To carve, to cut; To tear. Kersfith: Cutteth, &c. Ph. 107. Kerst: Carved, &c.
Kesse: To kiss. RR. 2610. Fr. 2078.
Kest, Kestin: Cast. Gam. 486. No. 1782. Kissed. Sq. 370.
Keiche: To catch, lay hold of. Tr. L. 3. 1381.
Kevere: To recover. Tr. L. 1. 918. Keverynge: Covering. Ber. 1989.
Keynard, WB. 235. A Micher, a Hedge-creeper. Sp. The Fr. Cagnard (from whence this seems to be taken) signifies a Sordid, beggarly, slothfull, idle fellow. See Men. Fr. in Cagnard.
Richell, Fr. 483. A little cake; from the AS. Eicel, A morsel. It was called a Goddis richell, because God-fathers and Godmothers used commonly to give one of them to their Godchildren, when they asked blessing. Sp.
Kid, Kidde: Made known, discovered. RR. 2172. Perceived; Shewed. Tr. L. 1. 208. RR. 3132.

Kime, Mo. 2635. The sely kime: The silly fellow, perhaps from the AS. Euma. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 105, 106.
Kimeling, or Keneling, MR. 440. A brewing vessel. Sk.
Kimmel, or Kemlin, is used in the North for a Powdering-tub. Ry's Coll.
Kin: Kindred, AS. Eyn. By my father kin, Mo. 43: Sq. 1031. No. 850. An Oath or Protestation; By my Father's Kindred, or Offspring. See Mo. 1053.
Kinde, Kynde: Nature. Lawe of kinde, Tr. L. 1. 238. The Law of Nature. Kindly, Kyndely: Natural. Every kindly thing: Every thing in its own nature. Aforne his kinde, RR. 3122. Before its natural time of maturity.
Kinde, for Kende, Mo. 2422. Taught.
Kinrede: Kindred. Instead of after kinrede, p. 153, b: 1. 29. read a fer [MS. Ch. a fer] kinrede, i. e. remote kindred, in opposition to nie sibbe, i. e. near relations. ib. 1. 30.
Kinrest: Quiet rest, kindly rest. Sk.
Kirkid, RR. 3137. Turned upwards. Sp. See Sk.
Kirtill: A Kirtle, a woman's gown. MR. 213. AS. Eynzel.
Kist: Cist. Ber. 1549.
Kithe: To shew, to make known, to discover. La. 637. Fr. L. 2. 20. To give occasion. Ne kith ber jelousie, Fr. 2294. Nor create, or give her occasion of jealousy. Kithid gentilnesse, No. 1075. Shewed civility. To own, acknowledge. An. 231. Allo, A shew, an appearance. Tho the kith be fair at eye, Fr. 2189. Though it appear fair to the eye. MS. Ch. hath kynde there instead of kith; but that reading does not make so good and clear a sense as the other.
Kithid, as Kid, V. Kithid: Discovereth. LIV. 504.
Kitt a loff: Cut a loaf. PT. 393.
Knap: A nap, or sleep. RR. 4005.
Knarrie: Full of hard knobs, knobby. Prol. 1979. See Gnarre.
Knave: A boy, a servant. WB. 1190. Knave child; A male child. La. 723, 735. Fr. 1464, 1466. A boie knave; A young fellow, or lad. RR. 3849. AS. Enapa, Puer. CB. Cnap, Dim. Cneppyn, A boy.
Knawe, Mo. 2580. To takin hem whom list not knawe; To take, or apprehend them whom they list not to approve or like of, and they condemn their doctrine for heresie. Com.
Knaweth: Gnaweth, biteth. p. 413. 10.
Knedde: Knit. RR. 4811.
Kneen, Kneue, Ch. Dr. 294. Kneis, Tr. L. 3. 1598.
Kneys, Gam. 1397. Knees.
Knet: To knit; Knit, bound. RR. 2092. Neatness. Sk. But it may very well be taken there for Knit, and then the Verses will run thus,
Thine herte to me now will I shet,
For all thy joyfull loke, and knet
Ibinde undir this little keie, &c.
That is, For all thy joyfull look, I will now shut up, and fast bind to my self thine heart under this little key.
Knight: A soldier, a warrior. Judas Adachabatu is called God's knight, p. 157, a.
Knit: Joyned; Agreed. Fr. 2786.
Knoppid, RR. 7212. Tyed, laced. Sp.
Knoppis: Rose-buds. RR. 1675, 1683. From the AS. Enapa, A button: So the French call a Bud, Bouton.
Knor for Knar: A hard knob. Ber. 1780.
Knore: A knee, or knees. Tr. L. 2. 1202.
Knowbit: Knew. Ber. 93.
Knowleth: Knowledge. PT. 256. To acknowledge. Ber. 3079.
Knowledging: Knowing; Knowledge.
Kon, Konne, Konnin: Can; Can do; Understand.
Konning: Cunning, knowledge, understanding. Fa. L. 3. 966.
Konde, Kouthe, as Conde, or Combe, V. Whan that he godes konde, Gam. 96. When he knows, or is able to manage an Estate. Spenser has Could his good, for Distributed his bounty. Fairy Q. L. 1. In such Expressions as these the Principal Verb is understood.
Kuy: To cut. Ber. 2589.

Kykin, MR. 733. To look. Kykld: Looked. MR. 337. But MS. Ch. reads it loked.
Kyn: Kind, manner. Kyn affray, La. 1138. Some kind of fear. See Kin.
Kynde, Kyndely. See Kinde.
Kynrest, p. 415, a. See Kinrest.
Kyhiib, CM. 145. See Kiibe.

L.

L Laas, Lace, Latche, Lees, Lese: A trap, a snare. Prol. 1819. RR. 2790, 5093. Fr. Laqs, from the Lat. Laqueus, A knot, a bond; A lace.
Laboure: Endeavour. No. 2971.
Labourous: Laborious; Industrious. Sr. 69.
Lace: To ensnare, confine. See Laas. Laced: Bound up. Test. Taken in a snare, entrapped. RR. 3178.
Lacert, Prol. 2755. A Sinew. Sp. Lacertus signifies the Brawn or Sinew of the Arm.
Lach, Lache, Fr. Lazy, slothfull. To lack, or want. Test. L. a. Also, To take, catch, snatch; To lay hold of. AS. Laccan, Comprehendere, rapere. Hick. Somn.
Lachesse, Fr. Laziness; Dilatoriness, or Procrastination proceeding from laziness, or sloth. See Gover, L. 4.
Lacke, Lackin: To dispraise, to blame, to detract from, to disparage or lessen ones character. RR. 284.
Lad: Led, did lead. Ca. hath. lad, Tr. L. 3. 59. for ledde. Had lad of dong many a fothe, Prol. 532. That is (as the Com. explains it) He had laden many a load of dung. MS. Ch. reads it, That had lad dong on feld many a fothe, i. e. That had laid many a fothe of dung on his field. Lad her only by bred, RR. 216. Sk. thinks it means, She [Avarice] lived only by-bread: But Mr. Urry by adding life makes the Verie compleat, and the sense easy; That lad her life only by bred.
Lady often signifies Mistress. Fr. 2584.
Laste, Lustin, No. 904. LW. 168. Left.
Laye, Laye: Law; A profession. Tr. L. 1. 341, 1002. Lat. 377.
Laine: To lay. RR. 184.
Lainers: Prol. 2506. Thongs, straps of leather. Fr. Laniere, A strap.
Laisir. See Leisir.
Laitie, RL. 186. Sk. thinks it comes from Lactare, or Alligere, To entice: But perhaps it may be a Contraction of Laymaite.
Lak: Disgrace, dispraise, blame, a fault, a dishonourable action. Sq. 1716.
Lake: Fine Cloth and Lawn. Sk. No. 3363. Bal. Lad. 70. Also a purple colour used by Painters.
L'amant, L'amaunt: The Lover. RR. 4615. &c. Fr. L'amant.
Lambin: Lambs. RR. 7063.
Lang: Long. Cr. 379.
Langour: To languish; Languishing, faintness. Langoring, Langorous: Languishing, pining. Langurith: Languisheth. Sq. 1383.
Lanys: Lanes. The law goth by no lanys: The Course of the Law is plain and direct, not through By-ways, or Lanes. RR. 2623.
Lapidare: A Lapidary, a Jeweller; a Stone-cutter: But in Pa. L. 3. 262. it signifies a Catalogue of Precious Stones, or a Treatise on that subject, under the Title of The Lapidare.
Lappe: A kirt, or lappet of a garment. No. 12. Tr. L. 3. 59, 743.
Larder, seems to signify a Slaughter-house, Test. p. 506, b. l. 13.
Large: Liberal, bountiful; Prodigal, extravagant, expensive. No. 2937. Also Liberty, freedom. Autie large, Prol. 1285. or Autie thy large, as MS. Ch. At thy liberty. See ib. 1294. Fl. 15. Large of tonge, Tr. L. 5. 804. A free, easy, copious speaker; Cui larga fandi copia.
Largesse: A large quantity. Magd. 137.
Largesse: Generosity, liberality, bounty: Also, a Fee given to Chirurgical and Physicians, &c. p. 152, a.

Larson: Robbery, theft. Mo. 2263. Fr. Larcin.
Las, Lasse: Less. More and las, RR. 3045. Greater and less.
Lash, PT. 34. Teris that she out lash, f. Let fall, or shed. See p. 48, a. l. 12.
Latche, RR. 1624. See Laas.
Later. See Lattir.
Latered: Loytered, delayed: Belated. p. 204, b.
Lash, MR. 980. A barn. It is still used in Lincolnsbire. Sk.
Laton, Laton: Copper. Sp. Latten: A mixt kind of mettall. Prol. 701. No. 1864. f. A box, or case made of Latten.
Latie: Led; Instructed, brought up. Unrightly latte; Led out of the right way. Mo. 2397.
Lattir: Later. Ner the lattir, Ber. 2384. Never the later, p. 492, a. Nevertheles.
Laude: Praise. Laudes, Laudis: Praises. Also, Morning Prayers, or Service. MR. 547.
Laven: To lave, to drain. Boeth.
Lavendir: A laundress. LW. 358.
Laverock, RR. 662. A sort of Bird; a Lark. Sk.
Laughande: Laughing, smiling. Test.
Launcelot du Lake, Mo. 1327. One of the Knights of King Arthur's Round Table.
Laund: A Plain between Woods. Prol. 1693. A Lawn.
Laureate: Crowned with Laurel. Mo. 721.
Laurer, Prol. 2177. Laurere, RR. 1313. Lauriole, Bal. Lad. 73. Lauryre, FL. 109. A Laurel-tree.
Lawe: Low. RR. 5046.
Lawghid: Laughed. Ber. 2426.
Laxaife: Looseness; A Purging Medicine. Prol. 2758. Mo. 1058.
Lay: Law. See Lait.
Layson: Leisure. Ch. Dr. 2025.
Lazarous, CCr. 115. Lazere, Prol. 242. A Leper. Leprous persons were called Lazars, because their House, or Church, at Jerusalem was dedicated to St. Lazarus.
Léande, Leude, Lewde, Lewid: Ignorant, rude, unlearned. The AS. Lapebe-man, signifieth a Layman; the Laity being generally unlearned in comparison of the Clergy.
Leauie: Loyalty; Truth. Fr. Loyauté.
Lech: To heal, to cure. Ch. Dr. 852.
Lech, Leche: A Physician, a Chirurgeon. Fr. 628. Leche-craft, Lechis craft: The profession, or skill of a Physician, or Chirurgeon. Prol. 2747.
Lecherous: Tending to lechery. No. 2065.
Lechours: Lecherous persons, whoremongers.
Lectorne, CL. 1383. A Reading-desk. Lat. Lectrinum; from whence the Fr. Lairin.
Lecturaries: Electuaries. Prol. 428.
Ledders: Scales; Divisions on a Scale. p. 441, a.
Leddin, Leden: Language, Dialect, Speech; from the AS. Læden, lesen, Latin. See Gl. V. in Leide.
Lede, Leid: Lead; Led away. Also, People; Servants; Tenants, Vassals. Gam. 121, 142. AS. Leode. Gens, populus.
Ledge: To alledge. CL. 1065. Ledged: Alledged, Test. p. 489, a.
Leem, Leme: A flame, light, a blaze. Ber. 1618. AS. Leoma, Light.
Lees, Lese, as Laas. In o lees, p. 197, b. f. In one string. Lies. Withouin lees, RR. 3900. Truly, without lying. Also, Loss.
Lese: To leave, forsake. No. 298. Dear, loving, pleasing, grateful. Al be hym loke or lese, Prol. 1839. Whether he likes it or not. It is me lese, Tr. L. 5. 1737. It is a pleasure to me, I am glad of it. I n'am not lese to gabbe; I do not love to prate. MR. 402. Also, Love, affection. For lese n' loth, No. 264. Hyp. 264. Neither for love nor hatred. Also, a Mistress. RR. 847. Lefist: Dearest. Sq. 1004. In RR. 103. read love is instead of lese is.
Lefely, Lefull: Lawfull.
Leff: A leaf. Ber. 2849. See Lese, Leue.
Laged: Lodged. Test. p. 493, a. Resident. Sk.
Legen: To lay; To alledge. p. 487, b.
Legge: To alledge, to lay. MR. 829.
Leggin: To lessen, to abate, to ease. RR. 5016. See Alledge.
Legginge: A lodging. To void pity his own legginge, Ch.

Ch. Dr. 814. To turn pity out of his habitation, or lodging.
Legyſtres: Lawyers. Teſt.
Leie: To lay. Tr. L. 3. 72. Leide: Lay down: Ib. L. 2. 1548.
Leifar, Leifir, Leizar: Leisure.
Leite, Thonder leite: Lightning. The waie of thonder leite; Ardentis via fulminis, p. 361, b.
Leke: A leek. Woll not ſet by him a leke, RR. 5374. Preiſe not at a leke, Ib. 4830. Will not value him of a leek, Care not a ſtraw for him. See Kers.
Lele: True, faithfull, honeſt; from the Fr. Loyal, Faithfull. Lele labour: Lawfull occupation, Honeſt buſineſſ. Mo. 2695.
Leman, Lemman: It ſignifies indifferently either a Gallant or a Miſtreſſ. MR. 1132. Mo. 2823. Hick. Gr. AS. p. 146.
Leme. See Leem.
Lene: Lean. Prol. 289. Lene, Lenia, (AS. Lænan) To lend. No. 1047, 1058. To lean, bow, ſubmit. p. 154, b. To grant. Ar. 198, 201. unleſs it ſhould be read leve, i. e. let, or ſuffer. Inſtead of lene, Tr. L. 4. 325. MS. Sp. reads leve.
Lenge: Long. Lenger, Lengir: Longer.
Lenie: Lenity, mildneſſ. Ber. 2634.
L'envoy, Fr. A Meſſage: Sending. Alſo the Conclusion of a Sonnet, or Ballad, ſerving oftentimes as a Dedication, Recapitulation, or Application of the whole. Mr. Prior's Addreſs to the Earl (now Duke) of Dorſet, at the end of his Converſation, is of this kind. See p. 100, 429, &c.
Leontine corage: The Spirit, or Courage of a Lion, Mo. 671.
Leos, No. 113, 116. People. Gr. Λεῶνες.
Lepande: Leaping, jumping. RR. 1928.
Lepe, No. 2079, 2086. A Town in Spain.
Leperloge: A Lodge, or Hoſpital, for Lepers. CCr. 27.
Leprous: Leprous. Magd. 175.
Lez, Ber. 1219. Leer, void, empty; as we ſay a Leer horſe, for a Spare horſe. AS. Gelap.
Lere: To learn, to know; To teach. Lered, Lerid: Learned; Taught.
Lere: The ſkin. No. 3362. Cr. 155. Complexion, colour. Sp. But Sk. thinks it rather ſignifies the Symmetry of the lineaments of the face, from the Fr. L'air du viſage, The Air of the Face: But when it ſignifies Face, it rather comes from the Cimbr. Lēpre, a Cheek, or the AS. Pleape; A cheek, jaw, the chin; The countenance, the face; whence we ſay, to Leer, to Lowr: And in Ber. 2467. Leris ſeems to ſignify Cheeks. See Gibſon's Notes on Polemo-Medin. in Lyre.
Les: Leſs. Ber. 1115. But in No. 46. it ſhould be lees, (as in H. 1. and al.) to rhyme to pres, Ib. 44. Withoutin les; Without ceaſing. Sk. Out of reles, MS. Ch. Without delay. See Lees.
Leſe: To looſe; Loſt. Di. 22. To lie; A lie; Lying; Falſhood, treachery; Falſe. RR. 8. Withoutin leſe, RR. 5728. Doubtleſs. See Lees. Luſtie leſe, Tr. L. 2. 752. is the ſame with Louis lace, RR. 5093. See Laas.
Leſyng: Lying; A miſtake. Leſyngour: A lyer, a flat-terer. See Loſengeour.
Leſir, Leſire: Leiſure.
Leſſe: Leſt. p. 413. Verſe 17. Leſſer, ſmaller. More and leſſe; Greater and ſmaller.
Leſſid: Eaſed, relieved. Prol. 2438. Fr. 2726. See Liſſe.
Leſt, Leſte: To liſt, to like, to pleaſe, or to be pleaſed; Pleaſed. Prol. 789. Will, pleaſure, deſire, fancy. Tr. L. 2. 787. Fa. L. 1. 287. See Luſt. Alſo, Laſt. Tr. L. 2. 1330.
Leſt, p. 484, b. Leſted: Laſted.
Let, Lett, Lette, Lettin: To hinder, to ſtop; To omit, neglect; To delay, put off. Mo. 1199. Let be, Fr. 25.
Letin be, WB. 242. Let alone. Hindered. Tr. L. 3. 718. Delayed. Fr. 1419. Alſo, Delay, hindrance. Tr. L. 3. 700. Leadeth. RR. 6111. To cauſe; Cauſed. Luc. 185, 187.
Lette: To leave. Prol. 1325. Til he his life gan lete, No. 417. Till he dyed. To leave off, give over, forſake. La. 332. To diſmiſs, put away. Fr. 1765. Alſo Lethe, the River of Oblivion. Fa. L. 1. 71.
Letgame: A hinderer of pleaſure, or diſcuſion, Every pie and every letgame, Tr. L. 3. 528. Every chattering Tale, and hinderer of mirth. See p. 483, a. l. 65, &c.

Letby: Soft. Teſt. See Liib.
Letours: Hinderers. Teſt. See Let, &c.
Letow: Lithuania. Prol. 54.
Lettrature, Lettrure, Mo. 410. RR. 6751. Literature, Learning.
Lettrid: Learned. RR. 7691.
Letmarie: An Eleſtuary. No. 1821.
Lend: Unlearned; Ignorant; Fooliſh. Fr. 3048. See Lēande. Lendily, Lendlye: Unlearnedly; Ignorantly.
Lendineſſe: Ignorance; Folly.
Leve: Dear; Loving; Love, deſire, inclination. Mo. 59.
Leve, Levin: To believe. Sq. 1722. Tr. L. 1. 689. may be thus read from MS. Sp.

Miſtrowin al, or ellis al to leve;

To diſtruſt all, or believe all. Levin on no mortal, Mo. 2390. Believe no mortal. To Live; To Love. He leviſh more than he may do, RR. 3519. He loves more than he ought. To grant, permit. God leve him werken; God grant he may work. Tr. L. 3. 56. See Lene. Leved, RR. 4535. Believed.

Leveleſſe: Without leave. Ch. Dr. 74.

Leveſell, Levifell, MR. 953. Leſſel (umbraculum) A buſh, or hovel. Sp. Sk. thinks it comes from the Fr. Lais, Vepres, virgulta, the Termination ell being added. But Lais ſignifies alſo a Stander-tree; of which Leſſel or Leviſell may be a Diminutive, ſignifying a young Stander. In Part. p. 198, a. it plainly ſignifies a Buſh.

Levir, Levre: Dearer; Rather.

Levide. See Lēande.

Ley: To lay. See Lia.

Leyden, as Leden.

Leyis, Prol. 58. Sp. takes it to be Leviſſa on the Continent, not far from Rhodes: But Sk. ſuppoſes it may be Libyſſa, a City of Bithynia.

Leyſir. See Leſire.

Liard, Fr. 299. Nimble. Sp. Perhaps the ſame with Liart: Gentle; Pliant; Smooth. Sk. In Dougl. Virg. it ſignifies Grey-haired, white Albos crines, Æn. VI. Liart bare. Incanag; menta, Ib. VII. Lyart berde. Canities inculta, Ib. VI. Liart felterit tatis, i. e. Locks entangled for want of combing; an Expression like that in Cr. 162, 163. His liart lockis late Feltrid unſure; His white locks lay filthily entangled, felted, or twinted together.

Libart: A leopard. Prol. 2183. Libartes: Leopards. Mo. 375.

Libel repudy, Cr. 74. Libel of deparition, p. 508, b. A Bill of Divorce; Libellus repudij.

Licande: Agreeable: Well-liking. Sq. 1294. MS. Ch. reads the place thus;

—Venus hurt him wiſh her bande,
As that ſhe baar dauntyng in her bande.

Licentiate, Prol. 220. One that hath a Licence in any Faculty. RR. 7693, 7694. Or one that is licenced to admit others to any Degree, or Order.

Lich: Like. Liche even, Fa. L. 1. 13. All alike. See Like.

Liche-wake, Prol. 2965. A Cuſtom anciently uſed, and ſtill practiſed in ſome places, of Watching the Dead every night till they are buried; from the AS. Lacc, A Body, or Corpſe: It is called Wgile, Tr. L. 5. 305. Pygyles, Ca. and Wake-places by Lidg. in the Story of Thebes, Part. III. from the Games and Exercises therein uſed, as Wicſtling, &c. there deſcribed.

Liches, for Leches, p. 483, b. See Leche.

Licorons, WB. 466. Likorous, Lycorons: Dainty, gluttonous; Lecherous; Luxurious; Curious; Vile; wicked. Lycorons ſhrew, p. 376, b. Scurra nequeſſimus AS. Liccepa, Gulofus, belluo; Aſſenator. Licoronsneſſe: Lechery, wantonneſſ; Luxury. Part. Licorons; Deliciouſly, &c.

Licour: Liquor, moiſture. Prol. 3.

Lide, Mo. 752. Lydia in Aſia Minor.

Lie, Gam. 320. Thy londe that lyih lie; or as, MS. Ch. that lyght leye; Thy land that hath much water. Untilled grounds are called Ley in Scotland and we ſay

- to let Lands Lay, i. e. lye fallow, a year or two; and Lay-land is land that lieth untilld. See Somm. in Ley, and Gl. V. in Leyis.
- Liege, Liegenian*: A subject, one that owes allegiance to his Liege, or lawfull Lord. RR. 4647. Liegeis: Subjects. Fr. 1097.
- Lies*: Lees. Fa. L. 3. 1040.
- Liub*, RR. 4143. Layeth.
- Lifelich, Lively*: Lively. Lifely hewed; Of a lively complexion. Dr. Ch.
- Lifte*: Left. p. 441. A lifte balse; On the left side. RR. 163.
- Lige*, Mo. 1944. Ligge, Liggin: To lye down. Ligging: Lying.
- Light*: To alleviate, to make light, or easy. Tr. L. 3. 1058. Her loking gan she light, Tr. L. 1. 293. She looked pleasantly. Alighted. La. 787. It is put for lie, i. e. litle, in Mo. 1047. Also, Eafy. Lightly: Eafily; Probably.
- Lighneffe*: Light. AF. 263.
- Ligine*, Ch. Dr. 1517. Ligne: Lineage, descent; A line. Disfending by ligne, Tr. L. 5. 1480. Descended lineally, or in a direct line.
- Ligner*, p. 493, b. Liketh, yieldeth. Sp. Pleasure. Sk.
- Like*: Alike. Like ewin, RR. 6144. In all places, or things alike.
- Likely*: Like. A likely thing him till, RR. 4852. A thing like himself, or his own likeness, Ib. 4855.
- Likorous, Likerousneffe*. See Licorous, Licorousneffe.
- Likin*: To please, to be agreeable to. Tr. L. 1. 432. f. leg. Liking, Fr. 1536. Agreeable, as in RR. 868. And perhaps in Tr. L. 1. 309. it should be so read instead of loking: Ca. reads it, lykyng.
- Likir*: More like. Tr. L. 3. 1030.
- Limaile* (Fr. Limaille) Filings of Iron, Steel, or any other Metal. No. 874. Silver limaile, Ib. 1183. Silver-duft, or Shaving of Silver, Ib. 1260.
- Lime his fethirs*: Stick his feathers together, as with bird-lime. Tr. L. 1. 354.
- Limere, Lymere*, Dr. Ch. 362, 365. A Lymier, Leuiner or Leamer (so called from the Leam, or Line, wherewith he is led) is a middle sized Hound between a Harier and a Greyhound both for kind, and frame of body, being active, light and nimble. Holme's Acad. of Armory. See Cains De Canibus. fol. 3, b.
- Limerod*: A Lime-twig. Mo. 801.
- Limes, Limis, Limmis*: Limbs. CL. 228. AS. Lima, Membrum.
- Limid*: Polished. Fa. L. 3. 34.
- Limit*, p. 158, b. To appoint, to set a day.
- Limitation*, WB. 877. A certain Precinct, allowed to a Limitour, V.
- Limitour*, Prol. 209. A Fryer that had a particular Grant, or License for begging, or exercising other Functions within certain Limits, or Bounds; as the Limitour of Heldernesse, Fr. 455, 456, &c. See p. 590, b. Paragr. II. Why hire you to ferme, &c. It will give more light to the meaning of the word if the whole Paragraph be read as it is in Mr. Rawlinson's MS.
- Whil sette ye al the Kyngis londe to ferme to your Lymytours, as ye weren lordis of al menes goodis and ye woll not suffre o frere to begge in anothers lymytacioun unpunished.*
- Limmis*. See Limes.
- Linage*: Family. RR. 258.
- Linde*: A Teil-tree, or Lime-tree. Fr. 2226. Lindis: Teil-trees, Lime-trees. RR. 1385.
- Lipful*: Lipped. Prol. 266.
- Lis*: To ease, to comfort. Ber. 216. See Lisse.
- Lisse*: To ease. Bal. 954. To be eased. RR. 3758. To cease; To be lessened. RR. 4128. Ease. Tr. L. 5. 550. Instead of blisse read lisse, or lysse, as Ca. Respite. Fr. 2794. Abatement. Also, A list, or border; Limit, end. Sp.
- Lift*: Will, pleasure. RR. 1957.
- Liffe*, Tr. L. 4. 394. Should be read lyeff, i. e. doft lie down. So MS. Sp. Ca. and al.
- Liftis*: Lifts, a place for Combatants, or Wrestlers, &c. to fight or exercise in. Prol. 63, 1864. Fr. Lice.
- Litarge*: Lichargy: White Lead, "The foam that riseth from Lead when tried: It is cold of operation, and used by Chirurgions in Ointments and Plaisters, be-
- "ing of a gentle, drying, cleansing, and binding nature. Bo. See Ceruse.
- Lite*: Little, small.
- Litb*, RR. 5909. Lyeth. Thereby lithe a tale; Thereby hangs a tale. AL. 21. In Tr. L. 4. 228. instead of Litbe, i. e. Lyeth, Ca. hath Ryght so. Also, Gentle; tractable; Smooth, plain; Soft. Fa. L. 119. RR. 3762. To lessen, to ease. Tr. L. 4. 754. Also, A joint, a limb, a nerve. Mo. 990. AS. Litb. Lenis, &c. Ar-tus, &c.
- Lither, Lithir*, Ber. 727. Naughty, wicked; Froward, unacceptable. AS. Lýðpe, Nequāus, ingratus. Lithirly: Ill, wickedly, &c. Lithirly beset his while; Spent his time ill. MR. 191.
- Lithin*, Gam. 1. To hearken, attend, listen. AS. Litðan, Applcare, conferre.
- Lithir, Lithirly*. See Lither.
- Litby*: Humble, quiet, mild. Sk. See Lith. It seems to be the same with Lither. CN. 14. and perhaps should be so read.
- Litlynge*; Fa. L. 3. 133. Very small or little. AS. Lit-ling.
- Litrage*: A Lethargy. Booth.
- Little*, Tr. L. 4. 884. Into little; Within a little, almost.
- Littrature*, No. 867. Literature, learning, scholarship.
- Livande*: Living. Ch. Dr. 1628.
- Live, Lyve*: Life. On live, or lyve; ANve. RR. 5294.
- Livelishe*, CL. 782. f. as Lifelich.
- Livelod, Livelode*: A livelyhood.
- Liveray* (Fr. Livrée) Livery. It properly signifies Wages, Salary, or Fee allowed to Officers, whether in money, or necessities in kind. Gam. 1018. Payih him gode li-veray; Pay them good wages, spoken ironically for, Beat them soundly.
- Living, for Levin*: To believe. Mo. 2835.
- Livis body*: A living body, or person. Fa. L. 2. 555. Livis creature; A living creature. Fr. 1924.
- Loce*: Loose. Fa. L. 3. 196. p. 393, a.
- Lodemanage*, Bal. 250. Lodemenage, Prol. 405. The Skill, or Art of Navigation. It seems to be the AS. Lað-man, A Guide, and perhaps a Pilot, with a French Termination. In Gen. XXXIII. 15. Eſau presseth Jacob to take him guides of his people that knew the way, ic biððe þeſ þu nýme þe Laðmenn, &c. Loðsman, Kilian is a Pilot from Lozt, Lead, because he useth a Plummet for sounding. See Mynshew.
- Loder*, Ber. 837. for Lodesterre, V.
- Lodemen*, Hyp. 121. Lodifmen, Ber. 823. Pilots; guides, or Leaders. The Loadstone is so called from the AS. Læðan, To lead, or guide; qu. a Leading-stone, Somm. in Læðan. See Lodemenage.
- Lodesterre*: The North-star, by which Sailors steer their Course. Prol. 2061. and thence it is taken to signify any sure Guide, or Director. Tr. L. 5. 232. where instead of Lodesterre it is Lodis sterre in MS. Sp. as it is, Ib. 1391.
- Loft*: High, from Lift. On loft; On high. La. 278.
- Loge*: A lodge, a lodging, habitation. Lepir loge; A Lodge, or Hospital for Lepers. CCr. 27. A hen-roost. Mo. 966.
- Loggit*, as Alogit.
- Loigne*: A line. RR. 7100.
- Lollers*, Mo. 2013. Lollards, A name of Infamy bestowed on the Followers of Wicklif; supposed by some to be so called from one Walter Lollhard, the Author of a Sect in Germany and the Low Countries, in the Thirteenth Century: Others think they had the name from Lollum, as being Tares among the Lord's Wheat; to which Chaucer alludes. Sq. 12, 15, 21. Sk. from a certain Tower called Lollard, where they were imprisoned; but probably the Tower was so called from them. In later times the word hath been used to signify all Opposers of, or Dissenters from, the Established Religion.
- Lombardes*, No. 2875. Bankers, so called from the Lombards of Italy, who were notorious Usurers, and as such are joyned with Jews in PP. Paß. 5.
- I lerned amonge Lumberdes and Jewes a lesson To wey penyces with a pyes, and pwe she heuyest, And leue it for loue of cress, &c.*

Lombis: Lambs. Bal. 267, &c.

*Of lombis, as in forhsafneß,
Tho Clerkis makin mencion;
Ther kind is frei with doubleneß.*

Though Clerks, or Scholars, represent Women to be like Lambs for their truth and sincerity, yet they are all fraught, or filled, with doubleness or falshood.

Lome: Often. Ber. 968. How oft. Ib. 1367. AS. Ge-lome.

Londe: Land. Londet, Londis: Lands.

Londeuoy: A Londoner, one born in London. p. 488, b.

Londe-tillers: Husbandmen. Boeth. Tēst.

Londlese, qu. Landless: Having no Lands. Mo. 2013.

Lone: A loan, a thing lent; Lending. God be thankid of his lone, Fr. 597. There seems to be a corruption both in this verse and the next, of love into lone, and above into alone, which might easily happen, u and n, h and l, being very like in the old MSS. Those two Verses may be easily understood if thus read;

*Thei may now (God be thankid of his love)
Makin ther Jubile, and walke-above;*

That is, They may now (God be thanked for his Love) walk above, in Heaven, and keep their Jubilee there. In Ca. 1. they are so read with a very little variation, viz. Maken her Jubilee, and walkyn al above: But all the subsequent Editions read lone and alone.

Long, RR. 3377. Of long passid; A long time ago.

Longe; To b-long. Longth: Belongeth. Tr. L. 2. 1346. RR. 2197.

Longit, Magd. 176. or Longens, is said to be the Name of the Soldier who pierced our Saviour's side with a Spere, and being blind was reformed to his sight by wiping his eyes with his hands which were bloody. See Nicodemus's Gospel.

Loos. See Lose.

Lop, Lope, Loppe: A spider. p. 440, a. 442, a. Sk. charges the Interpreter of Chaucer with a mistake in explaining Loppe, a Spider, whereas it signifies a Flea: But it can scarce bear that sense in p. 440, a. It seems rather to be a mistake of the Transcribers in writing Loppe for Coppe; Atter-coppa in AS. being a Spider, which is still called Attercop in the North, and in CB. Cop or Coppyn. See Ray's Coll. p. 123, 139.

Lordlingis, Lordingis, Lordingis: Sirs, Masters; A Dim. of Lords. Lord sometimes signifies no more than Master, as No. 2820. Ray says, that Loert (which seems to be a corruption of Lord) is used in the Peak of Derbyshire for Gaffer, Lady, Gammer. See Gl. V. in Lard.

Lordship: Power, authority.

Lore: Direction; Rule. Tr. L. 1. 646. Learning. La. 4. Advice. Tr. L. 1. 755. Doctrine. Pro. 529. Knowledge. Fr. 1808. Also, for Lorne, Mo. 2671.

Lorell: A devourer. Sp. Sk. thinks it to be a Dim. of Lurco, a Glutton. WB. 273. Mo. 2314. A loose, vile, or lewd fellow. Every lreil; Perditissimum quemq; Boeth. p. 363, b.

Lorne: Lost, undone. Sq. 649. Fr. 2092, 2583.

Lose, Loos, RR. 1161. Praise; Fame; Reputation. Lat. Laus. Also, Loft. Tr. L. 4. 27. Loses: Praises. Fa. L. 3. 598.

Losell: A crafty fellow. Sp. A liar, a hypocrite, a cheat, a counterfeit. Mo. 3206. From the AS. Leaf. Mendax, falsus.

Lofengeour, Lofengere: A liar, a flatterer. Lozengier in old Fr. is a Deceiver. See Men Fr. in Lozenger, and Men. It. in Lusinga.

Lofengery, Lofengrie, Mo. 2575. Lofery, Ber. 193. Lying; Flattery; Deceit, a cheat.

Lofengis, Lofynges: Lies; Flattery. Fa. L. 3. 227. Also Scutcheons of Arms, born by Ladies in a Lozenge. Lofingis and fcochons, RR. 893. Coats of Arms of Ladies, and Gentlemen.

Loftid: Loosed, set at liberty. RR. 4511.

Loft, for Loft, Ber. 2819.

Loibly, RR. 6339. A Companion, or Love. Sp. See Sk. We find Lemmans and Loibies joyned together in PP. Paf. 3. as being synonymous.

— And priestes maineineth
To have lemmanis and loibies all her lyue dayes
And bring forth barnis agayne forbidden lawes.

Loib: Unwilling; Hatefull, odious, loathsome. Be him loib or dere, Tr. L. 2. 808. Whether it pleases him, or no. Loibe unto Christ; Hated by Christ. Hen. 250. Loib: More odious, &c. As to me, nis lezur non ne loibur, LW. 191. I neither love nor hate the one more than the other.

Loibely: Loathsome. WB. 1100.

Loibir. See Loib.

Love dayis: Meetings for pleasure and diversion. P. ol. 260. Fa. L. 2. 187. Love-daye, p. 481. b. signifies Peacemaking, reconciliation.

Lovejume: Lovely. Tr. L. 5. 465.

Lough, No. 1990. Loughr, Ber. 2317. Laughed.

Loviris: Lovers. Hyper. 4.

Louke, MR. 1307. A fellow-receiver. Sp. A Receiver to a thief; An Overseer, or Examiner of Accounts. Sk. Perhaps it may signify a Setter to a thief, one that looks out, and gives notice of booty.

Loupe, Bal. Lad. 92, 93. See Depe loupe.

Lour, Loure, Ber. 728. RR. 7099. To lour, to look askint, to look lowr, fullen or crabbed.

Loune: To submit; To kneel. RR. 7336. To honour; To stoop, bow, cringe. RR. 1554, 4384. To lurk or hide one's self. No. 197. See Ib. 322, &c.

Loueden: Bowed, made obeysance, &c.

Low: Law. Ch. Dr. 324.

Lone: To praise. RR. 4932. Ber. 920. To allow, approve.

Lontlyhed: Lowliness, humility. Bl. Kn. 315.

Loylite: Truth, sincerity. AL. 98.

Luce, Pro. 54. Livonia, Liefland. Sk. Also, A Pike, or Jack. Pro. 352. RR. 7089.

Lucerne: A lamp, a candle. CN. 303.

Lucina: Juno, or Diana; The Moon. Fr. 2591.

Lufe: Love. Pro. 2787.

Lukir: Lucre, gain. Ber. 3162.

Lure: A Device used by Falconers for bringing their Hawks to fist; Whence the Expression Bring to lure, Reclaim to the lure. To make a hawk familiar, to bring him to fist; and thence it is used for To bring a person to ones purpose, &c.

Lushburghis: Base Coins imported from foreign parts, and dispersed here in the time of Edward III. so called (as Sk. thinks) from Luxenburgh, where they were first coined. No lushburghis payin ye, Mo. 74. You make true payment, not in counterfeit coin; Vos solutionem prestatis non fictam. Spelin.

Lust: Will, pleasure, desire; To be pleased. Lust to sey, No. 282. Was pleased, or list, to say. Lusty: Gay, pleasant; Earnest; Earnestly. Lustie lese, Tr. L. 2. 752. The snare, or bond, of love or pleasure. See Lies.

Lustichede, Hyp. 163. Lustihed, Lustines, Tr. L. 3. 177. Lusty.

Luxury: Lechery, lust.

Lycorons.— See Licorons.

Lyseliche: Lively. Tēst.

Lygeaunce: Allegiance. Bl. Kn. 552.

Lyurge: Lycurgus, the famous Spartan Law-giver.

Lymere. See Limer.

Lymme: A limb. Dr. Ch. 499. Lymys: Limbs. Ber. 162.

Lynd. See Linde. Under the wode lynd, Gam. 1339. perhaps may signify no more than, In the wood, under the trees, in general, as the Expression, Under the lynd, seems to be used in Doug. Virg. p. 220, 40.

Lyne: Line. Lyne right; In a right line. p. 446, b.

Lynne: To loyter, to tarry. Gam. 1105.

Lisse: To lessen. Boeth. See Lisse.

Lyte: Little. Fr. 971.

Lyve. See Live.

Livery: Livery; Apparel. Pro. 365. See Liveray.

Livery: Delivery. Ber. 1163.

Lyvinge: Living. Her daies lyving; All the days of her life.

Livode, Ber. 2464. See Livode.

M.

- MAcc*, Prol. 2126. A Batoon; A club, a staff.
Adach, for make, PT. 83. A mate, a match, an equal; To match, to be even with. Ib. 540.
Machabe, Mo. 604. The Apocryphal Books of the Machabees; particularly the first six Chapters of the First Book, wherein are described the Actions and Death of Antiochus Epiphanes.
Mad: To be mad. RR. 1072.
Mafie, Maifae, Fr. Ma foy, Sur ma foy: Faith, upon or by my Faith. Tr. L. 3. 52.
Magicine: A Magician. Fr. 2797.
Magike naturele, Prol. 418. "He meaneth (says Sp.) this Physician was skilfull in Astrology; and could make his election of fortunate hours, wherein to minister his potions to his Patient; and likewise that he was practised in Magick Natural, as in making of Sigils, or Characters stamped on metal in their due times fitted to that Sign that governed that part of the body wherein the Malady was; as the stamp of Aries for the disease in the Head, and of Leo, for the Reins, &c. Hereof he speaketh, Fa. L. 3. 178, &c.
Magre, as Maugre.
Maibound: Mahomet. La. 225. Perhaps mistaken by the Transcribers for Mahomid, as it is often written in the MSS.
Maifae, RR. 7580. See Mafae.
Maile: A Coat of Mail. Fr. 2217.
Mainie: Mixed, mingled. Bl. Kn. 230.
Mainieine, Mainieiners, Mainieynours. See Champartie.
Maintenance: Countenance, looks, carriage. Dr. Ch. 834. Fr. Mainien. See Champartie.
Maisondere (Fr. Maison-Dieu): A Hospital for sick persons. RR. 5619.
Maisterie, Maistiry, Maistre, Maistrie: A Mystery: A masterly action; Magistracie; Magistratus, p. 362, a. Command, Authority, Mo. 3057. Government, power. Ib. 525, 2741. Bacchus had of her mouth no maisterie, No. 1573. She was not given to wine. Imperiousness. Fr. 2310, 2311. Masterly workmanship. RR. 842.
Maistifull: Magisterial, imperious, domineering. Tr. L. 2. 756.
Maistir strete: The principal Street. Prol. 2904. Fr. 3506.
Maistris: Mistress. LIV. 88.
Maistrise: Curious, masterly workmanship. RR. 4172.
Make: A match, a mate, a fellow, a companion, a confort; A husband, or wife. WB. 84. LW. 158. In Prol. 2558. it signifies the Person engaged with in fight. But MS. Ch. reads that passage thus;
*And yif that so befalle, that the Cheverayn
 Bee take on either side, or ellis slayn, &c.*
Make: To compose, make Verses. LIV. 69, 74, 364.
Makings, Ib. 413. Compositions in Poetry. A Maker seems to have been the common Appellation for a Poet in Q. Elizabeth's time; wherein (says Sir Philip Sidney) "I know not whether by lucke or wisdom we Englishmen have met with the Greekes. Defence of Poetic. p. 494.
Make one's berde: To impose upon, or deceive one. WB. 361. Faire la barbe, is a Fr. Phrase for To abuse, affront, &c.
Makeless: Matchless. Tr. L. 1. 172.
Makid: Makidin: Made. MS. Sp. Madyn al the wallis, Tr. L. 4. 121. Built the walls.
Makin his sort, Tr. L. 4. 1404. Ca. has it, Marryng his sort, and beryg, &c. which is intelligible. Others read Makyng.
Malapert. See Apert.
Mail: A Mail, a packet. No. 2438. To unbolke a male: To open one's budget. MR. 7. No. 2499.
Malbouche: A foul mouth, an evil tongue. Fl. 84. BD. 741.
Male talent, RR. 273, 330, 3438. Ill will, evil intent;

- Displeasure; Indignation. Gl. Lob. See Talent.
Malgre, as Maugre.
Mallice: Evil doing; Maleficium, Boeth.
Malison, Fr. A curse. No. 1266. Contracted from Malédiction, as Benison from Benediction.
Malt: Melted. Tr. L. 1. 583.
Malvese: Malmesie wine. No. 2578.
Malure: A misfortune, a mischance. Ch. Dr. 599. Fr. Malheur.
Man, RR. 6055, 6059. A Vassal, a Homager.
Manace, Manacing, Manassynge: Threatning. RR. 4007, 4051. Boeth.
Manere: Carriage, behaviour. Prol. 140.
Mangerie, Fr. Eating, feasting. Gam. 681, 858, 919. See Gl. Lob. in Manducarium.
Mangonell: A Warlike Engine to batter walls withall. RR. 6279. See Gl. Lob. in Mangoneaux.
Manhede: Manhood, courage.
Manie, Fr. Madness. Prol. 1376. Gr. Mania.
Mannishe: Wicked. La. 783. from the AS. Man, Sce-lus. Also, Proper to man or mankind, humane. To done sinne is mannishe, p. 152, a. Humanum est peccare.
Masculine, manly. Tr. L. 1. 284. Fl. 149.
Manor: A Mansion, a habitation. Dr. Ch. 1004.
Manre: Manner.
Manfute: Meek. Tr. L. 4. 194.
Mantlet, Prol. 2160. Dim. of Mantle. MS. Ch. has it;
A Mantell upon his shoultris hanging.
Marchandrie: Merchandize. Mo. 2740.
Marcia Catoun, Fl. 198. Marcia the daughter of Cato. So Hectoris Andromache. Virg.
Marcian: Martial, warlike. WB. 610.
Mare: More; Greater. RR. 2215. Less and mare; Great and small, High and low.
Mareis: Marshes, fens. Boeth. Fr. Maraïs. Also, Marrow, p. 383, a.
Margarite: A Pearl. p. 479, b. A Daizy. Fr. Marguerite. Bal. Lad. 119. comp. with 124.
Margelaine, AL. 56. Marjerom. Fr. Marjolaine.
Margerets: Dailies. AL. 57. See Margarite.
Marie, as Mary.
Maris: Mares.
Marishe: Marshy, moorish.
Mark of Adam, WB. 696. All the Offspring of Adam, that are born after his Image, or, All that have Adam's Mark, or Image stamped upon them. See Merke.
Market [or Markit] better. One that makes quarrels in Markets. MR. 828. Mo. 2811. See Better.
Marrid: Mar'd; Undone. Magd. 112.
Marris: A marsh. WB. 970. See Mareis.
Mart, Marte: Mars, the God of War. It is often put for War. Prol. 2023. MS. Ch. reads the place thus;
*Nowght was forgeyn by the infortune of Mars
 The carter overryden by his cart,*
i. e. In the Temple of Mars was not forgot to be described the Charioteer run over by his own Chariot through the mischance of War. This sense is very proper and easy; but as it is printed the first Verse is scarce intelligible. Instead of for the love of Marte, Tr. L. 2. 988. Ca. and Py. read it, for love and charite, and departed be, instead of departe, Ib. 990.
Martire, Fr. Martyrdom; Torment. RR. 2547. Martirid: Martyred. Test.
Martyrdome: Any pain, or suffering. Prol. 1462.
Martyrith: Tormenteth. Prol. 1564.
Mary, Marie: Marrow. No. 2058. Marie-bones: Marrow-bones. Prol. 382.
Mase: A whim, a fancy. Mo. 1208. Tr. L. 5. 468.
Masid: Amazed, astonished, confounded, confused.
Masidnes: Amazement, confusion, astonishment, surprize. Fr. 2082.
Masin: To doat, rave. Sq. 1919. To be in confusion.
Masseday, Massedays: Holy-days, whereon Mas is celebrated with more than ordinary Solemnity. Sk.
Masterte: for me asterte: Escaped me, came from me un-awares. Tr. L. 1. 1051.
Mastirship, as Maistrie.
Mastling, Mo. 2127. Shining. Sp. Glistering. Com.
Mastrie, as Maistrie.
Mate: Pined, consumed; Daunted, abashed, dejected, fati-fatigued. Prol. 957. RR. 1739. BD. 35. From the old Lat. Mattus. See Men. Fr. in Echec, and Gl. V. In Tr. L. 4. 342. MS. Sp. hath mad instead of mate.

Mattre, Hyp. 215. Mattire, Tr. L. 4. 818. Matter.

Mangre, Malgre, Fr. Ill-will; Disgrace. Cup. 376. Thou canst me grete mangre, RR. 4399. Thou takest it unkindly of me. Should I con him mangre, Ib. 4559. Should I take it ill of him. These Expressions are purely Fr. Scavoir bon, ou mauvais gre. In spite of. Mangre her bed; In spite of her head, In spite of her teeth. Malgre bis; With an ill will, as it were in spite of himself. RR. 2386, 5933.

Mavis, Mavise: A Thrush, or Song-thrush. CCr. 24. RR. 619, 665. Also, A bushel. Ib. 5590.

Maumet, Maumette (a Contraction of Mahomet) A false God; An Idol. Pars. Maumetrie: Mahometanism, La. 237. Idolatry. Pars. p. 205, a.

Maundement: A command, an order, a commission.

Mave: The belly, the stomach. No. 3328.

May, often signifies Can; May do. A man may godlye [i. e. godely] i. e. may do it. To may, Ber. 1284. To be amazed, or amazed.

Maydinhode: Maidenhead, Virginity. Prol. 2331.

Mazeline: A Mazer. Sp. That is, a wooden cup made of Maple. Sk. No. 3357.

Mealtime: Meal-time, Dinner-time. Tr. L. 2. 1556.

Meanliche: Moderate; Mild. Boeth. p. 365, b. l. 2. Lenibus is there rendered light and meanliche: The Translator doubting whether it was lenibus or levibus, made use of two words to express both senses.

Meddell, Medell, Medle: To mix, mingle. Boeth. Medeling, RR. 898. A mixture. Medled, Medlid: Mixed, mingled; from the Fr. Méler.

Mediacion: Means. p. 439, a.

Medley cote: A coat of mixt Stuff. Prol. 330.

Meded, Mede: A reward. AS. Mede, mede. God do you mede; God reward you. AL. 293. It is often put for Wealth in general in PP. Also, A meadow. Prol. 89.

Medis: Meadows. Tr. L. 4. 770.

Mees, Cup. 334. Meadows. Sp. contracted from Meades, says Sk. Rather a Messuage, or Messuages, in old Fr. Mees, and now called Mees-places in some parts.

Meine, Meinie, Meinye: A Company, a Retinue; All that live together in a House. Tr. L. 1. 127. from the AS. Menigeo, Multitudo, or the old Fr. Mesnie, a Family.

Meint: Mingled. RR. 2296.

Meith: Mead. Prol. 2281.

Meke: Meek, humble, submissive. Also, To be meek, to submit; To humble. Ar. 313. Became meek, pliable. RR. 3584. Mekin and josplin; To grow meek and supple. RR. 2244.

Melancolius: Melancholy. Fa. L. 1. 30.

Melis: Meals. Dr. Ch. 612.

Mell: To meddle. Mo. 2797. Fr. Méler. Also, A mill. MR. 815.

Memoure: Memory. Cr. 50.

Menace, Fr. Threatning. Prol. 2005.

Menasuh: Threateneth. Fr. 1152.

Mende, Ber. 2417. f. Men.

Mendement: Amendment. PT. 46.

Mendicants: Beggars; Begging Fryers.

Mendicence, Mendicite, Mendience: Begging; Beggery, poverty.

Mene: Moderate. Mene differance; Moderate distance. CL. 783.

Menge: To mix. Mengid: Mixt. CCr. 32.

Meninge, Tr. L. 1. 285, 289. should be Mering, i. e. Moving, motion: It is meuing, or meuyng in all the MSS. and old Editions that I have seen; nor is it sense, if it be read otherwise.

Menis: Means. Fr. 220. Substance.

Menivere, RR. 221. Miniver, a fine white Furr.

Menuse: To diminish. See Amense.

Menye, as Meine.

Merciabile: Mercifull, compassionate. RR. 1864. Fr. 2582.

Merciaments: Amerciaments, penalties, fines. Pars.

Meritorie: Meritorious.

Meritote, MR. 662. A Sport used by children, by swinging themselves in Bell-ropes, or such like, till they be giddy. Sp. Some Annotators on the place, correct it, on her to dote; but produce no Authority for it. It is in other Copies, verytote, viristote, beristote.

Merke: A mark, an image. Fr. 2426. Also, Dark. RR. 5339. Merknesse: Darknes. From the Dan. Merke. Mirk and Mark are still used in some parts of the North for Dark.

Merkenrike, Mo. 1227. The Kingdom of Mercia. AS. Myrcna-rixe.

Merle, CCr. 24. Merfula avis; A Black-bird.

Merlion, AF. 339. A merlin, a sort of Hawk. See Emerton.

Meribe: Mirth. Mo. 1285.

Mervayle: Marvel, wonder. Fr. Merveille.

Mery: Pleasant. Mo. 1186.

Mes, RR. 3462. At gode mes; In good humour.

Mese, Ch. Dr. 2116. Mais, which used to be celebrated at Nuptials. Sk.

Mesell: A Leper. Pars. It seems to be used in PP. for common Beggars, such persons often pretending to be afflicted with Sores and Ulcers.

Messagerie, AF. 228. Diligence in doing a Message. Sk. The business of a Messenger. Also, A pimp, a bawd.

Messangere: A messenger. Ch. Dr. 133. Messangis: Messengers. Tr. L. 2. 936. In the MSS. it is generally (if not always) Messenger, &c.

Messe: Mass. Fr. 464.

Mess, Messe: Most; Greatest.

Mesurable: Moderate. Prol. 437.

Mesure: Moderation. No. 1563. Mo. 2447.

Mes, Mite, Mein: To dream; Dreamed. WB. 577.

Metamorphoseos, Metamorphose, CL. 1260. Ovid's Metamorphosis.

Mete: To measure. AFr. Also, Meet; Meant. During the metis space; During the Entertainment. La. 1015. See Met.

Metborde: A table. Test. L. 2.

Meisly: Meet; Comely, of a proper size. RR. 822. AL. 79.

Metriciens: Poets. CL. 30.

Mette: Dreamed. Tr. L. 1. 363. Also, Measure. By mette or by mesure, p. 206, b. By mesure seems to be added as a Gloss to explain By mette.

Mevable: Moveable; Unconstant. RR. 4736.

Menbles, as Meeble.

Meve, Mevin: To move.

Mewards: Towards me. Test.

Mewe, Sq. 663. Tr. L. 3. 1790. "A kind of Cage where "Hawks are wintered, or kept when they Mew, or "change their Feathers: Whence those great Stables "belonging to Whitehall took denomination; that "place having been anciently full of Mews, where the "King's Hawks were kept. Bo. in Mew. From hence it is taken to signify a Cage in general, or any sort of confinement. RR. 4778. Also, Secrecy. In mewe, Tr. L. 1. 382. In secret. Tr. L. 3. 603. should be read thus; Ther be beset, fith midnight, was in mewe. Ca. and Py. read it thus; Ther be set was fith mydnight in a mewe.

Mewet, as Muet, V. In mewet; As a dumb person CL. 148.

Meyne, as Meine.

Mfold: A thousand fold. Tr. L. 3. 1546.

Micher: A covetous, fardid fellow. Sk. It seems to signify rather a lazy, loytering Vagabond, a Truant. RR. 6541.

Middillist: The middlemost.

Midward: The middle.

Mighelmess: Michaelmas. Fort. 97.

Might: Strength. Mighty: Strong. RR. 6573.

Mikel, Mikil. See Mischill.

Mildrop: Droppings of the nose. Cr. 158.

Minen, Minin: To undermine; To make a Lodgment by digging; To lodge. Tr. L. 2. 677.

Minge: To mix. CCr. 197. Mingid: Mixed. Cr. 236.

Minishe: To diminish.

Ministers: Magistrates. Mo. 1158.

Minoreffe, RR. 149. It may be the fem. of Miner, An underminer. But Sp. will have the right reading to be Mueresse, A Ringer of debate; for so it is (lays he)

- in the French Verses in the oldest written Copies, Sembla bien estre monereste.
- M'nour*: A digger, a miner. ProL. 2467.
- Minstraleie*: Musick. ProL. 2199. Mo. 1690. Minstrallis: Musicians.
- M'ntinge*: Minding; Endeavouring. Mintyng to gone, p. 360, a. Tendit ire.
- M'rrour*: A looking-glass. Fr. Miroir.
- M'ribelisse*: Sad, void of mirth. AF. 592.
- M'ribid*: Cheered, comforted, made merry. p. 494, a.
- Mis*, An. 282. Misse, Tr. L. 4. 1267. Amis. In Composition it betokens Error, or mistake.
- Miscomptid*: Misreckoned, counted wrong. Tr. L. 5. 1184.
- Misventure*: Mischance, misfortune.
- Miswise*: To act unadvisedly. When they hem miswise; When they do not rightly consider, or are not well advised. WB. 239.
- Misbeleve*: To distrust. Misbelevid: Distrustfull. Tr. L. 3. 840.
- Misbeide*: A mishap, a mischance.
- Misbodin*, ProL. 911. To wrong. Sp. It seems to signify To misinform, from Mis, and the AS. Boba, bobe, Nuncius, nuncium. MS. Ch. reads instead of it, Mysdo: Done amiss, wronged.
- Misborne*: Misbehaved. p. 159, b.
- Misbese*: To chuse amiss. Sc. 188.
- Mischief*: Misfortune. RR. 6731. At mischief, ib. 4552. In the time of distress.
- Misdepying*: Naming amiss.
- Misorden*: To disagree. Test.
- Misouering*: Unlawfull desire, coveting that which one ought not. RR. 196.
- Misdeparte*: To distribute, or divide amiss. La. 107.
- Misericorde*, Misericordies, Boeth. Pity, mercy, compassion.
- Misese*: Uneasiness, trouble. Misese: Uneasy. p. 483, b.
- Misfill*: Fell amiss, miscarried.
- Misforgave him*, Tr. L. 4. 1426. Misgave, failed him.
- Misgo*: Gone amiss, or astray. Mo. 2697.
- Misgovernance*: Mismanagement, misbehaviour, ill conduct. No. 2501.
- Mishap*: To disappoint. RR. 5543. To miscarry, to be disappointed. Tho it mishap one, PW. 87. Though one miscarry.
- Misleden*: To misbehave. Tr. L. 4. 48.
- Mislivid man*: A man of evil life. Tr. L. 4. 330. Mislyving man, MS. Sp.
- Mismetre*, Mismetre. See Misse-metre.
- Mispleasure*: Displeasure, discord, disagreeableness. p. 482, b.
- Misqueme*: To displease. Mo. 2587. See Queme.
- Misraie*, Misraie: To say amiss, to speak evil of. RR. 1260. To contradict; To hinder. p. 514, a. Misrayere: An evil speaker, a slanderer. RR. 2231.
- Misraie*: Misbecame. RR. 1194.
- Misse*, as Mis. Misse manere; A wrong manner. Mo. 3137.
- Misse-entchanged*: Wrong changed. RR. 6581. Vice versa mutatus, p. 391, b.
- Missie*. See Misraie.
- Misfementing*: Evil meaning, mistaken, p. 506, b.
- Misse-metre*, Tr. L. 5. 1795. To destroy the Metre or Numbers in Poetry by incorrect Writing, or wrong Reading: But Chancer having particularly mentioned the fault of Miswriting in the foregoing Verse, it is rather to be supposed he means there that of Reading amiss, which generally happens, for default of tongue, i. e. for want of a perfect understanding of his language. He owns in Fa. L. 3. 9, &c. that he chose sometimes to leave a Verse too short by a Syllable, where he had a greater regard to the sense than the Metre: But whether he be to be imitated in this, as some, who have writ in his style, have affected to do, is not my business to determine. It seems plain from this Passage, as well as his words to Adam Scrivener at the end of the Book, and his care about Pointing, RR. 2157, 2161. that he was not so loose in his Metre, as some may imagine; for by collating any part of his works with MSS. or old Editions, it will appear, that Verses, which in one Copy or Edition are defective; may out of others be made compleat; and that very often without the use of i or y prefix to Verbs, the distinct pronunciation of the final in or e, or useless Expletives.
- Mistake*: To take amiss, to be offended. RR. 1540.
- Mister*, Mistere, Mistir: A Mystery. Fr. 2898. A profession, or trade. ProL. 615. RR. 6332. Fr. Mestier. Hence it is used in general for any Sort, kind, or condition. ProL. 1342. Mister men, ib. 1712. Mo. 2696. Mister folk, CL. 227. Kind of men. As mister was, RR. 1426. f. According to the quality of the ground, or of what it produced. Also, Business, occasion, need, necessity. ib. 2787, 5614, 6078, 6519, 6581. In mister, Sq. 970. Upon occasion. In Tr. L. 3. 859. instead of more nede is, Ca. bath, more myster is, which is the same.
- Misturie* for Ministry, p. 208, b. l. 68. In some Copies it is read, As by the mystery of her dignity.
- Mistiding*, p. 378, b. l. 53. perhaps for Mistledings. Lat. Devia.
- Mistibed*: A Mystery. CM. 71.
- Mistily*: Darkly, obscurely. No. 1415.
- Mistir*. See Mister.
- Mistrust*: Mistrust. No. 1883.
- Mistrustid*, or (as MS. Sp.) Mistrowid: Distrusted. Tr. L. 2. 431.
- Misturnid*: Turned upside down. Misturnish you; Turns you aside. Boeth.
- Mistwaie*: The wrong way. RR. 4766.
- Miswent*: Gone amiss, or astray. RR. 7280.
- Miswoman*: A lewd woman. RL. 15.
- Miswrite*, Tr. L. 5. 1794. To copy wrong, so as to prejudice the Sense or Metre in Poetry. See Misse-metre.
- Mitches*, RR. 5585. Mites, the smallest pieces of money; Manchets. Sp.
- Mitigative*: Tending to mitigate, or allay, sc. the fervency of love. Pr. RL. 20.
- Mittaine*: A mitten, a glove. No. 1886, 1887.
- Mixins*: Dunghills. RR. 6496. AS. Mixen.
- Mo*: More. In Tr. L. 5. 1508. Mo has been printed in some Editions, and has escaped in this, for Wo.
- Mobils*: Moveable Goods. Ber. 779. See Moble.
- Moch*, Mochill, Mokel, Mokil, Muchel, Muchil: Much; Great; Many; Very. Moch shew; Very wicked, a great villain. Gam. 11. Mochesfold: Manifold. Test. p. 488, a.
- Mockeren*: To mucker or hoard up. Boeth. See Muckre.
- Mode*: Mind; Courage, spirit; Mood, manner. Also, Passion, anger; Measure, moderation. AS. Mod, mode. Also, Time, or measure in singing; Modus, p. 366, a.
- Moder*, p. 441. The Matrix, or principal Plate of the Astrolabe into which the other parts are fixed.
- Modifie*: To moderate, to qualify. Cr. 299.
- Moble*: Moveables; Personal estate; Household-stuff. Fr. Moble.
- Moidil al ther patis*, PT. 139. Sprinkled water upon all their heads; from the Fr. M. uiller, To wet.
- Moison*, RR. 1677. Ripeness. Sk. From the Fr. Moisson, Harvest, a crop.
- Moistie*, Mo. 1637. Moistie ale; Strong ale.
- Moistir*: Moisture. CR. 318.
- Mokel*, Mokil: Stature; Size. Dr. Ch. 454, 861. See Moch.
- Mold*: The ground, the earth. AS. Molbe. Molt of man of mold, Ber. 1309. f. leg. Molt of man on mold; The molt of any man upon the earth. Teravin undir molde; Buried under ground. Gam. 1783.
- Molestie*: Anxiety, trouble. Boeth, p. 380, a.
- Molles*, Mo. 3268. Kittrells. Sp. Kittrells, or Kattrells, a kind of Hawk. Sk.
- Mollock*: Earth, or dung. Sp. From Muck (as Sk. thinks) produced into Mollock.
- Molte*: Melted. Tr. L. 5. 10. Fa. L. 2. 414.
- Momblynesse*, AL. 61. Talk. Sp. from Mumble. Sk.
- Man*: A man. CN. 85. Also, May; Might; Mult.
- Monche*, Tr. L. 1. 915. To eat, devour; from the Fr. Manger.
- Mone*, ProL. 405. A Globe, either Celestial or Terrestrial; A Map; from the Fr. Monde, The World. See Sk. Also, The Moon. Wintir mone, Tr. L. 1. 525. The Winter-season. Also, Moan; complaint.

Monsi:

Moned: Bemoaned; Lamentable.

Moneste, RR. 3579. Monisbe, CCr. 196. To admonish, to advise.

Moniours: Mint-men, Coiners. RR. 6811. Fr. Monnoyeurs.

Monstre: A sample, or pattern. Dr. Ch. 912. Fr. Monstre.

Also, To shew, to express. No. 1321. Fr. Monstrer.

Monstrefull: Monstrous. Ber. 2033.

Morcills: Morfels. RR. 6179.

More: Greater. AS. Maye. More and less, Fr. 1961, 2600. Great and small; Greater and lesser.

Mormall, ProL. 388. A canker. Sp. A gangreen. Sk.

Morne: The morning. To morne, [f. leg. morne] Ch. Dr. 948. To morrow.

Morowe, Morwynnye: The morning. CMF. 26. WB. 875. The dawning of the day. Mo. 1416.

Morter, Tr. L. 4. 1245. A Lamp. Sp. Sk. "This word

"doth plainly intimate our Author Jeffrey Chaucer to

"have been an Esquire of the Body in Ordinary to the

"King, whose office it is, after he has charged,

"and set the Watch of the Guard, to carry in the

"Morter, and set it by the King's bed-side; for he

"takes from the Cupboard a Silver Basin, and there-

"in pours a little water, and then sets a round cake of

"Virgin-wax in the middle of the Basin; in the middle

"of which cake is a wick of Bumbast, which being

"lighted, burns as a Match-light all night at the "King's bed-side. It has as I conceive, the name of

"Morter from the likeness it has, when near consu-

"med, to a Mortar wherein you bray Spices; for the

"flame melting first the middle of the Wax cake which

"is nearest to it, the wax by degrees, like the sand in

"an hour-glass, runs evenly from all sides to the mid-

"dle to supply the wick. This Royal Ceremony

"Chaucer wittily fancies to be in Creside's Bed-cham-

"ber, calling this kind of Match-light by the Name

"of Morter, which very few Countiers besides the

"Esquires of the Body (who only are admitted, after

"all Night is served, to come into the King's bed-

"chamber) do understand what is meant by it. Kyn.

Mortifie, No. 1147, 1452. Quicksilver is mortified when it is dissolved in an Acid Menstruum: And spirits are said to be mortified when they are mixt with such things as destroy their Strength, and hinder their Operation.

Mortreis, ProL. 386. Meat made of boiled hens, crummed bread, yolk of eggs, and saffron, all boiled together. Sp. So called, because the Ingredients are all pounded together in a Mortar. Sk.

Morne: Morrow, the morning.

Mosill: The muzzle, the mouth, or snout of a beaft. ProL. 2153.

Most: Greatest. ProL. 2200.

Most, Mosfin: Must. Tr. L. 5. 1507.

Mote: Must. Mote nede, Tr. L. 3. 1293. Mote nede, or nede, Dr. Ch. 42. Must needs, or Needs must. May. The falsir foule mote him besalle; May evil besall the falsir of the two. Mo. 2024, &c. Also, A mote, an Atom. It ne might not a mote suffice, Tr. L. 3. 1609. It would not signify so much as the least trifle in the world. In Gam. 737. it is perhaps put for Mode: Passion, anger.

More-hall: A Hall where Courts of Judicature are kept. Gam. 1421.

Motife: A motive; Advice. Sq. 1007. Encouragement.

Caught a grete motife of this witness; Was much encouraged by the Information of this witness to enquire, &c.

La. 629. Fr. Motif.

Motin, as Mote.

Mouble, Tr. L. 5. 300. as Mooble.

Mouche, Mo. 2887. To devour, to eat all up. Sk. See Monche.

Moucis herte: The courage of a mouse. Tr. L. 3. 737.

Moud: Mood, temper. PT. 502. See Mode.

Mought: May; Might. La. 398.

Moughthes, p. 147, b. Moughis, WB. 560. Moths.

Moule, Mo. 3205. To moulder way; To grow mouldy.

Mouled, Moulid: Mouldered; Mouldy. p. 492, b.

Moultiplying, No. 1412. See Multiplic and Multiplication.

Moun: May. Test.

Mountaunce, Mounnaunce, No. 2381. RR. 1562. Quan-

ntity; Value, amount. ProL. 1572. Space. Tr. L. 2

1707. In old Fr. Mountaunce. In Tr. L. 3. 1738. instead of mounnaunce of a gnat, which is hence intelligible, MS. Sp. and al. read, mounnaunce of a knot, which makes the sense easy, i. e. Could not unwind so much as one knot of Creside's net.

Mour-laint, RR. 1094. The tongue of a buckle. Sk.

Mourningly: Mourntully. MS. d. 212.

Mow, Mowe, Moxin: May; Can. To mow done: To be able to make. Tr. L. 2. 1594. Mow how you: Be able to govern, or behave himself. RL. 342. How that not wene suffer, i. e. be obliged to suffer. p. 154, b.

Mowe: The mouth. Mowis: Mouths. Mow you the mow, Tr. L. 4. 7. Makes mouths at him.

Mowth: The mouth. PT. 481. Ber. 3098.

Mowlin, La. 32. as Mowle.

Mowynge: Being able. Berth. See Mow.

Much: Great: Many. No. 694. Much or lit; Great or small. ProL. 496.

Muchel, Muchill. See Muchell, Muchill.

Mucker: To hoard up; Cocon one, p. 369, b. See

Mucker. Muckers: Covetous persons, muckards.

Mucker: To hoard up. Tr. L. 3. 1381. From the AS.

Quæg, A heap, whence Muk: Riches. Ber. 112.

Mue, Tr. L. 3. 1790. as Mew. Also, To change. Tr.

L. 2. 1258. Fr. Muer.

Muet, Fr. Mute, dumb, silent. Tr. L. 5. 194. Ber. 1331.

Muk. See Muckie.

Mullocke: Rubbish. No. 959. See Mullock.

Multiplicacion: The Art of multiplying Gold and Silver.

No. 570.

Multiplic: To understand Arithmetick; To multiply

Gold and Silver by Chymistry. No. 692, 752.

Murthel: Made glad. p. 470, a.

Musarde: A dull, heavy, lazy fellow. RR. 3250, 4034.

A lingerer, that amuses himself with trifles.

Muse, RR. 1592. To amuse ones self; To meditate.

Also, to stop, to delay.

Mut, for Mote: May. PT. 57.

Mydmore: The middle of the morning. PT. 13.

Myre: Mire. PT. 304.

Mynebe: Threatauth. Test.

Myroure, as Asirroure.

Mysslofid: Misinterpreted. Test. I. 2.

Myssake: Mistaken. Dr. Ch. 525.

Mysswanderinge: Uncertain, wavering. Berth.

N.

N: No. N force; No matter for that. AIR. 1-68.

Nad, Ber. 3168. A Contraction of Ne had; Had not. It is generally in the MSS. written Ne had, though to be often pronounced Nad: The same is to be observed

of the like words, Nam, Not, &c.

Naid: Denied. Naieth: Denieth, refuseeth. Berth.

Nakid: Made naked or bare, Rript; Deprived. Cup.

353.

Nakers, ProL. 2513. (Crotalum) Cymbals. Sp. Brayn horns. Sk. Military Instruments of Musick. Fr. At- quaires. Gl. Lob.

Nale: An Ale-house. Sp. qu. Inn-ale, an Inn for Ale.

Sk. Mo. 2310. Fr. 85.

Nalle: A nail. Sc. 229. Nalie: Nails. WB. 760.

Nam, for Ne am: Am not. WB. 148. See Nad.

Name: Took. No. 1318. from Nim.

Namiliche, Namly: Namely, particularly, chiefly, especially.

Nane: No one, none.

Nappith: Noddeth, sleepeth.

Napron: An apron. PT. 31.

Nar: Narrowly. Nar avise, for narre avise, or narre

avise (as AS. Ch.) Are well advised, have well considered. Sq. 1504.

Narcotikes and Apies, Hyper. 109. The same with Narco-

tise and Opie, ProL. 1474. Narcoticks and Opates, stupifying Medicines causing sleep.

Nart, for N art: Art not. See Nad.

Narwe: Narrow. Mo. 935.
Nas, for Ne was: Was not. See N'ad.
Nat, for Ne nat: Knew not. Also, Not. Nat and Not are often printed for Naught, or Nought.
Natall: Belonging to ones birth. By natall Jovis fest, Tr. L. 3. 150. By the feast of natall Jupiter; who may be so called, for being invoked by Men on their Birthday, as Juno by Women, who is therefore called Natalis Juno. Tibull.
Nath, for Ne bath: Hath not. See N'ad.
Nachtzß: Nevertheless.
Nation, WB. 1068. seems to signify Kindred, Family, as Gen in Latin.
Naught, Nought: Not. No. 280.
Ne: Nor; Not; Never. Ne were; Were not, were it not.
Nebule: A cloud. Bal. Lad. 53.
Neece: A neece.
Necessaire: Necessary. Tr. L. 4. 1021.
Nede, Neede: Need, necessity; Business, affair. RR. 6174. For nede; Upon occasion. Ib. 1123. Must defend her nede; Must needs defend her. Mo. 3024. Nedis: Business, affairs, occasions. Nedis mote; Must needs. Must it be nedis: It must needs be. Test. L. 3. Nedis cost, Prol. 1479. Of necessity. Sp. Sk. If we read cast, instead of cost, the sense will be natural and easy:

—fast by was the day
 That nedis call be mote himself in hide;

 i. e. It was near day, that he must needs call, or contrive, how and where to hide himself
Nedefully, Nedely, Nedily: Necessarily, of necessity. WB. 968.
Nedirs: Adders, snakes, serpents. CL. 120. Instead of Adders, MS. Ch. hath Neddre, Sq. 1302. AS. Nab-ðpe, CS. Neidr, A snake.
Neigh, Neighin: To approach, to draw near. Test. RL. 148.
Neither nohir: Neither the one nor the other. LIV. 192.
Nelde: A needle. Mo. 2720.
Nemen, Nemene, Nemene, Neven: To name, to tell
Nemnid, Nempr: Named.
Nene: Noon.
Ner: Near. Ner bonde; Near hand, almost. PT. 474.
Nere: Near, nearer. Tr. L. 1. 449, 450. Nighest nere; The nearer you approach. RR. 2572. Never. Nere the nere, or (as MS. Ch.) Nevere the ner; Never the nearer. No. 742. In the oldest MSS. it is written nevere, and not nere, for Never, though often to be pronounced as one Syllable.
Nere, for Ne were: Were not; were it not for. No. 1383.
Nerve: A nerve, or sinew. Tr. L. 2. 642.
Nerthe: A Neat-heard; A shepherd. p. 156, a.
Neshe: Nice, tender. CL. 1092. Nash is used in the same sense in some parts of England.
Nest: Next. Cr. 109.
Nere: Neat, black cattle, kine. Prol. 599.
Nethelst, Nethirles, Ber. 672. Nevertheless, however.
Netherst: Nethermost, lowest. Boeth.
Nettle in, Dock out, Tr. L. 4. 461. p. 482, a. or, as we say now, In Dock, out Nettle, spoken of unconstant and fickle persons, chiefly in love.
Neven, Nevin: To name; Named. Tr. L. 1. 877.
Neverthelater, or Never the later: Never the less. Boeth. Test.
Nevwe: A nephew. Hyp. 73. A grandson. Hyper. 98.
Newe: Now; Lately. No. 208. Anew, afresh. Of newe; Lately. But it befall of newe, Fr. 1959. or (as in MS. Ch.) But it be fallen newe; Unless it has otherwise happened lately. Newe and newe; Now and then. Tr. L. 3. 116. For the newe, Mo. 2866. al. of the newe, fr. fashion. Also, To renew. Tr. L. 3. 306. Newed: Grew fresh and new. Dr. Ch. 906.
Newfangel: Desirous of novelty. Mo. 1770. Newfangelness: Love of novelty and change; Inconstancy. An. 142.
Newlyche: Newly.
Nexie: The last foregoing. Fa. L. 3. 685.
Nice: Foolish, simple, silly, ignorant; Rude. Fr. Niais. Nice fare; Silly actions, trilling. Lende and nice, No. 658, 946. Ignorant and foolish. Also, a neece. Ib. 2608.

Nicete, Nicite: Folly; Coynels; Simplicity. In Tr. L. 2. 1286. instead of nicete, Ca. reads nyce shame, i. e. Foolish bashfulness. Ib. 1500.
Nigardie: Niggardliness, stinginess. No. 2680.
Nigges: Niggards. Mo. 2697.
Nigh, Nighin: To approach. Tr. L. 2. 1555.
Nightertale, Prol. 97. By night. Sp. The night time.
Nightspell: A Prayer against the Night-mare. Sp. A Charm against Thieves. Gl. to Spenser's Sheph. Cal.
Nigon: A scold, niggardly fellow.
Nill, for Ne will: Will not. Nilt, for Ne wilt: Wilt not.
Nim: To take. AS. Niman.
Ninthe: Ninth. Tr. L. 5. 1103.
Nis: Is not, for Ne is, as it is written in the old MSS. but to be pronounced either as one Syllable or two, as the Verse requires.
Nise, as Nice.
Nist, for Ne nist: Knew not. Nistest, for Ne nistest: Knowest not. Boeth.
Nirtale, CL. 999. as Nightertale.
Nixte: Next, nearest.
Noblay, Nobley, Nobles, Noblest, Nobli, Nobly: Nobility; Pomp, splendour; Honour; Renown. Of great nobley; Very famous for their Enterprizes; Felix, Boeth.
Nockid: Notched. RR. 942.
Noie: Harm, hurt, trouble. RR. 3772. Noien: To annoy, to hurt. RR. 4416. Noisfull, Noious, RR. 2449. Hurtfull, noysome, troublesome. p. 148, b. See Anney, Anoious.
Noisen: To make a noise, to boast. p. 378, b.
Nold, Nolde, for Ne wolde: Would not.
Noll: The noddle. Ber. 2524.
Nom, Nome, Nomen, Nomin, Nommen: Took; taken; from Nim, V.
Nombir, Nombre: Number.
Nompere: An umpire, an arbitrator. p. 481, b.
Nor: None; No; Not. No. 627. Fr. Non. Non unright; No injustice, nothing wrong or amiss. Tr. L. 2. 453.
Nuncertaine: An uncertainty. Test. L. 3.
Nonne: A Nun.
Non obstant: Notwithstanding. Ber. 1733. Lat. Non obstante.
Non power, No power: Impotence, want of power. p. 498, b.
Non: None; No. See Non.
Nore: Comfort, nourishing. Sp. In MR. 618. MS. Ch. hath it, thyin oore, H. 1. and al. thyin ore. See Ore.
Norice, Noris, or Nourice, Fr. A nurse; A foster-father; A cherisher, a nourisher. Cr. 171, 199. Also, for Norie, V.
Norie: A foster-child, a pupil; from the Fr. Nourri, Nourished, brought up.
Nourture: Breeding, education, nursing or bringing up.
Northrin: Northern. Cr. 17.
Norirly, for Nortilry, MR. 859. or (as MS. Ch.) Nortary; Nursing, or bringing up.
Norture, as Nourture.
Noste, for Ne woste: Knowest not.
Nor, Note, for Ne wor, Ne wore: Know not. Tr. L. 2. 35. But the whole Verse may be better read as in MS. Sp.

I note, me fewith hit no wondir thing.

Notabilie: A remark, an observation, a notable thing.
Note, MR. 960. Business. Kilian. Spod. AS. Not, note. By note, Tr. L. 4. 583. By St. Neote. Sk.
Notefull: Notable, remarkable.
Nother, Nothir: Nor, neither.
Nutis: Nuts. RR. 1377.
Nut hede: A round head, with the hair cut short. Prol. 109.
Novelrie, Novellerie, Novilrie: Novelty.
Nought: Not; Nor; Nothing.
Nonghtie, f. Naughty. Mo. 3037. Nasty. Com.
Nourice, for Nourie or Norie: A pupil; Alumnus, Boeth. See Norice.
Noutbe, Prol. 464. Tr. L. 1. 986. Noweth, Ber. 3097.
Nowith, Ib. 2478. Now.
Nowe and nowe: Now and then. Sq. 450.
Nowher: Nor, neither.

Nowell:

Nowell: Christmas. Fr. Noel.
Noyances: Nufances, troubles. Pars.
Noye, as Noie.
Noyfance: A nufance. Ch. Dr. 255.
Nuncupation: Naming. Test.
Nycite. See Nicete.
Nye: Nigh, near. Magd. 89.
Nyffes, Fr. 496. Trifles; Trifling news. O cité de nêflet, is explained by Enret. Pitiful and despicable city.
Nyghirtale, CL. 1356. as Nighirtale.
Nyromance, Ber. 2039. Nyromancy, PT. 339. for Nyromancy: Divination by calling up Dead mens Ghosts.
Nys, as Nis.

O.

O, Often signifies One. It is sometimes put for n in the beginning of a word, especially in PT. and Ber. as Oppon, Onknow, Onto, &c. for Upon, Unknown, Unto, &c.
Obay, No. 1615. should be Abaye, or (as MS. Ch. and al.) Abeye: Abide; To suffer for. See Abie.
Obediencer: Obedient, subject. Test. L. 3. Bound upon the obedience due to a Superiour.
Obeisance: Obedience. Tr. L. 3. 479. Fr. Obeissance. MS. Sp. reads it, Obeisance.
Obeisin: To obe; To make obeisance. CL. 738.
Obeising, Obeissing: Obedience; Obeying. RR. 3380.
Obedient, humble. Di. 341.
Obombrid: Overshadowed. Bal. Lad. 102.
Observances: Observations. Fr. 2845.
Observe: To countenance, overlook. No. 3140.
Obstant. See Non-obstant.
Occasion: Opportunity. Words of occasion; Words of reproach used upon occasion. RL. 279.
Occian: The Ocean.
Occident: The West.
Occifer: A slayer, a murderer. La. 306. MS. Ch. reads it, Oo a tazir. H. 1. O Atazir. al. Occifer. al. occitaser.
Occupier: A possessor, an owner, a proprietor. p. 496, b.
Ocy, Ocy, CN. 124, 127, 125. The Nightingale's Note, alluding to the Lat. Occidere, To kill, to perish.
Oerthrow: Overthrown, overwhelmed. Ch. Dr. 1151.
Offendid: Hurt. ProL. 2396.
Offensoun: Offence. That never yet ne felt offensoun Of ra- four ne of shere; That was never shaved, nor cut. ProL. 2418.
Offertorie: An Anthem sung in the time of Offering. ProL. 712. See Fr. Gl.
Offrende: Offerings. Mo. 2430. Fr. Offrande.
Offrin: To offer.
Ofter: Oftener.
Ofstiches: Oftentimes.
Oilvete, for Olive, Magd. 319.
Olibane, RL. 214. Olibannum, Frankincense.
Olifantes: Elephants. Boeth.
Olivetes, Olivetis: Olive-trees, RR. 1314, 1381. Fr. Oli- vier, an olive-tree.
Omer: The Poet Homer. Tr. L. 1. 46. Fa. L. 3. 376.
On: One. ProL. 2336.
Onbide: To abide, to continue. Test. L. 3.
Onde, RR. 148. Breath. Allo, Fury. Sp.
Ondo: Undone. PT. 341.
One: Alone. WB. 66. I mine one, Ch. Dr. 1019. I my self. One and one, Ch. Dr. 1785. One by one.
Onched, Onhed: Unity. Test.
Onerous: Burthensom, chargeable. RR. 5633. Fr. Oner- teux.
Ones, Onis, Onys: Once.
Onid: Made one, united. Fr. 704. Oning: Uniting.
Onily: Only.
Oo, Oon, One. Were at oon: Were united, agreed. We ben wt oon, RR. 5817. We are agreed. Thei sel at one, Tr. L. 3. 566. They agreed. Ewir in oon; Continu- ally. ProL. 1773. MS. Ch. reads it, Thei wepten everiche ooe. Also, A Proclamation, an O Yes. ProL. 2535.

Oofe: An host.
Opie: Opium. ProL. 1474.
Opinable: Ambiguous, disputable, apt to create different opinions. RL. 62.
Optubede, WB. 645. Barcheeded.
Opposuite: Opposite.
Oppress: To ravish. Fr. 2939, 2960, 2965. To suppress. Tr. L. 5. 398. where Ca. hath it, forgett oure oppresse, i. e. forget the grief which oppresseth us. Oppressoun: A Rape, ravishment. Luc. 189.
Or: Before, ere; Or death, Fr. 1540. Before death; or (as MS. Ch.) till death. Instead of Or, Before, is generally printed Er in this Edition. Also, Over.
Oratory, ProL. 1907. Oratore, Cr. 120. Oratoire, lb. 8. A Temple, a private Chappel, or any place wholly dedi- cated to Divine Worship, particularly to Prayer.
Ordain: To order, dispose. RR. 7069.
Ordal, Tr. L. 3. 1048. Ordeal, a kind of Purgation used in the Saxon times, and continued to the time of Henry the Third, of which there were Two sorts; one by Fire which Emma, the Mother of Edward the Confessor un- derwent, by passing over hot burning Culvers of Iron bare-foot; the other by Water. Concerning the meth- ods used in both, see Kilian. in Quæter-ogderl, and Spelm. and Somn. where the Forms are described at large. As to the Etymology of the Word, see Hick. Dist. Epist. p. 149.
Orde, Cl. 66. A point. Sp. Beginning. Orde and end, Mo. 746. Beginning and ending. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 50, 115.
Orderly: Orderly, in good order. Boeth.
Ordered, Orderii, [not Ordent, as it is printed, Ch. Dr. 1096.] Ordred: Ordained, in Holy orders.
Orders four, ProL. 210. The four Orders of Fryers, which were these, 1. Fryers Minors, or Gray Fryers, Franciscans. 2. Fryers Preachers, or Black Fryers, Dominicans. 3. Fryers Carmelites, or White Fryers. 4. Fry- ers Augustines. Sp.
Ordinable: Capable of being ordered. Test. L. 2.
Ordinaunce: Order, disposition, direction; Provision. Fr. 2449. Aray in ordinance, lb. 1982. Set in order.
Ordour, for Ordure (as in MS. Ch.) p. 209. a. l. pen.
Ore, Gan. 277, 461. By Christis ore. MS. Ch. reads Goddis ore, lb. 316, 637. It seems to have been a common Oath, By Ch—s or G—s Ore, or Nore, V.
Orwell, ProL. 279. A Sea-port in Essex. Sk.
Orfrays, RR. 562, 869. "(Aurifrisum) Frizled cloth of Gold, made and used in England, both before and since the Conquest, worn both by the Clergy, and the Kings themselves, as may appear out of Marb. Paris, where he speaks of the Ornaments sent by the Abbots of England to the Pope; and also by a Record in the Tower, where the King commands the Templars to deliver such Jewels, Garments and Ornaments as they had of his in keeping, among which he names "Dalmaticum velatum de Orefreis, that is, a Damask Garment guarded with Orfraies. Sp. Of old the Jackets or Coat Armors of the King's Guard were also termed Orfraies, because they were covered with Goldsmith's work. Blo.
Orfrei, [not or frei] Cr. 163. Overspread. See Pret.
Orient: The East.
Origines upon the Maudelaine, LW. 428. The Lamenta- tion of Mary Magdalen, taken out of Origen. See the Title of that Poem. p. 520.
Orison, Orisoun: A prayer. Fr. Oraison.
Orison: The Horizon.
Orloge, as Horologe.
Orphelyn: An orphan. Boeth. Fr. Orphelin.
Orpiment: A lost yellow kind of Arsenick, like Brimstone, found very deep in the earth, commonly taken for Ratsbane. Blo. There are several Medicines Chymically prepared out of it.
Orwhelid: Overwhelmed, overcast. Cr. 401.
Ofrye: A lodging. Mo. 1110. See Eitru.
Other, Othir, Outier, Outbir: Or; Either; Other. Othir- gate: Otherwise. RR. 2156.
Otherwised, p. 491, a. f. Falling out contrary to expecta- tion.
Ouche: A kind of Collar of Gold, or such like orna- ment, which Women did wear about their Necks: It is mentioned An. 24. H. 8. c. 13. and it is sometimes used used for a Bos or Button of Gold. Blo. Also, A wedge of gold. Sp. Sometimes it is taken for a Socket, where in precious Stones are set.

Over, Ovir : Upper, uppermost. In Composition it denotes Excess. Ovirmuch ; Too much. Ovirmerily ; Too merrily. CL. 384, 406.

Overcome. See Ovircome.

Overist, Prol. 292. Uppermost. MS. Ch. reads it, His over courtsey, i. e. His upper coat.

Overkerueith : Divideth, cutteth. Afr.

Overleide : f. Imposed upon. Mo. 23. MS. Ch. Overlad, which Lidg. uses for Overpowered. Fall of Princes. L. 2. Ch. 7. al. Overledde, Led away, abused. See Ovirlede.

Overleth : Lay'd over, covered. Test. L. 3.

Overlippe : The upper lip. Prol. 133.

Overlowe : Too low. Boeth.

Overte : Open. Fa. L. 2. 210. Fr. Ouvert, sem. Ouvette.

Overthinketh, p. 481, a. l. p. n. f. Forthinketh : Grieveth. See Forhinke.

Overthrowing, f. leg. Overthrowin, p. 364, b. l. 51. Headlong ; Praceps.

Overthwart : Cross-ways, across. Prol. 1993. Over against. Tr. L. 3. 686. Squinting. Dr. Ch. 863. Upside down. Test. L. 3.

Overtimeliche : Unseasonable ; Importunus, p. 359, a.

Oughe : Oh ! A Note of Admiration ; Papa, p. 359, a.

Ought : Owed. Cl. 10. It behoves. No. 14. Any. Ought where : Any where.

Ovir. See Over.

Ovircome : Come or passed over. Tr. L. 4. 1069. Covered over. Magd. 129.

Ovirgo, RR. 3784. Ovirgone, Tr. L. 1. 847. To go or pass over, to pass away ; To overcome, to overpower. RR. 6821.

Ovirlede : To overload, oppress. Hyper. 194.

Ovirlive : To outlive. WB. 1260.

Ovirspradde, Tr. L. 2. 769. Ovirsprat, Ib. 767. Over-spread.

Ovirthwart, as Overthwart.

Ounding : Waving. See Paling.

Oures, Bl. Kn. 422. It should be lesingoures, in one word.

Outcast : Vile, mean, base : Abiectus, Boeth.

Outforthe : Outwardly. Test.

Outin : Out. Prol. 454. It is out, or out, in all the MSS. and Editions which I have consulted : Some read it, out of alle charite ; others, all out of charite.

Outrage : Hurt : Affront ; Excess ; Luxury. Also, Outragious, excessive, extravagant. Bal. 555.

Outraie, Outrayen : To grow outrageous, to rave. Fr. 1663. Fr. Omitr. Also, To degenerate, p. 378, a. To overcome. Lidg.

Outrede : To give better advice. Prol. 2451.

Outren : To out-run. Prol. 2451.

Outstraught : Stretched out. RR. 1515.

Out-take : Except. RR. 948.

Outwaiepoynge : Wandring, straying. p. 488, a.

Outmaile : An outcast, the refuse, off-scourings. Cr. 129. See. Outweal. See Gl. V. in Wale.

Outwongen : Wrung or squeezed out. Test. L. 3.

Owande : Owing. p. 492, a.

Owe, Mo. 2485. Owin, Fl. 23. Ought ; To own.

Oweth, RL. 5. Owethe, p. 501, a. Ought.

Owber : Any where. Prol. 655.

Owndid, Tr. L. 4. 736. A Corruption in transcribing for Undaunt or Undee, Waving, flowing. Kyn. See Owndie. MS. Sp. hath it, her ornyd heere, i. e. her hair which was adorned, or dressed.

Owndie, Fa. L. 3. 296. Waving ; from the Fr. Ondoyer, To wave to and fro, or Ondé, Waving.

Owtbir. See Other.

Oxenford, Oxenforth : Oxford. The Clerk of Oxenford : The Oxford-Scholar.

Oyse, Fa. L. 3. 838. Sk. will have it to be the River Isis, by Oxford, which was commonly called Onse : But there are other Rivers of that name, particularly the Oyse in Picardy, which falls into the Seine, not many leagues from Paris.

P.

Pas : To pass ; A pace or step. Tr. L. 3. 282. Instead of gone or paas, Ca. hath, go a paas ; Sur a step, which is better. Paas two ; The space of two paces. CMV. 121.

Pace : To pass, go, proceed : To surpass.

Paie : Content, satisfaction. RR. 5938. Also, To content, satisfy. Ib. 3599. Paid : Contented, satisfied. Ch. Dr. 426.

Paine : Endeavour. Fr. 2276. Fr. Peine. Also, To endeavour.

Paine de malne, No. 3234. Whitebread. Sp. See Sk.

Painenis, as Pynims.

Paire : Damage, hurt. RR. 6103. To impair.

Palafins, RR. 6862. Ladies palafins ; i. e. dies of Honour attending a Court. Perhaps it should be read Palatines.

Palastre, Bal. Lad. 69. Put in palastre : Brought to a combat, or dispute ; from the Lat. Palestra, The place where Games or Exercises were performed.

Palathy, Prol. 65. It seems (says Sk.) to be some Country in Asia, perhaps Palestine ; Palathia in Anatolia. Sp.

Palays, as Paleis.

Pale, Fa. L. 3. 750. A spangle. Sk. A Robe of State. Sp.

Paleis : A Palace. Also, a Fortification, a fortified place ; Vallum, Boeth.

Palethe : Maketh pale. Boeth. L. 2.

Paleys, as Paleis.

Paling, p. 198, a. seems to be an ornament used upon Clothes, as Lace, &c. layd on lengthwise, as Barring, that layd on cross-ways, and Ounding, that layd on waving. They are all Terms used in Heraldry in the like sense.

Pall, Mo. 2046. A Robe belonging properly to Archbishops, and must be had new for every Archbishop from Rome, at a dear rate. By their superstitious order it should be made of the Wool of those two Lambs, which being on St. Agnes's day offered upon the High Altar in St. Peter's Church, are after the hallowing of them committed to the Subdeacons of that Church, and kept by them in a pasture appointed. The whole Garment is not made of that Wool, but only that List, or Plate of it, which falls down before and behind, and compasses the Neck about. Com. It is described more at large in Fr. Gl. in Pallium.

Palladion : The Image of Pallas at Troy. Tr. L. 1. 161.

Palleis : A Palace.

Pallid : Grown pale with age. No. 2610.

Palmerie, Mo. 361. Palmyra, a City of Syria, on the borders of Arabia Deserta, supposed by some to be Tadmor in the Wilderness, built by King Solomon. It is famous for having been the Seat of the Empire of Zenobia.

Palmer, Prol. 13. Pilgrims that visited holy places ; so called from a Staff or Boughs of Palm they were wont to carry, especially such as had visited the Holy places at Jerusalem. Fr. Gl. " A Pilgrim and a Palmer differed thus ; a Pilgrim had some dwelling place, a Palmer had none ; the Pilgrim travelled to some certain place, the Palmer to all, and not to any one in particular ; the Pilgrim must go at his own charge, the Palmer must profess wilfull poverty ; the Pilgrim might give over his profession, the Palmer must be constant. Blo.

Palomown : Palamon. Bl. Kn. 369.

Palse : The Palsy. Test.

Pampired : Pamper'd up. CL. 177.

Pan : The Crown of the head. Mo. 64.

Panier, Pantir, RL. 226. A sort of net. Fr. Pantiere.

Paniers, RR. 1621. Nets. Panier : A Pitfall. Sp.

Panymes, as Paynims.

Papelarde, Fr. A Hypocrite, a false Zealot. RR. 7233.

Papelardie : Hypocrisy, dissimulation. Ib. 415, 6796.

Papere : Pepper. No. 783.

Par : For. Par company ; For company. MR. 731. By. Par caas ; By chance.

Parablis : Parables ; The Proverbs of Solomon. RR. 6530.

Parage : Birth, parentage. WB. 250. It properly signifies

- fies High birth; whence Disparage, To lessen one's birth, &c. But it is used indifferently; for Lidgate hath Low parage, as well as High parage. Fall of Princes, L. 1. C. 13. L. 2. C. 16. See Gl. V.
- Paraments*: Ornaments, rich furniture; Robes of State. Di. 181. Fr. Paréments.
- Paramour*: A Lover; A Gallant, or Mistress.
- Paraventure*, Peraunter, Dr. Ch. 556. Perhaps, peradventure. Where it is printed paradventure, peradventure, peravinture, it is generally to be read peraventure, as it is commonly written in the MSS.
- Parcaas*. See Par and Cads.
- Parca* sustrin thre, Tr. L. 5. 3. The three Sisters, called Parca, Fates or Destinies.
- Parchemine*, Fr. Parchment; Paper. Boeth.
- Parcell*: A parcel, a part; In part, partly.
- Parde* (Fr. Par Dieu) By God. It is most commonly used (as other Oaths generally are) as merely Expletive. MS Sp. hath By God, instead of it in Tr. L. 2. 183. and they are indifferently used in other places in different Copys and MSS.
- Pardieux*, Tr. L. 2. 759. By the Gods: But it is Parde in MS. Sp. and Ca. hath pardieux, Ib. 1319.
- Pardonere*: One that sells Pardons, or Indulgences.
- Perdurable*: Everlasting. See Perdurable.
- Parel*, Ber. 2325. The Furniture, or Rigging of Ships. Fr. Apparax.
- Parentele*: Kindred. p. 209, a.
- Parentyne*: Parentage; Good birth. Ber. 109.
- Parfaie*, Parfay, Parfei: By my faith. RR. 6228.
- Paril*: Peril, danger. CMV. 108.
- Parishens*, (so it should be read in Prolog. 484. according to the general current of the MSS) Parishioners. It often occurs in PP. Some printed Editions read it as it is in this.
- Parlirs*: Parlours. AL. 162.
- Parodye*: So it is in Tr. L. 5. 1547. in MS. Sp. and the old Editions instead of jeopardie. It is Parady in Lidg. Fall of Princes. L. 1. C. 4.
- Till their Parady say to them checkmate.
- It seems to mean Fate, Destiny.
- Parrill*: Apparel. WB. 561.
- Partable*; Partaking; A partaker, an accomplice.
- Partien*, Partin: To partake, to share. LW. 465.
- Participant*: Partaking. Cr. 289.
- Partie*, Fr. A part. Test. L. 2. See Party.
- Partineris*: Partners. Ber. 2441.
- Partise*: Parts. In some partise: In some part, degree, or measure. BD. 746.
- Partivere*, RR. 4796. Sk. takes it to be a Corruption of Parcuere, Fr. Par coeur, By heart, which is confirmed by the next Verse, Mine herte, &c. and Ib. 4800. That all by herte, &c. which is wrong printed, all mine herte.
- Partiles*: Without a share; Void of; Expers, p. 388, b.
- Party*: A part; Partly; side, course. p. 153, a. In partie, RR. 5338. In part. Fr. En parti.
- Parvis*, Fr. Contracted from Paradis. Thesaurus, Tomes en q. memm. Helych. Locus porticus & deambulatoris circumdatus; A Portico, or Court, before a Church. Fr. Gl. in Paradis. The place before the Church of Notre dame at Paris, called Parvis, RR. 7158. was anciently called Paradis. Men. Fr. in Parvis. Spelm. says in Parva, &c. that our Lawyers used formerly to walk in such a place to meet their Clients, and not for Law-Exercises, as Blo. and others write; being perhaps led into that mistake by that passage, Prolog. 312. and others, considering the Context more than the Sense of the word Pervise, explain it a Barr.
- Passid*: Surpassed, excelled, Prolog. 450. A passing man; An extraordinary person. No. 625.
- Patre*, RR. 6794. Patrin, Ib. 7195. To pray, to say a Pater noster.
- Pavade*: A dagger. MR. 852.
- Paumis*: The palms of the hands. Tr. L. 3. 1120.
- Paufacion*: A pause; Rest. Bal. Lad. 61.
- Pax*, p. 197, b. It was an ancient Custom at the celebration of Mass, that when the Priest pronounced these words, Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum, i. e. The peace of the Lord be always with you, both Clergy and People kissed one another, which was called Osculum Pacis, The Kiss of Peace: But now that Custom being abrogated, the Deacons, or Subdeacons, at the pronouncing of those words, present to the Clergy and People standing, a certain Image to be kissed, which is called the Pax. See Fr. Gl. in Osculum Pacis.
- Pay*: Satisfaction, content. RR. 1721. AL. 255. PT. 582. See Apay.
- Paynims*: Pagans, Heathens.
- Payfaunce*: Pausing, or stopping. Ch. Dr. 1673.
- Paytrell*: The Breastplate of a Horse-Furniture. No. 575. Fr. Poitral, from the Lat. Pectorale.
- Pees*, Pees: Peace.
- Pecis*: Pieces.
- Peere*, as Perre.
- Peice*, Peisen, Peysen: To poize, to weigh. Fr. Peser.
- Peire*: To impair, disparage; from the Lat. Pejorare. Yet [l. 1. i. e. It] peirish not your worship nor your fame; It is no disparagement to your honour, nor reputation. BD. 228.
- Peitrell*, as Paytrell.
- Pell*, Fa. L. 3. 220. A House, a cell. Sp. and Sk. f. A Palace.
- Pellit*: A pellet, a bullet, a ball. Fa. L. 3. 553.
- Pelour*, Ber. 3194. Pelure, Test. L. 2. Furr.
- Penaunce*: Penance; Repentance.
- Pendaunts*: Robes hanging down. Mo. 2879.
- Pende*, Mo. 2590. To pen or shut up. Com. f. Hang up; as Pent, Ib. 2897. Hang down. Fr. Pendre.
- Pene*, CCr. 17. A pin. The countre of Pene; The Country of the Peni, or the Carthaginians. p. 375, b.
- Penible*: Painfull; Full of aches and pains. Fr. 582.
- Penitencer*, p. 211, b. It seems there to signify in general, A Confessor, a Priest that enjoyes Penance; but it signifies properly a Dignitary in Cathedral Churches, who has power to absolve in Cases reserved to the Bishop.
- Penitens*: Penance. p. 206, b.
- Pennir*: A pen, a pencil. Sq. 1395.
- Pens*: Pence; Money.
- Pensell*, RR. 6280. A Dim. of Penon, A Pendant.
- Pensifede*: Pensiveness, thoughtfulness. Bl. Kn. 102.
- Pensit*, AL. 62. The Paunsie, a Plant; Viola tricolor. Fr. Pensée.
- Pent*. See Pende.
- Peplishe appetite*, Tr. L. 4. 1677. A vulgar, or mean, taste or desire.
- Peraventure*, Tr. L. 1. 669. The Verse is better read in MS. Sp. thus;
- And yet peraventure can I redin the.
- See Paraventure.
- Peraunter*. See Paraventure.
- Percase*, as Parcaas. See Par.
- Perce*: To pierce. Percedde, Percid: Pierced.
- Perce*: Persia. Perciens: Persians. Mo. 362.
- Percel*: A part, a parcel; Partly, in part. Bl. Kn. 225.
- Percever*: To persevere, continue.
- Perchemen*, Ber. 788. for Prechement, V.
- Perchemene*, Perchemine: Parchment.
- Perde*, Fa. L. 2. 332. as Parde.
- Perdurable*: Very durable, perpetual; Everlasting, eternal; Disturnus, perpetuus, Boeth. Perdurabilite: A long duration; Immortality.
- Pere*: A Peer; A match, a fellow, an equal. Sq. 697. To appear. CL. 55. Perelesse: Matchless. Bl. Kn. 347.
- Peregal*: Equal. Tr. L. 5. 840.
- Peregrine*: Strange. Sq. 448.
- Perfelliche*: Perfectly. Boeth.
- Perfte*: Perfect.
- Perie*, Prolog. 2938. Perrie, MS. Ch. Precious Stones, Jewells. Fr. Pierrieres.
- Perienet*: A young Pear-tree. Sk.
- Permegal*: An equal. Mo. 2070.
- Permutacion*: A change. Magd. 60.
- Pernafo*: Mount Parnassus.
- Perpetualtie*: Perpetuity; Perpetual duration. Test.
- Perre*, Perrey: Precious Stones. In gold and perrey wright, Di. 276. Covered with Gold and Jewels; unless it should be rather read perrerie, instead of perrey wright. See Perie.
- Perfaunt*: Piercing. RR. 2809. Fr. Perçant.
- Perse*, Prolog. 441. Sky-colour. Sp. Fr. Pers, Blewish-gray. See Fr. Gl. in Persia.
- Perfelle*, as Percel.

Perfeyte: Perceived. Ber. 3651.
Personer, p. 492, b. A Parson; one possessed of Ecclesiastical preferment, Persona, personator. Lat. Barb.
Perie, p. 511, a: 516, b. f. Corrupted for pure, or perfitte.
Perteloie: A fictitious name of a Hen in the Tale of the Nonne's Priest. See Gl. V.
Pertinacie: Stiffness, stubbornness, obstinacy. Test. L. 2.
Perturb, Perturbin: To disturb, to trouble, to vex. Perturb: Disturbing, vexation.
Pervinke: A periwinkle. RR. 903.
Pervise, Prol. 312. See Parvis.
Pery: A pear-tree.
Pese: Peace. RR. 4703. Also, To appease.
Pesen: Pitch. Cl. 69.
Pesible: Peaceable, calm, easy, quiet. RR. 7413. Fr. Paisible.
Pete: Pity. Ber. 1492.
Petous: Pitifull, miserable, wretched. Petously. See Pitously: So MS. Sp. hath it, Tr. L. 4. 1248.
Peynia: Pains. Peynous: Painfull. Peynous ordinance; Orders enforced with great penalties. Ber. 1875.
Phane: A fane, or vane, a weathercock.
Phetoneffis, Fa. L. 3. 171. for Pythoneffis; from the Lat. Pythionissa, A woman possessed with a Python, or prophesying spirit.
Phi, RR. 5739. The Poet plays upon the first syllable of Phisicke, and Phiscien, both beginning with Phi, a Note of Abhorrence; and from thence pleasantly infers the folly of trusting in them.
Pie: A map-pye; A prating, tattling gossip. Tr. L. 3. 528. Fa. L. 2. 195.
Piment, as Piment.
Pierre, as Perre.
Piggelnye: A word of fondness, as my duck, my honey. RR. 257. From the AS. Piga, Puellula, A little maid. Sk.
Pight: Struck; Peaked; Picked. Sq. 438. Pitched his habitation, dwelt. No. 2979. Threw. Pight him on the pomell of his hede, Prol. 2691. Pitched, or threw him on the crown of his head. Undir pight; Supported, bore or born up. He dronk, and well his girdle undir pight; He stuffed himself with Liquor so, as to fill up his girdle. La. 790.
Pik, Pike: To pitch, or rather To pitch upon; To pick out. Tr. L. 2. 1274. But MS. Ch. instead of pik reads steke, i. e. stick. Also, To peep. Tr. L. 3. 60. To pick; To take away by stealth. Phyl. 74.
Pikis: Prickles, sharp points, or pikes. Pikis on ther shone, Mo. 2870. Shoes with long sharp Toes turning upwards, peaked like Scates; which in another place are called Pikid shoes.
Pilche, Bal. 166. A Furr-gown. AS. Pylce. See Gl. V.
Pilere: A pillar. Dr. Ch. 739.
Pilgrim. See Palmer.
Pilid: Peeled; Made bald. A pilid [al. pelid] berde; A thin beard. Prol. 629. Fr. Piler, To make bald.
Pill: To pillage, to plunder. Fr. 98. Di. 337. Fr. Piller.
Pillid skull: A bald pate. MR. 1198. See Pilid.
Pillir: A Pillar; Fit for making Pillars or Columns of. AF. 177. Pilliris: Pillars. Bal. 601.
Pilloure, Mo. 2046. A Pillor is one of the Ensigns, or Marks, which is usually carried before Cardinals, to signify, that they forsooth are Pillars of the Church. Com. It rather signifies Furred robes, as Pelour and Pelure, V.
Pillours: Pillagers, plunderers. Prol. 1009. See Pill.
Piment, MR. 270. RR. 602. A Drink made of wine, honey, and spices. See Boeth. p. 371, a. Thei me could not medell the yeste of Bacchus to the clere honie, that is to saine, they could make ne piment or clarre; i. e. They could not mix wine with clarified honey, and therefore could not make Piment, or clarified wine.
Pinaunt: A Starveling, that pines away for hunger. Mo. 46. But it should rather be there read penaunt (as MS. Ch. H. 1. Ca. and Py.) One that doth penance.
Pinchin, Prol. 328. To jeer, or banter. Fr. Pincer.
Pinde, Mo. 2421. Tormented, plagued, afflicted, put to pain; Pined away, starved.
Pine, Mo. 1174. Pinin, RR. 3511. To put to pain, to torment, to put to the torture. Pine: Pain.
Pipe with an yvelese, p. 516, a. A Proverbial Expression of the same signification as Blow the bukis borne, MR. 297. See Bukis borne. Lilg. expresses the same by Blowe in an borne, and pipe in a rede. Story of Thebes, Part. II.

Pirate: Perry. CCr. 30.
Pire: To peer about.
Pirrie, Mo. 2099. See Perie.
Piscine, Bal. Lad. 127. A pond, a fish-pool. See Prabaise.
Pisill, Pistle, Fr. 2175. An epistle. Rownid a pisill; Whispered a secret. WB. 1021.
Pitance, Pitence, Fr. Pitance, A Monk's Mefs, Commons, or Allowance for a Meal.
Pith: Vigour. WB. 475.
Pitously: Pitifully.
Plages, p. 440, b. Plagis: Climates, Regions. Lat. Plaga. Plagis of the North, La. 544. The Regions of the North; if not rather to be read (as in MS. Ch.) The people of the north.
Plaie, as Play.
Plaine: To explain, declare. Tr. L. 5. 1229. To complain. Also, Perfect; Full. Tr. L. 5. 1817. Pleyne, MS. Sp. Fr. Plein, Full. In No. 2567. it is put for Playing, V.
Plainliche: Plainly. Tr. L. 2. 272.
Plaintis: Complaints.
Plained: Pleated, folded. Many plained: Manifest. Test. p. 488, b.
Plat, Fr. Flat, plain. He goth forth plat, Mo. 1952. He goes forth directly, without any stay, or stop. Rather cause of plat than edge, Tr. L. 4. 927. Rather cause of ease than grief. Sp. It is flat in MS. Sp. and Ca.
Platis: Plates of Armour. Prol. 2123.
Play, Plays, Playin: To take ones pleasure; To divert one's self. Playe a pilgrimage, No. 2741, 2742. [pleye, MS. Ch. H. 1. Ca. 1, 2. and Py. 1. f. ply] Go on pilgrimage. Playing, RR. 598. Diversion, pleasure; Jesting, a jest. In playe, Fr. 2051. In jest.
Ple: A Plea, a dispute, debate. AF. 485. Plees: Pleas, Pleadings, Law Suits, Tryals at Law. AF. 101.
Pleasant: Pleasing. p. 157, b.
Pleide: Played.
Pleinte: Complaint.
Plenere: Full, perfect, compleat. Hyp. 240. Fr. Pleni-ere, fem.
Plentivous, Plentuous: Plenteous, plentiful. Ber. 764. Boeth.
Plefaunce: Pleasure; Pleasantness.
Plesing, p. 206, b. l. 33. The place is scarce intelligible as it is printed. MS. Ch. reads it thus — chirche. And playnly and generally, &c.
Plete: To implead, to sue at Law. Tr. L. 2. 1468. Ber. 3104.
Pley, as Play.
Pleyne, Pleyin: To complain.
Plight, (from Pluck) Plucked. RR. 1745. Tr. L. 2. 1120. Pulled. La. 15.
Plight my troth: Plighted my troth. Tr. L. 4. 1610.
Plite: To plait, to fold up. To sowe and plite; To seal and fold. Tr. L. 2. 1204. See Sowe.
Plites: Plaits, foldings. Test.
Pluid: Turned in her mind, or thoughts. Tr. L. 2. 697.
Plumtuons, p. 360, b. for Plentuous, V. Lat. Fertilis.
Plungi: Rainy, bringing or causing rain; Imbriser, p. 374, b.
Point, Pointe: To appoint. Bal. 518. A point. In good point; In good case, or condition. Prol. 200. At the point to brest, Tr. L. 4. 1638. In point for to brest, RR. 3186. Ready to burst. See Magd. 189. And here a point, No. 1501. Here I conclude, make a full stop. That cannot set his pointis double; That hath not two strings to his bow. BD. 524.
Pointell, Pointell: A Pencil, a writing pen; Stylus, Boeth. p. 359.
Pointen: To prick with a point. RR. 1058.
Point devise, RR. 1215. The utmost exactness. Fr. A points devisez; i. e. Secundum puncta multo cum studio designata. Sk.
Poisye mater: Poetical Compositions. p. 359, a.
Polive: A pulley. Sq. 204.
Poll: The head. Ber. 2525.

x. In the MS translation of the N. T. supposed to be Wicliff's in the Harleian library, John V. 2. is thus translated: and in israhelm is a waschyng place: pat hap syus porchis in Ebreu is named Bethsayday; where the translator not knowing what to make of βηθαίμα πύλαις (for he translates from the Vulg. Lat. and seems never so much as to have looked upon the greek text) renders it in general terms, a waschyng place

Pomelles of gold : Balls of gold. AL. 479.
Pomelly grey, Prol. 618. Pomily grise : Dapple-grey. Fr.
Gris pommelé.
Pomill : The pommel of a saddle, the hilt of a sword;
 Any ball or round thing; The head, or top of the head. Prol. 2691.
Pompery, Ber. 1934. f. Pompous appearance, or plausible pretension.
Popelere : A poplar-tree.
Popelat : A puppet, or young wench. Sk.
Popere, MR. 823. A bodkin. Sp. and Sk.
Popet : A puppet. No. 3210.
Popingay : A parrot. Sq. 1840. See Sk. on Poppinjay.
Popped : Dressed up like a puppet. Ne popped here, RR.
 1019. Nor hair over-nicely dressed. See Sk.
Poraille, Porayle : Poor, mean people. Prol. 247.
Porismes (so it should be read, p. 381, b. l. 46. as well as l. 61.) Corollaries, Theorems deduced from Propositions demonstrated before. Gr. Πορισματα.
Portatife : Portable. Afr.
Porte : Carriage, behaviour. Make of port : Affable, complaisant. Prol. 69. Stout of port : Haughty, dis-
 dainfull. RR. 4015.
Portes : Parts. Boeth.
Portose, No. 2643. A kind of Service-Book, called Por-tress by Spenser, Portoos by Blo. who says it was an ancient name for a Breviary. Sommer in his Rom.
Ports and Forts, p. 6. mentions a Legacy left to Rich-borough Chappel of one Portuys printed, with a Mas-book, &c. See Fr. Gl. in Portiforium.
Portraie, Prol. 96. Portrey : To paint, to draw a picture.
Portraitour : A painter of Portraits.
Portrayed, for Portrayed, RR. 140. See Portraie.
Portrid : Portrayed. Mo. 2077.
Pose, Mo. 1639. A Rheum, or humour, which falls into the nose, stopping the nostrils, and hindering the voice.
Blo. The same with Catarre. Also, To suppose. Tr.
L. 3. 572.
Poshid, RR. 4625. Possid, Ib. 4479. Pushed, thrust, tof-
 sed. Fr. Pousser, To push.
Possid, as Poshid.
Posse : Power. Perhaps contracted from the Lat. Pote-stas. Is full of grete posse, RR. 2095. Hath an extraordinary vertue in it. See Ib. 6484, 6533, 6957, 7679.
Postome : An impostume. p. 376, b. See Boche.
Potent : A crutch. RR. 368, 7417. Fr. Potence.
Potestate, Fr. 753. The chief Magistrate, or Judge of a Place. It. Podestà, from the Lat. Potestas, which is used in the same sense, Juv. Sat. X.
*An Fidenarum Gablorumq; esse potestas
 Et de mensurâ jus dicere.*
Pothegwares, Potighares : Apothecaries.
Powder marchant, Prol. 383. Powders (says Sp.) where of Gingerbread is made. Sk. disapproves this Explication, but gives none of his own.
Poudre, Fr. Dust, powder. Fa. L. 2. 28.
Pover, Povir : Poor. Poverly : Poorly.
Pouert, Poverie : Poverty. Also, Poor. Fr. 1262. if not rather to be read (as in MS. Ch.) Povre, there and Ib.
 1925. Glad poverie; Poverty with content. See a noble Description of it in Lidg. Fall of Princes. L. 1.
C. 1.
Poulee : The pulse. Tr. L. 3. 1120.
Poulie windows, MR. 210. The Windows of St. Paul's
 Church, London. See Decapla.
Pounced : Cut, punched. See Gl. V.
Pounded : Made a popping, or hooping noise with a horn.
Mo. 1514.
Powde : Poured. RR. 1148.
Poure : To pore upon. RR. 1640. Tr. L. 2. 1708.
Powse : A purse.
Poursue : To pursue.
Powdiring : Embroidery, or rather Ermine-spots. AL.
 530.
Poyse : Poetry. Ber. 1930.
Praise : To praise, value.
Praktike : Practice, customs, usage. WB. 187.
Preasin on : To press forward. Tr. L. 5. 1011.
Prece, Sc. 222. Praise; A press, a crowd. Put in prece, prees or prese; To set ones self forward; To endeavour, attempt, undertake. AF. 602.

Precelling : Pre-eminence, advantage. Fr. RL. 31.
Preceen, perhaps for Perceen : To pierce, penetrate. Boeth.
L. 2.
Prechment, Fr. Preaching, a Sermon. Ber. 531.
Precious : Precise, over-nice. WB. 148. Fr. Precieux.
Predestine : Predelination. Tr. L. 4. 966.
Predication : Preaching, a Sermon.
Prees, Preise, Ch. Dr. 267. A press, a crowd. See Prece.
Prese : A proof.
Presett : The chief Magistrate of a Place.
Preide : Prayed, entreated.
Preise. See Praise and Prece. Is not to prise; Is of no value. RR. 4476.
Prentise : An apprentice. No. 2808. These three Verses,
No. 2807, 2808, and 2809. are thus in MS. Ch.
*Thee morwen com, and thee Marchaunt ridyht
 To Flandris wardes, his prentys well him gilyht
 Unill he come to Bruggis merily.*
In RR. 687. A prentise, should be read aprentise in one word, i. e. Apprentices, novices, learners. Were not aprentise; Were not to learn.
Prentishode : Apprenticeship.
Prese, Tr. L. 4. 1473. To praise. Also, A press, a crowd; Price, value, esteem; To press. Prese to bond,
RR. 4194. To come near. See Prece.
Presence, for Prescience, Test. L. 3.
Present : Presence. In present; Just then. RR. 1191. In Ispis present; In the presence of Ispis. Ber. 2062.
Presentarie : Present; Presentarium, p. 403, b.
Presin : To press, to crowd.
Prest : Ready. Tr. L. 2. 785. Fr. Prest.
Preterit, Preterite : Past. RR. 5011. Preterities : Times past. p. 402, 4.
Preve : To prove; Proof. Tr. L. 1. 470; L. 3. 1004. Preveit, for Repreveit, p. 154, a. l. 68.
Price, for Prise, Phyl. 141. Premium, p. 390, a.
Prick : A point. p. 372, b. A sting. p. 337, b. Fa. L. 2.
 399. To afflict, torment. Fr. 2059. To ride hard. RR.
 2314. Pricking : Hard riding. Prol. 191.
Prie : To pray, to entreat. Fr. Prier.
Prikasoure, Prol. 189. A hard rider. Sk.
Prikid : Rode hard.
Prill and poincten, RR. 1058. Gore and strike. q. d. Prickle and pointen. Sk.
Prime, Tr. L. 2. 1095. "Our Ancestors (says Kyn.) divided
 "their morning Devotions into two spaces, 1st. From Six
 "to Nine in the morning, which was called Spatium
 "Orationum primarum. 2. From Nine to Twelve, which "was called Spatium Orationum Nonarum. And hence we "have our word Noon. Prime large, Sq. 380. Late in the morning, towards nine a clock. At prime temps, RR.
 3373. The first time, at first. Of Ver the prime, Tr.
L. 1. 157. The beginning, or perfection, of the spring.
At prime face, Tr. L. 3. 921. p. 485, b. At first view, at first sight. Prime temps, RR. 4747. Spring. Fr.
Printemps.
Princes : A Princess. Bal. 589.
Printishode : Apprenticeship. MR. 1292.
Pris, Prise : Praise. Tr. L. 2. 181, 376.
Prise : Price; Value, esteem. In prise upborn, Tr. L. 1.
 376. (for so it should be read; In pryce up born, Ca.)
 Valued, esteemed.
Prisonment : Imprisonment. Test.
Prived : Proved. Test.
Privy and apert, WB. 1114. In publick and private. Privy man, Fr. 1548. A Confident, a person employed in secret affairs.
Probacy : Proof by witnesses. Ber. 1861. It is called *Pro-
 bat Law*, Ib. 1335.
Probatife piscine, Bal. Lad. 127. or rather Probatike piscine,
 i. e. The Sheep's pool, or pond; which Blo. says was a Pond at Jerusalem, where those Sheep were washed, that were by the Law to be sacrificed, otherwise called,
 the Pool of Bethesda. The Poet here plainly alludes to John V. 2. where instead of ἐν τῇ πρὸς βοσκήν κολυμβήσας
 a Pool in the Sheep-market, or at the Sheep-gate, [See Neh. III. 1. and XII. 39.] some Copies read πρὸς βοσκήν κολυμβήσας; and so the Vulg. Lat. translates it, Est autem Jerusalem Probatice piscine; There is at Jerusalem a Sheep-pond. X

Probat

Probat law. See Probacy.

Proceffe: A harangue, a long discourse. Bl. Kn. 127.

Procurator, Mo. 2673. A Proctor, or Farmer, employed by the Clergy to gather in their Tithes and other Duties. Com.

Profession, RR. 4910. The solemn and entire Dedication which a religious person makes of himself by a Triple Vow of Obedience, Chastity and Poverty.

Proheme: A Proem, or Preface. Fr. 1073.

Proinith, Pruneth: A Term in Falconry; They say, a Hawk pruneth, or proineth, when she picketh her self. In Sy. 1527. it is applied to a person that is very nice in dressing.

Prolle: To look out, properly in order to pilfer. No. 1433.

Promesse, Fr. A promise. BD. 39.

Propine: To drink to one; To give one drink. Bal. Lad. 52.

Propinquite: Kindred, relation, alliance. Test.

Proposul: Designed. Ber. 1988.

Proffer: Procefs, proceeding. BD. 848.

Provable: Probable; To be proved, capable of being proved. RR. 5414.

Prove: Proof. Phyl. 1.

Provende, RR. 6931. It is properly a Prebend: But it seems here to signify any Preferment, or Provision, in general.

Provendre: A Prebendary. p. 492, b.

Proverbe, Tr. L. 3. 294. To speak in Proverbs; To deliver as a Proverb. But Ca. reads the Verse thus;

Have wryte or thys; as yit men teche us yonge.

Provostry: The Office or Dignity of a Provost; Præfectura, p. 377, a.

Prove: Honour; Profit, benefit, advantage. No. 1814.

Mo. 1065. RR. 5806. Tr. L. 1. 334.

Provesse: Valour; Goodness, vertue, honesty, integrity; Probitas. p. 389, a.

Prnce; Prussia. Prol. 53. Also, A Prussian.

Pruisse: Prussia. Dr. Ch. 1025.

Psalter: The Psalter, or Psalms of David. p. 507, a.

Pucell: A virgin, or maid. Bal. Lad. 54. Fr. Pucelle.

Pucella and Rubeus, Prol. 2047. "The names of two figures in Geomancy, representing two Constellations "in Heaven: Pucella signifieth Mars Retrograde, and " Rubeus, Mars Direct. Sp.

Pulchritude: Beauty. CL. 613.

Pullaile: Fowl, poultry. RR. 7094.

Pullid hen, Prol. 177. He gave not of the text a pullid hen; A Proverbial expression signifying, He valued it not a straw, a pin, &c.

Punice: To punish. RR. 7187.

Pappe: The Pope. Hen. 383.

Pur: Pure. PT. 500. Purid: Purified. Bal. Lad. 81.

Purchase, Purchase, Purchase: To procure, obtain, attain; To gain or engage one; To provide. Tr. L. 2. 1125. comp. with lb. 1160. Also, Buying, paying dear for.

Purfil, AL. 87, 524. Purfile: A guard, border, or fringe about a garment. Fr. Purfile. Purfilid: Fringed. Prol. 193.

Purpose: A discourse. Fr. Propos. Instead of the purpose, Tr. L. 2. 897. Ca. hath that purpose, which is the true Reading.

Purple: Purple.

Purprise: An enclosure. RR. 3987. Fr. Pourpris. The whole compass of a place.

Purtreings: Paintings, Drawing, Pourtraitures.

Purtreiture: Paintings, Drawings. Prol. 1970. In former Editions it is Purgatory.

Purvayid, Purveyed. Pre-ordained. Tr. L. 4. 1009. Provided.

Purveie, Tr. L. 2. 504. Purveyib, p. 482, b. To provide, prepare.

Purveiable: Carefull, provident. Boeth. p. 375, b.

Purveiance, Purveyhaunce, Purveyance: Providence, foresight; Provision.

purveid, WB. 591. Purveyghed, Boeth. Provided.

Purvide, Bl. Kn. 497. See Purvayid.

Pusell, as Pucell.

Putaigne: A whore. Ber. 549. Fr. Putain. It should rather be read Putage, Whoring. See Fr. Gl. in Putagium.

Putons: Whoremongers.

Putre, Mo. 2227. Putrie, p. 208, b. Whoredom.

Puttocks, Mo. 3268. Bitterns; Kites. Sk.

Pyes. See Pie.

Pynande: Painfull. Test.

Pyne, as Pine.

Pyrid fast and pourid, PT. 149. Peer'd, looked hard and pored.

Pry: A pear-tree. Ber. 583.

Pythoneß: A witch. Fr. 246. See Phitoneßis.

Q.

Quad, Quade: Bad. Kilian. Quach. Suche play, quade play, MR. 1249. A true jest is a bad jest, or, as we say, No jest like a true jest. Quad yere, No. 2946. MS. Ch. hath it;

God yeve this Monk a thousand last of quad yere.

A Curse; f. May this Monk have very many unhappy yéars.

Qualite: Strange, odd; Neat, nice. See Queint, &c.

Quaire, Bl. Kn. 675. A quire of paper; A little book, or Pamphlet.

Quakk, MR. 1044. The inarticulate sound which one makes at any hard labour. See Gl. V. in Quaiks.

Qualme, Prol. 2016. Grief. Sp. a Fit. AS. Eyealme; Mors, exitium. Not of qualme ysturve; Not dead of any sickness, or of a natural death, but slain.

Quappe: To shake, quake. Sp. Sk. To pant, to tremble. Th. 160. Tr. L. 3. 57. Ca. reads it whappe. See Whaped. Yet will the water quappe a day or two, Luc. 88. Yet the water will continue in motion, and beat against the shoar, for a day or two after the storm is over.

Quarelis, RR. 1823. Short, thick square darts shot out of Cross-bows. Fr. Carreaux; In old Fr. Quadrils. It. Quadrilli. See Fr. Gl. in Quadrilli.

Quein: A Quean, a whore. RR. 7082. Sonn. in Quena. See Quein.

Queint, Queinte: Quenched, put out. Mo. 1980. I made of that lefe full queint, RR. 3079. I made very much of that leaf, put a great value upon it. Also, Delicate, neat, dainty, nice, Mo. 2953. Queinte aray; A neat dress. RR. 2251. Strange; odd. Queint a sween: A strange, odd dream.

Queintice, Queintise, RR. 2250. Neatness; Strangeness; oddness. Covetise chaungen with queintise, Mo. 2567. Colour their covetousness with devices, making it seem other than it is. Com. Serpentine queintises; Cunning, crafty, subtle devices. p. 487, a.

Queintlie: Strangely, oddly; Curiously.

Quek, Ber. 2210. A sort of Game.

Quel, Quell: To destroy; to kill; To overcome. AS. Epellan.

Queme, Quemen: To please, Pr. RL. 69. AS. Epeman.

Quein, Quein: A Queen. Also, A quean. See Quein.

Queintise, as Queintise.

Queintly, as Queintlie.

Quere, Tr. 40. as Quaire.

Querelouse: Querulous, full of complaints. Ber. 1337.

Querne: A hand-mill. Fa. L. 3. 708. AS. Lyeojin.

Querrour: A stone-digger, one that works in a quarry. RR. 4149.

Quest: An Inquest, a Jury. Gaw. 1558. Quest-mongers; Jury-men, or perhaps Packers of Juries. p. 206. Fa. L. 3. 648. Achevid all their questes: Obtained all they desired.

Queib: To bequeath. RR. 6999.

Quiske: Alive. That quicke wol selle her by her life, RR. 5056. That will in her life-time sell her self alive. Also, To quicken; To save alive. No. 492.

Quiente, as Queint.

Quike: Quick, alive, living. Bal. 462.

Quinible, MR. 224. A Treble. Sp. See Sk.

Quisben,

Quishin, Ib. L. 3. 966. Quishen, Tr. L. 2. 1229. A Cushion.

Quistron, RR. 886. A beggar; One that goes about begging alms for himself or others, under pretence of preaching, or selling Indulgences. See Fr. Gl. in Questianarii.

Quite: To pay, requite, repay. Quite her cost, Mo. 488. To bear her ordinary expences; To acquit, deliver. Also, Quit, free. Gon al quite: Are acquitted. No. 459. Quitte: Required. RR. 3146. Quitte him: Acquitted, behaved himself. Ib. 3069.

Qd, Quod: Quoth, said.

R.

R Ra, MR. 978. Rae, RR. 7098. A roc.

Rabiate: Enraged, mad. Adagd. 232.

Race, for Arace, V. Fr. 1592, 2124. Mo. 3205.

Racine, Fr. A root. RR. 4881.

Rad, Radd: Read, or Did read. WB. 721. Advised. AF. 579.

Radevore, Ph. 126. Tapestry, Loom-work. Sp. Ras in Fr. signifies any Stuff, as Ras de Chalons, Ras de Gennes. Ras de Vore, or Vaur, may be a Stuff made at such a place; or else it may be Ras velore, for Velours ras, Shorn Velvet.

Rae. See Raa.

Raft (from Reue, V.) Deprived, took away. Rafte her selfe her life; Killed her self. Luc. 176.

Rage: To play the rogue. MR. 850.

Ragerie: Roguery, wanton tricks, playing the rogue.

Ragounes, RR. 1117. A kind of precious Stone. Sp.

Raie: Array, order. CCr. 26.

Railed, Magd. 181. Reiled, Ib. 119. Flowed. See Reilish.

Raine, as Reigne.

Raines: The City Rennes in Britany. Cloth of Raines; Cloth made in that City. Dr. Ch. 255.

Raison, Raisoun: Reason. Fr. Raison.

Rakefele: The handle of a rake. WB. 949. See Siele.

Raket, p. 482, a. I have not plaid raket; I have not been unconstant.

Rakid: Ragged. A balstaff and els a rakid end; A Quarter-staff with a ragged end. PT. 153.

Rakil, Rakle: Rash, hasty. Tr. L. 1. 1068: L. 3. 430. Instead of rakill, Ca. bath recheles, V. To be rash. Tr. L. 4. 1648. But MS. Sp. reads it, Ne rakill nyl y be.

Ramage, p. 482. b. Ramagious, RL. 324. Wild. RR. 5384. See Sk. Also, The singing, chirping, or warbling of small birds. Fr. Ramage.

Rammish: Rank.

Ranke, CCr. 33. for Rauke: Hoarse; from the Lat. Raucus.

Ransom: A ransom. Prol. 1178. Fr. Rangon.

Rape: Haste. Also, Hasty. Gam. 202. Quickly. RR. 6516.

Rapily: Quickly, hastily. Gam. 839.

Rase, CL. 868. for Race, V.

Raskail, Tr. L. 5. 1852. The Rabble, the Mob. Fr. Rascaille, Trash, idle stuff.

Rate: To chide. MR. 355.

Rath: Soon, early. Tr. L. 5. 937. Rathir: Quicker, sooner. RR. 4514. Also, Former, first. Boeth. Rathir speche, Tr. L. 3. 1343. Former discourse. Rathist: Soonest. Bl. Kn. 428. AS. Rað. Ciró.

Ravenish: Black as a raven. Sp. Sk.

Raveshing: Rapid. p. 363, b.

Raught: Reached, stretched. Prol. 136. Tr. L. 2. 447. from Reach. Also, Went. Sp.

Ravine, Ravineft, Ravyne: Rapine; Greediness, covetousness. Foulis of ravine; Birds of prey. AF. 323. Ravines. Rapine, pillage; Rapina, p. 362, a.

Ravinour: A robber.

Ravifable: Greedy, ravenous. RR. 7066.

Ravishing, as Raveshing.

Ravish, Gam. 222. for Revish, as in MS. Ch. See Reve.

Ransom: To put one to ransom, to set a price for one's ransom. Mo. 2595.

Raunsounde, Mo. 2605. Put to ransom.

Ravyshing, as Raveshing.

Rayid: Arraied, adorned. Dr. Ch. 252. See Aray.

Rayith, MR. 1201. for Arayith. [See Aray.] But MS. Ch. reads it, Greythede [H. i. greithen, al. greyden] hem; i.e. made them ready to go. [See Greithe.] Others read, And dressed hem.

Rygid: Railed in. Ber. 291. See Railed.

Rebek: Rebeccah. Sq. 1220. Also, An old woman, an old Trot. Sp. Fr. 309.

Rechafe: To beat, or drive back. Dr. Ch. 379. Fr. Rechaffer.

Reche, Recke: To care for, to value, to regard, esteem, make account of. AS. Reccan. Rechelesse, Rechelesse: Rash, negligent, careless; Without pity. Rechelesnesse: Carelessness, heedlessness. Prol. 204.

Recomfort: To comfort again, to restore comfort to one. Tr. L. 2. 1672. MS. Sp. reads the Verse thus;

And him with all her wyt to comfort:

But Ca. hath this and the following Verses much better, thus;

And hym with al her bert she gan disport

As she best conde, of sorrow hym to comfort.

Recommunde: To recommend. No. 555.

Recorde: Witnes, testimony. Dr. Ch. 934. To remember. p. 384, a.

Reconr, p. 483, b. as Reconre.

Recreaunce, Magd. 425. Recreaundise, RR. 2107. Distrust; Falshood, treason; Infidelity. Ib. 4038.

Recreaunt, RR. 4090. One that betrays his Trust; An Infidel; Faint hearted, cowardly. p. 204, a. See Gl. V. in Reccant.

Recoverable: To be recovered, recoverable. Bal. 1116.

Recure: A remedy, a cure. Cr. 335. Recovery. Bl. Kn. 682. To recover. Recurid: Recovered. RR. 4920. Bl. Kn. 652.

Redde: Advised. Tr. L. 5. 737. It is printed for Rede, Ib. L. 2. 1698. Mo. 575. where MS. Ch. hath, he combe no bestir rede.

Reddour: Violence. Fort. 13. No force of thy reddour; I care not for thy violence. From the Fr. Roldour, Stiffness, &c. See Gl. V.

Rede: Advice, counsel; To advise. Redith me love, Tr. L. 2. 413. or rather (as MS. Sp.) Ret me to love; Advise me to love. To explain, interpret. Dr. Ch. 279. To guess; To read. Also, A reed. Tr. L. 2. 1387.

Redemir: Redcemer. Magd. 384.

Redolence: A sweet smell; Perfume. RL. 213.

Redoubtable, Redoubted: Feared; Honoured, revered. Boeth. Fr. Redonnable.

Redoute: To reverence. RR. 2023. To fear. Fr. Redouter.

Redoutinge of Mars, Prol. 2052. For the honour of Mars. H. i. and MS. Ch. read it, In recordyng of Mars, and of his glory, i.e. In memory, &c.

Redresse, Redressin: To recover, reform, amend, correct. RR. 3423. Tr. L. 2. 969.

Reed, as Rede.

Refelt: Recovered, refreshed. Boeth.

Referte: To return, requite. p. 361, b.

Refiguring: Recollecting. Tr. L. 5. 472.

Refraine, Tr. L. 2. 1571. The Burden of a Song. Fr. Refrain. Refraining: Upholding a Song. RR. 749.

Refreide, Tr. L. 2. 1343. To restrain. Sp. To cool, slacken, lessen, relent. Fr. Refroidir.

Refrete, p. 508, b. l. 19. f. the same with Refrain, if not corrupted from it.

Refroidin: To cool. Tr. L. 5. 507. See Refreide.

Refte: Taken away, bereaved; from Reve, V. Also, A chink, or crevice. RR. 2661. From Rive, V.

Refuce, BD. 755. Refuite, Fr. RR. 3840. Refute, Cr. 94. Bal. Lad. 222. Refuge, help.

Regalie, Fl. 121. Royalty, sovereignty, government, power.

Regals: The Regalla; Sovereignty. Ar. 243.

Regarde: A view. Fr. Regard. Pleasantte regarde, Al. 170. A pleasant, or beautifull prospect, which answers to the Fr. Beauvoir, and the It. Belvedere.

Regnatise: Fit for reigning. Test. Capable of government.

Regrate: Regret, sorrow. Cr. 397. Esteem or courtesy. Sk. 8 L

- I make regrave; I shall take it as a favour. Bal. 374.*
 From the Lat. Barb. Regrature. Gl. Lob.
Reguerdoned: Rewarded. Boeth.
Rehete, RR. 6509. Seems to be synonymous to Comfort:
 But Rehering, Tr. L. 3. 350. seems to have a very different signification, if that be the true Reading. Some MSS. and most of the printed Editions read richesse instead of it.
Reigne, Prol. 868. A Realm, or Kingdom; Power, rule, government, authority. To govern, to reign, &c. Also, A Queen. Fr. Reine.
Reilid. See Railed.
Reilith: Rowleth; Vagatur, p. 365, a.
Rein, RR. 1822. Tet arrowes rein, f. run through me:
 Some will have it to be a Corruption of Reigne; Arrows prevail over me. See Sk.
Reine: Power, government. Ch. Dr. 677. Bl. Kn. 511.
Reins, RR. 3826. f. Reunes in Britany.
Rejoie: To rejoice. Tr. L. 5. 395.
Reise: To raise.
Reisins: Grapes. RR. 3689. Fr. Ralsins.
Reive, CL. 192. as Rive.
Reke, Rekin: To smoak. Hyper. 51. Also, as Reche.
Rekelogis: Raking ways, revellings.
Rekes: Ricks. p. 479, a.
Rekilneß: Rashness. See Rakil, &c.
Rekk, Gam. 1744. as Reche.
Relaiyes, Dr. Ch. 362. (Fr. Relais) Fresh hounds; The places where such hounds are kept. Releyes and lymers;
 Standers at advantage with darts to kill deer. Sp.
Relese, p. 479, a. as Remissails. AS. Lapa.
Reles: A release, a discharge. Haddin no reles; Were not spared. Bal. 601.
Releve: Relief. Bal. 598.
Relived up again: Rose up again. Magd. 197.
Relivid: Relieved, delivered.
Religiousne: The Religious. CL. 686.
Relike: A relick. RR. 2673.
Remed, Cr. 33. Remede: A remedy; To remedy, to cure.
 CCr. 57.
Remes: Realms, kingdoms. Mo. 1251.
Removed, Removed: Removed. RR. 7432. See Salved.
Remissails, p. 476, a. Remnants, remainders, leavings.
Remorde, Remordin: To check, to cause remorse. Tr.
 L. 4. 1491. To grieve, vex, torment; Remordet, Boeth.
 p. 393, b.
Remuable: Changeable, unconstant. Tr. L. 4. 1682.
 Able to move. Boeth. L. 2.
Ren, Renne: To run. Rennir: A runner.
Renably: Readily. Fr. 245.
Rending, Boeth. p. 359. Rent, torn. f. l. Rendyn; Lacera.
Renegate: A runagate, an Apostate from the Christian Faith, a Renegado.
Reney, Renie: To deny, renounce, abjure. Fr. Renier.
Renigis, Prol. 2596. Renkis, CCr. 26. Ranks.
Reniant, as Renegate: One that renounces, &c. See Reney.
Renogates: Renegado's. See Renegate.
Renome, Bal. Lad. 226. Renomie, WB. 1159. Renown,
 a good name. Fr. Renommée.
Renovelancis: Renewings. Fa. L. 2. 185.
Renovale, CMV. 18. Renovellen, p. 212, a. To renew.
 Fr. Renouveler.
Renoumid: Renowned. Bal. 558. Fr. Renommé.
Reny, as Reney.
Repaire: Resort. Also, Return; To return.
Repaste: To repast, to return. Ber. 1803.
Repe and renne, No. 1443. Rape and rend, scrape together by any means, by raping and rending, by hook or by crook.
Repent: Repentance. CL. 667.
Repentant: Repenting, penitent. Prol. 228.
Replete: Full.
Report: To refer. Pr. RL. 108. Fr. Rapporter.
Repress: To restrain. Hyper. 30. Repression: Restraint.
 Tr. L. 3. 1040.
Reprove: Reproof. Tr. L. 2. 419. Scandal, reproach.
 No. 2111.
Reprovable: To be reproved, scandalous.
Reudy. See Libel repudy.
Repugn: To resist, contradict. Repugnance: Repugnan-cy, contradiction.
- Requirable*: Desirable; Expetibilis, Boeth. p. 371, a.
Rere, as Arere. Also, To rear up, to raise. Rere a war;
 To raise a war, to make war. Ch. Dr. 468.
Res, Gam. 1085. Refe, PT. 498, 548. Rage, a mad prank. In Tr. L. 4. 350. instead of in a rage, it is in a rees, in MS. Sp. Ca. and al.
Rescous, Prol. 2645. Rescue; Defence. In the rescous of our laie, RR. 6749. In the defence of our Law, or Faith. Deliverance. Tr. L. 1. 479.
Rescowed: Rescued, saved. Boeth.
Refe, Ber. 178. To rise; To rage.
Resemblable: Like, resembling one another. RR. 985.
Reson: Account. Who can lay any reson; Who can make any account. Magd. 363.
Resonabliche: Reasonably.
Resoun: Reason.
Resowne: To resound. Fl. 167.
Responfaile: An answer. Cr. 127.
Resporte: Respect, regard, consideration. Tr. L. 4. 850.
 Perhaps from the Fr. Rapport.
Rist, Tr. L. 1. 945. or rather, Rist (as in MS. Sp. and Ca.)
 Ariseth, or springeth.
Ristis: Rest, quiet. Tr. L. 2. 1722.
Refynge, Cup. 415. perhaps for Racing. See Race. Refing that; Taking that away, except that.
Reiche, as Reche.
Rechelesse, as Rechelesse.
Rete: A net; Rete, p. 440, a.
Rethorie: Rhetorick, eloquence, oratory. Cr. 240.
Retour, Cr. 51. Retoure: Return. Also, An Orator.
 Bal. 394. Lat. Rhetor.
Reve: A Bayliff, or Steward. See Gereves.
Reve, Revin: To bereave, take away. By forcé reve. MR.
 903, or rather, By force bereve, as in MS. Ch. To take away by force. Also, To force. Tesf.
Revelous: Addicted to pleasure, or revelling.
Revelrie: Revelling; Pleasure. RR. 720.
Reverse: To overturn. RR. 5468. Fr. Renverser. Also,
 Contrary. Fr. Revers.
Revert: To bring back. RR. 7284.
Revestin: To cloath again. Tr. L. 3. 354. Fr. Revestir.
Revill, Ph. 28. Revilry: Revelling.
Row: A row, order. Al by row, WB. 506. or (as in MS. Ch.) Alle on row; All in a row. On a row; In a row. Fa. L. 3. 602.
Rew, Renin: To have compassion, to pity.
Remakin: To wake again. Tr. L. 3. 1124.
Rewarde: Regard. RR. 3254. LW. 375.
Reyis, Fa. L. 3. 146. A kind of Songs, such as Roundels.
 Sp. and Sk. See Gl. V. in Ray.
Reyne: Rain.
Rhebor: An Orator. See Retour.
Rial, Riall: Royal. Rially: Royalty. Riake: Royalty;
 Pomp.
Ribanings: Ribbands, or Laces, lay'd on Robes. RR. 1077.
Ribaude, RR. 5673. Idle persons attending Courts and Camps were formerly called Ribalds, or Ribandes; who being the meanest, and commonly the most profligate, of mortals, the word came to signify in general, Lewd persons, Ruffians, Pimps, Bawds, Whores, &c. See Fr. Gl. in Ribaldi. See Harlot.
Ribibe, Fr. 113. An old bawd. Sp. Perhaps from Ri- baude, V.
Ribible, MR. 223. A fiddle, or gittern. Sp.
Rice, MR. 216. or Rife: Small twigs, sprigs or rods;
 from the Cimbr. Hyiss, which signifies the same:
 "Hinc Hyissar, apud Mandos, loca virgultis obstita, &
 "Hyiss, Virgultis constituta domus, casula. A Rice-dike a-
 "pud Septentrionales Anglos est Sepe ex casis ramis
 "et virgis texta. Gibson in Polemo-Medin. See Gl. V.
 in Rifs.
Richese, Richesse: Riches; Richness, valuableness. RR. 1116.
Richi: Right.
Riddeled, RR. 1235. Riddilid, Ib. 1243. Plaited.
Riding knot: A running knot. Ber. 2212.
Rife, Sq. 752. To pierce, thrust, stab; To split, to force asunder. See Rive.
Rifte: A small chink. RL. 381.
Rigg: The back. PT. 594. AS. þræg.
Riggin bone: The back-bone.
 Rightwife:

Rightwife: Righteous. Rightwised: Judged aright; Justified, approved. p. 488, a. Rightwisneß: Rightcousness.

Rimplid, for Rumpled, RR. 4495. Withered, dryed up; Wrinkled.

Rin: To run. Cr. 158.

Ringin: To ring. Ringin trompis; The trumpets found. Prol. 2602.

Rining: Running. Test. p. 481, a. l. 46. unless it should be read reyning (as in some Editions) i. e. Raining, dropping.—Μίλιτος γλονίων εἶεν ἀνδρῶν. Hom.

Rise, RR. 1015. Beauty; Sk. See Rice.

Rishe: A rush. Tr. L. 3. 1167. As rishe right; As upright, or frait, as a rush. RR. 1701.

Ris: Rose. Tr. L. 2. 812.

Ritt: Rode, did ride. Luc. 97.

Rivage, Fr. The Sea-shore; The bank of a river; The water-side. Take a rivage; Took a voyage by Sea. Fa. L. 1. 223.

Rive, RR. 5593, 5718. Riven, No. 2346. To thrust, stab, pierce; To split, rend. Also, Split, rent, &c.

Rived, Rivid: Rent, &c. Magd. 140.

Riveling: Wrinkled. RR. 7214.

Roche, Fr. A rock. Fa. L. 3. 26. Rochis: Rocks. Fa. L. 2. 527.

Rode, Roude tree, Rode beam: The Holy Cross.

Rody: Ruddy.

Rodylese: Pale. Ber. 219. See Rulde, &c.

Rofe, Rofte (from Rive, or Ryve, V.) Struck, stabbed, &c. Cl. 82. Di. 426. Fa. L. 1. 373. Bl. Kn. 373.

Roggeth: Rockett, joggeth, shaketh. Hyper. 147.

Rouliche: Royally.

Roignous, RR. 6190. Ruinous. Sk. Fr. Roigneux, Scabby. See Roin.

Roill, WB. 653. To wander, to ramble, qu. Rowl about.

Roin: A scabb; Scurf, mange. RR. 553. Fr. Rogne.

Roinous, Ib. 988. Scabby. See Roigneux.

Rokette, RR. 1240, 1242. Rotchette, Ib. 4754. A Linnen Garment. Sp. "Rocker, a Frock, loose Gaberdine, or "Gown of Canvas worn by a Labourer over the rest "of his clothes; Also a Prelate's Roches. Blo. Fr. Rogner, a short Coat, or Cloak, formerly wore. See Fr. Gl. in Roccus, &c.

Roking: Rocking, trembling, quaking. RR. 1906.

Romance myne Anctour, Bal. 538. Romance de la Rose, Ib. 556. The Author of The Romant of the Rose.

Romant: A Romance.

Romin, Tr. L. 2. 516. To roam, rove, wander; To walk. Fr. 2389.

Romir: Wider, larger, having more room. MR. 1037.

Rondils, LW. 423. Roundelay, A shepherd's Dance; Sometimes used for a Song which ends as it begins. Fr. Rondeau. Blo.

Rone: Rained. Tr. L. 3. 678. MS. Sp. reads it, And sub it rone, instead of, And sens it rained, Ib. 641. Also, The City Roan in Normandy. RR. 1674.

Ronge, Rongin: Rung.

Ronges: The rounds, or steps, of a ladder. MR. 517.

Round long pieces of wood are called Rangs in the North of England. Gibson in Polemio-Medin. See Gl. V. in Rounges.

Rood: Rode, did ride. Ber. 2162. See Rode.

Roos: Arose. In Tr. L. 2. 611. MS. Sp. hath, In the felde roos a skirmish, instead of, In field arose, &c.

Ropen: Reaped. LW. 74.

Ros algar, No. 835. Flowers of Antimony.

Rosen, Rofin, Rofy. Bl. Kn. 657.

Rosere, Rosir, RR. 1651. A Rose-tree. See Ib. 3072, 3073. Instead of Rofis, should be read Rosirs, Ib. 4188.

Rose red, Rosing redde; Red as a Rose. CCr. 49.

Rotchette. See Rokette.

Rote: The root. Prol. 2. A musical Instrument used in Wales, says Sp. which perhaps he mistook for Crota, a Crowd. On a rote, Prol. 236. f. By rote. Roted: Rotted.

Roth, Bl. Kn. 581. Routh: Pity.

Rother, Rothir: The rudder, or helm of a Ship.

Rorid: Rooted. Mo. 2721.

Roting: Rotten. CCr. 49.

Rought [from Reche] Cared, valued, regarded. RR. 1873. Dr. Ch. 244.

Rought [from Rue] Had pity, or compassion upon. Tr.

L. 1. 497. But it may there also signify Cared, valued, minded.

Rank, Roukin: To lye, to snore. Prol. 1310. Instead of roukin, Tr. L. 5. 429. MS. Sp. and al. read joukyn: It is said of a Hawk, he Jouketh, when he sleepeth.

Roume: Room. Ar. 114. Roume space, for Round space, Attr.

Roun, as Roume.

Rouneval, Prol. 672. A Town in Spain at the foot of the Pyrenian Mountains, where "Rouland, nephew to "Charlemain, was slain in a battle against the Saracens. "The place to this day is called Rouland's Vallie, and "was in times past a great Pilgrimage; there being a "Chappel built over the Tomb, and dedicated to our "Lady, called commonly, but corruptly, Our Lady of "Renceval. Peascham's Compl. Gent. Ch. 10.

Rouney: Prol. 392. A little Poney, or Tit. Lat. Barb. Roucinus. See Fr. Gl.

Roundell: A Song beginning and ending with the same sentence. See Rondils.

Roundil: Any round thing, as a Ring, a Circle, &c. Fa. L. 2. 283, 290. A Ball or such like round substance in Blazon. Blo.

Roufe, Ber. 936. f. A cunning trick, a wile. Fr. Ruse, Ruze, Reonze, or Reuse, are used in the North for To extoll or commend highly. Ray's Coll. See Gl. V. in Ruse.

Rouffy: Rusty. Cr. 187.

Rout: A company. Routis: Companies. Tr. L. 2. 620.

Route: To snore. MR. 539, 1058. Dr. Ch. 170. To make a roing noise. Fa. L. 2. 530.

Routhe, as Ruthe.

Routhelesse: Unmerciful, having no pity. Tr. L. 2. 346.

Routhelessly: Sorrowfully; Pitiably, compassionately.

Rou, No. 882. Roue, Tr. L. 1. 206. Rough. Also, A line. Fa. L. 1. 448. So we say, The Christ-croft-row.

Rome, PT. 284. f. the same with Roume, V.

Rouis, Bl. Kn. 598. Streaks. Sp. Perhaps, Rays. See Roue.

Rouith, Ber. 3132. for Routh: Pity.

Roune: To whisper. MS. Runman. Roun?ow for Roune?thou? Whisperest thou? WB. 241.

Rouste, Prol. 624. as Rout.

Rubeus. See Puella.

Rucking, or (as in MS. Ch.) Roukyng: Lying, lurking. Mo. 1241. See Rouke.

Rudde, Rude, MR. 209. Colour, complexion; Ruddiness of complexion, a blush. AS. Rudu. Cimbr. Rode, Rubor; whence Ruddy.

Ruddocke: Robin-red-breast. AF. 349.

Rue: To pity, to have compassion upon: To suffer for. Tr. L. 2. 789. To be sorry for, to repent. Tr. L. 5. 1070. MS. Sp. hath the place thus;

And that so late is me now to repent,
To this y will be trewe in myn entente.

Ruel bone, No. 3383. f. Diversly coloured, from the Fr. Riolé. Sp. Sk. thinks it comes from the Fr. Rouelle, Rutula, The whirl-bone; but this sense will hardly suit here. It is otherwise read revell, reuel.

Rueh for Ruthe, p. 487, b.

Rufull: Sorrowful.

Ruith: Have compassion. Fr. 2520 from Rue.

Ruse: To praise. CCr. 157. See Roufe.

Ruthe: Pity, compassion. Rutheless: Merciless.

Ryff: Rife, frequent, common. Ber. 660.

Rymedin, Fr. 2257. Rhimed, or made Verses.

Ryve, Gam. 1553. Ber. 1442. as Ryff.

Ryve, Luc. 114. as Rive.

S.

SA: So. MR. 932.

Saaf, Saafing: Safe; Saving, except.

Saal: The Soul. Ber. 1918.

Sabel: Sable. Bal. 955.

Sa: ke:

Sackes fettes, Mo. 2411. Perhaps Sacks and Fattes, that is Dry Fattes and other such Vessels. Com. But Sk. supposes it may be Feat sacks, i. e. Neat sacks, or else Fat sacks, i. e. Sacks well filled, and stuffed with money.

Sackid freres, RR. 7462. Fryers wearing a coarse upper garment, called Saccus. See Fr. Gl.

Sacre, Fr. A coronation; A consecration; The solemnization of Matrimony. Ch. Dr. 2135.

Sacrement: An oath. p. 486, b.

Sacrifice: To sacrifice. Fr. Sacrifier.

Sad, Saddle: Sober, serious, modest, grave, reserved. No. 898. Sad of demene: Of a reserved behaviour. CL. 734.

Sad of chere, or, Of chere fade, Ber. 414. Of a grave countenance. Solid, Reddy, Redfalt. Boeth. It is sometimes used in an ill sense; as CCr. 151. Unsettled, unconstant; unless it should be read there, Unfad, which is used in that sense, Fr. 2016. Sadly: Gravely, soberly, &c. Sidneß: Sobriety, gravity, modesty. Sq. 1107. Fr. 1482. Solidity; Soliditas, p. 386, b.

Saff: Save. Ber. 1948. See Saaf.

Saie: Saw. Tr. L. 3. 993.

Saile, for Sale, Mo. 2817. Set a sale; Set to sale.

Sailin: To assail, to assault. RR. 7338.

Saine: Seen. RR. 7445. To say. Also, the River Seine in France. Fr. 2778.

Saint John to borrow. See Borrow.

Salad: A sort of Head-piece. Ch. Dr. 1554. Fr. Salade.

Saladis: Sallads. FL. 412.

Sale, Mo. 2084. Some one thei sustein with sale; Some other that are able to bribe them they uphold in their lewdness. Com.

Salaw, Salue: To salute.

Salidone, Ber. 2567. A kind of precious Stone: Perhaps corrupted from Cassidone. See Cassidony.

Salne, see Salen.

Salved, RR. 7431. for salued, or salewed; and so removed, in the following Verse should be, remewed, or remew-ed.

Saluings: Salutations, greetings. Tr. L. 2. 1568.

Samette, RR. 836. Samite, Ib. 873. Tr. L. 1. 109. Sattin. See Sk.

Samin: The same.

Sance, Sans, Sauns: Without. Fr. Sans.

Sandall, Pro. 442. A thin stuff like Cypress. Sp. in Sandall. A fine silk stuff. See Fr. Gl. in Cendalum.

Sande, Hen. 84. as Sonde; and perhaps it should be read on bonde in the foregoing Verse.

Sang: Song. MR. 1062.

Sanguin: Of a blood-colour; Red. Pro. 441.

Sare: Sore. Cr. 5.

Sarlinishe, RR. 1188. A kind of Silk like Sarcenet. Sp. See Sk.

Sarmoning: Preaching; Talking. Pro. 3093.

Sarplers, or (as in some Copies) Sarplefis: Satchels, packs, or fardels; Sarcinas, p. 361, b.

Sat. See Sir.

Sataly, Pro. 58. A City in Anatolia, called sometime Atalla. Sp.

Satournad, Bal. 895. Swart, black. Sp. Yellow, or rather of a Lead-colour. Sk.

Save, Pro. 2716. The herb Sage. Lat. Salvia. See Saff.

Saved: Cured, healed. p. 212, b.

Savely: Safely. Mo. 1323.

Saverid: Savoured, relished, approved, Ber. 3230.

Sause I ne vouche, RR. 2002. I do not vouchsafe.

Sausleme, Pro. 627. Red-faced. See Sk. in Sausleme. f. Fr. Enflamme, All on fire. Sawcestem, H. 1.

Sangh, Sanghe: Saw. Pro. 1757.

Sanghte, Gam. 299. Sanghte, MS. Ch.

Savige: The herb Sage. PT. 292.

Savir: To favour, to tast, relish. WB. 171. To season. No. 1859.

Savise: Safety. RR. 6869.

Saul: The Soul. MR. 979.

Savorous: Savory, sweet. RR. 84.

Savouring: The Talt. p. 193, b.

Sautis: Assaults. Bl. Kn. 419.

Sautric: A Pfaltery or Shalm, a Musical Instrument like a Harp. Pro. 298. See Bl. and Fr. Gl.

Sawe: An old saying; A Proverb. Sawes: Sayings; Precepts.

Say, Sq. 1452. Sye, WB. 645. Say.

Scall: Scabbiness; A scalled head. Scallid: Scabby, scurfy; Scalded. Pro. 630.

Scantilone: A scantling, a measure. RR. 7114. Fr. Eschantillon, A pattern.

Scap: To escape.

Scaplerie: A scapulary, a Garment worn by Fryers; covering the head and shoulders. p. 590, b.

Scarce: Sparing, niggardly. RR. 2329. Scarfly: Sparingly. Pro. 585.

Scarmishe, Tr. L. 2. 934. Scarmishinge, Ar. 25. A skirmish, a fight.

Scathe: Mischief, damage, harm, hurt. Pro. 448. RR. 6649. AS. Scea'dian, Nocere, &c. Scathlesse: Without harm or hurt, safe. RR. 1550. Scathliche: Hurtful. Hyp. 5.

Schall in the MSS. for Shall.

Scho: A shoe. Pro. 255. It is very often writ in MS. Ch. for she. AS. Seo.

Schole, Tr. L. 1. 635. MS. Sp. reads it, to the schole is: Is an Instruction or Example to thee. The old Poets frequently use it in that sense.

Scholeie, Pro. 304. To be educated. Schoolelay, An Exhibition. Sp. It may be two distinct words, Schole aye; and MS. Ch. has the two lines thus;

*And besily gan for the fowlis pray,
For the fowlis that hym to skole found ay, i. e.*

He prayed heartily and diligently for the Souls of them that maintained him at School, or were the Founders of the School or College, where he had his Education.

Sclaunder, Sclaundir: Slander.

Sclaw: Slain. Ber. 64.

Scler: To slay. Ber. 1593.

Sclendre: Slender.

Scelepe, Sclope, PT. 454. To sleep.

Sclipper: Slippery; Treacherous. Ber. 908.

Schy: Sly, cunning. Ber. 2725.

Schy: Slit. Ber. 2469.

Schyve: A sleeve. Ber. 624.

Scotchons: Scutcheons of Arms. FL. 216. Fr. Ecuillon, a Coat of Arms.

Scribable: Fit to write upon. RL. 106.

Scripe: A scrip of paper, any writing. Tr. L. 2. 1130. Script, Ca. and al. Fr. Esript, now written Ecrit, a Writing.

Scripture: Writing. Pro. 2046. Boeth.

Scribe: A scrip, a writing. Sq. 1213. See Scripte.

Scriven-like: Like a subtle Scrivener. Tr. L. 2. 1026. Some read it scriveinifhe, which Kyn. renders Pedantic, like a Pedant.

Scylid: Hid, covered, withdrawn. Scylid under cure: Hid under cover. Cr. 19. AS. Scylan, To withdraw.

Se: A seat. Mo. 263, 2053. Tr. L. 4. 1023. Also, To see. Mo. 163. To look upon. Tr. L. 3. 130. God you se, Fr. 905. No. 2232. A Form of Salutation; God save you, have a gracious regard to you. So in Tr. L. 2. 85. God you save and se, and God hir se, Gower, L. 4. f. 78. p. 2, b. in the same sense. In RR. 6044. instead of se read fe, V.

Se of the day: The Daisie. Bal. 686.

Sech, Seche, Sechin: To seek, look out. Sechers: Seekers. Test.

Seche: Cause, occasion. No. 950. AS. Saca.

Secondly, Tr. L. 2. 1741. Ca. and al. Sikerly, V.

Secre: Secret. Tr. L. 3. 287. Secretour, for secret tower, i. e. tower; Arce abair, Boeth. p. 389. b. l. 33.

Seculer, Seculere, Mo. 2658. "The Popish Clergy are either "Regular, which live by Profession, severed from the "ordinary course of the World, after a certain Rule "appointed by their Founder; or Secular, which live "without any such restraint, in saeculo, in the world, "as other men commonly do, the difference of calling "excepted. Com.

Seculeres, Sq. 767. Seculer folke, RR. 6150. Laymen; or Secular, in opposition to Regular, who may be meant by Religious, Ib. 6149, 6152.

Sedin: To produce seed. RR. 4344.

Sedis: Seeds. Mo. 1995.

Sedwall: The herb Valerian, or Setwall. MR. 99. AS. Sydepale.

See: The Sea. The grete see, Pro. 59. Mar. Maggiore, The

- The Euxine Sea. Sp. Sees: Seas. Also, Seats. Fa. L. 3. 120. See Se.
- Sege*, Prol. 939. Assège, MS. Ch. A siege.
- Segge*: To say, speak. Tr. L. 4. 194. The whole Verse is in MS. Sp. thus;
- O Kyng Priam q^d they lo thus seyn we.
- Seie*: To say. Tr. L. 1. 575.
- Seien*: Saw. Tr. L. 5. 816.
- Seigh*: Saw. AF. 117.
- Seignorie*: Sovereignty, power. RR. 3213.
- Sein*, Seine: Seen. RR. 2181. To see. Ib. 7468. To say. Ib. 2195.
- Seinde*: Singed. Mo. 959.
- Seint*: A girdle. Prol. 331. Fr. Cointe.
- Seintewarie*: A sanctuary.
- Sejour*: Sojourn, stay. Fr. Sejour.
- Seistow*: Sayest thou. Prol. 1127.
- Seit*: Said. Ber. 2142.
- Seke*: To seek. Prol. 17. Sick. Ib. 18. Sekenes: Sicknefs. Ber. 130.
- Seld*, Selde, Seldin: Seldom.
- Seler*: A cellar. In p. 367, a. l. 37. it should perhaps be read, selle or sille; Limen, A door-fill, or threshold.
- Seleris*: Cellars.
- Selie*, as Sely. Selinefs: Happiness. Tr. L. 3. 815.
- Selis*: Seals. Tr. L. 3. 1468.
- Sell*: A cell. Ch. Dr. 2064.
- Selve*: Self, the same.
- Sely*: Silly, simple. MR. 992. Plain, honest, harmless. WB. 370. Happy.
- Semblable*, Fr. Like.
- Semblante*, Semblance, Semblant: Outward shew, appearance, pretence. Fr. Semblant. Fair semblant: Fair shew, Dissimulation. RR. passim.
- Semelich*: Semely, Semily: Seemly, decent, comely.
- Semelyhede*: Seemliness, comeliness. RR. 777.
- Semelinefs*, Fl. 206. for Semelinefs. as Semelyhede.
- Semiram*: Semiramis Queen of Assyria.
- Semis*: Seams.
- Semifonne*: A soft, gentle noise. MR. 588.
- Semybonfy*: Half-drunk. PT. 705.
- Semy cope*, Prol. 264. A short Cloak. Sp. But MS. Ch. hath it, His semely cope. See Cope.
- Semyryfe*, Ber. 1468. Half-killed. See Rose and Rive.
- Sene*: To see; Seen. Fairir unto sene, Phyl. 32. Fairer to look upon.
- Sengel*: Single. Mo. 946.
- Sengin*: To singe. WB. 349. Sengid: Singed.
- Sens*: Since.
- Sent*: To assent, agree. Ber. 881. Also, for Seint: A girdle. CL. 817.
- Sentence*: Discourse; Knowledge; Opinion, sense, meaning, intention.
- Sentiment*, Fr. Sense, feeling; Mind, opinion, thought; Inclination, passion.
- Sentyn*: To scent, to smell, to perfume. Ber. 2031.
- Sepulture*: A sepulchre, a grave. Tr. L. 4. 327. In WB. 498. MS. Ch. hath Sepulkre instead of it.
- Sere*: Dry, withered. RR. 4749. p. 516, a. AS. Seapan. To dry.
- Serial*, FL. 209. as Cerrial.
- Serid pottis*, No. 829. Pots scared up, close shut. In former Editions it was Sered pokettis, and therefore explained by Sk. Loculi serati, vel clausi; and in MS. Ch. it is fyled pokettis: But the present Reading bears an easy and obvious sense.
- Serie*: Series, proceeding. Prol. 3069.
- Serkill celestyne*: The Celestial circle, i. e. The Heavens. Ber. 355.
- Serment*, Fr. An oath. p. 487, b.
- Sermon*: To talk, to say. Sermoning, as Sarmoning.
- Serpentine*: Belonging to a serpent, venomous, winding, cunning, crafty. p. 487, a.
- Servage*, Fr. 1176, 1512. Servise, Ib. 1144. Slavery, servitude.
- Servand*: A servant. Ch. Dr. 1627.
- Servisable*: Officious, obliging, complaisant. Prol. 99.
- Servise*. See Servage.
- Servitour*: A servant.
- Sesid*: Posselt, seized. Ber. 1327.
- Seif*: Seest. Test. L. 3.
- Set*, sete: Sat. FL. 436.
- Seib*, Seike: Seeth. Tr. L. 2. 1254. Since. Ib. L. 3. 1101. Also, Seethed, boiled.
- Setrone*: Bright of hue; for a Citron colour is the brightest and livelyest of any other, says Sk. Fl. 195. See Citrin.
- Seit his cap*, Prol. 588. Impose upon, or deceive him.
- Sette*, Setin: To put. Sette case: Put the case, suppose. To regard, to value. Tr. L. 3. 932. where MS. Sp. reads it, I nolde sette his sorrow at a myte. I sette nou an haw, WB. 659. or rather (as in MS. Ch.) I sette it not an haw; I valued it not an haw, I cared not a rush for it.
- Settlinge*, p. 515, a. Settele, p. 518, b. A young plant.
- Sevillians*: Civilians. Ber. 1335.
- Sevish*, for Seach: Followeth. Bal. 120. See Sene.
- Sene*: To sow: Sown. Mo. 1995.
- Sene*, Sevin: To follow, to pursue; To prosecute. AL. 117. To sue. Ib. 332. Fr. Suivre, sequi.
- Sene and surgery*, PT. 290. f. Salve and chirurgery.
- Senes*: Broths, soups. Sq. 87. Fr. Jus, Gravy.
- Seye*: To say. Prol. 1869. Seen. WB. 552.
- Seyll*: To fail. Ber. 2151.
- Seyne*: To lay.
- Seyng*: Seeing. Tr. L. 4. 363. Seeming. Ber. L. 1.
- Synur*: A belt, a girdle. Ber. 3191. Fr. Ceinture.
- Shadde ovir*: Overshadowed. Dr. Ch. 426.
- Shadowy*: Sorry, night; Umbrailis, p. 377, a.
- Shakill*: A shackle. Ber. 332.
- Shalmies*, Fa. L. 3. 128. See Sautrie.
- Shalons*, MR. 1032. Blankets. Chalounis, MS. Ch. perhaps so called from Chalons, where they were made.
- Shape*: To form; To prepare; To order, direct, dispose; To move, excite; To contrive, design, intend.
- Shapelich*, Prol. 374. Schapelich, MS. Ch. Shapely, Tr. L. 4. 1452. Likely. Sk.
- Shaw*: A shade, a tuft of trees. Sp. and Sk. A Wood, forest, grove. See Gl. V.
- Shede*, Mo. 2215. But he is so get, from it shall shede; But he that to gets his goods shall soon lose them; shall shede, that is, shall fall away from them. Cam. The place seems to be corrupted. Shede abak. See Abak.
- Sheff of arrowes*: A sheaf, or bundle of arrows. Prol. 104.
- Shesill*, MR. 824. Sheffield in Yorkshire, still famous for Cutlery-ware. See Thruill.
- Sheld*: A shield; To defend. God sheld: God shield, or defend us. Sheldis: Shields; French Crowns (Fr. Heus, from Scutum) so called from the Impression of a Shield upon them. Prol. 280. But MS. Ch. reads the whole Verse thus;
- Well couth he in his eschaungis brye and selle.
- Shell*, for Shall, Ber. 142.
- Shend*, Shendin: To trouble, spoil, marr, ruin, corrupt; To shame, confound, expose; To blame.
- Shene*: Shining, bright; Fair, beautiful. When the sunne shene, Tr. L. 4. 1432. or (as it is better read in MS. Sp.) When the sun is shene; When the sun shines.
- Sheni*: Spoiled, &c. from Shend, V.
- Shepe*, Shepin: Sheep.
- Shepy*: Sheeplish, silly, simple. p. 486, b.
- Shere*: To cut with shears, or other Instruments. Cl. 62.
- Shorn*, shaved, clipped. RR. 6196. To reap. Ib. 4335.
- Sheri*: A shirt.
- Shet*, Shete, Shette: Shut.
- Shete*: To shoot. MR. 820. To shete a fethirles bolt, Ber. 1031. To shoot an unfeathered arrow, i. e. To labour in vain. A sheet. Tr. L. 3. 1058.
- Sheweth*, for Sheweth, p. 367, b. l. 1.
- Shene*, for Sene: To follow. Mo. 3178.
- Shift*: To divide, distribute. WB. 104. To change, vary. AS. Scyrtan.
- Shild*, as Sheld. Shildes, No. 2860. as Sheldie.
- Shill*, Cr. 20. f. 10g. Skrill. Schill is used for Skrill in Dongl. See Gl. V.
- Shimiring*: Glimmering. MR. 1189. AS. Scyma, Splendor.
- Shinande*: Shining. Test.
- Shipins*: Sheep-pens. WB. 871.
- Shipman*: A tailor, a seaman.

- Shire*, Gam. 1414. The meeting of a Shire; The Assizes. AS. Scip-germoz.
- Shiregereve*: A Sheriff. See Gereve.
- Shit, Shitte*: Shut. Shitting: Shutting up. RR. 1598.
- Shode*, Prol. 2009. Head, bush of hair. Sp. Shod, having shoes on. Fa. L. 1. 98. Shode and bare: Shod and bare-footed. RR. 7463.
- Shofe*: To shove, push, drive; Pushed. RR. 534. Drove. Phyl. 19. Shofib, for Shofith: Shoveth, &c. Fr. 882.
- Shonde*: Shame; Harm, misfortune. Fa. L. 1. 88. See Shende.
- Shone, Shonne*: Shoes. Gam. 423.
- Shonne*: To shun, avoid.
- Shop, Shope, Shoped*: Shaped; Prepared, &c. See Shape.
- Shore*: A cleft, a cranny. RR. 2260. From the AS. Scypan, To divide.
- Shot*: Shut. MR. 250.
- Shotir*: A shooter. The Ewe is called Shotir, AF. 180. because it is proper for making Bows. Shottis: Arrows, darts, any thing that is shot. Tr. L. 2. 58.
- Shoufe*, MR. 804. MS. Ch. and H. 1. Showne. By comparing these with other Copies I guess the true Reading of the two Verses to be this;
- Though I answer and somedell sette his bowne;*
For lesfull it is with force, force off to shoun,
- for shoven, To shove off, oppose, or resist. See Houfe.
- Shoure, Shoures*. See Stoures.
- Showe*: A shoe. Mo. 2401.
- Shreudneffe*: Wickedness, &c. Tr. L. 2. 858. See Shreud.
- Shrew, Shreme*: A villain, &c. Scurra, p. 376, b. See Shreud. Shrew his face; Beshrew him, a curse light on him.
- Shreud*: Impious, vile, wicked; Impius, nequam, Boeth. Ill-natured. Shreudes: Wicked folk. Shreudes and Felons are used as synonymous in Boeth. p. 364, a. Ini-qui, scelesti.
- Shrift*: Confession. No. 288. Shrift-father: A Father Confessor. RR. 6423.
- Shright*: Shricked. Sq. 442.
- Shrive, Shrioven*: To confess one's self.
- Shroff*: Confelt. Ber. 847.
- Shronde*: To cover, hide. Bl. Kn. 148.
- Sibbe*: Kindred, alliance, relation. AS. Sybbe.
- Sice* fortune is tournid to an ace; so the common Editions read Mo. 687. The greatest fortune is changed to the lowest or meanest; A Metaphor taken from Dice, when instead of the highest cast expected, there comes up the lowest. See Affe.
- Sie*: To see; Saw. Fr. 2396. FL. 194. PW. 136. To fall off. Tr. L. 5. 182. perhaps from the Fr. Sier; To fall altern; unless it should be read Sie, from the AS. Sigan, Descendere.
- Sigh*: Saw. RR. 818. To see. Ber. 863.
- Sight*: Sighed. Tr. L. 4. 714.
- Sightfull*, p. 519, b. Visible.
- Signe*: To assign, appoint. CL. 642.
- Signifer*: The Ecliptick, or Zodiack, so called from the Twelve Signs. Tr. L. 5. 1020.
- Signifiunce*: Signification, intimation. Tr. L. 5. 1446.
- Sike*: Sick. For sike, WB. 394. For being sick. Sikeliche: Sick, sickly. Tr. L. 2. 1528.
- Sike, Sikin*: To seek; To ligh.
- Siker*: Firm, sure, certain, safe. Sikerneß: Security, certainty, assurance, firmness: But instead of Sikerneß, Tr. L. 3. 833. MS. Sp. hath Selineß: Happiness.
- Sikerde*: Made sure, assured of. Ar. 243.
- Sikes*: Sighs.
- Sikir, Sikre*, as Siker. Sikirneß, as Sikerneß. In Tr. L. 2. 843. Ca. and al. read Secreteße.
- Sikith*: Maketh sick. CN. 19.
- Sikkir*, as Siker.
- Sild*: Seldom. p. 902, b.
- Silfin*: Self.
- Silineße*, Tr. L. 3. 827. for Selineß, V.
- Simple*, Prol. 119. It is simple in all the MSS. and printed Editions of any Authority that I have seen.
- Similacion*: Dissimulation, hypocrisy. RR. 782.
- Similineße*, Fl. 206. for Semelineß: Decency in behaviour.
- Similitude*: The like effect, the same sense. No. 442.
- Simpilly*: Simply, modestly. RR. 3861.
- Simple of attire*, Tr. L. 1. 181. Drest in a plain attire, or habit. But MS. Sp. hath it, Simple of beryinge; Of a modest, easy behaviour, which seems to be the better Reading, her simple attire being described before, lb. 170.
- Simpleße*: Simplicity, plainness, downright honesty. RR. 954.
- Sin*: Since. La. 815.
- Singid fnowr*, Mo. 1959. A singed nose, i. e. a tann'd face.
- Singular*: Single; One.
- Sipher in Augrim*: A Cypher in Arithmetick. See Augrim.
- Siris*: Sirs.
- Sise*, see Sice.
- Sisouris*: Jurymen. Gam. 1247. See Skene in Affiores.
- Siferne*: Sifters. The Parce, or Goddesses of Destiny, are so called, Bl. Kn. 489.
- Sit*: To become, suit, agree with. It sit not me, No. 2671: It does not become me. It sat me well better, Tr. L. 2. 117. It would become me better. It sat me fore, Tr. L. 3. 241. It grieved me much. It were an unsitende thing. It were unbecoming. Gower, f. 151. p. 1.
- Sitb*: Time. Sithis: Times. Ofte sithis: Often times. AS. Sið, Siðon, Vice, Vices.
- Sithe, Sihen, Sithin, Sithnes*: Since; Afterwards. Gam. 1039.
- Sithes*: Scythes. p. 479, a.
- Sithin*. See Sithe.
- Sittande*: Sitting; Fitting, becoming. RR. 2263.
- Sitte*: Set. RR. 1398. See Sit.
- Sixe*, No. 800. should be fixe, i. e. Fixed, opposed in Chymistry to Volatile.
- Scaffaut*, RR. 4176. An Engine of War. Sp. Perhaps what is in Lat. called Testudo, A Scaffold or Fence made of boards, covered with raw hides, under which the Besiegers of Towns approached the Walls. Fr. Echaffaut.
- Skall*: A scab, scabbiness. Mo. 2222. Sk. thinks it signifies Scalp.
- Skere*, Mo. 2927. To scowr, to make clean. Com.
- Skill*: Reason. Tr. L. 2. 365; L. 3. 647. LW. 385. Skilles: Reasons. p. 159, b. Skilfull: Reasonable. Tr. L. 2. 392; L. 3. 288, 940.
- Skinke*: To fill or pour out drink. Sq. 1238. AS. Scencan.
- Sklander*: Slender. Prol. 589.
- Sklere, Skleren*: To cover. p. 506, b. It was smeren in the former Editions in Mo. 2647.
- Skore*, p. 203, b. l. 29. So MS. Ch. Others have Sconre; but most of the Editions have either scourge or beat.
- Skorelith*, p. 372, a. l. 29. for scorchith: Scorcheth. Lat. Torret.
- Skippe*: A scrip, a wallet, a satchel. RR. 7405.
- Skriviner*: A scrivener, a writer, or transcriber of Books. Bl. Kn. 196. p. 626, b.
- Slaen*: To slay, to kill. Tr. L. 1. 824. Slaeth: Slayeth. Tr. L. 5. 1342.
- Slain*, RR. 7316. for Flain: Flead.
- Slake*: Slack, slow, Prol. 2903: To slacken; To quench; To appease; To desist, forbear. PW. 98.
- Slaunis*, RR. 7092. for Flaunis: Custards. Sk. Fr. Flans.
- Slawe*: Slain.
- Slea, Sleen*: To slay, to kill.
- Slear*, Prol. 2007. Slear, Hyp. 2. A slayer, a murderer.
- Sledes*: Sledges, carriages; Vehicles; Vehiculis. p. 386, b.
- Sleethe, Slethe*: Slayeth.
- Sleke*, as Slake.
- Slen, Slene*: To slay. La. 960, 965.
- Slepe*: Sleep; To sleep; Slept; Sleepy, causing sleep. P. q. 1389.
- Slepin*: To sleep.
- Slet*, Di. 295. Slete, RR. 2651. Sleet, a mixture of rain and snow.
- Slethe*. See Sleethe.
- Sleveless*, p. 500, a. Lifeless. Sk. f. Idle.
- Slider*, Cl. 69. Slidir: Slippery.
- Sliding of corage*: Easily perfwaded, or moved to compassion. Tr. L. 5. 825.
- Slie*: Wise; Cunning.
- Slightly*, for Slighly, or (as in MS. Sp.) Slely: Slyly, wisely, prudently. Tr. L. 2. 462. Wysely, Ca. In RR. 3156. it should be slighly.
- Slippir*:

Slippir: Slippery. BD. 264.
Slithir: Slippery. Prol. 1266.
Slivere: A small slice or piece. Tr. L. 3. 1015. MS. Sp. reads it shyvere, which is much the same.
Slo: To slay. RR. 1953.
Slogardie: Sloth, sluggishness. Sc. 76.
Slombring: Slumbings. Tr. L. 5. 246.
Slonge: Slung. Tr. L. 2. 941. Ca. and al. read it, with slungis and stomes.
Sloppe: A sort of breeches. p. 198, a.
Slottish: Sluttish, slovenly. No. 647.
Slough: Slew.
Slowe: Slain. Also, A slough. RR. 4751.
Slue: Slew. An. 56.
Sluggardie, as Slogardie.
Slyr: Slideth. No. 703.
Smalishe: Pretty small or slender. RR. 826.
Small: Fine. p. 198, a.
Smaragde: An Emerald. Lat. Smaragdus.
Smarrh, Gam. 373. f. Smart. H. 1. reads it, smertly [smartlye, MS. Sp.] and skete.
Smaughe: Tasted; Perceived. Ber. 2387. From Smack.
Smere, Smeren: To besmear, anoint. Mo. 2222.
Smertande: Smarting. Test.
Smertin: To smart. Smertin that: Smart, or suffer for that. RR. 7107.
Smokleß: Stark naked, without a smock.
Smoterlich, MR. 855. Snout-fair, or painted. Sp. Perhaps of a fallow complexion, or freckled, from Smur; or Fair, clear. Sc. Smour. See Gl. V.
Smryhieth: Forgeth, as a smith. MR. 653.
Snache: To snatch, or snap. PT. 651.
Snele, Ber. 1972. Snel, Snell, Ib. 961, 1017. Presently, immediately. AS. Snel, Swift, nimble, &c.
Sneße: To sneeze. PT. 42.
Snewid: Snowed. It snewid, &c. Prol. 347. That is, Meat and drink were as plentiful in his house, as Snow in Winter. This Metaphorical Expression of Abundance by Snow is used by Gower, fol. 135. p. 2, a.
He was with yestis all besnewid.
Snibb, Prol. 525. Snybbe: To snubb, chide, reprove, rebuke.
Snyffish: Snuffleth. PT. 39.
Sobirliche, Sobirly: Soberly, gravely. Instead of Sobirly, Tr. L. 4. 178. Ca. hath, so brenely, i. e. so briefly.
Soc: The AS. Soc, signifies Power, Authority or Licence to administer Justice, and execute Laws; Also, The Precinct wherein such Power is exercised. It is sometimes used for Duties and Services due from Tenants to their Landlord, as Mowing, Carriages, Grinding at his Mill, &c. whence Toll taken for Grinding is called Soc, Mo. 2315. And Custom to a Mill is called Sokin, MR. 879.
Socour, Socours: Succour, help. Fr. Secours.
Sodainliche: Suddenly.
Sodenly, Sq. 1578. See Sotelly.
Soficientie: Sufficient. p. 206, a.
Soget: Subject. CL. 93.
Soigne: Care, diligence. RR. 3882. Fr. Soins, or Soign.
Soile, for Affoile: To absolve. Mo. 2926.
Sojour, Sojourne: Stay, abode, residence. RR. 4282, 5149.
Thalt sojour; Sojourneth. Ib. 4979. Sojournant: A sojourner. Mo. 2712. Fr. Sejour, Stay, &c. Sejourner, To sojourn.
Sokid: Sucked. Fr. 1480.
Sokin. See Soc.
Soking of his—Ber. 1394. Chyld seems to be wanting here, which being added will make the sense plain; The sucking of his child.
Sokingly: Leisurely, gently. p. 156, a.
Solace, Solas: Comfort, delight, mirth, sport, diversion.
Sole: Alone. RR. 2395. Solitary. AF. 505.
Soleine: Solitary. Ch. Dr. 982. Alone. AL. 607, 614.
Sullen. RR. 3897. Solein [not sole in] purpose; A selfish purpose. p. 508, a. 1. 13.
Solempne: Solemn, majestick, grave. Solempne: Gravely.
Solere: A solar, an upper floor.
Solere Hall, MR. 881. H. 1. MS. Ch. and all the printed Editions that I have seen before Mr. Spegh's in 1602. read it Soler, or Solere. Tho' he retained Solere in the Text of the Edition 1598. yet in his Notes he directs it to be read Scholar's Hall, that is (says he) "The University-Hall, founded by the Chancellor and Masters of the University, Anno. 1326. but since united to the Foundation of the Lady Elisabeth de Burgo, Countess of Clare, and called Clare-Hall. If Scholar's or Scholler's Hall be the true reading, perhaps it may mean a College Founded by Edward the Third, by the name of Aula Sclorum Regis, now part of Trinity College. See Rymer's Fœd. Vol. VII p. 239. Pro Sclorum Aula Regis Ordinationes. Cam. Dominus Edwardus, bone memorie, nuper Rex Angliæ, Avus noster ordinasset quoddam Collegium in Universitate Cantabrigiæ, in quodam manso, quod Aulam Sclorum Regis vocari fecit, perpetuis temporibus duraturum; Nos volentes, &c.

Slyng, p. 504, b. 1. 61. f. Corrupted from Feling: Sense. Somar, Bal. 190. Somir, LW. 142. Somre, RR. 1430. The Summer.

Somdele: Somewhat. Prol. 448. In some measure or degree. See Dele.

Somir. See Somar.

Somme, Fr. A sum, A burden. With his tenth summe. Tr. L. 2. 1249. Perhaps it may signify Harshmen, or Servants on horseback. The Fr. Somme signifies a Burden or Load, whence Sompter-horse, Fr. S. mmer; and perhaps this place should be read, with his tenth summes ifer. MS. Sp. reads it his X Somme, and Kyn. renders it Denis stipius servis; but Ca. hath it, with his people in feere. Sommis: Sums.

Sompne, Fr. 313. To summon; whence Sompnour: An Apparitor, an inferior Officer that summons Delinquents to appear in Ecclesiastical Courts.

Son, Sone, Sonne: A son; The Sun. Sonne ybrent: Sunburnt.

Sond, Sonde: Sand. Ch. Dr. 2018. A message. Tr. L. 3. 493. A present, or whatever may be sent. Of Goddis sonde, No. 2727. Of God's sending, of what God has sent. Sondis, Ber. 3211. Presents.

Sondid, or (as in MS. Sp.) Sandyd: Sanded, gravelled. Tr. L. 2. 822.

Sondin: To send.

Sone: Soon. Come hitheir love sone, Prol. 674. This doth not seem to be the true Reading; for Sone is not a proper Rhime to Rome. H. 1. MS. Ch. and all the old Editions read it, Come hitheir love to me, and in some of them, to me, is written some, and may be pronounced as one Syllable, to rhyme to Rome; or else Rome may be divided into two Syllables Ro-me, to answer to to me, which will make the numbers compleat in both Verses. See Alouth. Come hitheir Love [or Lover] to me, might be the beginning of a Song well known in Chaucer's time. See Son, &c.

Soneneße, AL. 61. Noise; from the Lat. Sonus. Sp. Some Editions read it soneneß.

Songedeß: Didst sing. Test.

Sonir: Sooner.

Sonken: Sunk. RR. 5113.

Sonne. See Sm.

Sonnishe: Sunnish, yellow. Sonnishe of hewe, Tr. L. 4. 736. Bright yellow.

Sooth, as Soth.

Sope: To sup. PT. 217. Soper, Ib. 286. Sapor: A supper. A vere sapor, Ib. 365. A second supper. So Lidg. describes the Luxury of Sardanapalus in The Fall of Priaces, L. 2. C. 14.

Cherishynge surfeites, watche, and glotony—
Founde vere Suppers and fetherbeddes so;
Drynke late, and chaunge his wines of.

Sopheme, RR. 7471. A Sophism, a Fallacy; Sophistry.

Sophismis: Sophisms, Subtleties. Sq. 574.

Suple: Supple, flexible; Complying. Cr. 138.

Syrde, Cr. 211. Sorrel-colour. See Gl. V. in Sore.

Sirie: Sorrowfull.

Sorowdeß, for Sorowedeß: Didst lament or bewail. Boeth.

Sorue: Sorrow. Prol. 2824.

Sort, Tr. L. 2. 1754. Sorte, Pars. Fortune, lot.

Sortid: Allotted. Tr. L. 5. 1826.

Sore: Sweet. Prol. 1. Soot. Test. L. 2. p. 506, b.

Sotelly [so it should be read Sq. 1578. as in MS. Ch. and al. not solitely] Subtily, cunningly.

Suth,

Soth, Sothe: Truth; True. AS. 808. Sothir: Truer.
Sotherne: Southern. Mo. 3352. MS. Ch. reads it Southerne.
 It seems there to signify Plain, honest, simple, &c. See Gl. V. in Sodroun.
Sothfast: True. AS. 808. Sothfastnesse: Truth.
Sothness: Truth. See Soth.
Sothfaw: Veracity. RR. 6125.
Sothil: Subtle, cunning, crafty.
Sothle: Subtlety, a sleight. WB. 576.
Sottid: Besotted, stupid, dull. Test.
Souble, Mo. 1998. f. Supple; Tractable. In the Edition 1602. and al. it is Soukle, Poor, wretched. Sp. Poor and thin. Com. See Sk. in Soukle.
Soudan, Sowdan: A Sultan, or Mahometan Sovereign Prince. The true Reading of La. 422. (as it is in H. 1. MS. Ch. and the oldest Editions) is thus;
O soudyn wo, that ever art successour, &c.
i. e. O suddain Wo, or Misfortune, that ever succeedeth worldly happiness, &c.
Soudonneß: A Sultan's Consort, or Sultana. La. 359.
Souveraine notabilite, Mo. 1324. A very remarkable observation, or occurrence. Soverainly: Above all, especially. ib. 1477.
Soverainnes: Sovereignty, Government. Test.
Souir: Sowr. Magd. 486.
Souke: To suck; To spend, consume. MR. 1308. Souking: Sucking. Test. p. 484, a.
Soule, Ber. 257. Alone. See Sole.
Souled blisse: The bliss of the Soul, or spiritual happiness. p. 507, a.
Sounde: To make sound or whole, to heal. An. 245. To grow sound. Bl. Kn. 293.
Soune, as sonn.
Sounitress, Bal. 846. Hair shining as the Sun. Sp. It should be Sonnitress (n and n being often confounded by the Transcribers) and perhaps it should be read in two words, Sunny tress, i. e. Sunnith tresses. See Sonnish.
Soupe, Soupin: To sup.
Soupir: A supper.
Souple: Supple, pliant.
Sourde, p. 198, b. To proceed, to spring. Fr. Sourdre; whence Sours: Source, spring. Fr. Source.
Sourr, Fr. 674. Fa. L. 2. 36, 43. Soar is a Term in Falconry, when the Hawk soars or flies aloft, termed also Towering; and Source is when he takes the Game in flight. Holme's Academy of Armory.
Souter: A cobbler. MR. 796. Lat. Sutor.
Southly, Ch. Dr. 1324. CL. 140. seems to signify Softly.
Sone, Tr. L. 2. 1201, 1203. To seal; from the Fr. Sceau, or Seau, A seal.
Sonirs: Sores, male fallow deer four years old. Dr. Ch. 429.
Sonn: Sound, noise. Tr. L. 5. 580. To sound; To signify; To tend to; To sound well or ill in a moral sense. Sonnid into bad, Tr. L. 4. 1675. Savoured of evil. Sonnish into honeste; Is agreeable to good manners. Also, To swoon away. Prol. 915.
Spanning, RR. 3633. Full breadth. Sp. A span broad. Sk.
Spar, Sparre: A wooden bar or bolt of a door. Prol. 992.
Sparande: Sparing, niggardly. RR. 5363.
Sparrid: Barred, bolted; Locked. RR. 3320.
Sparthe: A double Ax; Bipennis. See Fr. Gl. in Sparth.
Species: Sorts, kinds; Parts. p. 191, a. Lat. Species.
Spede: Speed; Success; To dispatch. Spedefull: Successful, effectual.
Spell, No. 3398. A history, a tale; Discourse. AS. Spel.
Spence: Any place where Provision is laid up, as a Larder, a Buttery, a Cellar. Also, Expenses.
Spene: To spend, consume.
Sperde, BD. 66. Spered, RR. 2099. Lockt up.
Spere: A spear; A Sphere. Fr. 2839. A long pole or staff. Lat. Contin. AS. Speape, Surus, a stake, &c. Speris: Spears; Spheres. Fr. 2836. AF. 59, 61.
Sperhauke: A Sparrow-hawk.
Speris: Asketh, enquireth. Gr. 272. See Gl. V.
Sperkel and, p. 481, b. should be Sperkeland: Dispersed, wandering, strayed.
Sperren: Seed. Mo. 121. It was so in the former Editions;

but in this it is changed to strene, from MS. Ch. which doth not alter the sense.
Sperrid, as Sperde.
Spete: To spit.
Spetouse: Spightfull. PT. 635.
Spette: Speedeth, fareth. Gam. 1599.
Spicid conscience, Prol. 528. A double conscience. The meaning is, He did not distinguish upon Conscience; and divide it into many Species, or sorts; but had only one honest, plain one. A sweet spicid conscience, WB. 435. A sweet sort of conscience. f. Good humour.
Spill: To dye, perish. MR. 170. To destroy. Fr. 1533.
Spilte: Destroyed, lost. Test.
Spire, p. 515, a. A sprout or twig. Gam. 997. See Spere. An oaken spire; An oaken cudgel; perhaps from the Lat. Spirus.
Spired, No. 3311. f. Blowed. In the former Editions which have this Passage, it is Spied.
Spitous: Spightfull, envious. RR. 979. Spitouslich, PT. 520. Spitously, WB. 223. Spitfully, &c. Severely.
Spiitil house: An Hospital. Cr. 391.
Splait, Bl. Kn. 33. To display, to set forth; To dress. Sk.
Spone, Prol. 2608. Some read it spou, others spoon, or spoun: f. Thrust, driven, pushed; from the It. Spingere, To thrust, &c. See Gl. V. in Spang.
Sponis: Spoons.
Sponne: Spun. Tr. L. 3. 735.
Spontanie: Spontaneous, voluntary. p. 511, b.
Spore: A spur. Prol. 2605. Sporis: Spurs. ib. 1706.
Sporne: To spurn at, to stumble upon. Tr. L. 2. 797.
Sponsaile: Marriage. Fr. Esponsailles, the Marriage-vow. RL. 251.
Sprant, Sprenid, Spreynid, Sprints: Sprinkled. They seem to come from an old word sprene, for Sprinkle; from whence comes sprenith, Gam. 997. Sprinkleth.
Spray: A sprig, a small bough, or twig.
Sprenid, Sprenith, Spreynid, Sprints. See Sprant.
Springoldis, RR. 4191. Warlike engines. Sk.
Sprit, for Spirit, Ar. 184.
Spronge: Sprung. Test.
Sprynghill: An Instrument to sprinkle Holy Water withall. PT. 138. Lat. Aspergillum.
Spurnid: Spurned, humbled upon. MR. 1172.
Spwing, for Spewing, p. 192, a. 1. 58. Spuing.
Squaimus, MR. 229. Squeamish. Adjectives in ous, are often written with us, in the MSS. So daungerous in the next Verse is daungerus in MS. Ch.
Squames: Scales of Fish.
Squires: Squares. p. 441, a.
Squirith: Ushereth, attendeth, waiteth upon as a Gentleman-usher. WB. 305.
Stabill, Stable: To confirm, establish. Ber. 1242. Hen. 145.
Stablie: Firmly. Boeth.
Stablistment: Establishment. p. 508, a.
Stace: The Poet Statius. See State.
Stacke: Struck. RR. 458.
Stad, Stadde: Placed, stated; Encumbered, oppressed; Befet. See Bestadde.
Stady: The Stadium; A Course, a place for running. p. 388, b.
Staker: To stagger, to be anxious. Hyper. 127.
Stalkes: The steps of a ladder. MR. 517.
Stallid, Ber. 1876. Perhaps for Stablid (by an easy mistake in the Transcribers of b for l) Established, ordained.
Stalworthe: Brave, stout. Gam. 403. See Gl. V. in Stalwart.
Stamen, Stamin: Hemp, or course cloth made of it.
Stanch, Stannch: To stop; To satisfy.
Stan dede: Stone-dead. Ber. 3082.
Stant, MR. 815. Stante, Ph. 18. Standeth.
Stapid, Stappid: Stepped, trod. PT. 585.
Stark: Strong; Stiff. Sq. 974. AS. Stapc. Kilian.
Sterke.
Starf, Starfe: Dyed; from Sterve, V.
Starlinges: Sterling Money.
Starling, for Sparkling, Di. 279.
State of Thebis: The Poet Statius, who wrote of the Wars of Thebes. Prol. 2296. al. State.
Statelich: Stately, stiff, proud. Prol. 140.

Straunche,

Staunch, as Stanch. Covetise that may not be staunched, Boeth. p. 367, a. Insatiable covetousness.

Stede: A place. Gam. 841. A steed, a horse. Stedis: Steeds.

Stedshyp: Steadiness, firmness, assurance. p. 484, a.

Steerleß: Without steering. La. 440.

Steire: The rudder, or helm of a ship, the steering.

Stele, Cup. 50. A handle. AS. Stele, Kilian. Stele; Capulus, manubrium. Also Steel; To heat.

Stellise: To transform into a star, or to call a star or Constellation after ones name. LIV. 525. Fa. L. 2. 78. See lb. 91.

Stent: A hint, a stop, or stay. At one stent, BD. 769. In the same case or condition, equally regarded.

Stent, Stentin: To stay; To stop, desist, cease, give over.

Stentis, perhaps for Statutes, CL. 1029. See Stent.

Stere: To stir; To steer: Also, A rudder, Phyl. 23. A steer, or young bullock. Stering: Stirring. Fa. L. 1. 478.

Sterfe, as Starf.

Sterfman: A steersman. Fa. L. 1. 436.

Sterne: To lay down; from the Lat. Sternere. Sk. Perhaps it is put for Steren: To stir up. p. 488, a. Also, Sharp, cruel, fierce. Mo. 1993. Sterneliche, Sternily: Fiercely, &c.

Sterre: A star. Sterris: Stars.

Stert, Sterie: To escape; Escaped. Tr. L. 4. 93. See Asterie.

Sterling: Suddenly, or unexpected. Lut. 62.

Sterve: To dye, to perish. AS. Steoppan, To kill. Storben, Mori. Kilian.

Steven, Stevin: A voice, sound. AS. Stefn. An appointment. See a Stevin: To appoint a time. MR. 1275. Was set a steven: A time was appointed. CMV. 52. At unset stevin: Unexpected. ProL. 1526. So Lidgate in the Fall of Princes, L. 2. C. 21. and L. 3. ProL. ufeth, At unset honre; At a time when it is not expected.

Stewe: A little closet. Tr. L. 3. 602, 699. A small pond for fish. ProL. 351.

Stey: To stay; Also, To mount, ascend. p. 480, a. AS. Stigan.

Steyrs: Stairs. p. 480, a. See Stey.

Stighed: Ascended. Hen. 177. See Stey.

Stille. See Strete.

Stille: Quiet. Let it be stille, Fr. 2240. Let it alone. Stillness: Quietness; Silence. Boeth.

Stint. See Stent.

Stith, ProL. 2028. An anvil. Sp. See Sk. in Stithy.

Stives: Stews, where lewd women prostitute themselves. Fr. 68.

Stobill: Stubble. MR. 1243.

Stockid in prison: Imprisoned. Tr. L. 3. 381.

Stokis: The Stocks. PT. 490.

Stole: An Ecclesiastical Vestment worn by Priests and Deacons when they officiated. Sq. 1219. See Fr. Gl.

Stolis: Stools. WB. 288. Stole, Ber. 1669. seems to be mistaken for Scole, or Schole, V.

Stongin: Stung.

Stonied: Astonished, confounded. Boeth.

Stont: Standeth. No. 2622. Stood.

Stopin in age, Sq. 1030. Stopt or advanced in years; as in Mo. 934. Istept in age.

Store. I told of it no store; I made no account of it. WB. 203. Mo. 1269. See Tell.

Storiall: Historical, in opposition to Fabulous. CL. 123.

Storke, the wrecker of adventure. "This bird (says Sp.) breedeth in the Chimney-tops of houses, and, as it is written of him, if the man, or the wife commit adultery, he presently forsaketh the place; and as Aristotle saith, If his female play false, he will, if he can, kill her, or else utterly forsake her. Therefore Chaucer called him the wrecker [i. e. revenger] of adultery."

Stor, ProL. 618. A young horse. Sp. See Somm. in Stobhopf.

Stote, Fr. 366. A fitch-hew, or pole-cat.

Stound, Stounde: A while, a little space, a moment. AS.

Stund, Momentum, spatium, hora. Kilian. Stond. In a stound, Mo. 1994. In stound, RR. 1733. MR. 884. All on a sudden. At diverse stounds, WB. 286. At different times. Vicissitude or change, turn, hap. She ne maie staunche my stound ill, RR. 4472. She cannot stop or help my misfortune. A smarting pain, a blitch. CCr. 122. See Gl. V. Astonishment, sorrow. Sk.

Stoundemele: Various, changeable. RR. 3784. By turns. lb. 2304. AS. Stundmavlam, Sensum, &c.

Stoundes, Stoundis: Moments; Seasons. Tr. L. 3. 1758. Courses of the Seasons; Vices, p. 364, b. Stormie stoundis, CCr. 126. Stormy seasons, i. e. Anxious, disturbing thoughts. By stoundis; By turns. Boeth.

Stoure: A fight, an assault, a quarrel, a skirmish, an engagement. Stiff in stoure; Valiant in battle. RR. 1270. Perhaps stoures, lb. 4658. should be stoures; and stoure, Tr. L. 4. 47. might be stoure. H. 2. reads it, last oure.

Strain: To constrain, force, compel. Mo. 1364.

Strake, Dr. Ch. 1312. f. Stretch, or straggle.

Straight, Stranghen: Stretched out. ProL. 2918. Spread. RR. 1021.

Strauge, Tr. L. 2. 411. for Strangers; or it may be read strauge folk, as in MS. Sp.

Streight: Stretched. p. 507, a.

Stremes of the sonne: Rays of the Sun. p. 441, a.

Stremidin: Streamed, flowed. Tr. L. 4. 247. The Verse is otherwise read in MS. Sp.

His eyen—
So wepyn that thei semyn wellis tney.

Strene: Kindred, flock, race, descent. RR. 4830.

Strengit faithid: Having the strongest faith. Tr. L. 1. 1008.

Strength is put for the Vertue of Fortitude, p. 507, b.

Strepe: To strip. RR. 6818.

Strete. By stile and eke by strete, No. 2210. Over every stile and in every street, i. e. Every where, in town and country. In the same sense are used, Ouer stile and stonc, By dale and eke by doune, in the Rhyme of Sir Thomas.

Strife: Endeavour. Bl. Kn. 357.

Strikes: Streaks; Stroaks; Lines. Alr.

Stripe: Race, kindred. CL. 16. f. for Sirpe, from the Lat. Stirps.

Strive, for Strife, Ch. Dr. 1191.

Stro: A straw. CCr. 28.

Strode: He was a learned Poet of Merton College in Oxford in the time of Edw. III. See Leland in Chaucer's Life.

Stronde: A strand, a shore. Ar. 304. Water-side. Ber. 1146. It is put for Country in general. ProL. 13.

Strandword: Towards the strand or shore. Ber. 2103.

Strothir, Ber. 848, 1151. seems to be the same with Ro-thir; The rudder, or steering of a ship. See lb. 2325.

Strought: Strawed; Lying flat on the ground. Boeth.

Stroundes: Strands. Boeth. p. 395, b.

Strout: To strut. Ber. 1107.

Stray: To destroy. Ber. 1472.

Student: Studious, thoughtful. p. 514, b.

Stuffed man, Ber. 997. A man well stuffed, well fed, one that eat plentifully.

Stultie: Foolish, silly. p. 494, a.

Sturt and strive with true tillers, Mo. 2808. They are able and wont to scuffle and contend with lusty strong Plowmen. Com.

Sry, Ber. 856, 860. See Srey.

Stylneß, as Stilneß.

Suasion of sweetnes Rhetorien: Persuasion of Oratorical sweetnes. Boeth.

Subsumigations, Fa. L. 3. 174. A Ceremony used by Sorcerers to drive away evil spirits by burning Incense: Or, Smoaking of Corn, Cattle, &c. by way of Charm; a Practice still used by superstitious people on certain days.

Subget: Subject. Mo. 3152.

Sublimatories: Subliming pots, Vessels used by Chymists in Sublimation, whereby the more subtle parts of a mixt body are separated from the rest, and carried to the top of the Vessel, in the form of a very fine Powder; such Powders are called Flowers, as Flower of Sulphur, Benjamin, &c.

Submit: Subject. BD. 234.

Suckny: A white Attire like a Rotchet. Sp. A Frock. RR. 1232. See Sk. in Surkney.

Sued: Followed. Mo. 1452.

Sufferaunt, Dr. Ch. 1010. See Suffraunt.

Sufficiantly, RR. 6743. should be Suffjauntly, V.

Suffurable: Patient, passive. WB. 442. Suffrid: Suffered.

2 N Suffjaunce:

Suffisaunce: Sufficiency, contentment. ProL. 492. Ability. CV. 17.
Suffisaunt: Sufficient; Able. Phyl. 131. Fr. Suffisant. Suffisamment: Sufficiently.
Suffise: To bear; To be sufficiently able. p. 198, b.
Suffraunce: Patience. Mo. 2443.
Suffraunt: Suffering, patient.
Sugre: Sugar. Also, Sweet; Gratefull, pleasing. Sw-grid: Sweetened, made sweet. Tr. L. 2. 384.
Sum: Some.
Superfyce: The Superficies, surface, or outside. Boeth.
Superne: Above; Supream. Bal. 367.
Supplen: To beseech, intreat; Supplicare, p. 379, a.
Supportation: Support. RD. 838.
Supposaille: Supposition. p. 511, a.
Supprised, p. 158, a. Surprised; Suddenly and strongly affected, taken, smitten. In Tr. L. 3. 1190. MS. Sp. has it uprised, i. e. raised up, elevated with his good fortune.
Supprize: To suppress. Fl. 232.
Surcoat: A gown with a hood of the same. Sp. An upper coat. FL. 141. called the Overist courty, ProL. 292.
Surement: Security, assurance. Fr. 3088. or Severie (as in MS. Ch.) Security.
Sureness: Security, safety. Pr. RL. 126.
Suretie: Certainty, assurance. WB. 903.
Surid: Assured. Ber. 2361.
Surmounting: Surmounting, surpassing. CL. 356.
Surplus: The remainder, overplus. RR. 3676.
Surquidrie, Surquidri: Ambition; Presumption; An overweening conceit of one's own knowledge.
Surrey, Surrie, La. 174, 178. Syria in Asia. Former Editions read Surrie, Sq. 30. instead of Russy, as it is in this. MS. Ch. hath it, verryngge on Tartarie.
Surjanure, Fr. 2656. Fl. 75. A sore festered inwardly, and whole without. Sp. qu. Sursum sanatum. Sk.
Surveyaunce: Surveying, overseeing.
Suspect: Suspicious, suspected. Fr. 1570.
Suspeccionne: Suspicion. WB. 306.
Suspen: Suspended, interdicted. Mo. 2223.
Suspiris: Sighs. CV. 305.
Sustaan, for Substance, AL. 741.
Sustene: To sustain. ProL. 195. But MS. Ch. reads there Festine, al. Fusten. Also, To stand. An. 178.
Susterne: Sisters.
Sustir: A sister. Tr. L. 2. 69. Sustrin: Sisters. Tr. L. 3. 734. Fatall sustrin: The Fates or Destinies, Parca.
Sute: Series, order, rank. Bl. Kn. 83. Fr. Suite.
Suyr: To assure, to ensure. Ber. 754.
Swa: So. MR. 922.
Swagid: Aflwaged, appeased. Bal. 523.
Swale: Swelled. No. 3069.
Swappe: To strike; To cut off, or, as we say, whip off. No. 377. To fall down suddenly. Fr. 2120. To throw or fling down violently. Tr. L. 4. 244.
Swart: Black, swarthy. Ch. Dr. 1862. Swartishe: Swarthy. Et. L. 3. 557.
Swat: Sweated. Ber. 1080.
Sweigh: Force. Sp. A rumbling noise. AS. Spez, A violent crash; Turbo, p. 363, b.
Sweight, Tr. L. 2. 1383. Sk. derives it from the AS. Spez, Sound, and quotes this place for it: But it seems here to be rather a Corruption of Weight. See Gl. V. in Swecht. MS. Sp. hath it thus;
The grete swerf doth hit than fall at onys.
See Gl. V. in Swarf.
Swele: To dye. Ber. 1615. f. leg. Swelte: To kill, suffocate. AS. Spelcan.
Swell, Ber. 388. should perhaps be snell, V.
Swent, Bal. 903. Former Editions have it iswent or iswent.
Swere: The neck. PT. 361. AS. Spreop.
Swerne: To swear. RR. 4834.
Swert, Bal. 903. Swarthinels. See Swart.
Sweete: Sweated. Magd. 126. Also, Sweet.
Sweete: Sweated.
Sweetyng, PT. 36. Sweet-heart, Darling.
Sweven: A dream. AS. Spepen. Hence perhaps Aswerved, Et. L. 2. 41. for Aswerved: Being as it were in a dream.
Swevines: Dreams. Tr. L. 5. 358.
Swilk: Such. MR. 1062.

Swinke: To work, to labour. Also, Labour, pains; ProL. 188. Swinker: A hard labourer. Ib. 533.
Swire, as Swere.
Swithe: Swifly, quickly, presently, immediately. AS. Spide.
Swolove: The swallow, the throat. Di. 179.
Swoone, Swoon: A swoon, a trance; To swoon.
Swough: Sound, noise. AF. 248. Et. L. 2. 523. See Sweigh. A swoon, a trance. Tr. L. 4. 1211. Luc. 137.
Swoon. See Swoone.
Swove: A swoon, a trance. Dr. Ch. 2151.
Swyff: Swift. Ber. 1231.
Syghfull: Visible. p. 478, b.
Syn: Since.
Synglerly: Singularly, particularly, singly. p. 380, a.

T.

Tas: A heap. ProL. 1007. Fr. Tas.
Tabarde, Mo. 1949. Taberd, ProL. 20. "A Jacket or sleeveless coat, worn in times past by Noblemen in the Wars, but now, only by Herald, and is called their Coat of Arms in Service. It was the Sign of an Inn in Southwark by London, within the which was the Lodging of the Abbot of Hyde by Winchester. This was the Hofilrie, where Chaucer and the other Pilgrims met together, and with Henry Bailie their Host accorded about the manner of their Journey to Canterbury: And whereas through time it had been much decayed, it is now by Mr. J. Preston, with the Abbot's House thereto adjoining, newly repaired, and with convenient rooms much encreased, for the receipt of many guests. It is now the Sign of the Talbot. Sp. It still bears the same Sign of the Talbot, and has on the Sign-Post this Inscription; This is the Inn where Sir Jeffrey Chaucer and the nine and twenty Pilgrims lodged in their Journey to Canterbury, Anno 1363. "A Tabbard (says Verstegan) is a short gown, that reached no farther than the mid-leg, it remaineth for the name of a Gown in Germany and the Netherlands. From the wearing of this Tabbard or Taberd, some of those on the Foundation at Queen's College in Oxford are called Tabbardarii. Sion in his Survey. L. 4. C. 1. says it was a Jacket or sleeveless coat, whole before, open on both sides, with a square collar, winged at the shoulders. See Fr. Gl. in Taberdum, and Dr. Davies's Welsh Dict. in Tabar.
Tabouren: To make a drumming noise, as of a Tabour. LIV. 354.
Tach, PT. 84. Ber. 347, 727. CN. 192. Tech, Bal. 237. Craft. Sp. Pranks, tricks; from the Fr. Tache, A spot; or Tacher, To endeavour, to attempt; which comes from the Lat. Tactare, a Frequentative of the Verb Tangere, To touch; So we say a Touch of Ink, for a Stain or Spot of Ink. See Sk. Perhaps it may signify Attack, attempt.
Tailagiers, RR. 6811. Receivers, or Collectors of Tolls, or any publick Taxes or Impositions. See Talages.
Taile, ProL. 572. Tooke by taile; Took upon account, or upon trust. See Tale.
Take for Taken, ProL. 1868. Ber. 1326. Again him take; To oppose him. RR. 3529.
Takerde, PT. 190. f. Taberd. See Tabarde.
Takil: Tackle. RR. 1727. Shooting tackle, as Arrows, &c. as we say, Fishing tackle. Dr. Davies explains the CB. Tacel, by Sagitta, An arrow.
Talages: Taxes, Impositions. p. 201, a. Fr. Taillages.
Talcasse: Talkative. RL. 334.
Tale: To talk, to tell a tale. Ch. Dr. 103. Speech, discourse; Oratio, p. 364, a. A reckoning, account. Litill tale be therof told, Mo. 1233. He made little account of it, did not mind it. Taling: Talking, telling of tales. No. 2942.
Talent: Desire, inclination. See p. 152, a. l. 13, 17. Affection. Tr. L. 3. 145. Set his talent, RR. 1716. Set his mind.
Tall,

Th: No. 684, Is. Alouth.

Tall, for Tell, RR. 1356.
Tane: Taken. Ch. Dr. 888.
Tapet: Tapestry. AL. 499.
Tapinage, RR. 7363. Secresie, flisynefs. Sp. Perhaps from the Fr. Tapir, To squat down. Fr. En tapinois, Secretly, cunningly.
Tapis: Tapes, strings. MR. 133.
Tapifer: A Tapestry-maker. Prol. 363. Fr. Tapissier.
Tapistère: A tapster. Prol. 241.
Tapite: To hang with Tapestry. Dr. Ch. 260.
Tare: Tore. Magd. 150. See To.
Targe: A target. Prol. 473.
Tars: The City Tarsus in Glicia. Prol. 2162.
Tartarium, FL. 212. Du Fresne in his Gl. says there was a sort of fine Cloth imported from, or manufactured in Tartary, called Tartarin; but Sk. thinks it was called Tartaron, 4. H. 8. Cap. 6. from the City Tortona in the Milanese, where that sort of fine-Silk was made.
Tasse: To assay. Tr. L. 5. 783.
Tassid: Fringed. MR. 143. It is better in MS. Ch. Tasseled with grene silke; Having green silk tassels.
Tast: To feel. No. 514. Fr. Taster, tâter.
Tatarwagges: Raggs, jaggs. Sp. Tatter'd rags. RR. 7211.
Tatche: Craft. Sk. From the AS. Tæcan, To teach. See Tach.
Tave, Ber. 1327. To rage; a word used in Lincolnshire. Ray's Coll.
Tavernere: One that haunts Taverns, a common drunkard. No. 2223.
Tauere and Mars therein, WB. 613. "Taurus being properly Venus's House, under the which this woman was born, Mars then ruling in the same prognostic" catch great Incontinency. Sp.
Taylliagys, p. 205, b. as Talages.
Teche: To teach. WB. 642. See Tach, and Tatche.
Teene, as Tene.
Teine: Little. No. 1246, &c. A little piece. Tiny is still used for Little. See Tene.
Tel, for Til, i. e. Untill. Dr. Ch. 1106.
Tell: To reckon, account, make account. Tell no store, Mo. 1269. Make no account.
Temperance: Temper, moderation. Fr. 2331.
Tempestuous: Tempestuous, troublesome. Tr. L. 2. 5.
Temps, Fr. Time.
Tenance: To enhance, advance or help. Also, Tenants. Mo. 2963. which is thus read in some Copies,
Her poore tenaunce fully they flite;
"That is. They fleete, take off the cream of their poor tenants, i. e. they lick the fat from their tenants' beards, taking away the best of their Estate. Com.
Tend: To attend. Ber. 1907. Tendant: Attending. Ib. 501.
Tene, Teine, An. 180. Sorrow, grief, affliction, trouble; Injury, slander; Anger, provocation. Magd. 5. AS. Teon; and Ten is Angry. Ray's Coll. Also, to afflict, to grieve. p. 505, a: 481, a. Newe fruit filled with winter tene, RR. 4750. perhaps foiled; i. e. hurt with the injury of Winter-weather. Nights tene, Fl. 116. The injury of the night. Tenesfull: Sad, sorrowfull, &c.
Tennith: Tenth. Tr. L. 5. 642.
Tent: Intent. PT. 126.
Tentiffy: Diligently. Fr. 1364. See Ententise.
Tenyth: Tenth. Ber. 1900.
Tercell, Tercellet, Sq. 522. The Male of all large Hawks is called the Tassil, or Tercell.
Tere: To tear. It nedith not this matere oft to tere, Tr. L. 3. 1649. It is needless often to repeat, or rip up this matter. Ca. and al. read it tere, i. e. stir up.
Terins: A kind of Birds. RR. 665. Sk. conjectures that it signifies Teale. Kilian. Tælingh. Tern is a sort of Gull; but in this place it seems to signify some singing bird.
Term of his live: For the term of his life, all his life time. No. 1500.
Termagant, No. 3318. qu. Termagnus, Thrice great, or Great in the Superlative degree. Blo. God.
Termine, Termyn: To determine, conclude, resolve.
Terrestre: Earthly. p. 500, b. But in Tr. L. in-
Read of His paradise terrestre, &c. MS. Sp. hath, His paradis, his joye, &c.
Tery: All in tears. Tr. L. 4. 821.

Tesleris, Prol. 2501. Helmets. Sp. Tesler seems rather to signify, the Head-stall of a Bridle. Fr. Tessière.
Tetise, MR. 896. Wild-brained. Sp. Tetty. But in Tr. L. 5. 802. MS. Sp. has, Hard and truly, instead of Hardy and testise.
Tetis, No. 8319. Certain Devices to try gold and silver. Sp.
Tetch: A fashion. Sk. A trick, a stain, frowardness. Sp.
Tetches: Frowardness. Tr. L. 3. 937. qu. Tetchiness. Sk. Stains. RR. 6517. See Tach.
Tewell, Fa. L. 3. 559. A chimney. Sp. from the Fr. Tyn-au, A pipe. Sk.
Tewnes: The City of Tunis in Africa. Dr. Ch. 310. The place should be read thus;
So merie a foun, so fivete entouis,
That certis for the town of Tunis
I n'olde, &c.
Textuele: Well versed in the Text of Holy Scripture. Mo. 1894.
Thacke: Thatch. Housis of thacke; Thatched houses. Ch. Dr. 1771.
Thakid, Fr. 295. Thakkid, MR. 196. Thumped, thwacked, beat.
Thank: Service, kindness, obligation. In thank: Kindly. RR. 2741. Thankes, Thankis: Acts, enterprises, labour, reward. Sp. Ther, his thankes; With their, his good will. p. 213, a: 383, a. Thankis held, WB. 272. Make account of his services or thanks. Thankheld: Thank-worthy. Sp. Thankings: Obligations, services.
Thare: There. Dr. Ch. 256.
Th'assiege, Tr. L. 1. 465. for The assiege, or Siege.
The: To thrive, to prosper. AS. Dean. So mote I the;
So may I thrive, As I hope to thrive; or, as it is in Tr. L. 2. 120, 125. As evir thrive I, As evir mote I thrive. Wherever The is in this Edition printed with a Capital T, it stands for Thee; though there be no such distinction in the MSS. but thee is often written for the, and the for thee. The: They. Ber. 1726. See The dome.
Theche, Sq. 1907. Theiche, No. 2465. Plain, smooth. Sp.
The dome, No. 2913. (so it should be read in one word)
Thriving, success. See The. That place is obscure as it is printed; Py. 1. hath a (.) after What. The two Verses will be intelligible, if read thus;
He toke me certaine golde, tha wote I wote
What—Evill the dome on his monkis suoute,
That is, He brought me some gold, I know very well how much—A P—on his Monk's suout. This Curse seems to be spoke aside.
Thesely: Like a thief. Lwc. 102.
Thess: A thief. PT. 599.
Thei: They. In p. 205, b. l. 6. it has no Antecedent; but MS. Ch. and al. have it men ben, &c.
Theiche. See Theche.
Thenne, WB. 1141. Thennis: Thence.
Theorike: Theory, speculation.
Ther: There; but most commonly, Their.
There: Their. Sq. 363. and sometimes, Where; and Thereas, for Whereas. There as, for There, i. e. Where. MR. 543. and No. 1639. but it should rather be read as one word, thereas. There gain, for There against, i. e. Concerning, or touching that matter. RR. 6555.
Thereout: Without. No. 1157. Gr. 38.
Therfro: From thence, or from them. RR. 4941.
Therinne: Therein. RR. 6260.
Therto: Therunto; Likewise, besides, also.
Thewis: Thieves. Mo. 2750.
Thewes, Fa. L. 3. 744. Thewis, Sq. 1058. Hyper. 16. Qualifications, qualities, manners. AS. Deap, Mos, modus, institutum.
Thike: Thick. MR. 214.
Thilke: A contraction of The ilke: That, the same.
Thinke: Seem. Tr. L. 1. 406. So Me thinks, Me thought; It seemeth, seemed to me.
Thirle: To pierce through, to stab. An. 212. AS. Dip-han. Whence our Drill.
Tho: Those. Also, Then, at that time. AS. Da. Although.
Thosorth: Thenceforth, thenceforward.
Thole: To suffer. Fr. 282. AS. Dolan.
Tholomeus, Ber. 2019. Ptolemy the Astronomer.

Thombe

Thumb of gold, Prol. 565. f. A ring of gold upon his thumb. See Sk.

Thonderinge: Thundering. Tr. L. 2. 233. In MS. Sp. Ca. and al. it is, that maketh the thundur to ring. The true reading of the Verse seems to be this;

And Jupiter, that maketh the thunder ring.

Thonke: Favour. Tr. L. 3. 1214. See Thank.

Thonkis helde: Bestow labour, or liking. Sp. See Thank.

Thore, RR. 1853. It seems to be a contraction of The yore: Before; or a Corruption of yore, the y, and the AS. þ, for th, being written much alike in the MSS. Or else it may be put for there, metri causâ.

Thorpe, AS. A village. Thorps: Villages. WB. 871.

Thorrake, p. 204, b. A heap. Sp. Thoruk is commonly written for through in Lord Harley's MS. of Lidgate's Life of St. Edmund; and perhaps in this place it may signify a Thorow-fare.

Thoughtry: Thoughtfull. Test.

Thrages, p. 494, b. Busy matters. Sp.

Thraile, p. 413, b. Verse 20. for Thrille, V.

Thrall: A slave, a servant. Thrallin: To enthrall, to enslave. Tr. L. 2. 773.

Thraß: Thrust, crowded. No. 1774.

Thre: Three.

Threke: To thrust. Prol. 2614. But in this Edition it is threffe, and breste for breke, Ib. 2613. to answer it; and so it is in MS. Ch. See Trice.

Thremote, Dr. Ch. 376. The blast of a horn. Sp. Mot (says Blo. is a Note, which a Huntsman winds on his Horn; and perhaps Thremote may be such a Note thrice repeated.

Threpe: To blame, rebuke. AS. Þneapian. To affirm. Sp. To aver, urge, alledge. Gl. V. To call, or name. No. 847.

Thresten: To thirst; or perhaps to Thrust, or prefs forwards. Test. p. 482. a. l. 22.

Threte: To threaten. Th. 49.

Thridde: Third. Tr. L. 2. 56.

Thrie: Three, or Thrice. Everich thrie, Ch. Dr. 1780. Every three of them, or rather Every one thrice. As I have told you thrie, Tr. L. 2. 1285. thrice, i. e. often. But in MS. Sp. it is, As I told you try; Try as I told you.

Thrift: Prudence, discretion. No. 760. Thrifty: Prudent, discreet; Civil. Instead of In thrifty wife, Tr. L. 1. 275. MS. Sp. hath In busy wife; Earnestly. Thriftyly: Civilly. Tr. L. 3. 212. Ca. reads it, Honestly. Fr. Honêtement.

Thrilled: Thrust through. RR. 7636. See Thirle.

Thringe: To thrust. RR. 7419. To throng, to croud. Tr. L. 4. 66. AS. Þpingan, Premere: Whence our Throng.

Thringing: Thronging. RR. 656.

Thriste: Thrust; Did thrust. Tr. L. 3. 1580.

Thristid: Thristed.

Throff: Throve, did thrive. Ber. 157.

Throng: Thrust. Sq. 1871. See Thringe.

Throps: Villages. AF. 350. See Thorpe.

Throstillcock: A thrush. No. 3278.

Throtycorve, Prol. 2015. should be read throt ycorve, i. e. throat cut.

Through-gire: Pierced through, stabbed. Tr. L. 4. 627. See Gerd and Grit.

Throwe: Thrown. Ar. 75. Also, A cast, a stroke, a blow. Chaucer uses it as the French do their Coup (of the same signification) for A short space, a little while. La. 954. Tr. L. 2. 687. In this throw, RR. 1771. In this time. Fr. A ce coup. Throwis: Pangs, violent fits. Tr. L. 5. 206, 1200. AS. Þnopian, To suffer.

Thrug: Through.

Thrust, for Thurst: Thirst. p. 483, b. l. 39. Thrusting: Thirsting. Thrustes: Thirst. Test. L. 3. Thrusty: Thirsty. Magd. 708.

Thrye, Thryis, Thrys: Thrice. Prol. 63.

Thwitid, MR. 824. In MS. Ch. and the former Editions it is Thweetell, Thwytell, or Thwittell: A whittle. AS. Þwitel, Castellus, a little knife. See Shefeld.

Thwitten, RR. 933. f. Twitted. See Twithe. Twyttten: Carved out. Sp. See Sk.

Thybir: Thither. AL. 166.

Tidde: Happened, befell. Tr. L. 1. 908. MS. Sp. hath the whole Verse thus;

The shold never betyd so fair a grace.

Ca. hath it in other words of the same sense;

That thou shold neuer have had so, &c.

Tidife, LW. 154. Sq. 668. A kind of bird, perhaps that which we call a Titmouse. Sk.

Tiffelers attired in trecherie, Mo. 2135. Triflers given to treachery, and false dealing. Com.

Tikilneß: Nicety, delicacy, difficulty. Sc. 221.

Til, Till, Gam. 94. Cr. 1. Unto, to. Him till, RR. 4594.

To him. There till, Ib. 3482. Thither. A likely thing him till, Ib. 4852. A thing like himself. See Hick. Gr. AS. p. 65.

Tillages, as Tayllaiges.

Tilthe: To till. p. 156, a. Tillage.

Timbesters, RR. 767. Players on sounding Instruments. Sp. Perhaps from Timbrells. Sk.

Timbres, RR. 770. Fr. Timbre is a small Bell. Also, the Crest of a Helmet.

Tinging, Cr. 144. perhaps for *Ring*ing, or Tinkling.

Tirin: To tear. Tr. L. 1. 788.

Tising, for Enticeing, PW. 103.

Tissue: A lace or tape. Tr. L. 2. 639. Tassel, Ca. and al.

Tite: Betideth, happeneth. Tr. L. 1. 334. Tis treulich The tite, Ber. 1244. Perhaps for This, &c. by an easy mistake of þ [th] for y. This happens to thee.

Tiben: To pay tithes. Mo. 3149.

Tiuring, Tr. L. 2. 1744. Perswading, courting. Sk. f. Tittcring. But MS. Sp. hath it, In tarrying, pur-snyte, &c.

Tieleleß: Without a Title. Tieleleße tyrant: An usurping Tyrant, that hath not a just Title.

To: A toe. This. To yere; This year. Tr. L. 3. 242. To day, for, This day. Untill. CM. 112. It is very often seemingly an Expletive before a Verb, or Participle; but it is often expressive of extraordinary violence in the action, especially when joyned with all; as, All to tare, All to rent, All to broken: Torn, rent, broken all to pieces. To draw, Mo. 3167. Drawn to pieces. To dashed with swerdia, Tr. L. 2. 640. or rather (as MS. Sp. hath it) To dashed was with, &c. Was dashed to pieces. Sometimes it is omitted before Verbs in the Infinitive Mood, as Daring do, Tr. L. 5. 387. Daring to do.

Tofore, Toforne: Before, formerly. Ber. 2721. AS.

To-popan. In Boeth. p. 373, a. l. 55. it should be read to foren, i. e. foreign; Lat. per remotos populos.

Togithers: Together.

Tokining: Token. RR. 2439. Signification, intimation; Told, Mo. 512. See Tell. Told of it [so it should be read] no fore, — no dainty, WB. 203, 208. Made no account of it.

Tole, Clout, toy. Sp. A tool. Ber. 2607. Lowd tole, Ib. 2184. A bad instrument, or tool. Toll. Mo. 2315. If it be read, as in other Editions, Take such cursed soche a tole, it must mean, Betake, or commit such a tool as the key of Heaven to so cursed a wretch. Com.

Tumblesteres: Tumblers. No. 1991.

Tomblynge: Tumbling; Unconstant. Boeth.

Tombystere: A Tumbler, a woman-dancer, or Stage-player. p. 493, a.

Tomedis: To boot, into the bargain. See Mede. In Tr. L. 2. 1201. it is the medis, in MS. Sp. and al. f. In the mean time.

Ton, Tone, Toon: A contraction of The one, or That one.

Tone: Toes, Mo. 975. Claws. Fa. L. 3. 938.

Tonne: A Tun weight. Prol. 1996.

Too: Two.

Toon, PT. 153. as Ton.

Toos: Toes.

Torcencious, p. 486, b. Torcious, p. 493, a. Using extortion. Sp. Extortioners.

Tornis: A turn, or sleight in wrestling. Gam. 472, 479, 484.

Torretes, Prol. 2154. Rings, or the fastening of dogs collars. Sp. From the Fr. Touret, Annulus accipitris. Sk.

Torrit: A Turret. Gaw. 648.

Tort, Fr. Wrong; Extortion. Sp.

- Tortuous, La. 303. "Tortuous the Signs are, which are called Oblique ascendens, that is, all from Capricorn to Cancer: So he calleth the Ascendent, unfortunate; because it is one of those Signs, and had at the same time the Lord of that Sign in his fall, which is in the Sign contrary to his exaltation. Sp.
- Toteth: Looketh. Sp. Who toteth on hem, thei ben untall, Mo. 2014. Who looks on them, shall see they are low, weak, and poor. Com. Thei toteth on her summe totall, lb. 2359. Their large gifts is the thing that is looked after. Com. Perhaps the word signifieth, To call up, or ballance an Account, from Tot, the Sum total. Toot-ings, Prying, peeping, searching narrowly. Gloss. to Spenser's Sheph. Cal.
- Totth, for To The. See Alouth.
- Totoler: A prater. Sp. A tatling busy-body. LII. 353.
- Totty, MR. 1145. Dizzy. Sp. qu. Tottering. Sk.
- Tough, Ber. 1097. Tough; Tight. In Tr. L. 5. 101. it should be tough (or tom, as in MS. Sp.) to rhyme to inough, lb. 99.
- Toure: A tower. Ar. 75. Fr. Tour.
- Tournaies: Turnaments. Ch. Dr. 1987. See Turney.
- Tournet: A turret. RR. 4164.
- Tout: The backside, the tail, the breech. MR. 746.
- Towel, Fr. 884. The tail. Sp.
- Trace: To walk, to pass. Also, A track, a path, a foot-step; A step. RL. 58. A company, or train. LIV. 285. To dance with her a trace; f. To dance a turn with her. BD. 190.
- Tracy: Traces, or Geers for Draught-horses or other working Beasts. ProL. 2141.
- Tragetors, Fr. 2699. Tragetour, Fa. L. 3. 187. See Tregetoris. Tragetrie, Ber. 2040. See Tregetry.
- Traie, Traine, Mo. 2563. Traisin, Tr. L. 4. 438. To betray. Fr. Trahir. Traied: Betrayed. Phyl. 93.
- Trail: An arbour. BD. 184, 695. Fr. Treille.
- Traise: The Traces of horses. Tr. L. 1. 222. Fr. Traits.
- Traisonne: Treason; Treachery. Test.
- Traiterie, Traitorte, Traitourie, An. 187. Falseness, treachery.
- Tramifene, ProL. 62. A City in Barbary, in the Province sometime called Mauritania Tingitana, or Casariensis, as hath Melancthon. Sp. Ferrario Teniffa, seu Timici. Sk.
- Transmewin, Tr. L. 4. 467. or (as in MS. Sp.) Transmutin: To transform. Transmutid: Changed. lb. L. 4. 830.
- Transposed: Turned, changed. p. 590, a.
- Transvers, p. 482. a. f. Traverse, from the Fr. Traverser, To cross, to thwart.
- Trapures: Trappings, Horse-furniture, ProL. 2501.
- Trashid, RR. 3231. for Betrashid: Betrayed, deceived.
- Traval: To labour, to take pains. Mo. 2366. Fr. Travailler.
- Trave: A Trevice to shoe unruly horses in. MR. 174.
- Travell: Labour, fatigue, trouble. Fr. Travail.
- Travers: A curtain. Sq. 1332.
- Tray, Mo. 2561. as Traie.
- Tre: A tree.
- Trechour, RR. 6308. Treacherous, perfidious; A treacherous person, a Traitor. lb. 7168.
- Tredis, RR. 932. See Tretes.
- Tredesoule, Mo. 1566. A cock.
- Treget, RR. 6310, 6820. Tregette, lb. 6267. Tregetry, lb. 6374. Tregettry, lb. 6382. Impolture, tricking, cheating. Tregetoris, Fr. 2697. Tregetours, RR. 7588. Juglers, Impolitors, Cheats. Lat. Barb. Tricator, Deceptor. Fr. Tricheur, Trigaud.
- Tremour: A trembling. Tr. L. 5. 255.
- Trenchant: Sharp, cutting. Fr. Trenchant.
- Trend, Ber. 1304. Perhaps it should be wend; it being easy to mistake w in the MSS. for tt, especially if the last stroke of the w be faint. See lb. 1558. where perhaps should be read, wind how [so] men wend.
- Trenall: A Service performed for the dead the Thirtieth day after their decease. Sk. Or rather, a service of Thirty Masses performed for the dead, which sometimes began the next day after the person's decease, and was repeated on the Anniversary: It also signifies the Obventions; or Allowances to the Priests for performing those Services. See Fr. Gl. in Tricenarium, &c.
- Trepeget, RR. 6279. A military Engine for casting Stones, and battering Walls. Fr. Trupper, or Trebucher. See Fr. Gl. in Trebuchetum.
- Tretable: Tractable, mild, gentle, easy to be entreated. LIV. 411. Mildly, gently. Magd. 605.
- Trete: To treat; A Treaty, a contract.
- Tretes, ProL. 151. Tretise, RR. 1016, 1216. Tretid: Streight. Sp. Streightened, pinched up. Sk. It seems rather to signify Well-shaped or Well-proportioned, and is generally spoken of the face, or some part of it, as the Nose; and perhaps comes from the Fr. Trait, a Feature, or lineament of the face. It is also applied to other things made in just proportion, as to Love's Bow, RR. 932.
- Tretisse: A Tract or Treatise. Cl. 28.
- Tretis, Tretise: A Treaty. Tr. L. 4. 64, 670. See Tretes.
- Trew: True. Tremlich: Truly.
- Treys: Treas. ProL. 1079.
- Treacle: Treacle. It is used in general for a Medicine, Remedy, or Cure. La. 480. To every harm triacle; A salve for every sore.
- Tribucion: Retribution, reward. T. 7.
- Trice: To thrust. Mo. 550. MS. Upiccan.
- Trie, No. 3363. f. Tried, or refined.
- Trill: To turn: To thrust. Sp. 336. See Thirle.
- Trine compas, No. 45. Trinite compas, MS. Ch. The Trinity.
- Trist: To trust. Tr. L. 2. 247. Also, Trust, charge; A Mark, Meta. Sp. and Sk. Instead of Triste. Tr. L. 2. 1534. MS. Sp. hath Tristre. Also, Sad. Tristesse, Fr. Sorrow, sadness.
- Trobelid: Troubled. Ber. 2730.
- Trompis: Trumpets. ProL. 2513.
- Trone: A throne. ProL. 2531. Truned: Inthroned. T. 7.
- Troubale, Troublie, Troublous: Troublesome, boisterous; Troubled; Turbidus, p. 388, b.
- Troublisse: Trouble. Ber. 685.
- Trom, Trome, Tronin: To believe, to trust. MS. Thupum. Thou shalt trone all by me, Tr. L. 2. 956. Ca. and al. read, Thou shalt trust in me.
- Trowanding, Trowandise: Truanting, loitering, strolling, wandering about. RR. 3954.
- Trowes, f. for Trowes: Pains; Fits. PT. 38. See Trowe.
- Trowish: Troth, truth. PT. 602. Also, Believeeth, trusteth.
- Truandis, RR. 6721. Truandise, as Trowanding.
- Truefast: Sincerest, truest, most constant. Bal. Lad. 78.
- Trust, RR. 4722. for Thrust: Thrust, as lb. 5713.
- Tull, MR. 1026. To lure, allure, Sp. See Sk. This Proverb is expressed in other words in Goner, f. 109, a.
- Full oft he faileth of his game
That will with ydell bonde reclayme
His hawk*
- Where ydell bonde, is the same with empty hand here.
- Tulur-like, Cr. 194. Tile-kill-like. Sp. Of a red tile-colour. See Sk.
- Turkis, CL. 80. Turquois, a sort of Precious Stones.
- Turmentise: Torment. Mo. 542.
- Turney: To practise the exercise of Jests and Turnaments. See Gul. Neuhrig. published by Mr. Heame, p. 501, 502. and his Preface, p. 46, &c.
- Turvis: Turfs. Sq. 1753.
- Tutele: Defence, protection. Also, a Guardian, a Patron. Bal. Lad. 57.
- Tut: Two. Cr. 301.
- Twene, for Twaine: Both. Tr. L. 2. 1715. It were better to read it Twaine, or Tweyne (as Ca.) and Helaine, or Helayne, in the foregoing Verse.
- Twey and twey: Two and two. ProL. 900.
- Tweyne: To twine, twist, spin. p. 486, a.
- Twhite, for Töwite: To twilt. Fa. L. 3. 848.
- Twifold: Double. Sq. 1376.
- Twight: Plucked, pulled. Tr. L. 4. 572, 1135. from Twitch.
- Twinn, Twinn: To depart. Tr. L. 3. 1717. To separate. lb. L. 4. 476.
- Twine, Tr. L. 5. 7. as Tweyne.
- Twinkin: To wink, or twinkle with the eyes.
- Twilight: Twi-light. RL. 170.
- Twireth, p. 375, b. Singeth. Sp. Whispeteth. Lat. Susurrat.

Twist: A twig, a small bough of a tree. Sq. 462. To pinch, to put to pain; Twitched, pressed, squeezed. Ib. 1521. Struck, moved, agitated with violence. Fa. L. 2. 267.
Twyes: Twice. PT. 411.
Twynt, PT. 433. Had not a twynt; f. Had not a jot.

V.

Vailable: Available, usefull, profitable. Hen. 142.
Vailed: Aailed. Test.
Valaie: A valley. BD. 24.
Valance: Value. p. 496, b.
Valence, AF. 272. Valencia, a Province of Spain.
Valerie and Theophrast, WB. 672. "Some will have us read Valerie and his Paraphrast: This Valerie wrote a Book De non ducenda uxore, with a Paraphrase upon it, which I have seen (says Sp.) in the Study of Mr. Allen of Oxford, a man of as rare learning, as he is stored with rare books. His name was Gualterus Maape Archdeacon of Oxford, in the days of King Henry the Second, but changed his name, because he would not have the Author known, and termed it Valerius ad Rufinum: But yet there was one called Valerius, who wrote a book of the same argument, printed among St. Jerome's Works; and likewise one called Theophrastus Eresius, who among other things did write a book, wherein he reasoneth, Whether it be convenient for a wife man to marry. Johannes Sarisburiensis in his Policraticon has translated some things in this book out of Greek and Latin, as may appear, Lib. 8. cap. 11. De molestiis et oneribus Conjugiorum; out of which Chaucer hath taken much for this Argument, as may be seen in the Merchants Tale, but more in the Wife of Bath's Prologue, where between 30 and 40 Verses are translated from thence: And if the whole Work at this day were by some sufficient Scholar translated, it would deserve as much commendation as many Books, which learned men, not without great applause, have heretofore translated. Sp.
Valing his cappe: Uncovering himself, putting off his cap. Cr. 272.
Vain, Mo. 1619. See Wine-ape.
Variante: Varying, unconstant, unsettled.
Varien: To vary, differ. It ne maie nought varien: That should not alter the case. Tr. L. 2. 1621.
Vassalage: Servitude, subjection; Service due from the Vassal to the Lord. Prol. 3056. which is thus read in some Copies;
For alle foryetin is than his vassalage.
Vavassour, Vavesour, or Valvasour, Prol. 362. One that is in Dignity next a Baron. Blo. Concerning the Dignity of a Vavassor, and the Etymology of the word, See Fr. Gl. and Spelm.
Vauntour: A boaster, a Braggadocio. Tr. L. 2. 724.
Vecke, RR. 4286, 4495. An abusive name for an old woman, An old Trot, an old Hag. It. Vecchia, An old woman.
Vees: Voice, speech. Rape of vees, Gam. 202. A hasty speaker. It is rees in H. 1. and MS. Ch. See Res, &c.
Veigne, RR. 447. Veine: Vain.
Veine blode: Bleeding by opening a vein. Prol. 2749.
Veined, perhaps for Veived, or Weived: Put away, cast off. p. 480, a. l. 48. p. 499, b. l. 25. Disappointed. See Weive.
Vel, Ber. 551. f. for Well, i. e. Very.
Vendable: To be sold, set to sale. RR. 5804.
Venemus: Venomous.
Venery: Hunting. Prol. 166. Fr. Venerie.
Venge: To revenge. p. 152, a. Fr. Vanger. Vengeable: Revengefull. Mo. 2745. Vengience: Vengeance, revenge. RR. 6430.
Venim: Venom, poison. Prol. 2753.
Vente: The forepart. AL. 526. Fr. Avant, Before.
Ventonfinge: Cupping. Prol. 2747. Fr. Ventenser, To cup.

Ver, Lat. The Spring. Tr. L. 1. 157.
Verament: In truth, truly. No. 3222. Fr. Vrayment. It. Veramente. Mo. 3154. should be thus read; So is he therein verament, i. e. truly in the Eucharist.
Verdite: A verdict, opinion. AF. 503.
Verger, Vergere, Vergir: A garden. RR. 3610, 3831. Fr. Verger, An orchard.
Verilayes, Fr. 2494. A rustick song or dance. Sk. Fr. Virelaie, A roundelay, Countrey-ballad; or Free-man's song. Blo.
Veritrate, Fr. 318. In some Copies it is verry [al. very] trate, in others virirate: A very trot. Sk. An old trot.
Vermaile, RR. 3645. Vermelet, CL. 142. Of a vermilion colour.
Vernage, No. 2597. A sweet wine; so called (says Sk.) because the best of the sort is brought from Verona.
Vernicle, Prol. 687. A Cloth, or Napkin, wherein is represented the figure of Christ's Face; from Saint Veronica, whose Handkerchief is supposed to have the impression of Christ's Face upon it. Sk. Misson, in his Description of the Chappel of the Holy Handkerchief (Le Saint Suaire) at Turin, gives this account of it; "It is a pretended Veil, or Handkerchief, which was presented (says that Tradition) to our Saviour, as he was carrying the Cross (according to St. John) by a Maid named Veronica. They pretend, that Jesus Christ wiped his Face with it, and gave it back to her who had presented him with it; and that the Face of J. C. remained imprinted upon it with some colour: This is the Holy Handkerchief, Sudarium. And as for Veronica the Devout Virgin, 'tis a pretty diverting stroke of ignorance: With these words, Vera Jeon, that is to say, a true image or representation (viz. of the Face of J. Christ) those curious Doctors have made Veronica; and afterwards they took a fancy, that Veronica was the name of a woman, of the pretended young woman supposed by themselves to have presented her handkerchief to our Saviour. This Sudarium was carryed from Chambery in the year 1532. the Chappel where it was at Chambery having been accidentally burnt. There are five or six more at Rome and other places. See Reiskius de Imaginibus Christi, and Bede de Locis sanctis. Misson's New Voyages to Italy. London, 1714. Vol. II. Part 2. p. 388.
Vernishid his bede: Varnished his head, i. e. got drunk. MR. 1041.
Verray, Very: True. WB. 1204. Truly. Fa. L. 2. 571.
Verre, Fr. Glafs. Tr. L. 2. 867.
Versefour: A Poet. p. 156, a.
Verteue: Vertue.
Vertue: Valour; Virtus, p. 157, a.
Vertueless: Without vertue, of no use. Tr. L. 2. 344.
Vesselage, RR. 5871. See Vassalage.
Vessel: Plate. Mo. 418, 3070. Fr. Vaiselle.
Vestments: Cloaths.
Veved, Gam. 170. f. for Reved.
Viage: A voyage, a journey; Trave's. Prol. 77.
Vicary: A Vicar. Mo. 3332.
Vice: The Nuel or Spindle of a winding stair-case. Ch. Dr. 1310. Fr. Escalier à vis, A winding stair-case.
Viendid, Prol. 344. Furnished with provisions, or victuals. Fr. Viande, Provisions, &c.
Vigile, Tr. L. 5. 305. The Ceremony of watching a dead Body till it was burned or buried. See Liche-make.
Vigillie, or Vigils, Prol. 379. "It was the manner in times past upon Festival Evens, called Vigilie, for Parishioners to meet in their Church-houses, and there to have a drinking fit for the time: Here they used to end many quarrels between neighbour and neighbour; hither came the wives in comely manner, and they which were of the better sort had their mantles carried with them, as well for shew, as to keep them from cold at the table. These mantles also many did use in the Church at Morrow-masses, and other times. Sp. Vigils may be taken here for the Nocturnal Office used in the Church, to which the Citizens wives resorted in great state.
Villany, Villony, Vilony: A base, rude, dishonourable, or wicked word or action, such as none but a mean fellow, a Villain, would be guilty of; Disgrace. Ph. 106. Foul contagion, or infection. p. 376, b.
Vinario envermilled, Bal. Lad. 45. A vineyard made red. Sp.

Sp. Of a purple, or vermillion colour.
Vinolene: Given to wine; Drunk. WB. 467. Full of wine.
Fr. 667. Smelling of wine. Sp.
Visage, Fr. The face. Visage ii, Sq. 1791. Face it out.
Wife: A voice. Test. It is also put for Wife, Tr. L. 3.
 1390. But Ca. and al. read it denyse, V. MS. Sp. Wyse.
 See Wife. By thine own wife, i. e. wife; Of thine own accord. p. 481, a.
Vine: A vine. Bal. Lad. 113. Lat. Vitis.
Viteile: Visual. MR. 460. Viteilis: Visuals. Ib. 443.
Umple, AL. 471. Fine Lawn. Sp.
Unaracid: Not plucked or pulled asunder; Inconvulsa,
p. 386, a. See Arace.
Unaservid: Deserved not. PT. 56.
Unbarde: Unbarred, unbolted; Enlarged, set at liberty.
Gr. 7.
Unbetide: Not to happen. p. 402, b.
Unbide: To abide. p. 515, b. 516, b.
Unbodie: To leave the body. Tr. L. 5. 1549. p. 480, b.
Unbuckle: To unbuckle, to open. See Male.
Unbrace: To unfold. Magd. 211.
Unbrennid, Unbrent: Unburnt. Fz. L. 1. 173.
Unbroidin, or (as in MS. Sp.) Unbreydid, Tr. L. 4. 818.
 Unbraided, not tyed up, not twitted.
Uncircumscrip: Not circumscribed, infinite. Tr. L. 5.
 1864.
Uncis: Ounces.
Unclosid: Not enclosed, open. RR. 3921. Untyed. Ib.
 4698.
Uncommitted: Not committed to one's care. Office un-
committed of anoyeth; Proffered service thinks. AF. 518.
Unconninge, Uncunninge: Ignorance. Alto, Ignorant, unskillfull. See Conning.
Uncovenable: Inconvenient, unseasonable, troublesome; Importunus, Boeth.
Uncouple, Mo. 528. To let loose, or To be let loose, as hounds. In the Edition 1603. and al. it is Encom-
ple: To couple, joyn together.
Uncomth: Unknown, strange. Sq. 304. Unusual, uncommon, disagreeable. Boeth.
Uncunninge, as Uncunninge.
Undangerid: Not endangered, out of danger. Ber. 1676.
Undefended: Not forbidden. Hen. 224. See Defende.
Undeparable: Inseparable, not to be divided. p. 588, b.
Undergrowe: Undergrown, of a low stature. Pro. 156.
Undern, Fr. 1290, 2002. The Afternoon, the Evening.
 It is still used in that sense in some parts of England, and may be so understood in Chaucer. Mr. Som-
ner says it signifies the Forenoon, the Third hour of the day, or Nine of the Clock with us; as it certainly does in the Saxon passages he quotes in Undepn: To which Dr. Hikes adds another which is very expressive.
Undepn is baȝer þriððe tīð. Cod. MS. Can. et Const.
Eccl. in Rubrica de Officiis. Cap. 28. Hick. Somn.
Underneme, AS. Undep-niman, To undertake, to receive. p. 591, a. 1. 28. The sense of that Paragraph appears clearer from the Reading of it in Mr. Rawlinson's
MS. which is thus; Frere, where fynde ye bi goddis lawe
that preestis schulden prifoun her britheren and so distroie hem; siȝh the goſpel techith to undernyme hem in charite and so to wyne hem; and if he wole not be wanne bi you ne bi the chirche, goddis lawe and seint Austins rule techith us to putte hym from thee as an hethen man: This is not to prifoun hem.
Undernome: Took, received; Perceived. No. 254. See Underneme.
Underput: Subject. Underputting: Subjection. Test.
Underfond: To bear, support, sustain. p. 198, b. Undir-
fonding of temptation; Ability to withstand a tem-pation.
Undirfongen, Hen. 264. Undertaken. Undirfongith: Un-dertaketh. RR. 5709. See Fong.
Undirmelis, WB. 875. Times of Undern, V.
Undirspore: To heave up by putting a pole or lever underneath. MR. 357. See Spere.
Undisptious: Without spight. Ch. Dr. 674. See Despise and Disptise.
Undo: To explain. RR. 9.
Undoubtous: Undoubted. p. 395, a.
Undowne: Undone. Test.
Undren, as Undern.

Uneath, Uneth, Unethes, Unethis, Uneths: Scarcely, hardly. AS. Un-eaȝe. See Eith.

Uneschuable: Unavoidable, p. 396, b.

Unese: Uneasiness, disquiet. Ch. Dr. 867.

Unfawe, Gam. 166. perhaps should be read unfawe (as it is in H. 1.) Unfown. But MS. Ch. reads the place thus;

Hee thoughte on his landis, that laye unfowe,
And his feyre ookis, that down were Ichrome.

Unfeßlich: Sad. Sq. 386. See Feßlich.

Ungilty: Guiltless, innocent. Tr. L. 3. 1020.

Ungodely: Uncivil. RR. 3741. Dishonourably. Bl. Kn.
 386. See Godely.

Ungraceable: Disagreeable, ungratefull; Ingratus, p. 359, a.

Unhap, Unhappe: Mishap, misfortune. Tr. L. 1. 553.
MS. Sp. reads the place thus;

—What maie this be to mene.

Unhardy: Cowardly, faint-hearted. Unhardy is unsely,
MR. 1102. A coward is unfortunate, or Faint heart
never won fair Lady.

Unhele: Misfortune. No. 1630. Want of health, sickness.

Unhide: To lay open, to discover. RR. 2168.

Unholde: Of no account or value. Their servantes be so them unholde, Mo. 2413. "Their servants are little beholden to them, or get little by them, are little esteemed, unless they can find means to double their Lord's Revenues. Com.

Uniale Bal. 573. f. Smooth, plain, exact; from the Fr.
Uni.

Unjoine: To disjoyn, separate; Diffociare, p. 384, b.

Universe, Tr. L. 3. 36. In universe; Univertally, in general.

Univertitie: The Universe, the World. p. 489, b.

Unkist: Not kissed. Tr. L. 1. 820.

Unknowable: Not possible to be known; Ignorabilis, p.
 373, a.

Unkonninge, Unkunning, as Unconninge.

Unlace his male: Open his mail or packet. PT. 700.

Unlacid: Opened. PT. 67.

Unlettid: Uninterrupted, unmolested. Ch. Dr. 1829.

Unlovin: Not to love, to cease to love. Tr. L. 5. 1697.

Unlust: Unwillingness, ill will, dislike. p. 203, b.

Unlustes, p. 513, b. 1. 60. Should be unlustie, or unlusty, as in p. 514, b. 1. 13. Disagreeable. See Lust, Lustie.

Unmanhode: An unmanly action. Tr. L. 1. 835.

Unmeke: Uncivil, rude. RR. 590.

Unmete: Unmeet, unfit, improper. FL. 17.

Unmightye: Unable. Tr. L. 2. 858.

Unneth. See Uneath.

Unpacience: Impatience. RR. 4575.

Unpece: Want of peace, discord. p. 506, a.

Unperegall: Unequal; Impar, p. 374, a.

Unpin: To open. Tr. L. 3. 699.

Unpitous, f. for Impious; Impia, Boeth. p. 359, a. 1. 26.

Unplite: To unfold, to explain; Explicare, p. 373, b.

Unpower: Want of power, weakness. p. 593, b.

Unpurveied: Unforeseen, unexpected. p. 365, b. Unpro- vided, not ready. AL. 382.

Unquert, Ber. 1323. f. Undeserved, unsought, unexe-cuted. See Gl. V. in Unquirit.

Unreson: Unreasonableness. p. 514, b.

Unrest: Uneasiness, disquiet. Fr. 231, 1739. In p. 393,
a. 1. 67. the Translator seems to have taken inquiet for a Noun, and so translated it unrest: Or else it may have been put in the margin as another sense of inquiet;
 for the true sense of it is also in the Text, thou mayst
saie, and if unrest be omitted, the sense will be plain and compleat.

Unrestie: Causing uneasiness. Tr. L. 5. 1354.

Unright: Wrong. Bl. Kn. 335. Falshood. Tr. L. 3. 986.

But that Verse is better read in MS. Sp. Ca. and al.

Ne schulde of right none untrouthe in hyr gesse.

i. e. Should not justly suspect her of any falshood.

Unsad: Fickle. Fr. 2016. See Sad.

Unscience: Ignorance, want of knowledge. p. 398, a.

Unfely: Unhappy, unfortunate. MR. 1102. See Unhar-
dy. Unfelynesses: Misfortunes. p. 390, a.

Unset: Not appointed. See Sieven.

Unshete: Opened. BD. 65.

Unshrive,

- Unshrive, Mo. 2691. for Unshriven: Not confessed.
 Unsicke: Not sick, in good health. Ch. Dr. 1203.
 Unskilfully: Unreasonably. Not unskilfully; Not without cause; Non injuria, p. 378, a.
 Unstaked: Unstaked. No. 827.
 Unslept: Having had no sleep. Ch. Dr. 1834.
 Unsolempne: Uncommon, unusual; Not famous; Incelebris, p. 361, a.
 Unsuccessfull: Unsuccessfull, ineffectual. p. 403, b.
 Unstaple: Unlocked, unbolted. RR. 2654. See Spere.
 Unstanch'd, Unstanchable: Insatiable, unquenchable;
 Inexhaustible; Inexplebilis, inexhaustus, Boeth.
 Unsured: Most uncertain. Ch. Dr. 892.
 Unswell: To sink down or fall after swelling. Tr. L. 4.
 1146.
 Unswete: Not sweet, stinking. Fa. L. 1. 72.
 Unstall: Short, of a low stature. Mo. 2014. See Toteth.
 Unthake, Unthanke, Tr. L. 5. 699. Ill will; Mischance.
 Unthake come on his hand, MR. 974. A curse on his hand. See Thanke.
 Unthrift: Prodigal, indiscreet. See Thrifty.
 Unthrive: Ill success, misfortune, disappointment. CN.
 142.
 Untill: To, unto.
 Unto: Untill. AE. 647.
 Untrend, Mo. 2536. Some read the place, seken the wool
untrend: But the Edition 1602. and al. have it,
Of hem seken the woll to rend, that is, He takes hold of, and embraces the sheep, as the cook does, to cut him in pieces, to rend the wool off his back, when he hath taken him. Com.
 Untractable: Untractable, inexorable. p. 373, b.
 Untrist: To be mistrustfull, to be jealous or diffident.
 Tr. L. 3. 841.
 Untrouche: Fallhood. Tr. L. 5. 1098.
 Untrust: Uncertainty. Bal. 236.
 Unusage: Disuse; Insolentia, p. 372, b.
 Unware: Sudden, unexpected. La. 428. Unawares. Tr.
 L. 1. 550.
 Unweld: Unwieldy. RR. 359.
 Unwemmud: Pure, unblemished. No. 236.
 Unweringly: Unknowingly, ignorantly.
 Unwist: Unknown. Tr. L. 2. 1294. Ignorant. Ib. 1400.
 Unwitt, CM. 118. Folly, want of Witte, V.
 Unwitting: Not knowing, ignorant. Unwitting of this Dorigene; Without the knowledge of Dorigene. Fr. 2482.
 Unwote: Knoweth not. He ne unwote nat; He is not ignorant; Non nesciat, p. 402, b.
 Unwrappe: To discover, lay open, La. 103.
 Unwrie: To uncover. Tr. L. 1. 859. See Wrie.
 Unwurschip: Disgrace, a dishonourable thing. p. 484, b.
 Unyd: United. Ber. 2990.
 Unyoldin: Without yielding or surrendring one's self.
 Prol. 2726.
 Voide, Voidin: To empty. Fr. Vuider. To depart; To remove, to drive away, to put away; To leave,
 quit, forsake; To dismiss; To ease. RR. 2922.
 To frustrate, or make void; Evacuare, p. 403, a.
 Voidid: Gone out of the room. Tr. L. 2. 912: L. 3.
 233.
 Volage, Fr. Fickle, light, unconstant, rash. Mo. 1816.
 RR. 1284.
 Volatily, No. 2580. Wild fowl. Sp. Fr. Volatile, Fowls.
 Volipere: A kercher. Sp. A wrapper for the head. MR.
 133. From the Fr. Envelope, To wrap up.
 Volome: A volume. WB. 681.
 Volunte: Will, pleasure. RR. 5276. Fr. Volonté. Of volunte; Willfully, for the nonce. Bl. Kn. 300.
 Vomes: Foam, froth; Spumis, p. 396, a.
 Vouchidase: Vouchsafed. ABC, H. 1.
 Vouchasyn, Tr. L. 2. or rather (as MS. Sp.) Vouchethsafe:
 Vouchsafeth.
 Vouch ye save: Vouchsafe ye.
 Vounde stone, RR. 7113. Free-stone. Sp. See Sk.
 Up, Sq. 1899. MR. 1182. for Upon. In La. 796. instead of On pain, &c. MS. Ch. hath Uppeyne; which seems to be the genuine reading. Up paine for to be ded, RR.
 667. Upon pain of death.
 Upbrayd: Upbraided. Hyp. 304.
 Upperest: Uppermost, highest. Boeth. p. 360, a.
 Uppeyne. See Up.
 Uphape: Heaved, or lifted up. Prol. 2430.
 Uphap: Perhaps. p. 489, a.
 Uphent: Taken up or lifted.
 Upreisid: Raised up. Di. 238. Extolled. Boeth.
 Upright signifies Straight (whether lying down, or standing up) in opposition to Crooked. Dr. Ch. 451.
 Uprist: Risen up.
 Upswale: Swelled up.
 Uppase: Gave up, sent up.
 Urchons: Urchins. RR. 3135.
 Ure, Bl. Kn. 152, 303, 483. Fate, destiny, chance, hap;
 Use. Sp. Contracted from the Lat. Ufura, Use. Or from the Fr. Heure, Hora; whence Bonheur, Malheur, Good or Bad fortune. See Sk. Ured: Fortunate. I was well ued: I had good fortune. Ch. Dr. 144. Enured is used in the same sense, Ib. 796.
 Usage, Fr. Use, experience. Prol. 2450. Custom. No.
 2580.
 Usant: Using, wont, accustomed. MR. 833.
 Usances: Usages, custom. p. 377, a. l. 31.
 Usen: To enjoy. p. 373, b.
 Userere: An usurer. Ib. 5691.
 Usure: Usury. RR. 5797.
 Utter, Utir: Outward, external. No. 509. The outermost. Tr. L. 3. 665. Utterliche: Utterly. Ib. L. 2.
 1710.
 Utterest: The utmost, uttermost, or outermost.

W.

- W. Achet, MR. 213. Sky-colour. Sk.
 Wade, Tr. L. 3. 615. He told a tale of Wade, or (as in MS. Sp.) the tale; A Romantick Story, famous at that time, of one Wade, who performed many strange Exploits, and met with many wonderful adventures in his Boat Guingelot. Sq. 940.
 Wafersers, No. 1993. qu. Wayfarers: Way-faring men; vagabonds.
 Wafte about, Gam. 1556. Wandered about, went up and down; f. Cast about, contrived: But instead of he wafte about, H. 1. and MS. Ch. have, he was fast aboute.
 Wage: Wages, hire. BD. 243, 684.
 Wailid: Changed, old. Sp. Choice, picked out, selected.
 Wailid wine, CCr. 29. Choice wine. See Sk. and Gl. V.
 in Wale.
 Waimenting: Lamenting, bewailing. Tr. L. 2. 65. But
 Ib. 68. it is better to read (as it is in MS. Sp. and al.)
chytering, i. e. chattering; it being very improbable that the Poet should use the same word at the end of two Verses rhiming to one another, which seldom or never happens, unless the word is used in different senses.
 Wake: To watch. Fr. 636.
 Walachie, Dr. Ch. 1024. Wallachia, a Province tributary to the Turk, bordering upon Poland, part of the ancient Dacia.
 Wall, Mo. 2023, 2238. seems to signify a Well.
 Walnote shale: A walnut shell. Fa. L. 3. 191.
 Waloweth up: Vomiteth, or casteth up; Eructare, p.
 371, a.
 Waltring: Weltring, tossing, tumbling or rolling about.
 MR. 508. MS. Ch. hath it Walrynge, i. e. Wallowing.
 Waltsome: Loathsome. Sp. Hatefull. Mo. 1168.
 Wan, Prol. 444. Won, or gained.
 Wane or wax, No. 1539. Decrease or increase.
 Wanger: A male, or budget. Sp. A pillow. No. 3417.
 AS. pangepe; from the AS. panġ, The cheek.
 Wangis: The Grinders. MR. 922. from the AS. panġ,
 The cheek; qu. Cheek-teeth. See Somn.
 Wangtothe, Mo. 1956. The Wanges are the great teeth, which in a dog are called Fangs. See Wanges.
 Wanhope: Despair. p. 480, b.
 Wanisheth: Vanisheth. Test. L. 2. The w and v are often confounded in the MSS.
 Wantruff: Distrust, diffidence, jealousy. p. 488, a: 500, b.
 Tr. L. 1. 805.
 Wapid: Troubled, sorrowful. An. 217. See Anēapid.
 War,

- War, as Ware.
Warrantise, Bal. 896. f. The same with Warrantise, V.
Wardain: A Guardian, a Keeper; One that is upon Guard. Tr. L. 3. 666. Wardainis, Wardinis: Guards. WB. 1216. Keepers; Judges, or Arbitrators. Gam. 553.
Wardcorps: A Life-guard-man. WB. 359. Fr. Garde de corps.
Wardrobe, Wardrope, No. 3081. A house of office. Fr. Garderobe.
Ware: Wary, cautious. Prol. 311. Also, Wore or did wear. FL. 340.
Variangles, Fr. 144. "A kind of birds full of noise, and very ravenous, preying upon others, which when they have taken, they use to hang upon a thorn or prickle, and tear them in pieces and devour them: And the common opinion is, that the thorn, whereupon they thus fasten and eat them, is afterwards poisonous. In Staffordshire and Shropshire the name is common. Sp.
Warie, Warien: To curse. La. 373. Tr. L. 2. 1619. AS. þeþuan, þeþigan. To grow weary of. Tr. L. 5. 1377. My life I warie; I am weary of my life; Tædet me. Also, To worry.
Warin: Warned, cautioned. Tr. L. 1. 647.
Warisbe: To cure, heal, ease; To be healed, to mend, recover. p. 147, b. Fr. Guerir. Warisþing, p. 148, a. Warison, RR. 1537. Cure; Recovery. Fr. Guerison.
Warne: To encourage; To assure. Fr. 2094. To hinder, forbid. RR. 5840. To deny, refuse. Ib. 3652, 3730. To refrain, forbear.
Warnisþe, p. 498, b. 1. 58. f. A Guard; To guard.
Warnstore, p. 152, b. 153, a. To fortify; To defend.
Warrantise: Guaranty. On warrantise, AL. 406. For certain; I'll warrant you.
Warray, Warraye, Warrie: To make war upon, to disturb, or molest; To worry. AS. þeþigean, Læcessere, molestare.
Warriangles, as Variangles.
Wase: A wisp. Ber. 1617.
Wassell bread, Prol. 147. Fine Cymnel. Sp. Bread or cakes made of the finest flower. For the original signification of the word see Verfeg. Chap. V.
Wate: To know. RR. 5399.
Wattynge strete, Fa. L. 2. 431. See Galaxie.
Watti's pack, RL. 67. To bear Watti's pack, seems to have been a Proverbial expression signifying, To be duped, fooled, or imposed upon.
Wave: Wove. Ph. 128.
Wawe: A wave. RR. 4712. Wawis: Waves. Ib. 3776.
Wavy: Waving. Ch. Dr. 695.
Wax. See Wane.
Wayin: To weigh. LIV. 398. Wayiþ: Weigheth. Luc. 109.
Wayuin: To depart, to turn. Sj. 999.
Waywarde: Froward; Cruel. Adagd. 237.
Webbs: A weaver. Prol. 364. AS. þebba.
Wed, Wedde: A pawn, a pledge. AS. þeþ. To wedde; In pawn. No. 2631.
Wede: Weeds, apparel. No. 2342. Mo. 2151. Wedis: Weeds. Tr. L. 1. 947.
Week: Wicked. Tr. L. 2. 1273. See Wike.
Weelful, as Welefull.
Weened: Thought.
Weer, for Were, Ber. 2833.
Wegging: Wagging, moving. Tr. L. 2. 1745.
Weikid: Weakened. RR. 4737.
Weilith: Bewaileth. Tr. L. 5. 211.
Weine: To wane, to decrease. RR. 2080.
Weive, Weivin: To wave, put off; To refuse, neglect, forsake. Tr. L. 2. 284. To move to and fro; To let go, to drive away. Boeth. Instead of Weivith, Tr. L. 4. 602. MS. Sp. hath, Flieth from.
Wekin: To weaken; To lessen, or abate. Tr. L. 4. 1144.
Wekid: Weakened; Tired.
Welaway: An expression of grief or surprize. Welaway the found, Tr. L. 3. 1701. Welaway the while, Ib. L. 4. 1. Alas the time! Welaway for to sing: To make a woful cry, or lamentation. See Gl. V.
Weld, Weldin: To wield, rule, manage, govern, command. Fr. 683. AS. þealbān. Weldid, Weld: Ruled, governed. Welding: Management; Power. p. 156, b.
Weldy: Nimble, active. Tr. L. 2. 636. Ce. and al. read, so worthy.
Wele: Health; Welfare, prosperity. La. 176. where instead of lizin wele, it may be better read, lize [or lizin] in wele, as in MS. Ch. and al. Also, Wealth, riches. AS. þealan.
Weleful, Weleful: Blessed. La. 452. Happy; Healthy.
Welefulnesse, Welefulnesse: Happiness, Prosperity. Beeth.
Welke: Did walk, walked. Ch. Dr. 828.
Welkid, No. 2254. Withered. Sp. or rather, Full of wheels or wheals. Welked: Shortened, impaired. Gloss. to Spenser's Works. See Welknith.
Welkin: The Sky; The Firmament. Dr. Ch. 339. AS. þealan, from þeale, The Revolution of Celestial Bodies.
Welknith, Hyper. 214. f. Turneth, changeth; from the AS. þealcān, To revolve, to rowl up and down, &c. See Gl. V. in Walkyn.
Well, Wellin: To flow; To spring. Tr. L. 4. 700.
Wellynge: Flowing; Springing. p. 480, b. See Welknith.
Wellis: Wells, springs. Tr. L. 5. 1373.
Well-willy: Well-wishing, bearing good will, favourable. Tr. L. 3. 1263.
Wellynge. See Well.
Welmiþ, RR. 1561. Riseth. Sp. From the AS. þeallian, Scaturire. Sk.
Welny: Well nigh, almost. Dr. Ch. 3.
Welþlich: Like a whelp. PT. 481.
Welle: Governed, ruled; Had the power, command, or use of. Mo. 122. See Weld.
Welþed: Wealthy, rich, Teft.
Welþemid: Having good qualities, or morals; Bene moratus, Boeth. See Themis.
Wem, Sq. 141. Wemme, RR. 930. A spot, a blemish; A fault. AS. þem, þemme. Also, Hurt, damage. Sk.
Wemleß: Unspotted, innocent. Pars.
Wend, Wende, Wendin: To go; Went. Tr. L. 2. 1654. Thought; from Wene, V. Wendin her delight, Tr. L. 4. 683. — her disþort, Ib. 724. Thought to divert her.
Wendé conne: Thought to have conu'd, or got by heart.
Wende: Guess, conjecture. Bl. Kn. 463.
Wende, for Winde, or (as in MS. Sp.) Wynde, i. e. Turn; revolve. Tr. L. 3. 1547.
Wene, Wenin: To think, suppose, imagine. AS. þenan.
Wene: A supposition, doubt. Withoutin wene; Doubtless.
Wengeresses, for Vengeresses: Revengers. Boeth.
Wenþow, for Wenþ thou? Thinkest thou? WB. 311.
Went: A doubt, a thought; from Wene. Going, passing. Tr. L. 5. 605. A way, a passage. Tr. L. 3. 783. Fa. L. 1. 182. Gone. p. 491, b. from Wend. To go. Also, A turn. Tr. L. 2. 63. from the AS. þendan, To wind, to turn. Want. FL. 150.
Wepelie: Weeping, mournful. Teft.
Wepen, Wepin: Weapons. Mo. 3032. Ar. 255.
Wer: War. Ch. Dr. 2110. Also, Were.
Werbelles: Warblings. p. 492, a.
Werch, Werchin: To work, to do.
Werdis, Hyper. 19. as Wierdis.
Were, Where: Doubt, delay. Withoutin were; Without doubt. RR. 1776. His herte in soche a where is set, Ib. 5699. His heart is in such a maze or uncertainty. In soche a were, Hyper. 125. In such confusion. Also, A wear. Tr. L. 3. 35. AF. 138. To wear.
Werin, Werin: Were.
Werie: Weary, faint. RR. 445. Wieried me, Tr. L. 5. 584. should be read (as in MS. Sp.) werried, or (as in al. and al.) werreyed me, i. e. made war upon me. See Werrey.
Werke: Work; A deed; To work.
Werne, for Werē: Were.
Werne, Wernin, as Varne.
Werre: War. In his Lordis werre, Prol. 48. He served in the wars under his Lord, from whom he held by Knight-Service. Also, Grief, sorrow. Tr. L. 5. 1392. Dr. Ch. 616. Perhaps for Were, V. Also, for Werrey, ABC. P. 4.

- Werrey*, See Warray.
Wers: Worfe. Werst: Worst.
Werth, Cr. 385. CCr. 886. Worth, deserving. Sp. and Sk.
 But perhaps it may be the same with Wierde: Fate or Destiny. See Wierdes.
Weryin, Prol. 1545. or (as in MS. Ch.) Werrien, as War- ray.
Wesh: Washed. La. 454.
Westrin: To draw towards the West. Tr. L. 2. 906.
Westrich: Sets as the Sun. Hyper. 186.
Wetche: Watch. RL. 96.
Wete: To wet, to bath. Tr. L. 3. 1121.
Weten: To know, to understand. AS. Pitan.
Wetbir: The weather; A weather. Tr. L. 4. 1374.
Weve, Tr. L. 2. 1050. See Weive.
Wexacionne: Vexation. Ber. 2317.
Weving: Waxing, increasing. Prol. 2080.
Wext: Waxed, grew.
Weymenting. See Waimenting.
Weyve, Weywin, Gan. 1742. as Weive.
Whare: Where. Fr. 186.
What: Somewhat, wherewithall. RR. 6737. Ellis what;
 Any thing else. Fa. L. 3. 651. In Mo. 2417. it is mistaken for with, both being in the MSS. writ with the same Abbreviation. The sense of that passage is this; Since I can find no more English words to agree or rhyme to the word fall (with which almost every Stanza of the First part of this Tale ended) he would now make use of another word [amende] having much more to lay upon the same subject.
Whele: A wheel. Tr. L. 1. 840. MS. Sp. hath it, will;
 but the other seems to be the genuine reading. See Ib.
 851.
Whelmin: To overwhelm, overturn, oppress. Tr. L. 1.
 139.
Wber, Where: Whether; Wheresoever. See Were.
Wherethrough: Whereby, by which means. RR. 3733.
Wherto: Wherefore, to what end.
Whiche: Who, what, what sort or manner of. p. 153, a.
 1. 70. Mo. 1570.
Whight: White. Bl. Kn. 2.
While: Time, space. The Devil quit him his while, Ar.
 342. The Devil requite him in his turn. In the same while; At the same time. Bl. Kn. 624.
Whilere: Ere while, some time before. No. 1349.
Whilis and whilis: One while and another; Now —
 then. Cr. 224.
Whilke: Which.
Whillome: Formerly, a long time ago.
Whiso: Why so. Dr. Ch. 30.
White wordis: Fair words. Tr. L. 3. 1573.
Whitin: To grow white and clear. Tr. L. 5. 276.
Who, for How. p. 206, b. 1. 68.
Whyle, as While.
Wiche: A whitche, a kind of chest.
Wicke: Bad; Stinking, noisom. Also, Counterfeit. Sp.
 Contracted from Wicked.
Wide where: Every where, far and near. Tr. L. 3. 405.
Wierdes: The Fates, or Destinies, Parca. Tr. L. 3. 618.
AS. Pypd. Fate, Destiny. See Gl. V. in Weird.
Wifehode, Wifehode: The duty or affection of a wife;
 Dutifulness. Fr. 3005.
Wifely: Becoming a wife. Fr. 1459.
Wight: Weight. Tr. L. 2. 1385. Any person, He, or She.
AS. Pitan. Animal, creature. Nimble, active, swift.
Mo. 381. RR. 4761. CL. 1300.
Wik, Wike, Wikk, as Wicke.
Wike: Week. Tr. L. 2. 1273.
Wild fire, p. 198, b. Brenninge of wild fire; Highly seasoned.
Wilfully: Willingly. Bl. Kn. 554.
Wilfulness: An immoderate desire of revenge. p. 153, b.
 But in p. 363, b. 1. 3. and p. 366, a. 1. 27. it should be read Wilefulness; Felicitas.
Willers, Mo. 2720. Wilfull, or wily men. Com.
Wilky: Willing, favourable. Willy fond at all; Found favourable on all occasions. Bl. Kn. 628.
Wilne: To will.
Wimple: A woman's hood, or veil. "It is most commonly taken for a linnen plaited cloth, which Nuns and Religious women wear about their necks. Blo. Peplum is translated Wimpill, by Dougl. Also, To cover, hide, veil one's self. Wimpled: Covered, wrapped up in a Wimple. Prol. 472.
Winds: To go. Fl. 263. See Wend.
Windir: To trim, or adorn. RR. 1020. See Sk.
Windlas: A machine for weighing Anchors. It is used more generally for any Machine for lifting up heavy Bodys.
Wine ape, Mo. 1621. "Vinum Apianum (says Sp.) which maketh one in such taking, that he cannot with a straw bit a broad fawn: The cause is for that after the drinking thereof unmeasurably, one thing seemeth two to the eyes, &c. But as all Wines drunk to excess have this effect, it may as well be read as it is in this Edition, Wine, you ape; for which correction no doubt Mr. Urry had good Authority.
Winers, p. 515, a. 1. 46. Welked winers: Withered vine branches. Sk. Perhaps that passage should be read
 —welked wivernes and venomous serpentes. See Welkid and Wivere.
Winlas, Sq. 204. See Windlas.
Winning: Gaining, getting riches. Mo. 2758.
Wintrid: Wrinkled, or rather Grey or hoary, as the Winter. RR. 1018.
Wirch: To work. Prol. 2761.
Wirid, Ber. 1512. for Wierid. See Werrey, or Warray.
Wirry: To worry. RR. 6264.
Wis, Wisy, Wisyly: Certainly, verily, truly.
Wise: To direct. See Wisse. Instead of But thou wise, thou wost, &c. Tr. L. 1. 1053. MS. Sp. hath it thus;
 But thou woste, thou mayst, thou canst, thou art all;
Wise: Manner, custom. In his bird's wise, Tr. L. 2. 920.
 After the manner of a bird. It is often printed for Wis, Dr. Ch. 550, 683. and Wisely for Wisy. See Wis.
Wise: Washed. RR. 96.
Wishin: To wash; Washed. Also, To wish.
Wiste: Washed. ABC. Z. 2.
Wissil: A weazel. MR. 126.
Wisse: To direct, shew, teach, instruct. WB. 1008. Tr.
L. 1. 623. Mo. 2175. AS. Pitan.
Wissely. See Wis, &c.
Wisse, Prol. 2285. Wissin: Washed.
Wisy. See Wis.
Wist, Wistin: Knew. AS. Pitan. To know.
Wit, Tr. L. 2. 312. Wite, RR. 7661. Witten, Ib. 2692.
 To know. AS. Pitan. See Wite.
Wit, Wite: To blame; To charge one with, to impute.
AS. Pitan. Culpere. Also, A fault. AS. Pite. It
wol be wit to me, Ber. 652. It will be imputed to me.
Wite all thy self the care, Tr. Wite thy self thy care. Ca. and al. f. leg. Wite thy self all the care; Thank thy self for all the trouble that shall ensue. It should be wittid hir; She should be blamed for it. Ber. 644.
Wittholde: To retain; To employ one, as a Chirur-gion, &c. p. 148, a. To stop. Mo. 108.
Withoutforthe: Without. p. 383, a.
Wishain: Withsay; To contradict; To deny, renounce.
Wisheten: Opposed. See Wishfute.
Wishfey, as Wishain.
Wishfute: To contradict, withstand, resist. p. 498, b.
Wishstante: Do withstand, hinder. Boeth. p. 365, b.
Wist: Blamest. See Wit, Wite.
Wisse: Senseless.
Witnessfully: Better attested; Tessatus, p. 391, b.
Wisse: Sense; A good disposition of mind; Ingenium, p.
 368, b. Thought. Tr. L. 4. 1425. To my wite; In my opinion, As far as I know, To the best of my understanding, To my thinking. Fr. 2421. Fa. L. 2. 194.
Witten. See Wit.
Witterly: Certainly. It is frequently in MS. Ch. for utterly.
Wittes, p. 154, a. Wittis: Senses.
Witting: Knowledge; Knowing.
Wive: To wed, marry.
Wivchode, as Wifehode.
Wively, Fr. 2071. as Wifely.
Wivere, Tr. L. 3. 1012. A kind of Serpent much like to a Dragon. Sp. A wivern.
Wlate: To hate, to loath. Mo. 3039. AS. Pitan.
Nauseare.
Wto: To plague, to torment. Also, Wofull. RR. 312.

- I wold be wo*, CL. 34. I would be sorry. Mourning;
Wo is me. Mo. 518. Wo begon, or bygon. See Begon.
Wo be ye, Mo. 2274. f. for Who be ye.
Wodde: Wood. Fr. 909.
Woddiſh: Groweth mad. No. 478.
Wode: Mad. In a wode ſentence, No. 461. In a wrong opinion. Wodely: Madly, furiously.
Wodebende: Woodbind, honey-suckle. Bl. Kn. 129.
Woden: To grow mad, to rage; Saviunt, p. 389, b.
Wodewale, RR. 658. Witwall or Golden Ouzel, a Bird of the Thrush-kind.
Wol, Woll: Will. Also, Wool.
Wollin: Will.
Wolueſhede, Gam. 1387, 1407, 1430. There was anciently a price ſet upon the Heads of Wolves, as of Foxes, Pole-cats, and other noxious Beasts and Vermin; from whence Out-laws came to be called Wolues-heads, as being out of the protection of the Laws, and liable to be killed by any that would take them, if they made any reſiſtance, or fled. See Selden de Synedrui Ebraorum. L. 2. Cap. 2. Sect. 3.
Womanhede: The ſex, dignity, good qualities or virtues of a woman. Fr. 2096.
Womanly: Becoming a woman. Dr. Ch. 850.
Won, No. 3013. Wonne, Pro. 337. Uſage, cuſtom, manner. Also, Got, begot. Hyper. 3.
Wonde: To turn back. Sp. Perhaps Turn or change its nature, from the AS. pendan, To turn, bend, change. That it almoſt to wonde, CMV. 102. That it almoſt bent.
Wonde, Ph. 26. Wondin, Th. 7. Dwelt, inhabited; Stay'd, abode.
Wondir: Wondrous. Pro. 2075.
Wondirliche, Wondirly, Wondirſly: Wonderfully, wondrously.
Wone: A habitation, a houſe. Fr. 841. Also, Store, plenty. RR. 1673. A full grete wone, Ar. 276. A very great company. AS. punian, Habitare, frequentare.
Woned, Tr. L. 1. 511. Wonnid, Dr. Ch. 150. Wont.
Wonne, Tr. L. 4. 1181. A remedy. Sp. See Won. Also, To dwell, inhabit. See Wone. Worning, Pro. 390. Dwelling.
Wood: Mad. Pro. 184. Woodneſſ: Madneſs. Woodman: A madman.
Woof: A wolf. Pro. 2049.
Woofte: Knoweſt. See Woſt.
Wopen: Wept. Boeth.
Worch, Worchin: To work.
Word, AL. 88, 207, 306, &c. A Motto.
Worde, for World, Tr. L. 2. 420. as it is in MS. Sp. and al.
Wordleſſ: Speechleſs. Ch. Dr. 514.
Worſhip: Honour.
Worth, Worthe: Is, be; Eſt, ſit, ſtat. AS. peop'dan, To be, to become. Wo worth, Tr. L. 2. 344, &c. Curſed be. Worthé hym full wele, Gam. 955. Happineſs attend him. Wo worth that day; Curſed be the day. Tr. L. 4. 763. But the place is thus read in MS. Sp.
And curſid be that day which that Argyue
Me of her body bare to bene on lyue.
Worth up, p. 367, a. Get up, mount. Lat. Aſcēdo. So Tr. L. 2. 1011.
Worthie, p. 157, a. l. 55. If it be worthy, al. if he be worthy.
Worthied: Honoured. p. 481, b.
Woſt, Tr. L. 1. 1053. Thou knoweſt. See Wiſt. Woſt'ow, for Woſteſt thou? Knoweſt thou?
Wot: Know. That ye wot, Tr. L. 2. 1196. That you know of; but I ſhould rather chuſe to read it, as in MS. Sp.
How like [l. likyſh] ye the letter that he wrote?
Kan he thereon? for be my trogh y note.
That is, How do you like the letter that he [Troilus] hath writtē to you? Doth he underſtand that matter? For by my troth I know not.
Wote, Wotte: To know. See Wete.
Would: Willed, permitted, ſuffered; p. 154, a. As himſelf bath would, Di. 284. As he pleaſed himſelf.
Woundes of Egypt: The Plagues of Egypt. Dr. Ch. 1207.
Wowe: To woo, to court. Tr. L. 5. 971. Womid: Court-ed. Di. 322.
- Wwith*: Waveth, toſſeth up and down. Teſt. L. 2.
Wraie, Tr. L. 3. 285. Wray: To bewray, to diſcover.
Wrake, Cr. 307. Revenge, vengeance. See Wreke.
Wral: Beltow in brawling, or wrangling. Sp. and ſt.
In winning all ther witte thei wral, Mo. 2310. They ſtrain their wittes to the uttermoſt to get all they can.
Com. Dougl. uſes Wreil for Wriggle. See Gl. V.
Wrang: Wrung. Magd. 150.
Wrate: Wrote. Cr. 64.
Wrathe, Mo. 1657. Wratbin: To provoke. Wrathe the naught; Be not angry. Gam. Wrathed: Provoked, angry. p. 192, a.
Wrawe: Wrath, anger. Mo. 1623. Wrawneſſ, p. 203, b. Frowardneſs. Sp.
Wray. See Wraie.
Wrech, Wreche: Revenge. Mo. 628. Tr. L. 5. 890.
Wrechis: Wretches.
Wrechidlice, Wrechidliche: Wretchedly, wickedly.
Wreke: To revenge. Sp. 474. See Anreke. MS. Ch. hath that Verſe thus;
For yee yowre ſelf uppon yom ſelf anreke.
Wrekerie: Vengeance; Punishment. Boeth. It ſhould be Wreckere, p. 390, b. l. 64. A revenger.
Wrenches: Wiles or cunning ſleights, ſnares, traps. See Sonn. in pence.
Wrene, for Wrien: To hide. RR. 56. See Wrie.
Wreche, Tr. L. 2. 784. for Wreche, as it is in MS. Sp. See Wrech and Wreke.
Wrechileſſe, Mo. 1556. for Reicheleſſe, or (as MS. Ch.) Recheleſſe, V.
Wretching, Tr. L. 3. 855. miſ-printed for Dretching. See Dretch.
Wrethe, p. 504, b. f. Corruptly for wrecheth, i. e. worketh, acteth.
Wrey, Wrie, Wrien, Wrine: To hide. RR. 6795. To cover. Th. 29. Hid, concealed. Tr. L. 3. 621. From the AS. priſgan, Velare, or pneon, Tegere, &c. Mo. To diſcover. CMV. 91. From the AS. pnegan, Prodere. To incline, bend it's courſe. Tr. L. 2. 906. Wried: Turned off; from Wry.
Wright: Covered. Di. 276. See Perrey.
Wright: A carpenter. AS. pnyhta, Opifex; whence Ship-wright, Wheel-wright, &c.
Wrine. See Wrey.
Wribe, Wribin: To wreſt, to turn aſide. Tr. L. 4. 986. But MS. Sp. Ca. and al. inſtead of Wribe, have Wry, V.
Wrihin: Wreathed, twiſted. FL. 57.
Wro: Grief, anger. Sp. Perhaps it may ſignify A ſhade, a cover. Mo. 2021. From Wrie, V. Wra, is Company, ſociety. Gl. V.
Wrokin: Avenged, revenged. RL. 350. See Wreke.
Wronge: Wrong. Tr. L. 4. 1171.
Wrote, p. 192, b. l. 33. 34. f. To wallow in the dirt, to defile. Lidgate applies it to a worm working its way into a tree. Fall of Princes. L. 1. C. 19.
Or lyke a worm that wroteth in a tre.
Wrothly: Wrathfully, angrily. Boeth.
Wrought: Wrought. Tr. L. 3. 14. Ca. and al. Worthe, V.
Wry, Wryen. See Wrie.
Wurch: To work. RR. 6662. Perhaps it ſhould be read werche, and cherche for church, in the foregoing Verſe.
Waſt: Frighted, driven away. Mo. 3032.
Wycke, as Wicke.
Wyf: A wife.
Wyld: Plotted, combined, conſpired. Ber. 1957.
Wyll: Will. Of ther wyll; Willingly, of their own accord; Alro, p. 377, a.
Wymp. See Wimple.
Wynd: Whined. PT. 481.
Wyſely, for Wyſly, An. 290. See Wyſly.
Wythat, for Wyth that, Ber. 2469.
Wyyn: Wine. Ber. 956. But it ſhould rather be Wyne, to answer ſyne, in the following Verſe.
- NR*. Other words beginning with W, may be found in W.

Y.

Y From the Sax. Ge. is most frequently prefixed to Verbs in the Perfect Tense, and very rarely to any other. This Initial addition of Y, or I, in many cases making the whole difference between the Old and the Modern word, the latter may be found by casting away the y or i: And therefore many such words are wholly omitted in this Glossary. It is also put sometimes before Nouns, but very seldom, as Ylike, for Like, ProL. 594. In some of the oldest MSS. it is very often used for the First Person, I: Hence perhaps arose that mistake in Tr. L. 2. 1595. Left ye too long ydwell, for, Left I (or y, as in MS. Sp.) to long ydwell; and again, Ib. L. 3. 160. As ye can, for As y can, MS. Sp. See Z.

Yaf, Yafe: Gave.

Yall: To yell. Mo. 2326. To go. Sk. Yalte, RR. 4904. Goeth. Sp.

Yape, Yaper. See Fape, Faper.

Yard: A rod. ProL. 149.

Yare: Ready. Th. 43. AS. Geapre.

Yate: A gate. Yates, Yates: Gates.

Yete. See Bete.

Ybled: Caused to bleed. Tr. L. 3. 1530. The whole Verse is thus in MS. Sp.

And with such voys as thogh his heart bled;

where, if we read ybled, the Verse will be compleat, and the sense much more natural than in the other Reading.

Yblede: To bleed. Mo. 2291.

Yblent: Blinded, deceived. RR. 1610.

Ybore: Bore or born, carried. ProL. 380.

Ybourid: Jelted. AF. 589. Well ybourid; A pretty jest. See Bourde.

Ybrayid: Drawn out. Ber. 3201. from the AS. Bpædan, Exerere, fringere. See Braide.

Yceffe: To cease, desist. Tr. L. 2. 692.

Yclonid: Patched up with clouts. RR. 223.

Ycongerid: Conjured, bewitched. PT. 489.

Ycorve: Cut. ProL. 2015. See Kerve, and Throtycorve.

Ycothe: Could; Understood. RR. 771.

Yconchit: Set. Ber. 2565. See Couchen.

Ycrased: Broke, cracked. Dr. Ch. 324. Fr. Ecrasé.

Ydamnid: Condemned. Ar. 154.

Ydeles: Dealeth, distributeth. RR. 5419.

Ydey: To dye. Tr. L. 2. 172.

Ydide: Dyed. Hen. 190.

Ydight: Dressed, adorned, furnished, ordered. Tr. L. 5. 541. Equipped. Phyl. 87. See Dight.

Ydil: Idle. Luc. 18.

Ydo: Done; Ceased.

Ydolaster: An Idolater. Pars.

Ydradle: Dreaded, feared. Tr. L. 3. 1653.

Ye: Yea, ay, yes. Ye misse, Tr. L. 2. 887. Ye ywis; Yes surely.

Yeare: Ready. Ph. 43. See Yare.

Yedding, ProL. 237. (Jurgandi) of brawling (some say) of gadding up and down (others) of loud singing. Sp. It is yeddingis in MS. Ch. and al.

Yede, RR. 5151. Yedin: Went.

Yef: If. Ber. 2246. Also, To give. Mo. 2897.

Yeft: A gift.

Yelde, Yeldin: To yield, to give.

Yelke, p. 518, a. That yelke, f. for That ilke: That same. See Ilke.

Yelp: To prate, to talk idly. Tr. L. 3. 308.

Yelio: Yieldeth. Tr. L. 1. 396.

Yeme, Gam. 1633. f. Altogether, one and all; from the AS. Germane, Common. MS. Ch. reads that Verse thus; Yee jonge men sake yeme; and H. 1. Take jonge men yeme.

Yen, Ber. 1313. Yene, Ch. Dr. 352. Eyes.

Yer: Ere, before. Mo. 1968.

Yerde: A rod; A scouge. Tr. L. 2. 154. A court-yard. Ib. 820. Also, Rule, direction. Ib. L. 3. 137. Ca. and al. read swerde instead of yerde, Ib. L. 2. 1427.

Yerne, MR. 150. Shrill. Sk. Earnest, eager, diligent;

Nimble, quick; Earnestly; Presently, quickly. RR. 6719. Soon, early. Tr. L. 3. 377. AS. Treopm. Also, To gain, deserve, to profit, obtain. Ib. 152. CL. 368. AS. Eapman, Mereri, consequi, affequi. See Cardi-acle.

Yerning: Compassion; Relenting, compassionating. RR. 5951. AS. Eapnunge.

Yerth: The Earth.

Yeten, Yetin: Got; Lay'd up. RR. 5702. Also, Eaten.

Yett, No. 1298. f. A throw, or cast. Fr. Jett. See Ib. 1293.

Yewe: Give. Also, If. La. 739.

Yeur, Yewr: Your.

Yew, Ber. 2638. Yewe, Ib. 720. You.

Yexinge: Sobbing. Sp. In MR. 1043. MS. Ch. hath He yixede, H. 1. and al. yexeth, instead of He galpith. See Galp.

Yfaileth: Faileth; Fainteth. Tr. L. 1. 601. It is saileth in MS. Sp. saylith in Ca. &c.

Yfak: Fallen. ProL. 25.

Yfalsid his trowth: Falsified, or broke his word. Sq. 647.

Yfalsith: Proves false, deceiveth. RR. 5416. See False.

Yfarcid. See Farcid.

Yfare: Gone.

Yfere: In company, together. See Fere.

Yferid: Fared.

Yfleting: Floating, swimming. Fa. L. 1. 133. See Flete.

Yflitted: Past, removed, transferred. Tr. L. 5. 1543. See Flit.

Yflowe: Fled. Gam. 265.

Yfostrid: Fostered, bred up. MR. 838.

Yfrained: Asked, examined. See Fraine. Also, Refrained.

Yfrended, Yfrende: Estranged. Mo. 2566. See Fremde.

Yfrethid, PT. 292. f. Cut like Fret-work.

Yfreid: Inlaid, set like Fret-work. Ber. 3192. See Fret.

Yfretin: Devoured. Ar. 66. See Frete.

Yfrouncid: Wrinkled. RR. 155. See Frouncid.

Ygetin: Got. MR. 456.

Ygo: Gone. ProL. 288.

Ygrave: Engraven, carved; Dug.

Ygravid: Buryed. Magd. 429. See Grave.

Ygrete: Greeted. RR. 7430. See Gret.

Ygrinte: Grindeth. Fa. L. 3. 708.

Yhallowed: Hallowed, kept sacred, celebrated. Luc. 192.

Yhalte: Holdeth, keepeth. RR. 4979.

Yhed, f. Yheved, i. e. Heaved, or lifted up. Dr. Ch. 175. Hed yhed; f. Head to head.

Yhere: To hear. Tr. L. 4. 1313.

Yhered, or Yherde: Hairry. MR. 629.

Yhette: Heated. RR. 3709.

Yholde: Holden, accounted.

Yholdin: Obligated, bound, held. RR. 429. Beholden. Ar. 69.

Yhotin: Be called. CN. 185. See Hote.

Yiapid: Imposed upon, deceived. Mo. 1722. See Japt.

Yin: Eyes. ProL. 152.

Ying: Young. Gam. 295.

Yis, Ber. 1244. See Tue.

Yit: Yet.

Yled: Laden. Ber. 794.

Ylessid: Eased. Tr. L. 1. 1090. See Lisse.

Ylete: To lose. No. 534. See Lete.

Yleye: Layn. PT. 648.

Ylich: Alike. ProL. 2528. Ylike: Like. Ib. 594.

Ylimed: Caught or taken, as birds are with bird-lime. IVB. 934.

Yloggit: Lodged. PT. 304.

Yloke: Locked up, clasped, embraced. Ber. 2472.

Ylome: Often. Ber. 580. See Lome.

Ylofid: Loosened. Gam. 830.

Ylough: Laughed.

Ylucidet, Bal. 604. Full ylucidet, for Fully lucident; Very bright or shining.

Ymedlid: Mixed. See Meddell.

Ymeint, as Meint.

Ymmagytsf, for Imaginative, Ber. 2796. Thoughtful, Cuning. See Imaginatif.

Ymmemoras: Unmindful, forgetfull. Ber. 1892.

Ymoned: Bemoaned. Test. L. 2.

Ymyrid, Ber. 2654. Bemired, puzzled.

Ynayid: Denied. Ber. 2095.

Ynde: Black. Sp. See Inde.

Ynempnid: Named.

Yode:

Yode: Went. R. L. 182. From Yede.
Yolde, Yoldin: Delivered up. Tr. L. 3. 1217. Paid, required. RR. 4556. Yielded. Tr. L. 1. 802. Yielding, submissive. Ib. L. 3. 95.
Yonghede: Youth. RR. 351.
Yore: Before, formerly. Naught yore ago; Not long ago. AF. 17.
Yove: Gave. CL. 688. From Yeva.
Yours: Yours.
Youthed, Mo. 2364. Youthede, RR. 4931. Youth.
Yow, Yowe: You.
Yowish: Youth. Ber. 307.
Ypoint: Painted. Ch. Dr. 1845.
Ypeised: Weighed. Bal. 280. See Peice.
Ypight: Pitched down, fell. See Pight.
Ypikid: Picked, &c. Prol. 367. PT. 174. See Pike. Ypikid shoes; Peaked shoes. See Pikis.
Ypilt, PT. 559. seems to signify Beaten, struck; f. Pelted: But in Gam. 1771. it bears a very different sense; f. Put, placed. H. i. hath it pilt. MS. Ch. pelt.
Yplegg: Pawned, put in pledge. Ber. 1033.
Ypocrisse: Hypocrisy. Mo. 2743.
Yqueint. See Queint.
Yquit. See Quit.
Yraft, See Raft.
Yrasid: Shaved. Ber. 2201.
Yre: Anger.
Yreight: Reached. Fa. L. 3. 284.
Yreke: Raked up.
Yrent: Rent. On thy cross yrent, or rather on the cross, or (as in MS. Ch.) on a crosse yrente, al. to rent, La. 845. It is sometimes used in the same sense as Rive.
Yrobin, Mo. 3234. Some Editions read it roben or robben, and others roven, which may signify, To rove, or perhaps to be ravenous. In Com. the place is thus explained; "Because they are alike, that is, the Griffon "and the Popish Clergy, and rob and raven every "where by their kind, or with their kinds ravin; they "and their kind are ravenous. The Pelican should begin to speak at Verse 3232. as it does in some Editions and in Com.
Yron: To run. Yronne: Did run.
Yrowned: Whispered. See Rowne.
Yryvyn atwain: Burst in two. Bl. Kn. 577. See Rive.
Ysaine, Ysene: Seen.
Yse: Ice. Fa. L. 3. 40. Also, Seen.
Yseid: Seized. Ber. 1147.
Ysest: Ceased. Ch. Dr. 2166.
Yshent: Spoiled, &c. See Shent.
Yshet: Shut.
Yshrive, Yshriven: Confessed.
Ysie: Saw. Fa. L. 3. 339.
Yslake, as Slake.
Yslo, as Slo.
Ysmelde: Smelled. Fa. L. 3. 595.
Ysod: Sodden, boiled. Ber. 485.

Ysold, for Ysoiled: Absolved. Mo. 2308. See Saile.
Ysotid: Belotted. Ber. 406.
Yson: Sown. WB. 71.
Yspreint: Sprinkled; Dispersed. Prol. 2170.
Ystakid, PT. 292 f. Staked up, supported with stakes.
Ysteke: Stuck; Confined. Gam. 649.
Ystorve: Dead. See Sterve.
Ystreight: Stretched. Fa. L. 3. 283.
Ytake: Taken.
Ytelle, as Tell.
Ytemen, Fa. L. 3. 654. Ytemen: To bind, or lay up. Sp.
Ythe: To thrive, prosper. See Thr.
Ythwid well: Having good qualities. RR. 108. See Thewis and Wel-thenid.
Ytwigh: Pulled, drawn. Fr. 299. See Twight.
Ytwinn. See Twin.
Ytyd: Tyed, bound. Cup. 226.
Yve: Ivy. Test. L. 3. p. 516, b.
Yvelles: Evils.
Yvelnesse: Wickedness, badness.
Yvoire: Ivory. Dr. Ch. 946. Fr. Ivoire.
Ywarry, Mo. 2437. f. as Wurray. Some Editions have it warry, others varry; but that of 1687 vary (I know not upon what authority) They go away from the truth. Com.
Ywerde: Wore. RR. 875.
Yverne: To deny. Gam. 1310. See Warn.
Yverrid, Bl. Kn. 666. See Wurray.
Ywete. See Wete: To know.
Ywexith: Groweth. In Tr. L. 1. 950. instead of The rose ywexith soie and, &c. MS. Sp. has it,
The lilie ywexith white and smothe, &c.
Ywis, as Iwis.
Ywurch, as Wurch.
Ywiv. See Wiv: To know.
Ywrie, Ywryen: Covered. See Wrie.
Ywrrong, as Wrronge.

Z.

Z Or rather z, in the MSS. is often put for g, and gl, from its likeness to the MS. z; and for y, the g being in English frequently softened into y: But for want of a proper Type, it has been thought fit to keep the modern Orthography in this Edition, except in very few words, where z is put instead of g; as, Dispyir, which should have been Dispiir. See Gl. V. in Z.
Zedeories, p. 485, b. l. 51. This place is so corrupted, that it is not easy to imagine who is meant by this name.
Zenxis, No. 1532. A famous Grecian Painter.

A Translation and Explanation of the Latin in CHAUCER.

A.

A^D adjuvandum me, Magd. 591. It is taken from Psal. XL. 13: LXIX. 2. Domine ad adjuvandum me respice, festina; O Lord make hast to help me. Agnus castus; A Drug, the seed of the Chast-tree, a Plant growing in Italy, Sicily, &c. Alma redemptoris mater. See O alma, &c. Amor vincit omnia: Love overcometh all things. Prolog. 162. Angelus ad Virginem, MR. 108. The Angel's Salutation of the Blessed Virgin. Luk. II. 28. Ave Maria, &c. A questio quid juris, Prolog. 648. H. 1. and MS. Ch. read it Ay [i. e. Ah!] questio, &c. The Sumner it described rapping out Latin, and (among the rest) scraps of Law. The oldest Editions have it Aye, questio quid queris; but the other seems to be the true Reading. Questio juris and Questio facti, are known Distinctions in the Civil Law. Associat profugum Tydens, &c. Tr. L. 5. 1497, &c. These Twelve Verses contain the Arguments of the Twelve Books of Statius of the War of Thebes, which the Poet comprehends in Three Stanza's of this Poem, beginning at Verse 1484. The Latin is more correctly printed in the Paris Edition of Statius, 1600.

*Argumentum Thebaidos Lib. 12.
Ex veteribus libris.*

Associat profugum Primus Tydeo Polynicen.
Tydea legatum docet, insidiasq; Secundus.
Tertius Hemonidem canit, et vates latitantes.
Quartus habet reges, ineuntes praelia, septem.
Mox furie seni Quinto narrantiur & anguis.
Archemori bustum, Sexto, ludiq; geruntur.
Dat Graios Thebis, & vatem Septimus umbris.
Octavo cecidit Tydens, spes fida Pelasgis.
Hippomedon Nono queritur, cum Parthenopeo.
Fulmine percussus Decimo Capaneus superatur.
Undecimo se perimunt per vulnera fratres.
Argiam flentem memorat Duodenus, & ignes.

Ave Maria; Hail Mary. p. 143, a. See Angelus ad Virginem.

B.

B*enedicite*! Bless ye. It is used by way of Exclamation, as we now say, Bless us! Taken perhaps from the Hymn beginning, Benedicite, omnia opera Domini. Benedictus: Blessed. CL. 1423. Perhaps alluding to Luk. I. 68.

C.

C*ell enarrant*; The Heavens declare. CL. 1367. It is the beginning of Psal. XIX. Confessio amantis; The Confession of a Lover. p. 479. Confiteor, p. 197, a. I confess, The Confession. Consumere me vis? Wilt thou destroy me? Magd. 504. The words of Job, Ch. XIII. 26. taken out of the Vulg. Lat. as the rest of the Quotations are. Consumere me vis peccatis adolescentie mee? Wilt thou consume me in the sins of my youth? Our Translation hath it, Thou makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth. Consummatum est; It is finished. Magd. 161. Our Saviour's words in giving up the Ghost. Joh. XIX. 30. Cor meum eructavit, Fr. 670. My heart hath belched out, or, (as it is in our Translation of Psal. XLV. in the marg.) boileth, or bubbleth up. Corpus Domini; The Lord's Body. No. 1829, 2943. Corpus Madrian, Mo. 1. f. The holy Relicks of St. Maternus. Cum iniquis deputatus est, Magd. 174. He was reckoned with the wicked; Or (as it is in our Translation) He was numbred with the transgressors. Isai. LIII. 12. Cur me dereliquisti? Why hast thou forsaken me? Magd. 710. Our Lord's words on the Cross, out of Psal. XXII. 1.

D.

D*e animalibus*; Of Animals. p. 478, b. De Accidia; Of Sloth. p. 203, b. See Accidie in the Gloss. De Avaritia; Of Covetousness. p. 205, a. De Invidia; Of Envy. p. 199, b. De Ira; Of Anger. p. 200, b. De Luxuria; Of Lechery. p. 207, b. De septem peccatis mortalibus, et de eorum dependentiis, circumstantiis et speciebus; Of the seven deadly sins, and of their dependencies, circumstances and several Species. p. 197, b. De polo antartico: From the South Pole. p. 500, a. Deus hic, Fr. 506. God be here; a Form of Salutation. Dolorem meum; My grief or sorrow. Magd. 33. The words are taken from the Lamentations of Jeremiah, Ch. I. 18. Videte dolorem meum; Behold my sorrow. Domine labia, &c. O Lord, open thou my lips. CL. 1357. Taken from Psal. LI. 15. Domine labia mea aperies, & os meum annuntiabit laudem tuam; O Lord, open, &c. Domine, Dominus noster; O Lord, our Lord. CL. 1365. This is the beginning of the first and last Verses of Psal. VIII. Domini est terra, CL. 1371. The earth is the Lord's. Psal. XXIV. 1. Dominus regnavit, CL. 1409. The Lord hath reigned. Psal. XCII. 1. Domus Dadali, Fa. L. 3. 830. The House of Dadalus, i. e. The Labyrinth contrived and made by him, for Minos King of Crete, in which he and his son Icarus were afterwards confined.

E.

E*xplicit carmen, &c.* Here endeth the Poem of the Recommendation of Peace, composed to the Praise and Memory of the most serene Prince, King Henry the Fourth, by his humble Orator, John Gower. Explicit liber primus, secundus, tertius, quartus; Here endeth the first, second, third, fourth Book. p. 277, 291, 305, 318. Explicit pars prima penitentiae, et incipit pars secunda; Here endeth the first part of Repentance, and beginneth the second part. p. 195, b. Explicit proemium; Here endeth the Proem, or Prologue. p. 278, &c.

F.

F*aciem tuam abscondis*, Magd. 507. Thou hidest thy face. This seems to be taken from Isai. LXIV. 7. Fuerunt mihi lacrymae meae in deserto panes die ac nocte; My tears have been my bread in the wilderness day and night. Magd. 349, 350.

I.

Iesus filius Sirach, Sq. 1768. Iesus the Son of Sirach, the Author, or Collector of the Apocryphal Book of Ecclesiasticus. Iesus Nazarenus Rex Iudeorum; Iesus of Nazareth King of the Jews. p. 195, a. The Inscription put upon our Saviour's Cross. Ignoratum per ignotum; One obscurity explained by another more obscure. No. 1478. In manus tuas, MR. 1179. Magd. 714. Into thy hands I commit my spirit. Psal. XXI. 5. Luk. XXII. 46. In nomine Jesu, p. 202, a, &c. In [or At] the name of Iesus every knee shall bow. Phil. II. 10. In principio; In the beginning. Prolog. 256. They are the first words of St. John's Gospel; In the beginning was the Word, &c. As sikir as In principio, Mo. 1278. As sure as St. John's Gospel is true. Irafcimini, et nolite peccare, p. 200, b. Be angry, and sin not. Psal. IV. 4. Eph. IV. 26.

Jube Domine: Command, Lord. CL. 1374. The Poet profanely alludes to Math. XIV. 28.
Jubilare: O be joyfull. CL. 1412. The beginning of Psal. C. Jubilare Deo.

L.

Laudate: Praise ye. CL. 1416. Hallelujah is translated Laudate Dominum; Praise the Lord.
Libera me, Magd. 573. Deliver me. Job XVII. 13. and in several Psalms.

M.

Mea culpa, Tr. L. 2. 525. My fault; a Form of asking pardon.
Melius est nubere quam uri, RL. 364. It is better to marry than to burn. 1 Cor. VII. 9.
Minerva loquitur ad Parin; Minerva speaks to Paris. p. 557, b.
Montana Jude [1. Montana Judea] The mountainous parts of Judea. Magd. 321.
Mulier est hominis confusio: Woman is the confusion of Man. Mo. 1278.

N.

Non est aliud nomen sub celo, &c. p. 201, b. There is none other name under heaven, &c. Act. IV. 12.

O.

O Admirabile, CL. 1417. O wonderfull. Psal. VIII. 12.
O alma Redemptoris mater; O holy or pure [Virgin] Mother of our Redeemer; the beginning of a Hymn to the Blessed Virgin.
O Deus, Deus, non est dolor sicut dolor meus; O God, O God, there is no sorrow like unto my sorrow. Magd. 608, 609. The words seem to be taken from Lam. I. 12.
O pulchrior sole! O thou that art fairer than the Sun. Bal. 604.

P.

Pallas loquitur ad Parin; Pallas speaks to Paris. p. 557, a.
Pallas loquitur primò; Pallas speaks first. p. 557, a.
Pater noster, p. 435, a. The Lord's Prayer beginning with Pater noster, i. e. Our Father.
Placebo: I will please. p. 202, a.
Polus arcticus: The North Pole. p. 500, a.
Pone me juxta te, Magd. 574. Set me beside thee. Job XVII. 3.

Q.

Quia non est qui consoletur me, Magd. 514. Because there is none to comfort me. Lam. I. 2, 17.
Quia tulerunt Dominum meum, Magd. 30. Because they have taken away my Lord. Job XX. 13.
Qui cum Patre, &c. Who with the Father, &c. p. 214, b.
Quid mali feci tibi? What evil have I done unto thee? Magd. 500. Perhaps he alludes to those places in the Gospel, Math. XXVI. 52. Mar. XV. 14. Luk. XXIII. 22.
Qui gladio percussit; He that smiteth with the sword. Mo. 2185. He seems to refer to Math. XXVI. 52. Rev. XIII. 10.
Quod dilexi multum; That [or Because] I have loved much. Magd. 610. He alludes to the words of our Saviour concerning Mary Magdalen. Luk. VII. 47.
Quod sic repente precipitas me; That thou dost so suddenly cast me down headlong. Magd. 616. They are the words of the Vulg. Lat. in Job X. 8.

R.

Radix [omnium] malorum est cupiditas, No. 1848, 1940. Covetousness is the root of [all] evil. 1 Tim. VI. 10.
Remedium contra peccatum Accidia; Remedy against the sin of Accidy. p. 204, b. See Accidia in the Gloss.

S.

Relevatio contra peccatum Avaritie; Relief [or Remedy] against the sin of Covetousness. p. 206, b.
Remedium contra peccatum Luxuria; Remedy against the sin of Lechery. p. 209, a.

Sagitta tue infixæ sunt mihi, Magd. 602. Thine arrows are fixed [or stick fast] in me. Psal. XXXVIII. 2.
Salve Regina; Hail Queen. Bal. Lat. 216. The beginning of a Hymn to our Lady.
Sanctus Deus: Holy God. Mo. 2169. Sanctissimus: Most Holy. ib. 2170.
Sed non respondet mihi; But he doth not answer me. Magd. 498.
Sequitur de gula: Here followeth [a Discourse] concerning Gluttony. p. 207, a.
Sequitur secunda pars penitentia; Here followeth the second part of Repentance, or Penitence. p. 210, a.
Significavit, Prol. 664. "It is a Writ which issues out of the Chancery, upon a Certificate given by the Ordinary of a man that stands obstinately Excommunicate by the space of forty days, for the laying him up in prison without Bail or Mainprize, until he submit himself to the authority of the Church: And it is called so because Significavit is an Emphatical word in it. There is also another Writ of this name, directed to the Justices of the Bench, willing them to stay any Suit depending between such and such, by reason of an Excommunication alleged against the Plaintiff; because the Sentence of the Ordinary that did excommunicate him, is appealed from, and the Appeal yet depends undecided. Bl. L. D.

Solum [mihi] superest sepulchrum, Magd. 612. The Grave alone remains for me. Job XVII. 1.
Summum bonum; The chiefest Good. p. 350.
Suspensus in patibulo; Hanged upon a Gallows [or Cross] Magd. 168.

T.

Tablis Toletanis, Fr. 2829. Tabule Toletane, Alphon- u.
fus's Tables to calculate the Motion of the Planets for the Meridian of Toledo. Sp.
Tanquam cera liquefens, Magd. 147. Like melting [or melted] wax. Psal. XXII. 14.
Tarditas: Slowness. p. 204, b.
Te Deum amoris; Thee the God of Love. CL. 1402.
Trake me post te, Magd. 512. Draw me after thee. Cant. I. 4.
Tuam [ipsius] animam pertransibit gladius, Magd. 450. A sword shall pierce through thine own soul. Simon's words to the Blessed Virgin, Luk. II. 35.
Tu autem; But thou—CL. 1401. It very often occurs in the Psalms.
Turpe lucrum: Filthy lucre. Mo. 2261.

V.

Ubi posuerunt eum; Where they have laid him. Job XX. 2.
Velociter exaudi me, Magd. 570. Hear me quickly. Psal. LXVIII. 18.
Venite: Come ye. CL. 1360. The beginning of Psal. XCV. Venite, exultemus.
Venus loquitur ad Parin; Venus speaks to Paris. p. 557, b.
Via Appia: A High-way or Causeway leading from Rome through Capua to Brundisium; so called from one Appius who made it.
Uti Achitophel ad Absalom; As Achitophel to Absalom. p. 202, b. The Poet seems to allude to 2 Sam. XVI. 21.

A Transf-

A Translation of the French in CHAUCER.

A.

A Moy qui voy; To me who see. AL. 308.

B.

B Alade de bon conseil [l. conseil] A Ballad of good counsel. p. 543, b.

Bien monesté; Well warned or advised. AL. 675.

Bien et loyalement; Well and dutifully or faithfully. AL. 88.

Bonne [l. bon] hostel; A fine, fair or good Palace. Fa. L. 2. 514.

C.

C 'Est sans dire; It is without saying. AL. 627.

Comment raison diffinié amitié, p. 251, a. Corruptly for definit amitié; How Reason defined Friendship.

Comment raison vient a l'amant, p. 247, a. How Reason cometh to the Lover.

D.

D Ont vient la destinie [l. destinée] Bal. Lad. 185. The destiny (or appointment) whereof cometh [to pass.]

E.

E N dieu est, AL. 439, 654. In God is—sc. my trust. See lb. 655.

Entierement vostre; Intirely yours. AL. 616.

Estreignes moy de cœur joyeux; Embrace me with a joyfull heart. Bal. Lad. 231.

Et je sçay bien que ce n'est pas mon tort; And I am sure it is not my fault. Bal. Lad. 236.

J.

J 'Ay en vous toute ma fiance; I put all my trust in you. Bal. Lad. 147.

J'ay tout perdu mon temps et mon labour; I have quite lost my time, and my labour. For. 7. And so it should be read in p. 194, a.

Je serve Joveffe, Hyper. 224. I serve—Joveffe, f. l. Joueuse, the Fem. of Joueur, A Gamester, a Jester, one that plays the Wag; and it is either applicable to this Ballade, or to his Lady, whom he prays to accept in game the imperfections of it. lb. 222.

Je voudray, Hyper. 198. Perhaps for Je voudrois; I would [fain.]

Je vous die [l. dis] sans doubt [l. doute] I tell you without doubt, i. e. for truth. Fr. 574.

L.

L A belle dame sans mercy; The fair Lady without mercy. p. 442, a.

La belle margarete [l. marguerite] The fair Daisie. Bal. 588. See Margarete in the Gloss.

L'amant: The Lover. p. 424, &c.

La dame: The Lady. p. 424, &c.

L'ardent espoir en mon cœur point est mort,

D'avoir l'amour de celle que je desire;

The ardent hope is not dead in my heart to obtain the love of her whom I desire. Bal. Lad. 233, 234.

La priere de nôt're dame; The Prayer of [or, to] Our Lady. ABC. p. 588.

L'assemble [l. L'assemblée] de dames; The Assembly of Ladies. AL. 752.

L'envoy de Chaucer a les mariz [l. aux maris, or mariez] de nôt're temps, p. 105. The Address of Chaucer to the married [persons] of our time. See L'envoy in the Gloss.

M.

M Enlx un, Hyper. 177. One best [in heart]. Sp. f. Moulx, mol, or mou. Soft, tender.

O.

O Nques [f. ne] puis lever; I can never rise. AL. 598.

Or a mon [not amon] cœur; Now hath my heart. Bal. Lad. 193.

Or a mon cœur ce qui [l. qu'il] vouloit; Now hath my heart that which it desired. Bal. Lad. 192.

P.

P Leures pour moy s'il vous plaist amonreux; Weep if you please for me that am in love. Bal. Lad. 182.

Plus ne pourroy [f. pourray] I can do no more. AL. 364.

Q.

Q U'i bien aime tard onblie; He that loves well forgets late, or slowly. p. 413.

Qui est là? Who is there? No. 2722.

S.

S Ans que jamais: Without ever——sc. giving occasion. AL. 583.

Sans ose je dire; Without ceremony, without saying Ose-je dire; May or Dare I say it?

Si douce est la margarete [l. marguerite] So sweet is the Daisy. FL. 350. See Bargaret in the Gloss.

Sine [f. son] et mon joly cœur est endormi, FL. 177, 178.

It seems to be the beginning of a French Song in use in Chaucer's time. f. l. Sus la fenille devers moy, son ce mon, &c. Upon the Leaf by me, his and my pleasant heart is asleep.

Soyes assuré: Be assured, be of good cheer. AL. 666.

T.

T Ant me fait mal de partir de ma dame; So much does it grieve me to part [or, to be absent] from my Lady. Bal. Lad. 189.

Tant que je puis; As much as I can. AL. 208.

U.

U N sans changer: One without changing. AL. 590.

A short Account of some of the Authors cited by CHAUCER.

A

Æsculapius, is said to be an antient Physician before the Trojan War, very skilfull in that Art, which gave occasion to many Fables of his bringing the Dead to life again. Toforthrus, the first King of Memphis in Egypt, was so called from his skill in Physick and Anatomy, concerning which he wrote several Books. See Hoffm. in Toforthrus. There is a Book under that name entituled De morborum, infirmitatum, corporisque accidentium origine, causis, descriptionibus & cura, printed at Strasburgh 1544. There was also a Philosopher of that name, who wrote something in Arithmetick.

Æsopus, a Philosopher born in Phrygia, in the time of King Cræsus, to whom he dedicated the Fables which he wrote.

Agathon, a Philosopher of Samos, who wrote several Histories. See Plutarch in Parall. minoribus.

Alanus, a Sicilian Poet and Orator, wrote, among other things, a Book De planctu Nature, i.e. Of the Complaint of Nature, partly in Prose, and partly in Verse.

Albumasar, otherwise called Japhar, a great Astrologer, wrote of sundry things in that Art.

Alcabutius, a Writer in Astronomy; as of the Conjunction of the Planets, &c.

Albazen, an Arabian, wrote seven Books of Perspective.

Alphonse, see Petrus Alphonsus.

Ambrose, the worthy Bishop of Milan, in the year of our Lord 373.

Anselme, Archbishop of Canterbury, wrote of the Origine of the Soul, of Predestination and Free Will, of the Misery of Man, of Original Sin, &c. He flourished in the Eleventh Century.

Anticlaudianus is the name of a Book written by Alanus. Gesner.

Arion, a Greek Lyrick Poet, who flourished in the 38 Olympiad. Fa. L. 2. 497.

Aristotle, a famous Philosopher, Scholar to Plato, and Master to Alexander the Great: He was 345 years before Christ.

Arnoldus de Villa nova, wrote among other Works in Physick, Chymistry, &c. a Book called Rosarium Philosophorum.

Averroes, a Physician of Corduba, and a great Philosopher, who flourished about the year 1149.

Augustine, Bishop of Hippo in Africa, wrote more Books than ever did any in the Latin Church.

Avicen, a Physician of Sevil, wrote a multitude of Books in that Faculty.

B.

Basilus Magnus, Bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia in the Fourth Century.

Bernardus Abbas Clarevallensis, a Burgundian, wrote of the Contempt of the World, the degrees of Humility, of Grace and Free Will, of Conscience, and many other Subjects in Divinity. He flourished A.D. 1140.

Bernardus Gordonius, a Frenchman, Reader of Physick at Montpelier, wrote many things in that Faculty. He flourished A.D. 1498.

Boccace, a famous Italian Poet, born at Florence, Cotemporary with Chaucer.

Bradwardine. See Thomas Bradwardine.

C.

Cassiodorus: Marcus Aurelius Cassiodorus of Ravenna, once Senator of Rome, afterwards a Monk and Abbot in Ravenna, and Secretary to Theodorick King of Italy, was a very learned man, and wrote several things in Divinity, History, and other parts of Learning, and died about the year 562. Petrus Cassiodorus, an Italian, wrote that the Pope was Antichrist; and therefore was taken up out of his grave, and burnt about the year 1300.

Cato, a learned man amongst the Romans, flourished 182 years before the Incarnation. The Moral Disticks which go under the name of Cato, were written since his time.

Chrysippus wrote De Situ principatus Animæ, which is confuted by Galen: He wrote many other Books, as Diongenes Laertius says in his Life. He is often quoted by Athenæus, Stobæus, and Plutarch.

Claudian, a famous Latin Poet, born at Alexandria in Egypt: He flourished under the Emperors Theodosius and Honorius, in the Third and Fourth Centuries, being the most modern of the Antient Poets. He wrote, among other things, Four Books De raptu Proserpinæ, i.e. Of the stealing away of Proserpine.

Constantine the Monk wrote and translated many things in Physick; and amongst others wrote a Book De Coitu, quibus prole aut oblit, quibus incascau inibus & alimentis augeatur, impediaturve. See Sq. 1317.

Corinna, a Theban Woman, and a Lyrick Poet: She wrote 50 Books of Epigrams, as Suidas and Pausanias report.

D.

Damasceus Presbyter, called also Manzarim, wrote in Greek 4 Books concerning the Orthodox Faith, and several other things in Divinity and other Sciences. He flourished in the Fourth or Fifth Century. Johannes Damasceus wrote some things in Physick. There was another Physician so called, who is said to have writ in the same Faculty.

Dante, called Dantes Aligerus, an Italian Poet, born in Florence. He flourished A.D. 1341.

Dares Phrygius wrote the History of the Trojan War in Greek, in which he himself was a Soldier. He lived 1123 years before Christ.

Dicys Cretensis, or Historicus, wrote the History of the Trojan War, supposed to be translated into Latin by Q. Septimius Romanus in the time of Constantine the Great: But Possius thinks that Work was not so antient, and that it was originally writ in Latin, though collected with very good judgment out of the Greek Writers. De Hist. Lat.

Dioscorides: There were two Physicians of that Name, and both Writers in their Profession; the one called Phacas, or Lentinus, of Alexandria, lived in the time of Anthony and Cleopatra, and wrote of the Names of Medicines: The other, Pedanius Dioscorides of Anazarbus in Cilicia, lived under Nere, and wrote De materiâ medicâ, & Alexipharmacis. But they are confounded by some Writers.

G.

Galen, an excellent Physician of Pergamus in Asia, famous in the time of Trajan and the succeeding Emperors. Many of his Works are still extant in Greek. He dyed A.D. 140. in the 70th year of his Age.

Galfridus Monumethensis, or Geoffrey of Monmouth, translated a Book of the British History brought from Armorica, or Basse Bretagne, by Walter Mages Archdeacon of Oxford, out of that Language into Latin; which he dedicated unto Robert Duke of Gloucester. He lived in the Twelfth Century.

Galfridus de Vino salvo. See Gaulfride in the Glossary.

Gatfiden [John] called by some Johannes Anglicus, was a famous Philosopher, and Physician of Merton College in Oxford. He wrote a Book of Physick, entituled Rosa Medica. He lived about the Fourteenth Century.

Gilbertus Anglicus wrote a Book entitled, Practica & Compendium Medicinæ, much read by young Practitioners in Physick. Lel. de Script. Brit. p. 291.

Gregory, the first Pope of that name, surnamed the Great, wrote many Homilies and Comments, and other Works in Divinity. He flourished in the Seventh Century.

Guido de Columna, a Judge of Messina in Sicily, wrote the History of the Destruction of Troy in Latin after Dido's Cretenfis (as he says) in the year 1287.

H.

Hali, an Arabian Physician, wrote a Book of the Composition of Medicines.

Helowis. See the Glossary. There is a Volume of Letters extant which passed between her and Abelard.

Hermes Trismegistus was Counsellor to Osiris King of Egypt. The Invention of Writing, Hieroglyphicks, the Laws of the Egyptians, and divers Sciences is attributed to him. There was another of that Name, a Disciple of Plato, who is said to have translated the Works of the former concerning Physick, Astrology and the Egyptian Theology, which are lost: Those that now go under his Name are supposititious.

Hieronymus Stridonensis [St. Jerome] wrote, amongst a multitude of other Books, some Discourses of Virginitie and Monogamy.

Hippocrates of Cool, a most ancient Physician, and Prince of all others, wrote many Books in Physick, which are extant. He flourished about 500 Years before Christ.

Homer, the famous Greek Poet, and the Father of Poets, lived about a Thousand years before the Incarnation of our Lord.

I.

Innocent, the Fourth Pope of that Name, born in Campania, lived in the Thirteenth Century. He wrote, among other things, a Book De utilitate humane conditionis.

Johannes Damascenus. See Damascenus.

John Som, or Some, a Carmelite, wrote some things in the Mathematicks. See Lel. de Script. Brit. p. 347.

John Somar, or Somer, a Franciscan of Bridgewater, was a great Mathematician, and wrote several Tracts in Astronomy. Lel.

Josiphus, a learned Jewish Priest, wrote in Greek Seven Books of the Wars of the Jews, and Twenty Books of their Antiquities, from the beginning of the World to the fourteenth year of the Emperor Domitian, in whose time he flourished.

Justinian, the Emperor, caused the Roman Laws, which lay scattered in above 2000 Books, to be collected into the 12 Books of the Code and Digests, and composed 4 Books of Institutes. He reigned in the Sixth Century.

Juvenal, a Latin Poet, famous for his Satyrs, flourished in the Reigns of the Emperors Domitian and Trajan.

L.

Lollus, an Italian Historiographer born at Urbino, who lived under the Emperors Macrinus and Heliogabalus, in the beginning of the Third Century, is said to have written the History of his own Time, and also the Life of the Emperor Diadumenus the Son of Macrinus. Tr. L. 1. 395. Fa. L. 3. 380.

Lucan, a Latin Poet living in the time of Nero, wrote a Poem of the History of the Civil War between Cæsar and Pompey.

M.

Macrobius, a famous Critick and Antiquary, who, among other things, wrote a Comment on Cicero's Somnium Scipionis. RR. 7, &c. Mo. 1238. Dr. Ch. 283, &c. AF. 31, 111.

Martianus Capella wrote of the Seven Liberal Sciences, and 6 Books De nuptiis Philologiæ & Mercurii; in the last of which he describes the Situation of Countries. Fa. L. 2. 478.

Maximianus. See Basse in the Glossary.

N.

Nicholas Lynne, a very learned Carmelite, was a very excellent Mathematician, and wrote several Tracts in Astronomy, and amongst others, Canones Tabularum.

Nigellus Wirker. See Burnel the Ass in the Glossary.

O.

Ovid, a famous Roman Poet in the time of Augustus.

P.

Pamphilus Presbyter, Kinsman to Eusebius, transcribed a great part of Origen's Works with his own hand, and wrote an Apology for him, and some other Tracts. He suffered Martyrdom at Cæsarea in Palestine in the Persecution of Maximus.

Petrarch, a famous Italian Poet, Contemporaneous with Chaucer, and thought to be of his acquaintance. See Chaucer's Life.

Petrus Alphonsus, a Jew converted to the Christian Faith, wrote a Dialogue between Moses a Jew and Peter a Christian, against the Jews, and a Book of Science and Philosophy, and some other things. He flourished A. D. 1100.

Petrus Cassiodorus, a learned Italian Nobleman, did write to the Church of England, and persuaded them to cast off their obedience to the Roman Bishops, and to beware of their Tyranny, 1302. Sp. See Cassiodorus.

Ptolemy, an Egyptian Astrologer of Pelufium, who was famous in the time of M. Aurelius Antoninus. He wrote 8 Books of Geography, Almagestum in 13 Books, and 4 Books of Judicial Astrology.

Pythagoras, a famous Philosopher of Samos, lived 500 years before the Incarnation. He is at this day worshipped in India under the name of Brahma. See Hoffm. in Pythagoras.

R.

Rasis, an Arabian Physician, wrote many things in Physick.

Rufus, a Physician of Ephesus in the time of Trajan, wrote in Greek several Tracts in that Faculty.

S.

Seneca, a famous Roman Philosopher, Tutor to Nero, who suspecting him to be engaged in a Conspiracy against him, ordered him to chuse what Death he would dye: He chose to open a Vein, and accordingly bled to death in a Bath.

Senior Zazith wrote a Book of Alchymy. Gesner.

Serapion, an Arabian, wrote of the Composition of Medicines.

Statius. See State in the Glossary, and the Translation of the Latin in Chaucer, in Afficiat profugum Tydens, &c.

Strode, a learned man of Merton-College, Oxon. in Chaucer's time, and Tutor to his Son Lewis. See Chaucer's Life, and Strode in the Glossary.

Suetonius, lived under Trajan and Adrian, and wrote the Lives of the Twelve Cæsars.

T.

Tertullian wrote, among other things, a Book concerning the Attire of Women, &c.

Theophrastus Eresius, Disciple to Aristotle, among many other Works, wrote Moral Characters, wherein there is an Article of Niggardliness.

Thomas Bradwardine, Archbishop of Canterbury, flourished in the Thirteenth Century, and wrote a Book De Causâ Dei against Pelagius, which he dedicated to the Society of Merton-College. He also wrote many other Discourses; as, Of the Trinity, Of Predestination, tion, and other Subjects in Divinity; and also of Geometry, Arithmetick, and Proportions.

Titus Livius wrote the History of Rome, from the Foundation of the City to the Death of Drusus in 142 Books, many of which are lost.

Trotula, an ancient Author, wrote a Book of the Cure of Diseases in and after Child-birth.

Tullius: M. Tullius Cicero, a Senator of Rome, Father of Eloquence, and pure Fountain of the Latin Tongue, flourished about 40 years before Christ's Incarnation.

V.

Valerius Maximus wrote to Tiberius Caesar a Book of the memorable Deeds and Sayings of Worthy Men, collected from the best Authors, and digested into Common places in 9 Books.

Virgil, a famous Roman Poet in the time of Augustus.

Vitellio, a learned Mathematician, wrote 10 Books of Perspective.

W.

William S. Amour, a Frenchman, wrote a Commentary on the Apocalypse, much inveighing against the Pope, and was therefore banished, and his Books burnt. Gesner says that he was a Doctor of the Sorbonne, and wrote Three Books against the Begging Fryars, entitled, De periculis temporum. He lived under S. Lewis.

Additions to the GLOSSARY.

A Argumentis, Fr. 2833. See Expans yeres.

Attamed. Atame or Attame in Lidg. signifies To taste, to try; To attempt, undertake. Also To tell or declare; as, The truth I dare attame. The truth to attame; I dare tell the truth, To tell the truth.

Bord. Concerning the Round Tables, to which Knights were formerly invited for the performance of Military Exercises, and the Ceremonies used upon those occasions, see Selden's Tit. of Hon. Part II. Ch. 5. §. 41.

Centris. See Expans yeres.

Cheste: Strife. The nature of Cheste is particularly described in Gower's Conf. Amantis, Edit. 1554. Fol. XLIX, b.

Clum: From the AS. Clumian, To mutter.

Collecte, Fr. 2831. See Expans yeres.

Doseperis: Add to the Authors refer'd to in the Glossary, Selden's Tit. of Hon. Part II. Ch. 3. §. 17.

Entame seems to signify To hurt in Gower's Conf. Amantis, Fol. XI, b. If thou thy conscience Entamed hast; If thou hast wounded thy conscience.

Expans yeres. In Fr. 2829, &c. the Poet describes the Alphonse Astronomical Tables by the several parts of them, wherein some Technical Terms occur which were used by the Old Astronomers, and continued by the Compilers of those Tables. Collect Years are certain Sums of Years, with the Motions of the Heavenly Bodies corresponding to them, as of 20, 40, 60, 80, 100, &c. disposed into Tables; and Expans Years are the single Years, with the Motions of the Heavenly Bodies answering to them, beginning at 1, and continued on to the smallest Collect Sum, as 20, 40, &c. A Root, or Radix, is any certain Time, taken at the Author's pleasure, from which as an Era, the Celestial Motions are to be computed. By Proportional Convenientes are meant the Tables of Proportional Parts. Centre, Argument, and other Terms there used have peculiar significations in the Old Astronomers and the Alphonse Writers, well known to Astronomers, which it would be too tedious to explain here, as well as unnecessary for common Readers.

Fese; To drive away. PT. 351. from the AS. Festan, Fugare.

Fret often signifies Adorned, garnished, &c. From the AS. Fretpan, Ornare, &c. Also an Ornament, &c.

Hokir: Abusiveness; from the AS. Docep, Reproach, ignominy.

Loppe: The AS. Loppe signifies a Silkworm; and also a sort of Spider. Vide Alfrici Gloss. p. 59, b.

Potentiall, Fa. L. 3. 5. should perhaps be Poetical.

Proportional Convenientes. See Expans yeres.

Reddour: Rigour.

Rotis, Fr. 2833. See Expans yeres.

Shapely: Proper.

Sinet, Synet, is often in Astr. put for the Zenith, or the Vertical Point in the Heavens, which is directly over our heads.

Tall. Instead of humble and thrall, CMV. 38. the former Editions had humble and tall: And Junius in his MSS. Additions to the Gloss. Goth. in Lord Harley's Library, says, the word signifies Obedient, obsequious, every way flexible. P. 368. in Antalan.

Weize: To avoid.

F I N I S.

ERRATA.

IN the Life of Chaucer, p. 3. l. 23. read Virgil. l. 32. Discourse. p. 4. marg. a. l. 2. in Oxfordshire. p. 6. l. 36. he took up. ib. marg. b. l. 8. T. R. p. 7. l. 48. in Oxfordshire. p. 4. l. 6. Fathers.

In the Testimonies. p. 2. a. l. 7. dele [.] l. 26. choyse. p. 3. a. l. 27. astertith. l. ult. dele of. p. 5. b. l. 50. prostrate. p. 7. b. l. ult. put a (.) after relinquens. p. 8. a. l. 1. monte. p. 10. a. l. 10. own'd.

In the Preface. p. 7. l. 29. in a fair hand. p. 8. l. 43. purse, &c. p. 12. l. 60. Notices. p. ult. l. 21, 22. to run the risk.

Before the Cut of Sir Thopaz, read The following Cut.

In the Royal Licence. l. 28. Hands.

In Chaucer's Works. p. 1. Y. 23. read Hofeltry. p. 2. 119. simple. p. 3. 187. bid. p. 7. 727. curtesie. 734. He mote; 741. spake. 749. us. p. 9. 939. thereaboutin. 1051. yellow. p. 11. 1308. your et. 1310. roukith. 1356. tell. p. 14. 1745. And. 1754. soche. 1806. wenin. p. 16. 2020. beris. 2052. of Mars. 2060. turnid. p. 22. 2917. raught. p. 26. 269. dele as. p. 31. 824. dele he. p. 32. 1061. slepitt. p. 35. 1286. rift. p. 41. 622. seler is. p. 45. 1300. men. p. 48. 1774. wrake him of. p. 50. 116. dele to. p. 53. 428. cometh. p. 56. 845. the crosse. p. 58. 1075. hundred. p. 62. 437. dele and. p. 64. 640. hem. 671. Thus. p. 66. 742. the. p. 71. 1371. Than. p. 77. 203. told of it. p. 81. 790. dele [.] after plight. p. 82. 860. Elsqwene. p. 91. 910. an. 545. God save me. p. 92. 569. this must. p. 103. 1890. your. p. 118. 349. as a man. p. 119. 449. dele [.] after n'is. p. 122. 800. fixe. p. 130. 1800. you. p. 138. 2506. It shall. p. 140. 2773. dele thing. p. 143. 3091. evangeliste. p. 150. b. l. 21. thy counsaile. p. 151. a. l. 36. but he have more love of the peple than drede. p. 152. b. l. 7. wickednesse. p. 155. b. l. 42. For. p. 158. a. l. 4. they. p. 159. a. l. 28. lordship. p. 164. 447. madin. p. 169. Y. 1037. Nothing, God wore, but. 1047. lite. p. 172. 1385. Mermaide. p. 173. 1558. and. p. 175. 1644. In lifting. p. 176. 1840. ybraff. 1856. retchelefs. p. 180. 2198. Eche one. 2221. riotours. p. 182. 2417. accorde with this. 2422. kende. p. 183. 2619. Hereto. 2623. understonde. p. 184. 2680. feke. p. 185. 2843. offren to now. 2869. shewe. 2876. thei. p. 186. 2888. this. 2961. ovrise. 2968. er [or ever] bite. 3006. making. p. 188. 3146. hem. p. 189. 3289. or sight. p. 196. a. l. 2. worlde. b. l. 32. or my praie. l. 51. shrifte, they. p. 198. b. l. 5. on other. l. 29. malison. p. 203. b. l. 59. doeth. p. 205. b. l. 12. rightfull. l. 35. of soche. p. 210. a. l. 13. it is mer. l. 48. lecheric. p. 211. b. l. 17. be shriven. l. 38. thou that shrivest. p. 216. Y. 140. Portrayed. p. 217. 321. 343. forwe'full. 339. forwe. p. 218. 396. elden. p. 226. 1620. hath he set. p. 227. 1762. drewe. p. 228. 1949. bidding. p. 234. 2751. fleeth. p. 235. 2953. compendiously. p. 236. 3086. the. p. 237. 3202. well an high. p. 244. 4200. brade. p. 246. 4478. Thei doin. p. 253. 5560. gevith. p. 255. 5867. Thus. p. 257. 6044. fe. p. 259. 6405. plainin. p. 260. 6448. shriving. p. 261. 6851. Or. p. 265. 7186. eyen sight. p. 268. 7637. It n'ere. p. 270. 234. skornin. p. 272. 432. bethe to me hen. p. 275. 814. he. p. 279. 229. ye it. p. 280. 420. worlde. p. 281. 462. slightly. p. 283. 761. knight that is. 800. hem. p. 290. 1672. And him with all. p. 295. 507. stonding. p. 297. 818. that is. 855. dretching. p. 298. 875. would him in sorowe. p. 302. 1411. diddin. p. 308. 390. define. p. 310. 650. be ware. p. 312. 888. for to. 932. I him hither. p. 317. 1495. O gode. p. 318. 1626. a waie. 1655. Me glad. 9. clene. p. 319. 37. gan him to dresse. p. 321. 303. glede. p. 324. 769. throughout. p. 330. 1471. this Bore to se. 1567. he bad. p. 331. 1624. on e-vill. p. 335. 242. penne and ink. p. 337. 65. forthwith. 131. gentilnesse. p. 339. 150. obervaunce. p. 341. 389. nat. p. 349. 92. the. p. 352. 72. for to be. p. 359. a. l. 9. overcome. p. 367. b. l. 1. sheweth. p. 368. a. l. 40. fairnesse. l. 42. 43. overwhelmeth. l. ult. rightfullie. p. 371. a. l. 5. piemente. p. 373. a. l. 9. festivially. b. l. 46. laft. p. 374. b. l. 31. nathes. p. 376. b. l. 16. dele ur. p. 378. a. l. 55. ab ortu. b. l. 50. vie devia. p. 379. a. l. 32. entrailles. b. l. 49. celebritè. p. 380. b. l. 51. into [or two]. p. 381. b. l. 46. porifmes. p. 386. b. l. 9. fyxe. p. 387. b. l. 10. that is. p. 389. a. l. 16. ne defouleth. p. 398. a. l. 46. wote. p. 399. a. l. 14. forme. p. 401. a. l. 7. in sensible. p. 402. a. l. 37. 38. by the propertie of. p. 403. a. l. 49. slic. b. l. 44. an [or on] high. p. 404. Y. 30. whi so. p. 407. 526. amendes. p. 408. 638. hed. 668. I shulde. p. 410. 887. rought. p. 411. 1094. wolde. p. 412. 1254. ferthir. p. 413. b. Y. 20. thralle. p. 414. 154. shove in at. p. 415. 180. shotir. p. 416. 363. The Ravin wife, the Crowe with, &c. 398. his shape. p. 417. 510. dele the. 540. these Egles. p. 418. 606. retche. 685. they. p. 420. 180. sayin. 185. 186. See Hylye in the Glossary. 211. witte full. p. 422. 47. knowin. p. 425. 342. workis. 366. A will. 394. malice is set. p. 429. 739. a vauntour. 753. distain. 774. dele for. p. 431. 136. mete. 169. false. p. 439. 741. substaunce. p. 441. b. l. 40. heddes. p. 442. b. l. 28. which is partie. l. 43. and it serveth. p. 443. b. l. 49. make of it. p. 444. a. l. 22. spirit. p. 446. b. l. 58. pole. p. 452. Y. 159. on live. 209. offence. p. 454. 422. lefingoures. 458. Iment. p. 455. 553. sit. p. 457. 72. fere. p. 460. 327. Knowin. 371. counsaillid. p. 461. 397. rechèles. p. 462. 35. fle yng. 47. spake. p. 463. 206. amiddis. p. 467. 316. Goddesse. p. 468. 381. eke de Columpnis. p. 469. 616. tho. p. 470. 723. wickednesse. p. 473. 51. turvid. p. 475. 194. I sic. 284. threw. p. 476. 340. ware. p. 478. a. l. 39. understandyng. b. l. 22. hath. p. 480. b. l. 31. to meve when. p. 481. b. l. 3. sperkeland. p. 483. a. l. 7. on you. p. 485. a. l. 35. of mine. l. 42, 43, 44. dele in this cace to none other persone be committed, loken than (quoth she) p. 486. b. l. 5. conning. l. 67. to stretch to the. p. 490. a. l. 72. are. b. l. 9. chaunges, that. p. 492. b. l. 68. side; beddes. p. 493. b. l. 9. secte. l. 59. manie. l. 66. that first. p. 496. a. l. 66. wightes. l. 67. thine? kinde. b. l. 17. men. p. 501. b. l. 7. failings. p. 502. b. l. 25. a wretch. l. 33. wretchednesse. l. 39. with gode forthgoing. l. 64. with her. p. 506. a. l. 17. rejoyce. l. 27. adew blis. p. 507. a. l. 24. make the knotte. b. l. 70. rightfully. p. 508. a. l. 13. solein. l. 31. constitution. l. ult. oyle. b. l. 30. frendship. p. 510. b. l. 64. withholde. p. 518. a. l. 40. I deny it ne. p. 520. Y. 80. My bones. p. 527. 21. Bitterer. 91. abyee. p. 530. 9. and with sainct. p. 531. 80. fel. p. 532. 61. n'ot. 82. oftir. p. 533. 12. he is. 82. Of Granlon, flour of. p. 534. 52, 53. to dele Affir, yf. p. 538. 111. in to. p. 539. 170. fingin. 171. why ne wilt. 243. you. p. 540. 60. withholde. 116. fortune ne may. 547. 165. haboundaunce. p. 548. 222. blent. p. 549. 130. counsaile. p. 550. 113. wife-ly. p. 552. 240. cle. p. 554. 560. right well. p. 557. 794. then. p. 559. 1004. Me. 1027. algates. p. 560. 61. knew. p. 562. 284. this. 285. in mine. p. 563. 345. dele lady. 350. ye XX. 362. fal. 401. firmly. p. 564. 491. dele of. 521. forthwith Rigour. 569. Goddes. 580. blissefull. p. 565. 628. Goddes. p. 566. 765. Guide me. p. 568. 984. crst. 1013. me. 1108. befene. p. 569. 1131. Soget. 1195. entent full. p. 570. 1311. with that. p. 571. 1404. onlocke. p. 575. 532. that ye. p. 576. 569. fare. 676. Far. p. 578. 887. wordlesse. p. 579. 1096. orderit. p. 587. 2177. Iwent. p. 589. T. 2. Fro. Z. 3. lessoun. p. 590. b. l. 46. mow. p. 591. a. l. 37. to here shrift. b. l. 51. seien. p. 592. a. l. 25. be ye. l. 35. payen. b. l. 50. take it. p. 594. Y. 23. al redy. 63. iwis. p. 595. 99. a rede ful even. 156. push. p. 596. 252. amayde. 292. and ystakid. p. 597. 341. ondo. 348. Iwis. 393. every man. p. 598. 458. atast. p. 599. 562. lene. p. 602. 304. his. p. 603. 405. lyve. p. 605. 619. wode man. 669. messager. p. 607. 838. hir mone. p. 608. 1057. world [wyde.] p. 609. 1097. our. p. 610. 1211. wrought. 1218. at the shippis. 1223. wode man. p. 611. 1302. bere. 1396. with percell. p. 613. 1566. were. 1576. afire. p. 614. 1730. yew. 1738. byhete. p. 615. 1883. wisdom. p. 616. 1982. byfall. 2042. afright. p. 617. 2051. braunche. 2155. so Geoffrey. p. 618. 2219. without, fare l. p. 620. 2461. sifnamy. 2475. yede. p. 623. 2936. chaungit. 1946. continuel—desperatioune. p. 624. 3082. stan dede.

In the Explanation of Abbreviations, &c. Col. a. l. 33. Compl. of Venus. 533. l. 52. Gamelyn.

In the Glossary. p. 4. b. l. 70. angre. p. 7. a. l. 16. mote. p. 11. b. l. 31. corrupted. p. 23. a. l. 32. D'owaie. p. 26. a. l. 21. To embarasse, engage. p. 28. b. l. 14. There is no credit. p. 31. a. l. 20. Gasteridge-tree. l. 50. Participle. p. 33. b. l. 15. diceremur. p. 38. b. l. 22. Raked. p. 39. a. l. 10. See Wis. p. 45. b. l. 10. Merula. p. 46. a. l. 67. here. b. l. 21. Mistily. p. 51. b. l. 15. Pejorare. p. 52. a. l. 45. Tr. L. 2.—MS. Sp. p. 54. b. l. 20. A quire of paper. p. 56. a. l. 6. Reading. Some, &c. p. 61. a. l. 21. MS. Ch. p. 68. b. l. 49. Versefour. p. 70. b. l. 13, 14. I was well ured; I had, &c. p. 76. a. l. 35. sefe. b. l. 45. tuam. p. 77. b. l. 39. Tabula.

THE
WORKS
OF JEOFFREY CHAUCER.

The PROLOGUES of the Canterbury Tales
of CHAUCER, from the MSS.

WHEN that Aprilis with his Shouris sote,
The drought of March had percid to the rote,
And bathid every veyn in such licour,
Of which vertue engendrid is the flour;

When Zephyrus eke, with his swete breth
Enspirid hath, in every holt and heth
The tender croppis; and that the yong Sunn
Hath in the Ramm his halve cours yrunn: f
And smale foulis makin melodye,
That slepin alle night with opin eye,
(So prickith them nature in ther corage)
Then longin folk to go on pilgrimage;
And Palmers for to sekin strange stondes,
To servin Hallowes couth in sondry londes:
And specially fro every shir'is end
Of England, to Canterbury they wend,
The holy blisfull Martyr for to seke,
That them hath holpin, whan that they were seke.

Befell that in that seson on a day
In Southwerk at the Tabberd as I lay,
Redy to wendin on my Pilgrimage
To Canterbury, with devote corage,
At night wer come into that Hostery
Wele nine and twenty in a company

Of sundrie folk, by aventure yfall
In felaship; and Pilgrimes wer they all;
That toward Canterbury wouldin ride.

The Chambers and the Stablis werin wide,
And well we werin esid at the best:
And shortly whan the Sunne was to rest,
So had I spokin with them everychone,
That I was of ther felaship anone;
And made forward erli for to rise,
To take our weye, ther as I did devise.

But natheles while that I have time and space,
Er' that I farther in this Tale pace,
Methinkith it accordaunt to reson,
To tell you alle the Condition
Of ech of them, so as it semid me,
And which they werin, and of what degree,
And eke in what array that they wer in:
And at a Knight then woll I first begin.

The Knight.

A Knight ther was, and thar a worthy man,
That fro the tyme that he first began
To ridin out, he lovid Chevalrie,
Trough and Honour, Fredome and Curtesy.

Full worthy was he in his Lord's werre,
And thereto had he riddin' nane more ferre"
As well in Christendom, as in Hethnes;,
And evyr honoured for his worthines.

At Alessandre' he was whan it was won;
Full oft timis he had the bord begon
Abovin alle Naciouns in Pruce;
In Lettow had he riddin, and in Luce,
No Christen-man so oft of his degree
In Granada; in the Sege had he be
Of Algezir, and ridd in Belmary;
At Leyis was he, and at Sataly,
Whan that they wer won; and in the grete Seg
At many a noble army had he be:
At mortal battails had he ben fiftene,
And foughtin for our feith at Tramesene,
In listis thrys, and alwey sein his fo.

This ilke worthy Knight had ben also
Sometimis with the Lord of Palathy,
Ayens anothir hethin in Turkey;
And evirmore he had a Sov'raigne priße;
And though that he was worthy, he was wise;
And of his port as meke as is a Maid,
He nevir yet no villany ne said
In all his life unto no manner wight:
He was a very parfit gentil Knight.
But for to tellin you of his array,
His hors wer good; but he was nothing gay,
Of Fustian he werid a gipon,
Alle besmotrid with his habergeon:
For he was late ycome from his viage,
And wente for to do his pilgrimage.

The Squire.

With him there was his Sonn, a yonge Squire,
A Lovir, and a lusty Bachillere,
With lockis curle, as they were leid in preß,
Of twenty yere of age he was, I ghesse,
Of his Stature he was of evin length,
Wondirly delyver, and of grete Strength;
And he had ben sometime in Chivauchie
In Flandris, in Artois and Picardye,
And born him wele, as of so littil space,
In hope to standin in his Lady's grace.
Embroudid was he, as it were a Mede,
All full of fresh flouris both white and rede;
Singing he was or floyting all the day,
He was as fresh as is the Month of May.
Short was his gounce with slevis long and wide,
Well couth he sit an hors, and feire yride;
And Songis he couth make, and wel endite,
Just, and eke daunce, and well portraie and write.
So hote he lovid, that by nighter tale
He slept no more than doth the Nightingale.
Curteys he was, lowly, and servisable,
And karft before his faðir at the table.

The Squire's Yoman.

A Yoman had he, and Servantes no mo,
At that time, for him list to ridin so.
And he was clad in Cote and hode of grene,
A sheff of Pecoock arrowes, bright and kene,
Undir his belt he bare, full thriftily;
Wel couth he drefs his tackle yomanly,
His arrowes droupid not with fethris low;
And in his hand he bare a mighty bow.
A nott hede had he, with a brown visage,
Of wood-craft wel couth he all the usage.
Upon his arme he bare a gay bracer,
And by his side a Sward and bokeler,
And on that othir side a gay daggere
Harnisid wele and sharp as point of Spere;

A Christopher on' his brest of silver shene,
An horne he bare, the baudrick was of grene,
A Foster was he sothly, as I ghesse.

The Prioress.

There was also a Nonne, a Prioress,
That of her smiling was simple and coy; ^{full} ^p
Her gretist oth was but by Seint Eloye. ¹²⁰
And she was clepid Madame Eglentine;
Full wele she song, tho the Service devine, ¹²⁵
Entunid in her nose full semly;
And French she spake full fayr and fetisly,
After the School of Stratford attē Bowe,
For French of Paris was to her unknowe.
At Metē was she well ytraught withall,
She let no morsell from her lippis fall;
Ne wet her fingris in her saucē depe;
Well couth she carry' a morsell, and well kepe, ¹³⁰
That no dropē ne fell upon her brest;
In curtesie was sett full much her lest.
Her over-lippē wipid she so clene,
That in her cup there was no ferthing sene
Of grece, whan she dronkin had her draught;
Full semly aftir her mete she raught;
And likerly she was of gret disport,
And full pleßant and amiable of port;
And painid her to counterfete chere
Of Court, and to ben stately of Manere, ¹⁴⁰
And to ben holdin digne of reverence.

But for to spekin of her conscience,
She was so charitable and so pitous,
She wouldē wepe, if that she saw a Mous
Caught in a Trapp, if it were ded or bled.
Of smale houndis had she that she fed,
With rostid flesh, or milk and wastel bred,
But fore wept she, if any of them were ded,
Or if men smotē them with a yard smert,
And all was conscience, and tendir hert. ¹⁵⁰
Full semly her wimple pinchid was:
Her nose was tretēs, her yin gray as glas,
Her mouth full smale, and thereto soft and red,
But sikirly she had a fayr forehed;
It was almost a spannē brode I trow;
For hardily she was not undergrow.
Full fetise was her cloke, as I was ware;
Of smale corall about her arm she bare
A pair of bedis, gaudid alle with grene,
And theron hong a broch of gold full shene, ¹⁶⁰
On whiche ther was first writ a crownid A,
And after, Amor vincit omnia.
Another Nonn also with her had she,
That was her chapēlein, and priestis thre.

The Monke.

A Monke ther was fayr for the Maistery,
An outrider, that lovid Venery;
A Manly man, to ben an Abbot able,
Many a dainty horse had he in stable: ¹⁷⁰
And when he rode, Men might his bridle here
Gingiling in a whistling wind as clere
And eke as lowd, as doth the Chappell bell
Ther as this Lord was keper of the Cell;
The rule of St. Maure and of St. Bener,
Because that it was old and somdele streit,
This ilke Monke let old thingis to pacc,
And heldin after the new world the trace.
He gave nor of the text a pullid hen,
That faith, that Hunters be not holy men,
Ne that a Monke, whan he is recheles,
Is likenid til a fish, that's waterles: ¹⁸⁰
This is to say, a Monke out of Cloystre,
This ilk text yeeld he's not worth an Oystre:

* But thithre, text helde he. n. w. 8c.

And I seide his opinion was good, right
 What shuld he study, or make himself wood,
 Upon a boke in cloystre alweie poure,
 Or swinke with his hondis, or laboure, 2
 As Austin did. How shall the world be served?
 Let Austin have his swinke to him reserved.
 Therefore he was a Prikefoure aright; cke
 Greihounds he had as swift as foule of flight: 190
 Of pricking, and of hunting for the hare
 Was all his lust, for no cost would he spare.
 I see his sleves purfild at the hande o
 With grys, and that the finist in a lande. o
 And to sustene his hood under his chin,
 He had of gold wrought a full curious pinn;
 A Love-knot in the greter end ther was.
 His hed was bald, and shone as any glas,
 And eke his face as he had ben anoint;
 He was a Lord full fat, and in gode point: 200
 His eyen stepe, and rolling in his hed,
 That stemid as a furnis of led;
 His bootes souple, his hors in gret estate;
 Now certainly he was a fayr Prelate!
 He was not pale as a forpinid gholt,
 A fat Swann loved he beste of any rost.
 His palfry was as browne as is a berry.

A Frere

A Frere there was, a wanton and a merry,
 A Limitour, and a full solempne man,
 In all the Orders four is none that can
 So much of daliaunce and fair langage. 210
 He hadd made full many a marriage
 Of yonge women, all at his own cost,
 Till his Order he was a noble post.
 Full wele beloved, and familer was he,
 With Frankelins all over his Contré,
 And with the worthie Women of the towne;
 For he had powir of confessioun,
 As he seide himself more than a Curate,
 For of his Order he was Licentiate: re 220
 And Full swetely herde he their confessioun, 22
 And plefant was his absolutioun.
 He was an cly man to give pennaunce,
 Ther as he wist to have a gode pittaunce;
 For unto a pore Order for to give
 Is a signe that a man is wele yshrive: 22
 For if he gave ought, he durst make avaunt,
 He wist wele that that man was repentaunt;
 For many a man so herde is of his herte,
 That he may not wepe, although him fore smert; 230
 Therefore instede of weping and prayers,
 Men more give silver to the pore Freres.
 His tippet was ay farfid full of knives,
 And pinnis for to givin to faire wives.
 And certainly he had a merry note,
 Wele couth he sing and playin on a Rote:
 Of yedding, he bare utterly the price. 5
 His neck was white as is the Floure de lis.
 Therto stronge was he as a champioun,
 And knewe the Tavernes wele in every toun, 240
 And every hostiler and tapstere,
 Better than a Lazere, or a beggere;
 For unto such a worthy man as he
 Accordith naught, as by his faculte,
 To have with such like Lazares acqueyntaunce;
 It is naught honest, it may not avaunce,
 For to have deling with suche base poraile;
 But alle with rich and sellers of Vitayle;
 And over alle, as profit shulde arise,
 Courtis he was, and lowly of servise.
 Ther na's no man no wher so vertuose,
 And He was the best beggere in alle his house,

And gavin a certaine ferme for the graunt,
 None of his brethren camin in his haunt.
 For though a Wedowe had nought but a Scho,
 (So plefant was his In principio)
 Yet would he have a ferthing er he wente,
 His purchase was wele better than his rente;
 And rage he couth as it werit a whelpe. well
 In love-dayis ther couth he mikill helpe, 260
 For ther he was not like a Cloisterere,
 In a thred-bare Cope, like a pore Scolere,
 But he was like a Maistere or a Pope;
 Of double worstede was his semy Cope;
 So roundid twas as a bell out of presse. st. remedy
 Somewhat he lipsid for his wantonnesse, that sounde as a b. out of the pr.
 To make his English swete upon his tonge;
 And in his harping whan that he had songe,
 His eyen twinkeld in his hede aright,
 As don the Sterris in a frosty night. 270
 This worthy Limitour was cleped Huberde.

A Marchaunt.

A Marchaunt was ther with a forkid berde,
 In motley, and high on his horse he sat,
 Upon his hed a Flaunders bejr hat, more
 His bootis claspid faire and fetisly,
 His retons ay spake he full solempny,
 Shewing alweye the encrease of his winning,
 He would the See wer kept for any thing;
 Betwixte Middleborough and Orewell;
 Well couth he in eschaunge his Sheldis sell. 280
 This worthy man so wele his wit bisett,
 That there wist no wight that he was in debt.
 So statly was he with his governaunce,
 With his bargeins, and with his chevisaunce.
 Forsooth he was a worthy man with all;
 But sooth to saine, I n'or what men him call.

The Clerke of Oxenford.

A Clerke there was of Oxenford also,
 That unto Logik longe time had y go.
 As lené was his horse as is a rake,
 And He was nothing fat I undertake, 290
 But lookid hollow, thereto soberly;
 Full thredbare was his overist Courtpy;
 For he had gettin him no benefice,
 Ne was so worldly for to have office;
 For him had lever han at his bedshed
 Twentie bokis, yclad with black or red, in
 Of Aristotle and his Philosophie, or
 Than robis riche, fithell, or gay sautrie. all if
 But albe that he was a Philosopher, were
 Yet had he but little gold in his Coffer, 300
 But alle that he might of his frendis hent,
 On bokis and on learning he it spent;
 And busily gan for the Soulis praye
 Of them, that gave him wherewith to Scholcie.
 Of studie toþkin he most cure and hede
 Nought oo word spak he more than ther was nede,
 And that was seide in forme and reverence,
 And short and quick, and full of high Sentence.
 Sowning in moral vertue was his speche,
 And gladly would he learn, and gladly teche. 310

The Sargeant at Law.

A Sargeant of the Law both ware and wise,
 That oftin had yben at the Pervise, a
 That was also full rich of excellence,
 Discrete he was, and of grette reverence, 250
 He semid suche, his wordis were so wise:
 Justice he was full oftin in Assise,

By

By Patent, and by pleine Commissionne;
For his Science, and for his high renounne,
Of fees and robes had he many oon.
So grete a purchasour was no wher none.
All was fee simple to him in effect,
His purchasynge might not ben in suspect.
No wher so hely a man as he ther n'as,
And yet he semid besier than he was.
In termis had he caas and domis all,
That fro the time of King William were fall.
Thereto he couth endite, and make a thing;
Ther couth no wight pinchin at his writing,
And every statute couth he plaine by rote.
He rode but homely in a medley cote,
Girt with a Seint of Silk, with barris smale;
Of his aray telle I no lenger tale.

The Frankeleyn.

A Frankleyn was in his company;
White was his berde as is the Daiſey,
Of his complexion he was sanguine;
Well loved he by the morrow a sop in wine:
To live in delight was ever his wonne,
For he was Epicurus his own Sonne,
That held Opinioun, that plaine delite
Was the verray felicity perſite.
An Houſholder, and that a grete, was he,
St. Julian he was in his Countre;
His brede, his Ale was alweye after one;
A bett viandid Man was no wher none;
Withoutin bake mete never was his house,
Of fiſhe and fleſhe, and that so plenteouse,
It ſnewid in his house of mete and drinke,
And of all dainties that men couth of think:

After the ſondre ſeſons of the yere
So chaungid he his mete and his ſupere.
Many a fat Partriche had he in mewe,
And many a Brewe, and many a Luce in ſtewe.
Woe was his Coke, but that his faucis were
Poinant and ſharp, and redy alle his gere.
His table dormaunt in his halle alwey
Stode redy covered all the longe dey.
At Ceſſiounes ther was he Lord and Sire,
Full often times he was Knight of the Shire.
An Anlas, and a gipsire alle of ſilk
Hing at his girdill, white as morowe milk.
A Shereve had he ben, and Coronner,
Was no wher ſuch a worthy Vayſfor.

Haberdasher, &c.

An Haberdasher and a Carpenter,
A Webbe, a Dier, and a Tapifer,
All they were clothid in oo lyveré,
Of a ſolempne and grete fraternité,
Full freſh and newe their gere y pikid was,
Their knives y chapid ne wer not with braſs,
But al with ſilver wrought ful clene and wele,
There gurtheles and there pouchis every dele.
Well ſemid eche of them a faire burgeys,
To ſittin in a yelde-Hall on the deys;
Everich for the wiſdome that he canſ,
Was Shape lich for to ben an Aldermanſ.
For Catraile had they right inough and rent,
And eke their wivis woude it wele aſent,
And ellis certain thei werin to blame,
It is full fair to ben clepid Madame,
And to gone to Vigillis all before,
And have a Mantell roialiche y bore.

The Coke.

A Coke thei haddé with them for the nones
To boyle the chickens and the marie-bones,

And poudre-Marchaunt, tarte, and galingale;
Well couth he know a draught of London Ale.
He couth roſtè, boillè, grillè and frie;
And make mortreis and well bake a Pie.
But grete harme was it, as it ſemid me,
That on his Schinnè a Mormal had he;
For blank manger that niade he with the beſt.

The Shipman.

A Shipman was there wonning ferre by Weſt;
For ought I wote he was of Dertemouth;
He rode upon a rouncy, as he couth,
In a gowne of falding to the knee:
A dagger hanging on a lace had he,
About his neck, under his arm adoun:
The hot Sommer had made his hew all broun.
And certeynly he was a gode felaw,
Full many a draught of Wine had he ydraw
Fro Burdeux ward while the chapmen ſlepe,
Of nycè Conſcience toke he no kepe.
If that he faught, and had the higher hand,
He ſent them home by water to eche land.
But of his craft to rekin wele his tides,
His ſtemis, and his daungeres him beſides,
His herbrough, his mone, and his Lode menage,
There was none ſuch fro Hull unto Cartage.
Hardie he was, and wiſe to undertake;
With many a tempeſt had his berde ben ſhake:
He well knew all the Havins as they were,
Fro Scotland to the Cape of Fynyſtere,
And every creek in Brittain and in Spain,
His barge y calid was the Maudelain.

The Dr. of Phiſick.

With us ther was a Doctour of Phiſick,
In all this world ne was ther none him like
To ſpeke of Phiſike and of Surgery;
For he was groundid in Aſtronomy;
He kept his pacient a full gret dele
In houris by his Magike naturele;
Well couth he fortune the aſcendent
Of his images for his pacient.
He knewe the cauſe of every maladic,
Were it of hote, or cold, or moiſt, or drie;
And where engendrid, and of what humour,
He was a very parfit practifour.
The cauſe yknow, and of his harme the rote,
Anon he gave to the ſike man his bote.
Full redy had he his Potheccaries,
To ſend him druggis and leſtuaries,
For eche of them made other for to winne:
Their frendſhip n'as not new, now to beginne.
Well knew he the old Eſculapius,
And Dioſcorides, and eke Rufus,
Old Hippocrates, Haly, and Galen,
Serapion, Rafis, and Avicen,
Averrois, Damascene, Constantine,
Bernard, and Gatifden, and Gilbertin.
Of his diete meſurable was he,
For it was of no ſuperfluite,
But of grete noriſhing, and digeſtible.
His ſtudie was but litil in the Bible;
In Sanguine, and in Perſe he was clad all
Linid with Tafata, and with Sandall.
And yet he was but eſy of diſpence,
He keptè that he wan in Peſtilence;
For gold in Phiſike is a cordiak;
Therefore he lovèd gold in ſpecial.

The Wife of Bath.

A gode wife there was also beside Bathe,
But she was somdele defe, and that was feathe.
Of Clothmaking she hadde such a haunt,
She passid them of Ipre, and of Gaunt.
In all the Parish wife ne was there none,
That to the offryng should before her gone,
And if there did, certaine so wroth was she,
That she was outim of all charite.

Her covercheifes were large and fine of ground,
I durst to swere that thei weyid thre pound,
That on a Sonday were upon her hedde;
Her hofin werin of fine Scarlet redde,
Full strait ystrainid, and her shoos full new;
Boid was her face, and fayr and red her hew:

She was a worthy woman all her live,
Husbandes at the Chirche dore had she had five,
Withoutin other companie in youth,
But thereof nedith not to speke as noyth:

Thries hadde she ben at Jerusalem,
And she had passid many a straunge streme,
At Rome had she ben, and als at Boloine,
In Gallice, at Seint Jame, and at Coloine;
She couth much talk of wandring by the way;
Gap-tothid was she, soothly for to say:

Upon an Ambler cfly she satte,
All wimplid well, and on her hed an hatte
As brode as is a bokeler or a Targe;
A foot-mantill about her hippis large,
And on her fect a paire of Spurris sharpe.
In felawship wele couth she laugh and carpe,
Of remedies of love she knew perchaunce,
For she couth of that art the oldè daunce.

The Parson.

A gode Man there was of Religioun,
And he was a pore Parson of a Toun:

But riche he was of holy thought and werke,
He was als a lernid Man, and a Clerk,
That Christ's gospell trewly wolde preche,
His Parishners devoutly wolde he teche.

Benigne he was, and wonder diligent,
And in Adversite full pacient:

And soch one he was provid oftè sithes.
Full loth were him to cursin for his tithes,
But rather wolde he gevin out of dout,
Unto his pore Parishners all about,

Both of his offryng and of his substaunce;
He couth in lityl thing have suffisaunce.
Wide was his parish, and housis asonder,
But he ne left, neither for raine, ne thonder,

In Sikeness, ne in mischief to visite
The ferthist in his parish, much or lite,
Upon his fere, and in his hand a staffe;

This gode ensample to his shepe he yaffe,
That first he wrought, and afterward he taught;
Out of the Gospell he the wordis caught,
And this figure he addid eke therto,

That if gold rustid, what should iron do?
For yef a Priest be foule, on whome we trust,
No wonder is it a lewde man to rust:

And shame it is (but that a Priest take kepe)
To see a shittin Shepherd and clene Shepe.
Well ought a Priest ensample for to yeve,
By his own clenesse how his Shepe should live.

He sette nor his Benefice to hire,
And let his Shepe acomber in the mire;
And ren to London, unto Seintè Poyles,
To sekun him a chaunterie for Soules;

Or with a broderhede to ben withhold:
But dwellid at home, and kepte well his fold,
- lte

So that the wolf ne made hem not miscary,
He was a shepherd, not a mercenary.

And though he holy were and vertuous,
He was not to sinfull men dispitous.

Ne of his speche daungerous, ne digne,
But in his teching discrete and benigne,

To drawin folk to hevin bi fairenesse,
Bi gode ensample, this was his besnesse.

But if were any perlon obstinate,
Whether he were of high or low estate,

Him woulde he snibb sharpely for the nonis:
A better Priest I trowe no where none is.

He waitid after no pompe ne reve'ence,
Ne makid him no spicid Conscience,

But Christ's lore and his Apostles twelve
He taught, but first he followed himselfe.

The Ploughman.

With him there was a Ploughman his broder,

That had lad of dong many a sother;
And a trewe Swinker, and a gode was he,

Living in pece and perfite charite.
God lov'd he best with all his whole herite,

At alle timis, though him gained or sinerte;
And then his neighbouris right as himselve;

And he would thresh, and thereto dike and delve,
For Christ's sake, for every pore wight,

Withoutin hire, if it lay in his might.
His tithis payid he full faire and well,

Both of his proper swink, and his cattell:
In a Tabbarde he rode upon a Mare.

There was also a Reve, and a Millare,
A Sompnour, and a Pardoner also,

A Manciple, and my self, ther' was no mo.

The Millare.

The Millare was a stout Carle for the nones,
Full bigge he was of braune and eke of bones;

That prov'd he wele, for o're all there he cam
At wraffling he would have away the Ram.

He was short shulder'd, and a thickè gnarr,
There n'as no dore but he would have the barr,

Or breke it at a renning with his hedde;
His berde as anie Sow or Fox was redde,

And thereto brode as though it were a Spade:
Upon the Coppe right of his nose he hade

A wert, and thereon stode a tuffe of hères,
Red as the bristles of a Sow's eres;

His nostrilles also black werin and wide,
A Swerde and bokeler bare he by his side;

His mouth as wide was as a grete forneis,
He was a jangler and a Goliardis,

And that was most of Sinne and harlotreis;
Wele couth he stèle corne, and tollè thrys,

And yet he had a thombe of gold parde.
A white Cote, and a blew hode werid he;

A Baggè pipe well couth he blow and fowne,
And thurewithall brought he us out of towne.

The Manciple.

A Manciple there was of the Temple,
Of which all Catours might take ensample,

For to ben wise in buying of Viraile;
For whether he payid or toke by taile,

Algate he waitid sojin his affare,
That he was ay before in gode estate.

Now is not that of God a full faire grace,
That such a lewde Mann's wit shall pace

The wisdom of a hepe of lernid Men?
Of Maisters had he mo than thrys ten,

C

That

That were of lawe expert and curious,
Of which ther were a dofin in that houe,
Worthy to ben Stuzards of house and londe
Of any Lordè that is in Englonde,
To make him livin by his proper gode,
In honour detteles, but if he were wode,
Or live as scarfly as him list desire,
And able for to helpin al a Shire
In any caas that might fallin or hap:
And yet this Manciple set all ther cap.

The Reve.

The Reve was a sklender colerik man,
His berde was shave as nie as e're he can;
His here was by his cris round shorne,
His top was dokkid like a priest before:
Full longe were his leggis; and full lene,
Ylike a Staf, ther was no calfe yfene.
Well couth he kepe a Garner and a Binn,
Ther was none Auditour couth on him winn.
Well wist he by the drought and by the raine
The yelding of his fede, and of his graine.
His Lord's shepe, his nete, and his deirie,
His swine, his hors, his store, and his pultrie,
Were wholly in this Reve's governing,
And by his Covenaunt yave he rekening,
Syn that his Lord was twenty yere of age,
Ther couth no man bring him in arrerage.
There ne was Bailie, herl, nor other hine,
That he ne knew his sleight and his covine;
They were adradd of him as of the deth.
His wonning was full fayr upon an heth;
With grene trees yshadowd was his place;
He couth better than his Lord purchase;
Full rich he was astorid prively;
His Lord he couth wele plesin subtilly,
To yeve and lenin him of his own gode,
And have a thank, and get a Cote and hode.
In youth he had ylerned a gode mistere,
He was a Whelewright and a Carpenter.
This Reve sat upon a right gode Stot,
That was all pomelly gray, and hight Scot.
A longe Surcote of Perse blew he hade,
And by his Side he bare a rustie blade.
Of Norfolk was this Reve of whiche I tell,
Beside a town men clepin Baldiwell.
Tuckid he was as is a Frere about,
And ever he rode hinderest of our rowte.

The Sompnour.

A Sompnour was ther with us in the place,
That had a fry red cherubimes face,
For fausseme he was, with eyin narow,
All hore he was, and lech'rous as a Sparow,
With scallid browis blak, and pilid berde,
Of his visage childern were fore afferde.
Ther n'as quyksilver, litarge, ne brimstone,
Borace, Ceruse, ne oile of Tarter none,
Ne Ointement, that would clense or bite,
That him might helpin of his whelkis white,
Ne of his knobbis sitting on his chekes.
Well loved he garlike, onions, and Jekes,
And for to drinkin strong wine, red as blode;
Then would he speke and crie as he were wode.
And when that he well dronkin had the wine,
Then wolde he speke no word but Latine:
A few Scholter-termis couth he, two or thre,
That he had lernid out of some decre:
No wonder is, he herde it all the day;
And ye well knowin eke, how that a jay
Can clepe watt, as well as can the Pope,
But who so couth, in other things, him grope,

Then had he spent all his Philosophie;
(A questio quid juris) wolde he crie.
He was a gentil harlot and a kind,
A better felaw sholde a man not find;
He wolde suffer for a quarte of wine,
A gode felaw to have his Concubine
A twelvemonth, and excuse him at the full;
Full prively eke a finch couth he pull,
And if he found owher a gode felawe,
He wolde techin him to have none awe
In soch caas of the Archdekin's curse,
But if a Mann's Soule wer in his purse,
For in his purse he sholde punish'd be,
Purs is the Archdekin's hellè, seid he.
But well I wor, he lyith right indede;
Of cursing ought ech' sinfull man to drede:
Cursing woll flay, right as alloiling savith,
And als ware him of a significavit.
In daungere had he, at his owne gife,
All the yong girlis of the diocise,
And knew ther counsaile, and was of ther rede.
A Garlond had he sette upon his hede,
As gret as it werin for an Alestake,
A Bokeler had he made him of a Cake.

The Pardoner.

With him ther rode a gentil Pardoner,
Of Rouncevall, his frend and his compere,
That strait was come from the Court of Rome;
Full loude he song, come hi'er lov's sone;
This Sompnour bare to him a stiff burdoun,
Was never tromp of half so gret a Sown.
This Pardoner had here as yellowe as wax,
And smothe it heng as doth a strike of flax;
By ounceis heng his lokkis that he had,
And therewith he his shulderes oversprad,
Full thynne it lay, by culpons one by one;
But hode for jollitie werid he none,
For it was truffid up in his waler;
Him thought he rode all of the newe fet,
Dischevel, saaf his cappe, he rode al bare:
Such glaring eyin had he as an hare.
A vernycle had he sewd on his cappe.
His Waler lay before him in his lappe.
Bret full of pardon come fro Rome al hote,
A voice he had as smale as hath a gote.
No berde he had, ne never shuldin have,
As smothe it was as it were late shave.
I trowe he were a gelding or a mare;
But of his craft, fro Barwike unto Ware,
Ne was there such another Pardoner:
For in his Male he had a pilowbere,
Which, as he seide, was our Ladies vaile:
He saide, he had a gobbet of the Saile
Which Saint Peter haddè, whan that he went
Upon the See, till Jesu Christ him hent.
He had a croos of Laton full of stones,
And in a glas haddè he piggis bones;
But with thesè relikis, whan that he fonde,
A pover parfone dwelling up on londe,
Upon o day he gat him more money,
Than that Parfone got him in monthis tweye.
And thus with fainid flatering and japes,
He made the Parson and the peple his apes.
But truly for to tellin at the last,
He was in Church a nobill ecclesiast;
Well couth he rede a lesson or a storie,
But alderbest he songe an offertorie:
For wele he wistè, whan that song was songe,
He must prechè, and well afile his tonge,
To winnè silvir, as he full wele cou'd,
Therefore he songe so merrily and lowd.

Now

Now have I tolde you sothly in a claufe,
The State, aray, and number, and the Cause,
Why that assemblid was this companie
In Southwerke, at this gentil hostelrye;
That hight the Tabbarde, faste by the Bell.
But now it is time to you for to tell,
How that we barin us that ilke night,
Whan we wer in that hostelrye alight,
And after wolle I tellen our viage,
And all the remnaunt of our Pilgrimage.
But first I pray you of your curtasie,
That ye n'arett it nought my villanie,
Though that I plainly speke in this mattere,
To tellin you ther words, and eke ther chere,
Ne though I speke ther wordis properly.
For this ye knowin al as wel as I,
Whoso shall telle a tale after a man,
Mete reherse, as nygh as ever he can,
Everich word, if it ben in his charge,
Al speke he never so rudely ne large:
Or ellis he more telle his tale untrewre,
Or feyne thingis, or find wordis newe:
He may not spare, tho he wer his brother,
But as wele say o word as another.
Christ speke himself full brode in holie writ,
And wele ye wote no villanie is it.
Eke Plato sayith, whoso can him rede,
The wordis mote be Cosin to the dede.
Also I pray you to forgive it me,
All have I not set folk in ther degre,
Here in these talis as thei sholden stonde,
My wit is short ye may well understonde.
Grete chere made our host as everichone,
And to the suppere set he us anone:
And servid us with vitales of the best,
Strong was the wine, and wele to drink us left.
A semely man our hoste was withal,
To ben a Marshall in a Lord's Hall;
A large man he was, with cyin stepe,
A fayrer Burgeis is there none in Chepe.
Bold of his speche, and wise, and well ytaught,
And of manhode lakkid him right naught.
And eke thereto he was a mery man,
And after suppere, playin he began,
And spake of mirth amongis other thinges,
Whan that we haddè made our rekeninges;
And seide thus, now Lordingis trewly,
Ye ben to me welcome right hertely:
For by my trouthe, if that I shal not lie,
I saw not this yere soche a companie
At onis in this herbrue as is now,
Fain would I don you mirthe, wist I how.
And of a mirth I am right now bethought,
To don you ese, and it shall coste nought.
Ye gon to Canterbury, God you spede,
The blisfull Martir quite you your mede:
And well I wot as ye gon by the way,
Ye shapin you to talkin and to play:
For trewly comfort ne mirth is there none,
To ridin by the way as domb as stone.
And therefore wolle I makin you disport,
As I seide erst, and done you some comfort.
And if you likith all by one assent
For to stondin at my will and judgement;
And for to workin as I shall you say,
To morrow, whan we ridin on the way;
Now by my faðer's Soule, that is dede,
But ye be mery, I wolle give my hede;
Holdith up your hondis without more speche;
Our Counsaile was not longè for to seche:
Us thought it was not worth to make it nice,
And grauntid him withoutin more avise,

And bad him say his verdict as him left:
Lordinges, quoth he, now herk'nith for the best, 790
But take it not I pray you in disdaine,
This is the point to speke it plat and plaine,
That eche of you to shortin other's way
In this viage, shall tellin talis tway;
To Canterbury ward, I mean it so,
And homewardest he shall tellin other two,
Of Aventures, whilome that have befall;
And which of you him berith best of all, 800
That is to sayn, that tellith in this case,
Talis of best Sentence, and most solace,
Shall have a Suppere at our alder cost
Here in this place sitting by this Post,
When we come ayen fro Canterbury.
And for to makin you the more mery
I wolle my selvin godelic with you ryde,
Right at mine owne cost, and be your gyde.
And whoso wolle my judgement withsay,
Shall pay for all we spendin by the way.
And if that ye vouchsaaf that it be so,
Telle me anon withoutin wordis mo, 810
And I wolle erely shapin me therefore.
This thing was grauntid, and our othis swore,
With full glad herte, and praydin him also,
That he wolden vouchsaaf for to do so,
And that he wolden ben our governour,
And of our talis judge, and reportour:
And set a Suppere at a certaine price,
And we wolden rulid ben at his devise,
In hie and low; and thus by one assent
We ben accordid to his judgement. 820
And thereupon the wine was fet anone,
We dronkin, and to rest went ilke one,
Withoutin any longer taryng.
The Morrow whan the day began to spring,
Uprose our Host, and was our alder Cock,
And gaðrid us togethir on a flock.
And forth we riddin all a litil space
Unto the watering of St. Thomas:
And there our Host began his horse arest,
And seide, Lordingis, herk'nith if ye lest, 830
Ye wote your forword, and I it record,
If Evensong and Morrowsong accord.
Let see now who shall tellin the first tale.
As ever mote I drinkin wine or ale,
Whoso is rebell to my judgement,
Shall pay for all that by the way is spent.
Now drawith Cut ere that ye farther twin,
The whiche that hath the shortist shall begin.
Sir Knight, quoth he, my Maister and my Lord;
Now drawith Cut, for that is mine accord, 840
Come nere, quoth he, my Ladie Prioreste,
And ye, Sir Clerke, let be your shamefacednesse,
Ne studie not, lay hand to, every man;
Anone to drawin every wight began.
And shortly for to tellin as it was,
Were it by Adventure, or Sort, or Caas,
The sothe is thus, the Cut fell to the Knight,
Of which full blithe and glad was every wight.
And tell he must his tale, as was reson,
By forword, and by Composition, 850
As ye han herde; what nedith wordis mo?
And whan this gode Man saw that it was so,
As he that wife was, and obedient,
To kepin his forward by free assent,
He seide, sithin I shall begynn the game,
Th'art welcome, Cut, to me a Godd's name.
Now let us ride, and herk'nith what I say,
And with that word, we ridin forth our way,
And he began, with a right mery chere,
His Tale, the which anon right shall ye here. 860

Thus endith the Prologues of the Canterbury Tales. And follows, I. The KNIGHT's TALE

Mr. Dryden says he once thought that the Knight's Tale was Chaucer's own invention; but finding in the seventh Giornata of Boccaccio mention made of a Duke of Athens & Palamon, he judges it to be this Tale formerly written by an Italian before Boccaccio's time. Pref. to his Tales.

I. The KNIGHT's TALE.

Hylome, as old stories tell us,
There was a Duke, that highte Theseus,
Of Athens he was Lord and Governour,
And in his time soche a Conquerour,
That greter was there non under the Son:

Full many a rich countrie had he wonn,
What with his wisdom, and his chivalrie,
He conquer'd all the reign of Feminie,
That whilome was yclepid Scythia:
And weddid the Quene call'd Hypolita,
And brought hir home with him to his Countrie,
With mikill glorie and solempnitie,
And eke hir yonge Sister Emelie.

And thus with victorie and melodie
Let I this worthy Duke to Athens ryde,
And all his host in armis him beside.

And certis if it n'ere too long to here,
I would have toldè fuily the manere,
How wonnin was the reign of Feminie,
By Theseus, and by his chevalrie.
And of the grete bataile for the nones,
Betwix Athenis and the Amazonas.

And how besegit was Hyppolita,
The feire, yonge, hardie Quene of Scythia.
And of the feste that was at their wedding,
And of the tempest at their home-coming.
But al these thynges I mote as now forbere,
I have, God wor, a large felde to ere,
And wekid ben the oxen in the plow,
The remnaunt of my tale is long inow.

I will not lettin eke none of this rout,
Let every felaw tell his tale about;

And let see now who shall the Suppere win:
But there I left I woll agayn begin.

This Duke, of whome I make mencioun,
When he was come almost unto the toun,
In all his wel, and in his most pride,
He was ware, as he cast his eye aside,
Where that there knelid in the high way
A companie of Ladys tway and tway,
Eche attir other, cladde in clothis blake,
But soch a crie, and soch a wo they make,
That in this world ne is creature living,
That evir herdè such a weymenting.
And of this crie they n'oldè nevir stentia,
Till they the reinis of his bridie hentia.

What folk be ye, that at my home-comming
Perturbin so my feest with your crying,
Quod Theseus? have ye so grete envie
Of mine honour, that thus compleine and crie?
Or who hath you misbodid, or offended?
Now tellith me, that it may be amended,
And why that ye be clothid thus in blake?

The oldist Lady of them all spake,
Whan she had fownd with a dedelie chere,
That it was rushe her for to see and here:
She seide, Lord, to whom Fortune hath geven
Victory and as a conquerour to liven,
Nought grevith us your glorie and honour,
But we besechin mercie and succour,
Have mercie on our wo and our distres,
Some drop of pitè through thy gentilnes,
Upon us wretchid wymin, let thou fall;
For certis, Lord, there is none of us all,

900

another
ne wolde

910 * al. mudo

* to him

i + And your 920 lords

That

That she n'ath ben a Duchesse or a Quene,
 Now be we Catives, as it is wele sene.
 Thankid be Fortune, and her false whele,
 That none estate assurith to be wele.
 Now certis, Lord, to abide your presence,
 Here in this Temple of the Goddesse Clemence, 930
 We have ben weyting all this fourtènyght;
 Help us, Lord, sith it lyith in thi might.
 I wretch, which that wepe and weyle thus,
 Was whilome wyf to King Capaneus,
 That starfe at Thebis, cursid be the day;
 And allè we that ben in this aray,
 And makin all this Lamentacioun,
 We lostin all our husbondes at that toun,
 While that the Sege there about is lay;
 And yet now the old Creon (Welaway) 940
 That Lord is now of Thebis the Citie,
 Fulfillid of ire and iniquite,
 He, for despite and for his tirannie,
 To doin the dede bodie villanie,
 Of all our Lordis which that ben yslaw,
 Hath all the bodyes on an hepe ydraw,
 And woll not sutre them by none assent
 Neither to ben buried, nowther p'brent; 950
 But makith houndes to ete them in dispite.
 And with that worde withoutin more respite
 They fallin gruf and cridin pitouslie,
 Have on us wretchid wymmen some mercie,
 And let our Sorow sink into thine herte.
 This gentil Duke down from his Courser sterte,
 With herte pitous, whan he herde them speke,
 Him thoughtin that his herte wou'de al to breke,
 Whan he saw them so pitous and so mate,
 That whylome werin of so gret estate,
 And in his armis he them al uphent,
 And them comfortith in full gode entent, 960
 And swore his ooth, as he was a trew Knight,
 He wold doin so ferforthly his might,
 Upon the Tiraunt Creon them to wreke,
 That all the pepyl of Grece shuld speke,
 How Creon was by Theseus y served,
 As he that hath his dethe ful wele deserved.
 And right anon withoutin more abode
 His baner he displayd and forth rode 970
 To Thebis-ward, and all his host beside.
 No nerre Athenis wolde he go ne ride,
 Ne takin his ese fully half a day,
 But onward on his wey that night he lay:
 And sent anon Hippolita the Quene,
 And Emelie her yongè Sustir shene,
 Unto the Toune of Athenis to dwelle,
 And forth he ritte, ther n'is no more to telle.
 The red Statue of Mars with spere and targe
 So shinith in his white banner large,
 That alle the feldis glittrin up and doune:
 And by his banner borne is his pennon 980
 Of gold ful rich, in which there was ybete
 The Minotaur, which that he wan in Crete.
 Thus ritt this Duke, thus ritt this Conquerour,
 And in his host of chivalrie the flour,
 Tyl that he came to Thebis, and alight
 Feire in a felde, ther as he thought to fight.
 But shortlie for to spekin of this thing,
 With Creon, which that was of Thebis King,
 He fought, and slew him manly as a Knight
 In plain bataille; and put his folke to flight. 990
 And by assault he wan the Citie after,
 And rent adoune both wall, and sparre, and rafter;
 And to the ladies he restor'd ageyn
 The bonis of ther frendis that were sleyn,
 To don obsequies, as tho' was the gife.
 But it were all too long for to devise
 The grete clamour, and eke the weymting,
 That the Ladies madin at the brenning

Of the bodie, and the gretè honour
 That Theseus the nobil Conquerour 1000
 Dorch to the Ladys, whan they from him went.
 But shortly for to telle is mine entent:
 Whan that this worthy Duke, this Theseus
 Hath Creon slaine, and wonne Thebis thus,
 Stille in that felde he toke all nyght his rest,
 And did with alle the Countrie as him list.
 To ranfak in the raas of bodys dede,
 Them for to strip of harnais and of wede
 The Pillours did their besinesse and cure,
 Astir the bataille and discomfiture. 1010
 And so befell, that in the raas thei found
 Through grit with many grevous blodie wound
 Two yongè Knightis, ligging by and by,
 Both in armis same, wrought full richly.
 Of whichè two Arcite hight that one, 1020
 And that othir Knight hightè Palamon.
 Not fully quik, ne fully dede they were,
 But by their Cote-Armoures, and by their gere
 The Heraulds knew them best in speciall,
 As thei that werin of the blode riall
 Of Thebis, and of Sultrin two yborne; 1030
 Out of the raas the Pillours han them torne,
 And han them caried soft into the tent
 Of Theseus, and he ful sone them sent
 To Athenis, to dwellin in prisoun
 Perpetuelly, them n'olde he ranfoun.
 And whan this worthi Duke hath thus ydone,
 He toke his hoste, and home he goth anone,
 With laurell crounid, as a Conquerour;
 And there he livith in joy and honour 1040
 Terme of his life, what nedith wordis mo?
 And in a Toure in anguish and in wo
 Dwellith this Palamon, and eke Arcite
 For evir more, there may no gold them quite.
 Thus passith yere by yere, and day by day,
 Tyl it fell once in a morrowe of May,
 That Emelie, that fayrer was to sene
 Than is the lilly upon the stalk grene,
 And fresher than the May, with flouris newe,
 For with the rose colour strofe hir hewe, 1050
 I note which was the fayrer of them two;
 Er it was day, as was her wont to do,
 She was arisin, and all redie dight,
 For May wold have noy sluggardy annight.
 The Sefon prikkith every gentill herte,
 And makith it out of his slepe to sterte,
 And faith, aryse, and do May observaunce:
 This makith Emelie have remembraunce
 To don honour to May, and for to rise,
 Y clothid was the freshe for to devise, 1060
 Her yellow heer was broidid in a tresse,
 Behind her back, a yardè long I gesse;
 And in the gardyn, as the sunn up riste;
 She romid up and down, and as the lisse
 She gaðrith flouris party white and rede;
 To make a sotill garland for her hede;
 And as an Angel hevynly she song
 The gretè Tour, that was so thik and strong,
 [Which of the Castell was the chief Dongcon,
 Ther as the Knightis werin in Prison, 1070
 Of which I toldè you, and tellin shall]
 Was evyn joynaunt to the gardyn wall,
 There as this Emelie had her playing.
 Bright was the Sunn, and clere in the morning,
 And Palamon, this woful Prisonere,
 As was his wont, by leve of his gaylere
 Was up, and romid in a Chambr on high,
 In which he all the nobill citie sigh;
 And eke the gardyn, full of braunchis grene
 There as this freshe Emelia the Shene 1080
 Was in her walk, and romid up and down;
 This sorowfull pris'oner, this Palamon
 D
 Goth

Goth in his chambre roming to and fro,
 And to himself compleyning of his wo;
 That he was born, ful ofte he seide alas!
 And so befel by aventure or caas
 That through a window, thik of many a bar
 Of iren grete, and square as any spar,
 He cast his eyin on Emilia;
 And therewithall he blent, and cryid A!
 As though he stongin were unto the herte;
 And with that crie Arcite anon up-stert:
 And seide, Cosyn myne, what eylyth The
 That art so pale, and dedly for to se?
 Why cridistow? Who hath The don offence?
 For Godd's love take al in pacience
 Our Prison, for it may none othir be:
 Fortune hath geve us this Adversite.
 Some wikk' aspect, or disposicion
 Of Saturne, by some constellacion
 Hath yeve us this; although we had it sworn,
 So stood the hevyn whan that we were born!
 We mote endure it: This is short and playn.
 This Palamon answerde, and seide agayn,
 Cosyn, forsoth of this opinion
 Thou hast a vaine imaginacion;
 This Prison causid me not for to crie,
 But I was hurt right now thorough min eye
 Into myne hert; that wold my banè be:
 The fairnesse of that Lady, that I se
 In yondir Gardyn roming to and fro,
 Is cause of all my crying and my wo.
 I n'ote wher she be Woman or Godeffe!
 But Venus it is sothly, as I gesse;
 And therewithall on knees adown he fyll
 And seide, Venus, if it be thy will,
 You, in this gardyn, thus to transfigure
 Before me sorowfull wretchid creature,
 Out of this Prison help that we may scape;
 And if so be my destinie be shape,
 By eterne word to dyin in Prison,
 Of our lynage have some compassion,
 That is so low ybrought by Tirannie.
 And with that word, Arcite gan espie
 Whereas the Lady romid to and fro:
 And with that sight her beauty hurt him so,
 That, if that Palamon was woundid fore,
 Arcite was hurt as much as he, or more;
 And with a sike, he seide pitouslic
 The fresh beantie, slayish me bodilic
 Of her, that romith in the yondir place
 And but I have her mercy and her grace,
 That I may seen her at the lestè wey,
 I n'am but dede: ther n'ys no more to sey.
 This Palamon, whan he these wordis herde,
 Dispitously he lokid, and answerde
 When seistow this in ernest or in play?
 Nay, qd Arcite in ernest by my fay:
 God help me so, me list full ill to pley.
 This Palamon gan knyght his browis tway,
 It were, qd he, to The no grete honour
 For to be false, ne to be a Traytour
 To me, that am thy Cosyn, and thy broðir
 Ysworne full depe, and ech of us to othir.
 That never for to dyin in the peyne
 Tyll that the deth departin shall us twayne,
 Neither of us in love to hindir othir,
 Ne in none othir caas, my leve brothir;
 But that thou shuldist trewly furthir me
 In every caas as I shuld furthir The;
 This was thine Oth, and mine also certayn.
 I wot right wele thou dar'st it not withsain:
 Thus artow of my counseill out of doute,
 And now thou woldist falsly ben aboute
 To love my Lady; whom I love, and serve,
 And evir shall, till that myne herte sterve.

Now certis, false Arcite, thou shalt not so;
 I lovid hir first, and tolde The, my wo
 As to my Counseyle, and my broðir sworne
 To furthir me; as I have seide beforene;
 For which thou art y boundin, as a Knight
 To helpin me, if it lye in thy might,
 Or ellis artow false, I dare well sayn.
 This Arcite full proudly spake agayn,
 Thou shalt, qd he, be rathir false than I:
 And thou art false. I tell the utterly;
 For Paramour, I loved her first er thou;
 What wiltow sayn, thou wilt it nought yet now
 Whethir she be a woman, or Godeffe.
 This is affection of Holynesse; Thine.
 And mine is love to an erthly creature
 For which I tolde The mine aventure
 As to my Cosyn, and my broðir sworne.
 Suppose that thou lovidist her beforene,
 Wotistow wel the oldè clerkis saw
 That who shall give a Lovir any Law?
 Love is a gretter Lawe, by my pan,
 Than may be yeve to any erthly man;
 Therefore positive Law, and such decre,
 Is broke all day for love in ech degre.
 A man mote nedis love, maugre his hede,
 He may not fleen it, though he shuld be dede,
 Albe she maide, widow, or ellis wife.
 And eke it is not likely all thy life
 To stondin in her Grace, no more than I:
 For wele thou wost, thy selfin verily,
 That thou and I ben damnid to prison
 Perpetuall; us gainith no ransom.
 We strive, as did the Houndis for the bone
 That fought al day, and yet ther part was none.
 There came a Cur, while that they wer so wroth,
 And bare away the bone betwixt them both.
 And therefore atte a King's court, my broðir,
 Ech man for himself, ther is none othir:
 Love if thou list; for I love, and ay shall;
 And soothly, lese broðir, this is all.
 Here, in this Prison, mote we endure,
 And everich of us take his aventure.
 Grete was the strife and long betwixt them tway
 If that I haddè lesure for to sey:
 But to th' effect, it happid on a day
 (To tell it you as shortly as I may)
 A worthie Duke, that hight Perithous,
 (That felaw was unto Duke Theseus
 Sithin the day that they were childrin lite)
 Was come t' Athenes his felaw to visite,
 And for to play, as he was wont to do:
 For in this world he lovid no man so:
 And he loved him as tenderly again,
 So wele they lovid, as old bokis sain,
 That when that one was dede, soothly to tell,
 His felaw went, and sought him down in Hell.
 But of that Story list me not to write.
 Duke Perithous lovid well Arcite,
 And had hym known at Thebis yere by yere,
 And finally arthe request and prayere
 Of Perithous, withoutin ransom
 Duke Theseus let him out of Prison
 Freely to gon, wher that him list o'r all,
 In such a gife, as I you tellin shall.
 This was the Forward plainly to endite
 Betwixt Duke Theseus, and him Arcite
 That if so were, that Arcite were found
 Evre in his life, by day, or night, o stound
 In any Contre of this Duke Theseus
 And he were caught, it was acordid thus;
 That with a Swerde, he shuldè lese his hede.
 There n'as none othir remedie, ne rede,
 But takith his leve, and homeward him sped
 Let him be ware, his neck lyith to wed:
 How

How grete sorow suff'rith now Arcite?
 The deth he felith through his herte smite.
 He wepith, wailith, cryith pitoullie,
 To slein himself he waitith privily.
 And seide, alas! the day, that I was borne.
 Now is my Prison worse than beforne!
 Now is me shape eternally to dwell
 Nought in Purgatorie, but right in Hell.
 Alas, that e'r I knew Perithous!
 For ellis had I dwelt with Theseus,
 Fetterid in his Prison evir mo:
 Than had I ben in blis, and not in Wo.
 Only the fighte of hir, whom that I serve,
 Though that I nevir may her Grace deserve,
 Wold have sufficid right ynow for me.
 O deerist Cosyn Palamon, qd he,
 Thine is the Victoie of this Aventure,
 Full blisfull in Prison mayst thou endure;
 In Prison? nay certis in Paradys;
 Well hath Fortune to The turnid the Dice,
 That hast the fight of her, and I th' absence.
 Possible is [syn thou hast her presence,
 And art a Knight, a worthy and an able,
 That by some caas, since Fortune is changable]
 Thou mayst sometime to thy desire attaine,
 But I that am exilid, and barraine
 Of alle grace, and in so grete despaire,
 That ther n'is water, erth, ne fire, nor aire,
 Ne creature, that of them y makid is,
 That may me helpe, or done comfort in this,
 Well ought I serve in wanhope, and distresse.
 Farewell my life, my lust, and my gladnesse;
 Alas! why pleyin men so in commune
 Of purveyance of God, or of Fortune,
 That givith them full ofte in many a gise,
 Well bettir, than themselves can devise.
 Some man desirith for to have richesse,
 That cause is of his murdre or siknesse.
 And some man wolde out of his prison faine,
 That, in his house, is of his meinye slaine.
 Infinite harmis ben in this manere!
 We wote not for what thinges we prayin here.
 We fare as he; that dronk is as a mouse,
 A drunken man wot well, he hath an house,
 But he n'ot which is the right wey thithir:
 And to a drunken man the wey is slidir.
 And certis in this world so farin we:
 We sekin fast aftir felicitie,
 But we gon wrong full ofte trewily;
 Thus may we sayin all, and namelich I,
 That wen'd, and had a grete opinion
 That if I might escape fro the prison,
 Then had I ben in joy, and perfite hele;
 Ther now I am exilid fro my wele,
 Sith that I may non seen you Emilie
 I n'am but dede. Ther n'is no remedie.
 Upon that othir side, whan Palamon
 Wist, that his Cosin Arcite was gon,
 Such sorow makyth he, that the grete Tour
 Refownid of his yelling and clamour,
 The fetteris, upon his Shinnis grete,
 Werin of his bittir salt teris wete.
 Alas, qd he, Arcite Cosyn mine
 Of all our strife, God wot, the frute is thine.
 Thou walkist now in Thebis atte large
 And of my wo, thou yernist litil charge!
 Thou maist, sith thou hast wisdom and manhede
 Assemble all the folk of our kinrede
 And make a war so sharp on this contré;
 That by some aventure, or some treté,
 Thou mayst have her to Lady, and to wife,
 For whom that I must nedis lese my life.
 For as by way of possibilitie
 Sith thou art at thy large, of Prison fre,

And art a Lord, grete is thine advantage
 More than is mine, that sterve here in a cage.
 For I may wepe and wayle, while that I live
 With all the wo, that Prison may me yeve,
 And eke with peyn, love yevith me also,
 That doublith all my turment, and my wo. 1300
 Therewith the fire of jelosie upsterte
 Within his brest, and hent him by the herte.
 So woodly, that he like was to behold
 The box-tree, or the ashin dede and cold;
 Then seid, O cruel Goddis! that governe
 This worlde, with binding of your word eterne,
 Y writtin in the Table of Adamant,
 Your Parlement, and you eterné grant,
 What is mankynd more unto you yhold,
 Than is the shepe, that ropkith in the fold? 1310
 For slayn is man, right as an othir beste,
 And dwellith eke in Prison, and areste,
 And hath siknesse, and grete adversite,
 And oftin timis guiltilese Pardé.
 What gouvernance is in this prescience
 That guiltilese turmentith innocence?
 And encrefith thus alle my pennaunce,
 That man is boundin to his observaunce
 For Godd's sake to lettin of his will,
 Theras a beste may all his lustes fulfill, 1320
 And when a beste is dede he hath no paine;
 But aftir his dethe man more wepe and plaine,
 Though in this world he have care and wo;
 Withouthin doute it may stondin so.
 The answer of this lete I to Divinis,
 But well I wot, that in this world grete pine is.
 Alas! I se a Serpent or a theef,
 That many a trew man hath don mischeef,
 Gon at his large, and wher him list may turn;
 But I more ben in prison through Saturne, 1330
 And eke through Juno jelous, and eke wode,
 That hath destroyid well nygh all the blode
 Of Thebis, with his waste wallis wyde,
 And Venus sleeth me on that othir syde,
 For jelosie and fere of him Arcite.
 Now woll I stint of Palamon a lite,
 And let him in his prisone stille dwell,
 And of Arcite forth I woll you tell.
 The Sommir passith, and the nightis long
 Encrefith doubil wyse the painis strong - 1340
 Both of the lovir and the prisonere,
 In'or which hath the wofuller mistere.
 For shortly for to seyn, this Palamon
 Perpetuel is damnid to prison, 1350
 In cheinis and in fetteris to the dede;
 And Arcite is exilid on his heed-c
 For evirmore as out of that Contré,
 Ne nevirmore shall he his Ladie se.
 You Lovers ask I now this question,
 Who hath the worse, Arcite or Palamon? 1360
 That one may se his lady day by day,
 But in prison more he dwellin alway;
 That othir wher him list may ride or go, 1370
 But sene his Ladie shall he nevir mo.
 Now demith as ye list ye that can,
 For I woll tall my tale, as I began.
 Whan that Arcite to Thebis comin was,
 Full oft a day he swelt, and seide alas!
 For sene his lady shall he nevir mo;
 And shortly to concludin all his wo, + this 1380
 So mochill sorow nevir had creature,
 That is or shall be while the world may dure:
 His slepe, his mete, his drink is hym byraft,
 That lene he waxith and dric as a shaft:
 His eyin holow, gryllie to behold, 1390
 His hew fallow, and pale as ashin cold:
 Solitary he was, evir alone, 1400
 And weyling all the nyght, making his mone:

And

And if he herd song or instrument,
 Than wold he wepin, he might not be stent. 1370
 So febyl were his Spirits and so low,
 And chaungid so, that no man couth him know,
 His speche, nothir his voice, tho men it herde;
 And in his gyre, for all the world, he ferde,
 Nought comly, like to Lovers maladye,
 Of Eros, but raðir like to manie
 Engendrid of humours melancholik
 Beforn in his Cervellè fantastik,
 And shortly turnid was all upside down
 Both habit/ekes and dispositioun
 Of hym, this wofull Lovir Dan Arcite.
 What shuld I all dey of his wo endite?
 When he endurid had a yere or two,
 This cruel turment, and this peine and wo,
 At Thebis, in his Contrè, as I seide,
 Upon a nyght in slepe as he him leide,
 Hym thought how that the wingid Mercury
 Beforn him stode, and bad him be mery,
 His slepe yerd in hond he bare upright y
 An hat he werid on his heris bright. 1380
 Arayid was this God, as he toke kepe,
 As he was, whan that Argus roke his slepe,
 And seide him thus; To Athens shalt thou wend;
 There is The shapin of thy wo an end.
 And with that word Arcite awoke and stert;
 Now trewly how fore that evir me smert,
 Quoð he, to Athens ryght now wold I fare,
 Ne for the drede of deth shall I nought spare,
 To se my lady, that I love and serve,
 In her presence I ne reck nought to sterve. 1400
 And wyth that word he caught a grete myrrour,
 And saw that chaungid was all his colour,
 And saw his visage all in othir kind, 1410
 And right anon it ran him in his mind,
 That sithins his face was so disfigur'd
 Of Maladie, the which he had endur'd,
 He mighte wele, if that he bare him low,
 Livin in Athens evirmore unknow,
 And sene his lady well nigh day by day,
 And right anon he chaungid his aray,
 And clad him as a povir laborer,
 And all alone, save only a Squier,
 That knew his privy and all his caas, 1420
 Which was disguisid porely, as he was,
 To Athens is he gone the nexte way,
 And to the Court he went upon a day,
 And at the gate he proffrid his servise,
 To drugge and draw what so men wold devise.
 And shortly of this mattir for to saine;
 He fell in office with a Chamberlaine,
 The which that dwellyng was with Emilie;
 For he was wise, and sonè couth espy
 The thews of every servaunt that serv'd here;
 Wele couth he hewin wood, and watir bere;
 For he was yonge and mightie for the nones,
 And thereto he was stronge and big of bones,
 To don what any wight him can devise.
 A yere or two he was in this servise,
 Page of the chambir of Em'ly the bright, 1430
 And Philostrat, he seide, that he hight;
 But half so wele belov'd a man as he
 Ne was ther none in Court of his degre:
 He was so gentil of Condicioun,
 That throughout all the Court was his renoun.
 They seide, that it were a charite
 That Theseus woude enhansin his degre,
 And put hym in a wutshipful servise,
 There as he might his vertue exercise.
 And thus within a while his name is sprong,
 Both of his dedis, and of his gode tong, 1440
 That Theseus hath takin hym so nere,
 That of his chambre he hath made him squere:

And yafe him gold to mainteine his degre,
 And eke men brought him out of his Contrè
 Fro yere to yere ful privilich his rent,
 But honestly and slyly he it spent, 1450
 That no man wonderid how he it had;
 And thre yere in this wise his lyfe he lad,
 And bare hym so in pece, and eke in werre,
 There is no man that Theseus hath se derre.
 And in this blis levin I now Arcite; 1460
 And speke I wold of Palamon a lite.
 In derkness horrible and strong prison
 This sevin yere hath sittin Palamon,
 Forepinid, what for love, and for distres:
 Who felith double fore and hevynes
 But Palamon? That Love distreinith so,
 That wode out of his wit he goth for wo.
 And eke therto he is a Prisonere,
 Perpetuel, not only for a yere. 1470
 O who couth ryme in English propirly
 His Martyrdome? forsothe it am not I.
 Therefore I pass it lightly as I may.
 It befell that in the seventh yere, in May
 The third night, as old bokis to us saine,
 (That alle this story tellith more plaine)
 Were it by aventure, or destiny,
 (As when a thing is shapin, it mot be)
 That sone aftir the midnyght Palamon,
 By helping of a frend brake his prison, 1480
 And fleeth the Cite fast as he may go,
 For he had giv'n his gailer drinkè so
 Of a Clarie, madin of certein wine,
 With Narcotise, and Opie of Thebes fine, 1490
 That all the nyght, tho that men shulde him shake,
 The Gailer slept; they might him nat awake.
 And thus he fleith as fast as he may. 1500
 The nyght was short and fast by was the day.
 That nedis' cost he mote himselvin hide,
 And tyl a Grove, that was fast there beside, 1510
 With dredful fore then stalkith Palamon.
 For shortly this was his opinion,
 That in the Grove he wulde him hyde al day,
 And in the nyght then woude he take his way,
 To Thebis-ward, his frendis for to pray;
 On Theseus to help him to warraye:
 And shortly ether he wuld lese his life,
 Or winnin Emily to ben his wife.
 This is th' effect, and his intention pleine.
 Now wold I turne to Arcite ageine, 1520
 That litil wist how nye that was his care,
 Tyl that Fortune had brought him in her snare.
 The mery lark, messengere of the day,
 Salewith in her song the morow gray, 1530
 And fire Phebus rysith up so bright,
 That all the Orient laughith at the sight,
 And with his stremis dryith in the greves
 The silvir dropis hanging in the leves.
 And Arcite, that in the Court riall
 With Theseus is Squyer Principall, 1540
 Is rise, and lookith on the mery day,
 And to don his observauncis to May,
 Remembring of the poynt of his desire,
 He on his courser, startling as the fire,
 Is riddin to the feldis him to pley,
 Out of the Court, were it a mile or twey.
 And to the Grove, of which that I you told,
 By aventure his wey he gan to hold,
 To makin him a garland of the greves,
 Were it of wodebine, or the hawthorne leves. 1550
 And lowde he song ayenst the Sonnè shene;
 May, with allè thy flouris, and thy grene,
 Welcome be thou, seide he, feire freshè May,
 I hope that I some grene thing gettin may.
 And from his Courser with a lusty herte
 Into the Grove full hastily he sterte.

And

And in a path he romid up and down,
 Ther as by aventure this Palamon,
 Was in a bush, that no man myght him se,
 For fore'afraid of his'prison was he. 1520
 Nothing ne knew he that it was Arcite,
 God wot he wold have trowid' that ful lye;
 But sothe is seide gon fithins manie yeres,
 That felde hath eyin, and the wode hath eres.
 It is ful sayre a man to bere him evin,
 For all day mete men at unset Stevin:
 Ful lityl wote Arcite of his felaw,
 That was so nye to herkin' of his law,
 For in the bush he sittith now ful still,
 Whan that Arcite had romid at his till,
 And songin all the Roundell lustily,
 Into a studie he fell sodenly,
 As don thes lovers in ther queynte gires,
 Now in the crop, and now down in the briers,
 Now up, now down, as boket in a well,
 Ryght as the Fryday, sothly for to tell,
 Now rainith it, and now it shinith fast,
 Ryght so gan gery Venus ovircast
 The hertis of her folk, right as her day
 Is gerifull, so chaungith she aray: 1530
 Selde is the Fryday al the weke ylike.
 Whan that Arcite had song, he gan to sike,
 And set him down withoutin any more;
 Alas, qd he, the day that I was bore!
 How longe, Juno, through thy cruelte
 Wilt'ow weryin Thebis the Cite? 1540
 Alas! ybrought is to Confusion
 The blode riall of Cadme' and Amphion;
 Of Cadmus, [I seye] which was the first man, 1550
 That Thebis built, or first the toun began,
 And of that Cite first was crownid King;
 Of his lynage am I, and his ofspring,
 By very line, as of the stock riall:
 But now I am so catife, and so thrall,
 That he that is my mortal enemie,
 I serve him as his Squyir povirle.
 And yet doth Juno me well more shame,
 For I dare not be know'by my own name:
 But theras I was wont to hight Arcite,
 Now' hight I Philostrat, not worth a mite. 1560
 Alas thow fill Mars! alas thou Juno!
 Thus hath your ire our Lynage all fordoz,
 Saaf only me, and wretchid Palamon,
 That Thescus martyrith in prison.
 And ovir all, to slean me uttirly,
 Love hath his fry dert so brenningly
 Stikid thorough my trewe and carefull herte,
 That shapid was my deth crst than my shert.
 Ye slean me with your eyin, Emily,
 Ye ben the cause wherfore that I dye: 1570
 Of all the remnaunt of myn othir care
 Ne sett I not the mountaunce of a tare,
 So that I couth do ought to your plesauce.
 And with that word he fell down in a traunce,
 A long tyme, and astirward' he upstert.
 This Palamon, that thought that through his herte
 He felt a colde Swerde sodeinly to glide,
 For ire he quoke, no longer wold he bide;
 And whan that he had herde Arcit's tale,
 As he were wode, wyth face all dede and pale, 1580
 He sterre him up out of the bushis thik,
 And seide, Arcite, thow false trayter wik,
 Now art'ow hent, that lov'st my lady so,
 For whom that I have al this peyn and wo,
 And art my blode, and to my counsell sworne,
 As I ful oft have tolde The heretoforne:
 And has bejapid here Duke Thescus,
 And falsly chaungid hast thy name thus: 1590
 I wold be dedde, or ellis thow shalt die,
 Thou shalt not love my Ladie Emelie,

But I wold love hir only and no mo,
 For I am Palamon thy mortal fo.
 Though that I ho'wepin have in this place,
 But out of prison am astert by grace,
 I dredde nought that either thow shalt dye,
 Or thow ne shalt not lovin Emelie.
 Ches whiche thou wilt, for thow shalt not astert.
 This Arcite, with full dispitens bert,
 Whan he him knew, and had his tale yherde,
 As fiers as Lyon drew he out his swerde, 1600
 And seide, by God that sittith above,
 Ne wer' that thou art sike and wode for love,
 And eke thow no wepin hast in this place,
 Thou shuldist never out of this grove pace, 1610
 That thow ne shuldist dyin of myn hond.
 For I desie the suretie and the bond,
 Which that thow saist that I have made to The;
 What veray sole! think wele that love is fre:
 But I wold love her, maugre all thy might;
 For as moch as thow art a worthy Knight, 1620
 And willst to dareyn here by bataile,
 Have here my trowth, to morow I nill faile,
 Without witting of any othir wight,
 That here I wold be foundin as a Knight;
 And bringin harneis right ynow for The,
 And ches the best, and leve the worst for me;
 And mete and drinke this nyght wold I bring,
 Ynough for The, and clothes for thy bedding;
 And if so be that thow my Lady winn,
 And sle me in this wode, there I am in, 1630
 Thou maist have thy lady as for me. 1640
 This Palamon answerde, I graunt it The;
 And thus they ben departid tyl a morow,
 Whan eche of them had leide his feith to borow.
 O Cupido out of all charite!
 O Reign that wuld'st have no felaw with The!
 Full sothe is seide, that Love ne Lordshup
 Will not his thankes have any felawshup;
 We find that of Arcite and Palamon:
 Arcite is ridd anon into the towne: 1650
 And on the morow er it were day light,
 Full privily two harneis had he dight,
 Both sufficient and mete to dareigne
 The bataile in the felde betwixt them tweine:
 And on his hors alone as he was borne,
 He carieth all his harneis him beforne;
 And in the Grove, at tyme and place yset,
 That Arcite, and this Palamon ben met: 1660
 To chaungin gan the colour of their face,
 Right as the hunter in the reign of Thrace,
 That stondith at a gappe with a spere,
 When huntid is a lion or a bere,
 And herith hym come rushing in the greves,
 And brekith both the bowis and the leves:
 I think here comth my mortal enemie,
 Withoutin faile he mote be dede or I,
 For either I mote slez hym at the gappe,
 Or he mote slez me, if that me misshappe. 1670
 So ferdin they in chaunging of their hew,
 As fer as everich of them othir knew:
 Ther n'as no gode day, ne no sawewing,
 But streight withoutin word or rehering,
 Ev'rich of them helpid to arme othir,
 As frendly as he wer his owne bro'ir:
 And astir that with sharpe speris strong
 They soinin at eche othir wondir long:
 Thow mightist wenin that this Palamon
 In his fighting werin a Wode Lyon,
 And as a cruel tigre was Arcite.
 As wild boris gan they to fight and smike,
 That frothin white as some for ire wode;
 Up to the ancle foughte they in ther blode.
 And in this wise I lere them fighting dwell,
 And forth I wold of Thescus you tell

The destiny, Mynyſter general,
That executith in the world o're al
The purveiaunce, that God hath ſeide before,
So ſtrong it is, that tho the world had ſwore
The contrary thing by ye or by nay,
Yet ſometime it ſhall fallin on a day,
That nevir fill yet in a thouſand yere.
For certainly our appetitis here
(Be it of werre or pece, or hate or love)
Are rulid alle by the ſight above.
This mene I now by mighty Theſeus,
That for to huntin is ſo deſirous;
And namily at the grete hert in May,
That in his bedde ther dawith him no day,
That he n'is clad and redy for to ride
With hunt and horn and houndis him beſide.
For in his hunting hath he ſuch delite,
That it is al his joy and appetite,
To ben himſelf the grete hart's bane:
For aſtir Mars he ſervith now Diane.
Clere was the day, as I have told er this,
And Theſeus with alle joye and blis,
With his Hypolita, the fayir Quene,
And Emelie, yclothid al in grene,
On hunting ben they riddin roiallie;
Unto the grove that ſtode ther full faſt by:
In whych ther was a Hart, as men him told.
Duke Theſeus the ſtreight way hath hold,
And to the Laund he ridith him full right:
For thithir was the Hart, wont to have his ſlight;
And ou'r a broke, and ſo forth on his wey;
This Duke woll have a courſe at him or twey,
With houndis ſuch, as him left to commaund;
And when this Duke was come into the Laund,
Undir the ſonne he lokid, and anon
He was ware of Arcite and Palamon,
That foughtin breme, as it werē bullis two,
The brighte ſwerdis went faſt to and fro
So hideouſly, that with the leſte ſtroke
It ſemith that it wouldē fell an Oke.
But what they werin, norhing he ne wote;
This Duke his courſer with his ſporis ſmore,
And aſſert he was betwixt them two,
And pullid out his ſwerde, and cryid, Ho,
No more on peine of leſing of your hede;
By mighty Mars he ſhall anon be dede,
That ſmitith any ſtroke, that I may ſene;
But tellith me what miſter men ye ben,
That ben ſo hardie for to fightin here,
Withoutin judge or othir officere,
As though it were in liſtis roially.
[This Palamon anſwerid haſtily,
And ſeide, Sir, what nedith wordis mo?
We have the dethe deſervid bothē two:
Two woful wretchis ben we and Catives,
That ben encombrid of our ownē lives;
And as thou art a rightful Lord and judge,
Ne geve us neither mercie nor refuge;
But ſlea me firſt, for Seinte Charite,
But ſlea my felaw eke as well as me:
Or ſlea him firſt, for though thou know it lite,
This is thy mortal fo, this is Arcite,
That fro thy land is baniſh'd on his hede,
For which he hath deſervid to be dede,
For this is he, that came unto thy gate,
And ſeide, that he hightē Philoſtrate;
Thus hath he japid the full many a yere;
And thow haſt makid hym thy cheſe Squire:
And this is he that lovith Emely.
— For ſith the dey is come that I ſhall dye,
I make plainly my Confession,
That I am thilkē woful Palamon,
That hath thy priſon brokin wikidly,
I am thy mortal fo, and it am I]

That ſo hote lovith Emely the bright,
That I woll dye here preſent in her ſight;
Wherefore I aſke dethe, and my jewiſe,
But ſlea my felaw eke in the ſame wiſe:
For both we have deſervid to be ſlaine.

1670 This worthy Duke anſwer'd anon againe,
And ſeid, this is a ſhort Concluſion,
Your own mouth by your own confeſſion
Hath damnid you, and I woll it record;
It nedith not to pine you with a cord,
Ye ſhall be dede by mighty Mars the rede.

The Quene anon for very womanhedde
Gan for to wepe, and ſo did Emelie;
And all the Ladys in the Companie.

1680 Grete pitē was it, as it thought them al,
That evyr ſoce a chance ſhuld beſal.
For gentilemen they wer of grete eſtate,
And nothing but for love was this debate,
And ſaugh their bloody woundis wide and ſore,
And all crydiſ at once both leſs and more,
Have mercy, Lord, upon us wymin al,
And on their bare knees adoun they fall,
And wold have kiſt his fete there as he ſtode,
Tyl at the laſt aſlakid was his mode:

For pitē rennith ſone in gentil hert;
And though at firſt for ire he quoke and ſtert,
He hath concludid ſhortly in a Clauſe
The trespas of them both, and eke the Cauſe;
And although that his ire their gilt accuſed,
Yet in his reſon he them both excuſed.

As thus: he thoughtē well that every man
Woll help himſelf in love all that he can;
And eke delivir him out of priſon;
And in his herte he had compaſſion

Of wymin, for they wepē evir in oon;
And in his gentill hert he thought anone,
And ſoft unto himſelf he ſeid, fie, fie
Upon a Lord, that woll have no mercie;
But be a Lyon both in word and dede,
To them that ben in repentaunce and drede,

As well as to a proud diſpitous man,
That woll maintainin that he firſt began.

1700 That Lord hath lityl of diſcretion,
That in ſoche caas can no diſtinction,
But weighith pryde and humbles aſtir one;
And ſhortly, when his ire was thus agone,
He gan to lokin up with cyin light,
And ſpake in place theſe wordis all on hight.

The God of Love, ah benedite,
How mighty, and how gret a Lord is he!
Againe his might there gainith nō obſtacles,
He may be cleped a God for his Miracles:
For he can makin at his ownē giſe
Of every hert as that him liſt deviſe.

Lo here this Arcite, and this Palamon,
That quietly were fro my priſon gon,
And might have liv'd in Thebis rially,
And wete I am their mortal enemy,
And that their dethe is in my might alſo,
And yet hath love, maugre ther cyin two,
Y brought them hither bothē for to die;

Now lokith, is not this a grete folie?
Who may be a ſole, but iſt that he love!
Behold! for God's love that ſittith above;
Se how they blede! be they not well araid?

1730 Thus hath ther Lord, the God of Love, them pay'd,
Ther wagis and ther fees, for ther ſerviſe:
And yet they wepin for to ben full wiſe,
That ſervith Love, for ought that may beſal.
But yet this is the beſtē game of al,
That ſhe, for whom they have this joliteſe,
Con them therefore as mochill thank as me.
She wote no more of allē this hote fare,
By God, than wor a Cuckow, or an Hare;

But

But al mot ben aſſayid, hot and cold,
 A man more ben a folc, or yonge or old,
 I wote it by my ſelf ful yore agone :
 For in my tyme a Seruaunt I was one ;
 And therfore ſith I know of lov'is peine,
 I wote how fore it can a man diſtreine,
 As he that oft hath ben caught in his laas,
 I you forgeve all wholly this trespas,
 At request of the Queene, that knelith here,
 And eke of Emely, my Suſtir dere.
 And ye ſhall both anon unto me ſwere,
 That ye ſhall nevir more my Contrè dere,
 Ne makin werre upon me night ne day,
 But ben my frendis in all that ye may :
 I yow forgeve this trespas every dele.
 And they hym ſwore his asking faire and wele,
 And hym of Lordſhip and of mercy prayde ;
 And he them grauntid grace ; and thus he ſayde ; 1830
 To ſpeke of rial lynage and rycheſe,
 Though that ſhe wer a queene, or a princeſe,
 Eche of you both is worthie douteleſs,
 To weddin whan tyme is ; but natheleſs,
 I ſpeke as for my Suſtir Emelic,
 For whome ye have this ſtryfe and jelouſie,
 Ye wote your ſelf, ſhe may not weddin tway
 At onys, though ye fightin evirmo ;
 But one of you, al be hym lothe or leſe,
 He muſt go pipin in an ivie leſe.
 This is to ſay, ſhe may not now have both,
 Ben ye nevir ſo jelouſe, ne ſo wroth.
 And therfore I you put in this degre,
 That eche of you ſhall have his deſtine,
 As hym is ſhape ; and herkin in what wiſe ;
 Lo here your end of that I ſhall deviſe.
 My wyll is this, for flat concluſion,
 Withoutin any replication,
 If that you likith, take it for the beſt ;
 That everich of you ſhall go wher him leſt,
 Frely withoutin ranſowme or daungere ;
 And this day fifty wekis, fer ne nere,
 Everich of you ſhall bring a hundrid Knights,
 Ar'md for the liſtis upon alle rights,
 Al redy to darrein here by bataile :
 And this behote I you withoutin faile.
 Upon my trouth, and as I am a Knyght,
 That whethir of you both hath that myght,
 That is to ſey, that whethir he or thow
 May with his hundrid, as I ſpake of now,
 Sleaz his contrary or out of lyſtis dryve,
 Him ſhall I geve Emelia to wyve,
 To whom fortune gevith ſo fayre a grace.
 The liſtis ſhall I do make in this place.
 And God ſo wiſly on my ſoule rew,
 As I ſhall evin judge ben and trew.
 Ye ſhall noon othir ende wyth me make,
 That one of you ſhall be dedde or take.
 And yf ye thinkin this is well yſeide,
 Seye your aſiſe, and hold you well apeide :
 This is your end, and your concluſion.
 [Who lokith lightly now but Palamon ?
 Who ſpringith up for joye but Arcite ?
 Who coude tell, or who coude rightly endite
 The joye that is y makid in that place,
 Whan Theſeus had don ſo fayre a grace !
 But down on knees went every manner wyght,
 And thankid him wyth all ther hert and myght,
 And namly theſe Thebans many a ſith.
 And thus with hopis gode, and hertis blith 1880
 They take ther leve, and homward gan they ride
 To Thebis ward, with(his)olde wallis wide.
 I trow men wouldin deme it negligence,
 If I forgett to tellin the diſpence
 Of Theſeus, that goth ſo beſily
 To makin up the liſtis rially :

That ſoche a noble Theatre' as this was ;
 I dare well ſay in all this world ther n'as.
 The circuite wherof was a myle about,
 Wallid with ſtone, and dichid all about. 1890
 Round was the ſhape in manne' of a compas,
 Full of degrees, the height of ſixty paas.
 That whan a man was ſet on oo degre,
 He lettid not his felaw for to ſe.
 Eſtward there ſtode a gate of marble white,
 Weſtward right ſoch anothir oppoſite ;
 And ſhortly to concludin, ſoch a place
 Was non in yerth, as in ſo lityl ſpace.
 For in the Lond ther was no craftis-man
 That Geometry' or Arithmetik can, 1900
 Ne portraitour, ne kervir of imagis,
 That Theſeus ne gaf him mete and wagis,
 That Theater to make and to deviſe ;
 And for to don his rite and ſacrifiſe,
 He Eſtward hath, upon the gate above,
 In worſhip of Venus, Goddeſs of Love,
 Don make an Auter and an Oratory ;
 And on the weſtward ſide, in memory
 Of Mars, he makid hath right ſoch anothir,
 That coſte largely did of gold a tothir.
 And Northward, in a turrit on the wall,
 Of alabaſter white, and red corall,
 An Oratory riche was for to ſe,
 In worſhip of Diane of chaſtite,
 Hath Theſeus don wrought in a nobill wile.
 But yet had I forgettin to deviſe
 The nobil carvings, and the purtreitures,
 The ſhape, the countenance, and the figures,
 That werin in the Oratorys thre. 1910
 Firſt then, in Venus temple thou mayſt ſe,
 Wrought on the wall full pitous to behold,
 The brokin ſlepis, and the ſighis cold,
 The teris fault, and the ſad weymenſing,
 The fry ſtrokis of the deſiring,
 That Lov'is ſervaunts in this life endure,
 The Othis, that ther Covenantes aſſure,
 Pleaunce, and hope, deſire, ſolehardineſs,
 Beauty, and youth, baudrie, and eke ryches,
 Charmis, and force, leſinges, and flatterie,
 Diſpenſe, and beſineſs, and jelouſie,
 That wer'd of yelow goldis a garland,
 And had a Cuckow ſitting on her hand ;
 Feſtes, Inſtrumentis, Carollis, and dauncis,
 Juſtis, array, and all the Circumſtauncis
 Of Love, which I reknid, and rekin ſhall,
 By order, werin paintid on the wall ;
 And mo than I can make of mentioun,
 For ſothly all the Mount of Citheron,
 Wher Venus hath hir principal dwelling,
 Was ſhewid on the wall in purtreying, 1940
 Wyth all the joye, and all the luſtineſs,
 Nought was forgett the Portreſs Idleneſs ;
 Ne Narcisſus the fayr, of yore agon,
 Ne yet the ſolye of King Solomon,
 Ne yet the grette ſtrength of Hercules,
 Th' enchauntments of Medea and Circes,
 Ne of Turnus with his hardie Corage,
 The rych Creſus full catife in ſervage. 1950
 Thus may ye ſene, that wiſdom ne ryches,
 Beutie, ne ſight, ne ſtrength, ne hardineſs,
 Ne may with Venus holdin champartie,
 For as her liſt the world then ſhe may gye.
 Lo all theſe folk ſo caught wer in her laas,
 Tyl they for wo full oftin ſeyde alas !
 Suffiſith here one example or two,
 Although I couth rekin a thouſand mo.
 And Venus Statue glorious to ſe
 Was makid ſetyng in the large Seg,
 And fro the Navill down all coverid was,
 With wavis grene, and bright as any glas. 1960
 A Ciriolo

A Citriole in her ryght hand had she,
 And on her hede, full semely for to se,
 A rosey garlund, fresh and well smelling,
 Above hir hede her Dovyis flittering: -ck
 Beforne her stou'd her sonne Cupido, o
 Upon his shuldris wingis had he two,
 And blynd he was, as it is oftyn sene,
 A bow he bare, and arowes bright and kene.
 [Why shuld I not as well you tellin all
 The Purtreiture, that was upon the wall
 Within the temple of great Mars the redde?
 All paintid was the wall in length and brede,
 Like to the Estris of the grisly place,
 That hight the grete Temple of Mars in Thrace,
 In thilke cold and frosty region,
 Ther as Mars hath his Sovrain Mansion.
 First on the wall was paintid a forrest,
 In which there wonneth nowther Man ne best,
 Wyth knotty-knarry-barrein treys old,
 Of stubbis sharpe and hideous to behold,
 In which there was a rombyll and a swough,
 As though a storm shulde brestin every bough;
 And downward from an hill undir a bent
 There stode the temple of Mars armipotent,
 Wrought all of burnyd stele, of which th' entre
 Was long, and streight, and ghastly for to se:
 And therout came such a rage and wyse,
 That it made all the gatys for to ryle.
 The Northern light in at the doris shone,
 For window on the wall ne was there none,
 Through which men mightin any light discern. re
 The dore was al of Adamant eterne, 5
 Yclenchid overthwart and endelong
 With iron tough, for to makist it strong.
 Every piller the tempyl to sustene
 Was tonnè grete of yren bright and shene.
 Ther saw I first the derk ymagining
 Of Felony, and all the Compassing;
 The cruell ire, redde as any glede,
 The pikurse also, and eke the pale drede,
 The smiler wyth the knyfe undir the cloke,
 The shepin brenning with the blakè smoke,
 The treson of the murd'ring in the bedde,
 The opyn werre with woundis all bebledde.
 Conteke with blodie knyves and sharp menace,
 All full of chirking was that sory place.
 The fear of himself, yet saw I there, e
 His herte blode hath bathid all his here.
 The naile ydrivin in the shode anyght,
 With the cold deth, with mouth gaping upright, 2010
 Amiddis of the temple sat mischaunce,
 With discomfort and sory countenance:
 Yet saw I wodeness laughing in his rage,
 Armid compleint on theft and fers corage,
 The Carrein in the bush, with throtycorve,
 A thousand sleine, and not of qualme ystolve:
 The tyrant with the prey by force yraft,
 The town destroyid, ther was nothyng laft.
 Yet saw I brent the Ships hoppolsteris,
 The hunter straunglid with the wild boris, 2020
 The Sow fretting the chyld right in the cradel,
 The Coke scaldid for all his longè ladel.
 Nought was forgett, the infortune of Mart,
 The Cartir ovirridin by his Cart,
 Undir the whele full low he lay adoun;
 Ther wer also of Mart's divisoun,
 The Barbour, and the Butchir, and the Smith
 That forgith sharpe swardis on the stich:
 And all above depeintid in a towr, a
 Saw I conquest sitting in gret honour,
 With the sharpe swardè right ovir his hede,
 Hanging but by a subtil twynid thred:
 Depeintid was the slaughter of Julius, re
 Of cruel Nero, and Antonius,

Albe that thilkè tyme they wer unborn,
 Yet was their dethe depeintid ther befor,
 By manacing of Mars, right by figure,
 So was it shewid in the purtreiture,
 As is depeintid in the Sterres above,
 Who shall be dede or ellis sleine for love. 2040
 Suffisith one ensample in storys old,
 I may not rekin them although I wold. all the
 The Statue of Mars upon a Cart stode 1979
 Armid, and lokid grym as he were wode:
 And o're his hede ther shinin two figures, d
 Of Sterris that ben clepid in Scriptures,
 That one (Puella) rothir (Rubeus)
 This God of Armis was arayid thus.
 A woof ther stode before him at his fete, /
 With eyin red, and of a man he etc. 2050
 With sotill pensill peintid was this story
 In'redouting Mars, and of his glorie. + recording of a of
 Now to the temple of Diane the chaff,
 As shortly as I can I wold me haft,
 To tellin you all the description; u
 Depeintid were the wallis up and down u
 Of hunting, and of shamefast Chastite;
 There saw I how wofull Calisto, (pite!)
 Whan that Diana grevid was with her, 12- en 9-
 Was tarnid fro a woman to a bcre; 2060 u.
 And aftirward was she made the Lodesterre,
 Thus was it peintid, I can sey no ferre;
 Her son is eke a sterre, as men may se.
 There saw I Daphne turnid to a tre, + Diane
 I menè not the Goddes Diane,
 But Peneus doughtir, which that hight Daphne.
 There saw I Actzon a hert y makid,
 For vengeance that he saw Diane all nakid:
 I saw how that his houndis have him caught,
 And fretin him, for that they knew him nought 2070 a
 Yet peintid was a lityl furthir more,
 How Atalanta huntid the wyld bore,
 With Meleager, and many othir mo,
 For which Diana wrought them care and wo. + hyper. sign
 There saw I many othir wondir story,
 Which me list not to draw in memory. into 1 an
 This Goddes on an hert full wele she sette,
 With smale houndis all about her fete,
 And undirnethe her fete she had a Mone,
 Wexing it was, and yet shuld weine Sone. 2080 many. f
 In gaudy grene hir Statue clothid was,
 With bow in hand, and arowes in a Caas.
 Her eyin ay she kest full low adoun,
 There Pluto hath his derkè Region.
 A womman travelling was her befor;
 For that her childè was so long unborn,
 Full pitously Lucina gan she cal,
 And seide, help, for thou mayst best of al.
 Well couth he puttray lively, that it wrought,
 With many a forein he the hewis bought. 2090
 Now ben these Listis made, and Thesèus,
 That at his grete cost arayid thus,
 The Temples and Theater every dele,
 Whan twas done, [it] him likid wondir wele. 1 it was
 But stint I wold of Thesèus alite,
 And speke of Palamon, and of Arcite.
 The day approachith of ther returning,
 That everich shuld an hundrid Knightis bring,
 The bataile to darrein as I you told:
 And to Athenes, ther Covenantes to hold, 2100 + tell
 Hath everich of them brought an hundrid Knightes,
 Well armid for the werre at allè rightes,
 And sikirly there trowid many a man,
 That nevir sithins that the world began,
 As for to speke of Knyghthode of ther hond,
 As ferre as God hath makid se or lond,
 N'as of so few, so noble a Company:
 For every wight, that lovid chivalry,

And

And to his thanks wolde have a passing name,
 Hath prayid that he might be of that game, 2110
 And wel was hym that therto chosin was.
 For if there fell to morow suche a caas,
 Ye knowin wele that every lusty Knyght,
 That lovith Paramours, and hath his myght, 2120
 Were it in Englonde, or were it else where;
 They woldin faine all willin to be there.
 To fight for Lady! ah benedicite!
 It were a lusty fight for men to se!
 [And ryght so fardin they with Palamon. 2120
 With him ther wentin Knyghtis many one:
 Some wolde ben armid in an haburgeon,
 And in a brestplate with a light gippon,
 And some wolde have a payre of platis large,
 And some wou'de have a Puce shield, some a targe;
 Some wolde be armid on his leggis wele,
 And have an axe; and some a mace of Stele;
 There'n'as none new gife, that it ne was old;
 Armid they werin, as I have you told,
 Everich after his Opinion.
 There maystow see comynge with Palamon 2130
 Lycurgus himself, the grete King of Thrace;
 Blak was his berde, and manly was his face:
 The circles of the cyin in his hede
 They glowdin betwixte yelow and rede:
 And like a Lyon lokid he about,
 With kempid heiris on his browis stout:
 His limis grete, his brawn is herd and strong,
 His Shulderes brode, his armis round and long.
 And as the guise ywas in his Contré,
 Full high upon a char of gold stode he, 2140
 With four grete white bullis in the tracys;
 Insteede of Cote Armure on his harnais,
 With yelow nayles, and bright as any gold;
 He hath a heri's skinn, coleblak for old.
 His longe here was kemped behind his bak,
 As any raveni's fethre't shone for blak.
 A wrethe of gold armgrete, of hugge weight,
 Upon his hede set ful of stonis bright,
 Of fine rubys, and clere diamondes. 2150
 About his Char ther wentin white alandes
 Twentie and mo, as grete as any stere,
 To huntin at the Lyon, or wild Bere,
 And folowed him with Mossil fast ybound,
 Colleres of gold and torreses filid round.
 An hundrid Lordis had he in his rout,
 Armid full wele, with herris stern and stout.
 With Arcite, (in Storys as men find) 2160
 The grete Emetrius, the King of Inde,
 Upon a Stede bay, trappid in Stele,
 Coverid with cloth of gold diaprid wele,
 Came riding like the God of armis Mars,
 His Cote Armure was of the Cloth of Tars 2170
 Couchid with perlis white, and round, and grete;
 His Saddil was of brent gold new ybete,
 A Mantlet upon his Shulderes hanging,
 Bretfull of Rubys redde as fire sparkling.
 His crisse heir like ringis was yronne,
 And it was yelow, glitt'ring as the Sonne. 2180
 His nose was high, his eyin bright citryn,
 Ruddy his lippes, his colour was sanguyn,
 And a few freklis in his face yspreint
 Betwixt yelow, and somedele blak ymeint.
 And as a Lyon he his eyin kest.
 Of five and twenty yere his age I ghest.
 His berde was well begonnin for to spring,
 His throte was as a trompet thondiring.
 Upon his hede he wered of laurer grene
 A garlond freshe, and lustie for to sene.
 Upon his hond he bare for his delite
 An Egle tame, as ony lilie white.
 And hundrid Lordis had he with him there,
 All armid, saaf their hedis, in their grete,

Full rychely in alle manner thinges,
 For trustith wele, that Erlis, Dukes; and Kinges,
 Were gadrid in this nobil company
 For Love, and for encrese of Chivalry.
 About this King ther ran on every part
 Full many a tame Lyon and Libart. 2190
 And in this wyse these Lordis al and some Ben on the Sunday to the Citie come
 Aboutin Prime, and in the Town alight.
 This Theseus, this Duke, this worthy Knyght,
 Whan he had brought them into his Cite,
 And innid them, echc aftir his degre,
 He festith them, and doth so grete labour
 To esin them and don them all honour,
 That yet men wenin that no mann's wit
 Of none estat ne couth amendin it.
 The minstralcie, the service at the feste,
 The grete gestes also to the most and leste, 2200
 The ryche aray of Theseus Palleis,
 Ne who sat first or last upon the Deis,
 What Ladys fayrist ben or best daunling,
 Or whiche of them can best dancin or sing,
 Ne who most felingly spekith of Love,
 Ne what haukes sittin on perchis above,
 Ne what houndes liggin on the floort adoun,
 Of all this now make I no mentioun;
 But of the effect that thinkith me the best,
 Now comith the point, herk'nith, if you lest. 2210
 The Sonday nyght, er day began to spring,
 Whan Palamon the Lark herde sing,
 Although it were not day by houris two,
 Yet song the Lark, and Palamon right tho
 Wyth holy hert, and with an high corage
 He rose, to wendin on his Pilgrimage,
 Unto the blisfull Cithera benigne,
 (I mene Venus, honourable and digne)
 And in her hour he walkith foorth apas
 Unto the listis ther her temple was; 2220
 And down he knelith and wyth humble chere,
 And herte full sore, he seide as ye shull here.
 Fairist of faire, o Ladie mine Venus,
 Doughtir of Jove, and Spouse to Vulcanus,
 Thou gladir of the Mount of Citheron,
 For thilke Love thou haddist to Adon,
 Have pite of my bittir teris smert,
 And take my humble prayir at thine hert.
 Alas! I ne have no langage to tell
 The effect, ne the turment of mine hell; 2230
 Mine herte may mine harmis not bewray,
 I am so confusid that I cannot saye,
 But mercie, Ladie bryght, that worist wele
 My thought, and seest what harmis that I fele.
 Considir this, and rue upon my sore,
 As wisly as I shall for evitnore,
 Enforce my myght, thy true Servaunt to be,
 And holdin werre alwey with chastite.
 That make I mine avow, so ye me help.
 I kepè not of armis for to yelp, 2240
 I ne ask not to morow victory,
 Ne renoun in this caas, ne vaine glory,
 Of prife of Armis blowin up and down:
 But I wolde have fully possesioun
 Of Emily, and dye in her Servise,
 Fynd thou the mannir how and in what wise.
 I reke not, but it may betir be
 To have victory of them or they of me,
 So that I have my lemman in mine armes.
 For tho so be that Mars is God of Armes, 2250
 Your vertue is so grete in heaven above,
 That if the list I shall wele have my Love.
 Thy temple shall I worship evir mo,
 And on thine autler, where I ryde or go,
 I wold don sacrific, and firs bete;
 And yf ye wold nat so my Lady swete,
 Then

Then pray I you to morow with a spere
 That Arcite do me through the herte bere: a
 Then reke I not, whan I have lost my life,
 Though Arcite winnir her to his wife. a
 This is th' effect, and ende of my prayere;
 Yef me my Lady, blisfull lady dere.
 Whan th' Orison was done of Palamon,
 His Sacrifice he did, and that anon
 Full pitously with alle circumstaunces,
 Al telle I nat as now his observaunces.
 But atte last the Statu' of Venus shoke,
 And made a signe, whereby that he toke
 That his prayere acceptid was that day.
 For though the signe shewid a delay,
 Yet will he wole that grauntid was his bone,
 And with glad hert he went away ful sone.
 The third hour in equal that Palamon
 Began to Venus tempyl for to gon,
 Uprose the Sunne, and uprose Emelye, i
 And to the temple of Diane gan he
 Her Maidins, that she thithir with her ladde,
 Full redily with them the fire they hadde,
 The incense, clothis, and the remnant al,
 That to the Sacrifice belongin shal:
 The hornys full of Meith, as was the gyse,
 There lakkid nought to don ther Sacrifice
 Smoking the tempyl, full of clothis faire;
 This Emely with herte debonaire
 Her body wishe with watir of a well;
 But how she did her rite I dare not tell,
 But if it be ony thing in general,
 And yet it were a game to here it al,
 To him that menith well it were no charge,
 But it is gode a man be at his large.
 Her bright here was kempt and untrefid all,
 A Corown, of a grene oke certiall,
 Upon her hede was set full faire and mete:
 Two firs on the autler gan she bete,
 And did her thingis, as men may behold
 In State of Thebis, and these bokis old.
 When kindlid was the fire, with pitous chere "
 Unto Dian she spake, as ye may here.
 O chaffe Goddes of the wadis grene,
 To whome both heven, and erth, and se is sene, 2300
 Quene of the regne of Pluto derk and low,
 Goddes of Maidins, that mine hert hast know
 Full many a yere, and wolt what I desire,
 Ay kepe me from the vengeance of Thine ire;
 That I toun aboutin cruilly;
 Chaffe Goddes, well wotist Thou that I
 Desire to ben a Maidin all my life,
 Ne never wolt I be ne Love, ne Wife: a
 I am thou wolt well of thy company
 A Maid, and love hunting and Vencry, 2310
 And for to walkin in the wadis wild,
 And not to be a wife, and be with child,
 Nought wolt I know the company of Man. a
 Now help me, Lady, fith Ye may and can,
 For tho thre formis that Thow hast in The;
 And Palamon, that hath soche love to me,
 And eke Arcite, that lovith me so fore,
 This grace I prayir The withoutin more,
 As to send love and pece betwixt them two,
 And fro me turn away their hertis so, 2320
 That all their hot love, and all their desire,
 And all their busy turment, and their fire
 Be queint, or turnid to an othir place.
 And if to be thou wolt do me no grace, i not
 Or if my destiny be shapin so,
 That I shall nedis have one of them two,
 As send me him, that most desirith me;
 Behold, o Goddes of clene chastite,
 The bittir teres, that on my chekis fall,
 Syn thou art Mayde, and kepir of us all, 2330

My Maydinhode thou kepe, and well conserve,
 And while I live a Maide I wolt The serve.
 The firs bren upon the Autler clere,
 While Emelie was thus in her prayere:
 But sodenly she saw a thinge queint, i right
 For right anon on of the firs queint,
 And quikid ageyn, after that anon, i 94
 That othir fire was queynt, and all ygone; a
 And as it queint it made a whisteling,
 As don the wet brondis in their brenning, 2340
 And at the brondis end out ran anon
 As it were bloody dropis many one.
 For which so fore aghast was Emely,
 That she was well nie mad, and gan to crie:
 For she ne wist what it signified,
 But only for the fere thus hath she cryed, + fire
 And wept, that it was pitè for to here. - out
 And therewithal Diana gan to appere
 With bow in hond, right as an hunters,
 And seide, Daughter, stint thine heviness, 2350
 Among the Goddis hie it is affirmed, a
 And by eterne word written and confimed, c
 Thou shalt ben weddid unto one of two,
 That have for The so muchil care and wo: 2360
 But unto whiche of them I may not tell,
 Farewell, for I ne may no longir dwell:
 The firs, which that on mine Autler bren,
 Shall The declarin, er that thou go hen, a to a
 Thine aventure of Love, as in this caas.
 And with that word the arrowes in the Case 2360
 Of the Goddes clatterin fast and ring,
 And forth she went, and made a vanishing,
 For which this Emely astonied was,
 And seide, what amountith this, alas! i amount
 I put me undir thy protection,
 Diane, and in thy disposition.
 And home she goth anon the nexte wey;
 This is th' effect, there n'is no more to sey.
 The nexte hour of Mars folowing this,
 Arcite unto the temple walkid is 2370
 Of fiersè Mars, to don his Sacrifice,
 With all the rytis of his paynim wife;
 With pitous hert and hie devotion,
 Right thus to Mars he seide his Orison.
 O stronge God, that in the reignis cold
 Of Thrace honourid art, and God yhold, i Lord
 And hast in every reign, and every lond
 Of armis all the bridil in thine hond,
 And them fortunist, as The lest devise,
 Accept of me my pitous Sacrifice, 2380
 If it so be that my thought may deserve,
 And that my might be worthy for to serve
 Thy Godhede, that I may be oon of thine,
 Then pray I The to rue upon my pine,
 For thilk fore paine, and for thilk hottè fire,
 In which Thou brentist whilome for desire,
 Whan that thou usidist the fayre bewte
 Of fayre, yonge, freshe Venus for to se,
 And haddist her in thine armis at will, i thy Although thou onys at a time misill, 2390 i on Whan Vulcanus had caught The in his laas,
 And found The ligging by his wife, alas!
 For thilkè sorow, that was in thine hert,
 Have ruthe as well upon my painis smert. 2400
 I am yonge, and unkonning, as thou wolt,
 And as I trow with Love offendid most
 That evir was any livis cature. a 12
 For she, that doth me all this wo endure,
 Ne rekith never wher I smke or fere;
 And well I wote, er she me mercy hete, a 2400
 I mote with strength winnin her in this place: c
 And well I wote withoutin help or grace
 Of The, ne may my strength not availe; a f. may i nought
 Then help me Lord to morow in bataille, 2410
 For

For thilkè fire, that whilome brennid The,
 As well as thilkè fire, now brennid me;
 And do, that I may have the victory,
 Mine be the travill, Thine be the glory. 9
 Thy Sovereign Temple wolle I most honour
 Of any place, and alwey most labour
 In thy plesance, and in thy craftis strong,
 And in thy temple wolle my banner hong,
 And all the Armis of my Company,
 And evirmore untill the day I dy
 Eternè fire I wolle before The find,
 And eke to this avow I wolle me bind,
 My-berde, my heire that hongit low adoun,
 That never yet ne felt offensoun
 Of raour ne of shere, I wolle The geve,
 And bin thy trew servaunt while that I live. 2420
 Now, Lord, have ruth upon my sorowes sore,
 Geve me the victory, I ask no more.
 The prayere stint of Arcite the strong,
 The ringis on the temple dore they rong,
 And eke the doris clatterdin full fast,
 Of which Arcite somewhat was aghast.
 The fire brennin on the Altar bright,
 That it gan all the temple for to light:
 And a swete smell anon the ground upyafe;
 And Arcite anon his hond uphafa,
 And more incense into the fire he cast,
 With othir rytis mo: And at the last
 The Statue of Mars gan his hauberk ring:
 And with that sound he herde a murmuring,
 Full low and dim, that seide thus, 1780
 For which he yafe Mars honour and glory;
 And thus with joy and hope well to fare
 Arcite goth home lessid of his care,
 As faine as foule is of the brightè Sunne,
 And right anon soche a strife is begunne, 2430
 For thilkè graunting, in the heven above,
 Betwixt Venus, that Goddes is of Love,
 And Mars the stern, the God Armipotent,
 That Jupiter was busy it to stent;
 Untill that pale Saturnus the cold,
 That knew so many aventures of old,
 Found in his old experience an Art,
 That he full sone hath plesid every part.
 And sothe is seide, Eld hath grete avantage,
 In Eld is both wysedom, and usage,
 Men may the old outren, but not outrede;
 Saturne anon to stintin strife and drede,
 (Albeit that it be againe his kind)
 Of all this strife he can remedie find.
 My derè daughter Venus, qd Saturne,
 My Courte, that hath so wide for to turne,
 Hath more powir, than wote any man.
 Myn is the drenching in the See so wann,
 Myn is the prisoun in the derkè cote,
 Myn is the strangling, hanging by the throte, 2460
 The murmure, and the churlis rebelling,
 The groning, and privie empoysoning;
 I do vengeance, and pleine Correcion,
 While I dwell in the sign of the Lyon.
 Myn is the ruine of the highè halles,
 The falling of the Towris, and the Wallis,
 Upon the Minours, or the Carpenteres,
 I slough strong Sampson shaking the pilleres;
 And myn ben also the Maladys cold,
 The derk tresounis, and the castis old;
 My lokig is Fathir of Pestilence. 2470
 Now wepe no more, I shall do diligence,
 That Palamon, that is thine owne Knight,
 Shall have his Lady, as thou hast hym hight.
 Though Mars shall help his Knight, yet nathelès
 Betwixt you twein it more be sometime pees,
 All be ye not of one Complexion,
 That causith all day soche division:

I am thine'ayel, redy at thy will,
 Wepe no more, I wolle thy lust fulfill.
 Now wolle I stintin of these Goddes above,
 Of Mars, and of Venus Goddes of Love;
 And pleyntly wolle I tell you as I can,
 The grete effect, for which that I began.
 Grete was the feste in Athenis that day,
 And eke that lusty selson of that Ma
 Made every wight to ben in soche plesance,
 That all that Monday justin they and daunce,
 And spendin it in Venus high servise:
 But be the cause that they sholden arise
 Erly, to se the grete and straunge fight,
 Unto their restè wentin they at night.
 And on the morow whan day gan to spring,
 Of horse and harneis, noise and clattering
 There was in the hostelries all about:
 And to the Palleis rode there many a rout
 Of Lordis upon Stedis and Palfreys;
 There maystow se devising of harneis,
 So uncouth, and so ryche, and wrought so wele
 Of goldsmithry, of braudry, and of lele, 2500
 The sheldis bright, teleris, and trapures,
 Gold-hewin helms, hauberks, and Cotearmures,
 Lordis in Parementes on their Courtesers,
 Knightis of retinue, and eke Esqueres,
 Nailing of Speres, and helmis bokiling,
 Giggig of Sheldis with Lainers lacing,
 As there nede is that they were nothing idyl;
 The soming Stedis on the goldin bridyl
 Gnawing, and fast the Armures also
 With file and hamer riding to and fro: 2510
 Yemen on fote, and commyns many one,
 With shortè flavis, thik as they may gone:
 Pipes, trompis, nakers, and clariouns,
 That in the bataille blowin blodie sounes,
 The palleis full of pepil up and down,
 Here thre, there ten, holding their questioun,
 Devining of these Theban Knightis two,
 Some seide thus, some seide it shalde be so.
 Some heldin with him with the blakè berde,
 Some with the ballid, some with the thik herd. 2520
 Some seide he lokid grim, and he wolde fight,
 He hath a sparth of twentie pound of weight.
 Thus was the Halle full of devining,
 Long aftir that the Sunne gan to spring. 2530
 The grete Theseus of his slepe gan wake,
 With Minstralcie, and noyse that they make;
 Held yet the chambir of his Palleis ryche,
 Tyll that the Theban Knightis both ylich
 Honourid weren, and to the place sett;
 Duke Theseus is at the window sett,
 Arrayid as he were a God in Trone;
 The pepil pressid thithirward full sone
 Hym for to sene, and don him reverence,
 And eke to here his helle and his sentence.
 An Herawd on a Scaffold made an oo,
 Tyll all the noyse of the pepil was doo.
 And whan he se the pepil of noyse still,
 Thus shewid he the mighty Duk's will.
 The Lord hath of his hie discretion
 Considrid, that it were destruction
 To gentill blode, to fightin in this wise,
 Of mortal bataille, now in this emprise;
 Wherefore to shapin that they shall not dye
 He wolle his first purpose modifie.
 No man therefore, up peyne of los of life,
 No mannir shot, ne Polax, ne short knife,
 Into the listis send, or thir bring,
 Ne short Swerd for to stik with point biting
 No man ne draw, ne bere it by his side:
 Ne no man shall unto his felaw ride
 But one cours, with a sharpe groundin spere:
 Foin if hym list on fote, he it shall were.

And

117. that very dwelling is in the Lyon.

And he that is at mischief shall be take,
 And not slayn, but be broughtin to a Stake,
 That shall ben ordeynid on othir side,
 Thithir he shall be force, and ther abide.
 And if so fall, that the chieftain be take,
 On eithir side, or ellis sleen his make,
 No lengir shall the turnement last,
 God spede you, goth, and leyith it on fast, 2560
 With Swetdes and long macis fightith your fill,
 Goth now your wey, this is the Lord's will.
 The voyce of the pepil touchid heven,
 So loude cryid they with mery Steven,
 God save soche a Lord, that is so gode,
 He willich no destruction of blode.
 Up goon the trompis, and the melody,
 And to the listis ritte the Company, 2570
 By ordinaunce throughout the Cite large,
 Hangid with cloth of gold, and not with farge.
 Full like a Lord this nobil Duke gan ryde,
 And those two Thebanis on eithir syde:
 And astir rode the Quene and Emely,
 And astir that anothir Company
 Of one and othir, astir their degre;
 And thus they passin throughout the Cite,
 And to the listis comin they bytime:
 [It n'as not of the day yet fully prime,
 Whan set was Theseus full ryche and hie,
 Hippolyta the Quene and Emely,
 And othir Ladys in degrees about:
 Unto the Setis presich all the rout.
 And westward through the gatis undir Mart
 Arcite and eke an hundrid of his part
 Wyth bannir redde is entrid right anon;
 And the felye moment entrid Palamon
 Is, undir Venus Estward in that place,
 Wyth bannir white, and hardy chere and face.
 In all the world to sekin up and down,
 So evin without variatioun
 There n'as no where soche companyis twey,
 For there was none so wise, that coude seye,
 That any had of othir avauntage
 Of worthiness, ne of estat, ne age.
 So evin were they chopin for to ghesse:
 And into rengis tweyn layr they them dresse.
 Whan that their namis rad were everichone,
 That in their nombre gile were there none,
 Tho were the gatis shut, and cryed was loude,
 "Do now your devir yonge Knightis proude." 2600
 The Herawdes left their priking up and down,
 Now ringin trompis loud and Clarioun,
 There is no more to seyn but Est and West
 In goth the sharpest spere fadly in the Rest
 In goth the sharpe spore into the horse side;
 There see Men who can just and who can ride!
 There shiverin shaftis upon sheldis thik,
 He felith through the herte sponc the prik,
 Upspringith speris twenty fote on hight,
 Out goth the swardis as the silvir bright; 2610
 The helmis they to hewin; and to shred;
 Out brestith the blode with stern stremis red;
 With mighty macis they the bones to brest,
 He through the thikist of the throng gan threst,
 There slombli stedis strong, and down gon all,
 He rollith undir fote as doth a ball.
 He soinith on his fote with his tronchoun,
 And he him hurtlich with his horse adoun.
 He through the body born, and sith is take
 Mangre his hede, and brought unto the stake, 2620
 As forwarde was; right there he must abide.
 Anothir had is on that othir side.
 And sometime doth them Theseus to rest,
 Them to refresh, and drinkin, if them lest.
 Full ofte a day have these Thebanis two
 Togethir met, and done eche othir wo;

Unhorsid hath ech othir of them twey;
 There n'as Tigre' in the Vale of Galgophy,
 Whan that her whelp is stolen whan it is lite,
 So cruill on the hunt, as is Arcite, 2630
 For jelous hert upon this Palamon:
 Ne in Belmarie there is no Lion
 That huntid is, or for his hungir wode,
 Ne of his prey desirith so the blode,
 As Palamon to sle his foe Arcite:
 The jelous strokis on their helmis bite,
 Out rennith blode on both their sidis rede,
 Sometime an end there is of every dede!
 For er the Sunne unto the Weste went,
 The stronge King Emetrius gan hent 2640
 This Palamon, as he fought with Arcite,
 And made his sward depe in his fleshy bite.
 And by the force of twenty is he take,
 Unyoldin, and ydrawin to the stake.
 And in the rescous of this Palamon
 The strong King Lyncurgus is born adoun:
 And King Emetrius, for all his strength,
 Is borne out of the saddle his sward's length,
 So smote him Palamon ere he were take;
 But all for nought; he was brought to the stake: 2650
 His hardy herte might him ne helpin naught,
 He must abidin, whan that he was caught,
 By force, and eke by Composition.
 Who soroweth now but woful Palamon,
 That more no more gone again to fight?
 And whan that Theseus had sene that sight,
 He cryid, ho: no more; for it is done,
 Ne none shall lengir to his felaw gone.
 I woll be a true judge, and not party,
 Arcite of Thebis shall have Emely, 2660
 That by his fortune hath her fayr ywonn.
 Anon there is a noyse of pepil gonn,
 For joy of this, so loud and hie withall,
 It semid that the listis shuld fall.
 What now can fayr Venus doin above?
 What seith she now? what doth this Quene of Love?
 But wepith sore for wanting of her will,
 Till that her teris on the listis fill.
 She seide, I am ashamid douteless;
 Saturnus seide, fayr daughtir, hold thy pece, 2670
 Mars hath his wyll, his Knight hath all his bone,
 But by my hede thou shalt be esid sone.
 The trompis with the loud Minstralcie,
 The Herawdis, that full loude yell and crie,
 Ben in their wele, for joy of Dan Arcite.
 But herk'nith me, and stintith noyse a lite;
 Which a Miracle there befell anon.
 The fiers Arcite hath of his helm don,
 And on a Courser for to shew his face
 He prikith endlong in the large space, 2680
 Loking upward upon his Emely,
 And she ayen him cast a frendly eye,
 (For wemyn, as to spekin in commune,
 Followin all the favour of Fortune)
 And was alle his chere, as in his herte.
 Out of the ground a fire infernall sterte
 From Pluto sent, at request of Saturne,
 For which his horse for fere began to turn,
 And lepe aside, and foundrid as he lepe,
 And er that Arcite may takin kepe, 2690
 He pight him on the pomill of his hede,
 That in the place he lay as he were dede.
 His brest to brostin with his sadill bow;
 As blake he ley as any Cole or Crow,
 So was the blode yronnin in his face;
 Anon he was ybrought out of that place,
 With hert full fore to Theseus Palleis.
 Tho was he corvin out of his harneis,
 And in a bedde ybrought full fayr and blive,
 For he was yet in memory, on live, 2700
 And

And alwey crying aftr Emily.

Deke Theseus, with all his Cumpany,
Is comin home to Athenes the Citè,
With allè blifs, and grete Solempnitè,
Albeit that this aventure was fall,
He wuldè not discumfortin them all.
Men seide eke that Arcite shou'd not dye,
He shulde ben helid of his Maladye.
And of anothir thing they were as fayne,
That of them alle there was no man slayne;
Al were they forely hurt, and namely one,
That with a Spere was thirlid his brest bone:
Two othir woundis hadde, two brokin armes,
Some of them haddin salves, and some had charmes,
Sondry fermacis of herbs, and eke Save,
They dronkin, for they wolde their livis save.
For which this nobill Duke, as he wele can,
Cumfortith, and honourith every man.
And made a grete revill all the long night,
Unto the straungè Lordes, as it was right.
Ne there n'as holdin no discumforting,
But aslistat justis or turnyng: 2710
For sothly there n'as no discumfiture,
For falling n'is not but an aventure:
Ne to be ladde by force unto a stake
Unyoldin, and with twentie Knightis take,
One persone alone, without any mo,
And haryid forth by arm and fote and too,
And eke his Stedè drivin forth with flaves,
With foremen, bothè yemyn, and eke knaves, 2730
It was arretid him no villany:
There may no Man clepiu it cowardy.
For which anon Duke Theseus let cry
To stintin blive all rancour and envy.
They grete as wele of one side as of other,
And either side is like as other's brother:
And yafe them getis aftr their degre,
And fully held a festè dayis thre.
And conveyid the Kingis worthily
Out of his Town a largè dayes journey.
And home went every man the rightè wey,
There n'as no more but farewell, and gode dey.
Of this bataille I woll no more endite,
But speke of Palamon and of Arcite.
Swellich the brest of Arcite, and the fore
Encresith at his herte still more and more.
The clotrid blode for any lech's craft
Corrupid, and is in his body laft,
That neithir veinè blode, ne ventouling,
Ne drinkis of herbis may ben helping,
By vertue expulsive or animal;
For thilkè vertue clepid naturall
Ne may the venim voidè ne expell.
The pipis of his lungs begun to swell,
And every lacert of his brest adoun
Is flent with venim and corruption.
Him gainith neithir, for to get his life,
Vomit upward, ne downward laxatife:
All is to borstin thilkè region, 2750
Nature hath there no domination;
And certainly where nature woll not wiche, &
Farewell Phisike, go bere the Corse to church.
This all and some is, Arcite must dye,
For whiche he fendith aftr Emily,
And Palamon that was his Cofin dere:
Then seide he thus, as ye shull aftr here.
Nought may my woful Spirit in my herte
Declare oo point of all my sorowes smerte,
To you, my Lady, that I lovin most,
But I bequeth the servise of my ghost
To you abovin every Creature,
Syn that my lyfe no lengir may endure.
Alas my wo! alas my peinis strong!
That I for you have sufferid so long.

Alas the dethe! alas mine Emily!
Alas departing of our Cumpany!
Alas mine hert's quene! alas my wife!
Myn hert's Lady, endir of my life!
What is the world? what askin men to have?
Now with his love, now in his coldè grave, 2780
Allone withoutin any cumpany.
Farewell my foe, farewell myn Emily,
And soft do take me in your armis twey,
For love of God, and herk'nith what I sey.

I have here with my Cofin Palamon
Had strife and rancour many a day agon
For life of you, and for my jelosy:
And Jupiter my Soule so wisly gie,
To spekin of a Servaunt propirly,
With Circumstauncis all, and truly, 2790
That is to say, Trowth, Honour, and Knighthede,
Wisdome, Humblefs, Estate, and hie Kinrede,
Fredome, and all that length to that Art
So Jupiter have in my Soule part,
As in this worldè right now know I none,
So worthy to be lov'd as Palamon,
That servith you, and woll don all his life,
And if that you shall evir ben a wife,
Forget not Palamon, the gentil Man.
And with that word his speche to faile began. 2800
For from his fete unto his brest was come
The cold of dethe, that hath him overcome.
And yet moreovir for in his armes two
The vital strenght is lost, and all ago,
And also th' intellect withoutin more,
That dwellith in his herte fike and fore,
Gan failin, whan that his herte felt the dethe,
Duskid his eyin twey, and failith brethe. 2810

But on his Lady yet cast he his eye,
His lastè worde was, Mercy Emily.
His spirit chaungid house, and out went there,
As I come nevir, I cannot tell where.
Therefore I stint, I am no Divinistre,
Of Soulis synd I nought in this Registre.
Ne me list not thilk opinions to tell
Of them, though that they writin where they dwell.
Arcite is cold, there lat Mars his Soule gie.
Now woll I spekin forth of Emily;
Shright Emily, and howlich Palamon.
And Theseus his Sufir toke anon, 2820
Swounning, and bare her fro the Corse away.
What helpith it to tary forth the day,
To tellin how she wept both ever and mortie,
For in soche caas wymin have mochill sorie,
Whan that their husbonds ben fro them ago,
That for the more part they forowin so,
Or ellis fallin in soche Malady,
That at the lastè certainly they dye.
Infinite ben the sorow, and the teres,
Of olde folk, and folk of tendir yeres, 2830
In all the town for dethe of this Theban;
For him there wepith bothè child and man.
So grete a weping was there none certaine,
Whan Hector was ybrought all fresli yslaine
To Troy, alas! the pite that was there,
Scratching of chekis, renting eke of here.
Why wuldith thou be dede, the wymin crie,
And haddist gold ynow, and Emilie?
There is no mann may gladdin Theseus,
Saving his agid fathir Ageus, 2840
That knew this world's transmutatioun,
As he had seynit it, both up and down,
Joy aftr wo, and wo aftr gladnefs,
And shewith him ensamples, and likenesse.
Right as there dyid nevir mann, qd he,
That he ne lived in Erth in some degre,
Right so ther livid nevir man, he seide,
In all this world, that sometime he ne deyde.

This

* 2808. Duskid his eyen & the failede his brethe.

This world is but a throughfare full of wo,
And we ben pilgrimes passing to and fro.
Dethe is the End of every worldly fore.
And ovir all this yet seide he much more
To this effect, full wisely to exhort
The peple, that they shulde them recomfort.

Duke Theseus with all his busie cure
Castith about where that the Sepulture
Of gode Arcite, may best ymakid be,
And eke most honourable in degre.
And at the last he toke Conclusion,
That there as first Arcite and Palamon
Haddin for love the battaile them betwene,
That in the self same grove swete and grene,
There as he hadde his amorous desires,
His Complaint, and for Love his hottè fires
He woude make a fire, in whiche the Office
Funerall he mightin all accomplissh.

And commaundid anon to hake and hew
The Okis old, and lay them all on rew,
In culpons, well arrayid for to brenne;
His officeres with swiftè fore they renne
All ryght anon at his commaundement;
And astir that Theseus hath ysent

For a large Beir, and it all orespradde
Wyth cloth of gold, the richest that he hadde.

And of the same sute he clothid Arcite,
Upon his hondys he put his gloves white,
Eke on his hede a Croune of laurer grene,
And in his hond a swerde full bright and kene.
He leyde him bare visagid on the bier,
Therewith he wept, that pitè was to here.

And for the peple shuld sein him all,
Whan it was day they brought him to the Hall,
That rorith of the crying and the sowne.

Tho gan this wofull Theban Palamon
With slotry berde, and ruggy ashey heres,
In clothis blake bedroppid all with teres,
And (passing ovir weping Emily)
Was rusfullist of all the Company.

And in as much as the servise shulde be
The more nobil and ryche in his degre,
Duke Theseus lette forth the Stedis bring,
That trappid were in Steele all glittering,
And covered with the Armes of Dan Arcite:

Upon these Stedis grete and lilly white
Ther sattin folk, of whiche one bare his shelde,
Anothir his spere, in his hond held:

The third bare with him his bow Turkis,
Of fine gold was the case and the harneis:
And ridin forth apase with fory chere
Toward the grove, as ye shull astir here.

The noblist of the Grekes that werin there
Upon their shulderes carryid the biere
With a stak pace, and eyin redde and wete,
Throughout the Citè, by the Maistris strete,
That spradde was all with blake and wondir hie;
Right of the same is the strete ywric.

Upon the ryght hond went old Egeus,
And on the othir side Duke Theseus
With Vessils in ther hond of gold full fine,
All full of hony, milk, and blode and wine.
Eke Palamon with full grete Company,
And astir that came wofull Emily,
With fire in hond, as was that time the gyfe
To do the office of funerall Servise.

Hie labour, and full grete apparelling
Was at the servise, and the fire-making,
That with his grene top the hevin wrought,
And twenty fardom of brede armis straught,

This is to seyne, the boughis were so brode,
Of stre first there was layde many a lode.
But how the fire was makid up on hight,
And eke the namys how the treis hight,

2850 As oke, firr, birch, asp, aldir, elm, poplere,
Willow, holm, plane, ash, box, chesten, and laurere,
Maple, thorn, beche, ewe, hasill, whipultre,
How they were feld, shall not be told for me.

Ne how the Goddis rennin up and doune,
Dissherite of their habitation,
In which they wonnid in rest and in pece,
The Nymphs and Fawns and Hamadryades.

2860 Ne how the bestis, ne the birdis all
Fleddin for fere, whan that the wode was fall:
Ne how the ground aghast was of the light,
That was not wont to se the Sunne bright;

Ne how the fire was conchid first with stre,
And then with drie stikis clovin a thre,
And then with grene wode and spicerie,
And then with cloth of gold and with perie,
And garlondes hanging with many a flour,
The myrrhe, the incense, with the swete odoure.

2870 Ne how Arcite lay among all this,
Ne what ryche about his bodie is,
Ne how that Emelie, as was the gife,
Put in the fire of funeral servise:

Ne how she sowned, whan made was the fire,
Ne what she spake, ne what was her desire:
Ne what Jewillis men in the fire cast,
Whan that the fire was grete, and brennid fast:
Ne how some cast their shelde, and some their spere,
And some their vestimentis which they were,

2880 And cuppis full of milk, and wine, and blode,
Into the fire, that brent as it were wode.

Ne how the Grekis with a hugè rout
Thryis did ridin all the fire about,
Upon the left hand, with a loud shouting,
And thrys on the right with speres clattering:
And thrys how the Ladys gan all to crie:

Ne how that led was homeward Emily:
Ne how Arcite is brent to Ashin cold:

Ne how that there the liche-wake was yhold,
All that night long, ne how the Grekis play

The Wake-playis; ne kepe I not to say
Who wraistlid best nakid, with oyle anoint,

2890 Ne who that bare him best in every point.
I woll nat tellin eke how that they gon

Home till Athenis, whan the play is don.
But shortly to the point then woll I wend,
And makin of my longè tale an end.

By procefs of time and by length of yeres
All stintid is the mourning and the teres
Of Grekis, by one general assent.

2900 Then semid me there was a Parliment
At Athenes on a certain point and caas,
And among the which pointis spokin was
To have with certaine Countrys Alliaunce,
And have of Thebanes fully Obeisaunce.

For whiche the nobil Theseus anon
Let sendin astir gentil Palamon,
Unwist of him, what was the cause and why.
But in his blake clothis sorowfully

2910 He came at his commaundement on hie;
Tho sent Theseus astir Emelie.

Whan they were sett, and hushid was the place,
And Theseus abidin hath a space,

Er anie word came fro his wise brest,
His eyin sett he there as was his left,
And with a sadde visage he sighid still,
And astir that right thus he seide his will.

The first movir of the causis above,
Whan that he first made the fair chaine of Love,

2920 Grete was th' effect, and hie was his entent,
Wele wist he why, and what thercof he ment:

For with that faire chainè of Love he bonde,
The fire, the aire, the watir, and the lond,

In certaine bondis, that they may not fleg;
The same Prince, and the same movir, qd he,

Hath

Hath stablished in this wretchid world adoun
 Certaine of dayis and duratioun,
 To all that are engendrid in this place,
 Ovir the whichè day they may not pace,
 Alle mowin they yet tho dayis abregge,
 There nedith none authority to legge,
 For it is provid by experience;
 But that me list declarin my sentence.
 Then may men by this order wele discerne
 That thilk movir stable is and eterne.
 Wele may man know, but that he be a folc,
 That every part derivith from his whole.
 Nature hath not takin his beginning
 Of no partis, or cantill of a thing,
 But of oo thing that parfite is and stable,
 Descending so till it be corruptable.
 And therefore of his wise purveyaunce
 He hath so wele besett his Ordinaunce,
 That space of thingis and progressions
 Shullith endure ay by successions
 And not eterne ben, without any lye.
 This maystow undirstond, and sene at eye;
 Lo! th' Oke; that hath so long a norisshing
 Fro the time that he first ginnith to spring,
 And hath so long a life, as ye may se,
 Yet at the last ywastid is the tre.
 Confidrithe eke, how that the hardè stone
 Undir our fete, on which we trede and gone,
 Yet wastith, as it lyth in the wey.
 And the brode rivir sometime wexith dry.
 The grete Townis so wide do wane and wend;
 Than ye sene that all these thingis hath end.
 In man and woman se shall we also,
 That endith in one of these termis two,
 That is to sayn, in youthe, or ellis age?
 He mote be dede; a King as shall a Page,
 Some in his bedde, some in the depè Sec,
 Some in the large felde, as ye may see;
 It helpith nought, all goeth that ilke way;
 Then may you sene that all thingis mote dye.
 What makith this but Jupiter the King?
 That is the Prince and Causir of all thing,
 Converting al unto his propir will,
 From which it is derivid, sothe to tell.
 And here against no creature on live
 Of no degré availith for to strive.
 Then it is wisdom, as it thinkith me,
 To make a virtue of necessity;
 And take that wele, that we may not eschew,
 And namely that, that to us all is dew.
 And whoso grutchith ought, he doth folyc,
 And rebill is to him that all may gye.
 And certeynly a mann hath most honour
 To dyin in his excellence and flour;
 Whan he is sikkir of his gode name:
 Than he hath don his frendes and him no shame.
 And gladdir ought his frendes be of his dethe,

Whan yoldin up with honour is his brethe,
 Than whan his name appallid is for age,
 And all forgottin is his Vassalage,
 Then it is best as for a worthy fame,
 To dyin, whan that he is most of name.
 The contrary of this is wilfulness.
 Why grutchin we? why have we hevyness,
 That gode Arcite, of chivalrie the flowr,
 Departid is, with duty and honour,
 Out of this foule prison of this life?
 Why grutchin here his cosin and his wife
 Of his welfare, that lovith him so wele?
 Can he them thank? nay, God wot, ner a dele,
 That both his Soule, and eke themself offend,
 And yet they mow their lustis not amend.
 What may I conclude of this long serie,
 But aftir wo I rede us be merie,
 And thankin Jupiter for all his grace;
 And for that we departin from this place,
 I rede that we makin of sorowes two
 O perfite joye lasting evir mo.
 And loke now where most sorow is herein
 There wolt I first at this time begin.
 Sustir, qd he, this is my full assent,
 With the avise here of my Parliment,
 That gentil Palamon your owne Knight,
 That servith you with will, and hert, and might,
 And evir hath sichins you first him knew,
 That ye shull of your grace upon him rew,
 And take him for your husbond and your Lord?
 Lene me your hond, for this is our accord,
 Lete se now of your womanly pitè;
 He is a King's brother's sonne pardè,
 And though he were but a pore batchelere,
 Syn he hath servid you so many a yere,
 And hadde for you so grete adversite,
 It muste ben confidrid, levith me,
 For gentil mercie ought to passin right.
 Then seide he thus to Palamon the Knight,
 I trow there nedith littil sarmoning
 To makin you assent unto this thing,
 Come nere, and take your Lady by the hond;
 Betwixt them two was made anon the bond,
 That Matrimonic hight, or Maryage,
 By all the Counsaile of his Baronage.
 And thus with allè blifs and melodye
 Hath Palamon yweddid Emilie.
 And God, that all this wide world hath wrought,
 Send him his Love, that it hath dere abought.
 For now is Palamon in allè wele,
 Living in blifs, in richese, and in hele,
 And Emilie him lovith tenderly,
 And he hir servith ay so gentilly,
 That nevir was there no word them betwene,
 Of Jelousie, or any othir tene.
 Thus endith Palamon and Emilie,
 And God save allè this fayre Cumpanie.

Here endith the KNIGHTES TALE. And followeth II. The MILLERS TALE.

3028: Than may I saye that all thing hath an ende.

3058: A man to dye whan he is best of his name.

3030: Than may I saye that all this thing will dye.

II. The MILLER's TALE.

NICHOLAS a Scholar of Oxford, practiseth with ALISON, the Carpenter's Wife of Osney, to deceive her Husband; but in the end is rewarded accordingly. This is one of those Tales, that Lidgate (in his Prologue to the Story of the Siege of Thebes) says, are of ribauldrie

To makin laughtir in the Cumpany.

So, Reader, you know what you are to expect, read, or forbear, as you think fitting.

The PROLOGUE.

WHAN that the Knyght had thus his Tale
ytold,
In all the Cump'ny n'as there yong ne
old,
That he ne seide, ^{it} was a nobill Story,
And worthy to be drawn in Memory:
And namily the gentiles everichone.
Our Hoste lough, and sware, so mote I gone
This goeth aright, unboklid is the male,
Let se now who shall tell anothir tale:
For truely the game is right well begonn:
Now tellith us, Sir Monk, if that ye conn
Somewhat to quite with the Knight's tale.
The Millere that for dronkin was all pale,
So that unnethe upon his horse he sat,
Ne n'old avaslin, neithir hode ne hat,

Ne abide no Man for his Curtesie,
But in Pilat's voice he began to crie,
And swore by armis, by blode, and by bones,
I can a nobill tale for the nones.
With which I woll now quite the Knight's tale.
Our Host saw that he dronkin was of Ale,
And seide, abide, Robin, myrlevè brother,
Some better man shall tell us first another;
Abide, and let us werkin thriftily.
By Godd's Soule, qd he, that woll not I,
For I will speke, or ellis go my way.
107 Our Host answerde, say on a Devil way,
Thou art a fole, thy wit is ovrcome;
Now herk'nith, qd the Millere, all and some;
But first I make my protestatioun,
That I am dronke, I know it by my sounne,
30 And

26 C. h. seide, tell thy tale. a d. w.

And therefore if I mispakin or say,
Wite it the Ale of Suthwerke, I you pray:
For I woll tell a Legend, and a life,
Both of a Carpentere, and of his wife.
How that a Clarke hath sett a Wright's Capp.
The Reve answerid, and seide, stint thy clapp,
Let be thy lewde dronkin harlottrie,
It is a sinne, and eke a grete folie
To apaire any man, or him defame,
And eke to bringe wivis in soche blame,
Thou maist ynow of othir thingis saine.
This dronkin Millere spake full sone againe,
And seide, my leve brothir Oswold,
Whoso hath no wife, he is no Cokold.
But I say not therefore that thou art one,
There be full gode wivis many a one,
And ere a thousand gode aginst one bad,
Thou knowist thy self, but if thou be mad;
Why art thou angry with my tale now?
I have a wife parde as well as thou,
Yet n'old I, for all th' Oxin in my plough,
Takin upon me more than is ynow,
To demin of my self that I am one,
I woll belivin wele that I am none.
An husbond shuld not ben inquisitive
Ne of God's privite, ne of his wife.
For so he fynde Godd's foison there,
Of the remnaunt hym nedith not t' enquire.
What shulde I more sey, but that this Millere
He n'old his word for no man forbere,
But told his churl's tale in this manere.
Me forthinkith, I shall reherse it here,
And therefore every gentil wight I pray,
For Godd's Love, demith not that I say
Of ill intent, but that I more reherse
Their talis all, ben they betir or werse,
Or ellis falsin some of my matere.
And therefore whoso list it not to here,
Turn ov'r the lefe, and chuse anothir tale,
For ye shall find ynow both grete and finale,
Of history, and thinges touching gentilnes,
And eke Morality, and Holines.
Blamith not me, if that ye chuse amiss,
The Millere is a churle, ye know wele this.
So was the Reve, and Coke, and othir mo,
And Harlotry they toldin eke both two.
Avisth you, and put me out of blame,
And eke Men shulde not make ernest of Game.

The TALE.

W hilome there was dwelling in Oxinford,
A ryche gnoffe, that gestis held to bord,
And of his craft he was a Carpentere;
With him there was dwelling a pore Schol-
lere,
Had lernid Art, but all his fantasie
Was turnid now to lerne Astrology,
And couth a certein of Conclusions,
To demin by Interrogations,
It that men askid hym in certein houres,
Whan that men shuldin have or drought, or shoures.
Or if men askid hym what shulde befall
Of every thing, I may not reckon all.
This Clark yclepid was Hende Nicholas;
Of derné love he couth, and of Solas.
And thereto he was slic, and right prive,
And like unto a Maidin meke to se.
A chambre he had in that hostetrie
Alone, withoutin any Company,

Full fetously ydight with herbis sote,
And he himself as swete as is the rote
Of Licoris, or any Seduwall.
His Almagiste, and bokis grete and finale,
His Afterlagour, longing for his Art,
His Augrim stonis lying feire apart,
On shelveis al couched at his bedd's hede,
His presse y covrid with a folding rede,
And all above there lay a gay Sautrie,
On which he made on Nightis melodie,
So swetely that all the chambre rong,
And Angelus ad Virginem he song.
And aftir that he song the King's note,
Full oftin blessid was his mery throte.
And thus the swete Clark all his time spent
Aftir his frendis finding, and his rent.
This Carpentere had weddid new a wife,
Which that he lovid, as he did his life,
Of eightene yere, I ghesse, she was of age,
Jelouse he was, and kept her strait in Cage,
For she was wild and yong, and he was old,
And demid himself to ben a Cokold.
He knew not Cato, for his wit was rude,
That bad men weddin their similitude.
Men shuld weddin aftir their estate,
For Youth and Eld is oftin at debate.
But sith that he was fallin in the share,
He must endure, as othir folk, his care.
Faire was this yonge wife, and therewithall
As a wifill, her body gent and small.
A Seint she werid, barrid all with silk,
A barmecloth eke as white as morow milk,
Upon her lendis, full of many a gore.
White was her Smok embroudid all before,
And eke behind, on her Colere about,
Of cole blak silk within and eke without.
The tapis of her white Volipere
Were of the same sute of her colere.
Her fillit brode of silk, and set full hie:
And sikirly she had a likerous eye.
Full finale ypullid were her browis two,
And tho were bent, and blak as any flo.
And she was moche more blisfull for to se,
Than is the newe Perienet tre,
And softir than the woll is of a wether;
And by her girdil hong a purse of lether,
Tassid with Silk, and perlid with Latoun;
In all this world to sekin up and down
There n'is no man so wise that couthen thence
So gay a Popelote, or so gay a wench.
Full brightir was the shining of her hue
Than in the Towre the Noble forgid new.
But of her song she was so loude and yerne
As any Swallow sitting on a berne.
Thereto she couth skipp, and make a game,
As any kid or calfe foll'wing his dame;
Her mouth was swete as braik or the meth,
Or horde of Applis layd in hay or heth.
Wintin she was as is a jolly Colt,
Long as a Mast, and upright as a bolt.
A broche she bare upon her low Collere,
As brode as is the bosse of a bokelere.
Her shoes were lacid on her leggis hie,
She was a Primrose, and a Piggisnie,
For any Lord to liggin in his bedde,
Or yet for any gode yoman to wedde.
Now Sir, and est Sir, so befell the caas,
That on a day this Hende Nicholas
Fill with this yonge wife, to rage and pley,
While that her husbond was at Osency,
As Clerkis ben full sotill and full queint,
And privily he caught her by the queint,
And seide, I wis but that I have my will,
For derne Love, Love of The, Lemman, I spill:
H
And

And heldin her fast by the hanchè bones,
And seide, Lemman, love me well at ones,
Or I woll dyin, as so God me save.
And she gan spring, as a Colt in a trave.
And with her hede she wryith fast away,
And seide, I woll not kisse The by my fay.
Why! let be, qð she, let be, Nicholas,
Or I will crie out harrow and alas!
D'away your handis for your curtesy.

This Nicholas gan mercy for to crie,
And spake so sayr, and proffered him so fast,
That she her love hym grauntid at the last:
And swore her oth by Seint Thomas of Kent,
That she wulde ben at his Commaundement,
Whan that she may her leysure well espie:
Mine husbond is so full of jelousie,
But that ye waitin well, and ben privy,
I wote right well, I n'am but dede, qð she,
Ye motè ben full derne, as in this caas.

Nay thereof care you nought, qð Nicholas:
A Clerk had lithirly befett his while,
But if he couth a Carpenter beguile.
And thus they were accordid, and ysworne,
To waite a time, as I have seide besorne.
Whan Nicholas had done this every dele,
And thakkid her about the Lendis wele,
He kist her swete, then takith his Sautrie,
And playith fast and makith Melodye.

Then fell it thus, that to the Parish Chirch
(Christ's owne workis for to swirch)

This gode wife went upon a Holyday:
Her forehede shone as bright as any day,
So was it washyn, when she lete her werke;
Now was there of the Chirch a Parish Clerke,
The which that was yclepid Absolon,
Crull was his heere, and as the gold it shone,
And stroutid as a fannè large and brode,
Full straight and evin lay his jollie shode.
His rude was redde, his eyin gray as gose,
With Poull's windowes corvin on his shose.
In hofin redde he went full fetously,
Yclad he was full smale and propirly,
All in a kirtil of a light wachet,
Full sayre, and thikè ben the pointis set.
And therenpon he hadde a gay surplice
As white as is the blofome on the rice.
A merie childe he was, so God me save.
Well couth he lettin blode, and clip, and shave,
Or make a Chartre of lond, or aquitaunce,
In twenty manir couth he trip and daunce,
Altir the Schole of Oxinfordè tho,
And with his leggis castin to and fro:
And playin songis on a smale ribible,
Thereto he song sometime a loud quible:
And as well couth he play on a gitterne.
In all the Toun n'as brewhousè, ne taverne,
There as ony gay gille or tapstere was,
That he ne visitid with his Solas.

But sothe to sayne, he was somedeile squaimus
Of fartying, and of spechè dangerous.

This Absolon, that was jolly and gay,
Goeth with a Censir on a Holliday,
Censing the wivis of the Parish fast,
And many a lovely loken on them he cast;
And namely on this Carpenter's wife:
To loken on her hym thought a mery life,
She was so propre, and swete, and licorous,
I dare wele say, if she had ben a Mousè,
And he a Carte, he woude her hent anon.

This Parish Clerk, this jolly Absolon,
Hath in his hertè soche a Love longing,
That of no wife toke he none offering,
For curtesy, he seide, he wulde have none.
The Mone, whan it was night, full bright yshone,

And Absolon his gitterne hath ytake,
For Paramoures he thought for to awake,
And forth he goth jelouse and amorous,
Till he came to the Carpenter's house,
A littil aftir the Cok had y crow,
And dresid hym undir a shot window,
That was upon the Carpenter's wall,
He singith in his voyce gentil and small,
Now derè Lady, if thy will it be,

I pray you that ye welde rew on me,
Full wele according to his gitterning;
This Carpenter awoke, and herd him sing,
And spake unto his wife, and seide anon,
What, Alifon, here thou not Absolon,
That chauntith thus undir our bour's wall?
And she answerde her husbond there withall,
Yes God wot, John, I here it every dele.

This passith forth, what woll ye bet than wele?

Fro day to day this jolly Absolon,
So woth her, that him was wo begon.
He wakith all the night, and all the day,
He kembith his lockes brode, and made him gay,
He woth her by menis and brocage,
And swore that he wulde ben her owne page;
He singith broking as a Nightingale,
He sent her Piment, Methe, and spicid Ale;

And Wafis piping hote out of the glede;
And for she was of toun, he proff'rid Mede,
For some folk will be wonnin for ryche,se,
And some for strokes, and some for gentilnesse.
Sometime to shew his lightness and Maistry,
He playith Heraudes on a Scaffold hie;
But what availith him, as in this caas,
So lovith she this Hendè Nicholas,
That Absolon may blow the buk's horne,

He ne had for his labour but a scorne.
And thus she makith Absolon her Ape,
And all his ernist turnith to a jape.
Full sothe is this Proverb, it is no lie,
Men sayin thus alwey, that the nye fly
Still makith the ferre love to be lothe:
For though that Absolon be wode or wrothe,
Because that he was ferrè from her sight,
This nye Nicholas stode still in his light.
Now bere The wele, thou Hendè Nicholas.

For Absolon may waile and sing alas!
And so befell it on a Saturday,
This Carpenter was gone to Osèney,
And Hendè Nicholas and Alifon
Accordid were to this Conclusion,
That Nicholas shall shapin him a wile
This sely jelouse husbond to begyle:
And if so be that the game went aright,
She shulde slepe in his armis all nyght,
For this was his desire, and hers also.
And right anon withoutin wordis mo,
This Nicholas no lengir wulde tary,
But doth full soft into his chambir cary

Both mete and drinkè for a dey or twey.
And to her husbond bade her for to sey,
If that he askid after Nicholas,
She shulde answer she n'ist not where he was;
Of all that day she saw him not with eye,
She trowith he was in some maladye.
For for no crie, she or her Maid couth call,
He n'old answer, for nought that might befall.

Thus passith forth all that ilk Saturday,
That Nicholas still in his chambre lay;
And ete, and drank, and slept, did what hym lest,
Till Sunday, that the Sunnè goth to rest.

This sely Carpenter hath grete merveile
Of Nicholas, or what thing might him aile,
And seide, I am adradd by St. Thomas,
It standith not aright with Nicholas,

God

harde.
all also spring

her

and leste

hede

the meane

or payland

and joyful tell

250

260

180

200 at 210

220 or

230

300

310

God shild, that he ne dyid sodeinly,
This world is now full tickle sikirly:
I saw to day a Corse borne to the Cherche,
That now on Monday last I saw him werch.
Go up, qð he unto his knave anon,-
Clepe at the dore, and knock fast with a Stone,
Loke how he is, and tell me boldely.

This knave goith him up full sturdily,
And at the chambir dore while that he stode,
He cryith and knockith, as he were wode.
What hoa? what do ye, Mastir Nicholay?
How may you slepin all this longè day?
But all for nought, he herde never a word:
An hole he found full low undir a bord,
There as the Catt was wont in for to crepe,
And at that hole he lokid in full depe,
And at the last he had of him a sight.

This Nicholas sat ay gaping upright,
As he had kykid on the newe Mone.
Adown he goth, and told his Mastir sone;
In what array he saw this ilkè Man.

This Carpenter to blissin him began,
And seide, now helpin us, Seint Fridefwide.
A man wot littil what shall him betide.
This man is fallen with his Astronomy,
In some wodeness, or in some Agony.
I thoughtin ay wele how it shulde be,
Men shulde not know of God's privite.
Yea bleissid be alwey the lewde man,
That nought but only his belese can.
So ferde anothir Clerk with Astronomy,
He walked into the feldis for to pry
Upon the Sterres, to wete what shulde befall,
Tyll he was in a Marlepit yfall;
He saw not that. But yet by Seint Thomas
Me ruith sore on Hende Nicholas:
He shall be ratid for his studying,
If that I may, by Jesus Hevin King.

Get me a staff, that I may undirspore,
While that thou, Robin, hevist up the dore.
He shall out of his studying I ghesse.
And to the chambir dore he gan him dresse.
His knave was a strong Carle for the nones,
And by the haspe he heved it up at ones,
Into the flore the dore it fill anone.

This Nicholas sat ay as still as stone,
And evir gapid upward in the aire.
This Carpenter wend he was in despaire,
And hent him by the shulderes mightily,
And shoke him hard, and cryith pitously,
What, Nicholas! what who, now loke adoun: 370
Awake, and think on Christ's passoun.
I crouch The fro Elves, and fro wikid Wightes;
And therewith the Night spell he seide arightes,
On four halvis of the house about,
And on the Dreshfold of the dore without,
' Jesu Christ, and Seint Benedight,
' Blesse this house from every wikid Wight,
' Fro the Nights Mare, the wite Paternoster,
' Where wonnist thou Seint Peters Sustir.
And at the last this Hende Nicholas,
Gan for to fike sore, and seide alas!
Shall all this world be lost eftsonis now?
This Carpenter answerde, what sayist thou?
What? think on God, as we Men do that swink.

This Nicholas answerid, fetch me drink,
And aftir woll I speke in privity
Of certeine thinges, that touchith The and me:
I woll tell it none othir Man certeine.

This Carpenter goth doune, and cometh againe,
And brought of mighty Ale a large quart,
And whan that eche of them had dronk his part, 390
This Nicholas his chambir dore fast shet,
And down the Carpenter by him he set,

And seide, John, Host mine, both lese and dere,
320 Thou shalt upon thy trowth swere to me here,
That to no wight thou shalt my Counsaile wrey,
For it is Crist's counsaile that I sey,
And if thou tell it Man, thou art forlore,
For this Vengeaunce thou shalt havin therefore,
That if thou wrye me, thou shalt be wode,

Nay Crist it forbid, for his holy blode, 400
Qð tho this sely man, I am no blabb,
Nay though I say't, I n'am not lese to gabbe.
Say what thou wolt, I shall it never tell,
330 To child, ne wyfe, by him that harrowed hell.

Now, John, qð Nicholas, I woll nat lie,
I have foundin in mine Astrologye,
As I have lokid in the Mone bright,
That now on Munday next, at quartir night,
Shal fall a raine, and that so wilde and wode,
That half so grete was never Noës fode: 410
This world, he seide, in less than half an houre,
Shall all be dreint, so hideous is the shoure:
Thus shall mankind drenche, and lese their life.

This Carpenter then seide, alas my wife!
340 And shall she drench? Alas myn Alifon!
And for sorow he fell almost adoun,
And seide, n'is there remedy in this caas?
Yes, yes, full gode replyed Hende Nicholas,
If thou wilt work aftir my lore, and rede,
Thou maist not werkin atir thine own hede. 420
For thus saith Solomon, that was full trew,
Werk all by counsaile, and thou shalt not rew.

But if thou werkin wilt by gode counsaile,
350 I undirtake withoutin Maist or Saile,
Yet shall I savin her, and The, and me.
Hast'ow not herde how sauid was Noë,
Whan that our Lorde had warnid him beforne,
That all the world with watir shuld be lorn?

Yes, qð the Carpenter, full yore ago.
Hast'ow not herde, qð Nicholas, also, 430
Of Noës sorow with his felasship,
Er that he mighte get his wife to ship!
Him had levir, I dare well undirtake,
360 At thilke time, than all his wetheres blake,
That she had had a Ship her self alone:
And therefore wolt'ow what is best to done?
This askith haste, and of a hasty thing
Men may not preche, ne make long tarying.

Anon go get us fast into this Inne,
A knedyng trough, or els a Kimelyn, 440
For eche of us, but loke that they ben large,
In which men mowin swim as in a barge:
And han therein Viteiles sufficient
But for a day, sic on the remanent:
The watir shall aflake, and goñ away
Aboutin prime upon the nexte day.
But Robin may not were of this, thy knave,
Ne eke thy Maide Gille I may not save:
Axe me not why? for though thou askè me,
I woll not tellin Godd's privite. 450
Suffisith The, but if thy wits be mad,

To have as grete a grace, as Noe had:
Thy wife shall I well savin out of doute,
380 Go now thy way, and spede The here about.
But whan thou hast for her, and The, and me,
Ygettin us these kneding Tubbis thre,
Then shalt thou heng them in the rose full hie,
That no man of our purveiaunce espie.
And whan thou hast done thus, as I have seide,
And hast our viteile sayr in them yleyde, 460
And eke an Axe to smite the Corde atwo,
Whan than the watir cometh, that we may go,
And breke an hole on hie upon the gable,
Unto the gardin ward, ovir the stable,
That we may frely passin forth our way,
Whan that the grete shoure is gone away,

Then

Then shalt thou swim as mery' I undirtake,
 As doth the white duck aftir her drake.
 Then woll I clepe hoe Alifon, how John,
 Be mery; for the flode will pass anon.
 And thou wolt sayn, haile Maistir Nicholay,
 God morow, I se The well, it is day.
 And then we shall be Lordis all our life
 Of all the worlde, as was Noe and his wife.
 But of one thing I warnè The full right,
 Be well avisid on that ilkè night
 That we ben entrid into the Ship's bord,
 That none of us ne speke nought a word,
 Ne clepe, ne crie, but ben in his prayere,
 For so to done it is Goddes own heft dere.
 Thy wife and thou mote hengin ferre a twinn,
 For that betwixt you there shall be no sinn,
 No more in loking, than ther shal in dede:
 This Ordenaunce is seide, Goe, God The spedde.
 To morue' at night, when men ben al aslepe,
 Unto our knedyng tubbis woll we crepe,
 And sittin there abiding Godd's grace:
 Go now thy way, I have no lengir space,
 To make of this no lengir sermoning:
 Men sayin, fend thy wife, and say nothing.
 Thou art so wise, it nedith The not teche,
 Go, save our livis, that I The besече.
 This sely Carpenter goth forth his way,
 Full oft he seide, alas! and welaway!
 And to his wife he told his privite,
 And she was ware, and knew it bet than he,
 What al this queintè cast was for to seye,
 But nathèless she ferde as she shuld dye,
 And seide, alas! go forth thy wey anone,
 Help us to scape, or we be dede eche one:
 I am thy trewe verry weddid wife,
 Go derè Spouse, and help to save our life.
 Lo what a grete thing is affection,
 Men may die of imagination,
 So depè may impressioun be take:
 This sely Carpenter begins to quake:
 Him thinkith verrily that he may se
 This Noës flode come waltring as the See,
 To drenchin Alifon his hony dere.
 He wepith, wailith, makith sory chere,
 He sikith with full many' a sory swough,
 He goeth, and gettith hym a kneding trough,
 And aftir that a Tubb, and a Kemelin,
 And privily he sent them to his Inne,
 And hing them in the rose full privily.
 With his own hand he made them ladders thre
 To climbin by the ronges, and by the stalkes
 Into the Tubbis hanging by the balkes.
 And them vitailid bothè trough and ribbe
 With brede and chese, and gode ale in a jubbe:
 Sussying right ynow as for a day.
 But er that he hadde made all this aray,
 He sent his knave, and eke his wench also
 Upon his nede to London for to go.
 And on the Monday, when it drew to Night,
 He shut his dore withoutin Candil light.
 And dressid all thing as it shuldè be,
 And shortly they clombin up all thre.
 They sittin still well nigh a furlong way,
 Now Pater noster, clum, seide Nicholay,
 And clum q'ð John, and clum seide Alifon:
 This Carpenter seide his devotion,
 And still he sett, and bidith his prayere,
 Awaiting on the raine, if he it here
 Tyll the dede slepe for wery businesse
 Fell on this Carpenter, right as I ghesse,
 About the Curfew time, or littil more:
 For travaile of his ghost he gronith sore,
 And eft he routith, for his hede mislay;
 And doune the laddir stalkith Nicholay,

And Alifon adonne ful soft she spedde,
 Withoutin wordis mo they went to bedde,
 There as the Carpenter was wont to lie,
 There was the revill, and the melodye.
 Thus lyith Alifon, and Nicholas
 In businesse and mirth, and in solas,
 Till that the bell of Landes gan to ring,
 And Freris in the Chancell gon to sing.
 This Parish Clerk, the amo'rous Absolon,
 That is for love alwey so wo bygon,
 Upon the Monday was at Osenay,
 With Company him to disport and play;
 And askid upon caas a Cloysterere,
 Full privily, for John the Carpenter:
 And he drew him apart out of the Chirch,
 And seide, In'ore, I saw him here not wurch
 Sith Saturday, I trow that he bewent
 For timber, there our Abbot hath him sent.
 For he is wont for timber for to go,
 And dwellin at the graunge a day or two:
 Or ellis he is at his house certeine,
 Where that he be I cannot sothly saine.
 This Absolon full jolly was and light,
 And thought, now is my time to walk all night,
 For sikirly I saw him not stirring
 About his dore, sith day began to spring.
 So mote I thrive, I shall, at Cock's crow,
 Full privily knokin at his Window,
 That stant full low upon his bowr's Wall:
 To Alifon I now woll tellin all
 My Love longing, for yet I shall not miss,
 That at the leste way I shall have her kisse.
 Some manir comfort I shall have perpay,
 My Mouth hath itchid all this longe day;
 That is a sign of kissing at the leste.
 All night me mette that I was at a feste.
 Therefore I woll go slepe an hour or twey,
 And all the night then woll I walk and pley.
 Whan that the firstè Cok hath crow anon,
 Uprist this jolly lovir Absolon,
 And him arrayith gay at point devise,
 But first he chewith greyns and licorice,
 To smellin sore, er he had kempt his here,
 Under his tonge a trew love knot he bare,
 For thereby wend he to be graciouse,
 Than romith to the Carpenter's house,
 And still he stant undir the shop window,
 Unto his brest it raught, it was so low:
 And soft he coughid with a semisoun.
 What do ye honycomb, swete Alifon?
 My fayre bird, and my swete Sinamome,
 Awakith, Lemman mine, spekith to me,
 Full litil thinkin ye upon my wo,
 That for your love I swelt there as I go.
 No wondir is although I swelt and swete,
 I mourne as doth the lamb aftir the rete.
 I wis lemman, I have soche love longing,
 That like a turtle trew is my mourning.
 I may not ere no more than doth a Maid.
 Go fro the Window, go, Jack sole, she saide;
 As help me God, and also swete Seint Jame,
 I love anothir, els I were to blame,
 Wel bet than The, by Jesu, Absolon:
 Go forth thy wey, or I woll cast a stone,
 And let me slepe, a twentie devil way.
 Alas! q'ð Absolon, and welaway!
 That true love was evir so ill besett;
 Than kisse me since that it may be no bett,
 For Jesus love, and for the love of me;
 Wilt thou then go thy way therewith, q'ð she?
 Yes certis, Lemman, q'ð this Absolon.
 Make The redy, q'ð she, I come anon.
 And unto Nicholas she seide still,
 Now pece, and thou shalt laugh anon thy fill.

This

This Absolon doune sett him on his knees,
And seide, I am a Lord at all degrees,
For aftir this I hope there comith more.
Lennman thy grace, and swete bird thy nore.
The window she undoth, and that in haste,
Have do, qð she, come off, and spede The fast, 620
Left any of our neighbours The espie.

This Absolon gau wipe his mouth full drie:
Derk was the night as any pitch or cole,
And at the window she put out her hole;
And Absolon spedde neither bett ne wers,
But with his mouth he kist her nakid Ers,
Full favorly; as he was ware of this
Abak he stert, and thought it was amis:
For well he wist, a woman had no berde,
He felt a thing all rough and long yhered, 630
And seide, fy alas! what have I do?
Te he qð she, and clapt the window to.
And Absolon goth forth a fory paas.
A berde, a berde, seide Hende Nicholas,
By Godd'is Corpus this goth faire and well.
This Absolon yherde it every dell,
And on his lipp he gan for angir bite,
And to himself he seide, I shall The quite.
Who rubbith now, who frottith now his lips,
With dust, with sond, with straw, with cloth, with chips,
But Absolon? that faith full oft alas!
My Soule betake I unto Sathanas,
But me were levir than this tounne, qð he,
Of this despight awrekin for to be.
Alas! qð he, alas! I ne had bleint;
His hottè love is cold, and all yqueint:
For fro the time that he had kist her Ers,
Of Paramouris he sett not a kers,
For he was helid of his Maladye,
Full oftè Paramoures he gan defye, 650
And wepe as doth a child, that is ybete.
A softè pace he went ovir the strete,
Unto a Smith, Men clepin Dan Gerveys,
That in his forge smythieth plough harnecs,
He sharpith shares and culteres bysily.
This Absolon knokith all esily,
And seide undo, Gerveys, and that anon;
What who are'ow? It am I Absolon.
What Absolon? for Christ'is swete tre,
Why rise ye so rath? ey benedicite!
What cylith you, some gay gerl, God it wote,
Hath broughtin you thus on the Meritote,
By Seint Neores, ye wote what I mene.
This Absolon ne raught not of a bene
Of all his play, no word again he gaffe,
He haddè much more tow on his distaffe,
Than Gerveys knew; and seide, frend so dere,
The hottè Culter in the chimeney here
As lene it me, I have therewith to done:
And I woll bring it The againe full sone.
Gerveys answerid, certis were it Gold,
Or in a pokè noblis al untold,
Thou shuldist it have, as I am trew Smyth;
Eye Christ'is fote, what woll ye don therewith?
Thereof, qð Absolon, be as be may,
I shall well tellin The to morrow day:
And caught the Culter by the coldè stele.
Full soft out at the dorè gan he stele,
And went unto the Carpenter'is wall;
He coughid first, and knokid therewithall 680

Upon the window right as he did ere;
This Alifon answerid, who is there,
That knokith so? I warrant it a thefe;
Why nay, qð he, God wor, my swete lefe,
I am thine Absolon, thine own derling,
Of Gold, qð he, I have The brought a ring,
My Mother gave it me, so God me save,
Full fine it is, and thereto well ygrave;
This woll I givin The, if thou me kist.

This Nicholas was risin for to pifs, 690
And thought he wulde amending all the jape,
He shuldè kist his Ers, ere that he scape:
And up the window did he hastily,
And out his Ers he put full privily,
Ovir the buttok to the hanchè bone.
And therewith spake this Clark, this Absolon,
Speke swete bridde, I n'ote wher that thou art.
This Nicholas anon let fle a fart,
As grete as it had ben a thondir dent,
That with the stroke he was nye yblent: 700
And he was redy with his iron hote,
And Hende Nicholas in the Ers he smote.
Of goeth the skinne a hondisbrede about,
The hottè Culter brennid so his tout,
That for the smerte he wenid for to dye,
As he were wode for wo he gan to crye,
Help, watir, watir, help for Godd'is herr.

This Carpentere out of his slombir stert,
And herde one crie Watir, as he were wode,
And thought alas! now comith Noës flode; 710
And set him up withoutin wordis mo,
And with an ax he smote the corde atwo,
And doune goth all, he found neither to sell
Nor brede, nor ale, 'tyll he come to the Sell,
Upon the flore, and there aswoun he lay.

Up stert than Alifon and Nicholay, 650
And cryid out an harrow in the strete,
The neighbouris allè, both finall and grete,
In ronnc for to gawrin on this man,
That in a swounè lay both pale and wan, 720
For with that fall he brostin hath his arme,
But stondin he must unto his own harme.
For whan he spake, he was yborn adoune
With Hende Nicholas, and Alifon.
They toldin every man that he was wode,
He was aghastè so of Noës flode,
Through fantasy, that of his Vanity
He hadde him gettin kneding tubbis thre,
And hadde them hongid in the rose above,
And that he prayid them for Godd'is love 730
To sittin in the rose par Cumpany.

The folk gan laughin at his fantasy,
And in the rose they kykin and they gape,
And turnid all his harmis into jape.
For whatsoe're this Carpentere answerde,
It was for nought, no man his reson herde.
With othis grete he was so sworne adoune,
That he was holdin wode in all the tounne.
For evèriche Clerk anon held with other,
They seide, the mann is wode, my leve brother, 740
And every wight gan laughin at this strife.
Thus swivid was the Carpenter'is Wife
For all his keping and his jelousie.
And Absolon hath kist her nethir eye,
And Nicholas is scaldid in the tout;
The Tale is done, and God save all the rout.

The End of the MILLER's TALE. III. Followeth the REVE's TALE.

III. The REVE's PROLOGUE.

WHAN folk had laughid at this nice
 caas
 Of Absolon and Hendè Nicholas
 Divers folk hereof diversly they seide,
 But for the more part they laughin and pley'd :
 Ne at this Tale I saw no man him greve,
 But it werin only Oswold the Reve:
 Because he was of Carpenter's craft,
 A littil ire in his hert it laft.
 He gan to grutch, and blamin it a lite,
 Sothly, qð he, full well couth I The quite,
 With blering of a proude Miller's eye,
 If that me list to speke of ribandrie.
 But I am olde, me lust not play for age,
 Grafs time is done, my foddir is forage.
 This whited topp writith mine oldè yeres,
 Myn hert is also mouldid as my heres,
 But if I fare as doth an opin-ers,
 That ilke fruit is evir lengir the wers,
 Tyll it be rott in Mullok or in Stre.
 We oldè men I drede so farin we,
 Tyll we ben rottin can we not be ripe:
 We hoppin alwey while the world woll pipe.
 For in our will there stikith ay a Naile,
 To have a horie hede, and a grene taile,
 As hath a leke, for though our myght be gonn,
 Our will desirith follie evr' in one.
 For when we may not done, than woll we speke,
 Yet in our ashin old is fire yreke.
 Four gledis han we, which I shall devise,
 Avaunting, lying, angir, covetise,
 And these four sparklis longin unto elde,
 Our olde limmis now well ben unweld,

But will ne shall not failin, that is sothe;
 And yet have I alweie a Colt's tothe,
 As many'a yere as it is passid henn,
 Sith that my tap of life began to renne.
 For sikirly whan I was borne, anon
 Dethe drew the tap of life, and let it gon,
 And evir sith hath so the tap yronne,
 Till that almost all emptic is the tonne,
 The streme of life now droppith on the chimb,
 The sely tongue may evil ring and chime,
 Of wretchidnesse, that passid is full yore,
 With oldè folk save dotage is no more.
 Whan that our Host hade herde this Sermoning,
 He gan to speke as Lordly as a King,
 And seide, what amountith al this witt?
 760 What shall we speke al day of holy writt?
 The Devil I think made a Reve to preche,
 Or a Souter, a Shipman, or a Leche.
 Say forth thy tale, and tary not the time:
 Lo Depford! and it is half wey to prime;
 Lo Greenwich! that many a shrew is in;
 It were hyc time thy Tale for to begin. 800
 Now, Sirs, then qð this Oswoldè the Reve,
 I pray you allè, that ye nought you greve,
 That I answeere, and somedell sett his houfe,
 For lesfull it is force with force to shoufe.
 770 This dronkin Millere hath ytold us here,
 How that begylid was a Carpenter,
 Peradventure in scorn, for I am one,
 And by your leve I shall him quite anone.
 Right in his Churl's termis woll I speke,
 I pray to God his neck more he to breke,
 He can well in myne eyin sene a stalk,
 810 But in his own he can nought sene a balk.

Thus endeth the PROLOGUE.

The

The REVE's TALE.

DENYSE SIMKIN the Miller of Trompington, deceiveth two Clarkes of Soller's-Hall in Cambridge, in stealing their Corn; But they so manage their Matters, that they revenge the Wrong to the full. This Tale is imitated from Boccace, Novell the 6th, Day the 9th. — This you may pass over if you please.

THE Trompington, not ferrè fro Cantabrigge,
There goth a broke, and ovir that a brigge,
Upon the whichè broke there stant a
Mell,

And this is very f the as I you tell.
A Miller was there dwelling many' a day,
As any peacock he was proud and gay.
Pipin he couth, and ffishin, and nets bete,
And cuppis turn, and wraffle well and shete. 820
Ay by his belt he bare a long pavade,
And of a sverde ful trenchaunt was the blade.
A joly popere bare he in his pouch,
There n'as no man for peril durst him ~~he~~ touch,
A Sheffield thwritid bare he in his hofe,
Round was his face, and camised was his nose.
As pilid as an Apè was his skull,
He was a Markit beter at the full.
There was no wight, that durst hand on him legge,
If that he swore he shulde it sore abegge. 830
A thefe he was forsothe of Corne and Mele,
And that a flye, as usant for to stete.
His name was hotin Deynouse Simkin,
A wife he had comin of nobil kin:
The Parson of the Town her fathir was,
With her he gaff full many' a pann of brafs,
For that Simkin shuld in his blode allie,
She was yfostrid in a Nonnerie:
For Simkin wulde no wife as he saide,
But she were well ynorished, and a Maide, 840
To savin his Estate of Yomanry.
And she was proude, and pert as is a Pie;
A full fayre sight was it to se them two;
On hollidayes befor her wulde he go,
With his tippit woundin about his hede,
And she came afir in a gite of rede,
And Simkin haddè hosin of the same.
There durstè no wight clepin her but Dame;
Was none so hardy, that went by the way,
That with her onys durst to rage or play, 850
But if he woldè be flaine of Simkin,
With Pavade, or with knife, or bodèkin.
For jelous folk ben per'lous evirmo,
Algate they wolde their wivis wendin so.
And eke for she was somedele smoterlich,
She was as digne as watir in a diche,
And as full of hokir, and of bismare,
Her thoughtè that a Ladie shuld her spare,
What for her kinrede, and her nortirly,
That she had lernid in the Nonnery. 860
A doughtir haddè they betwixt them two,
Of twentie yere, withoutin any mo,
Saafing a child, that was of half yere age,
In cradle' it lay, and was a propir page.
This wenchè thik and well ygrowin was,
With Camise nose, and eyin gray as glas:
With bottokes brode, and brestis round and hic,
But right faire was her heire, I woll not lie.
The Parson of the towne, for she was faire,
In purpose was to makin her his heir, 870
Both of his Cattle', and of his Mesuage,
And straunge he made it of her Mariage:

His purpose was for to bestow her hic,
Into some worthie blode of Ancestrie,
For holie Chirch'is gode mote ben dispended
On holie Chirch'is blode that is descended.
Therefore he wolde his holie blode honour,
Though that he holie Chirch shuldè devour.
Grete sokin hath this Millere out of dout 880
With Whete and Malt of al the land about.
And namily there was a grete College,
Men clepith the Solere Hall of Cambrige,
There was their Whete and eke their Malt yground;
And on a day it happid in a stound
Sike lay the Manciple' of a Malady,
Men wendin wisly that he shuldè die;
For which this Millere stele both Mele and Corn
An hundrid time more than he did befor.
For there before he stete but curtislic,
But now he was a thefe outrageouslic; 890
For whiche the Wardin chidde, and madè fare,
But thereof set the Millere not a tare,
He crakid, boftid, swore it was not so.
Then there weren there yonge pore Scholeris two,
That dweltin in the Hall, of which I say,
Testife they were, and lustie for to play:
And only for their mirth and revilyr,
Upon the Wardin bysily they cry
To geve them leve but for a littil stound
To gon to Mill, to se their Corn ygrownd: 900
And hardily they durstin lay their neck
The Millere sholde not stete them half a pek
Of Corn by sleight, ne them by forcè reve.
And at the last the Wardin gafe them leve:
John hight that one, and Alein hight that other,
Of oo toune were they both, that hightè Strother,
Fer in the North, I cannot tellin where.
This Alein makith redie all his gere,
And on a horse the Sak he cast anon.
Forth goth Alein the Clark, and also John, 910
With gode sverdis and bokleres by their side.
850 John knew the weie, him nedith not a guide;
And at the Mill the Sak adoun he layth;
Alein spoke first, Al hail Simkin in faith,
How farith thy faire doughtir, and thy wife?
Alein, welcome, q's Simkin by my life,
And John also: how now, what do ye here?
By God, Simkin, q's John, nede has no pere;
Him behoves serve himself that has no Swaine,
Or els he is a sole, as Clerk'is saine. 920
Our Manciple I hope he will be dede,
Swa werkis ay the wangis in his hede,
And therefore is I come and eke Alein,
To grind our Corn, and bere it home ageyn:
We pray you spede us home in that ye may.
It shall be don, q's Simkin, by my fay:
What will you done, while that it is in honde?
By God right by the hopper woll I stonde
Q's John, and se how-gates the Corn goth in,
Yct saw I nevir by my fa'dir kinn 930
How that the hoppir waggith to and fra;
Alein answerid, Johan, wilt thou sa?
Then woll I stonde benethè, by my Croune,
And se how-gates the Mele fallith adoun,
Into

Into the trough, that shall be my disport:
 Q^d John, in fay, I may ben of your sort,
 I is as ill a Millere as is ye.

This Millere smylith at their nycite,
 And thought, Al this n'is done but for a wile,
 They wenin that no Man mōwē them begyle; 940
 But by my thrift yet shall I blere their eye,
 For all their sleight in their philosophy,
 The mōre queint Clerkis that themselves they make,
 The mōre woll I stele whan I gin to take:
 Insted of flour yet woll I give them brann,
 The grettist Clerkes be not the wisist Men,
 As whilome to the Wolfe thus spake the Marc.
 Of all their Art ne count I nought a tare.
 Out at the dore he goth full privily,
 Whan that he saw his timē, subtilly 950
 He lokith up and down, till he hath found
 The Clerkis horse, there as he stode ybound,
 Behind the Mill; undir a levisell:
 And to the horse he goth him faire and well,
 He slippith of the bridil right anon.
 And whan the horse was loos, he ginnith gon
 Toward the fenn, thereas wild Maris rinn,
 And forth, with whche, thorough thik and thinn,
 This Millere goth again, no word he saide,
 But doth his note, and with these Clerkis plaide, 960
 Till that their Coin was faire and well yground;
 And whan the Mele was sakkid, and ybound,
 This John goth out and synt his horse away,
 And gan to crie harrow and welaway!
 Our horse is lost, Alein, for Godd's benes,
 Step on thy fete, Man, come forth all atenes:
 Alas! our Wardin hath his palfry lorn.

This Aleine all forgate both Mele and Corn,
 All was out of his mind of husbandry,
 What? whilk weye is he gon? he gan to crie. 970
 The wife came leping inward at a renn,
 She seide, alas! your horse goth to the fenn,
 With wildē Maris, as fast as he may go,
 Unthank come on his hand, that bound him so,
 And he that betir sholde have knit the rein;
 Alas! q^d John, Aleine, for Crist's peine
 Lay down thy swerde, and I woll myne alswa,
 I is full swift, God wote, as is a Raa:
 By Godd's Saul, he shall not scape us both.
 Why ne haddest thou put the Caple' in the lath? 980
 Ill heile, Alein, by God thou is a fonne.

These sely Clerkis han full fast yronne
 Toward the Fenn; both Alein, and eke John:
 And whan the Millere saw that they were gon,
 He half a bushell of their flour hath take,
 And bad his wife done knede it in a Cake.
 He seide, I trow the Clerkis were afferde;
 Yet can a Millere make a Clerk's berde,
 For all their Art, yet let them gon their weye,
 Lo where they gon! ye let the children pleye: 990
 They get him not so lightly by my crown.

These sely Clerkis rennin up and doune,
 With kepe, kepe, stand, stand, jolla, wardaricr,
 Go whistle thou, and I woll kepe him here.

But shortly, till it was very night
 They couth not, though they diddin all their might,
 Their Capell catch, he ran away so fast,
 Till in a ditch they caught him at the last.

Wery and wett, as bestis in the reine,
 Cometh sely John, and with him cometh Aleine. 1000
 Alas q^d John the day that I was born!
 Now are we driven till hethin and to scorn:
 Our Corn is stole, Men woll us folis call,
 Both the Wardin, and eke our Felowes all,
 And namily the Millere, welaway!

Thus plainith John, as he goth by the way
 Toward the Mill, and bayard in his hond;
 The Millere sitting by the fire he fond,

For it was night, and further might they not;
 But for the love of God they him besought 1010
 Of herborough and ese, as for their penny;

The Millere seide agen, if there be any,
 Soche as it is, yet shall ye have your part:
 My house is strait, but ye have lern'd by Art,
 Ye can by Argumentis make a place
 A mile brode, of but twenty fore of space.
 Let se now if this place may you suffice,
 Or make more rome with speche, as is your gife.
 Now Simkin, seid this John, by Seint Cuthberde,
 Ay is thou mery, that is faire answerde. 1020
 I have herde say, men shuld take of twa thinges
 Swilk as he findis, or swilk as he brings.
 But specially I pray The, hostē dere,
 950 Get us some mete and drink, and make us chere,
 And we will pay The trewly at the full:
 With emptie hand men may not hawkis tull,
 Lo here our Silvir redy for to spend!

The Millere to the towne his daughtir send
 For ale and brede, and rostit them a gose,
 And bound their horse he shuld no more get lose. 1030
 And in his own chambir he made a bedd
 With shetis, and with shalons faire yspredd,
 Not from his ownē bedd ten fote or twelve:
 His doughtir had a bedd al by her selve
 Right in the same chambir, full fast them by.
 It mightē ben no bettr, and the cause why,
 There was no romir herbrough in the place.
 They sounpin, and they spekin of solas,
 And dronkin evir stronge Ale at the best.
 Aboutin midnight wentē they to rest. 1040

Well hath this Millere vernishid his hede,
 Full pale he was, for dronkin, and nought redde,
 He galpith, and he spekith through the Nose,
 As he were in the quakk, or in the pose.

To bedde he goth, and with him goth his wife,
 As any jay she light was and jolife,
 So was her jolic whistle well ywert.
 The cradil at her bedd's fete was sett
 Torockin, and to give the child to souk;
 And whan that dronkin was al in the Cruk, 1050
 To beddē went the doughtir right anon,
 To bedde goth Alein, and goth also John,
 There n'as no more, them nedid now no dwale,
 This Millere hath so wisely bibbid Ale,
 That as a horse he snortith in his slepe,
 Ne of his taile behind he toke no kepe.
 His wife bare to him a burdon full strong,
 Men mightin here them routing a furlong:
 The wenche routith eke par Company.

Alein the Clerk, that herde this Melodie, 1060
 He pokid Jolin, and seide stepist thou?
 Herdist thou evir swilk a sang er now?

Lo! swilk a complyn is betwixt them all,
 A wildē fire mote on their bodies fall!
 Who herk'nid evir swilk a ferly thing,
 Ye they shull have the floure of ill ending.
 All this lang night there tidith me no rest,
 But yet na force all shall be for the best.
 For, John, seide he, as evir mote I thrive,
 If that I may, yon wenche woll I swive. 1070

Some esement hath law yshapin us,
 For, John, there is a law, that sayith thus,
 That if a Man in one point ben agreved,
 That in anothir he shall be relerved.
 Our Corn is stolln, sothely, it is no nay,
 And we have had an evil fit to day.
 And since I shall have none amendement
 Again my loss, I woll have myn esement:
 By Godd's Saul, it shall none othir be.
 This John answerde, Alein, avise The,
 The Millere is a per'lous Man, he seide,
 And if that he out of his slepe abreide,

He mighte don us bath a Villony ;
 Alein answerde, I count him nought a flie.
 And up he rist, and by the wenche he crept,
 This wenche lay upright, and full fast she slept,
 Till he so nye was, er she might espie,
 That it had ben to late for her to erie.
 And shortly for to sey, they were at one.
 Now pley, Alein, for I woll speke of John.

1090 This John lay stille a furlong wey or two,
 And to himself he makith routh and wo ;
 Alas! qð he, this is a wikid Jape,
 Now may I say, that I is but an Ape ;
 Yet hath my felaw somewhat for his harme,
 He hath the Millere's doughtir in his arme,
 He auntrith him, and hath his nedis spedde,
 And I lie as a draffe sak in my bedde:
 And when this jape is told anothir day,
 I shall be hold a daffe, or a Cokney: 1100
 I woll arise, and auntir me perfay,
Unhardy is unfely, thus Men say.
 And up he rose, and softly he went
 Unto the cradyl, and in his arme it hent,
 And bare it softly to his bedd'is fete.
 Sone aftir that the wife her routing lete,
 And gan awake, and went her out to pifs,
 And came again, and gan the Cradyl miss.
 And gropid here and there, but she fond none;
 Alas! qð she, I had almost misgone, 1110
 I had almost gone to the Clark's bedde,
 Eye benedicite, than had I soule yspedde.
 And forth she goth till she the Cradyl fond,
 She grophith alwey furthir with her honde,
 And found the bedde, and thought on nought but gode,
 Bicause that the Cradyl by it stode,
 And ne wist where she was, for it was derk,
 But faire and wele she crept in by the Clerk,
 And lyith stille, and wou'd have caught a slepe;
 Within a while this John the Clerk uplepe, 1120
 And on this gode wife he layith full fore,
 So mery' a fitt ne had she nought full yore:
 He prikid hard and depe, as he were mad.
 This jollie life hath these two Clerkis lad,
 Tyll that the thridè Cok began to sing.
 Alein waxt wery in the day dawning,
 For he had swonkin all the longe night,
 And seide, farewell, Malin, my swete wight,
 The day is come, I may no lengir bide,
 But evirme, wherso I go or ride, 1130
 I am thine owne Clerk, so have I hele.

Now, dere Lemman, qð she, go and farewele,
 But er thou go, one thing I woll The tell,
 Whan that thou wendist homeward by the Mell,
 Right at the Entre of the dore behind,
 Thou shalt a Cake of half a bushill find,
 That was ymakid right of thine owne Mele,
 Which I did help my fadir for to stele.
 And, my gode Lemman, God The save and kepe,
 And with that word she gan almost to wepe. 1140

Alein uprist, and thought er that it dawe,
 He wolde go crepin in by his felaw,
 And fond the Cradyl with his hond anon,
 By God, thought he, all wrong have I misgone,
 My hede is totty of my swink this night,
 That makith me, that I go nought aright:
 I wote by the Cradyl I have misgo,
 Here lyeth the Millere, and his wife also.
 And forth he goth on twenty devil wey,

Unto the bedde, there as the Millere lay. 1150
 Him wend have cropin by his felaw John,
 And by the Millere he crept in anon,
 And caught him by the nek, and soft he spake,
 And seide, thou John, thou Swin'is hede, awake,
 For Christ'is Soule, and here a nobil game.

For by that Lord, that callid is St. Jame,
 As I have thryis in this shorte night,
 Swivid the Miller's doughtir bolt upright:
 Whilft thou hast as a Coward layn aghast. 1160

Ye, fals harlot, then qð the Millere, halt?
 A falsè Traytor, a falsè Clerk, qð he,
 Thou shalt be dede by Godd'is dignity,
 Who durstè ben so bold to disparage
 My doughtir, that is come of soche linage.
 And by the throte boll he caught Aleine,
 And he him hent dispitously againe,

1100 And on the nose he smote him with his fist,
 Down ran the bloody streme upon his brest,
 And in the flore with Mouth and Nose to broke,
 They wallowen, as doth piggis in a poke, 1170
 And up they gon, and doune ageine anon,
 Till that the Millere spurnid on a stone
 And doune he fell bakward upon his wisc,
 That wist nothing of all this nycè strife,
 For she was fall allepe a litil wight,

With John the Clerk, that wakid had al night.
 And with the fall out of her slepe she braide,
 Help, holy Crofs of Broholmè, she seide;
 In Mamus tuas, Lord to The I call,
 Awake, Simonde, the fende is on me fall. 1180
 My hert is brokin, help, I na'm but dede,
 There lith one up my womb, one up my hedde.
 Help, Simkin, for these fals Clerkis do fight.

This John stert up as fast as er he might,
 And graspid by the wallis to and fro,
 To find a staff, and she stert up also,
 And knew the Estris bett than did this John,
 And by the wall she fond a staff anon,
 And saw a litil shimiring of light, 1190
 For at an hole in shone the Monè bright,
 And by that light she saw them bothè two,
 But sikirly she n'ist not who was who,
 But as she saw a white thing in her eye;

And whan she gan this white thing espie,
 She wend the Clerk had wered a Voliper,
 And with the staff she drew ay ner and ner,
 And wend have hit this Alein attè full,
 And smote the Millere on the pillid Skull,
 That doune he goth, and cryed harrow I dye;
 These Clerkis betè him wele, and let him lye, 1200
 And rayith them, and toke their horse anon,
 And eke their Mele, and on their weic they gon:
 And at the Mill-dore eke they toke ther Cake,
 Of half a bushill floure, full well ybake.

Thus is the proud Millere right well ybete,
 And hath ylost the grinding of the Whete,
 And payid for the Soupir every dele,
 Of Aleine, and of John, that betè him wele.
 His wife is swivid, and his doughtir als,
 Lo soche it is a Millere to be fals! 1210
 And therefore this proverbe is saw full sothe,
Him dare not wenin wele that evil doth:
A Guilor shall himself begylid be.

And God, that sittith hye in Majesty,
 Save al this Cumpany both grete and sinale:
 Thus have I quitt the Millere in my Tale.

Thus endeth the REVE's TALE.

The COOKE's PROLOGUE.

THE Coke of London, while that the Reve spake,
For joy he lough, and claw'd him on the bak :

Aha, quoth he, for Christ's passion,
This Miller hath a sharp conclusion
Upon this argument of herbigage;
Well seide Solomon in his Language,
Ne bring not ev'ry man into thyn hous:
For herbouring by night is perillouse;
Wele ought a man avisid for to be,
Whom that he brought into his privite.
I pray to God yeve me sorow and care,
If evir sithin I hight Hodge of Ware
Herde I a Millere bettir set a werke,
He had a jape of malice in the derke.
But God forbiddè that we stintin here,
And therefore if that ye vouchafe to here
A Tale of me, that am but a pore man,
I wol you tellin, as well as I can
A litil jape, that fell in our Citè.

1220

1230

Our hostè seid, Rogger, I graunt it The:
Now tell on, Rogger, loke that it be gode.
Full many' a pastie hast thou lettin blode;
And many' a jack of Dovyrr hast thou sold,
That hath ben twicè hot and twicè cold.
Of many' a Pilgrim hast thou Christ's curse,
For of thy persly yet fare they the worse,
That they have etin in thy stobil goos,
For in thy shop is many a flie loos.

1240

Now tell on, gentyl Rogger by thy name,
But yet, I pray The be not wrath for game;
A man may so full sothe in game and play.

Thou saist full sothe, qð Rogger, by my fay,
But sothe play quade play; as the Fleming saith,
And therefore, Herric Bailie, by thy feith,
Be thou not wroth, cr' we departin here,
Though that my Tale ben of an Hostilere.
But nethèless, I wol not tell it yett,
But er' we part, I wis, thou shalt bequit:
And therewithall he lough, and made chere,
And seid his Tale, as ye shull astir here.

1250

IV. The COKE's TALE.

The Description of an unthrifty Prentice, given to Dice, Women and Wine, wasting thereby his Master's Goods, and purchasing to himself Newgate. The most part of this Tale is lost, or never finished by the Author.

A Prentice whilom dwelt in our Citè,
And of the craft of Vitailers was he:
Galiard he was, as Goldfinch in a shaw,
Broun as a beri, a propre short felaw, 1260
With lokkis blake, and kempt full fetouslie;
Dauncin he couth ful wele and jolilie:
And he was callid Perkin Revellour.
He was as full of Love and Paramour,
As is the Hive full of the hony swete.
Well was the wench, that with him mightè mete.
At every Bridale wold he sing and hop,
He lovid bet the Taverns than the Shop.
For whan that any Riding was in Chepe,
Out of the shoppè thithir wold he lepe, 1270
Till that he had of all the sighte ysene,
For sikirly, he wold not come agen,
But gathir him a meinie of his sort,
To hop and sing, and makè moch disport.
And there they fettè Stevin for to mete
To playin at the dice in such a strete,
For in the Citè n'as there no prentise
That fairer couth castin a pair of dice
Than Perkin couth, and thereto he was fre
Of his dispence, in place of privitie, 1280
That found his master well in his chafare,
For oft timis he fond his box full bare.
For sikirly a Prentise Revellour
That hauntith dice, riot, or Paramour,
His mastir shall it in his shoppe abie;

Al have he no part of the Minstralcie.
For theft and roiot ben convertible,
Al can he play on getron or rebible,
Revill and trouth as in a low degre
Thei ben ful wroth all day, as men may se. 1290
This joly Printice with his mastre' abode
Till he were nigh out of his printishode,
Al were he snibbid both erli and late,
And sumetime led with revill to Newgate.
But at the last his Master him bethought
Upon a day when he his paper sought
Of a proverbe that sayith this same word,
Wele bett is rotten appyl out of horde
Than that it shoud rottin all the renmaunt.
So fareth it by a riotous Servaunt. 1300
It is a moch less harm to let him pass,
Than he shend all the servaunts in the place;
Therefore his master gave him acquittance,
And bade him go with sorow and mischaunce.
And thus this jolly Prentice had his leve,
Now let him riot all the night, or leve.
And for there is no Thers without a Louke,
That helpith him to wastin and to souke
Of that he bribè can, or borow may. 1310
Anon he sent his bed and his array
Unto a compere of his ownè sort,
That lovid dice, and revill and disport,
And had a wise, that held for countinaunce
A shop, but swifid for her sustinaunce.

This is all of the COOKE's TALE as yet found.

In some of the MSS is the History of Gamelyn under the Title of the Cooke's Tale; but it is not the Cooke's Tale that Lidgate saw, for that was, as he says, of Ribaldrie, as the abovefaid Tale favours of, and which in the MSS is joined to this by these Verses.

But hercof, Siris, I woll pass as now,
And of yong Gamelyn I wol tell you. Q^x the Cook.

V. COKE's

So many of the MSS have this Tale, that I can hardly think it could be unknown to the former Editors of this Poet's Works. Nor can I think of a Reason why they neglected to publish it. Possibly they met only with those MSS that had not this Tale in them, and contented themselves with the Number of Tales they found in those MSS. If they had any of those MSS in which it is, I cannot give a Reason why they did not give it a Place amongst the rest, unless they doubted of its being genuine. But because I find it in so many MSS, I have no doubt of it, and therefore make it publick, and call it the Fifth Tale. In all the MSS it is called the Cooke's Tale, and therefore I call it so in like manner: But had I found it without an Inscription, and had been left to my Fancy to have bestow'd it on which of the Pilgrims I had pleas'd, I should certainly have adjudg'd it to the Squire's Yeoman; who tho as minutely describ'd by Chaucer, and characteriz'd in the third Place, yet I find no Tale of his in any of the MSS. And because I think there is not any one that would fit him so well as this, I have ventur'd to place his Picture before this Tale, tho' I leave the Cook in Possession of the Title.

V. COKE'S TALE of Gamelyn.

NOW lithin, and listinith, and
Herkinith you aright,
And ye shullin here me tell
You of a doughti Knight.
Sir Johan of Boundis clepid was
This ilke Knight's name,
Wele coudin he of noriture,
And eke of mochil game.
Thre sonnys this Knight had, and with
His bodi he them wan,

The Eldist was a mochè shrew,
And sonè he began.
His brotherin lov'd thir Faðir,
And of him were agast;
Th' Eldist deserv'd his Faðir's curse,
And had it at the last.
The godè Knighte his faðir did
Ylive so long and yore,
That Deth was comin him unto,
And handlid him full sore.

10

20
The

The godè Knight ycarid moch,
Sore fike there as he lay,
How that his childerin shuldè
Lyvin after his day.
He haddè ben widè where, but
Noon Husbondè he was,
Allè the londè, which that he had,
It was verray purchas.
And fayn he woldè that it were
Dressid among them all,
That everich of them had his part
As it mightè befall.
Tho sent he into the Contrè
Aftir wisè Knightis,
To helpin dele his Londis, and
Dressin them to rightis.
He sent them word by letteris
That they shuld hyè blyve;
If that they wol spekin with him
While that he was on live.
Sone as those Knightis herdin how
Thus sekè that he lay,
Tho haddè they no mannir rest
Nothir by night nor day,
Tyll that they comin unto him,
There as he layd him still
Upon his deth's bedde, for to Abidin Godd's will.
Thus then saidin the godè Knight,
Sekè there as he lay,
Lordis, I warnè you forsothe,
Withoutin any nay,
I may no lengir livin here
In this sorowful stound,
For thorough Godd's will supreme
Dethe drawith me to ground.
There ne was no one of them alle
That herdin him aright,
That thei ne haddè mochil routh
Upon that ilkè Knight:
And seidè, Sir, for Godd's love,
Ne dismayin you nought,
God may don botè of bale
Which that is now ywrought.
Then answerid them the gode Knight,
Sikè there as he lay,
Botè of balè God may send,
I wote it is no nay.
But I besekè you Knightis
Al for the love of me,
Goith and dressith my Londis,
Among my sonis thre.
And frendis, for the love of God,
Delith them nat amys,
And forgettith not Gamelyn,
My yongè Sone that is.
Takith hedè unto that one
As well as to that other,
Seldome ye sein any heir
That helpe woll his brother.
Tho lettin they the Knighte liggin
Which that was not in hele,
And in thei wentin to counsaile
His londis for to dele.
For to delin them all to oon
That was ther only thought,
And for that Gamelyn yongist was,
He shuldè havin nought,
Al the londè which that there was
They deltin it in two,
And letè Gamelyn the yongè
Withoutin londè go.
And everich of them seidin
Till othir fulle loude,

His bretherin mowe give him londè
Whan that he godis koude.
Whan they had delid the londis
Aftir their owne will,
Tho camin they unto the Knight
There as he lay full still,
And toldin unto him anon
How that they hadd ywrought,
And the Knight there as he seke lay
Ylikid it right nought.
30 Then seidè the Knight angrily,
I sware by Seint Martyn,
For all that which ye have ydone,
Yet is the londè myn.
For Godd's love, my neighbouris,
Standith ye allè still,
And I woll delin my londè
Aftir myn owne will.
Johan myn eldist Sone shall 40 Y have plowis five,
That was my fader's heritage
While that he was on live;
And my middillist Sone shall
Five plowis have of lond,
That I holpe for to gettin
With myn own righte hond:
And all myn othir purchasis
Of landis and of Ledes,
That I bequethe Gamelyn,
50 And allè my gode Stedes.
And I besekè you, gode Men,
That lawis con of lond,
For Gamelyn's lovè that
Thus my bequest may stonde.
Thus delid hath the gode Knightè
His londè be his dai,
Right upon his deth's bedde
Sore fike there as he lay:
And sonè aftirwerdis he 60 Lay as a stonè still,
And dyid whan the tyme came,
As it was Crist's will.
Anon aftir that he was dede,
And undir grafs ygrave,
Tho sone the eldir brothir
Begylid the yongè knave:
He tokin into his hondis
140 His londis and his lede,
And allo Gamelyn himself
To clothin and to fede.
70 He clothid him and fedde him
Evil and eke wroth,
And letin his londis for sare
And als his housis both;
His parkis eke, and his woodis,
And didde nothyng wel,
150 And sithin he it aboughte
On his own feire fell.
So longè tyme was Gamelyn
80 In his brother's hall,
For the strengist of gode will
They doudin him all.
There ne was none wight in that place
Nothir yongè ne okie,
That wolde wrathin Gamelyn,
Were he never so bold.
160 Gamelyn stode upon a day
In his brother's yerde,
And he began with his londè
90 To handlin his berde.
He thoughtin upon his londis,
That layn long untawe,
And also of his feire Ovis,
That doune were ydrave

His Parkis werin al brokin,
 And al his Deir reved,
 Of alle his gode Stedis noon
 Was there with him beleved;
 His housis werein unhelid
 And full evilly dight;
 Tho thought this yongè Gamelyn
 It wentè not aright.
 Aftir camè his brothir in
 Ywalkyng statelich thare,
 And seidè unto Gamelyn,
 What? is our metè yare?
 Tho Gamelyn ywrothid hym,
 And swore by Godd'is boke,
 Thou shalt y go bake luke thy self,
 I wol not be thy Coke.
 How? brothir Gamelyn, qð he,
 Thus answerist me thou?
 Thou spakist nevir soche a word
 Yet, as thou doist now.
 By my faith seide Gamelyn,
 Now me it thinkith nede,
 Of all the harmis that I have
 I nevir yit toke hede.
 My Parkis ben y brokin, and
 My Deir ben yrevèd,
 Of myn harnis, and my stedis
 Noght is there me beleved.
 Al that my faðir me bequethe
 Al goith now to shame,
 And therefore have thou Godd'is curse
 Brothir John by thy name.
 Than thus bespakin his brothir,
 That rapè was of vees,
 Stondith stillè, thou gadiling,
 And holdith right thy pees:
 Thou shaltè ben full faign to have
 Thy metè and thy wede,
 What spekist thou, thou Gadiling,
 Of lond, othir of lede?
 Then seidè to him Gamelyn
 The childè that was yinge,
 Christ'is Cursè mote he havin
 That clepith me Gadlyng:
 I am no wors gadlyng than The,
 Parde ne no wors wight,
 But born I was of a Lady,
 And gottin of a Knyght.
 Ne durst he not to Gamelyn
 Not oo sote ferthir go,
 But clepid to him his meinè,
 And seidè to them tho,
 Goith and berith wele this boy,
 And ravith him his wit,
 And let him lere anothir time
 To answerin me bett.
 Then seid the Chyld, yong Gamelyn,

 Christ'is cursè mote thou havin
 What? brother art thou myn,
 And if that I shall algatis
 Y betin be anon,
 Christ'is cursè mote thou havin,
 But that thou be that one.
 And right anon his brothir did
 In that his gretè hete
 Makin his meinè fett stavis,
 This Gamelyn to bete.
 Whan everich of them had a staff
 Into his hond nomin,
 Gamelyn was aware tho,
 He forsaugh them comin.
 Tho Gamelyn saugh them comin,
 He lokid ovir all.

And was warè of a pestil
 Stodè undir the wall.
 And Gamelyn was fully lighr,
 And thiðir gan he lepe,
 And droffe alle his brother's men
 Right sonè on an hepe.
 He lokid like a wild Lion,
 And laidin on gode wone.
 Tho whan his brothir seyè that,
 He begannè to gonne. 250
 He sleigh up untill a lofè,
 And shet the dorè fast.
 Thus Gamelyn with his pestil
 Madè them all agast.
 Somè for Gamelyn's love,
 And some for his envie,
 Allè withdrawin them to halves,
 Tho he began to pleie:
 What now? seide Gamelyn, brothir, 260
 Evil motè ye the:
 Wollè ye beginnin kontek,
 And than so sonè fle?
 Gamelyn fought his brothir tho
 Whithir he was yflowe,
 And saugh where that he lokid out
 At a folere windowe.
 Brothir tho seidè Gamelyn,
 Comith a litil nere,
 And I woll techin The a plaic 270
 Attè the bokillere.
 His brothir to hym answerid,
 And swore by Seint Richere,
 While the pestil is in thyn honde
 I woll comin no nere.
 Brothir, I woll makin The pece,
 I swere by Crist'is ore,
 Castith away the pestil tho,
 And wrathè The na more.
 I mot nedis, seide Gamelyn, 280
 Wrathè me at onys,
 For that thou woldist make thy Men
 To brekin my bonis.
 Ne had I haddin meyn and might
 In myn ownè twey armes,
 To have y pushin them fro me,
 They would have done me harmes.
 To Gamelyn tho seidin his
 Brothir, be thou not wrothe,
 For to sein The havin harme 290
 Me werin rightè lothe.
 I ne did it not, my brothir,
 But right for a foning,
 For to lokin if thou were strong,
 And art so very ying.
 Come adoun then to me, qð he,
 And grauntè me my bone,
 Of oo thing I woll askin The,
 And we shull saughtè sone.
 Adoun then camin his brothir,
 That fikill was and fell,
 And was swithè right fore aghast,
 Of that ilkè pestil.
 He seidè, brothir Gamelyn, 300
 Askè me now thy bone,
 And loke that you me blamè, but
 I grauntè it full sone.
 Tho seidin yongè Gamelyn,
 Brothir mynè, I wifs,
 And if we shullè ben at one, 310
 Thou must me grauntè this:
 Al that my faðir me bequethe,
 While that he was on live,
 Thou mustè do me it to have,
 If that we shull not strive. 320

That

That shalt thou have, Gamelyn,
I swere by Crist's ore,
Al that thy faðir The bequethe,
Though thou woldist have more.
Thy londè, that now lyith lie,
Full well it shall be sowe,
And thyn housis yraisid up,
That now ben layd full lowe.
Thus seide the Knight to Gamelyn,
But only with his Mouth,
And thoughtè but of falseness,
As he right welè couth.
The Knightè thoughtin on traifon,
But Gamelyn on noon,
And went, and kissid his brothir;
And then they were at oon.
Alas! for yongè Gamelyn,
Nothing at all he wist,
With swichè falsè traifon
His brothir hath him kist.
Lithinith, and lestinith, and
Holdith you stille your tonge,
And ye shall herin straunge talking
Of Gamelyn the yonge.
There happid to be there beside
Tryid a wraffling,
And therefore there was ysettin
A Ram, and als a ring.
And Gamelyn was in a will
To wendè thereunto,
For to previn his mighte, and se
What that he couthè do.
Now brothir myne, qð Gamelyn,
By holie Seint Richere,
Thou mustè nedis lene to night
Me a litil Coursere,
That is freshe to the sporis,
Upon him for to ride,
I mustin on an Errand go
A litil here beside.
Be God, seide his brothir tho,
Of Stedis in my stall
Goith and chesith The the best,
And sparith none of alle,
Of Stedis or of Courseris
That stondith 'hem beside,
And tellith me, my gode brothir,
Whithur thou wilt ride.
Herè besidis, brothir, is
Y cryid a Wraffling,
And therefore shallè ben y sett
A Ram, and als a ring.
Mochè worship it were sothly,
Brothir unto us all,
Might I the ram, and als the ring,
Bringin home to the Hall.
A Stede there was sadilid,
Smarth was it and eke flete,
Gamelyn diddin a peire of
Sporis fast on his fete.
He sat his fote in the stirrop,
The Stede he bestrode,
And towardis the wraffling
The yongè childè rode.
Tho Gamelyn the yongè was
Riddin out at the Gate,
The falsè Knight his own brothir
Lokkid it attir thate.
And he besoughtin Jesu Christ,
That is of Hevin King,
That he mightè brekin his nek
In that ilk wraffling.
Assone as Gamelyn cam ther,
The wraffling placè was,

He lightid down of the Stede,
And stod on the gras.
And ther he herd a Frankelyn
Weloway for to sing,
And began all bittirly
His handis for to wring.
Godè Man, seide Gamelyn,
Why makist thou this fare?
Is there no man that may you help
Out of this nicè care?
Alas! seide this Frankelyn,
That evir I was bore,
For tweic stalworthè Sonis
I wene I have forlore.
A Champion is in the place,
That has wroughtin me sorow,
For he hath slayn my too Sonis,
But if that God them borrow.
I woldè givin ten poundis,
Be Jesu Crist, and more,
With the nonis I fond a man,
To handilin him fore.
Godè Man seide Gamelyn,
Wilt thou this welè done,
Holdè my hors, while that my Man
Ydrawith of my shone.
And help my Man also to kepe
My clothis and my stede,
And I woll into the place gon,
And loke how I may spede.
By God, seide the Frankelyn,
It shall right so be don,
I woll my sifin be thy man,
To drawin of thy shone.
And wendè you into the place,
Swete Jesu Crist The spede,
And dredè noght of thy clothis,
Nor of thy godè Stede.
Barefote and ungert Gamelyn
Into the ringe came,
Allè that werin in the place
Hedin of him the name,
How he durstin aventure him
On him to don his might,
That was so doughti a Champion
In wraffling and in fight.
Upstertè tho the Champion
Full rapely right anon
Towardis yongè Gamelyn
He tho began to gon,
And seide who is thy faðir,
And who is eke thy Sire?
Forsothè thou art a gret sole,
For that thou camist hire.
Anon Gamelyn answerid
The stout Champion tho,
Thou knewist full wele my faðir
While that he couthè go:
Whilis that he was on livè,
I swere by Seint Martyn,
Sir John of Boundis was his name,
And I am Gamelyn.
Felawe, seide the Champion,
So evir more I thrive,
I knew right welè thy faðir,
While that he was on live;
And thy selfin, yongè Gamelyn;
I wil that thou it here,
Whilis thou wert a yongè boy,
A moche shrew thou were.
Then seide yongè Gamelyn,
And swore bi Crist's ore,
Now am I oldir wox thou shalt
Y findin me a more

Be God, seide the Champion,
 Welcome mote thou be,
 Comè thou onys in my honde,
 Shaltin thou nevir the.
 It was welè within the night,
 And bright the Monè shone,
 Whan Gamelyn, and the Champion
 Togidir gan to gon.
 The Champion castè tornis
 To Gamelyn that was prest,
 And Gamelyn stodin stillè,
 And bad him don his best.
 Then seidin yongè Gamelyn
 Unto the Champion,
 Now that I have fully provid,
 Many tornis of thine,
 Thou mostin, seide Gamelyn;
 Prove oon or two of myn.
 Gamelyn to the Champion
 Yede smartily anon,
 Of all the tornis that he coude
 He shewid him but one:
 And kest him on the listè side
 That thre ribbis to brak,
 And thereunto his left armè,
 That gaf a grettè crak.
 Then seide yongè Gamelyn
 Smerly to him anon,
 Shall it be holdin for a Cast,
 Or ellis go for none.
 Bi God, seide the Champion,
 Wheðir so that it be,
 He that ones comith in thyn hand
 Shallin he nevir the.
 Than seide the Frankelyn, that
 Thre Sonis there had lore,
 Blessid be thou, yongè Gamelyn,
 That evir thou were bore.
 For now unto the Champion,
 This have I for to seie,
 This is the yongè Gamelyn,
 That taughtè The to pleie.
 Ayn answerde the Champion,
 That likid nothyng well,
 He is allè their Maistir, and
 His pleie is right fell.
 Sithin that I wrastillid first
 It is agon full yore,
 But I was nevir in my life
 Handilid so before.
 Yongè Gamelyn stode in the place
 Allone withoutin ferk,
 And seide, if there be any mo,
 Let them comè to werk.
 The Champion which that painid
 Him to workin so fore,
 It semith by his Countinaunce
 That he willè no more.
 Gamelyn in the placè stode,
 Stillè as any stone,
 For to abidin wrastillig,
 But there ycomith none.
 There ne was none with Gamelyn
 That woldè wrastle more,
 For he handilid the champion
 So wonderously fore.
 Two Gentilmeine that owned the place
 Come to Gamelyn, God geve them grace,
 And seide to him have done on,
 Thy hosin and thy shone,
 Forsothè at this timè all
 This faire it is ydone.
 Tho seide to them Gamelyn
 So mote I well yfare,

I havè not yet halvindele
 Yfoldè all my ware.
 Than seide the champion so broke,
 I may it welè swere,
 He is a sole that thereof bieth,
 Thou sellist it so dere.
 470 Tho seide to him the Frankelyn,
 That was in mochill care,
 Fellow, he seide, whi lakkist
 Thou so moche of his ware,
 Be Seint Jame, that in Galis is,
 That many Man has fought,
 Yet it is moche too godè chepe,
 That thou hastin ybought.
 550 Tho that the Wardinis werin
 Of that ilk wrastillig,
 480 Comin forth, and brought Gamelyn
 The ram, and als the ring.
 And thus wann yongè Gamelyn
 The ram and eke the ring,
 And wentè forth with mochil joy
 Homeward in the morning.
 His brothir se where that he come
 With all the grettè ront,
 And bad the porter shute the gate,
 And holdin him without.
 490 The porter of his Lord's word
 Was so right fore agast,
 And stert anon unto the gate,
 And lokkid it full fast.
 Now lithinith, and lestinith,
 Bothè yongè and old,
 And ye shullin herè gamin
 Of Gamelyn the bold.
 570 Gamelyn comith thereunto
 For to have comin in,
 500 But all in vaine, the dore then was
 Y shitt fast with a pyn.
 Than seide yongè Gamelyn,
 Porter, undo the yate,
 For many a godè Mann's
 Sonne stondith thereat.
 580 Then answerid him the porter,
 And swore by Godd's berde,
 Thou ne shalt, frendè Gamelyn,
 Comin into this yerde,
 510 Thou lyist, seide Gamelyn,
 So broukin I my Chynne.
 He smote the wikit with his fote,
 And brak away the pyn.
 The Porter streightwey saughè tho
 It might no bettir be,
 He settè fore on Erthè, and
 Fast he began to fle.
 590 Bi my faith, seide Gamelyn,
 That travaile is ylore,
 520 For I am on fote as light as
 Thow, though thow had yswore.
 Gamelyn ovirtoke the Porter,
 And his teenè ywrak,
 And gert him full upon the neck,
 That he the bon to brak.
 And toke him by that oon armè,
 And threw him in a well,
 600 Seven hundrid faðom it was depe,
 As I have herdè telle.
 530 Whan Gamelyn the yongè thus
 Had yplayid his play,
 Allè that in the yerde were,
 Withdrewin them away,
 That dredin him full fore for
 The wreke that he wrought,
 And for the fayir cumpany
 610 That he had thithir brought.

Yonge

Yong Gamelyn yede to the gate,
And letè it up wide,
He letin in allè the rout,
That gon woldin or ride.
And seide, ye ben ywelcome
Withoutin any greve,
For we wol ben Maisteris here,
And aske no Man leve.
It n'as but yesterdai I laft,
Seide yonge Gamelyn,
In my brother's seleris
Five tonn of right gode wyne.
I willè not this Cumpany
Partyn with me on twyn,
And if ye will don aftir me,
Whil any sope is inn.
And if my brothir grutchith us,
Or makith foulè chere,
Othir for spence of mete and drink
That we shull spendin here,
I am the Oviratorir
And bere our Althir purse,
He shallè have for his grutching
Santa Maria's Curse.
My brothir is but a nigon,
I swere by Crist's ore,
And we woll spendè largily
That he hath sparid yore,
And whofo that makith grutching
That we do here ydwell,
He shall go unto the Porter,
Into the drawè Well.
Sevin dayis, and sevin nightes
Gamelyn held his fest,
With mochè Solace that there was,
And eke no mannir heste.
All in a litil torrit his
Brothir laydè ysteke,
And saugh him wastin his godis,
But durstè not to speke.
Right erli in a morrowning
Upon the eightè day,
The gestis come to Gamelyn
And woldè gon thir way.
Lordis, tho seide Gamelyn,
And wollin ye so hic?
Allè the wyne is not yet dronk,
So broukin I mine eye.
Yonge Gamelyn in his herte
Was sorowfull and wo,
Whan that his gestis toke their leve,
And fro him woldè go.
He woldè that they had dwellid,
Lengir, and they seide nay,
But bitaught Gamelyn to God,
And bad him have gode dai.
Thus madè Gamelyn his feste,
And brought it well to end;
And aftirward his gestis toke
Levè their way to wend.
Now lithinith, and listinith,
And holdith you your tonge,
And ye shullin herè gamin
Of Gamelyn the yonge.
Herkinith Lordilingis, and
Listinith you aright,
Whan al the gestis werin gon
How Gamelyn was dight.
Alle the while that Gamelyn
Had hold his Mangerie,
His brothir thought on him bewreke,
With his false trecherie
Tho whan that Gamelyn's gestes
Y ridin were and gon,

Gamelyn stode anon alone,
Frendè tho had he none.
Tho aftir this full sone it fell
Within a littil stound,
That Gamelyn was takin, and
Full hardly was he bound.
Than forth comith the falsè Knight
Out of the Solerè,
And to Gamelyn his brothir,
He goith fullè nere,
And seidin unto Gamelyn,
Who madè The so bold,
For to destroyin and wastè
The store of my houshold?
Brothir, answerid Gamelyn,
Now wrathè The right noght,
For it is many day agon,
Sithins it was ybought.
630 For, Brothir, thou hastin haddè,
I swere by Seint Richere,
Of siltene plowis of Londè,
This full sixtene yere;
And of allè the bestis which
Thou hastè forth ybredd,
That my fadir to me bequethe
Upon his deth's bedd;
Of allè this full sixtene yere
I gevè The the Prow,
640 For the metè and the drinkè
That we have spendid now.
Than thus seide the falsè Knight;
(Full evil mote he the)
Herkinith, Brothir Gamelyn,
What I woll gevin The.
For of my body, brothir, heir
Y gettin have I none,
I wollè makin The my heir,
I swerè by Seint John.
650 Par mafay, seide Gamelyn,
And if that it so be,
And thou thinkist, as thou seyist,
May God yeldin it The.
Nothing wistè yong Gamelyn
Of his brother's gile;
And therefore he him begilid
In verry littil while.
Gamelyn, seidin he, o thing
I nedis must The tell,
660 Tho whan thou threwe my porter
Into the drawè well,
I sworè in that wrathè, and
In that my gretè mote,
That thou shuldist ybondè be
Both hondè and eke fote:
And therefore I besechè The,
My brothir Gamelyn,
Letith thou noght me be forsworn,
As brothir art thou mine:
670 But letith me ybindin The
Both hondè and eke fote,
For me to holdin myne avough,
Right as I The behote.
Brothir, tho seide Gamelyn,
As so motin I the,
Thou shaltè not ben forsworin
For the lovè of me.
750 Tho madin thei this Gamelyn
To fitte, might he not stand,
680 Tyll that he him ybondin had
Both fote and also hand.
The falsè Knight his brothir of
Gamelyn was agast,
And sente aftir fetteris
To fetterin him fast.
M

His

His brothir madè lesingis,
 On him ther as he stode,
 And tolde them that comin in
 That Gamelyn was wode.
 Gamelyn stode to a post
 Y bondin in the Hall,
 And tho that ther ycomin in
 Lokid upon him all.
 Ewir stode yong Gamelyn
 Evin boltè upright,
 But mete nor drink ne had he none
 Nowthir by day ne night.
 Tho seide yongè Gamelyn,
 Brothir myn, by my hals,
 Now I have wele espyid that
 Thou art a parti fals.
 Had I but wiste that treson
 That thou haddist yfond,
 I woldin have gevin strokis
 Or I had ben ybound.
 Gamelyn stode thus bondin
 As still as any stone,
 For too dayis, and too nightis,
 And mete had he none.
 Then seide at last this Gamelyn
 That stode boundin strong,
 Adam Spencer, methinkith that
 I fallè al to long;
 Therefore, Adam le dispencer,
 Now I besechè The,
 For the mochè lovè with which
 My fadir lovid The,
 If thou may comin to the kaies,
 Lefith me out of bond,
 And for-thi I woll departin
 With The of my fre lond.
 Than him answerid this Adam,
 Which that was the Spencer,
 I have yservid thy brothir
 This full sixtèn yere,
 And if I shuldè letin you
 To gon out of his boure,
 He woldin astirwardis seye
 That I were a Traytour.
 Adam, answerid Gamelyn,
 So broukin I myn hals
 Thou shalte findin my brothir
 At the last rightè fals:
 And therefore, brothir Adam, me
 Losè out of my bonds,
 And I wollè departin with
 The of myn own fre londs.
 Upon so gode a forewardè
 Saidin Adam, I wis,
 I wollè doin thereunto
 Alle that in me is.
 Adam, tho seidè Gamelyn,
 As so mowin I the,
 I woll holdè The Covenaunt,
 An thou too woile me.
 Anon as Adam his Lordè
 To beddè was ygone,
 Adam toke the kaies, and lat
 Gamelyn out anon.
 He unlokid yongè Gamelyn
 Both hondis and eke fete,
 On hope of the avauncement
 Which that he him behete.
 Then seidè yongè Gamelyn,
 Thankid be Godd's fonde,
 For now that I am ylofid
 Both fore and also hond,
 Had I but etin a litil
 And thereto drunk aright,

760 There is none in this housè that
 Shuld bindè me this nighr.
 Tho Adam tokè Gamelyn,
 As still as any stone,
 And haddin him into the Spence
 Right rapily anon:
 And settin him to his Souperè
 Right in a privie stede,
 And badin hym do gladly,
 And Gamelyn so dede.
 770 Anon assone as Gamelyn
 Had etin wel and fine,
 And thereunto had ydrankin
 Well of the reddè wyne,
 Adam, seide yongè Gamelyn,
 Tell what is now thy rede,
 For me to go to my brothir,
 And gerdin of his hede.
 No Gamelyn, seidin Adam,
 It shallè not be so:
 780 But I can tellè The a rede,
 That is yworth the too.
 I wotè wele forsothè that,
 (And this it is no nay,)
 We shullin have a Mangerie
 Rightè upon Sondag,
 Of Abbotis and Priouris
 Full many here shal be,
 And othir men of holie Cherch,
 As I can tellè The.
 790 Thou shaltè stond up by the post,
 As thou were hondè fast,
 And I shall them leve unlok, that
 Away thou may them cast.
 And whan that they have y etin
 And washin have their hondes,
 Tho thou shalt bespekin them all
 To bring The out of bondes.
 And if that they will borrow The,
 That werin a gode game,
 800 Than werin thou out of prison,
 And I als out of blame:
 But if that evèrich of them
 Sayè unto us nay,
 I shullè don anothir thing,
 I swerè by this day.
 Thou shallè have a godè staffe,
 And I woll have another,
 And Crist's cursè have that oon
 That failè shall that other.
 810 Ye for God seidè Gamelyn,
 I say it right for me,
 If that I failin on my side,
 Than evil mote I the.
 If that we shullin algatis
 Assoile them of thire Synne,
 Warnith me, my brothir Adam,
 Whan that we shall begynn.
 Now Gamelyn, seidin Adam,
 By Seintè Charitè,
 820 I wollè warnè The befor,
 Whan that the time shall be.
 Whan that I twinkin upon The,
 Lokè for to be gon,
 And cast away the fetteris,
 And come to me anon.
 Adam, seidè yong Gamelyn,
 Y blissid be thy bones,
 That is a rightè gode counsaile
 Y gevin for the nones.
 830 If that they shullin wernè me
 To bring The out of bendes,
 I wollè settin gode strokis
 Full right upon their lendes.

Tho

Tho the Sonday was ycomin,
 And these folk to the feste,
 Faire they werein ywelcomid
 Bothè the leste, and meste.
 And evir as they at the Hall
 Dorè were comin in,
 They evèrich castin an eie
 On yongè Gamelyn.
 The falsè Knight his own brothir,
 So full of trecherie,
 Allè the gestis that there were,
 At that ilk Mangeric,
 Of Gamelyn his own brothir
 He toldin them with Mouth
 Allè the harmis and the shame,
 That e're he tellè couth.
 Tho they werein yservid streit
 Of Messis too or thre,
 Than seide yongè Gamelyn,
 How do ye serve me?
 It ne is not wele yservid,
 Be God that allè made,
 That I shold sittin here fasting,
 And othir men make glade.
 The falsè Knightè his brothir
 Thereas that he ystode,
 Toldin to allè his gestis,
 That Gamelyn was wode.
 And Gamelyn there stodè still,
 And answerid right noght,
 But of Adam's wordis he
 Helde still in his thought.
 Tho Gamelyn began to speke,
 Right doulesfully withall,
 Unto the grette Lordis, that
 Y satyn in the Hall.
 My Lordlingis, tho seidin he
 For Crist's passion,
 Helpin to bringe Gamelyn
 Out of thilke prison.
 Than seide to him an Abbot,
 (Sorow upon his cheke)
 He shallin have Crist's curse,
 And Seintè Maries eke,
 That shall The out of this prison
 Beggin owthir borow,
 But evir worthè hym full wele,
 Thar doth the mykil sorow.
 And anon aftir that Abbot
 Than spakin anothir,
 I woldè that thyn hede were of,
 Though thou were my brothir.
 Allè that The shall borrowin,
 Mote them foulè fall,
 And thus yseidin alle they
 That werin in the Hall.
 Than seidè to hem a Priour,
 Evil mowin he thrive,
 It is grette sorow and care,
 Boy, that thou art on live.
 On, on, seidè yongè Gamelyn,
 So broukin I my bone,
 Now that I havin espyid
 That frendis have I none.
 A curlid mot he worthè be,
 Bothè fleshe and blode,
 That evir doth to Priouris,
 Or Abbotes any gode.
 Anon Adam the dispencer
 Takin up hath the Cloth,
 And lokid unto Gamelyn,
 And laugh that he was wroth.
 Adam of the Pantrie at thilk
 Time litil he thought,

And too godè Stavys unto
 The hallè dore he brought.
 910 Adam lokid on Gamelyn,
 And he was war anon,
 And cast awaie the fetteris,
 And began for to gon.
 Tho he camin unto Adam,
 He toke to the one staff,
 And begannin to werkè wele,
 990 And gode strokis he gaff.
 Gamelyn came into the hall,
 And Adam Spencer both,
 920 And lokid them all aboutin,
 As they haddè ben wroth.
 Gamelyn sprenith holi watir
 All with an okin spire,
 That some of them that stode upright
 Fillin into the fire.
 There was no mannir lewdè Man,
 1000 That in the Hallè stode,
 That woldè doin Gamelyn
 Any thingè but gode.
 930 But thei stodè besidin, and
 Letè them bothè werch,
 For thei ne haddè no routhè
 Of Men of holi Cherch,
 Of Abbot, or of Priour, or
 Of Monk, or of Canon,
 That Gamelyn hath ovirtoke,
 1010 Anon they yedin down.
 There ne was none of them allè,
 That with his staff ymette,
 940 That he madè them ovirthrowe,
 And quyttè them his dette.
 Tho Gamelyn, seidè Adam,
 For Seinte Charite,
 Payith, I pray, gode liveray,
 And for the love of me:
 And I wolle kepin the dore,
 1020 So evir here I Masse,
 Er that they ben assoilyd
 Ther shallè noon ypassè.
 950 Doutè The noght, seide Gamelyn,
 While that we ben in fere,
 But kepè thou welè the dore,
 And I woll werkin here:
 Besturrih The, gode Adam, and
 Ne lettith none ytle,
 And we shall tellè largily
 1030 How many here there be.
 To Gamelyn, seidin Adam,
 Doith them all but gode,
 960 For thei ben Men of holi cherch,
 Drawith of them no blode:
 Savith right welè the Coroune,
 And doith them no harmes,
 But brekith bothè their leggis,
 And sithin here thir armes.
 Thus Gamelyn and Adam hath
 1040 Y wroughtin rightè fast,
 And pleidin with the Monkis tho,
 And madè them agast.
 970 Forth hi'sir they come riding
 Full jolily with Swaines,
 But home agen they werin ledde
 In cartis and in waines.
 Tho as they haddin all ydone,
 Than seidin a gray frere,
 1050 Alas! alas! my Lord Abbot,
 What didde we now here?
 Tho that we hithir did ycome
 It was a colde rede,
 980 Us had far bettir ben at home,
 With watir, and with brede.

While

While Gamelyn made Orderis
 Of Monkis and of Frere,
 Evir stode his brothir stille,
 And made soule there,
 Tho Gamelyn up with his staff,
 That he full welc knew,
 And grettin him upon the nek,
 That he him overthrewe,
 A litil above the girdil
 The riggin bone to brast,
 And sett him in the fetteris,
 There as he sattin arst.
 Sittith thou there, my brothir John,
 Tho seide Gamelyn,
 For to colin thy hotte bodie,
 As I did colc myn.
 And swithe as they yhaddè wele
 Wrokin them on their fone,
 They askid for the watir, and
 They wishin them anon.
 What some of them for their love,
 And some for their awe,
 Allè the servauntis servid
 Them of the bestè law.
 The Shereff was thennis away
 But about a five Myle,
 And all was toldin unto him
 Within a litil whyle,
 How Gamelyn and Adam had
 Ydon a sorry res
 Boundin and woundin many Men
 Agen the King's pece.
 Eftsonis tho begannin sone,
 Striffe for to awake,
 And the Shiregereve about did
 Cast Gamelyn to rake.
 Now lithinith, and lestinith,
 So God geve you gode fine,
 And ye shull herin a gode game
 Of yongè Gamelyne.
 Now four and twentie yongè Men,
 That holdin them full bold,
 Comin unto the Shiregereve,
 And seide that they wold
 Both Gamelyn and eke Adam
 Y fettè be the way;
 The Shiregereve gafe them leve
 Tho, soth as I you say.
 Thes yongè Meinè hidin them
 Fast, woldè they not lynne,
 Tyll that they comin to the gate
 There Gamelyn was inne.
 They knokidin upon the gate,
 The Porter tho was nye,
 And lokid forth out at an hole,
 As Man that was full flye.
 The Porter had beholdin them
 But for a litil while,
 He lovid welc Gamelyn,
 And was adrad of gile,
 And forthi letè the wiket
 Y stondin fullè still,
 And askid them that stant without
 What ywas their will?
 For allè the gret Cumpany
 Than spake bot one alone,
 Undo the gatis, porter, and
 Latè us in ygone.
 Then seide to them the porter,
 So broukin I my chynne,
 Ye shullè sayin your Errand,
 Or that ye comin inne.
 Say to Gamelyn and Adam,
 If that their wille it be,

We wollè spekin here with them,
 Two wordis othir thre. 1130
 Fellow, seide the porter tho,
 Scondith thou ther ystill,
 And I woll wend to Gamelyn,
 To wetin of his wille.
 And in wentè the Porter tho
 To Gamelyn anon,
 And seide, Sire, I warnè you,
 That here be come your fone,
 For lo! The Shiregerev's Men 1140
 Now ben all at the gate,
 For to ytekin you bothè,
 Shallè ye not escape.
 Porter, tho seide Gamelyn,
 So mote I welc the,
 I woll allowè The thy wordes,
 Whan I my timè se.
 Go ageyn, porter, to the gate,
 And dwell with them a while,
 Awaitin, and thou shaltè se, 1150
 Right sone, Porter, a gile.
 Adam, tho seide Gamelyn,
 Lokè The to be gon,
 We havè foomen at the gate,
 And frendis nevir one.
 It ben the Shiregerev's Men,
 That hithir ben comin,
 They ben yswore togiðeris,
 That we shull be nomin.
 To Gamelyn seide Adam, 1160
 Hiè The righte belyve,
 And if I failè The this day,
 Than evil mote I thryve.
 And we shullin so welcomè
 The Shiregerev's Men,
 That some of them, I trow, shall make
 Their beddis in the fen.
 Then thorough the posternè gate
 Yong Gamelyn out went,
 And a gode sturdie cartè staffe 1170
 In his hondè he hent.
 And Adam Spencer hentè sone
 Anothir grettè staffe,
 For to helpe yong Gamelyn,
 And gode strokis he gaffe.
 Adam y'ellid hath his tweyne,
 And Gamelyn felled thre,
 The tothir fettè fete on erthi,
 And fast began to fle.
 What? seidin Adam Spencer tho, 1180
 So evir hire I masse,
 I havè right gode reddè wyne,
 Pray drinkith er ye passe.
 Nai nai by God, seide they tho,
 Thy drink is nothing gode,
 It woldè makin Mann's brayne
 To lyn in his hode.
 Yong Gamelyn tho stodè still,
 And lokid him about,
 And saide, the Shiregereve comith 1190
 With a full grettè rout.
 Adam Spencer, seid Gamelyn,
 My rede it is now this,
 Abidin we not lengir here,
 Lest we farin amys.
 I rede that we to Wode ygonn,
 Er that we be yfound,
 Betir is there losc for to gonn,
 Than in the tounè ybound.
 Adam then tokè by the hond 1200
 This yongè Gamelyn,
 And echè of them to the othir
 Drankin a draft of wyne,
 And

And aftirwardis toke their course,
 And wente streight their way,
 Tho fond the Shiregereve the Nest,
 But in it was none ay.
 The Shiregereve lightid adoune,
 And went into the hall,
 And fond the Lord yfetterid,
 Full faste therewithall.
 The Shireve tho unfetterid.
 Him righte sone anon,
 And sentin aftir a gode leche
 To hele his rigge bon.
 Lete we now this false Knight
 Lie in his mochill care.
 And telle we of Gamelyn,
 And loken how he fare.
 Gamelyn into the wild wode,
 Ystalkid is full stille,
 And Adam le dispencer it
 Ylikid but right ille,
 Tho Adam swore to Gamelyn,
 And that be Seint Richere,
 Now I say that it is mery,
 To ben a dispencer:
 That muche levire me werin
 The kayis for to bere,
 Than walkin in this wild wode,
 My clothis all to tere.
 Adam, seide yong Gamelyn,
 Dismaye The right noght,
 For many a gode Mann's child
 In care is ybrought.
 As they thus in the wode stodin
 Ytalking both in fere,
 Adam herdè talking of Men,
 And nigh them thought they were.
 Tho Gamelyn undir the wild
 Wode lokid aright,
 Full sevin score of yongè Men
 He saugh right wel ydight;
 Allè were satte at their mete
 In a compas about,
 Adam, tho seide Gamelyn,
 Now havin ye no doute,
 For aftir balè comith bore,
 Thorough Godd's grete might,
 Methinkith of mete, and of drink
 That I havin a sight.
 Adam le dispencer lokid
 Tho undir wode bowe,
 And whan that he the metè saugh
 Tho he was glad inowe,
 For now he hopid unto God
 For to havin his dele,
 And he was full fore alongid
 Aftir a gode mele.
 Anon as he seide that word,
 Streight the Maistir outlawe
 Saugh Gamelyn and Adam both
 Undir the wode shaw.
 Lo! yongè Men, seide the Maistir
 Outlaw, by the gode rode,
 I am aware of some gestis
 Pray God sendin us gode.
 Loke! yondir be two yongè Men,
 That ben right wel adight,
 A peradventure they ben mo,
 Whoso lokid aright.
 Arisith up quick yongè men,
 And fette them to me,
 For it is gode, that we wetin,
 What meinè that they be.
 Up thei stertin quik at that word
 Sevin fro the dinnere,

And they mettin with Gamelyn,
 And Adam Dispencere.
 Whan that they werin ney to them,
 Than seide thus that one,
 Yeldith up to us, yongè men,
 Your bowis, and your flone.
 Than seide to them Gamelyn,
 That yongè was of elde,
 Full mochil sorow mote they have,
 That unto you shall yelde.
 I curse woll none othir wight,
 But right mine ownè selve,
 Tho ye may fettin unto you
 Fyve, and than be ye twelve.
 They herdin by his wordis that
 Gret might was in his arme,
 And forthi there was none of them
 That woldè don him harme,
 But seidin unto Gamelyn
 Right mildily and still,
 Comith asforin our Maistir,
 And say to him thy will.
 Yongè man, seide Gamelyn,
 Upon your leaute,
 Tellith what man your Maistir is,
 Which that ye with ybe.
 Tho allè they answerid him
 At ones without lesing,
 Our Maistir is ycorounid
 Of Outlawis the King.
 Adam, seide yongè Gamelyn,
 Go we in Crist's name,
 He may nothir metè nor drink
 Y wernè us for shame,
 And if that he be hendè, and
 Comin of gentil blode,
 He woll geve us both mete and drink,
 And doin us some gode.
 By Seintè Jame, seide Adam tho,
 What harme so that I gete,
 I will adventure me to the
 Dore that I had mete.
 Tho Gamelyn and Adam both
 Y wente forth in fere,
 And they both gretè the Maistir
 Which that they fondè there.
 Than seide to them the Maistir,
 That King was of Outlawes,
 What do ye seke, ye yongè Men,
 Undir the wode Shawes?
 Yong Gamelyn answerid tho
 The King with his Coroune,
 He mustè nedis walk in wodes,
 That may not walk in toun.
 Sire, we walke not here in wodes
 Non harme for to do,
 But if peradventure we mete
 A Dere, to shete thereto,
 As meinè that ben right hungry,
 And now no metè fynd,
 And very harde ben bestad
 Undir the wode lynd.
 Of Gamelyn's wordis tho
 The Maistir haddè routhe,
 And seide to them, ye shall have
 Inow, have God my trouthe;
 Anon he badde them sittin
 Downe, for to takè rest,
 And badde them etin and drink,
 And that too of the best,
 As they were eting and drinking
 Of the best wele and sine,
 Than seide the ton to the tothir,
 This is yongè Gamelyne.
 N
 Tho

1280

1290

1300

1310

1320

1330

1340

1350

Tho was the Maistir of Outlawes
 Into Counsaile nomin,
 And told how it was Gamelyn,
 That thithir was comin.
 Anon as he had herdin all
 How that it was befall,
 He made Gamelyn Maistir
 Undir him o're them all.
 Within the third weke aftir this
 To him comith tiding,
 To the Maistir of Outlawis,
 Which that now was their King,
 That he shuldè ycomin home,
 For that his pees was made;
 And of that joyfull tiding he
 Was wonderously glade.
 Tho seide he to his yongè men,
 The sothè for to tell,
 To me be comin tidingis
 I may no lengir dwell.
 Tho was yong Gamelyn anon
 Withoutin taryng,
 Made Maistir of Outlawis, and
 Y corounid their King.
 Tho was yong Gamelyn crounid
 The King of the Outlawes,
 And among them walkid a while
 Undir the wodè shawes.
 The false Knight his brothir now
 Was Shiregereve and Sire,
 And letè his brothir be endite
 For hatè and for ire.
 Tho werin all his bondmeine
 Sory, and nothing glad,
 Whan that Gamelyn their lordè,
 Wolves hede was cryed and made.
 And sentin outè his meinè
 Where they mightin him fynd,
 For to sekin yonge Gamelyn
 Undir the wodè lynd.
 To tellè to him tidingis
 The windè was ywent,
 And allè his gode revid was,
 And all his men yfhent.
 Whan that they haddè hym foundin,
 On kneys they them sette,
 And adoun with their hodè, and
 Gamelyn, their Lord, grette.
 They seidin, Sire, now wrathè not
 You for the godè rode,
 For we have brought you tidingis,
 But they be nothing gode.
 Now is thy brothir Shiregereve,
 And he hath the baillie,
 And thereto hath enditid The,
 And wolves hede doth The crie.
 Allas! tho seide Gamelyn,
 That e're I was so slak;
 That I ne hadd brokin his nek,
 Whan I his riggè brak.
 Goith, and gretith you welè,
 My housbondis an wif,
 I wollè ben at the next Shire
 So havè God my lif.
 Gamelyn camè well redy
 Unto the nextè Shire,
 And there the false Knight his brothir
 Was bothè Lord and Sire.
 Gamelyn camè boldilich
 Into the motè hall,
 And put adoun his hode among
 The Lordilingis all.
 God favè you, Lordilingis,
 Which that now herè be,

But as for The, brokebak Shereve,
 Evil motè thou the.
 Why hastè thou doin to me
 That shame and villonie,
 For to latin enditè me, 1430
 And wolf'is hede me crie?
 Tho thought the false Knight on him
 For to have ben awreke,
 And letè takin Gamelyn, 1360
 Must he no more yspeke.
 Mightè there be no mannir grace,
 But Gamelyn, at last,
 Was into prisoun ycastin,
 And fetterid full fast.
 This Gamelyn hath a brothir 1440
 That clepid was Sir Ote,
 As gode and hend a Knight he was,
 As mightin gon on fote.
 1370 Right anon yede a Mesliger
 Unto that godè Knight,
 And toldin him altogethir
 How Gamelyn was dight.
 Anon as Sir Ote herdin had
 How Gamelyn was dight,
 He was right passing fory tho, 1450
 Ne he was nothing light.
 And letè saddle him a stede,
 And streit the weie he name,
 1380 And unto his tweie bretherin
 Right sonè there he came.
 Sir, seide this Sir Ote unto
 The Shiregerevè tho,
 We ben but only thre brethren,
 Shall we be nevir mo,
 And thus hast thou yprisounid 1460
 The bestè of us all:
 Soche anothir brothir as thou
 Evil mote him befall.
 1390 Sir Ote, seide the false Knight,
 Now letè be thy curs,
 By God, for thesc thi wordis he
 Shallè farin the wors.
 Now to the King'is prisoun he
 Is lefully ynome;
 And there he shall abidin 1470
 Untill the Justice come.
 But parde, seide Sir Ote tho,
 Bettir it shall ybe,
 1400 I biddin him unto Maynprise,
 And that thou grauntè me,
 Untill the nextè sitting shall Come of deliveraunce,
 And than letè Gamelyn fairely
 Ystondin to his chaunce.
 Brothir, in soche a forewardè 1480
 I takin him to The,
 And by thy fa'ir'is soulè,
 That The begat and me,
 1410 If that he be not right redy
 Whan that the justice sitte,
 Thou shaltè berin the judgement,
 For all thy grettè witt.
 I grauntin it wele, seide Sir Ote,
 That it shall so ybe,
 Letith delivir him anon, 1490
 And takin him to me.
 Tho Gamelyn was delivered
 To Sir Ote his brothir,
 And that night ydwellid in fere
 The ton with the tothir.
 On the morow seide Gamelyn
 Unto Sir Ote the hend,
 My brothir, he seide, forsothe,
 I motè from The wend,

To lokin how my yongè Men
 In wode ledin their lif,
 And whethir that they livin now
 In joie or elles in strif.
 Be God tho answerid Sir Ote,
 That is a coldè rede,
 Now I se that alle the Cark
 Shall fallin on my hede;
 For whan that the Justice sittith,
 And thou be not yfound,
 I shall anon be takin, and
 In thy stede be ybound.
 Brothir, tho seide Gamelyn,
 Dismayè The right noght,
 For be Seint Jame in Galis,
 That many man hath sought,
 If so that God Almighty hold
 Me my lif, and my wir,
 I wollè ben there right redy
 Whan that the justice sit.
 Than seide Sir Ote to Gamelyn,
 God sheldè The fro shame,
 Comith whan that thou seist tyme,
 And bring us out of blame.
 Now lithinith, and lestinith,
 And holdith you right still,
 And ye shullè herin how that
 Gamelyn had his will.
 Anon Gamelyn wentin his Way undir the wode rise,
 And he yfondè there playing
 His yongè men of prise.
 Tho was this yongè Gamelyn
 In hert right glad inow,
 Whan that he fond his yongè men
 Undir the wode bow.
 Gamelyn and his yongè men
 Ytalkidin in fere,
 And they all haddè right gode game
 Their Maistir for to here.
 His men told him of Aventures,
 Which that they had yfound,
 And Gamelyn told them agen
 How he was fast ybound.
 All the while that Gamelyn was
 Outlaw, had he no curs,
 There ne was no man that for him
 Yferid ought the wors,
 But Abbotis and Priouris,
 And Monkis, and Chanon,
 In them forsothe ne laft he noght,
 Whan er he might them nom.
 While Gamelyn and his yong men
 Y madè mirthis ryve,
 The falsè Knight his own brothir,
 Evil morè he thryve,
 For all this while he waft about
 Both one day and othir,
 On purpose for to hire the quest
 To hangin his brothir.
 Gamelyn stodin on a day,
 And round him he beheld
 The wild wodis, and the shawis
 Within the wildè feld,
 He thoughtin upon his brothir,
 How that he him behete,
 That he ywoldin be redy
 Whan that the justice sete,
 He thoughtin welè that he wolde
 Withouthin more delay
 Y comin afore the justice
 For to kepin his day.
 And seide to his yongè men,
 Now dightith you full yare,

1500 For whan that the justice sittith
 We mote nedis be there.
 For I am undir a borow
 Until that I comin,
 And my brothir instede of me
 To prison shall be nomin.
 Be Seint Jame seide his yongè men, 1580
 And that thou rede thereto,
 Ordeinith how it shall be,
 And it shall so be do.
 1510 While Gamelyn was ycoming
 There that the justice satt,
 The falsè Knight his own brothir
 Forgattin he not that,
 To hire the meinè on his quest,
 To hangin his brothir,
 And though thei haddè not that oon, 1590
 He wolde han that othir.
 Tho comith yongè Gamelyn
 From undir the wode rise,
 1520 And he broughtin along with him
 His yongè men of prise.
 I se welc, seide Gamelyn,
 The justice is ysette,
 Go thou afor us, Adam, and
 Lokè how that it spette. 1600
 Adam wentè into the Hall,
 And lokid all about,
 And he saugh there ystondè tho
 Lordingis grette and stout,
 1530 And Sir Ote Gamelyn's brothir
 Y fetterid welc fast,
 Tho wentin Adam out of Hall,
 As he werin agast.
 Adam seide to Gamelyn,
 And to his seiawes all,
 Sir Ote ystondith fetterid
 Within the motè hall.
 Seide Gamelyn, if God geve us
 Grace wel for to do,
 1540 He shallin it abegge anon
 That him broughtin thereto.
 Then seidin Adam dispencer,
 That lokkis haddin hore,
 Christ's curse motè he havin,
 That boundin him so fore,
 And if thou wiltè, Gamelyn, 1620
 Doin astir my rede,
 There is none in the Hallè, that
 Shall bere aweie his hede.
 1550 Adam, tho seide Gamelyn,
 We wollè not do so,
 We woll fle only the giltif,
 And lat the othir go.
 Iwill my selve into the hall,
 And hire the justice speke,
 And on all them that ben giltif 1630
 I wolle ben avreke.
 Lat none escapin at the dore,
 Take, yonge meinè, yeme,
 1560 For I wollè ben the justice
 This day domis to deme.
 Pray God spedè me this ilk dai
 At this my newè werke;
 And Adam, comith thou with me,
 For thou shalt be my Clerke.
 His meinè all answerid him, 1640
 And bad hym don his best,
 And if thou to us havè nede,
 Thou shalt fyndin us prest.
 1570 For we wolle stondin with The
 Whilis that we may dure,
 And but that we werkin manly,
 Payith us then no hure.

Yonge Men, seide Gamelyn,
 So mot I wele y the,
 As ye a right trusty Maistir
 Shulle findin of me.
 And righte thereat the justice
 Yfartin in the Halle,
 In wente tho yong Gamelyn,
 Boldly amanges them all.
 Gamelyn lette unfettir
 His brothir out of bend,
 Than seide to him Sir Otis,
 His brothir that was hende,
 Thou haddist almost, Gamelyn,
 Dwellid away to long,
 For the queste is ygon out
 On me, that I shulde honge.
 Brothir, tho seide Gamelyn,
 God geve me gode rest,
 This gode day they shull ben hongid,
 That ben upon the quest;
 And thereto the justice bothe,
 That is the juggè man,
 And eke the Sheriff our brothir,
 For through him it began.
 Than seide yonge Gamelyn,
 Unto the false justice,
 Now is thi powir at an end,
 You must nedis arise.
 Thou hast ygevin domis that
 Ben evil alle dight,
 I wolle settin in thi sete,
 And dresin them aright.
 But the justice sattin stille,
 And roose not anon,
 And Gamelyn with his swerdè
 Clevid his chekè bone.
 Yonge Gamelyn toke him in his
 Armis, and no more spak,
 But threw him ovir the barrè,
 And his armè to brak.
 Durst no one unto Gamelyn
 Saye nothing but gode,
 For fere of the gret cumpany
 That withoutin yfode.
 Gamelyn sattè him adoun
 In the Justic's stede,
 (Herkenith now of the bourdè
 That Gamelyn tho dede)
 And Sir Otè by him he satte,
 And Adam at his fere;
 And whan Gamelyn the yong was
 Satte in the justice sete,
 He lette fettè the Justice,
 And his false brothir,
 And lette them come to the barre,
 The ton with that othir;
 Whan Gamelyn had thus ydone,
 Haddin he tho no rest,
 Till that he had enquerid who
 Werin upon the quest,
 For to demin his brothir dere
 Sir Ote for to be honge,
 Er that he wistè which they were
 It thoughtè him full longe.
 But al so sone as Gamelyn
 Wistè where that thei were,
 He diddè them everichone
 Fetterin fast in fere,
 And bringè them unto the barre,
 And fettè them in vewe;

By my faith, seide the justice,
 The Sheriff is a shrewe.
 1650 Than seide yonge Gamelyn,
 Unto the false justice,
 Thou hastè geve thy domis,
 Al of the worst assise;
 And the twelve Sifouris, that
 Werin of the inquest,
 They shulle ben hongid this day,
 So God geve me gode rest.
 Than seide the Sheriff pitously,
 To yonge Gamelyn,
 1660 My Lord, I criè The Mercie,
 Brothir artè thou myn.
 Therefore, seide yonge Gamelyn,
 Havè you Crist's Curse,
 For if thou werin Maistir yet
 Shuldin I farè worse.
 But for to makè short my tale,
 And not to tary longe,
 He ordeynid him there a quest
 Of his own men so strong.
 1670 The false Justice, and the Sheriff,
 Bothè were hongid hie,
 To weyvin there with the ropis,
 And with the windè drie.
 And als the twelvè Sifouris,
 Sorow havè that rekk,
 Allè they werin yhongid
 Full fastè by the nekk.
 Thus endid hath the false Knight
 With all his trechérie,
 1680 That evir haddè lad his life,
 In falseness and folie.
 He was hongid up by the neck,
 And nought by the purse,
 That was the Mede that he had haddè.
 From his fa'ir's curse.
 Sir Otè was the eldist tho,
 And Gamelyn was yonge,
 They wentin with their frendis, and
 Passidin to the King.
 1690 They madin pece with the Kingè
 Of the bestè assise,
 The King lovid Sir Otè wele
 And made him a Justice;
 Aftr the King made Gamelyn
 I in Est and West,
 The Crefe Justice and Ridere of
 Allè his fre forest.
 Alle his wight yonge Men the King
 Forgafin them their gilt,
 1700 And sithen in gode office the King
 Hath allè them ypilt.
 Thus has wan yonge Gamelyn
 His londè and his Lede,
 And wrake of him his Enemies,
 And quyte them their mede.
 And Sir Otè his brothir dere
 Ymade him hath his heir,
 And sithin weddid Gamelyn
 A Wite both gode and faire:
 1710 They lividin togidèr wele,
 Whilis that Christè wolde,
 And sithin that was Gamelyn
 Ygravin undir Molde;
 And so shallè we allè here,
 May there no man yfle;
 God bringin us unto the joie,
 That evir shull ybe.

him of

Thus endith the Legend of GAMELYN, call'd the COKE's TALE, in all the MSS that I have seen, and have this Tale.

The Man of Lawes PROLOGUE.

CUR Hoste saw well how that the bright
Sunne
The' Ark of his artificial day had ronn
The fourthe partè, and eke half an houre more:

And though he were not depe expert in lore,
He wist wele that it was the eightene day
Of Aprill, that is Messenger to May;
And saw wele that the shadow of eche tre
Was in lengthè of the same quantite
As was the body' erect that causid it:
Therefore by the shadow he toke his wit,
That Phœbus, which that shone so clere and bright,
Degrees was forty fyve clombin of hight.

And for that dayè, as in Latitude,
It was ten of the Clok he gan conclude,
And sodeinly he plight his horse about,
Lordlinges, qð he, I warne you all the rout,
That the forth part of this day is agon,
Now for the love of God, and of Seint John,
Lesith no tyme, as ferforth as ye may,
Lordlinges, this tyme wastith both night and day,
And fleeth fro us whan privily sleeping,
And what through negligence in our waking,
As doth the streme, that turnith ne're ageyn,
Descending from the mountain to the plaine.
Wele can Senec, and many Philosophre
Bewailin tyme lost more than gold in Cofre.
For los of Cattle may recoverid be,
But los of timè shendith us, qð he,

It woll not come ageyn withoutin dred,
No more than will come Malkin's Maidinhede, 30
Whan she hath lost it in her wantonness.
Let us not mowlin thus in idleness.

Sir Man of Law, qð he, so have I blis,
Tell us a tale anon, as forewarde is:
Ye ben submittid through your fre assent
To stondin in this case at my judgement.
Acquittith now your self of your behest,
Than have you don your devyr at the lest.
Hoste, qð he, depardeux Ich assent,

To brekin forewarde is not mine entent, 40
Behest is dette, and I woll holdin faine
Al my behest, I can no bettir faine.
For soch law as Man gevith othir wight,
He shuld himself usin the same by right.
Thus woll our text; but nathclefs certene
I can right now no thrifty tale sayn
That Chaucer (though that he can but leudly
On Metris, and in riming craftily)
Hath seide them in soche English as he can,
Of oldè tyme, as knowith many' a Man. 50
And if he have not seide them, leve brother,
In one boke, he hath seide them in another.
For he hath told of Lovers up and doune,
Mo than Ovid hath made of mentioune,
In his Epistilis, thar ben full old.
What shuld I tellin them, sith they ben told?
In youth he made of Ceyx and A'eyon;
And sith he hath spokin of everichone

These

These nobil wivis, and these loveres eke,
 Whofo that will in his large volume seke,
 Clepid the Seintis Legend of Cupide:
 There may he se the large woundis wide
 Of Lucrece, and of Babylon Thisbe,
 The swerd of Dido for her false Enee,
 The tree of Phillis for her Demophoon,
 The pleint of Deianire, and Hermion,
 Of Ariadne, and Hipsiphile;
 The barein Isle ystonding in the Se,
 Which that Leander dreint for his Hero,
 The teris of Helen, and eke the wo
 Of Briseis, and of Laodamia,
 The cruelty of the quene Medea.
 The litil childrin hanging by the hals,
 For thilk Jason, that was of love so fals.
 Of Hypermnestra, Penelope, Alcest,
 Your wivchode he commendith with the best.
 But certainly no word ne writith he
 Of thilk ensample wyke of Canace,

60 That lovid her own brothir sinfully:
 Of soche curfid Stories I say fye. 80
 Or els of Tyro Apolloneus,
 How that the curfid King Antiochus
 Biraft his doughtir of her Maidinhede;
 That is so horrible a tale to rede,
 Whan he her drew upon the Pavement.
 And therefore he of full avisement
 Nold nevir write in none of his sermons
 Of soche unkind Abominations.
 Ne I woll non reherse, if that I may.
 70 But of my tale how shall I do this day? 90
 Me werin loth to be liknid dougles
 To Muses, that Men clepe Pierides,
 Metamorphoseos wot what I mene,
 But nathelless I rechè not a bene,
 Though I comin aftir him with hawbak,
 I speke in prose, and let him rimis make.
 And with that word he with a sobir chere
 Began his tale, as ye shull aftir here.

Here endith the PROLOGUE.

VI. The Man of Lawe's TALE.

Lady Cunstance the Emperor's Daughter of Rome, after her Marriage with the Sowdan of Surrey, through the Malice of the Sowdan's Mother suffereth great Trouble and Misery with her young Child Maurice, but yet in the end is restor'd to comfort.

ateful harme, Condition of Povert!
 With thirst, with cold, with hungir fore
 confoundid, 100
 To askin help The shamith in thy hert,
 If Thou none ask, so fore art thou ywoundid,
 That very nede unwrappith all thy wounds hid,
 Maugre thy hede thou must for indigence
 Or flele, or beg, or borow thy dispence:

Thou blamist Crist, and seyist full bittirly,
 He misdepartith richis temporall,
 Thy neighbour eke thou witist sinfully,
 And seist thou hast to litil, he hath all, 110
 Parfay faist thou sometime he rekin shall,
 Whan that his tail shall brennin in the glode,
 For he ne helpith nedefull in their nede.

Herkin what is the Sentence of the wise,
 Bet is to dyin than have indigence,
 Thy self Neighbour wollin The to ~~to~~ dispise,
 If thou be pore, farewell thy reverence;
 Yet of the wise men take this Sentence,
 Alle the dayis of pore men ben wikk,
 Beware therefore er thou come at that prikk. 120

If thou be pore, thy brothir hatith The,
 And all thy frendis fleen fro The, alas!
 O rich Merchautis, full of wele ye be,
 O noble prudent folk, as in this caas,
 Your baggis ben not filled with ambis aas,
 But with see sink, that rennith for your chaunce,
 At Christmas then wele mery mow ye daunce.

Ye sekin Lond and See for your winning
 As wise folk ye knowin all the State
 Of reignes, ye ben faðiris of tydinges,
 And talis bothin of pece and debate,
 I was right now of talis desolate,

Ne're that a Merchaunt, gone is many' a yere,
 Me taught a tale, the which ye shullin here.

In Surrey whilom dwelt a Company
 Of champmen rich, and therero sad and true,
 That widè were sentin their spicery,
 Clothis of gold, and Sattin rich of hew,
 Their chafare was so thrifty, and so new,
 That every wight hath dainty to chafare 140
 With them, and eke to sellin them their ware.

Now fell it that the Maistirs of that fort
 Han thapin them to Rome for to wend,
 Were it for chapmanhode, or for disport,
 None othir Message woude they thithir send,
 But came themselfe to Rome, this is the end;
 And in soche place, as thought them avantage
 For their intent, there toke their herbigage.

Sojournid han these Marchauntes in that towne
 A certeine time, as fell to their plesaunce, 150
 But so befell, that th' excellent renoune
 Of the Empèrou's doughtir, Dame Cunstance,
 Reportid was, with every circumstance,
 Unto these Surrein Marchaunts, in soche wise,
 Fro day to day, as I shall you devise.

This was the comune voice of every Man,
 Our Empèrou of Rome, Now God him se,
 A doughtir hath, that sin the world began,
 To rekin her godeness, and her beaute,
 Was nevir soche anothir, as is she: 160
 I pray to God in honour her susteine,
 And wolde she were of all Europe the quene.

130 In her is high bewte withoutin pride,
 And youth withoutin grenehode or folie,
 To all her werkis vertue is hir gyde,

Humble's

Humbleſs in her hath ſlaine all tirannie,
She is a mirrour of all curteſy.
Her hert is very chambre of holineſſe,
Her hond miniſter of fredome, and almeſs.

And all this voyce was ſothe, as God is true; 170
But now to purpoſe let us turn again;
Theſe Marchauntes had don fraught their ſhippis newe,
And whan they han this bliſfull Maidin ſene,
Home to Surrey ben they ywent agen,
And don their nedis, as they han done yore,
And livin wele, I can ſay you no more.

Now ſell it, that theſe Marchauntes ſtode in grace
Of him that was the Sowdan of Surrie:
For whan that they came from any ſtraunge place
He woldin of his benigne curtiſy 180
Make them gode chere, and beſily eſpie
Tidinges of ſondry Londis for to lere,
The wondiris, that they might ſene or here.

Amongis other thingis ſpecially
Theſe Marchauntes have him told of Dame Cunſtance
So grete nobleſs, in erniſt ſeriously
That this Sowdan hath caught ſo grete pleaſaunce
To han her figure in his remembraunce,
And all his luſt, and all his beſy cure,
Was for to love her while his lif may dure.

Peraventure in that ilk large boke,
Which clepid is the Heven, ywritin was
With ſterris, whan that he his birthè toke,
That he for love ſholde han his dethe alas!
For in the ſterres clerer than is the glas
Is writtin, God wot, whoſo couth it rede,
The dethe of every man withoutin drede.

In ſterris many a Winter there before
Was write the deth of Hector, Achilles,
Of Pompey, Julius, or they were bore; 200
The ſtrife of Thebis, and of Hercules,
Of Sampſon, Turnus, and of Socrates,
The dethe; but that Men's wittis ben ſo dull,
That no wight can well rede it at the full.

This Sowdan for his privy Counſell ſent
And ſhortly of this matter for to pace,
He hath to them declarid his intent,
And ſeid certein but if he might have grace
To have Cunſtance, within a litil ſpace,
He n'as bot dede; and chargid them to hie 210
To ſhapin for his lif ſome remedy.

And divers men divers thingis ſeidin,
And Argumentis caſtin up and doune,
Many a ſubtil reſon forth they leydin,
They ſpeke of Magick, and Abuſioun,
But finally, as in Concluſioun,
They cannot ſe in that none advantage,
Ne in none othir way, ſaaf Mariage.

Than ſawe thei therin ſoche difficolte,
By way of reſon for to ſpeke all plaine, 220
Becauſe that there was ſoche diverſity,
Betwenin both their lawis, that they ſain,
They trow that no Chriſtin prince woldè ſain
Weddin his child undir our lawe ſo ſwete,
That us was taught by Mahound our Prophete.

And he answerid, rathir than I leſe
Cunſtance, I woll be Chriſtinid doutleſs.
I mot ben hers, I may none othir cheſe,
I pray you hold your Arguments in pece,
Savith my lif, and be not rechileſſe 230

To gettin her, that hath my lif in cure,
For in this wo I may not long endure.

What nedith gretter dilatation?
I ſay by trefy and Embaſſadry,
And by the Pop's Mediation,
And all the Chirch, and all the Chivalry.
That in deſtruction of Maumetrie,
And in increſe of Chriſt's lawè dere,
They ben accordid, as ye ſhallin here.

How that the Sowdan, and his Baronage, 240
And all his Liegis ſhuld y Chriſt nid be,
And he ſhall han Cunſtance in Mariage,
And certein gold, I n'or what quantite,
And hereto find ſufficient ſurete;
The ſame accord was ſworn on either ſide;
Now, faire Cunſtance, Almighty God The gyde.

Now woldin ſome Men waitin, as I gheſſe,
That I ſhuld tellin all the purveiaunce,
That the Empèrou of his nobilneſſe
Hath ſhapin for his doughtir Dame Cunſtance, 250
Wele may men know that ſo gret ordinaunce
May no man tellin in a litte Clauſe,
As was arrayid for ſo high a cauſe.

Biſhops ben ſhapin with her for to wend,
Lordis and Ladies, and Knightes of renounne,
And othir folk inow, this is the end,
And notifyd is throughout the tounne,
That every wight with gret devotiounne
Shuld prayin Criſt, that he this Mariage
Receive in gree, and ſpedin this voiage. 260

The day is comin of her departing,
I ſay the wofull fatall day is come,
That there may be no lengir tarying,
But forward they them dreſſin all and ſome;
Cunſtance, that is with ſorow all o'recome,
Full pale ariſt, and dreſſid her to wend,
For well ſhe ſeeth there is none othir end.

Alas! what wondir is it, though ſhe wept?
That ſhall be ſent to a ſtraunge Natiounne,
Fro frendis, that ſo tendirly her kept, 270
And be boundin undir Subjectionne
Of one ſhe knoweth not his Condiſiounne.
Husbondis ben all gode, and han ben yore,
That knowin wivis, I dare ſay no more.

Faſhir, ſhe ſaid, thy wretchid child Cunſtance,
Thy yonge doughtir, foſt'rid up ſo ſoft,
And ye, my Mo'dir, my Soverayne pleaſaunce,
Ovir all thingis (out take Criſt on loſſe)
Cunſtance your child her recommendith oft
Unto your grace, for I ſhall to Surrey, 280
Ne ſhall I nevir more ſee you with eye.

Alas! unto the barbary nation
I muſt anon, ſithin it is your will;
But Chriſt, that ſtaf for our redemption,
So geve me grace his beſtis to fulfill;
I wretchid woman no force though I ſpill,
Wymen are born to thraldom and penance,
And to ben undir Mann's governaunce.

I trow at Troy, whan Pyrrhus brake the wall,
Of Ilion, or brent was Thebes Cite, 290
Nor Rome, for the grete harme of Hannibal,
That Romanes hath vanquiſhid timis thre,
N'as herde ſoche tender wepyng for pite,
As in the chambir was for her parting,
But forth ſhe mote, whether ſhe wept or ſing.
O fers

O fers first moving cruill firmament
 With thy diurnal swegh that croudift aye,
 And hirlist all fro th' Est to th' Occident,
 That nat'rally wold hold anothir way,
 Thy crowding sett the heven in soche aray 300
 At the beginning of this fers voiage,
 That cruill Mars hath slaine this Mariage.

Infortunate ascendent tortuous,
 In which the Lord is helpless fall'n, alas!
 Out of his Angle' into the derkist hous
 Of Mars, O occifer as in this caas,
 O feble Mone, unhappy ben thy paas,
 Thou knittist there thou n'art not receivid,
 There thou were well fro thence art thou weyvid.

Imprudent Empèroure of Rome alas! 310
 Was there no Philosophir in thy toun?
 Is no tyme bett than othir in soche caas?
 Of Voiage is there none Elestioun?
 Namely to folk of high Conditoun
 Nat whan a rote is of a birth yknow?
 Alas! we ben too lèaud, or too slow.

To Ship is brought this wofull faire Maid
 Solempnly, with evèry Circumstaunce,
 Now Jesus Christ be with you al, she saide,
 Theren'is no more, but farewell faire Cunstane; 320
 She painith her to make gode Countenance;
 And forth I lete her saile in this manere,
 And toun I woll ageyn to my matere.

Explicit pars prima, sequitur pars secunda.

The Mo'ir of the Sowdan wel of vice
 Espyid hath her Sonn'is plaine entent,
 How he woll levin his old Sacrifice.
 And right anon she for her counsaile sent,
 And they ben comin to know what she ment,
 And whan assemblid was this folk in fere,
 She sett her down, and seide as ye shull here, 330

Lordis, q'ð she, ye knowin everichone,
 How that my Sone on point is for to lete
 The holy lawis of our Alkoran,
 Gevin by God's Messinger Machomete,
 But one arowe to the Grete God I herte,
 Lif shal rathir out of my body stert,
 Er Machomet's law out of my hert.

What shuld us tidin of this newè lawe
 But thraldome to our bodys and penaunce,
 And astirward in hellè to be draw, 340
 For we renyid Mahound our Creaunce?
 But, Lordis, woll ye make me asuraunce,
 As I shal say, assenting to my lore,
 And I shal make us safe for evirmore.

They sworin and assentin every man,
 To live with her and dye, and by her stond:
 And everich in the best wise that he can
 To strengthin her shal all his frendis fond.
 And she hath this Emprise ytake in hond,
 Which ye shull here, that I shal you devise, 350
 And to them all she spakin in this wise.

We shull us first faine Christendom to take,
 Cold watir shal not greve us but a lite,
 And I shal soche a revill and fest make,
 That as I trow I shal the Sowdan quite:
 For though his wife be christ'nid nere so white

She shal have nede to wash away the rede,
 Though she a font of watir with her lede.

O Sondonnefs, rote of inquite,
 Virago, thou Semiram the second! 360
 O Serpent undir femininite,
 Like to the Serpent depe in helle ybound!
 O fainid woman, all that may confound
 Vertue and Innocence through thy Malice:
 Is bred in The a nest of every vice;

O Sathan envions, fithin thilk day
 That thou wert chafid from our heritage,
 Well knowist thou to wryen the old way:
 Thou madist Eve to bring us in servage,
 Thou wold for don this Christin Mariage, 370
 This instrument, so welaway the while,
 Makest thou of wymen, whan thou wolt begyle.

This Soudonnefs, whom I thus blame and warie,
 Lete privily her Counsaile gon their way;
 What shuld I lenger in this tale tarye?
 She ridith to the Sowdan on a day,
 And said him, that she wuld reny her lay,
 And Cristindome of prestis hondis song,
 Repenting her she hethin was so long.

Beseching him to don her that honour, 380
 That she might have the Christin folk to fest,
 To plesin them I woll don my labour,
 The Sowdan said, I woll don all your hest,
 And kneeling thankid her of that request.
 So glad he was, he n'ist not what to say,
 She kist her Sone, and home she goth her way.

Arrivid ben these Christin folk to lond,
 In Surrey, with a gret and solempne rout,
 And hastily this Sowdan sent his sond,
 First to his Mo'ir, than to th' reign about, 390
 And seide, his wife was comin out of dout,
 And praydin her to ryde agen the quene,
 The honour of his reign for to sustene.

Gret was the prefs, and rich was the aray,
 Of Surreians, and Romans met yfere,
 The Mo'ir of the Sowdan, rich and gay,
 Recevith her with all so glad a chere,
 As any Mo'ir mought her doughtir dere:
 And unto the next Cite there beside
 A softe paas solempnly they ryde. 400

Nought trow I the triumph of Julius,
 Of which that Lucan makith such a bofte,
 Ne was royaller, ne more curious, 340
 Than was th' assembling of this blifsful hoste;
 But o this Scorpion, this wikkid ghost
 The Sowdonnefs, for all her flattering,
 Cast undir this full mortally to sting.

The Sowdan came himself sone aftir this,
 So rially, that wondir is to telle,
 He welcomith her with all joy and blifs, 410
 And thus in joy and mirth I lete them dwelle:
 The fruit of this mattere is for to telle.
 Whan time comin men thought it for the best,
 That revil stint, and men gon to their rest.

The time is come that this old Sowdannefs
 Ordainid hath the feste of which I told,
 And to the feste the Christin folk them drefs,
 And that in generall, both yong and old:
 And men may felle, and rialty beheld,
 And deynties mo than I can you devise, 420
 But all to dere they bought it er they rise.
 O Sowdan

O Sowdan, wo that thou art Succesour
To worldly blis spreynid with bitternefs,
The end of joy is our worldly labour,
Wo occupith the fine of our gladnefs,
Harkin this Counsaile for thy sikirnefs:
Upon thy glad day have thou still in mind
Th' unware wo or harme that comteh behind.

For shortly to tellin at o word,
The Sowdan and the Christin everichone 430
Ben all to hew, and stikid at the bord,
But it were only Dame Cunstance alone,
This old Sowdonnefs, this accurfid Crone,
Hath with her frendis done this cursid dede,
For she her self woude all the Countre lede.

There ne was Surrein none that was converted,
That of the Counsaile of the Soudon wor,
That ne was all to hewe er he asterted,
And Cunstance han they take anon fore hot,
And in a Ship all steerilefs, God wor, 440
They han her sett, and bid her lerne to saile
Out of Surrey ayenward to Itaile.

A certeine trefour that she thithir ladd,
And sothe to saine of vitaille gret plentie
They han her geve, and clothis eke she had;
And forth she sailith in the saltè See.
O my Cunstance, full of benignity,
O Emperour's yongè doughtir so dere,
He that is Lord of fortune be thy sterc.

She bleffith her, and with full pitous voïce 450
Unto the Crofs of Christ thus seide she,
O dere, o welefull Auter, holy croise,
Red of the lamb's blode, full of pite,
That wesh the world fro th' old iniquite,
Me fro the fend, and fro his clawis kepe,
That day that I shall drenchin in the depe.

Victorious tre, protection of true,
That only worthy werin for to bere
The King of hevin with his woundis newe,
The white lamb, that hurt was with a spere: 460
Flemere of fendis out of him and here,
On which thy limmis faithfully extenden,
Me kepe, and geve me might my life to menden.

Yeris and dayis stete this Creture,
Throughout the See of Grece, unto the Straite
Of Marock, as it was her aventure;
On many' a sory mele now may she baite,
Aftir her deth full oftè may she waite,
Er that the wildè wavis wold her drive
Unto the place there she sholdè arrive. 470

Men mightin askin why she was not slaine
Eke at the feste, who might her body save?
And I answe're to that demaund againe,
Who savid Daniel in th' horrible Cave?
There every wight, were he maistir or knave,
Was with the lions fretted or he astert:
No wight, but God, that he bare in his hert.

God list to shew his wonderful miracle
In her, for she shold se his mighty werkis,
Christ which that is to every harm triacle, 480
By certeine menis oft (as knowin Clerkis)
Doth thing for certeine end that full derk is
To mann's witt, that for our ignorance
Ne cannot know his prudent purveiance.

Now sith she was not at the fest yslaw,
Who kepith her fro drenching in the Sec?

Who keptè Jonas in the fish's mawe
Till he was spoutid out at Ninive?
Well may men know it was no wight but he
That kept the peple Ebrak from drenching 490
With dry fete thorough the red See passing.

Who hath the four spirites of the tempest,
That powir han to annoy land and See,
Both North and South, and also West and Est,
Annoyith nothir See, ne land, ne tre:
Sothly the commander of that was he;
That fro the tempest ay this woman kept,
As well whan she awoke, as when she slept.

Where mightin this woman mete and drink have?
Thre yere and more how lastith her vitaille? 500
Who fed-th' Egyptian Mary in the Cave,
Or in the desert (none but Christ Sans faile)
Five thousand folk, it was as grette marvaile
With loavis five, and fishis too to fede,
God sent his soisoun at her grettist nede.

She drivith forth unto our Ocean
Throughout the wildè see, till at the last
Undir an hold, that namin I ne can,
Fer in Northumberland, the wave her cast,
And in the sand her ship stikid so fast, 510
That thence n'oldè it not for all the tide,
The will of Crist was, she shold there abide.

The Constable o'th' castle doune is fare
To sene this wreck, and all the ship he sought,
And found this wery woman full of care,
He found also the trefour she had brought,
And in her language mercy she besought
The life out of her body for to twynn,
Her to delivir of wo she was in.

A mannir Latin corrupt was her speche, 520
But algates thereby was she undirfond,
The Constable him list no lengir seche,
This wofull woman broughtin he to lond;
She knelith down, and thankith Goda's sond;
But what she was she wolde no man sey,
For foule ne faire, although she shoide dey.

She seid she was so masid in the see,
That she forgate her mindè by her trouth;
The Constable of her hath soche pite,
And eke his wife, that they wepin for routh: 530
She was so diligent withoutin slouth
To serve and plese everichone in that place,
That all her love, that lokin on her face.

The Constable, and Hermigild his wife
Were Paynims, and that Countre every where,
But Hermigild lovid her as her life,
And Cunstance hath so long sojourned there,
In Orisons, with many bittir tere,
Till Jesu hath converted through his grace
Dame Hermigi'd, Constables of that place. 540

In all that lond no Christin durst arout,
All Christin folk ben flemed fro that Countre,
Through Painims that conquerid all about
The Plagis of the north by lond and See;
To Walis fled the Christianite
Of olde Britons dwelling in this Isle,
There was their refuge for the mene while.

But yet n'as Christin Britons so exiled,
But there was some still in their privite
Honourid Crist, and hethin folk begiled; 550
And nie the Castle soche there dwellid thre,
P
That

That one of them was blind, and might not se,
But it were with thilk eyin of his mind,
With which men sein aftir they ben blind.

Bright was the Sunne, as in the Sommer's day,
For which the Constable, his wife also,
And Cunstance han ytaken the right way
Toward the see, a furlong wey or two,
To playin, and to romin to and fro,
And in their walk this blind man they met, 560
Crokid and old, with eyin fast yshet.

In the name of Christ, cryed this blind Bretonn,
Dame Hermigild geve me my sight again,
This lady wax afrayid of the soune,
Left that her husbond, shortly for to sain,
Wold her for Jesus Christ's lore have slaine.
Till Cunstance made her bold, and bid her werch
The will of Crist, as doughtir of his Cherche.

The Constable was abashed of that sight,
And seide, what amountith all this fare? 570
Cunstance answer'd, Sir, it is Crist's might,
That helpith folk out of the fend's snare:
And so forth she gan our law declare,
That she the Constable, er it was eve,
Convertid hath, and on Crist made him leve.

This Constable was nought lord of this place
Of which I speke, there as he Cunstance fond,
But kept it strongly many' a winter space,
Undir Alla King of Northumberland,
That was full wise, and worthy of his hond, 580
Again the Scottis, as men may well here;
But toun I woll again to my mattere.

Sathan, that evre' us waitith to begile
Saw of Cunstance all her perfectioun,
And cast anon how he might quite her wele,
And made a yong Knight, that dwelt in the toun,
Love her so hote of foule affectioun,
That verily him thought that he shold spill,
But he of her might onis have his will.

He woith her, but it availith nought, 590
She wold do no sin by no mannir wey,
And for despite he compassed in his thought
To makin her a shameful dethe to dey,
He waitith whan the Constable' is away.
And privily upon a night he crept
To Hermigild's chambir while she slept.

Werie for-wakid in their Orisons
Slepith Cunstance and Hermigild also,
This Knight through Sathanas temptatiouns
All fottly is unto the bedd ygo, 600
And cut the throte of Hermigild atwo;
And laid the bloody knife by Dame Cunstance,
And went his wey, there God geve him mischance.

Sone aftir cometh this Constable again,
And eke Alla, that King was of that Lond,
And saw his wife dispitously yslaine,
For which he wept, and full oft wrang his hond,
And in the bedd the bloody knife he fond,
By Dame Cunstance, alas! what might she sey?
For very wo her wit was all away. 610

To King Alla was told all this mischance,
And eke the time, the where, and in what wise,
That in a Ship was fondin this Cunstance,
As heretofore ye han me herd devise;
The King's hert for pitè gan agrife,

Whan he beheld so benign a Creture,
Fallen in disese, and in misaventure.

For as the lamb towards his deth is brought,
So stant this innocent before the King,
This false Knight that hath this tresoun ywrought 620
Berith her in hond, she hath don this thing,
But natheless there was a gret murnyng
Emong the folk, that said they cannot ghes
That she had don so grete a wikidnes.

For they han sene her evir so vertuous,
And loving Hermigild right as her life,
Of this bare witness everich in the house,
Save he that Hermigild slew with his knife;
This gentill King hath caught a grete motife
Of this witness, and thought he wold enquire 630
Depir in this cause, the trouth for to lere.

Alas! Cunstance, thou hast no champion,
Ne fightin canst thou not, so welaway!
But he that starft for our redemption,
And bond Sathan that lyith there he lay,
So be thy stronge champion this day.
For but if Crist Miracle' upon The kithe,
Withoutin gilt thou shalt be slaine aswithe.

She set her down on knees, and thus she said, 640
"Immortal God, that savidist Susanne
"Fro false blame, and thou mercifull maide,
"Mary I menè, doughtir to Seint Anne,
"Biforne whose child Angelis sing Ofanne,
"If I be gilty of this felonie,
"My succour be, or ellis shall I die.

Have ye not sene some time a palè face
Emong the prees, of them that hath ben lad
Toward his deth, where as him gat no grace,
Right soche a colour in his face he had,
The men might know his face that was bestad 650
Emongis all the facis in the rout,
So stont Cunstance, and lokith her about.

O Quenis, living in prosperite,
Duchesses, and ye ladys everichone,
Havith some ruthe on her adversite,
An Empèrou's doughtir here stont alone
She hath no wight, to whome to make her mone,
O blode roiall, that stondith in this drede,
Fer ben thy frendis at thy gretist nede.

This Alla King hath soche Compassioun 660
(As gentil hert is ay full of pite)
That from his eyin ran the watir doune:
Now hastily do fett a boke, qd he,
And if this Knight woll swerin how that she
This woman slough, yet woli we us avise,
Whom that we woli, that shall ben our Justice.

A Briton boke writt with Evangelis
Was fett, and on this boke he sware anon,
She giltif was; and in the mene whilis
A hond him smote upon the nekk's bone, 670
That down he fell at onis as a stone;
And both his eyin brast upon his face,
In sight of every body in that place.

A voice was herd in gen'rall audience,
That seide, thou hast slaunderid giltles
The daughtre' of holy Cherch in high presence,
Thus hast thou don and yet I hold my pece.
Of this Marvaile agast was all the prefe,
As masid folk they stod in everichone
For drede of wreck, save Dame Cunstance alone.
Grete

Grete was the drede, and eke the repentaunce
Of them that haddin wrong suspectioun
Upon this fely innocent Cunstane,
And for this marvaile in Conclusioun,
And by Cunstane's Mediatoun,
The King, and many othir in that place,
Convertid was, thankid be Godd's grace.

This fals Knight was yslaine for his untruth,
By the judgement of King Alla' hastily,
And yet Cunstane had of his deth grete ruthe; 690
And aftir this, Jesus of his mercy
Made King Alla weddin full solemnly
This holy maide, that is so bright and shene,
And thus hath Christ madin Cunstane a Quene.

But who was wofull, if I shall not lie,
Of this weddyng, but Donoyeld? no mo,
The King's Mo'ir, full of tirannie,
Her thought her cursid hert would braft atwo,
She wold not that her sonne had doin so:
Her thought it a despyght that he shold take 700
So straunge a Creture for to be his Make.

Me list not of the chaff ne of the stre
Makin so long a tale as of the Corn,
What shuld I tellin of the rialte
Of that wedding, or which course goth befor,
Who blowith in a trompe, or in an horn.
The fruit of every tale is for to say
They etin, drinkin, daunce, singin, and play.

They gon to bedd as it was skill and right,
For though that wivis ben full holy things, 710
Yet they must take in pacience anight
Soche necessities as yben plesings
To folk that han yweddid them with rings,
And lay a lite their holiness aside
As for the time, it may no bett betide.

On her he gat a knave child anon,
To a Bishop, and his Constable eke
He toke his wife to kepe, whan he is gon
To Scotland ward, his somen for to seke.
Now Cunstane, that is so humbil and meke, 720
So long is gon with thilk child till that fill
She halt her chambre' abiding Crist's will.

The time is come, and a Knave child she bare,
Mauritius at font ston they him call,
This Constable doth forth a Messinger,
And wrote unto his king that clepid Alle,
How that this blisfull tidings is befall,
And othir tidings nedefull for to saie,
He takes the lettre' and forth he goth his waie.

This Messinger to don his advantage, 730
Unto the King's Mo'ir ridith swithe,
And salwith her tull faire in his language,
Madam, q' he, ye may be glad and blithe,
And thankin God an hundrid thousand sithe,
My Lady Quene hath Knave child without dout
To joy and blis of all this reign about.

Lo here the letters selid of this thing,
That I mote bere in all the haste I may;
Yeve ye well ought unto your sonne the King,
I am your servant both by night and day, 740
Donegild answerde as at this time nay,
But here I wold all night thou take thy rest,
To morow wold I say The what I left.

This Messinger drank sadly ale and wine,
And stolin were his letters privily

Out of his box, while he slept as a swine;
And counterfittid was full subtilly
Anothir letter wrote full sinfully
Unto the King direct of this mattere 750
Fro his Constable, as ye shullin here.

The letter spake the Quene deliv'rid was
Of so horrible a fendish Creture,
That in the Castle none so hardy was
That any while durstin therein endure:
The Mo'ir was an elf by aventure
Y come by charmis or by forcerie,
And every wight harith her company.

Wo was the King whan he the letter sene,
But to no wight he told his sorow fore,
But with his ownè hand he wrote agene 760
Welcome the sond of Crist for evirmore
To me, that am new lernid in his lore:
Lord, welcome be thy lust, and thy plesance,
My lust I put all in thine ordinaunce,

Kepith this child, all be it soule or faire,
And eke my wife unto my home coming;
Christ, whan him list may sendin me an heir
More greable than this to my liking;
This letter he seled privily weping,
Which to the Messinger was takin sone, 770
And forth he goth, there is no more to done.

O Messinger fulfilled of dronkinness,
Strong is thy breth, thy limmis faltrin aye,
And thou still bewrayist all secretness,
Thy mind is lorne, thou janglist as a jaye,
Thy face is tournid in a new aray,
There dronkinness reignith in any rout,
There n'is no counsaile hid withoutin dout.

O Donegild, I have none English digne
Unto thy malice, and thy tyrannie, 780
And therefore to the fend I The resigne,
Let him enditin of thy traitery,
Fie! Mannish fie! O nay by God I lie,
Fie fendish Spirit! for I dare wel tell
Though thou here walk, thy spirit is in hell.

This Messinger came from the King againe
And at the King's Mo'ir's house he light,
And she was of this Messinger full faine,
And plesid him in all that ere she might, 790
He dronk, and well his girdle undir pight,
He slepith, and he snortith in his gife,
All night, untill the sonne gan to arise.

Eft were his letters stolin everichone,
And counterfittid letters in this wife,
The King commands his Constable anon
On pain of hanging on a high Jewise,
That he ne sholde sultrin in no wife
Cunstane within his relme for to abide
Thre dayis, and a quarter of a tide.

But in the same ship as that he her fond, 800
Her and her yonge sonne, and all her gere
He sholde croudin, and puttin fro the londe,
And charge her that she nevir eft come there,
O my Cunstane, well may thy gost have fere
And sleping in thy dreame ben in pennaunce
Whan Donegild cast all this ordinaunce.

This Messinger, on morrow whan he woke,
Unto the Castle hoidith the next way,
And to the Constable the letter toke,

And

And whan that he this pitous letter seie, 810
Full oft he seide alas and welaweie!
Lord Crist, qð he, how may this world endure?
So full of sinn is many a Creture.

O mighty God, if that it be thy will,
Sin thou art rightful judge, how may it be
That thou wilt suffer innocence to spill,
And wikid folk reign in prosperite?
O Gode Cunstance, alas! so wo is me,
That I mot ben thy tormentour, or deie,
On sham'is deth, there n'is none othir weie. 820

Wepin both yong and old in all that place,
Whan that the king this cursid letter sent,
And Dame Cunstance with a dedly pale face
The fourthe day toward her ship she went,
Nathelès she takith in gode entent
The will of Crist, and kneling on the strond
She seide, Lord, aye welcome be thy sond.

He that me kepid from that falsè blame
While I was on the lond emongis you,
He can me kepe fro harme and eke fro shame, 830
In the salt See, although I see not how:
As strong as evir he was he is now.
In him I trust, and in his Moðir dere,
That is to me my saile and eke my sterc.

Her litil child lay weping in her arme,
And kneling pitously to him she saide,
Pece litil Sonne, I woll do The no harme,
With that the kerchese off her hede she braide,
And ore his litil eyin she it laide,
And in her arme she lullith it full fast, 840
And unto heaven her eyin up she cast.

Moðir, qð she, and Maidin bright Mary, ~
Soth is that thorough woman's eggement
Mankind was lorn, and damnid aye to die,
For which thy child was on thy crosse yrent,
Thy blisfull eyin saw all his turment,
Then is there no comparison betwene
Thy wo, and any wo man may sustene.

Thou saw thy chyld yslain before thyn cyn,
And yet livith my litil child parfay; 850
Now lady bright, to whom all wofull cryen,
Thou glory of womanhode, thou faire May,
Thou havin of refuge, bright Sterre of day,
Rewe on my child, that of thy gentilness
Ruist on every rufull in distrefs.

O littil child alas! what is thy gilt
That never wroughtist sinn as yet parde?
Why woll thyn hardè faðir have The spilt?
O mercy derè Constable, qð she, 860
As let my litil child dwell here with The,
And if thou dost not savin him fro blame,
So kifs him onis in his faðir's name.

Therewith she lokith bakward to the lond,
And saide, farewell my husbond ruthlès;
And up she rist, and walkith down the strond,
Toward the ship, her follows all the prefs,
And ay she prays her child to hold his pece,
And takith leve, and with holy entent
She bleffith her, and to the ship she went.

Vitailid was the ship, it is no drede, 870
Habundantly for her a full long space,
And othir necessities that shold nede,
She had ynow, herried be Godd'is grace;
Wind and wethir Almighty God purchase,

And bring her home, I can no bettir say,
But in the See she drivith forth her way.

Alla the King came home sone afir this
Unto this Castle of which I you told,
And askith where his wife, and his child is; 880
The Constable gan at his hert wax cold,
And plainly all the manner him ytold,
Ye han herd, I can tell it no better,
And shewed the King his sele, and his letter:

And seide, Lord, as ye commaundid me
On peine of deth, so have I done certeine:
This Messinger turmentid was till he Must beknowin, and tellin plat and plaine
Fro night to night in what place he had laine.
And thus by witty subtile enquering
Imagin'd was by whome this harme gan spring.

The hond was knowin that the letter wrot,
And all the venim of this cursid dede,
But in what wise certeinly I n'otc,
Th' effect is this, that Alla out of drede
His Moðir slow, that may men plainly rede,
For that she traytour was t' her Allegeaunce,
Thus endith old Doncgild with mischaunce.

The sorrow that this Alla night and day
Makith for his child, and his wife also, 900
There is no tonguè that it tellin may;
But now woll I unto Dame Cunstance go,
That stitith in the See in paine and wo,
Five yere and more, as likid Crist'is sond
Er that her ship approchid unto lond;

Undir an Hethin Castle at the last,
(Of which the name in my text I not find)
Cunstance and eke her child the See upcast,
Almighty God, that savith all mankind,
Have on Cunstance, and on her child some mind,
That fallin are in hethin hond eftstone, 910
In point to spill, as I shall tell you sone.

Doun from the Castill comith many' a wight
To gaurin on this Ship, and on Cunstance,
But shortly fro the Castill on a night
The Lord'is Steward, God geve him mischance,
A thefe that had renyid our Creance,
Came to the Ship alone, and seide he shold
Her Lemman be, whethir she wold or n'old.

Tho was the wretchid woman wo bygon,
Her child and she cryid full pitously, 920
But blisfull Mary halpe her anon,
And with her strogling well and mightily
The thefe fell ovr the bord fodeinly,
And in the See he drenchid for vengeance,
And thus hath Crist unwemmid kept Cunstance.

O soule lust of Luxury, lo thine end,
Not only that thou faintist Mann'is mind,
But verily thou wilt his body shend,
The end of thy werk, or thy lustis blind 930
Is complaining, how many men may find
That not for werk sometime, but for th'entent
To donn this sinn, ben either slaine or shent?

How may this wekè woman have the strength,
Her to defend against this renagate?
O Goliath, unmesurable of length,
How mightin David make The so amate?
So yong, and of armure so desolate
How durst he lokin on thy dredful face?
Well may man sene it is but Godd'is grace.

Who

Who gave Judith corage and hardines
To slaine him Holofernes in his tent,
And to deliver out of wretchidnes
The peple' of God? I say for this intent
That right as God spirit and vigour sent
To them, and saved them out of mischaunce,
So sent he might and vigour to Cunstance.

Forth goth her ship thorough the narrow mouth
Of Jubalter and Cept, ydryving ay
Sometimis North, and sometime West and South,
And sometime Est, full many werie day, 950
Till Christ's Mothir, blefid be she ay,
Hath shapin thorough her endles godenes
To make an end of all her heviness.

Explicit secunda pars, & sequitur pars tertia.

Now let us stint of Cunstance but a throw,
And speke we of the Roman Emperour,
That out of Surrey hath by letters know,
His slaughtered Christin folk, and dishonour
Done to his daughter by a false traytour,
I mene the curfid wikid Sowdonnes,
That at the fesselet slene both more and less. 960

For which this Emperour hath sent anon
His Senatour, with royall ordinaunce,
And othir Lordis, God wor, many one,
On Syrreins to takin high vengeance,
They brennin, slen, and bring them to mischaunce,
Full many' a day, but shortly this is th' end,
Homeward to Rome they shapin them to wend.

This Senatour returns with victory,
To Romeward, sailing full rially,
And met the ship driving, as faith story,
In which Cunstance settin full pitously, 970
Nothing ne knew he what she was, ne why
She was in soche aray, ne she nill sey
Of her estate, although she sholdè dey.

He bringith her to Rome, and to his wife
He gave her, and her yongè Sonn also,
And with the Senatour she lad her life.
Thus can our Lady bringin out of wo
Wofull Cunstance, and many othir mo.
And longè time dwellid she in that place, 980
In holy werkis evir, as was her grace.

The Senatour's wife her Aunt ywas,
But for all that she knew her ne'er the more;
I woll no lengir tary in this caas,
But to King Alla, which I spake of yore,
That for his wife wepith, and sikith sore,
I woll return, and let I woll Cunstance
Undir the Senatour's governaunce.

King Alla, which that had his Mo'ir slaine,
Upon a day fell in soche repentaunce, 990
That if I shortly tellin shall and plaine,
To Rome he comith to receive pennaunce,
And put him in the Pop's Ordinaunce,
In hie and low, and Jesu Crist besought
Forgeve his wikid werkis that he wrought.

The fame anon thorough Rome tounè is born,
How Alla King shall come in pilgrimage,
By Herbingers that wentin him befor,
For which the Senatour, as was usage,
Rode him againe, and folk of his image, 1000
As well to shew his hie magnificence,
As to doin any King reverence.

940 Grete cherè doth this nobil Senatour
To King Alla, and he to him also,
Evèrich of them doth othir honour,
And so befell, that in a day or two
This Senatour is to King Alla go,
To feste, and shortly if I shall not lie,
Cunstance's Sonn went in his cumpany.

Some sayin at the request of Cunstance 1010
This Senatour had lad this child to feste,
I may not tellin every circumstance
Be as he may, there was he at the lest:
But sothe it is, right at his Mo'ir's heste
Biforn Alla, during the met's space,
The child stode, loking in the King's face.

Alla King hath of the child gret wondir,
And to the Senatour he saide anon,
Whose is that faire child, that stondith yondir?
I n'ot, q'ð he, by God, and by St. John: 1020
A Mo'ir he hath, but ne fa'ir non,
That I of wot; but shortly in a stound
He told Alla how that the child was found.

But, God wor, q'ð the Senatour also,
So vertuous a liver in my life
Ne saugh I nevre' as she, ne herd of mo
Soch worldly woman, maidin ne of wife,
I dare well say she had levir a knife
Thorough her brest, than ben a woman wik,
There is no man couth bring her to that prik.

Now was the child as like unto Cunstance
As possible is creture for to be,
King Alla hath the face in remembraunce
Of Dame Cunstance, and thereon musid he
Yeve that the child's Mo'ir was not she,
That is his wife, and privily he sight,
And sped him fro the table all he might.

Parfay him thought the fantom in his hede,
And oughtin demin of skillfull judgment
That in the saltè See his wife is dede; 1040
And aftirward he made this argument,
What wot I if that Crist hath hithir sent
My wife by See, as well as he her sent
To my Countre fro thence that she was went?

And aftirnone home with the Senatour
Goth Alla, for to se this wondir chance,
This Senatour doth Alla grete honour,
And hastily he sent aftir Cunstance;
But trustith wele her lustith not to dance.
Whan that she wiste wherefore was that sond,
Unneth upon her fete she mightè stond,

Whan Alla saw his wife, faire he her grete,
And wepte that it was ruth for to se,
For at the first loke that he on her fete,
He knew well verily that it was she,
And for sorow as dumb stant as a tre:
So was her herte yshet in her distrefs,
Whan she rememberid his unkindnes.

Twyis she sownid in his ownè sight
He wept, and him excusith pitously, 1060
Now God, q'ð he, and his hallowis bright,
So willy on my Soule havin mercy,
That of your harme as giltles am I,
As is Maurice my Sonne, so like your face,
Ellis the fend me fetch out of this place.

Long was the sobbing, and the bittir paine,

Q

Er

Er that their wofull hertis mightin cese,
 Grete was the pitè for to here them plaine,
 Thorough which plaintis gan their wo encrese.
 I pray you all my labour to relese, 1070
 I may not tell their wo untill to morow,
 I am so werie for to speke their sorow.

But finally, whan that the soth is wist
 That Alla giltyles was of her wo,
 I trow an hundren timis ben they kist,
 And soche a blifs is there betwixt them two,
 That save the joy, that lastith evirmo,
 There is no ylike, that any cature
 Hath sene or shall while the world may endure.

Tho prayid she her husbond mekily 1080
 In the relese of her long pitous paine
 That he wold pray her faðir specially,
 That of his Majestty he wold encline
 To vouchafin some day with him to dine.
 She prayid him eke, he shold by no way
 Unto her faðir no word of her say.

Some woldè sey, how that the Child Maurice
 Doth this message untill the Empèrou; 1090
 But as I gessè, Alla was not so nice
 To him, that was of so sov'rain honour,
 As he that is of Christen folk the flour,
 To send a child, but it is bet to deme
 He went himself, and so it may wele seme.

The Empèrou hath grauntid gentillie
 To come to dinner, as he him besought;
 Redy he came, and lokid besilie
 Upon the child, and on his daughter thought.
 Alla goth to his inn, and as him ought
 Arrayid for this feste in every wise,
 As ferforth as his conning may suffice. 1100

The morow came, and Alla gan him drefs,
 And eke his wife, the Empèrou to meet.
 And forth they ride in joy, and in gladness,
 And when she saw her Faðir in the street,
 She light adown, and fallith him to feet;
 Faðir, qð she, your yongè child Cunstance
 Is now full clene out of your remembrance.

I am your daughter Cunstance tho, qð she,
 That whilom ye han sent unto Surrye,
 It am I, Faðir, that in the salt See
 Was put alone, and dampnid for to dye:
 Now, my gode Faðir, I you mercy crye,
 Send me no more unto non Hethinesse,
 But thankin my Lord here of his kindnesse,

Who can the pitous joy ytellin all
 Betwixt them thre? Sith they ben thus ymett:
 But of my Tale makin an end I shall;
 The day goth fast, I wol no lengir lett.
 To dinner than thes glad folk them yfett
 In joy and blifs at mete I lete them dwell, 1120
 A thousand fold well more than I can tell.

This child Maurice was sithin Empèrou
 Made by the Pope, and livid Christinly;
 To Christ's Church he diddin grete honour;
 But I lete all this Story passin by,
 Of Cunstance is my Tale specially.
 In oldè Roman gestis men may find
 Mauric's life; I bere it not in mind.

This King Alla, whan he his timè sey
 With his Cunstance, his holy wife so swete, 1130
 To Englund ben they comin the right wey:
 Where as thei live in joy and in quiete,
 But littil while it lastith, I you hete,
 Joy of this world. For time woll not abide,
 Fro day to night, it changith as the tide.

Who evir lived in soche delite a day
 That him ne mevid either Conscience,
 Or ire, or talent, or some kyn affray,
 Envy, or Pride, or Passion, or offence?
 I ne say but for this end and sentence,
 That littil while in joy, or in plesauce
 Lastith the blifs of Alla with Cunstance.

For Deth, that taketh of hie and low his rente,
 When passid was a yere even as I gessè,
 Out of this world this King Alla hath hente;
 For whome Cunstance hath full grete hevinessè
 Now let us prayin God his Soule to blesse.
 And Dame Cunstance, thus finally to sey,
 Toward the Town of Rome goith her wey.

To Rome is commin this holy cature, 1150
 And findith there her Faðir whole and sound;
 Now is she scapid all her aventure:
 And whan that she her Fathir hath yfound
 Down on her knees, she fallith to the ground,
 Weeping for tendirnesse in her hert blith,
 And herryeth God an hundred thousand sith.

In vertue, and in holy alm'isdede
 Thei livin, and nevir asunder wende,
 Till deth departith them, this life thei lede.
 Now farith well, my Tale is at an end.
 Now Jesu Christ, that of his might may fend
 Joy afir wo; governe us in his grace
 And kepe us allè, that ben in this place.

Thus endeth the Man of Lawe's TALE. And next follows the SQUIER's PROLOGUE.

The SQUIER's PROLOGUE.

OUR Host upon his stirups stode anon,
 And seide, gode men, herk'nith everichon,
 This was a thrifty tale for the nones,
 Sir Parish priest, q'ð he, for Godd'is bones,
 Tell us a Tale, as was thy forward yore,
 I se well that ye lernid men in lore
 Can mochil gode, by Godd'is dignity.
 The Parson him answerd, benedicite!
 What ails the man so sinfully to swere?
 Our Host answerde, o Jenkin, be ye there? 10
 Now gode Men, q'ð our Host, herk'nith to me,
 I smell a loller in the wind, q'ð he,
 Abidith for Godd'is digne passioun,
 For we shull have a predication,

This loller here woll prechin us somewhat.
 Nay by my faðir's soule, that shall he nat,
 Saidè the Squier, here shall he not preche,
 He shall no gospel glosin here ne teche.
 We levith all in the grete God, q'ð he,
 He woldè sowin some difficulte,
 Or springin some Cokkle in our clene corn,
 And therefore Host, I warnè The beforne:
 My jolly body shall a tale now tell,
 And I shall klinkin you so mery' a bell,
 That I shull wakin all this Cumpany,
 But it shall nor ben of Philosophy,
 Ne of Phisik, ne termis queint of law;
 There is but litil Latyn in my maw.

20

The

The SQUIER's TALE.

The King of Araby sendith to Cambuscan, King of Sarra, a Horse and a Sword of rare qualite, and to his Daughter Canace a Glas and a Ring; by the virtue whereof she understandeth the Language of all Fowles. Much of this Tale is either lost, or else never finished by Chaucer.

T Sarra in the lond of Tartary
A There dwelt a King that warrid on Ruffy,
 Through which there dyid many' a doughty
 Man;

This nobil King was callid Cambuscan
 Which in his time was of so grete renoun,
 That there n'as no where, in no regioun,
 So excellent a Lord in alle thing:
 Him lakkid nought that longid to a King.
 As of the Sect, of which that he was born,
 He kept his law, to which that he was sworn;
 And thereto he was hardy, wise, and rich,
 And pitous, and justè, alwey yliche;
 True of his word, benign, and honourable
 Of his Corage, as any Centre stable,
 Yong, fresh, and strong, of armis desirous,
 As any bachelor of all his house.
 A fair person he was, and fortunate,
 And alwey kept so well royall estate,
 That there was no where soche another Man.
 This noble King, this Tarte Cambuscan,
 Had two sonnys on Eltheta his wife,
 Of which the eldist hightrin Algarisse:
 That othir was yclepid Camballo.
 A daughter had this worthy King also,
 That yongist was, and hightè Canace;
 But for to tellin you all her bewte
 It lieth not in my tongue, ne my conning,
 I dare not undertake so high a thing,
 Mine English eke is insufficient,
 It must ben a Rhetor full excellent,
 That couth his colours longing for that art,
 If he shold her describe in any part.
 I am none soche, I mote speke as I can.

And so befell, that whan this Cambuscan
 Hath twenty winter born his diademe,
 As he was wont fro yere to yere, I deme,
 He lete the feste of his Nativity
 Do cryin thorough Sarra his city,
 The last Idus of March, after the yere
 Phæbus the Sunne full jolly was and clere:
 For he was nigh his exaltation
 In Mart's face, and in his Mansion
 In Aries, the cholerick hot signe,
 Full lusty was the weðir and benigne,
 For which the foules agen the Sunnè shene,
 What for the Seson, and the yonge grene,
 Full loudè songin their affections,
 Them semid to han gettin protections
 Agen the swerd of winter kene and cold.

This Cambuscan, of which I have you told,
 In royall vestiments sit on his deis,
 With Diademe, full high in his paleis,
 And held his feste so royall and so riche,
 That in this world ne was there none it liche:
 Of which if I shold tell all the array,
 Then wolde it occupy a Sommer's day:
 And eke it nedith not for to devise
 At every coursè the order of service.
 I woll not tellin now of their straunge sews,
 Ne of their Swans, ne of their heronsews,

Eke in that lond (as tellin Knightis old)
 There is some mete, that is full dainty hold,
 That in this lond men retche of it but small;
 There is no man that may reportin all.

I woll not tarry you, for it is prime,
 And for it is no frute, but los of time;
 To my first purpose woll I have recourse.
 And so befell, that aftir the third course,
 While that the King sat thus in his Noblay,
 Herk'ning his Ministrelis their thingis play
 Beforn him at his bord deliciously;
 In at the hallè dore full sodeinly

40 There came a Knight upon a stede of brass,
 And in his hond a brode mirrour of glas,
 Upon his thomb he had of gold a ring,
 And by his side a nakid swerd hanging:
 And up he ridith to the hiè bord,
 In all the hall ne was there spoke a word,
 For marveile of this Knight, him to behold
 Full besily they waitin yong, and old.

This straungè Knight, that come thus sodeinly,
 All armid, save his hede, full royally,
 50 Salued the King and Quene, and Lordis all,
 By ordir, as they sittin in the hall,
 With so hie reverence and obeisaunce,
 As well in Spechè as in Countinaunce,
 That Sir Gawayn with his old Curtisy
 (Although he come agen out of Fairy)
 He coude him nought amendin with no word.

And aftir this beforn the hiè bord
 He with a manly voice saide his messaige
 Aftir the forme usid in his language
 60 Withoutin vice of syllable' or letter,
 And for his tale sholdin seme the better,
 Accordant to his wordis was his chere;
 As techith art of speche them that it lere.
 All be it that I cannot sowne his stile,
 Ne can I not climbin so high a stile,
 Yet say I that as to comune intent,
 Thus moche amountith all that er' he ment,
 If so be that I have it in my mind;

He saide; The King of Araby and Inde,
 70 My Liegè Lord, on this so solempne day
 Salewith you as he best can or may.

And sendith you, in honour of your feste,
 By me, that am redy at al your heste,
 This Stede of brass, that esily and well
 Can in the space of a day naturell;
 That is to say, in four and twenty hours,
 Where so you listè, in drought or in shours,
 Berin your body into every place,
 Into which your hertè willith to pace,

80 Withoutin wem of you, through foule or faire,
 Or if you list to flein in the aire,
 As doth an Egle, whan him list to fore,
 This samè stede shall bere you evirmore,
 Wichoutin harme, till you ben there you lest,
 Though that you slepin on his bak and rest,
 And tourn agen with writhing of a pin;
 He that it wrought couð full many a gin;

He

He waitid many a Constellation,
Er he had don this operation;
And knew ful many tele, and many bond.

This Mirroure eke, that I have in my hond,
Hath soche a might, that men may in it se
Whan there shall fall any adversite
Unto your reigne, or to your self also,
And opin se who is your frend or fo:
And ovir all, if any lady bright
Hath set her hert on any manir wight,
If he be false, she shall the tresoun se,
His newe love, and all his subtilte
So opinly, that there shall nothing hide.

Wherefore agen this lusty Sommer tide,
This Mirroure, and this ring, that ye may se,
He hath sent to my Lady Canace,
Your excellent doughtir that now is here.
The vertues of this ring if ye woll here,
Are these; that if she list it for to were
Upon her thomb, or in her purse it bere,
There is no foule that sleith undir heven
That she ne shall wele understond his steven,
And know his mening opinly and plain;
And answer him in his language againe.
And every grafs that growith upon rote
She shall wele know, and whom it woll do bore,
All be his wounds nevir so depe and wide.
This nakid swerd, that hangith by my side
Soche vertue hath, that what man so ye smite,
Thorough his armure it woll kerve and bite,
Were it as thik, as is a braunchid Oke:
And what man that is woundid with the stroke 180
Shall ne'r be whole, till that you list of grace
To stroke him with the plat in thilke place
There he is hurt, that is as moche to saine,
Ye motè with the plattè swerd againe
Strokin him in the wound, and it woll close,
This is the very soth withoutin glose:
It failith not while it is in your hold.

And whan this Knight hath first his Tale ytold;
He ridd out of the Hall, and down he light;
His Stede, which that shone as the sunnè bright, 190
Stant in the Court as still as any stonè;
The Knight is to his chambir lad anon,
He is unarmed, and to the mere yfette,
And all these presents full rich ben yfett,
That is to saine, the swerd, and the mirroure,
All born anon was unto the high tower,
With certeine officers ordeyned therefore;
And unto Canace the ring is bore
Solempnly there as the satt at the table;
But sikirly withoutin any fable,
The horse of brafs that may not be remewed
It stant as it were to the ground yglewed;
There may no man out of the place it drive
For non engine, or winlas, or polive,
And gode cause why, for they ken not the craft,
And therefore in the place they han it last,
Tyll that the Knight hath taught them the manere
To voidin him, as ye shall atur here.
Grete was the pres, that swarmid to and fro
To gaurin on this hors that stondith so,
For it so high was, and so brode and long,
So well proportionid for to ben strong,
Right as it were a stede of Lombardy,
So horsly therewith, and so quick of eye;
As it a gentil Poliss Courser were:
For certis fro his taile unto his ere
Nature ne art ne coude him nought amend:
In no degree as all the pepil wende,
But evirmore their most wondir it was,
How that it coude gon, and was all of brafs.
It was of Fairie as the pepil semid,
Divers folk diversly they han demid,

150 As many bedes as many wintes ther bene:
Thei murmur, as doin a swarm of Been,
And madin skilles afir their fantasies
Reherling of the oldè poetries,
And said it was ylike the Pegasè,
The horse that hadde wingis for to fle;
Or els it was the Grekis horse Sinon
That broughtin Troye to destruction 230
As men may in the oldè gestis rede.
My hert, qd one, is evirmore in drede,
I trow some men of armis ben therin,
160 That shapin them this cite for to win:
It were right gode that soch thingis wer know.
An othir rownid to his fellow low,
And seid, he lied; for it was rather like
An apperaunce, ymade by some magike.
As jogloures playin at these fellis grete
Of sundry thoughts, thus jangle thei and trete, 240
And as leaud pepil demich commonlie
Of thingis, that ben made more subtille
Than thei can in ther leaudnes comprehend
170 They demin gladly to the baddir end.
And some of them wondrin on the mirroure,
[That born was up into the Maister towr]
How men mightin in it such thingis se,
An othir seid, certis it might wele be
Naturally by compositiouns
Of angles, and of the resleciouns, 250
And seide that at Rome was soch an one,
Thei spak of Alcen, and Vitellon
And Aristote, that writith in their lives,
Of queint mirrouris, and of perspectives;
As knowin thei that han their bokis herde.
And othir folk han wondrid on the swerde;
That wold so percin thorough every thing;
And fall in spech of Telephus the King,
And of Achilles for his quynte spere
For he coude with it bothe hele and dere 260
Right in soche wise, as men may with that swerde,
Of which right now you have your fellis herde.
They speke of sundri harding of metall,
And speke of Medicinis ther withall
And how and when it sholdin hardnid be
Which is unknowin algate unto me.
Tho spelin thei of Canace's ring,
And seidin all, that soch a wondir thing
Of craft of ringis herde thei nevir non,
Save that he Moïsis, and King Salomon 270
Haddin a name of cuttyn in soch art,
Thus sayn the peple, and drawin them apart.
But natheles some seidin that it was 280 Wondir to makin of Fern ashin glas,
And yet is glas nought like ashin of fern,
But for that thei han knowin it so fern.
Therefore thei cesin jangle and there wondir.
As fore some wondir on the cause of Thundir,
On ebb and fode, on gosomor, and mill,
And on all thing; till that the cause is wist. 290
Thus jangle thei, and demen and devise,
Till that the King gan see his bord arise;
Phebus hath let the angle Mercurion all
And yet ascerding was the bafe royall,
The gentill Lyon, with his Aburion
Whan that this Tatar King, this Candouran
Rose from his borde, there as he late fute hie.
Before him goth the loud Murmuracion,
Till thei came to his chambrec of Paramentacion,
There as they tounin diverse instrumentes 300
That it is like a Heven for to here,
Now dancin lustie Venus children dere;
For in the Fish ther Ladie fare full hye,
And lolath on them with a frend's eye
This nobil King is late upon his Throne
This stranger Knight is set to him full cene.

And on the daunce he goth with Canace.
 Here is the revill, and the jollitie,
 That a dul man n'is able to devise,
 He must have knowin love and her service,
 And bene a festlich-man, as frush as May,
 That shoulde you devisin soch array,
 Who couthe tell you the form of dauncis
 So uncouth, and soch fresh countinauncis,
 Such subtil lokinges, and dissimulinges
 For dred of jelous menes appercevings?
 No man but Lancelot, and he is dede,
 Therefore I pass of all this lustyhedde.
 I say no more, but in this jollines
 I lete them, till men to suppir them drefs.
 The Steward biddith spicis for to hyc,
 And eke the wine in all this melodye,
 The Usheres and the Squiris ben ygone:
 The spicis and the wine is come anon.
 Thei ete and drink, and whan that had an end,
 To the Tempil, as reson was, they wend;
 The service done, thei suppin all by day,
 What nedith to reherfin the array?
 Ech man wor wele that at a King's feste
 Is plenty to the most and to the leste,
 And daintis mo than ben in my knowing.
 And astir suppir goth this nobill King
 To sene this horse of brafs, with all his rout
 Of Lordis, and of Ladies him about,
 Soch wondring there was on this horse of brafs,
 That sithin the grete Sege of Troye was,
 There as men wondrid on an horse also,
 Ne was there soch a wondring as was tho.
 But finally the King askith the Knight
 The vertue of this courfere and the might,
 And prayid him to tell his governaunce;
 The horse anon gan forth to trip and daunce,
 Whan that this Knight laid hold upon his reine,
 And seide, Sir, there is no more to seine,
 But when you list to ridin any where,
 You mote trill a pin stant in his ere,
 Which I shall tellin you between us two
 Ye mote nempne him to what place also,
 Or to what Contrè, that you list to ride;
 But when you come there as you list t'abide,
 Bid him descend; and trill anothir pin;
 [For therin lyth th' effect of all that gin]
 And he wol down descend, and done your will,
 And in that place he woll abidin still,
 Though all the world had the contrary sworne,
 He shall not thennis be throwin, ne borne.
 Or if you listin bid him thennis gone,
 Trill this pin, and he woll vanish anon
 Out of the sight of every mannere wight,
 And come agen, be it by day, or night,
 Whan that you list to clepin him agene,
 In soch a gife, as I shall to you seine,
 Betwixtin you and me, and that full sone.
 Ride when you list, there is no more to done.
 Enfourmid whan the King was of the Knight,
 And hath concevid in his wit aright,
 The mannir and the form of all the thing,
 Full glad and blith, this nobil doughty King
 Repairith to his revill as beforne;
 The bridyl is unto the Towr yborn,
 And kept emong his jewelles lefe and dere;
 The horse vanishith: I n'ot in what mannere,
 Out of there sight, ye get no more of me.
 But thus I lete in lust and jollitie
 This Cambuscan, and his Lordis festing,
 Till wele nighè the day began to spring.

Explicit pars prima, & sequitur secunda pars.

The noris of digestion, the slepe
 Gan on them wink, and bad them to take kepe,

That mete and drink, and labour wol have rest,
 And with a galping mouth them all he kest: 370
 And seide it was time to ly adoun
 For blode was in his exaltatioun.
 Cherishith blode, natur's frend, q'ð he,
 Thei thankin him, galping by two by thre,
 And every wight gan drawin him to rest,
 As slepe them bade; thei toke it for the best.
 Their dremis shall not now be told of me,
 Ful wer their hedis of Fumostie,
 That causith dremes, of which there is no charge.
 Thei slepin soundly, til it was prime large. 380
 The moste part, but it were Canace,
 [She was full mesurable' as wymin be.]
 For of her faðir had the toke her leve,
 And gon to rest sone astir it was eve;
 Her leste not appallid for to be,
 Nor on the morrow unfeestlich to se:
 And slepte her first slepe, and then awoke.
 For soche a joy she in her herte toke
 Both of her queint ring, and of her mirrour,
 That twenty timis she chaunged her colour: 390
 And in her slepe, right for impressioun,
 Of her mirrour she had a Vision.
 Wherefore ere that the Sunne gan up to glide,
 She clepid her Maistressis her beside,
 And seide, that her leste for to arise,
 These oldè wymen, that ben gladly wise
 As is their Maistress, answerde her anon,
 And seide, Madam, whiðir wol ye gon
 Thus erli? for folk ben allè at rest;
 I wol, q'ð she, arisin, for me lest 400
 No lengir for to slepe, but walk about.
 Her Maistress clepith wymen a grete rout,
 And up they risin well nie ten or twelve,
 Uprisith the fresh Canace her selve,
 As jolly and as bright as the yong Sunne,
 That in the ram up four degrees is runne;
 No higher was he whan she redy was,
 And forth she walkith esily a pace,
 Arayid for the lusty seson fote,
 For to play lightly, and to walk on fote, 410
 Not with but five or six of her meynè,
 And in a trench ferre in the Park goth she.
 The Vapor, which that fro the erthe glode,
 Makith the sunne to seme ruddy and brode,
 But nathelès it was so faire a sight,
 That it made all their hertis for to light;
 What for the seson, and for the morning,
 And for the foulis that she herdè sing,
 For right anon she wistè what they ment,
 Right by their song, and knew all their intent. 420
 The knottè why that every tale is told,
 If it be taryed till the lust be cold
 Of them that han it herk'nid astir yore,
 The favour passith ere lengir the more.
 For the fulsomnes of prolixite,
 And by the same reson, as thinkith me,
 I sholde unto the knottè condescend,
 And makin of her walking sone an end.
 Amid a tre, for dry as white as chalk,
 As Canacè was playing in her walk, 430
 There satt a Faucon ovre her hede ful hie,
 That with a pitous voice so gan to crie,
 That all the wode resoundid of her cry,
 And betin had her self ful pitously
 With both her wingis, till that the rede blode
 Ran endelong the tre there as she stode,
 And evir ~~and~~ and anon she cryed and shrighit, 440
 And with her bek her selfin so she pight,
 That there ne was Tigre ne cruil beste,
 That dwellith or in wode, or in forest,
 That n'old han wept, if that they wepin coude,
 For sorow of her, she shrighit ay so loude.

For

For there was never yet no man on live,
If that he cou'd a Faucon well describe,
That herd of soche another for fairnesse
As well of plumage as of gentilnesse
Of shape, of alle that might rek'nd be,
A Faucon peregrine than semid she
Of fremde lond, and evirmore as she stode
She swoundid now and now for lak of blode,
Till well nie is she fallin from the tre.

This King's faire doughtir, this Canace,
(That on her finger brought the queintè ring
Through which she undirstode well every thing
That any foule may in his Leddin faire,
And cou'd answere in his Leddin againe)
Hath undirstondè what this Faucon seyde,
And well nye for the routh almost she deyde,
And to the tre she goeth full hastily,
And on this Falcon lokith pitously,
And held her lappe abroad, for well she wist
The Falcon must yfallin fro the twist,
Whan that she swoundid next, for lak of blode;
A long while there to waitin her she stode,
Till at the last she spake in this manere
Unto the hauke, as ye shall astir here.

What is the cause, if it be for to tell,
That ye ben in this furiall payne of Hell?
Q's Canace unto this Hauke above.
Is this for sorue' of deth or los of love?
For as I trow these ben the causis two,
That causin most in gentill hertis wo.
Of othir harme it nedith not to speke,
For this your self upon your self you wreke,
Which provith wele that either ire or drede
More ben encheson of your cruill dede,
Sin that I se none othir wight you chafe,
For love of God so doth your selfe grace.
Or what may be your help? for West or Est
I never saw er now no bird ne beste
That fardè with himself so pitously;
Ye fle me with your sorow verily,
I have of you so grete compassioun;
For Godd's love come from the tre adoune,
And as I am a King's doughtir trewe,
If that I verily the causis knew
Of your disese, if it lay in my might
I wolde amend it er that it were night,
As wisly help me the grete God of kind,
And herbis eke shall I right now yfind
To helin with your hurtis hastily.
Tho shright this Falcon yet more pitously
Than er she did, and fell to ground anon,
And lyth aswound as dede as any stone;
Till Canace hath in her lapp her take,
Unto the time she gan of swoune awake,
And astir that she gan of swoune abreyd,
Right in the Hauk's Leddin thus she seyde.

That pite rennith sone in gentil hert
(Feling his similitude in peins smert)
Is provid al day, as men may it se,
As wel by werk, as by authority,
For gentil hert kepith ay gentilnesse,
I se well that ye have of my distres
Compassion, my fairist Canace,
Of very wymenly benignity,
That Nature in your principles hath sett;
But for none hope for to farin the bett,
But for to obey unto your hert fre,
And for to make others beware by me,
As by the whelp chastised is the Lion,
Right for that cause and that conclusion,
While that I have a leysure, and a space,
Mine harme I woll confessin er I pace.
And evir while that one her sorow told,
That othir wept, as she to watir wold.

Till that the Falcon bad her to be stil,
And with a sigh thus she seide her til.

There I was bred, alas! that ilke day,
And fostrid in a rock of Marble gray,
So tenderly, that nothing ailid me,
I ne wist not what was adversity,
Till I cou'd fly full hie undir the Sky.
Tho dwelled a Tercellet me faste by,
That semid a well of all gentilnesse;
Al were he full of treson and fallenesse,
It was so wrappid undir humble chere,
And undir hew of trowth, in soche manere,
Undir plesaunce, and undir bisy paine,
That no wight cou'd have wend that he cou'de faire;
So depe in graine he dyid his coloures;
Right as a Snake hidith him undir floures,
Till he may se his time for to bite:

Right so this God of Lov's hypocrite
Doth his Ceremonies and Obeysaunce,
With his dissimuling, and faire semblaunce,
That sounith into gentilnesse of Love,
As in a tomb is alle faire above,
And undir is the Corse, soche as ye wot;
Soche was this hypocrite both cold and hote.

And in this wise he servid his intent,
That, save the fend, none wiste what he ment,
Till he so long hath wepid and complained,
And many'a yere his service to me fained,
Till that my hert too pitous, and too nice
All innocent of his cruill Malice,
For ferdè of his deth, as thoughtè me,
Upon his Othis, and his Suretie
Grauntid him love, on this Condition,
That evirmore mine honour and renoun
Were savid both privily, and apert.

That is to say, that astir his desert
I gaf him all myn hert, and all my thought,
God wote, and in none othir wise nought;
And toke his hert in chaunge of mine for ay;
But soth is said gon sithin many'a day,
A trew wight and a these thinkith not one.
And whan he saw the thing so farr ygone,
That I grauntid him fully all my love,
In soche a gyse, as I have seide above,

And gevin him my trewe hert as fre
As he swore he gavin his hert to me,
Anon this Tigre, full of doublenesse,
Fell on his knees, with so devout humblese,
With hie reverence, and eke by his chere
So like a gentil lovir, of manere
So ravishid, as it semid, for joy,
That never Troylus, Paris of Troy,
Ne Jason certis, ne none othir Man
Since Lamech was, that aldirfirst began
To lovin two, as writin folk beforin,
Ne never sith the first Man was yborn
Ne couth Man by the twenty thousand part
Counterfete the Sophismis of his Art,
Ne were worthy t' unbokle his galoche,
There doublenesse or faining shold approche;
Ne so couth thank a wight as he did me.

His manir was a hevyn for to se
To any woman were she ner' so wise,
So paintid he his chere at point devise,
As well his wordis as his Countinaunce;
I so lovid him for his obeysaunce,
And for the trowth I demid in his hert,
That if so were that any thing him smert,
Al were it ne're so lite, and I it wist,
Methought I felt deth at my herte twist.
And shortly so ferforth this thing is went
That my will was his will's instrument,
That is to sey, my will obeyed his will,
In all thingis, as ferre as reson fill,

Keping the boundis of my worship evir,
Ne nevir had I thing so lese ne levir
As him, God wot, ne nevir shul no mo.

This last th lengir than a yere or two
That I supposed of him nothing but gode.

But finally, thus at the last it stode,
That fortune woldè that he must ytwinn
Out of that placè, which that I was inn.

Wher' me was wo, it is no question,
I cannot make of it description.

But o thing dare I tellin boldly,
I know what is the peine of deth thereby,
Soche harme I felt, that he ne might beleve.

So on a day of me he toke his leve,

So sorowfully, I wend verily

That he had felid as moche harme as I,

Whan that I herd him spake, and saw his hewe,

But nathelss I thought he was so trewe,

And eke that he reparin shold againe,

Within a litil while, sothe to saine,

And reson wold also that he shold go

For his honour, as oftin happith so,

That I made vertue of necessity,

And toke it well, sith that it nedes must be:

As best I might I hid from him my sorow,

And toke him by the hond St. John to borow,

And sendè him thus, lo! I am yours al,

Beth soche as I have ben to you and shal.

What he answerde it nedith not reherce,

Who can say bett than he, who can do werse?

Whan he hath all well said, than hath he done,

Therefore behovith him a full long sponè

That shall ete with a fend, thus herd I say.

So at the last he mote forth on his way,

And forth he steth till he came there him lest,

Whan it come him to purpose for to rest,

I trowe he haddin thilke text in mind.

That every thing repairing to his kind

Gladdith themselves, thus saine men as I gesse,

Men love of propir kind new-fangleness,

As birdis don, that men in cagis fede,

For though thou night and day take of them hede,

And straw their cagis fair and soft as silk,

And geve them sugar, hony, brede, and milk,

Yet right anon as that his dore is up,

He with his fere will spurn adoun his cup,

And to the wode he wold, and wormis etc,

So new-fangle bein they of their mete,

And lovin novilries of propir kind,

No gentleness of blode ne may they bind.

So serd this Tercelet, alas the day!

Though he were gentil born, and fresh and gay,

And godely for to se, humble and fre,

He saw upon a time a kite yfle,

And sodeinly he lovid this kite so,
That all his love is clene fro me ygo,
And hath his trouth yfalsid in this wise;
Thus hath the Kite my love in her servise,
And I am lorn withoutin remedy.

And with that word this Falcon gan to cry, 650.

And swomnid oft in Canace's barme;

Grete was the sorow for that Faucon's harme,

That Canace, and all her wymen made,

They n'ist how that they might her Faucon glade? 660

But Canace home bereth her in her lapp,

And softily in plaisters gan her wrapp,

There as she with her bek had hurt her selve.

Now cannot Canace but herbis delve

Out of the ground, and makin salvis new

Of herbis pretiouse, and fine of hew, 660

To helin with the Hawk fro day to night

She doth her besinefs, and all her might.

And by her bedd'is hede she made a mew,

And coverid it with velvetis blew, 670

In sign of trouth that is in woman sene,

And all without the mew is paintid grene,

In which were paintid all these false foules,

As ben these tidifes, Terceletes, and Oules,

Right for despite were paintid them beside

Pyes, on them for to cryin and to chide. 670

This leve I Canace her Hawk keping;

I wol no more as now speke of her ring,

Till it come eft to purpose for to saine

How that this Falcon got her love againe,

Repentant, as the story tellith us,

By Mediation of Camballus,

The King's Sone, of which I have you told.

But hennisforth I woll my purpose hold

To speke of Aventures, and of Battailes,

That yet was nevir herd so gret Mervailles. 680

First woll I tell you of King Cambuscan,

That in his time many a Cite wan,

How that he wan Thedora to his wife;

And aftir wol I speke of Algarisfe,

For whom full oft in grete peril he was,

Ne had ben holpin but by th' hors of bras:

And aftir wol I speke of Camballo,

That fought in listis with the brethrin two,

For Canace er that they might her winn.

And there I left I woll againe beginn.

Explicit Pars secunda.

Apollo whirlith up his Chare so hie,
Till that the God Mercurius the flie.

There can no more be found of this TALE, which hath been sought for in diverse places, say all the Printed Books that I have seen, and also MSS.

Here followeth the words of the Marchaunt to the Squier, and the words of the Host to the Marchaunt.

IN Faith, Squier, thou hast The well yquit,
And gently too, I praise well thy wit,
Qð the Marchaunt, considering thy youth,
So felingly thou spekst, I The alouth
As to my dome, there is none that is here
Of Eloquence that shall be thy pere,
If that thou live, God give The right gode chance,
And in vertue send The perseverance. 700
For of thy speking I have grete deinte,
I have a Sonne, and by the Trinity
I had levir than twenty pounds worth lond
(Although it now were fallin in my hond)
He were a Man of soche discretioun
As that ye ben, fie on possessioun!
But if a Man be vertuouse withall.
I have my Sonne snybbid, and yet I shall;
For he to vertue listith not t'entend,
But for to play at dice, and for to spend, 710

And lese all that he hath, is his usage,
And he had levir to talk with a page,
Than to commune with any gentle wight,
Where he might lernin gentilnes aright.
Straw for your Gentilnesles, qð our Host,
What, Marchaunt? parde, Sir, full well thou wost
That eche of you mote tellin at the lest,
A tale or two, or brekin your behest.
That know I well, qð the Marchaunt, certein,
I pray you have me not in no disdain, 720
Though I to this Man speke a word or two.
Tell on thy Tale withoutin wordis mo.
Gladly, Sir Host, qð he, I woll obey
Unto your will, now herk'nith what I say,
I woll you nor contrary in no wise
As ferre as my wittis wollin suffice,
I pray to God that it may plesin you,
Than wote I well that it is gode ynow.

Thus end the words of the Host, and the Marchaunt, and here follows the Marchaunt's Prologue.

The MARCHAUNT's PROLOGUE.

Weping, and wailing, care and othir sorow,
I have ynow both evin and eke morow, 730
Qð the Marchaunt, and so have othir mo,
That weddid be, I trow that it be so.

For well I wot it farith so by me,
I have a wife the worst that mayin be,
For though the fendè couplid to her were,
She wold him ovirmatch I dare well swere.
What shold I you rehersin in speciall
Her high Malice? She is a Shrew at all.

There is a long and a large difference
Betwixtè Grisild'is grete pacience
And of my wife the passing cruilty,
Were I unbondin al so more I The
I woldin nevir est come in the snare.
We weddid Men live in sorow and care,

Assay whoso woll, and he shall yfind
That I say sothe; by St. Thomas of Inde,
As for the more part, I say not all,
God sheldè that it sholdin so befall.

Ah gode Sir Host, I have yweddid be,
These Monthis two, and more not parde, 750
And yet I trow, that he, that all his life
Hath weddid ben, although men shold him rife
Into the herte, ne couth in no manere
Tell so moche sorow as that I now here
Couth tellin of my wiv'is cursedness.

740 Now, qð our Host, Marchaunt so God The bless,
Syn ye ben so moch knowin of that art,
Full hertily I pray you tell us part.

Gladly qð he, but of myn ownè sore
For sorry hert I tellin may no more.

Here endith the PROLOGUE.

The

The MARCHAUNT's TALE.

Old January marrieth young May, and for his unequal Match receiveth a foul Reward.

Wylom there was dwelling in Lombardy
 A worthy Knight that born was at Pavy,
 In which he lived in grete prosperity,
 And sixty yere a wifeles Man was he,
 And followed ay his bodily delite
 On wymen, there as was his appetite:
 As don these folis that ben seculeres.
 And whan that he was past of sixty yeres;
 Were it for holiness, or for dotage,
 I cannot say, but soche a grete corage
 Had this same Knight to ben a weddid Man;
 That day and night he doth all that he can
 To espy where that he weddid may be,
 Praying our Lord to grauntin him that he
 Mightin once knowin of that blisfull life,
 That is betwixt an husbond and a wife:
 And for to live undir that holy bond,
 With which God the first man and woman bond.
 None othir life, seid he, is worth a bene,
 For wedlock is so esy and so clene,
 That in this world it is a Paradise.
 Thus saith this old Knight that was so wise,
 And certainly, as soth as God is King,
 To take a wife it is a glorious thing,
 And namely whan a Man is old and hore;
 Than is a wife the frute of his trefore,
 Than shold he take a yong wife and a faire,
 On which he might engendrin him an heir,
 And lede his life in joy and in solace,
 Whereas these bachelers singin alas!
 Whan that they find any adversite
 In love, which n'is but child's vanite.
 And trewly it sittin well to be so,
 That bachelers han oftin peine and wo,
 On brotill ground they bildin brotilness,
 They find freshty, when they wene sikirness.
 They live but as livin the birds and bests
 In liberty, and undir nice arrests,
 There as a weddid Man in his estate
 Livith a life blisfull and ordinate,
 Undir the yoke of marriage ybound
 Well may his hert in joy and blis habound,
 For who can be so buxome as a wife,
 Who is so trew, and eke so attentife,
 To kepe him sike and wele, as is his make?
 For wele ne wo she will him not forsake,
 She n'is not wery him to love and serve,
 Though that he ly bedrid untill he sterve;
 And yet some clerkis saine it is not so.
 Of whiche Theophrast is one of tho.
 What force though Theophrast listith to ly?
 Ne take no wife, qd he, for husbondry,
 As for to spare in household thy dispence,
 A trew servaunt doith more diligence,
 Thy godes to kepe, than doth thine own wife;
 For she woll claymin half part all her life,
 And if that thou be sike, so God me save,
 Thy very trendis, or thy own trew knave
 Woll kepe The bett than she, that waitith ay
 Aftir thy gode, and hath don many a day.
 And it thou take a wife that is untrew
 Full oftin time it shall The sorely rew.
 This sentence, and an hundrid fithis worse
 Writith this man there God his bonis curse,

But take no kepe of all soche vaniry;
 Defyith Theophrast, and herk'nith me.
 A wife is Godd's gessè verily,
 All othir mannir gettis hardily,
 As londis, rentis, pasture, or commune;
 Or movables, all ben gesses of fortune,
 That passin as a shadow on a wall,
 But drede it nought, if plainly speke I shall,
 A wife woll last, and in thine house endure
 Well lengir than The list peraventure.
 Marriage is a full grete Sacrament,
 He whichè hath no wife I hold him shent,
 He liveth helpless, and all desolate.
 (I speke of folk in seculer estate)
 And herkin why I say not this for nought,
 The woman was for mann's help ywrought,
 The highè God, whan he had Adam maked
 And sawè him alone all bely naked,
 That God of his grete godeness seide than,
 Let us now make an help unto this man,
 Like to himself, and then he made him Eve;
 Here ye may se, and hereby may ye preve,
 That a wife is mann's help and comfort,
 His paradise terrestre, and his disport:
 So buxom, and so vertuouse is she,
 They mote nedis livin in unity,
 One flesh they ben, and two soules, as I gesse,
 Have but one hert in wele and in distresse.
 A wife! Seint Mary benedicite!
 How may a man havin adversite
 That hath a wife? Certis I cannot sey
 The blis and joy, that is betwixt them twey,
 There may no tongue tellin, or herte think.
 If he be pore, she helpith him to swink,
 She kepith his gode, wastith nevre a dele,
 All that her husbond lust her likith wele,
 She saith not onis nay, when he saith ye.
 Do this, saith he; all redy Sir, qd she.
 O blisful ordir of wedlok pretious,
 Thou art so mery, and so vertuous,
 And so commendid and approvid eke,
 That every man that halt him worth a leke,
 Upon his bare knees oughtin all his life
 Thankin his God, that him hath sent a wife,
 Or pray to God daily him for to send
 A wife, to last unto his liv'is end.
 For than his life is sett in sikerness,
 He may not be decevid, as I gesse,
 So that he werk aftir his wiv'is rede,
 Than may he boldly berin up his hede.
 They ben so trew, and therewithal so wise,
 For which, if thou wilt werchin as the wife,
 Do alwey so as wymen woll The rede.
 Lo! how that Jacob, as these Clerkis rede,
 By gode counsaile of his Mo'ir Rebek,
 Boundin the kidd's skin about his nak,
 For which his fa'ir's benisen he wan.
 Lo! Judith, as the story tellin can,
 By h. r wife counsaile Godd's peple kept,
 And slew huge Holofernes while he slept.
 Lo Abigail! by counsaile how that she Savid her husbond Nabal, whan that he Shold have ben slaine; and loke! Hester also
 By gode counsaile deliverid out of do

The

- The peple' of God, and made him Mordoché
Of Affluere enhansid for to be.
There n'is nothing in gree superlatife
(As faieþ Senec) above an humble wife,
Suffer thy wiv'is tunge, as Caton bid,
She shall commaund, and thou shalt suffer it,
And yet she wolle obey of curtesy.
A wife is kepir of thine husbondry,
Well may the sike man wailin and wepe,
Thereas there n'is no wife the house to kepe.
I warn The, if that wisely thou wilt werch,
Lovith thy wife, as Christ lovith his Cherch.
If thou love thy self well, thou lovest thy wife,
No man hatith his flesh, but in his life
He sostrith it, and therefore bid I The Cherish thy wife, or thou shalt never the.
Husbond and wife, what men so jape and play,
Of worldly folk holdin the sikir way,
They ben so knir, there may no harme betide,
And namily upon the wiv'is side.
For which this January', of which I told,
Considerid hath in his day'is old
The lusty life, the vertuous quite,
That is in Marriag'is hony swete,
And for his frendis on a day he sent,
To tellin them th' effect of his entent,
With sobir face his tale he hath them told.
He said, gode frendis, I am hore and old,
And almost, God wot, on the pitt'is brink,
Upon my soule now somewhat must I think,
I have my body folily dispended,
Blessid be God, it shall ben amended,
For I wolle ben certein a weddid Man,
And that anon, in all the haste I can,
Unto some maidin faire, of tendir age,
I pray you shapith for my mariage,
All sodeinly, for I wolle not abide,
And I wolle sondin to spye on my side
To whome I may be weddid hastily.
But forasmoche as ye ben mo than I,
Ye shall rathir soche a thing espyin
Than I, where me best were to allyin.
But one thing warn I you, my frendis dere,
I wolle none old wife have in no manere,
She shall not passin fixtene yere certeine,
Old fish, and yong flesh wolle I have full faine.
Bett is, q's he, a pike, than a pik'reel,
And bett than old beef is the tendir veel.
I n'ill woman of thirty wintir age,
It n'is but benè stalk, and grete forage.
And eke these olde wivis, God it wote,
They connin so moche craft in Wad'is bote,
So mochil brokin-harm whan that them list,
That with them shold I never live in rest.
For sondry Scholis makith sotill Clarkis,
Woman of many Scholis half a Clark is.
But certainly a yong thing may men gye,
Right as men may warm wax with hondis plie.
Wherefore I say you plainly in a clause
I n'ill none old wife have right for this cause:
For if so were I had some soche mischance
That in her I ne cou'd have no plesance,
Than shold I lede my life in advoutry,
And so streight to the Devill whan I dye.
Ne children shold I none on her gettin,
Yet hadd I levir houndis had me etin,
Than that my heritage sholdin yfall
Into straunge hondes, and this I tell you all
I dote not, I wote well the causis why
Men shold weddin, and furthirmore wot I
There spekith many man of marriage
That wote no more of it than doth my page,
For which causis man shold take a wife,
If he ne may not livin chaste his life;
- Take him a wife with grete devotion
Bicause of lefull procreation
Of childrin to th' honour of God above,
And not only for paramour or love,
And for they shuldin lechery eschue,
And yeeld their dettis whan that they be due,
Or for that eche of them shold help othir
In mistir, as a sustir shold a brothir,
And live in chastity full hevynly.
But, Siris, by your leve that am not I,
For, God be thankid, I can make avaunt
I fele my limmis stark and suffisaunt
To don all that a man belongith to.
I wote my selvin best what I may do.
Though I be hore, I fare as doth a tre
That blossomith er that frute ywox be:
The blossom'd tre is neithir drie ne dedd,
I felin no where hore but on my hedd:
My herte and my limmis ben as grene
As laurell is thorough the yere to sene.
And sithin ye han herd all mine entent,
I pray you to my will ye wolle assent.
Diverse men diversly havin him told
Of Marriage many ensamplis old,
Some blamith it, some praisith it certeine.
But at the last, shortly for to faine
(As all day fallith altercation
Betwixt frendis in disputation)
There fel a strife betwixt his brethrin two,
Of which that one was clepid Placebo,
Justinus sothely callid was the other.
Placebo said, O January brother,
Full litil nede han ye my lord so dere
Counsaile to ask of any that is here,
But that ye ben so full of sapience,
That you ne likith for your hie prudence
To wayvin fro the words of Salomon,
This word sayith he unto everichone,
Workith all thing by counsaile, thus saied he,
And then ne shalt thou not repentin The.
But though that Salomon speke soche a word,
Mine own dere brothir, and my lefist Lord,
So wisely God bringin my soule to rest,
I holde your own counsaile for the best.
For brothir myn, of me take this motife,
I have ben now a Courtman all my life,
And God wote though I now unworthy be,
I have yslondin in full grete degre
Abovin Lordis of full high estate,
Yet had I ner' with none of them debate,
I never them contraryid truly,
I wote wele that my Lord can more than I;
What that he saieþ I hold it firm and stable,
I say the same, or ellis thing semblable;
A full grete fole is any Councillour,
That servith any Lord of high honour,
That dare presume, or onis thinkin it,
That his counsaile shold pass his lord'is wit.
Nay Lordis be no folis by my fay,
Ye havin your selve spokin here to day
So hie sentence, so holi, and so well,
That I consent, and confirm every dell
Your wordis all, and your opinion,
By God there n'is no man in all this toun
Ne in all Italie couth bett have saide;
Christ hold him of this Counsaile well apaid!
And trewily it is an high corage
For any man that is slopin in age
To take a yong wife, by my fa'ir kin,
Your hert hongith upon a jolly pin;
Doth now in this mattere right as ye left,
For finally I hold it for the best.
Justinus, that aye stillè sat and herd,
Right in this wise to Placebo answerd.

Now

Now brothir mine be pacient I pray,
 Sith ye have seid, and herk'nith what I say;
 Senec among his othir wordis wife
 1040 Saith that a man oughtin him well avise,
 To whom he gevith his lond or catell;
 And sith I ought avise me right well
 To whome I geve my godes away fro me,
 Moche more I oughtin well avise be
 To whome I geve my body, for alweye
 I warne you well, it is no child's playe,
 To take a wife without avisement,
 Men must enquirin, this is mine assent,
 Whe' sir she be wife, sober, or dronkelew,
 Or proud, or any othir ways a shrew?
 A chider, or a waster of thy gode,
 Or rich or pore? Or els a man is wode,
 Al be it so that no man findin shall
 None in this world that trottith whole in all;
 Ne man ne best, soch as men can devise,
 But nathclefs it ought ynow suffice
 With any wife, if so were that she had
 Mo thewis gode than are her vicis bad.
 And al this askith leifure to enquere,
 For God wote I have wept many a tere
 Full privily sithin I had a wife,
 Praise whofo woll a weddid mann's life,
 Certein I find in it but cost and care,
 And observauncis of all blissis bare;
 And yet God thank my neighbouris about,
 And namily of wymen a grete rout
 Sain that I havin the most stedfast wife,
 And eke the mekist one that berith life.
 But I wote best where wringith me my shoe,
 Ye may for me right as ye lust to do,
 Avilith you, ye ben a man of age,
 How that ye entrin into mariage,
 And namely with a yong wife and a faire,
 By him that made watir, fire, erth, and air,
 The yongist man that is in all this rout
 Is bysy ynow to bring it about,
 To have his wife alone, ytrustith me,
 Ye shullin not plesin her yeris thre,
 This is to faine, to doin her plesaunce,
 A wife askith full many observaunce.
 I pray you that you be not ill apaid.
 Q^d January, and hast'ow alle said?
 Straw for thy Senec, and for thy proverbs,
 I count it not worth a pannir of herbs
 Of schole termis, full wiser men than thou,
 As thou hast herd, assentith it right now.
 To my purpose: Placebo, what say ye?
 I say it is a cursid man, q^d he,
 That lettith Matrimony sikirly.
 And with that word they risin sodeinly,
 And ben assentid fully that he shold
 Be weddid whan him list, and where he wold.
 High fantasy, and this curiousness
 Fro day to day gan in the soule empress
 Of January' about his mariage,
 Many fair shape, and many faire visage
 There passith thorough his hert night by night,
 As whofo toke a mirroure polished bright,
 And sett it in a common market place,
 Than shold he se many a figure pace
 1080 By this mirroure, and in the same wife
 Gan January in his thought devise
 Of Maidins which that dwellin him beside,
 He wist not where that he might best abide.
 For if that one had bewte in her face,
 Anothir stant so in the peplis grace
 For her sadnes and her benignite,
 That of the peple gretist voice had she.
 And some were rich, and haddin a bad name,
 But nathclefs betwixt ernist and game

He at the last appointid him in one;
 And let al othir from his hert ygone,
 And chefe her of his own authority,
 1040 For love is blind all day, and may not se.
 And whan that he was in his bedde brought,
 Her portreyd in his hert, and in his thought,
 Her bewte fresh, and her age so tendir,
 Her middle smale, her armes long and slendir,
 Her wise governaunce, and her gentilnes,
 Her womanly bering, and her sadnes, 1120
 And whan he was on her condescendid,
 Him thought his choice might not ben amendid.
 For whan that he himself concludid had,
 1050 Him thought ilk othir mann's wit so bad,
 That impossible it were to reply
 Against his choice, this was his fantasy.
 His frendis sent he to at his instaunce,
 And prayith them to don him that plesaunce,
 That hastily they wold unto him come,
 He wold abregge their labour al and some, 1130
 Nedith no more for them to go ne ride,
 He was appointid there he wold abide.
 Placebo came, and eke his frendis sone,
 1060 And aldirfirst he bad of them a bone,
 That none of them none argumentis make,
 Agensst his purpose that he hath ytake,
 Which purpose was plesaunt to God, seid he,
 And very ground of his prosperite.
 He seid, there was a Maidin in the toun,
 Which that for bewte haddè grete renoun, 1140
 Al were it so she were of smale degre,
 Suffisith him her youth, and her bewte.
 Which Maid he said he wold her have to wife,
 1070 To lede in ese and holines his life,
 And thonkid God that he might han her all,
 And that no wight his blis departin shall.
 And prayith them to labour in this nede,
 And shapin, that he failith not to spede.
 For then he seide his spirit was at ese,
 That is, q^d he, nothing may me displese, 1150
 Save o thing prikiht in my Conscience,
 The which I woll reherce in your presence.
 I have, q^d he, herd say full yore ago,
 1080 There may no man have perfite blissis two,
 That is to sey in yerth, and eke in heven.
 For though he kepe him from the finnis seven,
 And eke from every braunch of thilke tre,
 Yet is there so perfite prosperite,
 And so grete ese and lust in mariage,
 That aye I am agast now in mine age, 1160
 That I shall ledin so mery a life,
 So delicate withoutin wo or strife,
 That I shall have my hevin on erth here,
 1090 For sithin very heven is bought so dere
 With tribulation and grete pennaunce,
 How shold I then living in soche plesaunce
 As alle weddid men don with their wivis,
 Come to the blis there Crist eterne on live is?
 This is my drede, and ye my brethrin tweie
 Assoilith me this question I you prey. 1170
 Justinus, which that hatid his soly,
 Answerd anon right in his japery,
 And for he woldin his long tale abregge,
 1100 He woldin none authority allegge,
 But seid, Sir, so there be none obstacle
 Othir than this, God of his miracle
 And of his mercy may so for you werch,
 That er ye han your rights of holy Cherch;
 Ye may repent of weddid mann's life,
 In which ye sain is neither wo ne strife; 1180
 And ellis God forbid but if he sent
 A weddid man the grace him to repent,
 Well oftin rathir than a single man;
 And therefore, Sir, the best rede that I can,

T

Despeirith

Despeirith not, but have in memory
 Paraunter she may be your Purgatory.
 She may be Godd's mene, and Godd's whip,
 Than shall your Soule up to the Hevin skip
 Swifter than doth an arrow out of bow.
 I hope in God hereafter ye shull know
 That there n'is none so grete felicitye
 In mariage, ne never none shall be,
 That you shall let of your Salvation;
 So that ye use, as skill is and reson,
 The lustis of your wife attemp'rately,
 And that ye please her nat too am'rously,
 And that ye kepe you eke from othir Sinn,
 My tale is don, for my wit is but thinn.
 Beth not aghast hereof my derè brothir,
 But wade we fro this mattir to another.

The Wife of Bath, if ye woll undirstand
 Of Mariage, which ye now have in hand,
 Declarith full well in a litill space.
 Farith now well, God have you in his grace.
 And with this word Justin and his brothir
 Han take their leve eche one of the othir.
 For whan they saw that it must nedis be,
 They wroughtin so by wife and sie tretie,
 That she, this Maidin, which that May did hight,
 As hastily as evir that she might
 Shall weddid be to this January;
 I trow it were too long you to tary,
 If I told you of every scrite and bond
 By which she was feoffid in all his lond,
 Or for to herkin of her rich array.
 But finally ycomin is the day,
 That to the Cherche both tway ben they went
 For to receive the holy Sacrament;
 Forth came the preest with stole about his neck,
 And bad her be like Sara and Rebek,
 In wisdom and in trouth of Mariage,
 And said his Orisons, as is th' usage,
 And crouchid them, and bad God shold them blefs,
 And made all fikre' ynow with holnefs.

Thus ben they weddid with so'empnite,
 And at the feste sittith both he and she,
 With othir worthy folk upon the deis,
 All full of joy and blifs is the Paleis,
 And full of instruments, and of vitaille,
 And the most deintyill of al Itaille.
 Beforn him stode soche instruments of sounce,
 That Orpheus, ne of Thebes Amphion
 Ne madin never soche a melody,
 At every cours came the loud Minstralcie,
 That never Joab trompid for to here,
 Neither Theodamas yet half so clere,
 At Thebis, whan the Cite was in dout.
 Bacchus the wine them skinkith al about,
 And Venus laughith blith on every wight,
 For January was become her Knight,
 And woldin both assayin his corage,
 In liberty, and eke in mariage;
 And with her firebrond in her hond about
 Daunceith before the bride, and all the rout.
 And certainly I dare well say right this,
 Hymeneus, that God of wedding is,
 Saw never so mery a weddid Man.

Hold thou thy pece thou Poet Marcian,
 That writist us, that ilk wedding mery
 Of Philology, and of Mercury,
 And of the Songis that the Muses song,
 Too smale is both thy pen, and eke thy tonge
 For to descrivin of this Mariage,
 Whan tendir youth hath weddid stouping age,
 There is soche mirth, as may not be writtin,
 Assayith your selve, than may ye wittin,
 If that I lie, or non, in this mattere.
 May that sittin with so benign a chere,

That her to behold it semed a Feirie,
 Quene Hester lokid ner with soch an eye,
 On Assuere, so meke a loke hath she. 1260
 I may you not devise al her bewte,
 But thus moche of her bewte tell I may,
 That she was like the bright morow of May,
 Fulfillid of all bewte and plesaunce.
 Tho January' is ravished in a traunce,
 At every time he lokid in her face,
 But in his hert he gan her to menace,
 That he that night in his arms wold her streine,
 Harder than evir Paris did Helein. 1270
 But nathelès yet had he grete pite,
 That thilkè night offendin her must he.
 And thought alas! o the tendir creature!
 Now woldè God she mightin well endure
 All my corage, it is so sharpe and kene,
 I am aghast she shall it not sustene,
 But God forbid, that I did all my might;
 Now woldè God that it were waxin night,
 And that the night wold lastin evirmo,
 I wold that all these peple were ago. 1280
 And finally he doth al his labour
 As he best mightin saving his honour,
 To haste them fro the mete in-forill wise,
 The time ycame that reson was to rise,
 And after that men dauncin and drink fast,
 And spicis al about the house they cast,
 And full of joy and blifs is every man,
 Al but a Squire that hightin Damian,
 Which karfe before the Knight many a day,
 He was so ravished on his lady May, 1290
 That for the very peine he was nyc wode,
 Almost he swelt and swoundid where he stode.
 So fore hath Venus hurt him with her brand!
 So fresh she was, and therto so licand!
 And to his bedde he went him hastily,
 No more of him at this timè speke I,
 But there I let him wepe ynow and pleine,
 Till the fresh May woll rewin on his peine.

O per'ous fire, that in the bedstraw bredeth,
 O foc familier, that his service bedeth! 1300
 O servaunt traytour false in holy hew,
 Like to the adder fly in bosome trew!
 O January dronkin in plesaunce!
 (God sheld us all from your iniquitaunce
 Of Mariage) se how this Damian,
 Thine owne Squire, and eke thine own born Man,
 Entendith for to doen The villany!
 God graunt The thine homely foc to espie!
 For in this world n'is a werse pestilence
 Than homely foc, al day in thy presence. 1310
 Pe-fourmid hath the Sunne his Ark diurne,
 No lengir may his body here sojourn,
 On th' Horison, as in that Latitude,
 Night with his mantill, that is derk and rude,
 Gan for to sprede the Hemisphere about;
 For which departid is the lusty rout
 Fro January with thonk on every side,
 Home to their housis lustily they ride,
 There as they don their thingis as them list,
 And whan they saw their time they gon to rest. 1320
 Sone after this lusty January
 Woll go to bedd, he woll no lengir tary,
 He drinkith Ipocras, clary, vernage,
 And spicis hot, to encrese his corage,
 And lectuaries had he then full fine,
 Soche as the cursid Monk Dan Constantine
 Hath writtin in his boke De Coitu,
 To ete them all he n'old nothing eschew.
 And thus to his privy frendis said he,
 For Godd's love, as sone as it may be, 1330
 Let void all this house in curteis wif sone;
 Men drinkin, and the Travers drew anone.

So hastid January, it must be done.
 The bride was brought to bed as still as stone;
 And whan the bed was with the Preeft yblessed,
 Out of the chambir every wight them dressed.
 And January hath fast in his armes take
 His freshe May, his paradise, his make,
 He lullith her, he kullith her full oft,
 With the thik bristles of his berde unsoft,
 Ylike the skinn of houndfish, sharp as brere,
 (For he was shave al new in his manere)
 He rubbith her upon her tendir face,
 And sayid thus, alas! I mote trespase
 To you my spouse, and you gretely offend,
 Or time come that I woll adoun descend.
 But natheles consid'rith this, qd he,
 There n'is no werkman, whatsoere he be,
 That may both werkin well and hastily,
 This woll be don at lesure perfetely,
 It is na t'rece how longe that we play,
 I trov in wediok couplid ben we tway,
 And blessid be the yoke that we ben in,
 For in our Actis we may do no sinn.
 A man may do no sinn with his own wife,
 Ne hurtin himself with his owne knife.
 Now we han leve to play us by the law.

Thus labourith he till the day gan daw.
 Than takith he a fopp of fine clarie,
 And upright in his bedd than sittith he.
 And aftir he singith full loud and clere,
 And kist his wife, and makith wanton chere,
 He was all Coltish full of ragerie,
 And full of gergon as a fleckid Pie.
 The flakè Skin about his nekkè shakith
 While that he song, so chauntith he and crakith.
 But God wot what May thoughtin in her hert,
 Whan she him saw upfittin in his Shert,
 In his night capp, and with his nekk all lene,
 She prailith nor his playing worth a bene.
 That seide he thus, my resting woll I take,
 Now day is come, I may no lengir wake.
 And down he laid his hedd and slept till prime,
 And eftir ward whan that he saw his time
 Uprilith January. But freshe May
 Holdith her chambir unto the fourth day
 As usage is of wivis for the best:
 For every labour sometime mote have rest,
 Or ellis long time may he not endure.
 That is to sayin no living cature
 Be it or fish, or beste, or bird, or man.

Now woll I speke of wofull Damian,
 That langurith for love, as ye shull here.
 Therefore I speke to him in this manere.
 I say, o fely Damian alas!
 Answer to this demand as in this case,
 How shalt thou to thy lady freshe May Tellin thy wo? She woll alwey say nay.
 Eke if thou speke, she woll thy wo bewray;
 God be thine help, I can no bettir say.

This fike Damian in Venus fire
 So brennith, that he dyith for desire;
 For which he put his life in aventure,
 No lengir might he in this wise endure.
 But privily a pennir gan he borow,
 And in a lettir wrote he all his sorow,
 In mannir of a Compleint or a lay,
 Unto this feire and freshe lady May,
 And in a purse of silk hong on his Shert
 He hath it put, and laid it at his hert.

The Mone, that at nonetide that ilkè day
 (That January had weddid freshe May)
 Out of Taurus was into Cancer gliden,
 So longe hath she in her chambir biden,
 As Custom is unto these noblis all,
 A bride shall not etin in the Hall,

Till dayis four othir thre at the lest
 Ypassid ben, then let her go to feste.

On the fourth day complete fro none to none,
 Whan that the highè Mals was now ydone, 1410
 In hallè satt this January and May,
 As freshe as is the brighte Sommer's day.

And so befell how that this godè Man
 Remembrith him upon his Damian,
 And seide, St. Mary! how may this be
 That Damian entendith not to me?
 Is he ay fike? or how may this betide?
 His Squiris, which that stodin him beside,
 Excusid him because of his sikeness,
 Which lettid him to do his besinefs. 1420

None othir Cause might makin him tary.
 That me forthinkith, qd this January,
 He is a gentill Squyir by my trouth,
 If that he dyed it were grete harme and routh,
 He is as wise, discrete, and as secre
 As any man I wote of his degre,
 And thereto manly, and eke servisable,
 And forto ben a thrifty man right able.
 But aftir mete as sone as evre I may
 I woll my self him visit, and eke May, 1430
 To don him al the comfort that I can.
 And for that word him blessid every man,
 That of his bounty, and his gentleness
 He wold so comfortin in his sikeness
 His Squyir, for it was a gentil dede.

Dame, qd this January, take gode hede
 That aftir mete, ye and your wymen all
 Whan ye han ben in chambir out of hall,
 That ye all gon to see this Damian,
 Doth him disport, he is a gentill Man, 1440
 And tellith him, that I woll him visite
 Have I nothing but restid me a lite.
 And spede you fast, for I wollin abide
 Till that ye slepin fast here by my side.
 And with that word he gan to him to call
 A Squyir, that was Marshall of his hall,
 And told him certeine thingis that he wold.

This freshe May hath freight her wey yhold
 With all her wymen unto Damian,
 And by his bedd's side down sat she than, 1450
 Comforting him as godely as she may.

This Damian, whan that he his time say,
 In secret wise his purse, and eke his bill,
 (In the which he had writtin all his will)
 Hath put into her hond withoutin more,
 Save that he sighid wondrous depe and sore,
 And softly to her right thus sayid he,
 Mercy, and that ye discovir nat me,
 For I am dede, if that this thing be kid.

This purse hath she within her bosome hid, 1460
 And went her wey, ye get no more of me,
 But unto January come is she,
 And on his bedd's side she satt full soft,
 He takith her, and kistith her full oft,
 And lay'd him down to slepe, and that anon
 She fainid her as tho' that she must gon
 There as ye wot, that every wight hath nede,
 And whan she of this bill hath takin hede,
 She rent it all to cloutis, and at last
 Into the privy softly she it cast. 1470

Who studyith now but faire freshe May?
 Adoun by old January she lay,
 That slept, till that the cough hath him awaked,
 Anon he pray'd her to stripp her all naked,
 He wold of her, he seid, have some plesaunce,
 And seid, her clothis did him encombraunce.
 And she obeyith, be she lese or lothe;
 But lest that precious folk be with me wroth,
 How that he wrought I dare not to you tell,
 Or if she thought it Paradise or Hell. 1480

But

But I shall let them werkin in their wife,
Till Evesong ring, and that they must arise.

Were it by destiny, or aventure,
Were it by influence, or by nature
Of Constellation, that in soche estate
The hevin stode that time fortunate,
(Was for to put a bill of Venus werkes,
For al thing hath a time, as sayin Clerkes)
To any woman for to get her love,
I cannot say; but the grete God above,
That knowith that no act is causeless,
Demith of all; for I wold hold my pece.

But soth is this, how that this freshe May
Hath takin soch empreffion that day
Of pite of this sike Damian,
That from her herte she ne drivin can
The remembraunce for to doin him ese.
Certein thought she, whom that this thing displese,
I reke not, for of this I him assure,
I lovin him best of any cature,
Although he no more haddin than his Shert.

Lo! pite remnith sone in gentill hert.
Here you may se how excellent Franchise
In wymen is, whan they them nar' avise.
Some Tiraunt is, as there ben many one,
That hath a hert as hard as any stone,
Which wold have let him stervin in the place,
Well rathir than have grauntid him that grace,
And her rejoisid in her cruill pride,
And rekid not to ben an homicide.

This gentill May, fillid of all pite,
Right so of her hond a lettir wrote she,
In which she grauntid him her very grace,
There lakkith nought but only time and place,
Where that she mightin to his lust suffise,
For it shall be right as he wold devise.

And whan she saw her time upon a day,
To visite Damian goth this faire May,
And sotilly this letter down she thrust
Undir his pillow, rede it if him lust,
She toke him by the hond, and hard him twist,
So secretly, that no wight of it wist,
And bid him ben all whole, and forth she went,
To January, whan he for her sent.

Uprilith Damian the next morow,
Al passed is his sikeness, and his sorow,
He kembith him, and proinith him, and piketh,
And doth all that his lady list and liketh.
And eke to January he goth as low
As evir did a dogge for the bow,
He is so plesant unto every man,
For craft is alle, whoso that it can,
That every wight is faine to speke him gode,
And fully in his lady's grace he stode.
Thus lete I Damian about his nede,
And in my tale right forth wold I procede.

Some Clerkis holdin that felicite
Stont in delite, and therefore certein he,
This nobill January with all his might,
In honest wise as longith to a Knight,
Shope him to livin full deliciously,
His housing, his array, as honestly
To his degre, was makid as a kinges;
And among othir of his honest thinges
He had a gardin wallid all with stone,
A fairer garden wote I no where none,
For out of dout I verily suppose
That he that wrote the Romaunt of the Rose
Ne couth of it the bewte well devise,
Ne Priapus ne mightin not suffice,
Though he be God of gardins, for to tell
The bewte of the gardin and the well,
That stont undir a laurere alwey grene,
Full oftin time King Pluto and his Quene

Proserpina, and alle her fayrie
Disportin them, and makin melodie
About that well, and dauncid as men told.

This nobil Knight, this January the old,
Soch deinty hath in it to walk and play
That he wold suffir no wight bare the kay, 1560
Save he himself, and for the smale wiker

He barin alwey of silver a Cliket,
With which, whan he him list he wold unsnet,
1490 And whan that he wold pay his wife her dett
In Somir seson, thithir wold he go,
And May his wife, and no wight but they two,
And thingis which that were not don abed,
They in that gardin perfourmid and sped.
And in this wise many a mery day
Livid this January and this freshe May; 1570
But worldly joy may not alwey endure
To January, ne to no cature.

O sodein hap! O fortune unstable!
1500 Like to the Scorpion decevable,
That stat'rist with thy hede whan thou wolt sting,
Thy taile is dethe through thy envenoming.
O brotill joie! O swete poison queint!
O Monster, that so sodeinly canst peint
Thy gilts undir the hew of stedfastness,
That thou decevist both the more and less! 1580

Why hast'ow January thus deceived?
And haddist him for thy full frend received,
And now thou hast biraft him both his cyn,
1510 And he for sorow desirith to dyen.

Alas this nobil January so fre!
He wepith and he wailith pitously,
Amid his lust, and his prosperity
Is woxin blind, and that all sodeinly,
His deth therefore desireth he uttirly;
And therewithal the fire of jelousie 1590
(Lest that his wife shold fall in some foly)

So brent his herte, that he woldin faine
That some man bothe him and her had slaine.
1520 For ne aftir his deth, ne in his life
Ne wold he that she werin love ne wife,
But evir live a widdow in wedes blake,
Sole, as the turtle that hath lost her make.

But at the last aftir a month or tway
His sorow gan to swage, the soth to say,
For whan he wist it might none othir be, 1600
He paciently toke his adversity:

Save out of all dout may he not forgone
That he was jelous evirmore in one,
1530 Which jelousy was so outrageous,
That ne in Hall, ne in none othir house,
Ne in none othir place, nevir the mo
He n'old suffir her nothir ride ne go,
But if that he had hond on her alwey,
For which full oftin wepith freshe May,
That lovith Damian so benignly, 1610
That she mote either dyin sodeinly,
Or els mote she have him all at her left,
She waitith whan her hert sholdin to brest.

Upon that othir side, this Damian
Becomin is the sorowfullist man
That evir was, for neither night ne day
Ne might he speke a word to freshe May,
As to his purpose, of no such matere,
But if that January must it here, 1620
That had a hand upon her evirmo.

But nathelless by writing to and fro
And privy signis wist he what she ment,
And she knew all the signes of his entent.
1550 O January! what might it The availe
Thou mightest se as ferr as Shippis faile?
For as gode is a blind decevid be,
As be decevid whan a Man may se.

Lo!

Lo! Argus which that had an hundrid eyen,
For all that evir he couth pore and pryen,
Yet was he blent, and God wote so ben mo, 1630
That wenin willy that it n'is not so.
Pafs ovir is an ese, and say no more.

This freshe May, of which I speke of yore,
In warm wax hath imprintid thilk cliket,
That January bare of that smale wiket,
By which into his gardin oft he went,
And Damian, that knew all her entent,
The Cliket counterfitted privily.
There n'is no more to say, but hastily
Some wonder by this Cliket shall betide, 1640
Which ye shull herein, if ye woll abide.

O Noble Ovid! Soth sayst thou, God wote,
What sight is it, if love be long and hote,
That he n'll find it out in some manere?
By Pyramus and Thisbe men may lere;
Though they were kept full long streight ovir all,
They ben accordid rowning through a wall;
There n'is no wight couth find out soch a sight.
But now to purpose; ere the dayis eight
Were passid, er' the Month July befill, 1650
That January hath caught so grete a will
Through egging of his wife him for to play
In his gardin, and no wight but them twey,
That in a morow to this May said he,
Rise up my wife, my love, my Lady fre,
The turtle voice is herd, my lady swete,
Wintir is gon with all his rainis wete,
Come forth now with thyn eyin columbine,
How fairer ben thy breftis than is wine!

The gardin is enclosid all about, 1660
Come forth my white spouse, out of alle dout
Thou hast me woundid in my hert, o wife,
No spot in The there n'as, in all thy life,
Come forth, and let us takin our disport,
I chese The for my Wife, and my Confort.
Such olde lewd wordis than usid he;
And unto Damian a sign made she,
That he shold go before with his cliket;
This Damian hath opened this wiket,
And in he stert, and that in soche manere, 1670
That no wight might it se, nor might it here.
And still he satt undir a bush anon;
This January as blind as is a stone,
With May in his hondè, and no wight mo,
Into his freshe Gardin is he go,
And clappid to the Wiket sodeinly.

Now wife, qð he, there n'is but thou and I,
Thou art the cature that I best do love,
For by that Lord, that sitt in Heven above,
I had moche levir dyin on a knife, 1680
Than The offendin, my dere and trew wife;
For Godd'is sake, think how that I The chese,
Nought for no Coverise of godes douteles,
But only for the love I had to The;
And though that I be old, and may not se,
Be to me trew, and I woll tell you why,
Certis thre thingis shall ye win thereby.

First love of Crist, and to your self honour,
And all mine heritage both tounne and toure,
I give it you, make chartirs as ye list, 1690
This shall be don to morow er Sunne rist.
So wisely God my Soule bringin to blifs;
I pray you on this Cov'enant ye me kifs,
And that I be jelouse wite me nought,
Ye ben so depe imprintid in my thought,
That whan I do consider your bewte,
And therewithall th'unlikely eld of me,
I may not certis, though I sholdin dye
Forbere to ben out of your Cumpany,
For very love; this is withoutin dout; 1700
Now kisse me wife, and let us rome about.

This freshe May, whan she these wordis herd,
Benignly to January answer'd,
But first and forward she began to wepe,
I havin, qð she, a soule for to kepe,
As well as ye, and also mine honour,
And also of wivchode thilk tendir flour,
Which that I have ensurid in your hond,
Whan that the preste to you my body bond.
Wherefore I woll answer in this manere, 1710
By the gode leve of you my Lord so dere.

I pray to God, that never daw that day,
That I ne sterve, as foule as woman may,
If evir I do to my kinn that shame,
Or els that I empairin so my name,
That I be false, and if I do that lak,
Do stripè me, and put me in a sak,
And in the next river do me to drench.

I am a gentilwoman, and no wench,
Why speke ye thus! but Men ben aye untrew, 1720
And wymen have reprofe of you aye new,
Ye can none othir communing, I leve,
But speke to us of untrust and repreve.

And with the word she saw where Damian
Sat in the bush, and knele he began,
And with her fingers signis madin she
That Damian shold climb upon a tre,
That chargid was with frute, and up he went,
For verily he knew all her entent,
And every sign that she couth ymake, 1730
Well bett than January her own make.
For in a letter she had told him all
Of this matere how that he worchin shall.

And thus I let him sittin in the pery,
And January and May roming full mery.

Bright was the day, and blew the firmament,
Phæbus of gold doun hath his strems sent,
To gladin every flour with his warmnes,
He was that time in Gemini I ghesse,
But litil fro his declination 1740
Of Cancer Jovis exaltation.

And so bifell in that bright morow tide,
That in the gardin on that farthir side
Dan Pluto that is the King of Fayrie,
And many' a lady in his Cumpany,
Following his wife the quene Proserpina,
Which he ravished out of Sicilia
Eche aftir othir right as on a line,
While that she gad'rid flouris in a Mede, 1750
In Claudian ye may the story rede,
How in his grisly Cart he did her fett.

This King of fayrie adoun him hath sett,
Upon a bench of Turvis fresh and grene.
And right anon thus seide he to his quene;
My wife, qð he, that no wight may say nay,
The' experience so provith every day
The treson, which that woman doth to man;
Ten hundrid thousand storys tell I can,
Notable of your untrouth, and brotilnes.

O Salamon richist of all richese, 1760
Fulfillid of Sapience, and worldly glory,
Full worthy ben thy words of Memory,
To every wight that wit and reson can,
Thus praisith he the bounty of a Man.

Among a thousand Men yet found I one,
But of all wymen found I never none.
Thus saith that King that knew your wikidnes.
And Jesus filius Sirach as I ghesse
Ne spekith of you but feld revèrence.
A wildè fire, a corrupt pestilence 1770
So fall upon your bodys yet to night.
Ne se you not this honourable Knight,
Bicause alas! that he is blind and old.
His ownè Man shall makin him Cokold.

U

Lo

Lo where he sitt the lechour in the tre!
 Now woll I grauntin of my Majesty
 Unto this old and blind and worthy Knight,
 That he shall han ayen his eyin sight,
 Whan that his wife wold don him villony,
 Than shall he knowin all her harlotry,
 Both in represe of her and othir mo.
 Ye shall, qð Proserpine, and woll ye so?
 Now by my Moðir's Ceres soule I swere
 I shall give her sufficient answeire,
 And alle wymen aftir for her sake,
 That though they were in any gilt ytake,
 With face bold they shullin themselves excuse,
 And bere them down that woldè them accuse.
 For lak of answeire none of them shall dyen,
 All had ye se the thing with both your eyen,
 Yet shall we so visage it hardily
 And wepe, and chide, and swere so sotilly,
 That ye shullin ben as lewdè as gees.
 What rekith me of your Autorities?
 I wote well that this Jew, this Solomon,
 Fond of us wymen folis many one,
 But though that he ne fond no gode woman,
 Yet hath there yfond many' anothir man,
 Wymen full trew, full gode, full vertuous,
 Witnès of those that dwell in Christ's house,
 With Martyrdome they provid their Constaunce;
 And Romain Gestis makin remembraunce
 Of many' a verrey trewè wise also,
 But Sir ne be nought wroth all be it so,
 Though that he said he fond no gode woman,
 I pray you take the sentence of the Man,
 He mentè thus, that in Sov'raigne bounte
 N'is none but God that sitt in Trinite.
 Eye, for verrey God that ne is but one.
 What makin ye so moche of Solomon?
 What though he made a temple Godd'is house?
 What though he werin rich and gloriouse?
 So made he eke a temple of false Goddis,
 How might he don a thing that more forbod is?
 Parde, as faire as ye his name emplaister,
 He was a Lechour, and an Idolaster,
 And in his eld the very God forsoke,
 And if that God ne had, as faith the boke,
 Sparid him for his faðir's sake, he shoid
 Have lostin his reign sonir than he wold.
 I sett right nought of all the Villony
 That ye or wymen write a butterfly.
 I am a woman, nedis mote I speke,
 Or ellis swell till that my hert to breke.
 For sith he said that we ben jangleris,
 As evir mote I brouke both my tressis,
 I shall not sparin for no curtisy
 To speke them harm that wold us villony.
 Dame, qð this Pluto, be no lengir wroth,
 I give it up, but sith I swore mine oth,
 That I wold grauntin him his sight ayein,
 My word shall stond, that warne you I certein:
 I am a King, it sett me not to lie,
 And I, qð she, the quene am of fairie,
 Her answer she shall have I undirtake.
 Than let us no mo wordis hereof make,
 Forsothe I woll no lengir you contrary.
 Now let us turn again to January,
 That in this gardin with this faire fresh May
 Singith merryyr than the Popingay,
 You love I best, and shall, and othir none;
 So long about the Alleys is he gone,
 Till he was comin against thilk pery,
 Whereas this Damian sittith full mery,
 On high emong this freshe levis grene.
 This faire fresh May, that is so bright and shene,
 Gan for to sike, and said alas my side!
 Now Sir, qð she, for ought that may betide

I must have of these peres that here I se,
 Or I mote dyin, so fore longith me
 To etin of the smalè peris grene.
 Help for her love that is of Hevin quene!
 I tell you well a woman in my plight
 May have to frute so grete an appetite,
 That she may dyin but that she it have.
 Alas! qð he, that I ne' had here a knave,
 That couð climbin, alas! alas! qð he,
 For I am blind. Ye, Sir, no force, qð she,
 But woldin ye vouchsafe for Godd'is sake
 The pery in your armis for to take,
 For well I wote that ye mistrustin me,
 Then wold I climbin well ynow, qð she,
 So I my fote might sett upon your bak.
 Forsoth, said he, in me shall be no lak,
 Might I you helpin with mine hert'is blode.
 He stoupith doune, and on his bak she stode,
 And caught her by a twist, and up she goth.
 (Ladys, I pray you that ye be not wroth,
 I cannot glose, for I am a rude Man)
 And sodeinly anon this Damian
 Gan pullin up the smok, and in he throng
 A grete tent, and a thrifty, and a long,
 She seidè, it was the meryist fit
 That evir in her life she was at yet;
 My Lord'is tent servith me nothing thus,
 It foldith twifold by swetè Jesus,
 He may not fwivin nothing worth a leke,
 And yet he is full gentil and full meke:
 This is levir to me than Evinfong.
 And whan that Pluto had fene this grete wrong,
 To January he gave again his sight,
 And made him se as well as er he might.
 And whan that he had caught his sight againe,
 Ne was there nevir man of thing so faine,
 But on his wife his thought was evirmo,
 Up to the tre he cast his eyin two,
 And saw how Damian his wife hath dressed
 In soche mannir it may not ben expressed,
 But if I wold spekin uncurtisly.
 And up he gaf a roring and a crie,
 As doth the Moðir whan the child shall die,
 Out, help, alas! harrow, he gan to crie,
 For sorow almost he began to die,
 That his wife was swivid in the pery.
 O strongè lady hore, what doist thou?
 And she answerid, Sir, what aylich you?
 Have pacience and reson in your mind,
 I have you holpin of both your eyen blind,
 Up perill of my soule I shall not lien,
 As me was taught to help you to your eyen,
 Was nothing bettir for to make you se
 Than stroggle with a man upon a tre.
 God wote I did it in full gode entent.
 Stroggle, qð he, ye algate in it went
 As stiff, and eke as round as any bell,
 It is no wondir though thy belly swell,
 Thy smok upon his brest it lay so theche,
 That still methought he pointid on the breche:
 God geve you both on sham'is deth to dien,
 He swivid The, I saw it with mine eyen,
 Or ellis be I hongid by the halfe.
 Than is, qð she, my Medicinè false,
 For certeinly if that ye mightin se,
 Ye wold nat say these wordis unto me.
 Ye han some glimm'ring, and no perfite sight.
 I se, qð he, as well as er' I might,
 Thonkid be God, with both myn eyin two,
 And by my trouth methought he did The so.
 Ye Mafin, ye Mafin, gode Sir, qð she,
 This thank have I for that I made you se!
 Alas, qð she, that evre' I was so kind!
 Now Dame, qð he, let all pafs out of mind,
 Come

Come doune my lefe, and if I have misfaid,
God help me so as I am ill apaid.
But by my fað'ris soule I wend to have sene
How that this Damian had with The lien,
And that thy smok had lyn upon his brest.

Ye Sir, qð she, ye may wene as ye lest;
But, Sir, a man that wakith out of slepe
He may not sodeinly well takin kepe
Upon a thing, ne se it perfitey,
Tyll that he be adawid verily.
Right so a Man, that long hath blindè be,
Ne may not sodeinly so well yse
First whan the sight is newcomin ageine,
As he that hath a day or two ysene,

Till that your sight establiſhed be a while,
There may full many a sight you begyle.

Beware, I pray you, for by hevin King
Full many' a man wenith to se a thing,

1950

And it is all anothir than it semith,
He that misconceivith full oft mildemith.
And with that word she lept down fro the tre;

1930

This January, who is glad but he?

He kiſſith her, he clepith her full oft,
And on her womb he strokith her full soft,
And to his paleis home he hath her lad.

Now, gode Men, I pray you, beth ye all glad;

Thus endith now my Tale of January,

God bleſs us all and his Moðir Mary.

1950

Thus endith the MARCHAUNT's TALE.

Here followeth the Wife of BATH's PROLOGUE.

Experience, though none Authority
 Were in this world, is right ynow for me,
 To speke of wo that is in Mariage;
 For, Lordings, sith I twelve yere was of age,
 Thankid be God, that is eterne on live,
 Husbondes at Chirch dore have I haddè five,
 For I so oftin have yweddid be.
 And all were worthy men in their degre.
 But me was told not long ago, I wils,
 That sithin Crist went nevir but onis
 To wedding in the Cane of Galile,
 That by the ilk ensample taught he me,
 That I ne shold weddid be but onis;
 Lo! herk here a sharp word for the nonis,
 Beside a Well Jesu both God and Man
 Speke in represe of the Samaritan.
 Thou hast haddè five husbondis, qð he,
 And that ilkè Man which that now hath The
 Is not thy husbond; thus seid he certine,
 But what he ment thereby I cannot saine.
 Well! but I ask a point; why the fift man
 Was none husbond to the Samaritan?
 How many might she have in Mariage?
 Yet herd I nevir tellin in mine age
 Upon this numbir true definitioun,
 Men may devine; and glosin up and doune;
 But well I wote expres withoutin lye,
 God bad us for to wex and multiplie.
 That gentle text can I well undirstond,
 Eke well I wote he said that mine husbond
 Shold leve faðir, moðir, and take to me,
 But of none numbir mentioun made he,
 Of Bigamy or of Oëtogamy,
 Why shold men spekin of it villony?
 Loke here the wisè Man King Salomon!
 I trow that he had wivis mo than one,

As woldè God it lefull were to me,
 To be refreshid half so oft as he,
 Which gest of God had he for all his wivis,
 No man hath soche, that in this world on live is. 40
 God wote, this nobil King, as to my wit,
 The first night had many a mery fit,
 With eche of them so well was him alive.
 Blessid be God that I have weddid five,
 Welcome the sixt whan that evir he shall,
 10 For sith I may not kepe me chaste in all,
 Whan my husbond is fro the world ygon,
 Some christin man shull weddè me anon.
 For than th' Apostle saith that I am fre
 To wedde a God's half where it likith me. 50
 He saith that to be weddid is no sinne,
 Bettir 'tis to be weddid than to brinne.
 What rekith me, though folk say villony
 Of shrewd Lamech, and of his bigamy?
 I wot Abraham was a holy man,
 20 And Jacob eke, as ferr as I here can,
 And eche of them had wivis mo than two,
 And many othir holy man also.
 Where can you say in any manir age
 That evir God defendid mariage 60
 By exprefs words? I pray you tellin me,
 Or where commaundid he virginite?
 I wote as well as ye it is no drede,
 Th' Apostle, whan he spake of Maidinhede,
 He seidè thereof precept had he none,
 30 Men may counsaile a woman to ben one,
 But counsailling is no commaundement;
 He put it in our ownè juggèment.
 For haddè God commaundid Maidinhede
 Than had he dampnid wedding out of drede. 70
 And certis if there were no fede yfow,
 Virginitie, than whereof shold it grow?

Poul ne durst not commaundin at the lest
 A thing, of which his Maistir gaf non lest.
 The dart is set up for Virginite,
 Catch who so may, who runnith best let se.
 But this word is not take of every wight,
 But there as God list geve it of his might.
 I wote well the Apostel was a Maid,
 But natheles though that he wrote and saide
 He wold that every wight were soch as he;
 Al n'is but counsaile to Virginite.
 And for to ben a wife he gaf me leve
 Of Indulgence, so n'is it to repreve
 To wedde me, if that my Make dy,
 Without exception of Bigamy.
 Al were it gode no woman for to touch,
 He ment as in his bed, or on his couch:
 Perill is for fire and tow to assemble,
 Ye know what this ensample may resemble.
 This is the Al, he held Virginitie
 More profitith than wedding in freilte.
 I reite clepe I, but if that he and she
 Word lecin all their life in chastite.
 I graunt it well, and I have none envy
 Though Madirhede preferr to Bigamy.
 It them liketh to ben clene body' and ghost,
 Of nune chite I n'll makin no host.
 For we'll ye know a lord in his household
 Had not every Vessel all of geld.
 Some ben of ore, and don their Lord servise,
 God clepith folk to him in sondry wise,
 And everich hath of God a propir gilt,
 Some this, and some that, as him listith shift.
 Virginitie is grete perfection,
 And Continence eke with devocion.
 But Crist that of perfection is well,
 Bad not every wight he shold go and sell
 All that he had, and geve it to the pore,
 And in soch wise folow him and his lore.
 He spake to them that wold live parfite,
 And Lordings, by your leve that am not I;
 I woll bestow the flour of all myn age
 In th' Actis and the frute of Mariage.
 Tell me also to what Conclutione
 Were members made of generacione?
 And of so parfite wife, and why ywrought?
 Trustith right well they were not made for nought,
 Close who so woll, and sayin up and doune
 That they were makid for purgacioun
 Of Urine, and soch othir thingis smale,
 And eke to know a female from a male
 And for non othir cause: what say ye no?
 Experience wote well it is not so,
 So that the Clerkis be not with me wroth,
 I say that they were ymakid for both;
 This is to fain, for office and for ese
 Of engendring, there we not God displese.
 Why shold men ellis in their bokis fere
 That man shold yeldin to his wife her dett?
 Now wherewith shuldin he make his payment,
 If he ne us'd his sely instrument?
 Then were they makid upon a Creture
 To purge Urine, and eke for engendrure.
 But I say not that every wight is hold,
 That hath soch harneis as I to you told,
 To gon and usin them to engendrure,
 Then shuld men take of chastite no cure,
 Crist was a Maid, and shapin as a Man,
 And many' a Seint fishin the world began,
 Yet livid they in parfite chastite,
 I n'll not eye with no virginite.
 Let them with brede of purist whete be fed,
 And let us wivis ete our barly bred.
 And yet with barly bred Mark tell us can,
 Our Lord Jesu refressud many' a Man.

In soche a state as God hath clepid us
 I woll persevere, I n'am precious,
 In wivehode woll I use mine instrument
 As frely as my makir hath it lent. 150
 If I be daungerous God geve me sorow,
 Myn husbond shall it have both eve and morow,
 That whan him list come forth and pay his dett,
 An husbond woll I have, I woll not let,
 Which shall be both my dettour, and my thrall,
 And have his tribulacioun withall,
 Upon his flesh, while that I am his wife,
 I have the powir during all my life
 Upon his propir body, and not he,
 Right thus the Apostel taught unto me, 160
 And bad our husbonds fer to love us well,
 All this sentence me likith every dell.
 Up stert the Pardoner, and that anon,
 90 Now Dame, qd he, by God and by St. John
 Ye ben a noble prechir in this case.
 I was about to wed a wife, alas!
 What shold I buy it on my flesh so dere?
 Yet had I levir wed no wife two yere.
 Abide, qd she, my tale is not begon;
 Nay thou shalt drinkin of anothir ton, 170
 Er that I go, shall savir worse than Ale,
 And whan that I have told forth my tale
 Of tribulacioun in Mariage,
 100 Of which I am expert in all myn age,
 This is to say my self hath ben the whip,
 Than maystow chese The whe'er thou wolt sip
 Of thilke ton, that I shall set abroch,
 Beware of it er thou to nere aproch,
 For I shall tell ensamples mo than ten,
 Whoso woll not beware by othir men, 180
 By him shal othir men correctid be,
 These same wordis writith Dan Ptolome.
 Rede in his Almagest, and take it there.
 110 Dame I wold pray you, if your will it were,
 Seide this Pardoner, as ye began
 Tell h forth your tale, and spare for no man,
 And techin us yong men of your prauke,
 Gladly, qd she, if that it may you like.
 But that I pray to al this Cumpany,
 If that I speke astir my fantasy, 190
 As take it not a grese of that I say,
 For mine entent is not but for to play.
 Now Sirs, then shall I tellin forth my ta'e,
 120 As evir mote I drinkin wine or ale
 I shall say soth. Of husbonds that I had
 Thre of them werin gode, and two were bad.
 The thre that were gode men were rich and old,
 Unmethis mightin they the Statute hold
 In which they were yboundin unto me,
 Ye wot well what I mene of this Parde. 200
 As God me help, I laugh whan that I think
 How pitously a night I made them twink.
 But by my say, I told it of no flore,
 130 They had me geve their londs, and their trefore,
 Me nede no kengir to do diligence
 To win their love and do them reverence.
 They lovid me so well, by God above,
 That I ne told no dainty of their love,
 A wise woman woll bely her anon
 To gettin their love, there as she hath none. 210
 But sith I had them wholly in mine hond,
 And that they had gevin me all their lond,
 What shold I takin kepe them for to plese,
 140 But if it were for my profit and ese?
 I sette them a work so, by my say,
 That many night they songin welaway.
 The bacon was not fett for them I trow
 That some men have in Essex at Donmowe.
 I governed them so well attir my law,
 That eche of them full blisfull was, and saw, 220
 X 16

of it

To bringè me gay thingis fro the fayre,
 They were full fame, whan that I spoke them faire,
 For God it wot I chid them spitously.
 Now herk'nith how I bere me propirly.
 Ye wise wivis that can undirfionde,
 Thu shall ye speke, and berin them on honde,
 For half so boldily there can no man
 Swerin and lyin as a woman can.
 I say not this by wivis that ben wife,
 But if it be whan they them misavise,
 A wife wife shall, if that she can her gode,
 Berin them in hond that the Cow is wode,
 And takith witness of her ownè Maide
 Of her assent, but herk'nith how I saide.
 Sir old Keynarde, is this then thyne aray,
 Why doth my neighbour's wife gon so gay?
 She is honourid ovr' all where she goth.
 I sett at home, I have no thrifty cloth.
 What dost thou Sirra, at my neighbours house?
 Is she so fair? art thou so amorous?
 What rownst'ow with our maid? benedicite!
 Sir old lechour, letin thy japis be.
 And if I have a gossip, or a frend
 Withoutin gilt, thou chidist as a fend,
 If that I walk or play unto his house.
 Thou commist home as dronkin as a mouse,
 And prechist on thy bench with evil prefe
 Thou seist to me it is a grete mischefe
 To weddin a pore woman for costage,
 And if that she be rich of high parage,
 Then saist thou 'tis a very turmentry
 To fustir her pride and melancolie;
 And if that she be fair, thou very knave,
 Thou saist that every hollour woll her have.
 She may no while in chastity abide,
 That is assailid upon everich side.
 Thou saist some folk desire us for richese,
 Some for our shape, and some for our fairnecs,
 And some for she can either sing or daunce,
 Some for gentilnecs, some for daliaunce,
 Some for their hondis and their armis smale.
 Thus goth all to the devil by thy tale.
 Thou saist men may not kepe a Castil Wall,
 It may so long assailid ben ovr' all.
 And if that she be soule, thou saist that she
 Covirith every man that she may se.
 For as a Spaniell she woll on him lepe,
 Till that she find some man that woll her chepe.
 Ne none so grey a gose goeth there in Lake,
 As sayst'ow, that woll ben without her Make. 270
 And saist it is a hard thing for to weld
 A wight, that no man woll his thankis held.
 Thus saist thou Lorell whan thou gost to bed
 That no wise man nedith for to wed,
 Ne no man that entndith unto heven;
 With wilde thondir dent, and fire leven
 Motè thy wikid neke be all to broke;
 Thou saist that dropping housis, and eke smoke,
 And chiding wivis makin men to fle
 Out of their own housis; ah benedicite!
 What ailith soch an old man for to chide?
 Thou saist we wivis woll our vicis hide
 Till we be weddid, then we will them shew.
 Well may this be a proverb of a shrew.
 Thou saist that oxin, assin, horse and hounds
 They ben assayid all at diverse flounds,
 Bafins and lavers, er that men them bye,
 Sponis, stolis, and all soche husbondry,
 And so be portis, clothis, and arays,
 But folk of wivis makin none assays,
 Till they be weddid, oldè dotard shrew,
 And sayst how than we woll our vicis shew.
 Thou saist also that it displefith me,
 But if that thou wilt praisin my bewte,

And but thou pore alwey upon my face,
 And clepin me faire Dame in every place;
 And but thou make a fest on that ilk day
 That I was born, and make me fresh and gay;
 And but thou don to my nourice honour,
 And unto my chambir within my bour, 300
 And to my taðr's soik and his allies,
 Thus sayist thou, old barrill full of lies.
 And again of our Apprentise Jenkin,
 For his crisp here shining as gold so fine,
 And for he squirith me both up and dounce,
 Hast thou yeaught a false suspectiounce,
 I n'll him not, though thou were dede to morow;
 But tell me this, why hidist thou with sorow
 The keyis of thy chest away from me?
 It is myn gode as well as thyne parde. 310
 Wenst'ow to make an Idior of our Dame?
 Now by the Lord that callid is St. Jame,
 Thou shalt not both although thou werin wode
 Be Maistir of my body and my gode.
 That one thou shalt forgon maugre thyn eyen.
 What helpith on me to enquire or spien.
 I trow thou woldist lok me in thy chest.
 Thou shuldist say, wife go where as The list,
 Take your disport, I woll leve no talis,
 I know you for a gode wife, Dame Alis. 320
 We love no man that takith kepe or charge
 Where that we go; we woll ben at our large.
 Of allè men yblessid mote he be
 The wise Astrologir Dan Ptoime,
 That saith this Proverb in his Almagest,
 Of allè men his wisdom is the best
 That rekith not who hath the world in hond.
 By this Proverb thou shalt wele undirfiond,
 Have thou ynow, what nede The reke or care
 How merily that othir folk do fare? 330
 For certis, oldè dotard, by your leve,
 Ye shullin have queint right ynow at Eve.
 He is to gret a niggard that woll werne
 A man to light his candle at his lanterne,
 He shall have never the less light parde,
 Have thou ynow, thou darist not plaine The.
 Thou saist also, that if we make us gay
 With clothis, or with precious aray,
 That it is perill of our chastite.
 And yet with wordis thou must enforce The, 340
 And say these wordis in th' Apostle's name,
 In habite made with chastite and shame
 Ye wymen shold apparill you, qð he,
 And not in tressid here, and gay perre,
 As perle, ne with goldè, ne clothis rich.
 Astir the text, ne astir the rubrich,
 I woll not werch as mochill as a gnar.
 Thou saidist als that I was like a Cat,
 But whoso wold sengin the Catt's skinne,
 Than woldè the Cat dwellin in his inne: 350
 And if the Catt's skinne be slick and gay,
 She n'll not dwell in house for half a day,
 But forth she woll or any day be daved,
 To shew her skinn, and gon a Catrewawed.
 This is to say, if I be gay, Sir Shrew,
 I woll renn out my borill for to shew.
 Sir oldè sole, what helpith The to spien?
 Though thou play Argus with his hundrid eyen
 To be my wardè corps as he can best,
 In faith he shall not kepe me but me lest, 360
 Yet couth I make his berd, so mote I the.
 Thou sayist eke that there be thingis thre,
 The which thinges gretely troublin all the erth,
 And that no wight ne may endure the ferth.
 O lese Sir Shrew, Jesu shortin thy life,
 Yet prechist thou, and saist an hatefull wife
 Rek'nid is for one of these mischauncis;
 Ben there then none othir ressemblauncis,

That

That ye may likin your parables to,
But if a fely wife be one of tho?
Thou lik'nist eke a woman's love to hell,
To barrin lond, where watir may not dwell.
Thou lik'nist it also to wilde fire,
The more it breus, the more it hath desire
To consume any thing that brent would be.
Thou saist, right as wormis shendin a tre,
Right so a wife destroyith her husbond,
This knowin they that ben to wivis bond.
Lordings, right thus as ye have undirtonde
Bare I stiffly myne o'ld husbond on hond,
That thus they seidin in their dronkinnesle;
And all was false, but that I toke witnessle
Of my man Jenkin, and my neice also.
O Lord, the pyne I did them and the wo,
And that full gilleles by Godd's swete pine,
For as an horse I couth both bite and whine,
I couth compleine though I were in the gilt,
Or ellis oftintime I had ben spilt.
Yet whofo to Mill comith first, first grint,
I pleinid first, and so was our war stint.
They were full glad t' excusin them full blive
Of what they agilt nevir in their live.
Of wenchis wold I berin them on hond
Whan that for sike unnethis might they stond.
Yet tiklid I his herte, for that he
Wenid I had of him so grete cheerte;
I swore that all my walking out by night
Was for to espy wenchis that he dight:
Undir that colour had I mochill mirth.
For all soch wit is give us in our birth,
Deceit, weping, spinning God hath ygive
To wymen kindly while that they may live.
And thus of o thing I may avaunt me,
At th' end I had the best in ech degre
By sight, or force, or by some othir thing,
As by continuall murmur or grutching.
Namely abedd had they mochill mischaunce,
There wold I chide, and don them no plesaunce,
I wold no lengir in the bed abide,
If that I felt his arm ovir my side,
Till he had made his ransom unto me,
Then wold I let him do his nicete.
And therefore every man this tale I tell,
Wive whofo may, all bein for to sell,
With empty hondis men may no hawkis lure,
For winning wold I all his lust endure,
And make me than a fainid appetite,
And yet in bacon had I no delite,
That made me that I evir wold him chide;
For though the Pope had sittin him beside,
I wold not sparin them at their own bord,
For by my trouth I quit him word for word,
As help me very God omnipotent,
Though I right now should make my Testament,
I ne him ow a word but it n'is quitte,
I broughtin it about so by my witt,
That they must give it up as for the best,
Or ellis had we nevir ben at rest.
For though he lokid as a wode lionn,
Yet shold he fail of his Conclusioun.
Than wold I say, now gode lese takin kepe,
How mekily lokith Wilkin our Shepe,
Come nere, my Spouse, and let me kifs your cheke,
Ye sholdin be all pacient and meke,
And havin a swete spicid Conscience,
Sith ye so preche of Job's patience,
Suff'rith alwey sith ye so well can preche.
And but ye do, certeine we shall you teche
That it is laire to have a wife in pece
One of us two mote obeyin doutles,
And sithin a man is more resonable
Than woman is, ye mote ben suffirable.

What cilith you to grutch thus, and to grone?
Is it for you wold have my queint alone?
Why take it all, lo! have it every dell,
Peter I shrew you but ye love it well,
For if I wolde sell my belle chote
I couth walkin as fresh as any rose;
But I wold kepin it for your own tothe;
Ye be to blame by God I say you sothe. 450
Soch mannir wordis haadde we on hond.
Now wold I spekin of my fourth husbond.
My fourth husbonde was a Revelour,
This is to say he had a Paramour,
And I was yong, and full of ragery,
Stubbourn, and strong, and jolne as a Pie.
Lord how couth I daunsin to an harp smale,
And sing, I wis, as any Nightingale!
Whan I had dronk a draught of fete wine.
Metellus the soule chote and the swine, 460
That with a staff birast his wife her life
For she dronk wine, though had I ben his wife,
Ne shuld he nought have dauntid me fro drink.
And astir wine of Venus must I think. 390
All so sikir as cold engendrith hail
A lico'rous Mouth must have a lecherous taile.
In wymen vinolent is no detence.
This knowin lechours by experience.
But o Lord Crist! whan it remembrith me
Upon my youth, and on my jolite, 470
It tiklich me about the herte rote,
Unto this day it doth my herte bote,
That I have had my wold as in my time,
But Age alas! that all wold undermine,
Hath me birast my bewte and my pith 400
Let go, farewell, the Devill go therewith.
The flour is gon, there n'is no more to tell,
The bran, as I best can, now mote I sell.
But yet to be right mery wol I fond,
Now forth to tellin of my fourth husbond. 480
I say I had in my hert gret despise
That he of any othir had delite,
But he was quitte by God and by St. Joke,
I madin him of the same wode a Croce, 410
Not of my body in no foul manere,
But certainly I madin folk soche chere
That in his own grete made I him to frie,
For angir, and for very jelousie.
By God, on erth I was his Purgatory,
For which I hope his soule is now in glory. 490
For God it wote he sat full oft and song
Whan that his shoe full buttirly him wrong.
For there was none save God and he that wist
In many wise how fore that I him twist. 420
He dyed whan I came fro Jerusalem,
And lyth in grave undir the Rode beme.
All ne is not his tomb so curious
As was the Sepulture of Darius,
Which that Apelles wrought so sotilly;
It is but waste to bury preciously; 500
Let him farewell, God geve his Soule gode rest:
He is now in his grave and in his chest.
Now of my fift husbonde wold I tell,
God nevir lett his soul comin to Hell. 430
And yet was he to me the moste shrew,
That sele I on my ribbis all by rew,
And evir shall unto my ending day.
But in our bed he was so fresh and gay,
And therewithal he couth so well me glose,
Whan that he wold he had my belle chote, 510
That though he had me bere on every bone,
He couthen winne agen my love anon.
I trow I loved him the bett, for that he
Was of his love so daungeroys to me
We wymen have, if that I wold not lie.
In this straunge mattere a queint fantasy;

Waitin what thing we may not lightly have
 Thereafter all day woll we crie and crave,
 Forbed us thing, and that desirin we,
 Prefs on us hard, and then wollin we fle,
 With danger utter we all our chaffare,
 Grete prefs at Markit makith dere the ware,
 And to grete chape is hold at littil price.
 This knowith every woman that is wise.

My fist husbonde, God his soule blefs,
 Which that I toke for love, and no richese,
 He sometime was a Clerk in Oxinford,
 And had left schole, and went at home to bord
 With my gosip ydwelling in our tounce,
 God have her soule, her name was Alifoune.

She knew my hert, and eke my privy
 Bettr than our Parsh preest, so mote I the,
 To her bewrayid I my Counsaile all,
 For had my husbond pist against the wall,
 Or done a thing that shold have cost his life,
 To her and to anothir worthy wife,
 And to my niece, the which I lovid well,
 I wold have told his Counsaile every dell,
 And so I did full oftin, God it wote,
 That made his face full oftin rede and hote,
 For very shame, and blamid him for he
 Had told to me so grete a private.

And so bifell it, that once in a Lent
 So oftin time I to my Gosip went,
 For evir yet I lovid to go gay,
 And for to walk in March, Aprill, and May,
 Fro hous to hous to harkin sondry tales,
 That Jenkin Clerk, and my Gosip Dame Ales,
 And I my self into the feldis went.

My husbond was at London all that Lent,
 I had the bettir leysir for to play,
 And for to se, and eke for to be seye
 Of lusty folk, what wist I where my grace
 Was shapin for to ben, or in what place?
 Therefore made I my Visitations
 To Vigilis and to Processions,
 To prechings eke, and to Pilgrimagis,
 To plays of Miracles, and Mariagis,
 And werid on me my gay skarlit gites,
 These wormis, ne these moughtis, ne these mites
 Upon my patrill feet them nevre a dell,
 And well'ow why? for they were usid well.

Now woll I tell forth what happid to me;
 I say that in the feldis walkid we,
 Till trewly we haddin soche daliaunce
 This Clerk and I, that of my purveiaunce
 I speke to him, and seide how that he
 If I were widow shold weddin me.
 For certainly I say for no bostance,
 Yet was I never without purveiance
 Of Mariage, ne of othir thingis eke;
 I hold a Mons'is wit not worth a leke
 That hath but one hole for to stertin to,
 And if that failin than is all undo.
 I bare him on hond, he had chantid me,
 My Dame taught me forsoth that sorilte,
 And eke I said I mete of him all night,
 He wold have slaine me as I lay upright,
 And all my bedd was full of very blode,
 And yet I hope that he shold do me gode,
 For blode betok'nith gold, as I was taught;
 And all was false, I dremid of him naught,
 But as I folowed ay my Dam'is lore,
 As well of that as othir thingis more.

But now Sir --- let me se --- what shall I saine?
 Aha! by God I have my tale againe.
 Whan that my fourth husbond was on the bere,
 I wept algate and madin fory chere,
 As wivis motin, for it is usage,
 And with my kerchefe cov'rid my visage,

But for that I was purveid of a Make
 I wept but small and that I undirtake.
 To chirch was my husbond born on morow
 With Neighboures that for him madin sorow.
 And Jenkin eke our Clerk was one of tho,
 As help me God, whan that I saw him go
 Aftir the bere, methought he had a paire
 Of leggis and of fete so clene, so faire,
 That all my hert I gave unto his hold.
 He was I trow but twenty winter old,
 And I was forty, if I shall say sothe,
 And yet I had alwey a Colt'is tothe.
 Gaptoth't I was, and that became me well,
 I had the print eke of Dame Venus sele.
 As help me God, I was a lusty one,
 And faire, and rich, and yong, and well bigon.
 And trewly as my husbondes told me
 I had the bestè queint that mightin be.
 For certis I am full Venerian
 In feling, and my hert is Marcian.
 Venus me gaf my lust and lie'roufness,
 And Mars gaf me my sturdie hardiness.
 Mine ascendant was Taure, and Mars therein,
 Alas! alas! that evir love were sinn.
 I folowed ay mine inclination
 By vertue of my Constellation,
 That madin me that I couth not withdraw
 My chambr' of Venus from a gode felaw.
 Yet have I Mart'is mark upon my face,
 And also in anothir privy place.
 For God so wille by my Salvation
 I lovid never by discretion,
 But evir folowid mine appetite,
 All were he short, or long, or blak, or white,
 I toke no kepe so that he likid me,
 How pore he was, ne eke of what degre.
 What shold I say? but at the Month'is end
 This jolij Clerk Jenkin, that was so hend,
 Hath weddid me with grete solempnite.
 And to him gaf I all the lond and fee
 That evir was me geven theretofore.
 But aftirward repentid me full fore.
 He n'o'dè suffir nothing of my list,
 But by God he smote onis with his fist,
 For that I rent out of his boke a lefe,
 That of that stroke myn cris waxin defe.
 Stubborn I was as is a lioness,
 And of my tonge a very jangleress,
 And walk I wold as I had done beforen
 Fro house to house, altho' he had it sworn.
 For which fall oftin times wold he preche,
 And me out of o'ld Roman gestis teche,
 How that Sulpicius Gallus lest his wife,
 And her forsoke for term of all his life
 Nothing but for opin hede he her saye
 Loking out at his dore upon a day.
 Anothir Roman told he me by name,
 That for his wife was at a Sommir game
 Without his weting, he forsoke her eke.
 And than wold he upon his Bible seke.
 That ilkè proverb of Ecclesiast,
 Where he commaundith and forbiddith fast
 Man shall not suffre' his wife roill about.
 Than wold he sayin thus right out of dout,
*Whoso byldith his house all of Salows,
 And priketh his blind h'se ovir falows
 And juff'uh his wife for to seche halows,
 Is worthy to ben honged on the gallows.*
 But all for nought, I sette not an hawe,
 Of his proverbis, ne of his old Sawe.
 Ne wold I not of him correctid be,
 I hate him that my vicis tellith me,
 And so do mo of us, God wor, than I,
 This made him wode with me, all uttirly,

I n'old forbere him in no mannir caas.
 Now woll I say you sothe, by St. Thomas,
 Why that I rent out of his boke a lefe,
 For which he smote me that I was d'fe.
 He had a boke, that gladly night and day,
 For his disport he wold redin alway,
 Yclepid Valeric and Theophrast,
 At which boke he tough alwey full fast;
 And eke there was a Clerk sometime in Rome,
 A Cardinall, that hightin Seint Jerome,
 That made a boke agenst Jovinian,
 In which boke there was eke Tertullian,
 Chrysippus, Trotula, and Helowis,
 That was an Abbess nat ferr fro Paris.
 And eke the Parables of Salomon,
 Ovid's art, and bokis many one,
 And all these were boundin in one Volome,
 And every night and day was his Custome
 (Whan he had leysir and vacatioun
 From othir worldly Occupatioun)
 To redin in this boke of wikid wivis,
 He knew of them mo Legendis and livis
 Than ben of gode wymen in the bible;
 For trustith wele it is impossible
 That any Clerk wold speke gode of wivis
 But if it be of holy Scintis livis.
 Ne of none othir woman ner' the mo,
 Who paintith the Lion tellich me who?
 By God if wymen haddin writtin Stories
 As Clerkis han within their Oratories,
 They wold have writt of Men more wikidness,
 Than all the mark of Adam may redress.
 The childrin of Mercury and Venus
 Ben in their working full contrarious,
 Mercury lovith wisdom and science,
 And Venus lovith riot and dispence.
 And for their diverse disposition
 Eche fallith in othir's exaltation.
 And thus God wot Mercury' is desolate
 In Piseis, where Venus is exaltate.
 And Venus falls where Mercury is rais'd,
 Therefore no Woman of no Clerk is prais'd.
 The Clerk whan he is old, and may nought do
 Of Venus werkis worth his olde shoe,
 Than sit he doune, and write in his dotage
 That wymen cannot kepe their Mariage.
 But now to purpose, why I tolde The
 That I was betin for a boke parde.
 Upon a night Jenkin that was our Sire
 Redde on his boke as he sat by the fire
 Of Eve first, that for her wikidness
 Was all mankind brought unto wretchidness,
 For which that Jesu Crist himself was flaine,
 That boughtin us with his hert's blode againe.
 Lo! here expres of wymen may ye find,
 That woman was the los of all Mankind.
 Tho radd he me how Sampson lost his heers,
 Sleeping his Leman cut them with her sheers,
 Thorough which trefoun he lost both his eyen.
 Tho radd he me, if that I shall not lyen
 Of Hercules, and his Deianire,
 That causid him to set himself on fire,
 Nothing forgat he the care and the wo,
 That Socrates had with his wivis two.
 How that Xantippe cast pifs on his hede,
 This fely man sat still as he were dede,
 He wipid his hede, no more durst he saine,
 But er the thondir stint there comith raine.
 Of Pasiphie tha was Quene of Crete,
 For shrewdness him thoughtin that tale so swete.
 Eye speke no more, it is a grisly thing
 Of her horrible lust and her liking.
 Of Clytemnestra for her lechery,
 That falsely made her husbond for to die.

He radd it with well gode devotion.
 He told me eke for what occasion
 Amphiaras at Thebis lost his life,
 My husbond had a Legend of his wife,
 Eryphyle, that for an ouche of gold
 Hath privily unto the Grekis told
 Where that her husbond hid him in a place;
 For which he had at Thebis fory grace.
 Of Lima told he me, and of Lucie,
 They both madin their husbonds for to dye,
 That one for love, that othir was for hate.
 Lima her husbond on an Evin late
 Poysonid had, for that she was his so,
 Lucy licorous loved her husbond so,
 That for he shoid alwey upon her think,
 She gave to him soche a love mannir drink,
 That he was dede er it wer.n morow,
 And thus Algatis husbonds haade sorow.
 Than told he me how one Latameus
 Compleinid to his felow Arius,
 That in his gardin growid soche a tre,
 On which he seidin that his wivis thre
 Hongid themselves for hertis despitous.
 O Leve brothir, qd this Arius,
 Gevin me a plant of this blisfull tre,
 And in my garden plantid shall it be.
 Of latir date of wivis hath he redd,
 That some han flaine their husbonds in bedd,
 And let their lechour dight them all the night,
 While that the Cors lay on the flore upright.
 And some had drivin Nalis in their braime
 Whilis they slepe, and thus they have them flaine.
 Some have gevin them poyson in their drink.
 He spake more harm than any hert may think.
 And therewithall he knew mo Proverbis
 Than in this world growth grafs or herbis.
 Bat is, qd he, thyne habitation
 Be with a Lion or a foule dragon,
 Than with a woman using for to chide.
 Bett is, qd he high in the rote t' abide,
 Than with an angry wife doum in an house,
 They ben so wikid and contrarious.
 They hatin that their husbonds lovin ay;
 He said, a woman cast her shame away,
 Whan she cast of her smok, and farther mo
 A fair woman but she be chaff also,
 Is like a gold ring on a fow's nose.
 Who woldde weinin, or who couth suppose
 The wo that in myne hert was and the pane?
 And whan I saw that he wold never tyme
 To redin on this cursid boke all night,
 Al fodeinly thre levis have I plight/
 Out of his boke, right as he radd, and eke
 I with my fist so toke him on the cheke
 That in the fire he fell balward adoun,
 And up he flet, as doth a wode houn,
 And with his fist he smote me on the hede
 That on the flore I lay as I were dede.
 And whan he saw how stille that I lay,
 He was agast, and wold have fled away,
 Till at the last out of my sweome I braid.
 O last thou flaine me, false thate, I said,
 For my londe thus hast thou murd'rid me?
 Er I be dede yet woll I once kifs The.
 And nere he came, and knelid fair adoun,
 And seide, dere nstir, swete Alhoune,
 As help me God I shall The never smite,
 That I have done it is thy self to wite:
 Forgeve it me, and that I The besoke;
 And yet estiones I but him on the cheke,
 And seide, thefe, thus moche am I bewroke,
 Now woll I dye, I may no lengir speke
 But at the last with mochill care and wo
 We fell accordid by our felun two,

He gaf me all the bridill in mine hond
 To have the governaunce of houe and lond,
 And of his tongue, and of his hond also,
 And made him brenn his boke anon right tho.
 And whan that I had gottin unto me
 By Maifry all the Sovereignity,
 And that he seidin, myn own trewe wife
 Do as thou list the term of all thy life
 Kepe thynce honour, and kepe eke myne estate,
 Aftir that day we nevir had debate.
 God help me so, I was to him as kind
 As any wife fro Denmark unto Inde,
 And also true, and so was he to me,
 I pray to God, that sitt in Majesty
 To bliffin his soule for his mercy dere.
 Now woll I say my tale if ye woll here.

The frere ylough whan he had herd all this,
 Now, Dame, qð he, so I have joy and blifs,
 This is a long preamble of a tale.
 And whan the Sompnour herde the frere gale,
 Lo! qð this Sompnour, by Goddes armis two
 A frere woll intermete him evirmo,

Lo! godè men, a fly and eke a frere
 Woll fall in every dish and eche matere.
 What spekest thou of Preambulation?
 What? amble' or trot, either pece or sit doune,
 Thou lettist our disport in this matere.
 Ye, wolt thou so, Sir Sompnour, qð the Frere, 840
 Now by my fay, I shall ere that I go
 Tell of a Sompnour soche a tale or two,
 That all the folk shall laughin in this place.
 Now doin, els, frere, I beshrew thy face,
 Qð this Sompnour, and I beshrewè me
 But if I tellin talis two or thre
 Of freris, ere I come to Sirtingbourne,
 That I shall make thine herte for to mourne,
 For well I wot thy pacience is gon.
 Our Hostè cryid pece, and that anon, 850
 And seide, let the Woman tell her tale,
 Ye farin as folk that dronk ben of Ale:
 Doe Dame tell forth your tale, and that is best.
 All redy Sir qð she, right as you lest,
 If I have licence of this worthy frere.
 Yes, Dame tell forth your Tale, I woll it here.

Here ends the PROLOGUE of the Wife of BATH.

The Wife of BATH's TALE.

A Bachelor of King Arthur's Court is enjoin'd by the Queen, upon pain of Death, to tell what thing it is, that women do most desire. At length he is taught it by an old Woman, whom he is enforc'd to marry.

IN the old dayis of the King Arthure
 (Of which the Bretons spekin grete honour)
 All was this lond fullid of Fayry,
 The Elquene with her jolly Cumpany 860
 Daunfid full oft in many a grene mede,
 This was the old Opinion, as I rede,
 I speke of many hundrid yere ago,
 But now can no man se nene elhis mo.
 For now the grete charity and prayers
 Of Limitours, and othir holy Freres,
 That serchin every lond, and every streme,
 As thik as motis in the Sunne beme,
 Blessing halls, chambirs, kitchinis and boures,
 Cities, borroughs, castilis, and hie toures,
 Thorpis and barnis, shipins and dairys,
 This makith that there ben now no fayrys.
 For there as wont to walkin was an Elf
 There walkith now the Limitour himself,
 In Undirmelis and in Morrownings,
 He saith his Mattins and his holy thinges,
 As he goth in his Limitatioune,
 Wymen may now go safely up and doune,
 In every bush, and undir every tre
 There n'is none othir Incubus but he,
 And he ne will don them no dishonour.
 And so befall it that this King Artour
 Had in his houe a lusty bachilere,
 That on a day came ridin fro th' rivere,
 And happid that alone as he was born,
 He saw a Maidin walking him befor,
 Of which Maidin anon maugre her hede
 By very force he raft her Maidinhede.

For which oppression was soche clamour,
 And soche persute unto the King Artour, 890
 That damnid was this Knight for to be dede,
 By course of law, and shuld have lost his hede,
 Peraventure soche was the Statute tho,
 But that the quene and othir ladys mo
 So longè prayid the King of his grace,
 Tyll he his life hath grauntid in that place,
 And gave him to the quene all at her will
 To chese wheðir she wold him save or spill.
 The Quene thankith the King with all her might,
 And aftir this thus spake she to the Knight, 900
 Whan that she se her time upon a day;
 Thou standist yet, qð she, in soche aray,
 That of thy life yet hast'ow no furtie,
 I graunt The thy life if thou canst tell me
 What thing it is that wymen most desiren
 Beware and kepe thy nekkè bone from iren.
 And if thou canst tell it me not anon,
 Yet woll I geve The lewe for to gon
 A twelvemonth and a day to seke and lere
 And answee suffisaunt in this matere, 910
 And surety woll I have er that thou pass
 Thy body for to yeldin in this place.
 Wo was the Knight, and sorowfully sikith,
 But what? he may not don all as him likith.
 And at the last he chose him for to wend
 And come agen right at the yer's end,
 With soche answee as God wold him purvey.
 Taking his leve he wendith forth his wey.
 He sekith every houe and every place,
 Whereas he hopith for to findin grace 920
 To

To lern what thing the wymen lovin most.
 Yet he ne couth arrivin in no Colste
 Whereas he might findin in this matere
 Two Creturis according both yfere.
 Some said that wymen lovid best richese,
 Some seide honour, and some said jollinels,
 Some rich aray, some seidin lust abedd,
 And oftime to be widow, and ywedd.
 Some said that our hert is mostly esid,
 Whan that we ben flatterid and presid.
 He goth full nie the sothe, I woll nat lie,
 A man shall winn us best with flattery,
 And with attendance, and with besines
 Ben we ylimid both the more and less.
 And some men say how that we lovin best,
 For to ben fre, and don right as us lest,
 And that no man repreve us of our vice,
 But say that we be wise, and nothing nice,
 For trewily there n'is none of us all,
 If any wight woll claw us on the gall,
 That we n'll kik for that he saith us sothe.
 Assay, and he shall find it, that so doth.
 For be we ne're so vicious withinn.
 We woll be holdin wise, and clene from sinn.
 And some men sain, that grete delite have we
 To ben holdin stabil, and eke secre,
 And in o purpose stedfastly to dwell,
 And not bewrayin thing that men us tell.
 But that tale is not worth a rake flele,
 Parde we wymen konnin nothing hele.
 Witnens of Midas; Woll ye here the tale?
 Ovid amongis othir thingis smale
 Saith Midas had undir his longè heres
 Growing upon his hede two Afs'is cres,
 The whichè vice he hid as best he might
 Full sotilly from every mann's sight,
 That safe his wife there wist of it no mo,
 He loved her most, and trustid her also,
 He prayid her that unto no creature
 She shold not tellin of his disfigure.
 She swore him, not for all the world to winn
 She n'old not do that villony, ne sinn,
 To make her husbond have so foule a name,
 She n'old not tell it for her owne shame,
 But natheless her thoughtin that she dide,
 That she so long sholdin a Counsaile hide,
 Her thought it swoll so sore about her hert,
 That nedily some word she must astert,
 And sith she durst tellin it to no man
 Doune to a Marris faste by she ran,
 Tyll she came there her hert was on a fire,
 And as a bittorn bumpith in the mire,
 She laid her mouth unto the watir doune,
 Bewray me not thou watir with thy sounes,
 Qð she, to The I tell it, and no mo,
 Mine husbond hath long Afs'is cris two.
 Now is mine hert all whole, now it is out,
 I might no lengir kepe it out of dout.
 Here now ye se, though we a time abide,
 Yet out it mote, we can no Counsaile hide.
 The remnaunt of the tale if ye woll here,
 Redith Ovid, and there ye may it lere.
 This Knight of which my tale is specially,
 Whan that he saw he might not come thereby,
 That is to say, what wymen lovin most,
 Within his hert sorowfull was his gost.
 But home he goth, he mightin not sojourne,
 The day is come that homewards must he turne,
 And in his way it happid him to ride
 In all his care undir a forest side.
 Whereas he saw upon a daunce ygo
 Of Lady's four and twenty, othir mo.
 Towards the daunse he drowe him full yerne
 In hope that he some wildorn there shold lerne.

But certainly er he came fully there
 Vanishid was the daunse he wist not where.
 No creature saw he there that berin life,
 Save on the grene sitting he saw a wife,
 A foulir wight there may no man devise,
 Again the Knight the old wife gan arise, 1000
 And said, Sir Knight, here tothlyith no way,
 Tellith me what you sekin by your fay.
 Peraventure it may the bettir be,
 930 These old folk konnin mocht thing, qð she.
 My lese Moðir, qð this Knight, certene
 I n'am but dede, but if that I can seine
 What thing it is that wymen most desire,
 Couð ye me wisse, I wo'd well quite your hire.
 Plight me thy trouth, here in my hond, qð she,
 The next thing that I requirin of The 1010
 Thou shalt it do, if it be in thy might,
 And I woll tell it you er it be night.
 Have here my trouth, qð the Knight, I it graunt;
 940 Then qð the wife, I may me well avaunt
 Thy life is safe, for I woll flond thereby,
 Upon my life the quene woll say as I.
 Let se wh ch is the proudest of them all
 That werth or a kerchief or a call,
 That dare say nay, of that I shall you teche.
 Let us go forth withoutin lengir speche 1020
 Two townid she a pillil in his ere,
 And bad him to be glad, and have no fere.
 Whan they ben comin to the Court, this Knight
 950 Said he had hold his day as he had light;
 And redy was his answer, as he said.
 Full many noble wife, and many maid,
 And many widow, for that they be wise,
 (Th. quene her self sitting as a Justice)
 Assemblid ben his answer for to here:
 And aftirward this Knight was lode appere. 1030
 To every wight commaundid was silence,
 And that the Knight shold tel in Audience
 What thing that worldly wymen lovin melle.
 960 This Knight ne flode nor still as doth a belle,
 But to t is question anon answerde,
 With manly voice, that all the Court it herd.
 My liege Lady, generally, qð he,
 Wymen desirin to have sovereignty
 As well ovir their husbonds as their love,
 And for to ben in Maistry them above 1040
 This is your most desire, though ye me kill,
 Doth as you list, I am here at your will.
 In all the Court ne was there wife ne maide,
 970 Ne widow that contrary'd what he said,
 But seid he was worthy to have his life.
 And with that word upstertin the old wife,
 Which that the Knight found sitting on the grene,
 Mercy qð she, my sovereign lady quene,
 Er that your Court departin do me right.
 I taught this answer unto this Knight, 1050
 For which he plightid me his trouthe there,
 The first thing that I wold of him requere,
 He wold it do, if it lay in his might
 Before this Court than pray I The Sir Knight,
 Qð she, that thou me take unto thy wife,
 For well thou wost, that I have kept thy life.
 If I say false, say nay upon thy fay.
 This Knight answerde alas! and welaway!
 I wor right well that soche was my behaft,
 For Godd's love ch. fish a new request. 1060
 Take all my gode, and let my body go.
 Nay, qð she, then I shrew us both in two.
 For tho that I be foule and old and pore,
 990 I n'old for all the metal nor the ore
 That under erth is grave, or lath above,
 But if that I thy wife were and thy love
 My love, qð he, nay my Damnation!
 Alas! that any of my Nation

Sholdin evir so foule disparaged be.
But all for noght, the end is this, that he
Constrainid was, and nedis must her wedd,
And takith this old wife, and goth to bedd.

Now woldin some men sain peraventure
That for my negligence I do not cure
To tellin you the joy, and the array
That att the fiste was that ilkè day.
To the which thing I shortly answeire shall
I say there was no joy, nor feste at all.
There n'as but heviness, and mochil sorow,
Full privily he wed her on a morow,
And all day aftir hid him as an Oule,
So wo was him, his wife lokid so foule.
Grete sorow haddè this Knight in his thought,
Whan he was with his wife abed ybrought,
He wallowith, and tornith to and fro;
His olde wife lay smiling evirmo;
And said, o dere husbond, o benedicite,
Farith every knight with his wife as ye?
Is this the law of King Arthur's house?
Is eche Knight of his love thus daungerous?
I am your own true love, and eke your wife,
I am she which that favid hath your life,
And certis yet did I you ne'r unriht.
Why farin ye with me thus the first night?
Ye fare like a man that has lost his witt.
Fy! what is my gilt? for God's love tell it,
And it shall be amendid if I may.
Amendid, q'ð this Knight, alas! nay, nay.
That wold not ben amendid nevir mo.
Thou art so lothely, and so old also,
And thareto commin of so low a kind,
That no wondir though I wallow and wind.
So wolde God, q'ð he mine hert might brest.

Is this, q'ð she, the cause of your unrest?
Yea certinly, q'ð he, no wondir is.
Now Sir q'ð she I cou'd amend all this
If that me list, er it were dayis thre.
So well ye might you berin unto me.

But for ye spekin of soche gentilnes,
As is defendid out of old richess,
That therefore shullin ye be gentilmen,
Soch arrogance n'is not worthy an hen.
Lo! who that is most vertuous alwey
Privy and apert, and most tendith aye
To do the gentle dedis that he can,
Takith him for the gettrist Gentilman,
Crist wold we claim of him our gentilnes,
Not of our Elders for their old richess.
For though they geve us all their heritage,
For which we claime to ben of high parage,
Yet may they noght bequethin for no thing
To none of us their vertuous living,
That made them Gentilmen ycallid be,
And bad us folow them in soche degre.

Full well can the wife Poet of Florence,
That hight Dantes, spekin in this sentence.
Lo! in soch manir rime is Dantes tale,
Full feld uprisith by his braunchis smale
Prowess of Man, for God of his godeness
Wolt that we claim of him our gentilnes.
For of our Elders may we nothing claime
But temp'rall thingis that may hurt or maime.
Eke every wight wot this as well as I,
If gentilnes were plantid nat'rally
Unto a certeine linage doune the line,
Privy and apert, than wold they nevir fine
To don of gentilnes the faire Office,
They mightin do no Villony ne vice.

Take fire, and bere it to the derkist house,
Betwixt this, and the Mount of Caucasus,
And let men shet the doris, and go thenne,
Yet wold the fire as faire lyin and brenne

As twenty thousand men might it behold,
His office natural ay wold it hold,
Up perill of my life till that it dye.
Here may ye sein well how that gentrye
Is not annexid to possession,
Sithin folk ne don their operation
Alway as doth the fire, lo! in his kind.
For God it wot men may full oftin find
A lord's sonne don shame and Villony,
And he that wold have prise of his gentry,
For that he was born of a gentle house,
And had his Elders noble, vertuous,
And n'ill himself doin no gentill dedis,
Ne follue' his gentil Auncitre that ded is,
Ne n'is not gentill, be he Duke or Erle,
Fy Villain! sinfull dedes makith a cherle.
For gentilnes n'is but the renomie
Of thy Ancestors for their high bountie,

Which is a stronge thing for thy persone,
Thy gentilnes comith fro God alone.
Then comes our very gentilnes of grace
It was nothing bequethe us with our place.
Thinkith how noble, saith Valerius,
Was thilkè King Tullus Hostilius
That out of povert rose to high nobless!
Redith Senec, and redith eke Boece,
There shall ye sene expresse, that it no drede is
He is gentill, which that doth gentill dedis.
And therefore, dere Husbond, I thus conclude
All were it that mine Auncetirs were rude
Yet may the High God, and so hopin I
Grauntin me grace to livin vertuously.
Than am I gentill, whan that I begin
To livin vertuously and levin Sinn.

Now thereas ye of povert me repreve,
The hiè God, on whom that we beleve,
In wilfull povert chese to lede his life,
And certis every man, maidin, and wife
May undirstond, that Jesu Havin King
Ne wold not chese a vitious living.

Glad povert is an honest thing certeine,
This wold Senec, and othir Clerkis saine.
Whoso wold hold him paid of his povert,
I hold him rich, all had he not a Shert.
He that covitith is a full pore wight,
For he wold han what is not in his might,
But who nought hath, ne covitith to have
Is rich, although men hold him but a knave.
Juvenal saith of povert merrily,
Very povert it singith propirly.

The pore man whan he goith by the way
Beforn the thevis he may sing and play.
Povert is hatefull gode; and as I gesse
A full grete bringir out of besinesse,
A grete amender eke of Sapience,
To him that takith it in pacience.
Povert is this, although it seme clenge,
Possession, that no wight wold challenge.
Povert full oftin whan a man is low
Makith himself, and eke his God to know.
Povert spectacle is, as thinkith me,
Through which one may his very frendis se.
And therefore sin that I do you not greve
Of my povertie, no more me repreve.

Now, Sir, of Eld ye eke reprevid me,
And certis, Sir, though none authority
Were in no boke, ye gentles of honour
Saine that men shold an oldè wight honour,
And clepe them fathir for your gentilnes,
And Authors shall I findin, as I gesse.

There as ye saine, that I am foule and o'd,
Than drede you noght to ben a Cokewold.
For filth and elth also, so mote I the,
Ben grete Wardeinis upon chastite.

But

But nathêless since I know your delite,
I shall fulfill your worldly appetite.
Chese now, qð she, one of these thingis twey,
To have me soule and old till that I deye, 1220
And be to you a true and humble wife,
And never you displese in all my life,
Or ellis woll you have me yong and faire,
And take your aventure of the repaire
That shall come to your house because of me,
Or in some othir place, as well may be?
Now chese your selfin whethir that you liketh.
This Knight avisith him, and fore he siketh,
But at the last he said in this manere.
My Lady, and my love, and wife so dere, 1230
I puttè me in your wise governaunce,
Chesith your self which may be most plessaunce,
And most honour to you and me also.
I do no force the whethir of the two.
For as you likith it fulfillith me.
Than have I got the Maistery, qð she,
Since I may chese to govern as I lest;
Yea certis, wife, qð he, I hold it best.
Kiss me, qð she, we be no lengir wroth,
For by my trowth I woll be to you both, 1240

This is to say, to be both faire and gode,
I pray to God that I mote stervin wode,
But I to you be all so sad and trew,
As evir was wise sith the world was new.
And but I be to morow faire to sene
As any Lady, Emperess, or Quene,
That is betwene the Est and eke the West,
Doth with my life, qð she, right as you lest.
Cast up the Courtain, and loke how it is.
And whan this Knight saw apertly all this, 1250
That she so faire was, and so yong thereto,
For joy he hent her in his armis two.
His hertè bathid in a bath of blis,
A thousand times arow he gan her kiss,
And she obeyid him in every thing
That moughtin doen him plesure or liking,
And thus they livid to their livis end,
In perfite Joy: And Jesu Crist us send
Husbandis meke, and yong, and fresh abed, 1260
And grace to ovrlive them that we wed.
And I pray to God to shortin their lives
That woll not be governid by their wives,
And old and angry nigards of dispence,
God send them sone a very pestilence.

Thus endith the Wife of BATH's TALE.

Here beginneth the FRERE's PROLOGUE.

His worthy Limitour, this noble Frere,
 He made alwey a manir louring chere
 Upon the Somner, but for honeste
 No villeynous word yet to him spake he.
 But at the last he said unto the wife,
 Dame, q^d he, God geve you a right gode life,
 Ye have here touchid, all so mote I the,
 In schole mattir a grete difficulte.
 Ye han said mochill thing right well I say.
 But Dame, here as we ridin by the way
 Us nedith not to spekin but of game,
 And let Autoritys a Godd's name
 To preching, and to schole eke of Clergy.
 But if it like unto this Company
 I woll you of a Somner tell a game,
 Parde ye may well knowin by the name
 That of a Sompnour may no gode be said,
 I pray that none of you be ill apaid;

A Sompnour is a rennir up and doun
 With Maundements for fornicatioun,
 And is ybete at every toun's end.

20

Tho spake our Host, as Sir ye shuld ben hend
 And curteis, as a man of your estate.
 In this Cumpany we woll no debate.
 Tellith your tale, and let the Sompnour be.

Nay, q^d the Sompnour, let him say to me
 What so him list, whan it come to my lot
 Parde I shall him quittin every grote.
 I shall him tellin which a grete honour
 It is to be a flattering Limitour,
 And eke of many othir manir crime,
 Which nedith not reherfin at this time,
 And of his Office I shall tell I wis.
 Our Host answerid, Pece, no more of this.
 And astirward he said unto the Frere,
 Tell forth your tale my levè Maistir dere.

30

Here endeth the FRERE's PROLOGUE.

The

The FRERE's TALE.

A Sompnour and the Devil meeting on the way, after conference, become sworn brethren, and to Hell they go together. A covert invective against the bribery and corruption of the Spiritual Courts in those days.

Hilome there was dwelling in my Contre
 An Archdecon, a man of high degre,
 That boldly diddin execution
 In punishing of fornication,
 Of Witchecraft, and eke of baudery,
 Of Defamation, and advourtrie
 Of Chirch gerevis, and of testaments,
 Of Contraets, and of loss of Sacraments,
 Of Usurie and Simonie also,
 But certis lecheroures did he moch wo,
 They sholde singin if they werin hent;
 And smale tythirs they werin soule yshent,
 If any person wold upon them pleyne,
 There might astert them no pecunial peyne.
 For smale tithis and eke small offering
 He made the peple pitously to sing.
 For er the Bissiop caught them with his hoke,
 They werin in the Archdekin's boke.
 And than had he through his jurisdiction
 Powir to don on them correction.
 He had a Sompnour redy to his hond,
 A flyir boy was there none in Englonde,
 For subtilly he had his espiale,
 That taught him where that he might him availe. 60
 He coude spare of Lechours one or two
 To techin him to four and twenty mo.
 For though this Sompnour wode were as an hare,
 To tell his harlotry I wold not spare.
 For we ben out of his Correction,
 They han of us no jurisdiction.
 Ne nevir shall in term of all their lives.
 Peter, so ben the wymen of the Stives,
 Qd this Sompnour, yput out of our cure.
 Pece with mischaunce, and with misaventure, 70
 Saidin our Host, and let him tell his tale.
 Now tellith forth, and let the Sompnour gale,
 Ne sparith not, myn owne Maistir dere.
 This false thefe, this Sompnour, qd the frere,
 Had alwey baudis redy to his hond,
 As any hauke to lure in Englonde,
 That tellith him all the secre they knew,
 For their acquaintance was not come of new.
 They werin his approvirs privily,
 He toke himself a grete profit thereby:
 His Maistir knew not alwey what he wan,
 Withoutin Maundement a lewde Man
 He couth summon up peyne of Crist's curse,
 And they were inly glad to fill his purse,
 And madin him grete festis at the Nale,
 And right as Judas hadde purfis smale,
 And was a thefe, right soche a thefe was he,
 His Maistir haddè but half his duty.
 He was, if I shall gevin him his laude,
 A thefe, and eke a Sompnour, and a baud.
 He had eke Wenchis of his retinue,
 That whethir Sir Robert, or els Sir Hew,
 Or John, or Rafe, or whofo that it were,
 That lay by them, they told it in his ere.
 The Wenchis and he were of one assent,
 And he wold fetch a fauld Maundement,
 And summon them to the chapir both two,
 And pill the Man, and let the Wench go,

Than wold he say, frend, I shall for thy sake
 Do strikin her out of our letteres blake, 100
 Thou dare no more, as in this case travaile,
 I am thy frend, there I may The availe.
 For certine he knew of bribery's mo
 Than possible is to tell in yeris two.
 For in this wold n'is there Dog for the bow
 That can an hurt dere from an whole one know
 But than the Sompnour knew a fly lechour,
 Or an Avoutir, or a Paramour;
 And for that was the frute of all his rent,
 Therefore on it he sett all his entent. 110
 And so bifell, that once upon a day,
 This Sompnour, wayting erir on his pray,
 Rode to summon an old wife, a ribibe,
 Faining a Cause for he wold have a bribe.
 And happid that he saw before him ride
 A gay yoman undir a forest side,
 A bow he bare, and arrows bright and shene,
 He had upon him a Courtpie of grene,
 An hat upon his hede with frengis blake,
 Sir qd this Sompnour, haile, and wele o'tetake. 120
 We come, qd he, and every gode felaw,
 Whithir ridest thou undir this grene wode shaw,
 Saide this yoman, wilt'ow feir to day?
 This Sompnour him answerid and said nay.
 Here fast by, qd he, is all mine entent
 To ridin for to raisin up a rent,
 That longith unto my Lord's duty.
 Art thou then a bailif? I am qd he,
 He durst not then for very filth and shame
 Say that he was a Sompnour, for the name. 130
 Depardeux qd this bailif, lefe brother,
 Thou art a bailif, and I am another.
 I am unknowin as in this Countre,
 Of thine acquaintaunce I wolde pray The,
 And eke of brothirhode, if that thou list,
 I have both gold and silvir in my chell,
 If that ye hap to come into our Shire
 All shall be thine right as thou wolt desire.
 Graunt mercy, qd this Sompnour, by my faith.
 Everich in othir's hond this trouth ylayeth, 140
 For to be sworne breth'rin till they dye;
 And with that word they ridin forth their way.
 This Sompnour with that was so full of jangles,
 As full of venome ben the wariangles,
 And ay enquering upon every thing.
 Brothir, qd he, where may be your dwelling,
 Anothir day if I sholde you seche?
 This yoman him answer'd in so'te speche;
 Brothir, qd he, ferre in the North Countre,
 Where as I hope sometime I shall The se, 150
 Er we depart I shall The so well wif,
 That of my house shaltin thou never mis.
 Now, Brothir, qd the Sompnour, I you pray,
 Techin me, while we ridin by the way
 (Sith that ye ben a bailif, as am I)
 Some sotilie, and tell me faitfully
 In mine office how that I may most winn:
 And sparith not for Conscience ne Sinn,
 But, as my brothir, tell me how don ye.
 Now by my trouth, my brothur dere, said he, 160
 As

As I shall tellin The a faithfull tale,
My Wagis ben full streit, and eke full smale.
My Lord is hard to me, and daungerouse,
And mine office is full laboriouse;
And therefore by extortion I leve,
Forsothe I take all that men woll me geve,
Algate by sight, or apert violence,
From yere to yere I winn all my dispenche,
I can no bettir tellin faithfully.

Now certis, qð this Sompnour, so fare I,
I sparin not to takè, God it wor,
But if it be too hevy, or too hot,
That I may get in Counsaile privily,
No mannir conscience of that have I,
N'ere mine extortion I might not live,
Of soche japis wollin I not be thrive;
Stomach ne Conscience ne know I none,
I shrew all these shrift faðirs everichone.
Well be we met by God and swete Seint Jame.
But levè brothir tellith me thy name,
Quoðe this Sompnour, in this menè while.

This Yoman gan a litil for to smile,
Brothir, qð he, wolt thou that I The tell?
I am a fend, my dwelling is in Hell,
And here I ride about my purchasing,
To wetin whare I may get any thing,
My purpose is th' effect of all my rent,
Loke how thou ridist for the same intent,
To winnin gode, thou rekist nevir how.
Right so fare I, for ridin woll I now
Unto the world's ende for a prey.

Ah! qð this Sompnour, benedicite! what say?
I wenid ye were a yoman trewly,
Ye have a mann's shape, as well as I.
Have ye a figure then determinate
In hellè, there ye ben in your estate?

Nay certeinly, qð he, there have we none,
But whan us likith we can take us one,
Or ellis make us seme, that we ben shape,
Sometimis like a man, or like an ape,
Or like an angel can I ride or go,
It is no wondir thing tho it be so.
A lousie juggler can decevin The,
And yet parde can I more craft than he.

Why, qð the Sompnour, ride ye than or gone
In sondry shape, and not alwey in one?

Forthat, qð he, we will us soche form make,
As is most able our preys for to take.
What makith you to have all this labour?
Full many a Cause, levè Sir Sompnour,
Seidè this fend, but alle thing hath time,
The day is short, and it is passid prime,
And yet ne wan I nothing in this day,
I woll entend my winning, if I may,
And not entend our wittis to declare,
For, brothir mine, thy wittes ben all to bare,
'To undirstond, although I wold tell The;
But for thou axist why labourin we?
For sometime ben we Godd's instruments,
And menis to don his commaundements,
What so that him lust upon his cretures,
In divers acts, and in divers figures.
Withouthin him we have no might certeine,
If that him list to stondin there ageyne.
And sometime, at our prayir, han we leve
Only the body, not the Soule, to greve;
Witness of Job, to whom we diddin wo;
And sometime have we might of bothè two,
'This is to faine, of body and soule eke;
And sometime we ben sust'rid for to seke
Upon a man, and don his soule unrest,
Not his body, and all is for the best:
Whan he withstondith our temptation,
It is a cause of his Salvation,

Albeit that it was not our entent,
He sho'd be safe, but that we shold him hent.
And sometime we be servaunts unto man,
As to the Archibishop Seint Dunstan,
And to th' Apostel servaunt eke was I.

Yet tell me, qð this Sompnour, feythfully, 240
Makin ye you new bodies thus alwey
Of Elements? The fend answerid nay.

Sometime we faine, and sometime we arise
With dede bodys, and that in sondrie wise.
And spekin as renably, faire, and well,
As did the Pythonefs to Samuell.

And yet do some men say it was not he,
I do no force of your divinite. 250
But o-thing warne I The, I woll not jape;

Thou wolt algatis wete how we be shape.
Thou shalt hereaftirward my brothir dere,
Come where The nedith not of me to lere,
For thou shalt by thync own experience
Conn in the chair the redc of this sentence,
Bettir than Virgil while he was on live,
Or Dantes also: now let us ride blive,
For I woll holdin cumpany with The,
Tyll it be so that thou forsakè me.

Nay, qð this Sompnour, that shall not betide;
I am a yoman, that is knowen full wide, 260

My trouth I woll hold to The in this caas,
For though thou were the Devil Sathanas,
My trouth I wollin hold unto my brothir,
As I am sworn, and eche of us till othir,
For to be trewè brothir in this caas.

And, brothir, we gon on to our purchase.
Take thou the part, that men wollin The geve,
And I woll mine, and thus shall we both leve:
And if that eithir havin more than other,
Let him be trew, and part it with his brother. 270

I graunt it, qð the Devil, by my fay.
And with that word they ridin forth their way.

And right at th' entring of the toun's ende
(To which the Sompnour shope him for to wend)
They saw a Cart, that chargid was with hay,
The which a Cartir drove forth on his way.

Depe was the way, for which the Cart still stode.
This Cartir smote, and cryde as he were wode,
Heit Scot, heit Brok, what spare ye for the nones?
The fend you fetch, qð he, body and bones, 280
As ferforth as ye were evir yfoled,

So mochil wo as I have for you tholed:

The Devil have it all, horse, cart, and hay.

Qð this Sompnour, here shall we have a prey,

And nere the fend he drew, as nought ne were,
Full privily, and rownid in his ere,
Herkin, my brothir, herkin by thy feyth,
Herist thou not how that the Cartir seyth?
Hent it anon, for he hath geve it The,
Both hay and cart, and eke his Caples thre. 290

Nay, qð the Devil, God wot ne'r a dele,
It is not his entent trustith me wele,

Ask him thy self, if thou throwist not me,
Or ellis stint a while, and thou shalt se.

This Cartir thakid his horse on the croup,
And they begonnin to draw and to stoupe:
Heit now, qð he, that Jesus Crist you blefs,
And all his hondy werk both more and less,
That was weil ytwight, my own liard boy,
And I pray God save The and Seint Eloy. 300

Now is my Cart out of the Slough parde.
Lo! brothir, qð the fend, what told I The!

Here may ye fein, myn own derè brother,
The Carle spake o thing, but he thought another.

Let us go forth aboutin our viage,
Here winn I nothing upon cariage.

Whan that they comin somewhat out of tounne,
This Sompnour to his brothir gan to rounne,

Brothir,

Brothir, qð he, here wonnith a rebek;
That had almost as lese to lese her nek,
As for to gere a penny of her gode:
I woll have twelve pence though that she were wode,
Or I woll Sompnè her to our office;
And yet, God wot, of her I know no vice,
But for thou canst not, as in this Countre,
Winnin thy cost, ensample take of me.

This Sompnour clappith at the wedow's gate,
Come out, he seide, thou old veritrate,
I trow thou hast some Frere or preeft with The.

Who clappith seid this wife, benedicite!
God save you, Sir, what is your swete will,
I have, qð he, of Summons here a bill,
Upon paine of cursing loke that thou be
To morow before our Archdekin's knee,
To answir to the court of certeine thinges.

Now the Lord Jesu, qð she, King of Kinges
So wisely helpin me, as I ne may,
I have ben sike, and that many a day,
I may not go so ferr, qð she, ne ride,
But I be dede, so prikith it my side.
May I not ask a libell, Sir Sompnour,
And answe're give there, by my Procutour,
To soche thing as men wold apposin me?

Yes, qð this Sompnour, pay anon--- let se
Twelve pence to me, and I woll The acquite,
I shall no profite have thereof but lite,
My Maistr hath the profit and not I.
Come off, and let me ridin hastily.

Geve me twelve pence, I may no lengir tary.
Twelve pence, qð she, o Lady Seint Mary
So wisely help me out of care and sinn,
This wide world though that I shold it winn,
Ne have I nor twelve pence within my hold.
Ye knowin well that I am pore and old,
Kith your almis on me a pore old wretch.

Nay than, qð he, the foulè fend me fetch,
If I Th' excuse, though thou sholdist be spilt.

Alas! qð she, God wot I have no gilt.
Pay me, qð he, or by the swete Seint Anne
I woll streight bere away the newè panne,
For dett which that thou owist me of old,
Whan that thou madest thy husbond a Cokold,
I paid at home for thy Correction.

Thou list, qð she, by my Salvacion.

310 I nevir was er now widow ne wife
Sompnid unto your Court in all my life,
Ne nevir n'as I but of body trewe,
Unto the Devil rough and blake of hew
Geve I thy body, and my pan also.

And whan the Devil herdin her curse so 360

Upon her knees, he said in this manere,
Now Mabily myn ownè Moðir dere,
Is this your will in earnest that ye say?

The Devil, qð she, set him er he dye,
And pann and all, but he woll him repent.

320 Nay, nay, old Stote, that is not mine entent,
Qð this Sompnour, for to repentin me,
For any thing, that I have had of The,
I wold I had thy smok and every cloth.

Now, brothir, qð the Devil, be not wroth, 370

Thy body, and this pann is mine by right,
Thou shalt with me to Hellè yet to night,
Where thou shalt knowin of our privy,
More than a Maistr of Divinity.

And with that word the foulè fend him hent,
330 Body and Soule he with the Devil went,
Where that Sompnours havin their heritage,

And God, that madin attir his image
Mankind, favin and gyde us all and some,
And leve these Sompnours gode men to become. 380

Lordings, I couth have told you, qð this liere,
Had I had leysure of this Sompnour here,
Astir the text of Crist, of Poul and John,
And of othir Doctours many an one,
Soche peinis, as your hertis might agrise,

340 Al be it so no tonge may it devise,
Though that I might a thousand wintir tell
The peynis of that cursid house of Hell.

But for to kepe us fro that cursid place
Wakith, and prayith Jesu of his grace 390
To kepe us fro the temptour Sathanas.

Herk'nith this word, beware as in this caas,
The Lioun sittith in await alway
To flea the innocent, if that he may.
Disposith ay your hertis to withstond

350 The fend, that The wold makin thrall and bond.
He may not temptin you ovr your might,
For Crist woll be your champion and knight,
And prayith that this Sompnour him repent
Of his misdede, er that the fend him hent. 400

Thus endeth the FRERE's TALE.

Here beginneth the SOMPNOUR'S PROLOGUE.

His Sompnour in his stirops high he stode,
T Upon this Frere he star'd, his hert was wode,
 That like an aspin lese he quoke for ire.
 Lordings, qð he, but o thing I desire

And you beseeche, that of your curtesy,
 Sithins ye han herd this false frere ylye,
 As sust' rith me I may my tale ytell.

This Frere ybostith, that he knowith Hell,
 And God it wot that it is litil wonder,
 Freris and Fendis ben but little' asonder.
 For parde ye han ostè time here tell
 How that a Frere ravishid was to hell
 In spirit onis by a Visioun,
 And as an Angell led him up and doune
 To shewin him the peynis that were there,
 In all the place yet saw he not a Frere.
 Of othir folk he saw ynow in wo.
 Unto the Angell spake the Frere tho.

Now Sir, qð he, han freris soch a grace
 That none of them shall come unto this place? 420

Yes, qð this Angell, many millioun.
 And unto Sathanas ladd he him doune.

And now hath Sathanas, said he, a taile
 Brodir than of a Carike is the saile.

Hold up thy taile, thou Sathanas, qð he;
 Shew forth thyn erse, and let the Frere se
 Where is the nest of Freris in this place.

And er that half a forlong wey of space,
 Right so as bees swarmin out of an hive,
 Out of the Devil's erse they gan to drive,

410 Twenty thousand Freris all on a rout,
 And throughout Hell they swarmid all about,
 And come agen as fast as they might gon,
 And into his erse they crepte everichone.

He clapt his taile agen, and lay full still.
 This fryir whan he lokid had his fill
 Upon the turment of this sory place,
 His spirit God restorid of his grace
 To his body agen, and he awoke,
 But nathèless yet for fere still he quoke,
 So was the Devil's erse ay in his mind!

440 That is his herytage of very kind.
 God save you all, save this accursid Frere,
 My Prologue woll I end in this manere.

The SOMPNOUR's TALE.

A Begging Fryer coming to a Farmer's house, who lay sick, obtaineth of the sick Man a certain Legacy, which must be equally divided among his Convent. A requital to the Fryer, shewing their coufenage, loytering, impudent begging, and hypocritical praying.

Ordinges, there is in Yorkshire, as I ghesse,
A marishe Contre callid Holderneshe,
In which there went a Limitour about,
To preche, and eke to beg it is no dout.
And so bifell that on a day this Frere
Had prechid in a Chirche in his manere, 450
And specially abovin every thing
Excitid the pepill in his preching
To Trentalis, and to geve for Godd's sake
Wherewith men mightin holie housis make,
There as divine servise is honourid,
Not there as it is wastid and devourid:
Ne there it nedith not for to be geve,
As to Possessioners, that may els leve,
Thonkid be God, in wele and haboundaunce.
Trenralls, qð he, deliverith fro Penaunce 460
Ther frendis soulis, as well olde as yonge,
If so that they ben hastily ysonge,
Not for to holde a Preeft jolic and gay,
(He singith not but o messe in a day)
Delive'rith out, qð he, anon the Soules,
Full hard it is with Fleshe-hoke, or with Oules
To ben yclawid, or to brenne or bake,
Now spede you hastily, for Crist's sake.
And whan this Frere had said al his entent,
With Qui cum Patre forth away he went. 470
Whan folk in Chirche had yeve him what 'hem left,
He went his way, no lengir wolde he rest,
With scrip and tippid staffe, ytuckid hie:
In every house he gan to pore and prie,
And beggid mele, and chese, or ellis corne.
His felaw had a staffe tippid with horne,
A pair of Tables, alle of ivory,
A Poyntell polishid full ferously,
And wrote alwey the namis as he fode
Of alle the folk, that yave 'hem any gode 480
Askauncis, as if he wolde for 'hem prey.
Yeve us a Bushell Where, or Malt, or Rey,
A Godd's Kichell, or a trip of Chese,
Or ellis what ye list, I may not chese,
A Godd's half-peny, or a Masse-peny,
Or yeve us of your Brawn, if ye have any,
A Dagon of your blanket, leve Dame,
Our Sustir dere, lo, here I write your name,
Bacon, or bese, or such thing as ye find.
A sturdie Harlot went them ay behind, 490
That was ther Host's man, and bare a sacke,
And that men yave 'hem laid it on his backe.
And whan he was out at the dore anon
He playned away the namis everichone,
That he before had writtin in his Tables,
He servid 'hem with nysses and with Fables.
Nay, there thou lyst, Sompner, qð the Frere.
Pece, qð our Hoste, for Crist's Moðir dere,
Tell forth thy tale, and spare it not at all.
So thrive I Host, qð he, and so I shall. 500
So long he went fro house to house, till he Came to a house there he was wont to be
Refreshid more than in an hundrid placis,
Sore sik lay the gode Man, whose the place is,
Bedrid upon a couche low he lay;
Deus hic, qð he; O Thomas frend, gode Day,

Seidè this Frere, all curtisly and soft;
Thomas, qð he, God yeld it you, full oft
Have I upon this Bench farin full wele,
Here have I etin many' a mery mele: 510
And fro the Bench he drove away the Carte,
And layed adoun hispotent, and his hatte,
And eke his scrip, and set him soft adoun.
His felaw was go walkid in the Toun
Forth with his knave, into that Hostelrie
Whereas he shope him that ilke night to lie.
O my dere Maistir, qð this sike Man,
How have ye farin sithin March began?
I saw you not this fortnight day and more.
God wote, qð he, laboured have I full fore, 520
And specially for thy Salvacion
Have I saied many precious Orison,
And for our other frendis, God 'hem blefs!
I have this day ben at your Chirche at Messe,
And saied a Sermon after my simple witte,
Not alle after the Text of Holie writte,
For it is harde to you, as I suppose,
And therefore I woll reche you alle the Glose.
Glosing is a glorious thing certaine,
For Lettir slayith, as we Clerkis saine. 530
There have I them taught to ben charitable,
And spend ther gode there it is resonable.
And there I saw our Dame, ah where is she?
Yonder in the yard I trow that she be
Seidè this man, and she woll come anon.
Eye, Maistir, ye be welcome, by St. John,
Seidè this wise, how fare ye, hartily?
This Frere arisith up full curtisly,
And her embracith in his armis narrow,
And kissith her swetely, and chirkeith as a sparrow 540
With his lips; Dame, qð he, I fare right wele,
As he that is your servaunt every dele,
Thankid be God that you have soule and life,
Yet sawe I not this day so faire a Wife
In alle the whole Chirche, so God me save.
Yea, God amend alle faultis, Sir, qð she,
Algatis welcome be ye, by my fay.
Graunt mercy Dame, that have I found alway,
But of your grete godenefs, and by your leve,
I wold you prayin that ye n'old you greve, 550
I woll with Thomas speke a litil throwe,
These Curates ben full negligent and slowe
To gropin tenderly a Mann's Conscience,
In shritt and preching is my diligence,
And to studie on Peter's words and Poul's,
I walke to ffishin Christen-mennis soules,
To yeldin Jesu Crist his propre rent,
To sprede his wordis is alle mine entent.
Now by your seith, dere Maistir mine, qð she,
Chidith him wele now for Sainct Charite, 560
For he is aye angrie as a Pisse-Mire,
Though that he have all that he can desire,
Though I him wrie on night, and make him warme,
And over him lay my leg or mine arme,
He gronith like our bore that lyeth in fflye,
Othir disport of him right none have I;
I may not plesse him in no mannir caas.
O Thomas, je vous dic, Thomas, Thomas,

This

This makith the fend, thys must be amended,
Ire is a thing that God highly defended,
And thereof woll I speke a word or two.

Now Maistir, qð the Wife, ere that I go,
What woll ye dine? I woll go thereabout.

Now Dame, qð he, je vous die sans dout,
Have I not of a Capon but the Liver,
And of your white bred nought but a shiver,
And astir that a rollid pigg'is hedde,
(But I n'old for me that no beste were dedde)
Than hadde I ynow for my suffisaunce,
I am a man of litil sustenaunce,
My spirit hath his sostring in the Bible,
My bodie is so redie and penible
To wakin, that my stomach is distroied,
I praye you, Dame, that ye be nought annoied,
Though I so frendly you my Counsaile shew,
By God, I n'old have told it but to few.

Now Sir, qð she, but one word er I go,
My child is dedde within these wekis two,
Sone astir that ye went out of this toun.
His Dethe I saw by Revelatioun
Sayid this Frere, at home in our Dortour,
I dare well saye, that within half an hour
Astir his Dethe I saw him bore to blisse
In my Visioun, so God my soule wille;
So did our Sexten, and our Fermerere,
That have ben true Freris these fifty yere,
Thei may now, God be thankid of his lone,
Makin ther Jubile, and walke alone.
And up I rose, and alle our Covent eke,
With many a tere trilling on our cheke,
Withouthin noyse, or clattering of Belles,
Te Deum was our song, and nothing elles,
Save that to Crist I bad an Orisoun,
Thanking him of my Revelatioun;
For Sir and Dame, trustith ye me right well,
Our Orisouns ben more effectuell,
And more we se of Crist's secret thinges
Than borell folk, albeit they were Kinges.
We live in poverty and Abstinence,
And borell folk in richesse and dispence
In mete and drink, and in ther foul delite,
We have this world's lust al in despite.
Lazar and Dives livid diversly,
And diverse guerdons haddin they thereby.
Whoso woll praye, he must fast and be clene,
And fatte his soule, and make his body lene.
We fare as saith the Apostel, clothe and fode
Suffiith us, though thei be not full gode.
The cleneness of the fasting of us Freres
Makith that Crist acceptith of our Prayers.
Lo! Moises fourtie days and fourtie night
Fastid, ere that the High God of his might
Spake with him in the Mountain of Sinai,
With emptie womb, fasting many a day
Recevid he the Lawe, that was written,
With Godd's finger; and Hely, well ye witten,
In Mount Oreb er he had any speche
With the hie Godde, that is our soul's leche,
He fastid long, and was in contemplaunce.
Aaron, that had the Temple in governaunce,
And eke the othir Prestis everychone,
Into the Temple whan thei shuldin gon,
To pray for the pepill, and do servise,
They n'oldè drinkin in no mannir wise
No kind of drink, that dronkin might hem make,
But there in abstinence did praye and wake,
Lest that they deidin; take hede what I say,
Sobre ben thei that for the pepil pray,
Ware what I say; ynow for it suffiseth,
Our Lord Jesu, as holie Writ deviseth
Yave us ensample of fasting and prayers;
Therefore we Mendicantes, we fely Freres

Ben weddid to Povert and Continence,
To Charite, Humblese, and Abstinence,
To Persecution for Rightwisenesse,
To Weping, Misericorde, and Clenenesse.
And therefore may ye sein that our prayers
(I speke of us, we Mendicantes, we Freres)

Ben to the high God more acceptable
Than yours with your festis at your table. 650

Fro Paradise first, if I shall not lie
Was Man out chasid for his gluttonie,
And chaste was man in Paradise certaine.
But herkin now, Thomas, what I shall saine;
I have no text of it, as I suppose,
But I find it in mannir of a glose:

That specially our swete Lorde Jesus
Spake this by Freris, whan he saidin thus,
Blessid be thei, that pore in spirit ben!
And so forth all the Gospel may ye sene 660

Whethre' it be liker our professioun,
Or theirs, that swimmin in possessioun.
Fy on ther pomp! and on ther gluttony!
And eke on ther Jendnesse! I them desye.

Methinkith they ben like Jovinian,
Fat as a whale, and walking as a swan,
Al vinolent as botill in the spence:
Ther Prayir is of littil reverence,

Whan they for soulis say the Psalm of David,
Lo! bouffe, they saine, Cor meum eructavit. 670

Who foloweth Crist's Gospel and his lore
But we, that humble be, and chaste, and pore,
Werkers of Godd's worde, and not auditours?
Therefore right as an Hauke upon his sours
Upspringith in the aire, right so the prayers
Of charitable, chaste, and besy Freres
Makin their sours to Godd's eris two.

Thomas, Thomas, so mote I ride or go,
And by that Lord that clepid is Sainct Yve,
Ne thou our broðir were, thou shuldst not thrive. 680
For in our Chapter pray we day and night
To Crist, to sendin The both helth and might
Thy body for to weldin hastily.

Got wote, qð he, nothing thereof fele I,
As helpe me Crist, as in a fewè yeres
Have I spendid on diverse mannir Freres
Full many' a pound, yet fare I ner the bet,
Certaine my gode have I almost beset.
Farewell my gold, for it is all ago.

The Frere answerde, O Thomas, dost thou so? 690
What nedith The diverse Freris to seche?
What nedith him, that hath a parfit leche
To sechin othir lechis in the toun?

Your inconstaunce is your confusioun.
Hold ye me then, and eke all our Covent
To prayin for you insufficient?

Thomas, that jape ne is not worth a mite,
Your maladie is for we have too lite;
A, yeve that Covent four and twenty grotes,
And yeve that Covent half a quarter otes, 700
And yeve that Frere a peny', and let him go:
Nay, nay, Thomas, it may be nothing so.
What is a farthing worth partid in twelve?

Lo! eche thing that is onid in himselve
Is more strong, than when it is so yskattered;
Thomas, of me thou shalt not be yflattered:
Thou woldist have our labour all for nought.
The high God, that alle this world hath ywrought,
Saith that the workman is worthy his hire.

Thomas, of your tresour I naught desire 710
As for my self, but that all our Covent
To pray for you is ay so diligent,
And for to buildin up Crist's owne Chirch;
Thomas, if ye woll lernin for to wirch
Of building up of Chirchis, maie ye find,
If it be gode, in Thomas life of Inde.

Ye liggin here full of angir and ire,
 With which the Devill fet your hert on fire,
 And chidin here this holie Innocent,
 Your wife, that is so meke and pacient;
 And therefore trow me, Thomas, if you lest,
 Ne chide not with thy wife, as for the best;
 And bere this word away now by thy faith
 Touching soche thing, lo! what the Wiseman saith,
 Within thy house ne be thou no Lion,
 To thy subjects do thou no oppreßion,
 Ne makin not thy aquentaunce to fle.
 And, Thomas; yet cõsonis warne I The,
 Beware of hir that in thy bosome slepeth,
 Ware of the Serpent, that so flyly crepeth
 Undir the grasse, and stingith subtilly;
 Beware, my sonne, and herkin paciently,
 That twentie thousand men have lost their lives
 For striving with ther Lemmans and ther Wives.
 Now sith ye have so holy a meke Wife,
 What nedith you, Thomas, to makin strife?
 There n'is, I wis, no serpent so cruell
 Whan men tredde on his taile, ne half so fell,
 As woman is, whan she hath caught an ire,
 Verry vengeance is then all her desire.
 Ire is a sinn, one of the gretest of seven,
 Abominable to the King of Heven,
 And to himself it is destructioun.
 This every leud Vicar and Parsoune
 Can say, how ire engendrith homicide;
 Ire is, in sothe the execurour of pride.
 Of ire right cõuth I say soche mochil sorow,
 That my tale shulde lastin till the morow,
 And therefore praye I God, both day and night,
 To' an irous man that he fend litil might!
 It is grete harme, and certis grete pite,
 To fet an irous man in high degre.
 Whilome there was an irous Potestate,
 As saith Senec, that during his estate
 Upon a day out riddin Knightis two;
 (And as Fortune wouldin it shulde be so)
 That one of 'hem came home, the othir nought;
 Anon the Knight before the judge is brought,
 That seide thus, thou hast thy felaw slaine,
 For which I deme The to the dethe certaine;
 And to anothir Knight commaundid he,
 Go, lede him to the dethe, I chargè The.
 And happid, as thei wentin by the weye
 Toward the place there where he shuldin deye;
 The Knight came, which Men wenid had be dede,
 Then thoughtin they it was the beste rede
 To ledin 'hem bothe to the judge againe.
 Thei seidin, Lord, lo! the Knight hath not slaine
 His felawe; here he stant, whole and alive.
 Ye shulle be dede, qð he, so mote I thrive,
 This is to sayin both one, two, and thre.
 And to the first Knight right thus spakin he,
 I dampnid The, thou must algate be dedde,
 And thou also must nedis lese thine hedde,
 For thou the cause art why thy felaw dyeth;
 And to the thirde Knight right thus he seyth,
 Thou hast not don what I commaundid The;
 And thus he did them slayin allè thre.
 Irous Cambyfes was eke dronkelewe,
 And ay delitid him to ben a shrewe.
 And so bifell, a Lord of his meine,
 That lovid well vertuous moralite,
 Saied on a day betwixt 'hem two right thus;
 A Lord is lolt, if he be vicious,
 And dronkenesse eke is a foule record
 Of any man, and namely of a Lord;
 There is full many' an eye, and many' an ere Awaiting on a Lord, and he n'ot where;
 For Godd'is love drinkith more temperately;
 Wine makith a man to lese wretchidly

His mind, and eke his limmis everychone.
 The reverse shalt thou se, qð he, anon,
 And preve it by thine owne experience,
 That wine ne doth to folk no soche offence;
 There n'is no wine berevith me my might
 Of honde, ne fore, ne of my eyin sight:
 And for despite he dronke mochill the more
 An hundrid timis than he did before.
 And right anon this cursid irous wretch,
 This Knight'is sonne let before him fetch, 800
 Commaunding him he shulde before him stond,
 And sodainly he toke his bowe in honde,
 And up the string he pullid to his ere,
 And with an arrow slough the child right there.
 Now whithre' hare I a sikir hand or none,
 Qð he, is alle my might and mind agone?
 Hath wine berevin me myn eyin sight?
 What shulde I tell the answer of the Knight?
 His sonne was slaine, there is no more to say.
 Beware therefore with Lordis how ye play, 810
 Sing Placebo, and I shall, if I can;
 But if it be unto a porè man,
 To a porè man men shulde his vicis telle,
 Not to a Lord, though he shulde go to Helle.
 Lo! Irous Cyrus, that ilke Persian,
 How he destroyid the River Gisan!
 For that an horse of his was dreint therein,
 Whan that he went Babilon for to winne;
 He madin that the river was so smale,
 That men might ride, or wade it over alle. 820
 Lo! what sayed he, that so welle techin can?
 Ne be no felawe to none irous man,
 Ne with no wode man walkin by the way,
 Lest thou repent; I wolde no ferthir say.
 Now, Thomas, lese broðir, leve thine ire,
 Thou shalt me find as just, as is a Squire;
 Hold not the Devil's knise ay in thine hert,
 Thine angir doth The alle too fore smerte;
 But shew to me alle thy Confessioun,
 Nay, qð the like man, by Sainct Simeon; 830
 I have be shrive this day of my Curate,
 I have him told alle wholly myn estate,
 Nedith no more to speke of it, qð he,
 But if me leste of my humility.
 Yeve me than of thy gold to make our Cloyster,
 Qð he, for many' a muscle, and many' an oyler,
 Whan othir men have ben full well at ese,
 Have ben our sode, our Cloyster for to reyse:
 And yet, God wot, unnethe the fundament
 Parfourmid is, ne of our pavement 840
 There is not yet a tile within our wones,
 By God, we owin sourtie pound for stones.
 Now helpe, Thomas, for him that harrowed Helle,
 For ellis mote we alle our bokis selie;
 And if men lak our Predicatioun,
 Than goth this world all to destructioun.
 For who so woll us from the world bereve,
 So God me savin, Thomas, by your leve,
 He wold berevé out of this world the Sonne!
 For who can teche, and werchin as we conne? 850
 And that is not of litil time, qð he,
 But sithin Hely was, or Helise,
 Han Freris ben, that find I of recorde
 In Charite, ythonkid be our Lord.
 Now, Thomas, help us, for Sainct Charite.
 And down anon he sitte him on his kne.
 This sike man woxin nie wode for ire,
 He woldin that the Frere had ben a fire
 With alle his false Dissimulatioun.
 Soche thinges as ben in my possessioun, 860
 Qð he, that may I give ye, and none other,
 Ye saine me thus, how that I am your brother.
 Yes certis, qð this Frere, trustith me wele,
 I toke our Dame our letter, and our sele.
 B b
 Now,

Now, qð he, welle, and somewhat shalle I geve
Unto your holic Covent, while I leve,
And in thyn honde thou shalt it have anon,
On this condicioun, and othir none,
That thou depart it so, my levè brother,
That every Fryer have as moche as othir:
This shalt thou swere on thy professioun,
Withoutin fraude, or cavillatioun.

I swere it, qð the Fryer by my faith,
And therewithall his hond in his he layth,
Lo! here my faith, in me shalle be no lack.
Than put thy honde adoun right by my back,
Seide this man, and gropin well behind,
Benethe my buttoke, there shalt thou find
A thing, that I have hid in privite;
Ah! thought this Frere, that shalle ygo with me. 880
Adoun he shofth his honde unto the clift,
In hope to findin there some godè gift.
And whan this fikè man feltin this Frere
About his towell groping here and there,
Amid his hand he let the Frere a farte;
There n'is no Capell drawing in a Carte,
That might have let a farte of soche a sounne.

The Frere upstert, as doth a wode lioun;
Ah! false Churle, qð the Frere, for Godd'is bones,
This hast thou in despite doe for the nones. 890
Thou shalt abie this farte, if that I maie.

His meine, which that herd of this affray,
Came leping in, and chafid out the Frere,
And forth he gooth with a full angrie chere,
And sette his felawe there as laye his store,
He lokid as he were a wildè Bore,
He grintid with his tethe, so was he wrothe!
A sturdie pace doune to the Courte he goth,
Whereas there woned a man of grete honour,
To whome that he was alwey Confessour.
This worthie man was Lord of that village;
This Frere ycame, as he were in a rage,
Whereas this Lorde satte eting at his borde,
Unnerthis might this Frere spekin o worde,
Till at the last he seide, God you se.

This Lord gan loke, and said benedicite!
What now, Frere John? What manir world is this?
I se right welle, that something is amifs.
Ye loke as though the wodde were full of thevis,
Sittidoun anon, and telle me what your greve is, 910
And it shalle be amendid, if I maie.

I have, qð he, had a despise to day,
God yelde it you, adoun in your village,
That in this worlde there n'is so pore a page,
That he n'old have abominacioun
Of that I have recevid in your tounne.
And yet ne grevith me nothing so fore,
As that the oldè Churle with lokkis hore
Blasphemid hath our holic Covent eke.

Now, Maistir, qð the Lord, I you beseke: 920
No Maistir, Sir, qð he, but servitour,
Though I have had in scholis that honour,
God likith not that men us Rabbi calle,
Nothir in market, ne in your large halle.

No force, qð he, but telle me alle your grese.
Sir, qð this Frere, an odious mischefe
This day betidde to myn ordre and me,
And so per consequence to eche degre
Of holic Chirche, God amendin it sone.

Sir, qð the Lorde, we wot what is to done, 930
Distemper you not, ye ben my Confessour,
Ye be the salte of the erthe, and the favour,
For Godd'is love your patience now holde,
Tell me your grese; and he anon him told,
As ye han herde before, ye wote well what.

The Ladie of the Housè ay stille ysatte,
Till she had herdin what the Frere had sayed.
Eye, Godd'is Mothir qð she, blifsfull Maide!

Is there nought ellis? telle me faithfully.

Madame, qð he, how thinkith ye thereby? 940
How me thinkith? qð she, so God me spede,
I say a Churle hath done a Churl'is dede.

What shulde I say, God let him nevir the,
His sike hedde is alle fulle of vanite,
I holde him in a mannir of frensie.

Madame, qð he, by God, I shalle not lie,
But I in othir wise may ben awreke,
I shalle defame him ovre' alle where I speke,
That false blasphemour, which that chargid me
To part it, that wolde not departid be, 950
To every man ylike much, with mischaunce!

The Lorde satte stille, as he were in a traunce,
And in his herte he rollid up and doune
How that his Chorle had ymaginacioun
To shewin soche a probleme to the Frere,
Nevir erst or now herde I soche matere,
I trowe the Devill put it in his mind,
In alle Arismetrike there shalle no man finde
Byforne this day of soche a questioune,
Who shulde make a demonstraciounne 960
That every man shulde have ylike his parte
As of the sounne or favour of a Farte?
O nice, proudè Churle, I shrewe thy face.

Lo! Sir, qð the Lorde, with hardè grace,
Who evir herde of soche a thing er now?
To every man ylike? tellin me how?
It is impossible, it may not be.

Eye nice Churle! God let him nevir the.
The rombling of a farte, and every sounne,
N'is but of aire reverberaciounne, 970

And ay it wastith lyte and lyte away,
There is no man can demin by my fay,
If that it were departid equally.

What? lo my Churle! lo, yet how shrewdely
Unto my Confessour to day he spake!
I holde him certaine a Demoniak.

Now etc your mete, and let the Chorle go playe,
Let him go hange himself a Divell way.

Now stode the Lord'is Squyr at the borde,
That carft his mete, and herdè worde by worde 980
Of alle this thing, of whiche I have you sayed.

My Lord, qð he, be ye not ill apayed,
For I couth tellin for a gowne of cloth
To ye, Sir Frere, so that ye be not wroth,
How that this farte shulde evin delid be Among your Covent, if it likith The.

Telle, qð the Lorde, and thou shalt have anon
A gown of cloth, by God, and by Saint John.

My Lord, qð he, when the weðir is faire 990
Withoutin winde, or perturbing of ayre,
Let bring a cartwhele here into this halle,
But loke to that it have its spokis alle.

Twelve spokis hath a cartwhele comynly.
And bring me then twelve Freris, wot ye why?
For thirtene is a Covent, as I ghesse.

Your Confessour here for his worthinesse
Shalle parfournme the nombir of his Covent.
Than shalle they knele adoun by onc assent,
And to every spok's-end in this manere
Full sadly layin his nose shalle a Frere. 1000

Your nobill Confessour there, God him save,
Shalle holde his nose upright into the nave;
Then shalle this Churle, with belie stifte and tought,

As any Tabour, hither ben ybrought,
And sette him on the whele right of this Carte,
Upon the Nave, and make him let a Farte,

And ye shulle se, up perill of my life,
And by prefe which that is demonstratife,
That equally the sounne of it wille wend,
And eke the stink, unto the spokis end. 1010

Save that this worthie man, your Confessour,
(Becaufe he is a man of grete honour)

Shalle

Shalle have the first frutis, as resoun is,
The noble usage of Freris is this,
The worthiest man of them shalle first be served,
And certainly he hath it well deserved.
He hath to day taught us so mochill gode
With preching in the Pulpit there he stode,
That I may vouch-safe, I sayin for me,
He haddè the first smelle of fartis thre,
And so woll all his brethrin hardily,

He berith him so faire and holilie.
The Lorde, the Ladie, eche man save the Frere,
Seidè that Jenkin spake in this matere
As well as Euclid cou'de, or Ptolomie;
Touching the Chorle thei saied, that subtiltie
And high wit made him spakin as he spake,
He n'is no fole, ne no Demoniakc;
1020 And Jenkin hath ywonne a newè Gounc;
My Tale is done, we ben almost at tounce. 1030

Here endith the SOMPNOUR's TALE.

Here

Here followeth the Clerk of Oxenford's PROLOGUE.

SIR Clerk of Oxenford, our Hostè saide,
Yeride as coye and stille, as doth a Maide
That were new spousid sitting at the borde;
This day ne herde I of your mouthe a
worde:

I trowe you studie about some sophime,
But Salomon saide that all thing hath time.
For Godd'is sake as beth of better chere,
It is no time now for to studie here.
Telle us some mery talè by your faye,
For what man that is entrid into playe
He nedis mote unto that playe assent.
But prechith not as Freris don in Lent,
To makin us for our olde sinnes to wepe,
Ne that thy talè make us not to slepe.
Telle us some mery thing of adventures,
Your termis, colouris, and your figures
Kepe them in store tillè so be ye endite
High Stile, as whan men unto Kingis write,
Spekith so plaine at this time, I you praye,
That we may understonðin what you faye.

This worthie Clerke benignly him answerde,
Hostè, q'ð he, I am under your yerde,
Ye have of us as now the governaunce,
And therefore wolke I do you obeysaunce,
As ferre as resoun askith, hardily.
I wolke you telle a talè, whiche that I
Lernid at Padow of a worthie Clerke,

As preved is by his wordes, and by his werke.
He is now dede, and nailid in his cheste,
I praye to God to sende his soule gode rest!
Frauncis Petrarke, the Laureate Poete,
Hightin this Clerke, whose Rhetorike so swete
Enluminid itaile of Poetrie,
As Livian did of Philosophie,
Or Law, or othir arte particulere;
But Dethe, that wolke not suffir us dwelle here
But as it were the twinkling of an eye,
Them both hath slaine, and allè we shall deye.

But for to tellin of this worthie man,
That taught me this tale, as I first began;
I say that he first with hie stile enditeth
(Ere he the bodie of his talè writeth)
A Proheme, in the whiche descrivith he Piemont, and of Saluce the Countre,
And spekith of Apennine hillis hie,
That ben the boundis of West Lombardie,
And of Mount Vesulus in specialle,
Whereas the Po out of a wellè smalle
Ytakith his first springing and his sours,
That Estewarde evre' encrefith in his cours
To Emelleward, to Ferare, and Venise,
The whiche a longe time werin to devise,
And truily, as to my judgèment,
Methinkith it a thing impertinent,
Save that him leste so convey his matere.
But this is his tale, as ye shullin here.

1060

1040

1070

1050

1080

The Clerke of OXENFORD's TALE.

Walter the Marquis of Saluce proveth the Pacience of his Wife Grisild by thre most sharp Trialls.

T Here is upon the West side of Itaile,
Doun at the rote of Vefulus the cold,
A lustie plaine, habundaunt of Vitaile,
Where many a toun and toure thou
may'st behold, 1090

That foundid were in time of Faðris olde,
And many an othir delectable sight,
And Saluces this noble countre hight.

A Marquis whilome Lorde was of that londe,
As were his worthie Elders him before;
And obeyfaunt ay redie to his honde
Were alle his Liegis, bothe lesse and more,
Thus in delite he lived, and hath don yore,
Beloved and dradd, through favour of Fortune,
Both of his Lordis, and of his Commune. 1100

Therewith he was (to speke of his Lynage)
The gentillist yborne of Lumbardie,
A faire persone, and stronge, and yonge of age,
And full of honour and of curtilie,
Discrete ynough his contre for to gye,
Save in some thingis that he was to blame;
And Walter was this yongè Lord's name.

I blame him thus, that he confidrid nought
In time coming what mightin him betide,
But on his present lust was alle his thought, 1110
And for to hauke and hunt on every side
Well nigh all othir curis let he slide,
And eke he n'old (and that was worst of alle)
Wedde no wife, for ought that might befall.

Only that pointe his peple bare so fore
That flockmele on a day they to him went,
And one of 'hem, that wisist was of lore,
(Or ellis that the Lorde wolde best assent
That he sholde telle him what his peple ment, 1120
Or ellis cou'de he shew wele soche matere)
He to the Marquis sayed as ye shulle here.

O noble Marquis, your humanite
Assurith us, and gevith hardinesse
As oft as time is of necessite
That we may to you tell our hevinesse,
Acceptith now, Lorde, of your gentillesse;
That we with pitous hertes unto you plaine,
And let your eris not my voice disdaine.

Alle have I not to done in this matere
More than anothir man hath in this place, 1130
Yet forasmuch as ye, my Lorde so dere,
Have alwey shewid me favour and grace;
I dare the bettir axe of you a space
Of audience, to shewin our request,
And ye, my Lorde, to done right as ye leste.

For certis, Lorde, so wele us likith you,
And all your werke, and aye have done; that we Ne cou'de not our own self devisin how
We might more livin in felicite,
Save one thing, Lorde, if that it your wille be, 1140
That for to be a weddid man you leste;

Then were your peple' in soveraine hert'is rest.

Bowith your neck undir the blisfull yoke
Of Sovèraintie and not of servise,
Which that men clepin spousaile or wedloke,
And thinkith, Lorde, among your thoughtis wile,
How that our dayes passin in fondrie wile,
For though we slepe, or wake, or runne, or ride,
Aye fleith time, it woll no man abide.

And tho your grene youthe flower growith as yet, 1150
In crepith age alwey as stille as stone,
And dethe menasith every age, and smite,
In eche estate, for there escapith none,
And also certaine as we know echone
That we shulle dye, and uncertaine we alle
Ben of that day that dethe shall on us falle:

Acceptith than of us the true entent,
That nevir yet refusidin your heste,
And we wolle, Lorde, if that ye wolle assent,
Chese you a wife in short time, at the leste 1160
Borne of the gentillist, and of the mest
Of all Italie, so that it ought seme
Honour to God and you, as we can deme.

Delivir us out of this besy drede,
And take a wife, for the high Godd's sake,
For if it so befall (as God forbede),
That through your dethe your lynage sholde yslake,
And that a straunge successour sholdin take
Your heritage, O wo were us on live!
Wherefore we pray you hastily to wive. 1170

Ther mekè prayir, and ther pitous chere
Madè the Marquis herte to have pite,
Wollin ye, qð he, myne owne pepill dere,
To that I nevir erst thought constraine me?
I me rejoicid of my liberte,
That seldin time is found in mariage;
There I was ffe I mote ben in servage.

But nathèless I se your true entent,
And trust upon your wit, and have done aye,
Wherefore of my fre will I woll assent 1180
To weddin me as sone as ere I maye;
But there as ye have profrid me to daye
To chesin me a wife, I you relesc
That choice, and pray you of that profir cese.

For God it wote, that childrin oftin ben
Unlike thier worthie elders them before,
Bounte comith of God, and not of strenge
Of whiche they ben engendrid and ybore,
I truste in Godd's bounte, and therefore
My mariage, and myne estate and reste
I him betake, he may done as him leste. 1190

Let me alone in chesing of my wife,
That charge upon my back I woll endure,
But I you praye and charge upon your life,
That what wife that I take, ye me ensure
To worship her, while that her life may dure,

In werde and werke, both here and ellifwhere,
As she an Emperour's doughtir were.

And furthirmore thus shalle ye swere that ye
Agens't my choice shall nevir grutch ne strive, 1200
For fith I shalle forgoe my liberte
At your request, as evir mote I thrive,
There as my herte is sette there woll I wive,
And but ye woll assent in soche manere,
I praye you speke no more in this matere.

With hertie wille thei swerin and assent
To alle this thing, there sayed not one wight nay,
Beseeching him of grace ere that thei went
That he wolde grauntin them a certeine day
Of his spoufaile, as sone as ere he may. 1210
For yet alweye the peple somewhat dredde,
Lest that this Marquis ne wolde no wife wedde:

He grauntid 'hem a day; soche as them leste,
On whiche he wolde be weddid sikirlye,
And saide he did alle this at ther request,
And thei with humble entent full buxumlie,
Kneling upon ther knees full reverentlie
Him thonkid alle, and thus thei have an end
Of ther entent, and home ayen thei wend.

And hercupon he toke his officeres, 1220
Commaunding them for the feste to purvay,
And to his privie Knightis and his Squires
Soche charge he yave, as he leste on them lay,
And thei to his commaundement obey,
And eche of 'hem doeth all his diligence
To don unto that feste high reverence.

Explicit Pars prima, sequitur Pars secunda.

Not ferre fro thilke Paleyse honourable,
Thereas this Marquis's hope his mariage,
There stode a thorpe of sight delectable,
In whiche the pore folk of that village 1230
Haddin ther bestis and ther herbigage,
And of ther labour toke ther sustenance,
After that the erthe yave 'hem habundaunce.

Among these pore folk there dwellid a man,
Whiche that was holdin porist of 'hem alle,
But the high God sometimis sendin can
His grace unto a litil Ox's-stalle,
Janicola men of that thorpe him calle.
A doughtir had he faire enough to sight,
And Grisildis this yongè maidin hight. 1240

But for to speke of vertuouse beaute,
Than was she one the feirist undir sonne.
And full porely yfostrid up was she
No lico'rous lust was through her herte yronne,
But oftir of the welle than of the tonne
She dranke, and for that she wolde vertue plesse,
She knewe welle labour, but none idle ese.

But though this maidin tendir were of age,
Yet in the breste of her virginite
There was enclosed sad and ripe corage, 1250
And in grete reverence and charite
Her oldè pore fa'ir yfostrid she.
A fewe shepe spinning on the felde she kepte,
She woldè not ben idle till she slepte.

And whan homewarde she came, she woldè bring
Wortis or othir herbis timis ofte,
The whiche she shradde and sethe for ther living,
And made her bed full harde and nothing soft,
And aye she kept her fa'ir's life on loft,

With every obeisaunce and diligence 1260
That childe might do to fa'ir's reverence.

Upon Grisildis this povert cature
Welle oftin hath the Marquis sette his eye,
As he on hunting rode peraventure,
And whan it felle that he might her espye,
He not with wanton loking of folie
His eyin cast on her, but in fadè wife
Upon her chere he wolde him oft avise,

Commending in his herte her womanhede,
And eke her vertue, passing every wight 1270
Of so yonge age, as welle in chere as dede;
For though the peple have no grete insight
In vertue, he considerid full right
Her bounte, and purposid that he wolde
Her wedde only, if evir he wedde sholde.

The daye of wedding came, but no wight can Tell what manir of woman it shold be,
For whiche mervayle wondrid many a man,
And saidin whan they were in privite,
Wolle not our Lorde yet leve his vanite? 1280
Wolle he not wedde alas! alas the while!
Why wolde he thus himself and us begyle?

But nathèless this Marquis hath do make
Of gemmis sette in golde and in azure
Brochis and ringis for Grisildis sake,
And of her clothing toke he the mesure
Of a maidin like unto her stature,
And eke of othir ornamentis alle
That unto soche a wedding sholde befallè.

The time of undern in the famin daye 1290
Approchid that the wedding sholdè be,
And all the Paleyse put was in araye,
Both halle and chambir eche in his degre;
The officis stuffid with grete plente,
There mayst thou se all dainteouse vitaille,
That may be foundin in ferthist Itaille.

This royalle Marquis richely was araied,
With Lordes and Ladies in his companie,
The whiche unto the feste werin yprayed,
And of his retinue the Bachelerie, 1300
With many' a sounè of sondrie melodie,
And to the village, of whiche I you tolde,
In this araye the right waye hath yholde.

Grisild of this, God wote, full innocent,
(That for her shapin was alle this araye)
To fetchin water at a welle is wente,
And comith home as sone as ere she maye,
For welle she herdin saye that ilkè daye
That the Marquis sholde wedde, and if she might,
She woldè faine have sene some of that sight. 1310

She thought, I wolde with othir maidins stonde,
That ben my felawes, in our dore, and se
The Marquis, and therefore now wolde I fonde
To don at home, as sone as it may be,
The labour, which that longith unto me.
And then may I at leysir it beholde,
If he this waye unto the Castle holde.

And as she wolde over the threshold gone,
The Marquis came, and gan her for to calle,
And she sette doun her watir-pot anon, 1320
Beside the threshold of the Ox's-stalle,
And doun upon her knees she gan to falle,
And with sad countenance she knelid stille,
Till she had herde what was the Lord's wille.
This

This thoughtfull Marquis spake unto the Maide.
Full sobirlic, and saide in this manere,
Where is your faðir, Grisildis, he saide?
And she with reverence and humble chere,
Answerid, Lorde, he is all redy here,
And in she goeth withoutin lengir lette,
And to the Marquis she her faðir sette.

1330

He by the honde then toke this oldè man,
And seide thus, whan he had him aside,
Janicola, I neither may ne can
The plesaunce lenger of myn hertè hide,
If thou vouchsafe, whatso'ever me betide,
Thy doughtir wolle I take ere hens I wend,
As for my wife, unto my liv'is end.

Thou lovist me, I wote it welle certeine,
And art my faithfull Liegè Man ybore,
And alle that likith me I dare welle faine
It likith The, and speciallic therefore
Telle me that point that I have saide before,
And if thou wilt unto that purpose drawe?
To takin me as for thy Sonne in Lawe.

1340

This sodaine case the man astonid so,
That red he wext, abashed, and alle quaking
He stode, unneth ne saide he wordis mo,
But only thus, Lorde, qð he, my willing,
Is as ye wolle, ne ayenst your liking
I wolle nothing, ye be my Lorde so dere,
Right as you lest governith this matere.

1350

Than wolle I thus, qð this Marquis, sothely,
That in thy chambir I and you and she
Have a Collation, and wotest thou why?
For I wolle aske her, if her wille it be
To be my wife, and rule her aftir me.
And all this shall be done in thy presence,
I woll not speke out of thine audience.

And in the chambir while thei were about
The Tretise, whiche as ye shull aftir here
The peple came unto the house without,
And wondrid 'hem in how honest manere
So rentisly she kept her faðir dere.
But uttirly Grisildis wonder might,
For nevir erst ne sawe she soche a sight.

1360

No wondir is though she be astonid,
To se so grete a ghest come to that place,
She nevir was to soche ghestis wonid,
For whiche she lokid with a full pale face;
But shortlic fro this matere for to pace,
These were the wordis, that the Marquis saide
To this benigne and very feithfull maide.

1370

Grisilde, sayed he, ye shalle welle undirstond,
It likith unto your faðir and me,
That I you wedde, and eke it may so stonde,
As I suppose, ye wolle that it so be,
But these demaundis aske I first, qð he,
That sith it shalle be done in hastie wise,
Wolle you thereto assent, or you avise?

1380

I saye thus, be ye redy with gode herte
To alle my lust, and that I frely may
As me best likith, though ye laugh or smerte,
And nevir ye to grutch me night or day,
Whan I say yea, that ye say not ones nay,
Nouthir by worde, nor frowning countenance,
Swere this, and here I swere our alliaunce.

Wondring on these wordis, quaking for drede,
She saide, my Lord, indigne and unworthie

Am I to thilk honour that ye me bede, 1390
But as you wolle your self right so wolle I,
And here I swere that nevir willingly,
In werde, werke, thought, I n'll you disobey
For to be dede, though me were lothe to dey.

This is ynough, Grisildis mine, qð he,
And forth he goeth with a full sobre chere
Out at the dore, and aftir him came she,
And to the folke he saide in this manere,
This is my wife, qð he, that stondith here,
Honourith her, and lovith her, I pray, 1400
Whoso me lovith, there n'is more to say.

And for that nothing of her oldè gere
She sholde bringin into his house, he bade
That wymen sholde dispoilin her right there,
Of whiche these Ladies werin nothing glade,
To handle her clothes in whiche she was clad.
But nathclefs this maidin bright of hew
Fro fote to hedde thei clothid han all new.

Her haire han thei kembid, that lay untressed
Full rudily, and with ther fingeres smale 1410
A Croune upon her hedde they han ydressed,
And sette it full of ouchis grete and smale,
Of her aray what sholde I make a tale?
Unnethe the peple knew her for fairenesse,
Whan she transformid was in soche richesse.

This Marquis hath her sponfid with a ring,
Bought for the same cause, and then he her sette
Upon an horse snow-white, full welle ambling,
And to his paleyse, ere he lengir lette,
With joyfull peple, that her ladde and mette, 1420
Conveyid her, and thus the day thei spend
In revell, till the sonne gan to descend.

And shortly forth this talè for to trace,
I say that to this new-made Marquesse
God hath ysent soche favour of his grace,
That it ne semid by no likeliness
That she yborne was and fed in rudeness,
As in a Cote or in an Ox's stalle,
But norished in an Emperour's halle.

To every wight she woxin is so dere 1430
And worshipfull, that folke there she was bore,
And fro her birth that knewe her yere by yere,
Unneth trowid thei her, but durst have swore
That to Janicola (of whom before)
She doughtir n'as, for as by conjecture
'Hem thought she was right anothir cature.

For though that evir vertuouse was she,
She was encrefid in soche excellence
Of thewis gode, sette in so high degre,
And so discrete and faire of eloquence, 1440
And so benigne, and digne of reverence,
And couthe the pepli's hertis so embrace,
That eche her loved that lokid in her face.

Not only of Saluces in the toun
Publischid was the bountie of her name,
But eke beside in many regioun,
If one said welle, anothir saide the same,
So spraddin of her bountie the grete fame,
That men and wymen, bothe yonge and olde
Gone to Saluces, her for to beholde. 1450

This Walter lowlic and full royallie
Weddid hath with fortunate honeste.
In Godd's pece livith full esly
At home, and outward grace ynough had he,
And

And for he sawe that undir lowe degre
Was honest vertue hid, pepill him helde
A prudent man, and that is sene full feld.

Not only this Grisildis through her witt
Couth all the fear of wifly humblenesse,
But eke, whan that the case requirid it, 1460
The comyn profite couð she welle redresse,
There n'as discord, rancour, he hevinesse,
In all the londe, that she ne couð appese,
And wisely bring 'hem alle in rest and ese.

Though that her husbonde present were or none,
If gentilman or chorle of that countre,
Were wrothe, she knewe how to bring them at one,
So wise and eke so ripe wordis had she!
And in judgment of so grete equite,
That she from Hevin sent was, as men wende,
Peple to save, and every wronge to amende!

Not longe time aftir that this Grisilde
Was weddid, she a doughtir hath ybore,
Alle had she levir have bore a knave childe,
Glad was the Marquis, and his folke therefore,
For though a maidin childe came al before,
She may unto a knave childe attaine
By likelyhode, sithin she n'is barraine.

Explicit Pars secunda, & sequitur Pars tertia.

There felle, as it befallith oft times mo,
Whan that this childe had sokid but a throwe, 1480
This Marquis in his hert ylongith so
To tempt his wife, her sadnesse for to knowe,
That he might out of his herte throwe,
This mervailouse delite his wife to assaye,
Nedeless, God wote, he thought her to affraye,

He had assayid her ynough before,
And sonde her evir gode, what nedith it
Her for to turment alwey more and more?
Though some men praise it for a sotill wit,
But as for me, I say full ill, it sitte 1490
To assaye a wife, whan that it is no nede,
And puttin her in anguish and in drede.

For whiche this Marquis wrought in this manere,
He came alone anight there as she laye,
With a sterne visage and right ugly chere,
And saide her thus, Grisilde, qð he that daye
That I The toke out of thy pore arraye,
And put The in estate of high noblesse,
Thou hast not that forgottin, as I ghesse,

I say, Grisilde, the present dignite, 1500
In whiche I now have put The, as I trowe,
Makith The not forgetfull for to be
That I The toke in pore estate, full lowe
For any wele, thou must thy selfin knowe,
Takith hede of every worde what I saye,
There is no wight that herith but we twaye,

Thou wotist thy self how that thou came here,
Into this house, it is not longe ago,
And thought to me ye be both lese and dere,
Unto my Gentilles you are nothing so, 1510
Thei say to them it is grete shame and wo,
For to ben subject, and ben in servage
To The, that borne art in so smalle village,

And namely sith thy doughtir was ybore,
These wordis have thei spokin doutlesse,
But I desire, as I have don before,
To live my life with them in rest and pece,

I may not in this case be rechilese,
I mote don with thy doughtir for the best,
Not as I wolde, but as my peple left. 1520

And yet; God wote, this is full loth to me,
But nathelless withoutin thy witting
I wolde nought do; but this I wolde, qð he,
That thou to me assent as in this thing,
Shewe now thy pacience in thy werking
That thou me hight and swore in your village
That day, that makid was our mariage.

Whan she had herde all this she not amoved
Neither in worde, or dede, or countenance,
For as it semid she was not agreved, 1530
She seide, Lorde, all lyeth in your plesaunce,
My childe and I, with hertie obeisaunce,
Ben your own alle, and ye may save or spille,
With your owne thing workith aftir your wille.

There may be nothing, so God my foule save,
Likin to you, that may displese me,
Ne I desirin nothing for to have,
Ne dredin for to lese, but only ye,
This wille is in my herte, and ay shall be,
No length of time, or dethe may this deface, 1540
Ne turne my corage to none othir place.

Glad was this Marquis of her answering,
But yet he fainid as he were not so,
Alle dreerie was his chere and his loking;
Whan that he sholde out of the chambir go,
Sone aftir this a furlong way or two,
He privily had tolde alle his entent
Unto a man, and to his wife him sent.

A sort of Sergeant was this privy man,
The whiche he feithfull oft time foundin had, 1550
In thingis grete, and eke such folk welle can
Don execution of thingis bad,
The Lorde knew well that he him loved and dradde;
And whan this Sergeant knewe his Lord's wille,
Into the chambir stakid he full stille.

Madame, he sayed, ye mote foryeve it me,
Though I a thing do whiche I am constrained,
Ye ben full wise, and full welle knowin ye
That Lord's heftis may not be yfained,
Thei may welle be ywaylid and complained, 1560
But men must nedes unto ther lust obey,
And so wolde I, there n'is no more to sey:

This childe I am commaundid for to take,
And spoke no more, but up the childe he hent,
Dispitously, and gan a chere to make
As though he wolde have slaine it ere he went;
Grisildis alle must suffir and consent,
And as a Lambe she sittith meke and stille,
And let this cruill Sergeant do his wille.

Suspect ywas the fame of thilk man, 1570
Suspect his face, suspect his worde also,
Suspect the time, in whiche he this began,
Alas! her doughtir that she lovid so!
She wenid that he wolde have slaine it tho.
But nathelless she neither wepte ne fiked,
Conforming her to that the Marquis liked.

But at the last to speke she thus began,
And mekily she to the Sergeant prayed,
So as he was a verry Gentilman
That she might kisse her childe, ere that it dyed, 1570
And in her barme the litil child she layed,
With

With full sad face than gan the childe to blisse,
And lulled it, and astir gan it kille.

And thus she said in her benigne voice
Farewelle, my childe, I shall The never se,
But sith I have markid The with the Croise,
Of thilke faȝir yblessid mote thou be,
That for us dyid upon the Roode tre,
Thy soule, my litil childe, I him betake, 1580
For this night shalt thou dyin for my sake.

I trowe that to a norice in this case
Full harde it wolde have ben this rounche to se,
Welle might a moȝir then have cryed alas!
But nathleſs so sad and stedfast was she,
That she endurid her adwerlite,
And to the Sergeant mekily she sayed,
Have here ayen your litil yongè maide.

Goth now, qȝ she, and doth my Lord's heft,
But o thing wolde I praye you of your grace,
(But if my Lorde forbid it you) at lest 1590
Burie this litil bodie in some place,
That no bestis or foulis it may race.
But he no worde to that purpose wolde saye,
But toke the childe, and went anon his waye.

This Sergeant came unto his Lorde againe,
And of Grisildis wordis, and her chere
He tolde him pointe fro pointe, in shorte and plaine,
And him presentid with his doughtir dere.
Somewhat this Lorde had rounche in this matere,
But nathleſs his purpose held he stille, 1600
As Lordis don, whan thei wolde have their wille:

And bad this Sergeant, that full privily
This childe he sholdin full soft wind and wrappe
With alle the Circumstancis tendirly,
And carrie it in coffer or in lappe,
But on paine of his hedde of for to swappe,
That no man sholdin knowe of his entent,
Ne whence he came, ne whither that he went.

But at Boloigne unto his sustir dere,
That thilke time of Pavie was Countesse, 1610
He sholde it take, and shew her this matere,
Beseching her to don her besinesse
This childe to fostir in alle gentilnesse,
And whose childe that it was he bade her hide
From every wight, for ought that might betide.

This Sergeant goeth, and hath fulfilled this thing.
But to this Marquis now returnin we,
For now goth he full fast imagining
If by his wif's chere he might ought se,
Or by her wordis percevin that she 1620
Were chaungid ought; but he couȝd never finde
But evir in one mode like sad and kinde.

As glad, as humble, and besie in servise,
And eke in love, as she was wont to be,
Was she to him in every manir wise,
Ne of her doughtir not one worde spake she,
None accident, ne none adwerlite
Was sene in her; never her doughtir's name
Ne namid she, for ernest ne for game.

Explicit Pars tertia, & sequitur Pars quarta.

In this estate there passid ben four yere, 1630
Ere she with childe was, but as God it wolde,
A knave couȝd she bare to this Waltere
Full graciously and faire for to beholde,
And whan that folke it to the faȝir tolde,

Non onlie he, but all the cowntre mery
Was for the childe, and God thei thonk and hery.

Whan it was two yere olde, and fro the breste
Departid from his net.ce, on a daye
This Marquis caughtin yet anothir lesse
To tempt his wife effionis it he maye, 1640
O nedeles was she temptid I dare saye,
But weddid men ne knowin no mesure,
Whan that thei find a pacient creature.

Wife, qȝ this Marquis, ye have herde ere this,
My pepill hevy berith our mariage,
And namely sithin my sonne yborne is,
Now is it worse than evir in our age,
The murmure slayth my herte and my corage,
For to my cres comuth the voice to lnerce,
That it well nigh destroyid hath my herte. 1650

Now saye thei thus, when Walter is agon,
Than shalle the blode of Janicole succede,
And ben our Lorde, for othin have we none,
Soche wordis say my pepill out of drede,
Well ought I of such murmure takin hede,
For certainly I drede alle soche sentence,
Though thei not plaine speke in myn audience.

I wolde livin in pece, if that I might,
Wherefore I am disposid uttirly,
As I his sustir yservid by night, 1660
Right so I think to serve him privilie,
This warne I you, that ye not sodainly
Out of your selfe, for no wo sholde outraie,
Beth pacient, and thereof I you praye.

I have, qȝ she, sayed thus, and evir shalle,
I wolde nothing in no manir certaine
But as you lesse; nought grevith me at alle
Though that my doughtir and my sonne be slaine
At your commaundment; this is to same,
I have hadde no part of my childrin twaine, 1670
But first likenesse, and astir wo and paine.

Ye ben our Lord, doth with your ownè thing
Right as you lesse, askith no rede of me,
For as I left at home alle my clothing,
Whan I came first to you, right so, qȝ she,
I left my wille and alle my liberte,
And toke your clothing, wherefore I you preye
Doth your plessaunce, I wolde your lust obeye.

And certis if I haddin prescience,
Your wille to knowe, ere you your lust me told, 1680
I wolde it doin without negligence,
But now I wore your lust, and what ye wolde,
Alle your plessaunce firm. and stable I holde.
For wist I that my dethe might do you ese,
Gladly wolde I it sustir you to plesse,

Dethe may not makin no comparison
Unto your love. And when this Marquis sawe
The constancy of his w.f.e, he cast adoun,
His eyin two, and wondred how she may
In soche pacience sustir alle this arraie, 1690
And forth he goth with a dreie countenance,
But to his herte it was full grete plessaunce.

That eiger Sergeant in the same wife
That he her doughtir caught, right so hath he (Or worse, if he couȝd any worse devise)
Ycaught her sonne, that was full of bewte,
And evir in one so pacient was she,
That she no chere madin o' havynesse,
But kist her sonne, and astir gan him blesse.

Save this she prayid him, if that he might,
 Her litil sonne he wold in the erth grave,
 His tender limmis, delicate to sight,
 Fro foulis and fro bestis them to save.
 But she none answer of him mightin have,
 He went his way, as he nothing ne rought,
 But to Boloigne he tendirly him brought.

This Marquis wondrid evir lengir more
 Upon her pacience, and if that he
 Ne haddin sothly knowin there before,
 That perfetely her childrin lovid she,
 He wolde have wende, that for some sotilty,
 And of malice, and for cruell corage,
 That she had sufferid this with sad visage.

But he knewe welle, that next himself certaine
 She loved her childrin best in any wise,
 But now of wymen wolde I aske full faine,
 If these assayis mightin nor suffice,
 What coude a sturdie husbonde more devise
 To preve her wivchode, and her stedfastnesse,
 But he continuing in sturdinesse?

But there be folke of soche condition,
 That when thei have a certeine purpose take,
 Thei cannot stint of their intention,
 But right as thei were boundin to a flake
 Thei wolde not of that ther first purpose flake.
 Right so this Marquis hath fully purposed
 To tempt his wife, as he was first disposed.

He waitid if by worde or countenance
 That she to him was changid of corage,
 But never coude he findin variaunce,
 She was ay in one herte and one visage,
 And evir ferthir that she was in age
 The more truer, if it were possible,
 She was to him in love, and more penible.

For which it semid thus, that of them two
 There n'as but one wille; for as Walter left
 The samin lust was her plessaunce also,
 And, God be thonkid, alle felle for the best,
 She shewid welle for none worldly unrest
 A wife as of her self nothing ne sholde
 Wille in effect, but as her husbonde wolde.

The Sclander of Walter wonder wide sprad,
 That of cruill herte he full wickidly
 (For that he a pore woman weddid had)
 Hath murdrid both his childrin privily;
 Soche murmure was among 'hem comynly;
 No wondir was, for to the pep'is ere
 There came no worde but that thei murdrid were.

For which there as his peple there before
 Had loved him well, sclander of his defame
 Maidin 'nem that thei hatid him therefore,
 To ben a murdrer is an hateful name!
 But nathelès for earnest ne for game
 He of his cruill purpose wolde not stint,
 To tempt his wife ywas all his entent.

Whan that his doughtir twelve yere was of age,
 He to the Court of Rome in sotill wise
 Enformid of his wille sent his message,
 Commaunding hem such bullis to devise,
 As to his cruill purpose may suffice,
 How that the Pope had, for his pepl's rest,
 Bad him to wed another, if him left.

I saye he bade thei sholdin counterfete
 The Pop'is Bullis, making mentioune

That he hath leve his first wife for to lete,
 As by the Pop'is Dispensatioune,
 To stinte the rancour and dissentioune
 Twixte his pepill and him, so spake the Bulle,
 The whiche thei han publishid at the fulle.

The rude pepill, as it no wondir n'is,
 Wendin full welle that it had ben right so,
 But whan these tidinges came to Grisildis,
 I demin that her herte was full of wo,
 But she was stille ylike sadde evirmo,
 Disposid welle was this humble cature
 The' adversite of fortune to endure,

Abiding evir his lust and plessaunce,
 To whome that she had gevin herte and alle,
 As to his verry worldly suffisaunce.
 But shortlie if I telle this storie shalle,
 This Marquis writrin hath in specialle
 A Lettre, in which he shewed alle his entent,
 And privilie to Boloigne he it sent,

To the Erle of Pavie, whiche that had tho
 Weddid his sustir, praying specially
 To bringin him ayen his childrin two
 In honourable state, all opinly,
 But one thing he him prayid uttirly,
 That he no wight, although thei did enquere
 Ytellen sholde whole childrin that thei were.

But say that the maidin sholde weddid be
 To the Marquis of Saluces anon;
 And as the Erle was prayid so did he,
 At the day sette he on his way is gone
 Towarde Saluce, and Lordis many one
 In riche araie, this maidin for to gyde,
 And her yong brothir riding by her side.

Arayid was towarde her mariage
 This maidin freshe shining with gemmis clere,
 And her brothir, that seven yere was of age,
 Arayid was full freshe in his manere,
 And thus in grete noblesse, and in glade chere,
 Towarde Saluces speding their journey
 Fro day to day thei ridin forthe ther way.

Explicit Pars quarta, & sequitur Pars quinta.

Among alle this, aftir his wike usage,
 This Marquis yet his wife to temptin more
 To the utterist profe of her corage,
 Fully to have experience, and lore,
 If that she were as stedfast as before.
 He on a day in opin audience
 Full boistouly hath saide her this sentence.

Certis, Grisilde, I had ynow plessaunce
 To han you to my wife for your godeness,
 And for your trouthe, and for your obeisaunce,
 Not for your lynage, ne for your richesse.
 But now I knowe in verry sothfastnesse
 That in grete Lordship, I me welle avise,
 There is grete servitude in sondrie wife.

I may not don as every Ploughman may,
 My peple me constrainith for to take
 Anothir wife, and cryin day by day,
 And eke the Pope, this rancour for to flake,
 Consentith it, that I dare undirtake,
 And truly thus moche I wolde you say,
 My newè wife is coming by the way.

Be stronge of herte, and voide anon the place,
 And thilkè dowir that ye brought to me

Take

Take it ayen, I graunt it of my grace,
Retournith to your faȝer's house, qȝ he,
No man may alway have prosperite,
With evin herte I rede you to endure
The stroke of fortune, or of aventure. 1830

And she againe answerde in patience,
My Lorde, qȝ she, I wote and wist alwaye,
How that betwixte your high magnificence
And my poverte no wight can ne may
Makin comparifoune, it is no nay,
I helde me nevir digne in no manere
To ben your wife, ne yet your chamberere.

And in this house, there ye me Ladie made, 1840
(The High God take I as for my witnesse,
And all so wisely as he my soule glade)
I helde me neither ladie ne maistresse,
But humble servaunt to your worthinesse,
And evir shalle while my life may endure,
Abovin evyry worldely cecture.

That ye so longe of your benignite
Have holdin me in honour and nobley,
Where I was nothing worthie for to be,
That thonke I God and you, to whome I preye 1850
To yeld it you, there is no more to seye.
Unto my faȝer gladly wolde I wende,
And with him dwelle unto my liv'is ende.

There I was foltrid of a childe full smale,
Tille I be dede my life there wolde I lede,
A widowe clene in herte, bodie, and alle,
For sithin I gave you my maidinhede
I am your trewe wife, it is no drede,
God sheldè soche a Lord's wife to take
Anothir man to husbonde or to make. 1860

And of your newè wife God of his grace
So graunt you welthe and high prosperite.
For I wolde gladlie yeldin her my place,
In the whiche I was blisfulle wont to be,
For sith it likith you, my Lorde, qȝ she,
(That whilome werin alle my hert's rest)
That I shalle gon; I shalle go whan you lest.

But thereas ye me proffir such dowaire
As I first brought, it is welle in my mind 1870
It were my wretchid clothis nothing faire,
The whiche to me now were fulle harde to finde.
O gode God! how gentil, and eke how kinde
Ye semid by your speche, and your visage,
That daye that makid was our mariage!

But sothe is saide, alwey I finde it true,
For in effect it provid is on me,
Love is not olde as whan that it is newe,
But certis, Lorde, for none adversite,
To dyin in this place, it shalle not be 1880
That I in worde or werke shulle ere repent,
That I you yafe myne herte in gode entent.

My Lorde, ye wote, that in my faȝer's place
Ye did me strippin out of my pore wede,
And richly ye me claddin of your grace,
To you I brought nought ellis out of drede,
But faithe, nakidnesse, and my maidinhede,
But here ayen your clothing I restore,
And eke my wedding ringe for evirmore.

The remnaunte of you jewelles redie be 1890
Within your chambre, dare I safely faine,
Nakid out of my faȝer's house, qȝ she,
I came, and nakid I more turne againe.

Alle your plessaunce folowe woldin I faine,
But yet I hope it be not your entent
That I smoklesse out of your Paleyse went.

Ye couȝ not do so dishonest a thing,
That thilke wombe, in whiche your childrin lay,
Sholde before the pepill in my walking
Be sene all nakid; wherefore I you praye, 1900
Let me not like a worme go by the waye:
Remembrith you myn owne Lorde so dere,
I was your wife, though I unworthie were.

Wherefore in guerdon of my maidinhede
(Which I to you brought, and not again bere)
As but vouchsafe to yeve me to my mede
But soche a smocke as I was wonte to were,
That I therewith may wrie the wombe of her
That was your wife; and here I take my leve
Of you, myn only Lorde, lest I you greve. 1910

The smocke, qȝ he, that thou hast on thy back
Let it be stille, and bere it forth with The,
But welle unnethe that wordè had he spake,
But went his way for routhe and for pite.
Before the folke her selfin strippid she,
And in her smocke with fore and hede al bare
Towardes her faȝer's house forth is she fare.

The folke her folowed weping in her wey,
And fortune evir cursid as thei gone,
But she fro weping kept her eyin dreye, 1920
Ne in alle this time worde spakin she none.
Her faȝer, that these tidinges herde anon
Cursid the day, and the time, that nature
Shopin him to ben a livis cecture.

For out of doute this olde and poverte man
Was evir suspect of her mariage,
For evir he demid sith it began,
That whan the Lorde filled had his corage,
Him woldin thinke it was a disparage
To his estate so lowe for to alight, 1930
And voidin her so sone as ere he might.

Ayent his doughtir hastily goth he,
(For he by noise of folk knew her coming)
And with her olde cote, as it mightin be,
He covrid her sorowfully weping,
But on her bodie he might not it bringe,
For rude was the clothe, and she more of age,
By dayis fele, than at her mariage.

Thus with her faȝer for a certaine space
Dwellith this flower of wively pacience, 1940
That nevir by her worde, ne by her face,
Before the folke, ne eke in their absence,
Shewid she that to her was done offence.
Ne of her hie estate no remembraunce
Had she, as by her manir countenaunce.

No wondir is, for in her grete estate
Her ghost was ay in plaine humilite,
No tendir mouthe, ne yet herte delicate,
Ne pompe, ne semblaunce of high roialte,
But full of pacient benignite, 1950
Discrete, and prideles, and ay honourable,
And to her husbonde evir meke and stable.

Men speke of Job, and most for his humblef,
As Clerkis (whan 'hem lest) can well endite,
Namely of men, but in gode sothefalnesse
Though Clerkis praisin wymen but a lite,
There can no men in humblef, them acquite

As wymen can, ne ben thei halfe so true,
As wymen ben, but it befall of newe.

Explicit Pars quinta, sequitur Pars sexta.

Fro Boloigne is the Erle of Pavie come, 1960
Of whiche the fame yspronge to more and lesse,
And to the Pepl'is eris alle and some
Was tolde eke, how that a newe Marquesesse
He with him brought in pompe, and soche richesse,
That nevir was there sene with Mann'is eye
So noble araye in alle West Lumbardie.

The Marquis, whiche that shope and knewe all this,
Ere that this erle was come sent his message
To thilke pore felie cature Grisildis,
And she with humble herte and glad visage, 1970
And with no swelling thought in her corage
Came at his hest, and on her knees her sette,
And reverently and wisely she him gret.

Grisild, q'ð he, my wille is uttirly,
This maidin, that shalle weddid be to me,
Recevid be to morowe roially,
As it is possible in my house to be,
And eke that every wight in his degre
Have his estate in sitting and servise,
And alle so plesaunt as ye can devise. 1980

I have no woman suffisaunt certaine
The chambris to aray in ordinaunce
Aftir my lust, and therefore wolde I faine
That thine were all soche manir governaunce,
That knowist eke of olde all my plesaunce,
Though thine araye be bad and ill to se,
Do thou thy devoir at the lestè weye.

Not only, Lorde, that I am glade, q'ð she,
To done your lust, but I desire also 1990
Your wife to plesse and serve in my degre,
Withoutin faining, and shalle evirmo,
Ne nevir for no wele, ne for no wo
Ne shalle the ghost within my hertè stent
To love you best with alle my true entent.

And with that worde she gan the house to dight,
And tablis sette, and beddis for to make,
And painid her to doe alle that she might,
Praying the Chambereres for Godd'is sake
To halpin them, and faste to swepe and shake,
And she the moste servisable of 'hem alle 2000
Hath every chambre arayid and his Halle.

Aboutin undern gan this Erle alight,
That with him brought these nobill childern tweye,
For whiche the peple ran to se that sight
Of thor araie so richily beseye,
And than at erst amongis 'hem thei saye,
That Walter was no fole, though that him leste
To chaunge his wife, for it was for the beste.

For she is fairer, as thei demin alle,
Than is Grisilde, and more tendir of age, 2010
And fairer fruit betwenin 'hem shalle falle,
And mucche more plesaunt for her high lynage,
Her broðir eke so faire was of visage,
That him to sene the peple had plesaunce,
Commending now the Marquis governaunce,

O stormy peple, unsad, and untrew,
Aye undiscere, and chaunging as a fane,
Delighting aye in rumour that is newe!
For like the Mone evir waxe ye and wane,
Ay full of clapping, dere ynough a jane; 2020

Your dome is false, your constaunce evil preveth,
A full grete fole is he that on you leveth.

Thus saidin the sad folke in that Cite,
Whan that the peple gasid up and doune,
For thei were glad right with the novelte,
To havin a new Ladie in the toun;
No more of this make I now mentioune,
But to Grisilde ayen wolde I me dresse,
And telle her constaunce and her besinesse.

Well besic was Grisilde on every thing, 2030
That to the feste tho was appertinent,
Right nought was she abashed of her clothing,
Though they were rude, and somedeke eke to rent,
But with glade chere unto the yate is went,
With othir folke, to grete the Marquesesse,
And aftir doth she forth her besinesse.

With right glad chere his gestis she receveth,
And buxomly everich in his degre,
That no defaute no man there apperceveth,
But evir thei wondrid what she might be, 2040
That in so pore araie was for to se,
And couth soche honour and soche reverence,
And worthily thei prasin her prudence.

In all the menè while she nevir stente
This maide and eke her broðir to commende,
With all her herte and full benigne entente,
So welle, that no man couth her praise amende,
But at the laste, whan that these Lordis wende
To sittin down to mete, he gan to calle
Grisilde, as she was besic in the Halle. 2050

Grisilde, q'ð he, as it were in his playe,
How likith The my wife and her beaute?
Right welle, my Lord, q'ð she, for in gode fay
A fairer sawe I nevir none than she,
I praye God to yeve you prosperite,
And so I hope that he wolde to you sende
Plesaunce ynough unto your liv'is ende.

But one thing I besече and warne also,
That ye ne prick with no soche turmenting
This tendir Maidin, as ye han do me, 2060
For she is fost'rid in her norishing
More tendirly, and to my supposing
She couð not welle adversite endure,
As couldin a porer fost'rid cature.

And whan this Walter sawe her pacience,
And her glade chere, and no malice at alle,
And he so ofte had don to her offence,
And she constaunt and stable as a Walle,
Continuing her innocence ovre alle,
This sturdie Marquis gan his herte to dresse 2070
To rue upon her wively stedfastnesse.

This is ynough, Grisildis myn, q'ð he;
Be nowe no more agaste, ne ill apaide,
I have thy faithe, and thy benignite,
As welle as evir woman was, afflaide,
In grete estate, or poverly araide,
Now knowe I welle, dere Wife, thy stedfastnesse,
And in his armes her toke, and gan to kesse.

And she for wondir toke thereof no kepe,
Ne herdin she what thing to her he saide, 2080
She fared as she had stert out of a slepe,
Till she out of her masidnesse abraide;
Grisilde, q'ð he, by God that for us deyde,
Thou art my wife, ne none othir I have,
Ne nevir had, as God my soule save.

This

This is my doughtir, which thou hast supposid
To ben my wife, that othir faithfully
Shalle be myn heir, as I have purposid,
Thou barist them in thy bodie truly,
At Boloign have I kept 'hem sikerly; 2090
Take 'hem ayen, for now thou maist not say
That thou hast lorne none of thy childern tway;

And folke, that otherwise han saide of me,
I warne them wele, that I have done this dede
For no malice, ne for no cruelte,
But for to' assaie in The thy womanhede,
And not to slei my childern, God forbede!
But for to kepe 'hem privilie and stille,
Till I thy purpose knewe, and alle thy wille.

Whan this she herde, aswoune down she fallith, 2100
For pitous joye, and aftir her swouning
She bothe her yonge Childerne to her callith,
And in her armis, pitously weping,
Embracith 'hem bothe, tendirly kissing,
Full like a Moðir, with her saltè teres,
She bathid bothe ther visage and ther heres.

O what a pitous thing it was to se
Her swouning, and her pitous voice to here!
Graunt mercie! Lorde God, thonke I you, qð she,
That ye have savid me my childern dere, 2110
Now reke I never to be dede right here,
Sith I stonde in your love, and in your grace,
No force of dethe, ne whan my spirit pace.

O tendir, o dere, o yonge childerne mine,
Your wofull Moðir wend stedfastly,
That cruell houndis, or some foule vermine
Had erin you, but God of his mercie,
And your benigne faðir so tendirly
Hath done you kepe, and in thar samè stounde
Alle sodainly she swapte doune to the grounde.

And in her swounde so sadly holdith she
Her childrin two, whan she gan them embrace,
That with grete sight, and grete difficulte
The childerne from her armes they gan to race.
O many' a tere on many a pitous face
Doun ran of them that stod in there beside,
Unnethe about her might no man abide.

Walter her gladith, her sorowe slakith,
She risith up abashid from her traunce
And every wight her joie and feste makith, 2130
Tille she had caught ayen her countenaunce,
Walter her doth so faithfully plesaunce,
That it was deinty for to se the chere
Betwixt 'hem two, whan thei were met yfere.

These Ladies, whan that thei their timè sey,
Han takin her, and to the chambir gone,
And strippid her out of her rude arraie,
And in a clothe of golde that brightly shone,
And with a croune of many a riche stone
Upon her hede, into the Halle her brought, 2140
And there she was honourid as she ought.

Thus hath this pitous day a blisfull ende,
For every man and woman doth his might
This day in mirth and revell to dispend,
Till on the welkin shone the sterris bright;
For more solempne in every mann's sight
This feste ywas, and greter of costage,
Than was the revell of ther mariage.

Full many' a yere in high prosperite
Livin these two in concord and in rest, 2150

And richely his doughtir mariid he
Unto a Lorde, one of the worthiest
Of all Itale, and than in pece and rest
His wif's faðir in his courte he kepte;
Tille that his soule out of his body crepte;

His sonne succedith in his heritage;
In rest and pece, aftir his faðir's day,
And fortunate was eke in mariage,
Alle put he not his wife in grete assay.
This worlde is not so stronge, it is no nay; 2160
As it hath ben in oldè timis yore,
Then herkenith what the Antour saith therefore.

This storie is not faide that wivis sholde
Followe Grisilde in her humilite,
For it were importable, though thei wolde,
But for that every wight, in his degre,
Sholde be constaunt in alle adversite,
As was Grisildis, whereof Petrarke writeth
This storie, whiche with high style he enditeth.

For sith a woman was so patient 2170
Unto a mortalle man, welte more we ought
Receve all in gre that God hath us sente,
For with grete skille he previth what he wrought,
But he ne temptith no man that he bought,
As saith Sainct Jame, if ye his Pistle rede,
He previth folke all day, it is no drede:

And suffrith us, as for our exercise,
With the sharpe scourgis of adversite
Full ofte to be betin in sondrie wise,
Not for to knowe our wille, for certis he 2180
Ere we were borne yknewe alle our frailte,
And for our best is alle his governaunce,
Let us then live in vertuous suffraunce.

But one worde herk'nith, Lordinges, ere ye goe,
It were full harde to findin now adayes
In alle a toun Grisildis thre or two,
For if that thei were put to soche assayes,
The Golde of them hath now so bad alayes,
With Brasle, that though the Kithe be faire at eye,
It woldin rathir brast atwo than plie. 2190

For which here for the Wif's love of Bathe,
Whose Life and Seet Almighty God maintene
In high maistry, or ellis were it skate,
I wolde with lustie herte bothe freshe and grene
Say you a Songe, to gladdin you I wene,
And let us stintin of earnest matere,
Herk'nith my Songe, that saith in this manere.

L'envoy de Chaucer à les Mariz de nostre temps.

Grisilde is dede, and eke her pacience,
And bothe at onis buried in Itale,
For whiche I crie in opin audience 2200
No weddid Man be so hardie to' assaie
His wif's pacience, in hope to finde
Grisildis, for in certaine he shall faile.

O noble wivis, full of hie prudence!
Let no humilite your tonguis naile,
Ne let no Clerke have cause ne diligence
To write of you a storie of mervaile,
As of Grisildis pacient and kinde,
Lest Chiceface you swallow' in her entraile.

Followeth Echo, that holdith no silence,
 But evir answereth at the Countre taile,
 Beth not adassid for your innocence,
 But sharply take on you the governaile,
 Emprintith well this lesson on your mind;
 For common profite sith it may availe,

Ne drede them not, do them no reverence,
 For though thine husbonde armed be in maile,
 The arrowes of thy crabbid eloquence
 Shalle perce his herte, and eke his adventaile;
 In jelousie I rede The thou him binde, 2220
 And ye shalle make him couche as doth a quail.

If you be faire, thier folke ben in presente
 Shewe thou thy visage, and thy apparaile,
 If thou be foule, be fre of thy dispence;
 To get The frendis aye do thy travaile,
 Be aye as light of chere as lefe on linde,
 And let him care, and wepe, and wring, and waile.

2210 Ye archwivis stondith at your defence;
 Sith ye be stronge as is a grete camaile;
 Ne suffir not that men don you offence; 2230
 Ye slendir wivis, feble in bataile,
 Beth eygre' as any Tiger is in Inde,
 Aye clappith as a mille, I you counsaile.

Here endeth the Clerke of Oxenford's TALE.

~~~~~

Here foloweth the Wordes of our Hoste.

His worthie Clerke whan endid was his Tale,
 Our Hoste saide and swore by Cockis bones,
 Me levir were than a barrell of Ale
 My wife at home had herd this Legend ones;
 This is a gentle tale for the nones,
 As to my purpose, wistè ye my wille,
 But thing that wolde not be, let it be stille. 2240

Here followeth the FRANKLEIN'S PROLOGUE.

HE oldè gentill Britonis in ther days
Of diverse Aventoures madin ther layes,

*The Right Honourable the Earl of Oxford's
MS begins with our Host's words as above, and goes on—*

- [“ I have a wife, although that pore she be,
“ Yet hathè she an hepe of vicis, lo!
“ For of her tongue a verry shrew is she,
“ For to my wille the contraire woll she doe,
“ There is no force; let alle soche thingis goe;
“ But wit ye what, in counseile be it seide,
“ Me rewit fore that I am to her reide.
“ Sir Frankleine, commitich nete, if your will be, 2250
“ Sey us a Tale, as y' are a Gentilman;
“ It shalle be done trewly, mine Hoste, qd he,
“ I woll you tell as shortly as I can,
“ Holde me excused, though I unworthie am

“ To telle a tale, but I wolde nought rebelle
“ Aynst your wille, a tale now wolde I telle.]

Rymedin first in ther owne Briton tongue,
Whiche Layis with ther instruments thei songe,
Or ellis redin 'hem for ther plesaunce,
And one of them have I in remembraunce, 2260
Whiche I shalle saye as welle as ere I can.
But Sires, because I am a borell man,
At my beginning first I you beseeche,
Havith me excusid of my rude speche.
I lernid nevir Rhetorike certeine,
Thing that I speke it mote be bare and pleine.
I nevir slepte on th' Mount of Parnassio,
Ne lernid Marcus Tullius Cicero;
Coloures ne knowe I none, withoutin drede,
But soche coloures as growin in the mede, 2270
Or ellis soche as men dye with, or peynre,
Coloures of Rhetorike ben to me queint,
My spirite felith nought of soche matere,
But if ye lust, my Tale shullin ye here.

The FRANKLEIN's TALE.

Aurelius after much labour and cost bestowed to win the Love of Dorigen, another Man's Wife, is content in the end, through the good dealing of her and her husband, to lose both his labour and cost. The scope of this Tale seemeth to be a contention of Courtesy.

IN Armorike, that clepid is Britaine,
 There was a Knight, that loved, and did his paine
 To servin a Ladie in his beste wife,
 And many' a labour, many' a grete emprise
 He for his Ladie wrought, ere she was wonne;
 For she was one the fayrist under Sonne, 2280
 And eke thereto comin of high kinrede,
 That welle unnethis durst this Knight for drede
 Telle her his woe, his paine, and his distresse:
 But at the last, she for his worthinesse,
 And namily for his meke obeysaunce,
 Hath soche a pite caught of his penaunce,
 That privily she felle of his accorde,
 To take him for her husbonde, and her Lorde;
 Of soche Lordship as men have ore ther wives.
 And for to lode in the more blisse ther lives, 2290
 Of his fre-wille he swore her as a Knight,
 That nevir in his life, ne day ne night,
 Ne sholde he take upon him no maistry
 Ayenst her wille, ne kith her jelousie,
 But her obeye, and folowe' her wille in alle,
 As any Lovir to his Ladie shalle:
 Save that the name of Sovereignty,
 That wolde he have, for shame of his degre.
 She thonkith him of his grete humblenesse,
 And seide, Sir, sith of your gentilnesse 2300
 Ye profrid me to have so large a raine,
 Ne wolde God nevir betwixtin us twaine,
 As in my gilte, were outhir werre or strife,
 Sir, I wolbe your true and humble wife,
 Have here my trouthe, till that my herte breste,
 Thus ben thei both in quiet and in rest.
 For one thing, Siris, safely dare I seye,
 That frendis everich othir must obeye,
 If that thei longe will holdin cumpany.
 Love wolbe not be constreynid by maistry: 2310
 Whan maistry cometh, the God of Love anon
 Betith his winges, and farewell, he is gon.
 Love is a thing as anie spirite fre,
 Wymen of kinde desirin liberte,
 And not to be constreynid as a thralle,
 And so done men, if I the sothe say shalle.
 Loke whoso that most pacient is in love,
 He is at his advauntage alle above,
 Pacience is an high vertue certeine,
 For it vanquishith, as these Clerkis seine, 2320
 Thingis, that rigour nevir shalle attaine.
 For every worde men may not chide or plaine,
 Lernith to suffir, or, so mote I gone,
 Ye shalle it lerne, whethir ye wolbe or none.
 For in this worlde certeine no wight there is,
 That he ne dothe or saithe sometime amis.
 Ire, sikenesse, or constellacioun,
 Wine, woe, or chaunging of complexioun,
 Causith fulle ofte to done amis or speken,
 On every wronge a man may not be wroken. 2330
 Astir the time must be the temperaunce
 To every wight, that can of governaunce;
 And therefore hath this wise and worthie Knight
 To live in ese suffraunce to her behight,
 And she to him full wisely eke gan swere,

That nevir sholde there be defaute in her.
 Here may men se humble and wise accorde,
 Thus hath she take her servaunte and her Lorde,
 Servaunte in love, and Lorde in mariage,
 Then was he bothe in Lordship and servage; 2340
 Servage? nay, but in Lordship alle above,
 Sith he hath bothe his ladie and his love,
 His ladie certis and his wife also,
 The whiche that law of londe accordith to.
 And whan he was in this prosperite,
 Home with his wife he goth to his contre,
 Nat ferre fro Denmarke there his dwelling was,
 Whereas he livith in joie and solas.
 Who couth ytelle, but he that weddid be,
 The joie, the ese, and the prosperite, 2350
 That is betwixte an husbonde, and a wife?
 A yere and more lastid this blisfull life,
 Till that this Knight, of whiche I speke of thus,
 That of kinrede was cleped Arveragus,
 Shope him to gone, and dwelle a yere or twaine
 In Englonde, that tho clepid was Britaine,
 To seke in armis worship and honour,
 For alle his luste he sette in soche labour,
 And dwellid there two yere, the boke saithe thus.
 Now wolbe I stinte of this Arveragus, 2360
 And speke I wolbe of Dorigen his wife,
 That loved her husbonde as her hert's life;
 And for his absence wepith she and siketh,
 As done these noble wivis, whan 'hem liketh.
 She mournith, wakith, fastith, and sore plaineth,
 Desire of his presence her so constreineth,
 That alle this wide worlde sette she at nought.
 Her frendis, which that knewe her hevie thought,
 Comfortin her in alle, that ere thei may,
 Thei prechin her, and telle her night and day, 2370
 That causeless she slayith her selfe, alas!
 And every comfort possible in this caas
 They done to her, with all ther besinesse,
 And alle to make her leve her hevinesse.
 By processe, as ye knowin everich one,
 Men mowin so longe gravin in a ston,
 Tille some figure therein imprintid be;
 So longe han they comfortid her, till she
 Recevid hath by hope and by resoun
 The' imprinting of her consolacioun, 2380
 Through whiche her grete sorowe began to' as-swage,
 She may not alway dure in soche a rage.
 And eke Arveragus in alle this care
 Hath sente her letteres home of his wellfare,
 And that he wolbe come hastily againe,
 Or ellis had this sorowe her herte slaine.
 Her frendis sawe her sorowe gan to' aslake,
 And prayed her on ther knees, for Godd's sake,
 To come and romin in ther cumpany,
 Away to drivin her derke fantasie; 2390
 And finally she grauntid that request,
 For welle she sawe it was alle for the beste.
 Now stondith her Castill fast by the See,
 And oftin with her frendis walkid she,
 Her to disportin on the bankis high,
 Whereas she many shippes and bargis sie,
 Sailing

Sailing ther course whithre them liste to goe,
 But yet was that a parcell of her woe,
 For to her selfe full ofte alas! said she,
 Is there no ship, so many as I fe, 2400
 Wolle bringin home my Lorde? than were my herte
 Warishid of these bitter painis smerte.
 Anothir time she woldin sitte and thinke,
 And caste her eyin downwarde fro the brinke,
 But whan she saw the grisly rockis blake,
 For verrey fere so wolde her herte quake,
 That on her fete she might not her sustene;
 Than wold she sitte adoune upon the grene,
 And pitoussly into the See beholde,
 And saye right thus with sorowfull sighes colde, 2410
 Eternalle God! that through thy purveyaunce
 Ledist the worlde by certaine governaunce,
 In idle, as men saine, ye nothing make,
 But, Lorde, these grisly fendly rockis blake,
 That seme rathir a foule confusioun
 Of werke, than any faire creatioun
 Of soche a parfite God, wise, and full stable,
 Why have ye wrought this werke unresonable?
 For by this werke Northe, Southe, Weste, ne Este,
 There n'is yfstrid man, ne birde, ne beste; 2420
 It dothe no gode, to my witte, but annoyeth,
 Se ye not, Lorde, how it mankinde destroyeth!
 An hundrid thousande bodys of mankinde
 Have rockis slaine, alle be thei not in minde.
 Sin mankinde is so faire parte of thy werke,
 That thou it madist like to thine owne merke,
 Than semid it ye had a grète cherte
 Towarde Mankinde; but how then may it be
 That ye soche menis make it to destroyen,
 Which menis don no gode, but evre' annoyen? 2430
 I wote welle, Clerkis wolde saine as 'hem leste,
 By argumentes, that alle is for the beste,
 Though I ne cannot welle the causis knowe;
 But thilke God, that made the winde to blowe,
 Ay kepe my Lorde, this is my conclusioun,
 To Clerkis let I alle this disputatioun.
 But I wolde God that alle these rockis blake
 Were sonkin into Helle for his sake:
 These rockis do so sle my herte for fere!
 Thus wolde she saye with many' a pitous tere. 2440
 Her frendis sawe it was for no disporte
 To romin by the See, but discomforte,
 And shapin 'hem to playin somewhere elles,
 They ledin her by riveres, and by welles,
 And eke in other placis delectables
 Thei daunce and playin at chefs and at tables.
 So on a day, right on the morowe-tide,
 Unto a gardin, that was there beside,
 In whiche that thei had made ther ordinaunce
 Of vitailles, and of othir purveyaunce, 2450
 Thei gon, and playin 'hem all the longe day.
 And this was in the first morowe of Maye,
 Whiche Maye hath paintid, with his softè shoures
 This gardin full of levis and of floures:
 And crafte of mann'is honde so curiously
 Arayid had this gardin right nobly,
 That nevir was there gardin of soche price,
 But if it were the verrey Paradise!
 The odour of the floures, and the freshe sight
 Woldin have made any pensife herte light, 2460
 That ere was borne, but if to grete sikenesse
 Or to grete sorowe helde it in distresse.
 So fulle it was of beaute with plesaunce!
 Anon astir dinner gan thei to daunce,
 And singe also, save Dorigen alone,
 Whiche made alweye her complainte and her mone,
 For she ne sawe him on the daunce ygo,
 That was her husbonde, and her love also.
 But natheless she must her time abide,
 And with gode hope letin her sorowe slide. 2470

Upon this daunce, amongis othir men
 Dauncid a Squyir before Dorigen,
 That freshe ywas, and jollie of arraye,
 As to my dome, as is the monthe of Maye.
 He singith, dauncith, passing every man,
 That is or was sithin the worlde began.
 Therewith he was, if men sholde him describe,
 One of the bestè faring men on live,
 Yonge, stronge, and vertuous, and riche, and wise,
 And welle beloved, and holdin in grete prife; 2480
 And shortly if the sothe I tellin shalle,
 Unwitting of this Dorigene at alle,
 This lustie Squyir, servaunte to Venus,
 Whiche that yclepid was Aurelius,
 Had lovid her beste of any cature,
 Two yere and more, as was his aventure,
 But nevir durste he telle her his grevaunce,
 Withoutin cupp dranke he all his penaunce.
 He was dispairid, nothing durste he saye,
 Save in his songis somewhat wolde he wraye 2490
 His woe, as in general complaining?
 He saide, he loved, and was beloved nothing.
 Of which matere madin he many layes,
 Songis, Complaintes, Roundeles, and Verilayes,
 How that he durstin not his sorowe telen,
 But languishith as dothe a fende in Heile,
 And dye he must, he saide, as did Echo
 For Narcissus, that durste not telle her woe;
 In othir manir than ye herde me saye,
 Ne durste he not to her his woe bewraye, 2500
 Save peradventure sometime at dauncis,
 There yonge folke kepyn ther observauncis,
 It may welle ben he lokid on her face,
 In soche a wise as men that askin grace.
 But nothing wiste she of alle his entente,
 Nathelesse it happid ere that thei thence wente,
 Becausin that he was her nigh neighbour,
 And was a man of worship and honoure,
 And she had knowin him of timis yore,
 Thei fallin in speche, and so more and more 2510
 Unto his purpose drewe Aurelius,
 And whan he sawe his time, he seide thus.
 Madame, qd he, by God that this world made,
 So that I wiste that I might your herte glade,
 I wolde that day that your Arvyragus
 Went ore the See, that I Aurelius
 Had gon there, I sholde nevir come againe,
 For welle I wote my service is in vaine!
 My guerdon n'is but breffing of my herte,
 Madame, ruth upon my painis smerte, 2520
 For with one worde ye may me sle or save,
 I lere at your fore God wolde that I were grave,
 I have as now no lesire more to feye,
 Have mercie, swete, or ye wolde do me deye.
 She gan to loke upon Aurelius,
 Is this your wille, qd she, and say you thus?
 Nevir erst, qd she, wiste I what ye mente,
 But now, Aurelius, I knowe your entente,
 By thilke God, that gave me soule and life,
 Ne shalle I nevir be an untrew wife, 2530
 In worde, ne werke, as ferre as I have witte,
 I wille be his to whome that I am knitte,
 Take this for small answeere as from me.
 But astir this in pleye thus saidin she,
 Aurelius, qd she, by God above,
 Yet wolle I grauntin you to be your love,
 (Sith I se you so pitoussly complaine)
 Loke what daye that endlong to Britaine
 Ye remeve alle the rockis stene by stene,
 That thei ne lettin ship ne bore to gone, 2540
 I saye whan ye have made the coste so clene
 Of rockis, that there is no stene yfene,
 Than wolle I love you best of any man,
 Have here my trouthe, in alle that ere I can.

Is there none othir grace in you, qð he?
 No by that Lorde, qð she, that makid me,
 For welte I wote, that it shall nere betide,
 Let soche folie out of your herte aslide.
 What deinty sholde a man have in this life
 For to goe love anothir mann's wife?
 That hath her bodie, whan so that him liketh.

Aurelius fulle oftin forely siketh.
 Woe was Aurely, whan that this he herde,
 And with a sorowfull chere he answerde,
 Madame, qð he, this were impossible,
 Then mote I dye on sodaine dethe horrible,
 And with that worde he turnid him anone.

Tho come her othir frendis everichone,
 And in the alleys romid up and doune,
 And nothing wiste of this conclusioun,
 But sodainly began to revell newe,
 Tille that the brighte sunne had losse his hewe,
 For the Horison had refte the sunne his light
 (This is as moche to faye, that it were night)

And home thei gon in joie and in solas,
 Save only wretched Aurelius, alas!
 He to his house is gone with sory herte,
 He said he might not fro his dethe asterte,
 Him semith that he felith his herte colde,
 Up to Hevin his hondis gan he holde,
 And on his knees bare he set him adoun,
 And in his raving said this orisoun,
 For very wo out of his witte he braide,
 He ne wist what he spake, but thus he saide,
 With pitous herte his plainte hath he begonne,
 Unto the goddes, and first unto the sonne
 He said: Apollo God, and governour
 Of every plante, and herbe, and tre, and floure,
 That yevest after thy declination

To ilke of hem his time and his ceson,
 As thine herberow chaungith low and hie,
 Lord Phœbus, cast thy merciable eye
 On wretched Aurelius, which am but lorne,
 Lo lorde, my lady hath my deth isworne
 Withoutin gilt, but thy benignite
 Upon my dedely hert have some pite;
 For wel I wot, lorde Phœbus, if ye leste,
 Ye may me helpin save my lady beste,
 Now vouche ye save that I may you devise,
 How that I maye be holpen, and in what wise.

Your blisful sustir Lucina the shene,
 That of the See chese Goddesse is and Quene,
 Though Neptunus hath deite in the see,
 Yet Emperers abovin him is she,
 Ye knowin wel lord, right as her desire
 Is to be quickened and lighted of your fire,
 For whiche she foloweth you full besily,
 Right so the see desirith naturally
 To folowin her that is the goddesse
 Both of the see, and rivers more and lesse.
 Wherefore, lorde Phœbus, this is my request,
 Do this miracle, or do mine hert brest,
 That now next at this opposicion,
 Whiche shall be in the signe of the Lion,
 As prayith her so grete a flode to bringe,
 That five fadome at leste it ovispringe
 The highest rocke in Armorike Britaine
 And let this flodde endurin yeris twaine,
 Than certis to my lady may I say,
 Holdith your hest, the rockis ben away.
 This thing may ye full lightly don for me,
 Pray her to gon no fastir course than ye,
 I say thus, praye your sustir that she go
 No fastir course than ye in yeris two,
 Than shalle she be at evin full alweye,
 And springe flode shall be lasting night and dey;
 And but that she vouchsafe in fuche manere
 To grauntin me my soveraine lady dere,

Pray her to sinkin every rocke adoun
 Lowe into Helle her own derke regioun 2620
 Undir the ground, there Pluto dwellith in,
 Or nevir more shall I my lady win.

Thy temple' in Delphos, wolle I barefote seke,
 O Lorde Phœbus, se the teres on my cheke,
 And on my paine have some compassioun;
 And with that worde in swoune he fel adoun,
 And longe time he thus lay in a traunce.
 His brothir, which that knew of his penaunce,
 Up caught him, and to bedde hath him ybrought;
 Dispeyrid in thus turment and this thought 2630
 Now lette I thus this woful cature lye,
 Chese he for me whethre' he wolle live or dye.

Arviragus with hele and grete honour
 (As he that was of chivalry the flour)
 Is comin home, and othir worthy men,
 O blisful art thou now Dame Dorigen,
 That hast thy lusty husbonde in thine armes,
 That freshe knight, that worthy man of armes,
 That lovith The, as his own hert's life,
 Nothing list him to be imaginatise 2640
 If any wight had spoken (while he was out)
 To her of love, therof had he no dout,
 He nought entendith to no soche matere,
 But dauncith, justith, and makith gode chere.
 And thus in joy and blisse I let hem dwell,
 And of wofull Aurelius wol I tell.

In langour and in turmente dispitous,
 Two yere and more, lay wretched Aurelius,
 Er any fote on erth he mightin gone,
 Ne comfort in this time ne had he none, 2650
 Save of his brother, whiche that was a clerke,
 He knewe of al this wo, and al this werke,
 For unto none othir creature certain
 Of this matere, ne durst he no worde sain,
 Undir his brest he bare it more secre
 Than Polyphemus did for Galathe,
 His brest was hole withoutin for to fene;
 But in his hert aye was the arrowe kene,
 And well ye knowen, that of a surfanure,
 In surgery, is perilous the cure, 2670
 But men might touch the arow', or come thereby.

His broðir waylith for him privily,
 Til at the last him fel in remembraunce
 That while he was at Orliaunce in Fraunce
 (As these yonge clerkis that ben likerouse)
 To redin artis that ben curious
 Sekin in every halke and every herne
 Perticuler sciencis for to lerne,
 He him remembrid that upon a deie
 At Orliaunce in studie' a boke he seie 2680
 Of Magike naturell, which his felawe,
 That was that time a bachelor of lawe,
 All were he there to lerne an othir craft,
 Had privily upon his deske ilast,
 Whiche boke spake of mochill operacions
 Touching the foure and twentie Mansions
 That longin to the Mone, and soche folie,
 As in our dayis is not worth a flie,
 For holy church fayith in our bileve,
 He suffrith non illusion us to greve,
 And whan this boke was in his remembraunce, 2690
 Anon for joie his harte began to daunce,
 And to himself he sayid privily
 My brothir shall be warished hastily,
 For I am sikir there be sciencis,
 By whiche men make divers aparesces,
 Soche as these sotill tregetoris plaie,
 For oft at festis have I well herd saie,
 That tragetors, within an hallè large,
 Have made to come in watir and a barge, 2700
 And in the hallè rowin up and down,
 Somtime hath semid come a grim Lioun,

And

And somtime flouris spring as in a mede,
Somtime a vine, and grapis white and rede,
Somtime a castill alle of lime and stone,
And whan 'hem likid, voidin 'hem anon,
Thus semid it to every mann's sight.

Now than conclude I thus, if that I might
At Orliaunce some'old felawe yfinde,
That had this Mon's Mansions in minde, 2710
Or othir Magike naturall above,
He should wel make my brothir have his love.
For with an apparaunce a clerke maie make
To mann's sight, that all the rockis blake
Of Britain, wer ivoidid everichone,
And shippis by the brinke to come and gone,
And in soche forme endure a yere or two,
Than wer my brothir warished of his wo,
Than must she nedis holdin her bihest,
Or ellis he shall shame her at the lest.
What should I make a lengir tale of this?
Unto his brother's bedde he comin is,
And soche comfort he yave him for to gon
To Orleunce, that he up stert anon,
And on his waie than is he forth ifare
In hope for to ben lessid of his care.

Whan thei wer come almost to that cite,
(But if it were a two forlong or thre)
A yong clerke roming by himself thei met,
Whiche that in Latin thristily 'hem gret,
And astirward he saied a wondir thing,
I knowe, q'ð he, the cause of your coming,
And ere thei farthir any fote ywente,
He told 'hem all that was in ther entent.

This Briton clerke askid him of felawes,
The whiche he had yknowen in oldè dayes,
And he answerid him, that thei dedde were,
For whiche he wepte full many a salt tere.

Donne of his horse Aurelius light anon,
And with this Magicien forth is he gon 2740
Home to his house, and made him well at ese,
'Hem lackid no vitaille that 'hem might plesse.
So well araied an hous as there was onc
Aurelius in his life sawe nevyr none.

He shewid him, or he went to suppere,
Forestes and parkis, full of wildè dere,
There sawe he hartis with ther hornis hie,
The gretist that were evir sene with eye,
He sawe of 'hem an hundrid slayn with houndes,
And sum of arowes bled with bittir woundes, 2750
He sawe, whan voidid were the wildè dere,
These fauconers, upon a faire rivere,
That with the haukis han the Heron slaine.

Tho sawe he knightis justing in a plain,
And after this he did him soche plessaunce,
That he him shewed his lady in a daunce,
On whiche himself ydauncid as him thought.
And whan this maistir, that this magike wrought,
Sawe it was time, he clapped his hondis to,
And farewell our revell, all was ago. 2760
And yet remeved thei nor out of the house,
While that thei sawe all this sight merveilous,
But in his studie, there his bokis be,
Thei satin still, and no wight but thei thre.

To him this maistir callid his squiere,
And saied him thus, is redy our suppere?
Almoste an houre it is, I undertake,
Sin I you bad our supper redy make,
Whan that these worthy men ywent with me
Into my studie, there my bokis be. 2770

Sir (q'ð the squier) whan it likith you
It is all redy, though you woll right now.

Go we suppe than, q'ð he, 'tis for the beste,
These amorous folke sometime mote have rest.

And astir suppir fell thei in trete,
What summe shoulde this maister's guerdon be,

To remeve all the rockis of Britain,
And eke fro Garumne to the mouth of Saine.

He made it strange and swore so God him save,
Lasse than a thousand pound wold he not have, 2780
Ne gladly for that somme nolde he it doen.

Aurelius with blisfull herte anon
Answerid thus: Fie on a thousande pound
This widè worlde, whiche that men saie is round,
I would it yeve, if I were lorde of it,
This bargain is fuldrive, for we be knit,
Ye shall be payid truely by my trowth,
But loke now for no negligence or slouth
Ye staye us here no lengir than to morowe;

Naie, q'ð this clerke, have here my faithe to borowe.
To bedde is gon Aurelius whan him lestè,
And well nie all that night he had his rest,
What for his labour, and his hope of blisse,
2790 His wofull herte of penaunce had a lisse.

Upon the morowe, whan that it was daie,
To Britainwarde toke thei the rightè waie,
Aurelius, and this Magicine beside,
And ben discendid there thei would abide,
And this was, as the boke doeth me remember,
In the cold frostie ceson of December. 2800

Phebus waxed old, and hewed ilike Laton
That afore in his hote exaltation
Shone as the brenning gold, with stremis bright,
2730 But now in Capricorne adoun he light,
Whereas he shone full pale, I dare well sain;
The bitter frostis with the flete and raine
Destroyid hath the grene in every yerde,
Janus sit by the fire with double berde
And drinkith of his bugle horne the wine,
Biforn him stont braune of the tuskid swine 2810
And Nowell singith every lustie man.

Aurelius, in all that evre' he can
Doeth to this maistir chere and reverence
And prayith him to doen his diligence
To bringin him out of his painis smerte,
Or with a sward that he would slit his herte.

This sotill clerke soch routh hath on this man,
That night and daie he spedde him that he can
To waite a time of his conclusoun,
This is to saie, to make illusioun, 2820
Or soche an apparence, or jogelrie,

I ne can no termes of Astrologic,
That she and every wight should wene and saie,
That of Britain the rockis wer awaie,
Or els thei werin sonke undir the grounde,
Till at the last he hath his time ifound
To make his japis and his wretchidnesse
Of soche a superstitious cursidnesse
His Tablis Tolitanis forth he broughte,
Full well correctid, him ne lackid nought 2830
Neither his Collect, ne his Expans yeres,
Neither his Rotis, ne his othir geres,
As ben his Centris, and his argumentes,
And his Proporcinnell Convenientes

For his Equacions in every thing,
And by his eight Speris in his werking
He knew ful well how far Alnath was shove
Fro the' hedde of thilke fixe Aries above,
That in the ninth Spere considerid is,
Full subtilly he' had calculid all this, 2840

And whan he had found his first Mansion,
He knewe the remnaunt by proportion,
And knewe the rising of the Monè wele,
And in whose face, the terme, and every dele,
And knewe also his othir observaunces,
For soche illusions, and soche mischaunces
As Hethin folke usid in thilkè daies,
For whiche ne makid he no lenge delaies,
But through his magike, for a weke or tway,
It semed that all the rockis wer away. 2850

Aurelius,

Aurelius, whiche that dispeirid is,
Whithir he shall have his love, or amis,
Awaitith night and daie on this miracle,
And whan he knewe there was non obstacle,
But that voidid were these rockes everichon,
Doun to the maistir's fete he fell anon,
And saied, I wofull wretche Aurelius
Thanke you my lorde, and lady mine Venus,
That me hath holpen fro my caris cold,
And to the temple' his waie forth hath he hold, 2860
Where as he knewe he should his lady se,
And whan he sawe his time, anon right he
With dredfull hertè, and with humble chere
Saluid hath his soverain lady dere.

My rightfull lady (qð this wofull man)
Whom I bothe serve and love, as I best can
And lothest wer of all this worlde displese,
N'ere it that I for you have soche disese,
That I must die here at your fete anon,
Nought would I tel how wo is me begon, 2870
But certis either must I die or plain,
Ye flea me giltyesse for very pain,
But of my deth, although ye have no routh,
Avisin you, er that ye breke your trouth,
Repentith you, for that ilke God above,
For ye flea me, bicause that I you love,
For madame, well ye wote that ye have hight,
Not that I challenge any thing of right
Of you my soverain lady, but of grace,
But in a gardin yonde, in soche a place, 2880
Ye wote right wel what thingye behight me,
And in my hondè there your trouth plight ye,
To love me best, God wote ye sayid so,
Albeit that I worthy am thereto,
Madame, I speke for the honour of you,
More than to save my hert's life right now,
I have doen right as ye commaundid me,
And if ye vouchsafe, ye mai go and se,
Doeth as you list, havith your hest in minde
For quicke or ded, right there ye shall me finde, 2890
In you lieth all to doe me live or deie,
But well I wote the rockis ben aweie.

He toke his leve, and she astonied stode,
In all her face there n'as a droppe of blode,
She wenid nere to come in soche a trappe,

Alas (qð she) that evir this should happe,
For wende I nere by possibilite
That soche a mistir or marvaile might be,
It is against the processe of nature;
And home she goeth a sorowfull cature
For very fere unnethis maie she go,
She wepith and wailith a daie or two,
And swounith, so that it was routh to se,
But why it was to no wight toldin she,
For out of toun was gon Arviragus,
But to her self she spake, and sayid thus
In her complaint, as ye shall astir here,
With visage pale, and with sorowfull chere.

Alas (qð she) on The, fortune, I plain,
That unaware hast wrappid me in thy chain, 2910
Fro whiche to escape, wot I no socour,
Save only deth, or els grete dishonour,
One of these two behovith me to chese,
But natheles, yet had I levir to lese
My life, than of my body to' have a shame,
Or knowe my self false, or lesin my name,
And with my dethe I maie be quit I wis,
Hath there not many' a noble wife er this,
And many' a maide, islain her self alas!
Rathir than with her body doen trespas! 1920
And certis, lo! these stories ben witnesse,
Whan thurrie Tyrautes, full of cursidnesse,
Had slain Phidon, in Athenes at the feste,
Thei commaundid his doughtirs to arest,

And bringin 'hem beforne 'hem in dispite
All nakid, to fulfill ther foule delite,
And in ther fa'x'is blode thei made 'hem daunce
Upon the pavement, God yeve them mischaunce,
For which these wofull maidins full of drede,
Rathir than thei wolde lese ther maidinhede, 2930
Thei privily ben stert into a well,
And drent 'hemselvis, as the bokis tell.

Thei of Messene let enquire and seke
Of Lacedæmon fiftie maidins eke,
On which thei would have doen ther lecherie,
But there was none of all that companie
That she n'as slain, and with a glad entent
Chese rathir for to dien, than for to' assent
To ben oppressed of her maidinhede,
Why should I than to dyin ben in drede? 2940

Lo! eke the tyraunt Aristoclides
That loved a maid that hight Simphalides,
Whan that her fathir slain was on a night,
Unto Diana's temple goth she right,
And hent the image with her armis two,
And fro the image wolde she nevir go,
No wight might fro it her hondis arace
Till she was slain right in the self same place.

Now sithnes that maidins had soche dispite
To ben defoulid with manns foule delite, 2950
Well ought a wife rathir her self to fle,
Than be defoulid, as it thinkith me.

What shall I say of Hasdrubal's wife?
That at Cartage biraft her self her life,
For whan she sawe the Romanes wan the toun,
She toke her childrin all, and lept adoun
Into the fire, and chese rathir to die,
Than any Roman did her vilanie.

Hath not Lucrece islain her self, alas!
At Rome; for that there she oppressed was 2960
Of Tarquine, for her thought it was a shame
To livin, whan that she had lost her name.

The eight maidins of Melesie also
Han slain 'hemselfe for very drede and wo,
Rathir than folk of Gaule should 'hem oppresse.

More than a thousande stories, as I geise,
Couth I now tell as touching this matere.

Whan Abradate was slain, his wife so dere
Her self yslowe, and let her blode to glide
In Abradat's woundis, brode and wide, 2970
And saied, my body at the lestè waie
There shall no wight defoule if that I maie.

What should I mo ensamplis hereof sain?

Sin that so many han 'hemselvin slain,
Well rathir than thei would defoulid be,
I woll conclude that it is best for me
To fle my self than be defoulid thus;
I wolle be true unto Arviragus,
I woll my selvin fle in some manere,
Right as did Democen's doughtir dere, 2980
Bicause that she ne wolde defoulid be.

O Sedasus, it is full grete pite,
To redin how thy doughtirs didn', alas!
That slown 'hemself for soche a manir caas;
As grete a pite was it, or well more,
The Theban maidin, that for Nichanore
Her selvin slewe; right for soche manere wo
Anothir Theban maidin did right so,
For one of Macedone had her oppressed,
She with her dethe her maidinhede redressed. 2990

What shall I sain of Nicerat's wife,
That for soche case biraft her self her life?

How true was eke to Alcibiades
His love, that for to dyin rathir chese,
Than let his bodie ungravid to be!

Lo! whiche a wife was Alceste! (qð she)
What saith Homere of gode Penelope?
All Grece yknowith of her chastite.

Of Laodamia is writtin thus.
That whan at Troie was slain Protefelaus,
No lengir n'olde she live after his daie.

The same of noble Portia tell I maie,
Withouten Brutus couth she nevir live,
To whome she haddin all her herte ygive.

The parsite wifhode of Artemisy
Honourid is, throughout all Barbary.

Oh Thenta Quene, thy wifely chastite
Unto all wivis maie a mirrour be.

The same thing I saie of Bilia,
Of Rhodogune, and eke Valeria.

Thus plainid Dorigene a daie or tweie,
Purposing evir that she wouldè deie,
But nathelès upon the thirde night
Home came Arviragus, the worthie knight,
And askid her why that she wept so fore,
And she gan wepe evir lengir the more.

Alas (qð she) that evir I was borne!
Thus have I said, (qð she) thus have I sworne,
And told him all, as ye have herde before,
It nedith not reherse it any more.

This husbond with glad chere in sondry wif
Answerd and saied, as I shall you devise,
Is there aught els, my Dorigene but this?

Naie naie (qð she) God helpe me so as wis,
This is to moche, and it were Godd'is will.

Ye wif (qð he) let slepin that is still,
It maie be well peraventure to daie,
Ye shallin your trouthe holdin by my saie,
For God so wisly have mercie on me,

I had well levir stickid for to be,
For very love whiche that I to you have,
But that ye sholdin your trouthe kepe and save,
Trouthe is the hyest thing that men may kepe,
But with that word he braist anon to wepe,
And saied, I you forbid on pain of dethe,
That nevir whiles you lastith life or brethe
To no wight tell of this misaventure,
As I maie best I woll my wo endure,

Ne make no countenance of hevinessè,
That folke of you maie demin harme, ne gessè.
And forth he clepid a squier and a maide,
Goth forth anon with Dorigene he saied,
And bringith her in soche a place anone.

Thei toke ther leve, and on ther waie thei gone,
But thei ne wistin why she thiðir went,
She n'olde no wight ytellin her entent.

Peraventure an hepe of you, I wis,
Will holdin him a leude man in this,
That he wolde put his wife in jeopardie,
Herk'nith the Tale er ye upon him crie,
She may have bettir fortune than you semeth,
And whan that you have herde the Tale, demeth.

This squier, whiche that hight Aurelius,
On Dorigene, whiche was so amorous,
Of aventure happid her for to mete
Amid the tounce, right in the maistir strete,
As she wouldin have gon the waie forth right
Toward the gardin, there as she had hight,
And he was to the gardinward also,
For well he spyid whan that she would go
Out of her hous, to any manir place,
But thus thei met of aventure or grace,
And he saluith her with glad entent,
And askid of her whiðir that she went.

And she answerid half as she wer mad,
Unto the gardin, as my husbond baddè,
My trouthe for to holdin, alas alas!

Aurelius gan wondrin of this caas,
And in his herte had gret compassion
Of her chere, and her lamentacion,
And of Arviragus the worthy knight,
That bad her holdin all that she had hight,

3000 So loth he was that she should breke her trouthe,
And in his herte he caught of it grete rounth,
Considering the best on every side,
That fro his lust wer him bettir abide,
Than doe so hie a churlishe wretchidnessè
Ayenst fraunchise, and ayenst gentilnessè,
For whiche in fewè wordis saied he thus.

Madame, saiech to your lorde Arviragus, 3080
That sithin I se this grete gentilnessè
Of him, and eke I se well your distresse,
That him were levir shame, (and that were rounthe)
Than that ye to me sholdin breke your trouthe,

I have well levir evir suffir wo,
Than departin the love betwixt you two;
I you relese madame, into your honde
Quite every surement, and every bonde,
That ye have made to me, as here biforne, 3090
Sithens thilke time that ye werin borne,
My trouthe I plight, I shall you ne repreve
Of no behest, and here I take my leve
As of the truest and the bestè wifè,
That evir yet I knewe in all my life,
But every wight beware of ther bihest,
On Dorigene remembrith at the lest;
Thus can a squier doen a gentill dede,
As well as can a knight, withoutin drede.

She thonkid him upon her knees all bare,
And home unto her husbonde is she fare, 3100
And told him all, as ye han herd me saied,
And be ye sikre, he was so well apaied,
That it were impossible me to write.

What should I lengir of this case endite?
Arviragus, and Dorigene his wifè
In soverain blisse ledin forth ther life,
Ne was there angir evir 'hem betwene,
He cherished her, as though she wer a Quene,
And she was to him true for evirmore,
Of these two folkes ye get of me no more. 3110

Aurelius, that his cost hath all forlorne
Curfid the time that evir he was borne;
Alas! (qð he) alas! that I beheight
Of purid gold a thousandè pound of weight
To this Philosopher, how shall I doe?

I se no more, but that I am fordoo,
Mine inheritaunce mote I nedis sell,
And ben a beggir, here maie I not dwell,
And shamin all my kinrede in this place,
But I of him maie get some bettir grace. 3120

But nathelès I wolde of him aslaie
At certain dayis yere by yere to paie,
And thonkin him of his grete curtesie,
My trouthe right woll I kepe, I woll not lie.

With sorie herte he goth to his coffer,
And broughtin gold unto the Philosopher,
The value of five hundrid pound I gessè,
And him besechith of his gentilnessè
To grauntin him daies of the remenaunt,

And saied: maistir I dare well make avaunt 3130
I failid nevir of my trouthe as yet,
For sikerly my debt shall well be quit
Towardis you, how that evir I fare

To gon a begging in my kirtell bare,
But would ye vouchsafe upon suerte
Two yere or thre for to respitin me,
Than were I well, for ellis mote I sell
Mine heritage, there is no more to tell.

This Philosopher sobirly answerde
And seide thus, whan he his wordis herde, 3140
Have I not holdin covenant to The?

Yes certis, well and truily (qð he)
Hast thou not had thy lady as The liketh?
No no (qð he) and sorily he siketh.

What was the cause, tell me if that thou can?
Aurelius anon his tale began,

And told him all as ye han herd bifore,
It nedith not reherce it any more.

He faied Arviragus of gentilnes
Had levir die in sorowe and distresse, 3150
Than that his wife werin of her trouthe false,
The sorowe of Dorigene he told him als,
How loth she was to ben a wicked wife,
And that she had levir have lost her life,
And that her trouth she swore through innocence,
She never erst herd speke of apparence,
That made me have of her so grete pite,
And right as frely as he sent her me,
As frely sent I her to him again ;
This is all and some, there n'is more to fain. 3160

The Philosopher answerd, levè brother,
Everiche of you did gentilly to other,

Thou art a squier, and he is a knight,
But God forbid it, for his blisful might,
But if a clerke could doen a gentill dede
As well as any' of you, it is no drede.

Sir I relese to The thy thousande pounce,
As now thou werin crope out of the ground,
Ne never er now haddist knowin me, 310
For sir, I woll not takin a peny,
For all my craft, ne nought for my travaile,
Thou hast ipaied right well for my vitaile,
It is inough, farewel and have gode daie,
And toke his horse, and rode forth on his waie.

Lördinges this question would I aske now,
Whiche was most franke and fre, as thinkith you?
Now tellith me, er that I ferthir wende,
I can no more, my tale is at an ende.

Here endith the FRANKLEIN's TALE.

Here

Here beginneth the Second Nonne's PROLOGUE.

THE Minister and Norice unto vices
Which that men clepe in English idlenesse,
That Porter of the gate is of delices,
To' eschue, and by her contrair' her op-
presse,

That is to saine, by lefull besinesse,
Welle oughtin we to doen alle our entent,
Lest that the Fende through idlenesse us hent.

For he that with his thousande cordis slie
Continually us waitith to beclappe,
Whan he maie man in idlenesse espie,
He can so lightly cache him in his trappe,
Till that a man be hent, right by the lappe,
He n'is not ware the fende hath him in hond,
Well ought us werche, and idlenesse withstond.

And though men dreddin nevir for to die,
Yet se men well by reson doutilef;
That idlenesse is rote of flogardie,
Of which ther comith nevir gode ences,
And sith that sloth holdith 'hem in a lees,
Onely to slepe, and for to ete and drink,
And to devourin all that othir swinke.

And for to put us from soche idelnesse,
That cause is of so grete confusion,
I have here doen my faithfull besinesse,
Aftir the Legende in translacion
Right of thy glorious life and passion,
Thou with thy garlond wrought with rose and Lily,
The mene I, maide and martir saint Cecily.

And thou that flowir art of virgins all,
Of whom that Bernard list so well to write,

To The at my beginning first I call,
Thou comfort of us wretchis, do me' endite
Thy maidins deth, that whan through her merite
The eterne life, and of the fende victorie,
As men maie after redin in her storie.

Thou maide and mothir, doughtir of thy sonne,
Thou Welle of mercie, sinfull soul's cure,
In whom that God of bounte chese to wonne,
Thou humble' and hie ore ev'ry cature,
Thou noblist, so ferre forthe ovir nature, 40
That no disdain thy makir had of kinde
His sonne in blode and fleshe to clothe and winde.

Whiche in the cloistre of thy blisfull sidis
Toke mann's shape, the eterne love and pees,
That of the trine compas Lorde and guide is,
Whom heaven, yerth, and se, withoutin les
Aie heryin, and thou virgine wemles
Bare of thy body', and dwellist maidin pure,
The creatour of ev'ry cature.

20 Assemblid is in The magnificence, 50
With mercie, godenes, and with soche pite,
That thou that art the sonne of excellence
Not only helpist 'hem that prayin The,
But oftin time of thy benigne
Full frely, or that men thine helpe besече,
Thou goest before, and art ther liv'is leche.

Now help thou blisfull, and meke, and faire maide,
Me flemid wretche, in this desert of gall,
Thinke on the woman of Canane, that saied
That whelpis etin some of the crommes finall 70
That from ther Lord's table ben ifall,

And

And though that I unworthy childe of Eve
Be sinfull, yet acceptith my beleve.

And for that faith is ded withoutin werkis
So for to werchin yeve me witte and space,
That I be quit from the place that most derk is,
O thou that art so faire and full of grace,
Be thou mine advocate in that hie place,
There as withoutin ende is song Ofanna,
Thou Christ's mothir, and doughtir of Anna.

And of thy light my soule in prison light,
That troublid is by the contagion
Of my body, and also by the wight
Of yerthly lust, and false affeccion,
O haven of refuge, O salvacion
Of them that ben in sorowe and distresse,
Now helpe, for to my werke I woll me dresse.

Yet I praie you, that redin that I write,
Foryeve me, that I doe no diligence
This ilke storie subtilly to endite,
For both have I the wordes and the sentence
Of them that at the sainct's reverence
The storie wrote, and folowen her legende,
And praie you that ye wol my werke amende.

First woll I you the name of sainct Cecily
Expoune, as men maie in her storie se,
It is to saie in Englishe, hevin's lilly,
For the pure chastnes of virginite,
Or for the whiteness had of honeste,
And grene of conscience, and of gode fame

The sote favour, Lilly was her name.

Or Cecily's is to saie, the waie to blinde,
For she ensample was by gode teching,
Or els Cecily, as I writtin finde,
Is joynid by a manir conjoigning
Of heven and Lia, in her figuring.
The heven is set for thought of holinesse,
And Lia, for her lasting besinesse.

Cecily maie be saied in this manere
Wanting of blindnes, for her gretè light
Of sapience, and for her thewis clere,
Or ellis Lo! this maidin's namè bright
Of heven and Leos cometh, of which by right
Men might the hevin of people her call,
Ensamble of gode and wise werkis all.

For Leos peple' in Englishe is to saie,
And right as men maie in the hevin se
The Sunne, and Mone, and sterris every waie,
Right so men ghostly in this maidin fre
Sawen of faith the magnanimite,
And eke the clrenes hole of Sapience,
And sondrie werkis bright of excellence.

And right so as these Philosophers write
That hevin is swift, round, and eke brenning,
Right so was faire Cecilia the white
Full swift and besie in every gode working,
And round and hole in gode perseveryng,
And brenning evre' in charite full bright;
Now have I declarid you what she hight.

Here endeth the Second NONNE's PROLOGUE.

The Second NONNE's TALE.

HIS maide Cecily as her Legend saieth,
Was come of Romans, and of noble kinde,
And from her cradle fostrid in the faith
Of Christe, and bare his Gospell in her minde,

She nevir cessid, as I writtin finde,
Of her prayir, and God to love and drede,
Beseeching him to kepe her maidinhede.

And whan this maidin should unto a man
Iweddid be, that was full yong of age,
Which that iclepid was Valerian
And daie was comin of her mariage,
She full devout and humble' in her corage
Undir her robe of gold, that fat full faire,
Had next her fleshe iclad her in an heire.

And whiles that the organs made melodie,
To God alone thus in her herte song she,
O Lorde, my soule and eke my body gie
Unwemmed, lest that I confoundid be,
And for his love, that died upon a tre,
Every second or thirde day did she faste,
Aye bidding in her orisons full faste.

The night camin, and to bed must she gone
With her husbonde, as ofte is the manere,
And privily she said to him anon,

O swete and wel bylovid spouse dere,
There is a counsaile, and ye wol it here,
Which that right faine I wold unto you saie,
So that ye me sware, it not to bewraine.

Valerian gan fast unto her swere
That for no case, ne thing that mightin be
He should nevir to none bewraien her,
And than at laste thus unto him sayed she,
I have an angel, whiche that lovith me
That with gret love, where so I wake or slepe,
Is redy aye, my body for to kepe.

And if that he may felin out of drede
That ye wolle you govern nothing amis,
He wolle you save and kepe till you be dede,
For your clene living, and for your godenesse,
And bringe you streightway unto heavenly blifs,
He wolle you love as me for your cleneness,
And shewe you of his joie, and his brightness.

Valerian, correctid as God wolde
Answerd ayen, if I shal trustin The,
Let me that aungel se, and him beholde,
And if that it a very aungel be,
Than wol I done as thou hast prayid me,
And if thou love anothir man forsothe
Right with this sword than wol I sle you bothe.

Cecily

Cecily answerd anon in this wise,
If that ye lust, that Angel shul ye se,
So that ye trowe on Christ, and you baptise;
Goth forth to Via Appia (qð she)
That from this toun ne stant but milis thre;
And unto the pore folkis that there dwell
Say 'hem right thus, as I shallin you tell.

Tell 'hem that I Cecile, you to 'hem sende
To shewin you the gode Urban the olde,
For secret nedis, and for gode entent,
And whan that ye saint Urban han beholde, 190
Tel him the wordis, that I to you tolde,
And whan that he hath purgid you fro sinne,
Than shal ye se that Angel er ye twiinne.

Valerian is to that place igoñ,
And right as him was taught by her lerning,
He found this holy man Urban anon
Among these saintis burials louting;
And he anon, withourin tarying,
Did his message, and whan he had it tolde,
Urban for joy, gan his hondis up holde.

The teris from his eyin let he fall,
Almighty God, O Jesu Christ (qð he)
Sowir of chaste counsaile, hierde of us all;
The frute of thilke fede of chastite
That thou hast sowe in Cecile, take to The;
Lo! like a besy bee, withoutin gile
The servith evir thine owne thral Cecile.

For thilke spouse, that she ytoke but newe
Ful like a fierse Lion, she sendith here
As meke as any lambe was to the ewe;
And with that word, anon there gan apere 210
An olde man, clad in white clothis clere,
That had a boke of golde letters in honde,
And gan biforne Valerian for to stond.

Valerian as dedde fel down for drede,
Whan he this olde man saw standing so,
And on his boke right thus he gan to rede,
O Lord, O Faith, O God withoutin mo
Of Christendome, and fathre' of al also,
Above al, and ovir al every where,
These wordis al with Gold ywrittin were.

Whan this was rad, than said this olde man,
Levisti thou this or none, say ye or nay,
I leve al this thing (qð Valerian)
Under the hevin no wight ne thinke may
A sothir thing than this, I dare well say.
Tho vanisid the olde man, he n'ist where
And pope Urban him christenid right there.

Valerian goth home, and saint Cecily
Within his chambir with an Angel fonde, 230
This aungel had of rose and of lillye
Corounis two, the whiche he bare in honde,
And first to Cecile, as I undirstonde,
He yave that one, and after gan he take
That othir to Valerian her make.

With body clene, and with unwemmid thought
Kepith aye wel these corounis (qð he)
From paradise to you I have 'hem brought,
Ne nevir more shallin they rottin be,
Ne lesin ther swete savour, trustith me,
Ne nevir wight ne shalle 'hem se with eye,
But he be chaste, and hate alle vilonie.

And thou Valerian, for thou so sone
Assenteddist to gode counsaile also

180 Say what you list, and thou shalt have thy bone;
I have a brothir (qð Valerian tho)
That in this world I lovin no man so,
I pray you that my brothir may have grace
To know the trouth, as I do in this place.

The angel sayed, God likith your request 250
And you both with the palme of martirdom
Yshallin come unto the blisfull feste,
And with that worde Tiburce his brothir come
And whan that he the savour undernome,
Whiche that the rosis and the lilies caste,
Within his hert he gan to wondir faste.

And said: I wondir this time of the yere
Whence that this sote savour comith so
Of rosis and lilies, that I smell here,
For though I had them in mine hondis two, 260
The savour might in me no depir go,
The swete smel, that in mine hert I finde,
Hath chaungid me al in anothir kinde.

Valerian said, two coronis have we
Snowe white and rose red, that shinith clere,
Which that thine eyin han no might to se,
And as thou smellist 'hem through my praierc,
So shalt thou sene 'hem my leve brothir dere,
If it so be that thou wilt without flouthe
Bileve aright, and know the very trouthe. 270

Tiburce answerid, saicst thou this to me
In sothnesse, or in dreme herkin I this?
In dremis (qð Valerian) han we be
Unto this time, brother mine, iwis;
But now at erst, our dwelling in trouth is. 210
How wost thou (qð Tiburce) and in what wise?
Qð Valerian, that I shal The devise.

The angel of God hath me the trouth taught,
Which thou shalt sein, and thou wilt reney 280
The idols, and be clene, or ellis naught.
Of the miracles of these crounis twey
Saint Ambrose in his preface lust to sey,
Full solempnely this noble doctour dere
Commendith it, and faith in this manere.

The palme of martirdom for to receive,
Seint Cecily, fulfillid of God's yeste,
The world and eke her chambre gan she weive,
Witness Tiburce's, and Cecil's shifte,
To which God of his bounte woldin shifte 290
Corounis two, of flouris wel smelling,
And made the angel 'hem the corounis bring.

The maid hath brought 'hem to the blisse above,
The world hath wist what it is worth certain
Devocion and chastite to love. 230
Tho shewed him Cecile all opin and plaine
That al idollis ben but thingis vain,
For they ben dombe, and thereto they ben dese,
And chargid him his idoles for to lese.

Who that this trowith not, a beste he is,
(Qð this Tiburce) if that I shall not lie.
And she gan kisse his breste, whan she herde this, 300
And was ful glad he couth the trouthe espie,
This day take I The as for mine allie,
Saide this blisful maidin faire and dere,
And astir that she said, as ye may here.

Lo right so as the love of Christ (qð she)
Made me thy brother's wife, right in that wise
Anon for mine aye here take I The,
Sithins that thou thine idoles wolt despise,
H h

Go with thy brother now, and The baptise, 310
And make The clene, so that thou maist beholde
The angel's face, of which thy brothir tolde.

Tiburce answerde, and said: my brothir dere,
First tell me whethir shall I? to what man?
To whome, q<sup>d</sup> he? come forth with right gode chere,
I wol The lede unto the pope Urban.
To Urban? brothir mine Valerian,
(Q<sup>d</sup> this Tiburce) wilt thou me thi<sup>d</sup>ir lede?
Me thinkith that it were a wondir dede.

Ne menist thou not Urban (q<sup>d</sup> he tho)
That is so oftin dampnid to be dede,
And wonnith aye in halkis to and fro,
And dare not onis puttin forth his hede?
Men shouldin him brenne in a fire so rede
If he were founde, and men might him espie,
And we also, that bere him companie.

And while we seken thilke divinire,
That is ihidde in hevin privily,
Algate ibrent in this world shoud we be.
To whom Cecily answerid boldely, 330
Men mightin drede, right wel and skilfully
This life to lesin, mine owne derè brother,
If this were living oncly and non other,

But there is bettir life in othir place,
That nevir shal be losse, ne drede The nought,
Which Godd's Son to us told through his grace,
That Father's Sonne hath all thingis ywrought,
And al that wrought is with a skilfull thought,
The Gost, that from the fathir gan procede,
Hath fullid him withoutin any drede. 340

By word and by miracle, Godd's Sonne,
Whan he was in this worlde, declarid here,
That there is othir life there men may wonne.
To whom answerd Tiburce: O sustir dere,
Ne saidist thou right nowe in this manere,
There n'as but one God lorde in sothfastnesse,
And now of thre how may you bere witnessè.

That shal I tel (q<sup>d</sup> she) or that I go;
Right as man hath sapiencis thre
Memory, engine, and intellectu also, 350
So in suche beyng of divinire
Thre personis may there right wel ybe;
Tho gan she there full besily him preche
Of Christ's sonne, and of his painis teche.

And many pointis of his passion,
How Godd's Sonne in this worlde was witholde
To doin mankind plaine remission,
That was ybounde in sinns and caris colde;
Al these thingis she unto Tiburce tolde;
And aftir this Tiburce in gode entent . 360
With Valerian to pope Urban went,

That thonkid God, and with glad hert and light
He christenid him, and made him in that place
Persite in his lerning, as Godd's knight,
And aftir this Tiburce ygate suche grace,
That every day he saw in time and space
The' Angel of God, and every manir bone
That he God askid, it was sped ful sone.

It were fulle harde by ordir for to faine
How many wondirs Jesu for him wrought,
But at the last, to tellin shorte and plaine,
The Sergeantis of the toun for hem fought,
And hem before Almache the Prefect brought,
Which hem aposed, and knew al ther entent,

And to the Image of Jupiter hem sent.

And said, whoso wol do no sacrifice
Swappe of his hede, this is my sentence here.
Anon these martirs, that I you devise,
One Maximus, that was an officere
Of the Prefect's, and his Corniculere, 380
'Hem hent, and when he forth the saintis lad,
Himselfe he wepte for pite that he had.

Whan Maximus had herd these saintis lore,
He gate hem of the turmentouris leve,
And had hem to his house withoutin more,
And with ther preching, er that it were eve
Thei gan fro the turmentouris to reve,
And fro Maxime, and fro his folke echone,
The false faith, to trowin in God alone.

Cecily came, whan it was woxin night, 390
With priestis, that hem christenid al in fere,
And aftirward, whan day was woxin light,
Cecily saied hem with a sobir chere,
Now Christ's own knightis both leve and dere,
Castith away the werkis of derknesse,
And armith you in armour of brightnesse.

Ye han forsoth idone a great bataile,
Your cours is run, your faith hath you conserved,
Goth to the croune of life that maie not faile,
The rightful juge, whiche that ye han yferved, 400
Shal yeve it you, as ye have it deserved,
And whan this thing was said, as I devise,
Men lad hem forth to done the sacrifice.

But whan they were unto the place ybrought,
To tellin shortly the conclusioun,
They n'olde ensence, ne sacrifice right nought,
But on ther knees they fatin hem adoun,
With humble herte and sad devocion,
And lostin bothe ther hedis in the place,
Ther soulis went unto the king of grace. 410

This Maximus, that sawe the thing betide,
With pitouse teris tolde it anon right,
That he ther soulis sawe to hevin glide
With aungels full of clerenesse and of light, 350
And with his word convertid many a wight,
For whiche Almachius did him so bere
With whippes of lede, till he his life gan lete.

Cecile him toke, and buried him anon
By Tiburce and Valerian sothly, 420
Within her burying place under a stone,
And aftir this Almachius hastily
Bad his ministers fetchin opinly
Cecile, so that she might in his presence
Do sacrifice, and Jupiter encence.

But they convertid were at her wise lore,
And weptin full fore, and yave full credence
Unto her worde, and cridin more and more
Christ Godd's Sonne, withoutin difference
Is very God, this is alle our sentence,
That hath a servaunt so gode him to serve, 430
Thus with o voice we trow in though we sterve.

Almachius, that herde all this doying
Bad fetchin Cecile, that he might her se,
And alderfirst, lo! this was his asking,
What manir woman arte thou (q<sup>d</sup> he)
I am a gentill woman borne (q<sup>d</sup> she)
I aske of The (q<sup>d</sup> he) though it The greve
Of thy religion and of thy beleve?

Ye have begon your question folishly,
(Q<sup>d</sup> she) that wolde two answeris conclude 440
In one demaunde, ye asken leudily.
Almachius sayed to that similitude
Of whence comith thine answering so rude?
Of whence (q<sup>d</sup> she?) whan that she was yfrained,
Of conscience, and of gode faith unfained.

Almachius said, ne takist thou none hede
Of my powir? and she him answerde this,
Your might (q<sup>d</sup> she) ful litill is to drede,
For every mortall mann's power n'is,
But like a bladdir full of winde, iwis, 450
For with a nedl's point, whan it is blowe,
May al the boste of it be laide full lowe.

Full wrongfully begannist thou (q<sup>d</sup> he)
And yet in wrong is thy perseveraunce,
Wolt thou not how our mighty Princis fre
Have thus commaundid and made ordinaunce,
That every christin wight shal have penaunce,
But if that he his christendome withsey:
And gon al quite, if he wol it reney?

Your Princis errin, as your Nobles dothe, 460
Q<sup>d</sup> tho Cecily, in a wode sentence,
Ye make us giltly, and it is not sothe,
For ye that knowen wel our innocence,
For as muche as we done a reverence
To Christ, and for we bere a christin name,
Ye put on us a crime and eke a blame.

But we that knowin well thilke namè so
For vertuous, we may it not withsey.
Almachius answerd, chese one of these two,
Do sacrifice, or christendome reney, 470
That thou mowe now escapin by that weye.
At whichè worde the holy blisful maide
Gan for to laugh, and to the judge she saide,

O judge confusid in thy nicete,
Wolt thou that I reney my innocence,
To makin me a wickid wight (q<sup>d</sup> she)?
Lo! he dissimulith here in audience
He stareth and woddith in his advertence.
To whom Almachius said: O fely wretche
Thou wotist not how far my might may stretche. 480

Have not our mighty princis to me yeven
The yest of powir and authority,
To makin folke to dyin, or to liven?
Why spekest thou so proudly than to me?
I speke it not but stedfastly (q<sup>d</sup> she)
Not proudly, for I say as for my side,
That we hatin dedely thilke vice of pride.

And if thou drede not a sothe for to here,
Than wol I shewe all opiny by right, 490
That thou hast made a full grete lesing here,
Thou saist thy princis han yeve The the might
Both for to fle and eke to quicke a wight,
Thou ne mayist but only lyve bireve,
Thou hast non othir powir ne no leve.

But thou maist say, thy princis han The maked
Minister of dethe, for if thou speke of mo,
Thou lyist, for thy powir is full naked;
Do way thy boldnesse, saide Almachius tho,
And sacrifice to our goddes, er thou go,
I ne recke not what wrong thou me proffer 500
For I can bere it, as a philosopher,

But thilkè wrongis may I not endure,
That thou spekest of our gods here (q<sup>d</sup> he.)
Cecily answerid, O nice creture,
Thou saidist no worde sin thou spake to me,
That I ne knewe therwith thy nicete,
And that thou were in every maner wise
A leude officer, and a vaine justice.

The lackith nothing to thine utter cye
That thou n'art blind, for thing that we sene all 510
That is a stone, that men well may aspien,
That ilkè stone, a God thou wolt it call,
I rede The let thine hond upon it fall,
And cast it wel, and stonè thou shalte it finde,
Sens that thou seest not with thyn eyin blinde.

It is a grete shame that the peple shall
So scornè The, and laugh at thy folye,
For cominly men wot it well ore all,
That mighty God is in his hevins hye,
And these ymages wel maiste thou aspie 520
To The ne to 'hemselfe may not profite,
For in effect they be not worth a mite.

These and suche othir wordis saidin she,
And he woxe wroth, and bad she should be lede
Home to her house, and in her house (q<sup>d</sup> he)
Brennin her in a bathe, with flamis rede;
And as he bad, right so was done the dede,
For in a bathe they gan her fast to shete,
And night and day grete fire undir they bete.

Al the long night, and eke the day also 530
For al the fire, and eke the bath's hete,
She sat al colde, and felt of it no wo,
It made her not a droppè for to swete,
But in that bath her life she mote ylete:
For Almachie, with ful wicked entent,
To fle her in the bathe, his sonde he sent.

Thre strokis in the necke he smote her tho
The turmentour, but for no manir chaunce
He might not smitin al her necke a two,
And for there was that time an ordinaunce, 540
That no man do no person such penaunce,
The fourthe stroke to smite ne softe ne fore,
This turmentour durst smitin her no more.

But halfe dede, with her necke ycorvin there,
He left her lye, and on his way he went;
The christen folke which that about her were,
In thetis home full faire thei han her hent,
Thre dayis livid she in this turmente,
And never cessid she the faith to preche,
That she was foltrid in, and them to teche. 550

And 'hem she yave her meubles and her thing,
And to the pope Urban betoke 'hem tho,
And sayd, I askid this of hevin's king,
To have respite thre dayis and no mo,
To recommaunde to you er that I go
These soulis, lo! and that I might so werche
Here of mine house perpetuelliche a cherche.

Saint Urban with his Dekins privily
The body fette, and buried it by night, 560
Among his other saintis honestly,
Her house the church of saint Cecily hight,
Saint Urban halowed it, as he well might,
In whiche unto this day, in noble wise,
Men don to Christ, and to his santes servise.

Here beginneth the PROLOGUE of the Chanon's YEMAN.

WHAN endid was the life of saint Cecile,
 Er we fully had riddin fivè mile,
 At Boughton under blec usgan o'retake
 A man, that clothid was in clothis blake,
 And undir that he ware a white surplise,
 570 His hakney, that was all pomily grise,
 So swette, that it a wondir was to se,
 It semid he had prickid milis thre ;
 The horse eke that his yoman rode upon
 So swette, that unnerthis mightin he gon ;
 About the paytrell stode the some full hyc,
 He was of fome as fleckid as a pye ;
 A wallet twifolde on his cropir lay,
 It semid that he caried lite aray,
 Al light for somir rode this worthy man,
 And in my hert to wondrin I began
 580 What that he was, till that I undirstode
 How that his cloke was sewid to his hode,
 For whiche, when I had long avisid me,
 I demid him some Chanon for to be.
 His hatte hing at his backe doune by a lace,
 For he had riddin more than trot or pace,
 He rode aye pricking as he werin wode,
 A clote lese he had laide under his hode
 For swette, and for to kepe his hede fro hete,
 But it was mochill joye to se him swete,
 590 His forehede droppid, as a stillatory
 Were ful of plantaine or of pellitory,
 And whan that he was come, he gan to crie,
 God save (qð he) this joly company,
 Fast have I prickid (qð he) for your sake,
 Bicause that I woldin you ovirtake
 To ridin in this mery company.
 His yoman was eke ful of curtisfy

And saidè, fires, nowe in the morowe tide
 600 Out of your hosterie I saw you ride,
 And warnid here my lorde and foveraine
 Whiche that to ridin with you is ful faine
 For his disporte, he lovith daliaunce.
 Frend, for thy warning God yeve The gode chaunce,
 Then said our host, certaine it woldin seme
 Thy lorde were wise, and so I may wel deme,
 He is ful joconde also dare I laye,
 Can he ought tell a mery tale or twaye
 With whiche he gladin may this companie?
 610 Who, sir? my lorde? Yea sir withoutin lie,
 He can of mirth and eke of jolite
 Not but inough ; also sir, trustith me,
 And ye him knewe al so well as do I,
 580 Ye wold wondir how wel and thriftily
 He couth ywerke, and that in sondry wise,
 He hath take on him many' a grete emprise ;
 Whiche were ful harde for any that is here
 To bringe aboute, but they of him it lere.
 As homely as he ridith amonge you,
 If ye him knew, it wold ben for your prowte, 620
 Ye woldin not forgon his acquaintaunce,
 For mochill gode I dare lay in balaunce,
 All that I have in my possession,
 590 He is a man of hie discreffion,
 I warne you wel he is a passing man.
 Wel (qð our hoste) I pray The tel me than
 Is he a clerke or non? tell what he is.
 A clerke? nay greter then a clerke, iwis,
 Saidè the yoman, and in wordis fewe
 Hoste, of his craste somewhat wol I The shewe. 630
 I say my lorde can suche a subtilte
 But al his craft ye may not wete of me,

(And

(And somewhat helpe I yet to his werching,
That all the grounde that we be on riding
Til we be com to Canterbury tounē;
He coude al clene yturnin up and dounē,
And pave it al of silvir and of golde.

And whan this yoman hadde thus itolde
Unto our hoste: he saide benedicite!
This thing is wondir mervailous to me,
Sens that thy lorde is of so hie prudence,
(Bycause of whiche, men shuld him reverence)
That of his worship reckith he so lite
His overist flospe is not worth a mite
As in effecte to him, so mote I go,
It is al bawdy, and to rore also.
Why is thy lorde so slottish I The pray
And is of powir bettir clothes to bey,
If that his dede accordith with thy speche?
Tellin me that, and that I The beseeche.

Why (qð this yeman) wherto aske ye me?
God help me so, for he shal never the,
But I wol now avowin that I saie,
And therefore kepe it secret I you praie,
He is to wise in fay, as I beleve,
And that is ovidone n'il nevir preve,
And right as clerkis saie, it is a vice,
Wherfore I holde him, in that, leude and nice;
For whan a man hath ovir grete a wit,
Ful ofte it happith him to misuse it:
So doth my lorde, and that me grevith fore,
God amende it, I can say you no more.

Therof no force gode yeman (qð our host)
Sens of the conning of thy lord thou wost,
Tel howe he dothe, I pray The hertily,
Sens that he is so crafty and so fly,
Wher dwellin ye, if it to tell ybe?

In the suburbis of a tounē (qð he)
Lurking in hernis and in lanis blinde,
Wheras the robbers, and thevis by kinde
Holdin ther privy fearful residence,
As they that dare not shewin ther presence;
So fare we, if that I shal say the soth.

Yet, qð our hoste, let me talkin to Th',
Why art thou so discoloured in thy face?

Peter (qð he)? God gevith sory grace,
I am so used in the hote fire to blowe,
That it hath chaunged my colour as I trowe,
I am not wont in no mirrour to prie,
But to swinke fore, and lerne to multiplie,
We blondrin evir, and pore in the fire,

And for al that, we faile of our desire,
For evir we lacken our conclusion,
To much folke we ben but illusion,
And borowe gold, be it a pounde or two,
Or ten or twelve, or many summis mo,
And makin hem to wene at the lest way
That of a pound we couldē makin tway;
Yet is it false, and aye han we gode hope
It for to done, and aftir it we grope.

But that science is so ferre us bisorne
We mowe not although that we had it sworne
It ovirtake, it flyt away so fast,
It wol us makin beggers at the last.

Whiles this yeman was thus in his talking
This Chanon drewe him nere, and herd al thing
Whiche this yeman spake, for suspicion
Of mennis speche evir had this Chanon,

For Cato saith, that he that gilty is
Demith al thing he spoke of him, iwis,
Bicause of that, he gan so nighe to drawe
To his yeman, to herkin al his sawe.

And thus he said unto his yeman tho,
Holde now thy pece, and speke no wordis mo,
For if thou do, thou shalte it fore abie,
Thou flaudrist me here in this companie,
And eke discoverest that thou shuldist hide.

Ye (qð our host) tel on what so betide,
Of al this threting recke The not a mite.

In faith (qð he) no more do I but lye.
And whan this Chanon saw it would not be
But his yeman would tel his privite,
He fledde away for very sorowe and shame.

Ha! (qð the yeman) here shall rise a game,
All that I can, anon wol I you tell,
Sens he is gon, the sould fend him quell,
For nevre hereaftir, woll I with him mete
For peny ne for pounde, I you behete;

He that me first broughtin unto that game,
Er that he die, sorow have he and shame;
For it is earnest to me by my faith,

That fele I well, what so any man saith,
And yet for al my sinert and al my grefe,
For al my sorowe, labour and mischefe,
I couldin nevir leve it in no wise;
Now wolde to God my witte mightin suffice
To tellin all that longith to that arte!

But nathel' yet woll I tel you a parte,
Sens that my lord is gon, I wol not spare,
Suche thingis as I know I wol declare.

Here endeth the PROLOGUE of the Chanon's YEMAN.

The Chanon's YEMAN's TALE.

A Priest of London, more covetous than wife, is deceived by a Chanon professing the Art of Alchymye.

WITH this chanon I dwellid seven yere,
And of his science I am nere the nere,
Al that I haddè I have lost thereby,
And God wotte, so hath many mo than I,

There I was wonte to be right freshe and gay
Of clothing, and of other gode aray,
Now maie I were an hofe upon mine hedde;
And where my colour was both fresh and redde
Now it is waime, and of a leaden hewe,
Who so it usith most, sore shall him rue.

And of my swinke, yet blerid is mine eye,
Lo suche avauntage is to multiplie!
That sliding science hath me made so bare,
That I have no gode where that evre' I fare,
And yet I am endettid so thereby

Of gold, that I have borowid truely,
That while I live, I ne shall it quite never;
Let every man beware by me for ever,
What manir man that castith him therto,
If he continue', I hold his thrift ido,
So helpe me God, thereby shall he nere win,
But empte his purse, and make his wittis thin,
And whan he, through his madnesse and folie
Hath lost his owne gode, thorough jeopardie,
Than he exitith othir men thereto
To lese ther gode, as he himself hath doe,
For unto shrewis joye it is and ese
To have ther felawes in pain and disese;
For thus was I ones lernid of a clerke;
Of that no charge, I woll speke of our werke.

Whan we be there, as we shall exercise
Our elvishe craft, we semin wondir wise,
Our termis ben so clergiall and so quainte,
I blowe the fire, till that myne herte faint.

What should I tellin eche proporcion
Of thingis, whiche that we werchin upon?
As on five or sixe uncis, maie well be,
Of silvir, or some othir quantite,
And besie me to tellin you the names
Of Orpiment, brent bonis, yron squames,
That into poudir groundin ben full small,
And in an yerthin potte how put is all,
And salte-peter put in, and als papere,
Bifore these pouders that I speke of here,
And well icovered, with a lampe of glas,
And of moche othir thing which that there was,
And of the pottis and glas englutynge,
That of the aire might passin out nothing,
And of the esie fire and smart also,
Whiche that was made, and of the care and wo
That we had in our matters subliming,
And in amalgaming and calsinig
Of quicksilver, icleped Mercury crude,
For all our sleightis, we can not conclude
Our Orpiment, and sublimed Mercurie,
Our groundid litarge eke on porphitric,
Of eche of these, of uncis a certain,
Nought helpith us, our labour is in vain,
Ne eke our spiritis assencioun,
Ne our matters, that lien all fixe adoun,
Mowe in our working nothing us availe,
For lost is all our labour and travaile,
And all the cost, a twentie devill waie,
Is lost also, whiche we upon it laie.

There is also full many' an othir thing,
That is unto our craft appertaining,
Though I by ordir 'hem ne reherce can,
Bicause that I ne am but a leude man,
Yet woll I tell 'hem as thei come to minde,
Though I ne cannot set 'hem in ther kinde,

750 Viols, croslettes, and sublimatories,
Concurbitis, and alembekis eke,
And othir soche, dere inough of a Lcke;
It nedith not to rehercin 'hem all,
Watirs rubifying, and Bolis gall,
Arsneke, Sal Armoniake, and Brimstone,

And herbis colde I tell eke many one,
820 Egremonie, Valerian, Lunatic,
And othir soche, if that me list to tarie,
Our lampis, brenning bothè night and daie,
To bringe about our craft, if that we maie,
Our sournice eke of calcinacion,

And of watirs albificacion,
Unflekid lime, chalke, and gleire of an eye,
Pouders divers, ashis, dong, pisse, and cleie,
Serid pottis, salt Peter, Vitriole,
And divers friss, made of wode and cole,
830 Sal Tartre, Alcaly, sal preparate,
And combust matters, and coagulate,
Cley made with hors dung, mann'is heere and oile,

770 Of tartre alim, glas, berme, wort, argoile,
Ros algar, and othir mattirs enbibing,
And eke of our mattirs encorporing,
And of our silvir citrinacion,
Our cementing, and fermentacion,
Our yngottis, testis, and many mo.

I woll you tell as was me taught also
The foure spirites, and the bodies seven
By order, as I herd my lorde nemene.

780 The first spirite quicke silvir clepid is,
The second Orpiment, the third iwis
Sal Armoniake, and the fourth Brimstone.

The bodies seven, lo! here 'hem anone,
Sol gold is, and Luna silvir we threpe,
Mars yron, Mercury quicke silvir we clepe,
Saturnus leade, and Jupiter is tinne,
And Venus copir, by my fathir kinne.

850 This cursid craft who so woll exercise
He shall no gode have that maie him suffice,
For all the gode he spendith there about
Hellefin shall, thereof have I no doubt,
Who so that liste to uttir his folie,

Let him come forth and lerne to multiplie;
And every man, that hath ought in his cofer
Let him appere, and wexe a Philosopher,
Askaunce that craft is so light for to lere;
Naie naie God wote, all be he Monke, or Frere,

860 Priest, or Chanon, or any othir wight,
Though he sit at his boke both daie and night,
In lerning of this elvishe nice lore
800 All is in vain; and parde mochill more
Is to lere a leude man this subtelte,
Fie speke not thereof, for it woll not be,
All could he littrature, or could he none,
As in effect, he shall finde it all one,

For

For bothe two, by my salvacion,
 Concludin in multiplicacion
 Iliche well, whan thei havin all ido,
 This is to sain, thei failin bothe two
 Yet forgate I to makin reherfaile
 Of watirs corosife, and of limaile,
 And of bodies molificacion,
 And also of ther induracion,
 Oiles, ablusions, metall fusible,
 To telle you all, would passe any bible
 That o where is, wherefore as for the best
 Of all these namis now wolle I me reste,
 For as I trowe, I have you told inow
 To reise a fende, all loke he nere so row.
 A naie let be the Philosophers stone
 Elixir cleped, we sikin fast echone,
 For had we him, than were we sikre' inow
 But unto God of heven I make avowe
 For all our craft, whan we han all ido,
 And all our sleight, he wolle not come us to,
 He hath us made to spendin mochill gode,
 For sorowe' of whiche, almost we waxin wode, 870
 But that gode hope crepith into our herte,
 Supposing evir, though we sorely smerte,
 To ben relevid of him aftirward,
 Such supposing and hope is sharpe and hard,
 I warne you well it is to sikin ever,
 That future temps hath made men discover
 In trust thereof all that evir thei had,
 Yet of that art thei could not waxin sad,
 For unto them it is a bittir swete,
 So semith it, for n'ad thei but a shere,
 Which that thei might wrappin 'hem in a night,
 And a bratte to walkin in a daie light,
 Thei would 'hem sel, and spend it on this craft,
 Thei con not stinte till nothing be them laste,
 And evirmore, where that evir thei gone,
 Men maie 'hem ken by the smell of Brimstone,
 For all the worlde thei stincken as a Gore,
 Ther favour is so Rammishe and so hore,
 That though a man a mile from 'hem ybe
 The favour wolle enfect him, trustith me. 880
 Lo, thus by smelling, and threde bare aray,
 If that men list, these folke knowin thei maie,
 And if a man wolle aske 'hem privily,
 Why thei be clothid so unthriftilly?
 Right anon thei wolle rowne into his ere,
 And sayin, if that thei espyid were,
 Men wolle 'hem flea, bicause of ther science,
 Lo! thus these folke betrayin innocence.
 Passe ovir this, I go my tale unto;
 Er that the potte be on the fire ido
 Of metalles, with a certain quantite
 My lorde 'hem tempereth, and no man but he,
 Now he is gon, I dare saie boldly
 For as men sain, he can doen craftily,
 Algate I wote well he hath foche a name,
 And yet full oft he rennith in the blame;
 And wote ye how, full oft it happith so,
 The pot to brekith, farewell, all is go,
 These metalles ben of so grete violence,
 Our wallis maie not make 'hem resistence,
 But if thei werin wrought of lime and stone,
 Thei percin so, and through the wall thei gone,
 And some of 'hem sinkin into the ground;
 Thus have we lost by timis many' a ponde,
 And some are scattered all the flore about,
 Some lepen into the rose withoutin doubt,
 Tho that the fende not in our sight 'him shewe,
 I trowe that he with us be, that ilke shrewe
 In hell where that he is both lorde and fire,
 Ne is there no more wo, rancour ne ire,
 Whan that our pot is broke, as I have saied,
 Every man chite, and holte him ill apaied,

Some saied it was long of the fire making;
 Some sayid naie, it was on the blwving,
 Than was I ferde, for that was mine office.
 Straw (q'd the third) ye ben bothe leude and nice,
 It was not temprid as it ought to be.
 Naie (q'd the fourth) stint and herkin to me,
 Bicause that our fire was not made of Beche,
 That is the cause, and for none othir seche, 950
 I cannot tell whereon it is along,
 But well I wot grete strief is us emong.
 What (q'd my lorde) there n'is no more to dopen,
 Of these perilles I wolle beware estfone,
 I am right sikir, that the potte was crased,
 Be as be maie, be ye nothing amased,
 As usage is, let swepe the flore aswithe,
 Plucke up your herte, and be ye glade and blithe.
 The mullocke on an hepe yswepid was,
 And on the flore ycast was a canvas, 960
 And all this mullocke in a Sive ithrowe,
 And sifid and ipluckid many' a throwe.
 Parde (q'd one) somewhat of our metall
 Yet is there here, although we have not all,
 And tho this thing mishappid bath as now,
 An othir time it maie ben well inow.
 We mote puttin our gode in aventure,
 A Marchaunt, parde, maie not aie endure,
 Trustith me well, in his prosperite,
 Somtime his gode is drounid in the see, 970
 And sometime comith safe unto the londe.
 Peace (q'd my lorde) the next time I wol fonde
 To bring our craft all in an othir plite,
 And but I doe sirs, let me have the wite,
 There was default in somewhat, well I wote.
 An othir saied, the fire was ovir hore,
 But be it hore or cold, I dare saie this,
 That we concludin evir more amis,
 We failin of that whiche we woulidin have,
 And in our madnesse evirmore we rave, 980
 And whan we be togither everichone,
 Every man semith wise as Salomon,
 But al thing, which that shinith as the gold,
 Ne is not golde, as I have herde ytolde,
 Ne every appell, that is faire at iye,
 Ne is not gode, what so men clappe or erie.
 Right so lo! farith it emongis us,
 He that semith the wisist by Jesus
 Is mosse sole, whan it comith to the prefe,
 And he that semith truil is a thefe, 990
 That shall ye knowe, er that I from you wende,
 By that I of my tale have made an ende.
 There was a Chanon of Religoun
 Emongis us, wolle enfect all a toun,
 Although it as grete were as Ninive,
 Rome, Alisaundre, Troie, and othir thre,
 His sleightis, and his infinite falsnesse
 There couth no man ywrittin, as I gesse,
 Though that he might livin a thousande yere,
 In all this world of falsnesse n'is his pere, 1000
 For in his termis he wolle him so winde,
 And speke his wordis in so flie a kinde,
 Whan that he commune shall with any wight,
 That he wolle makin him dore anon right,
 But that it a fende be as himself is;
 Full many' a man hath he begiled er this,
 And mo wolle, if that he maie live a while,
 And yet men ride and gone ful many' a mile
 Him for to seke, and have his acquaintance,
 Not knowing ought of his false governaunce; 1010
 And if ye lust to give me audience,
 I wolle it teilin here in your presence.
 But worshipfull Chanons religious,
 Ne demith not that I sleaunders your hous,
 Although that my tale of a Chanon be,
 Of every order some shrewe is parde,

And

And God forbid that all a companie
Should rue a singuler mann's folie;
To flander you is nothing mine entent;
But to correctin that amis is mente,
This tale ywas not only told for you,
But eke for other mo; ye wote well how
That emongis Christ's Aposteles twelve
There was no traitour but Judas himselve.
Than why sholdin the remenaunt have blame
That gillefs were? by you I saie the same;
Save only this, if ye woll herkin me,
If any Judas in your covent be,
Remeveith him betimis, I you rede,
If shame or losse may causin any drede,
And be nothing displeid I you praie,
But in this case herkinith what I saie.

IN London was a Priest Annuellere,
That therein had ydwelt many a yere,
Whiche was so plesant and so servisable
Unto the wife, where that he was at table,
That she would suffir him nothing to paie
For borde ne clothing, went he nere so gaie,
And spending silvir had he right inow;
Thereof no force, in plesauce went his plow,
But for to telle you forthe of this Chanon,
That brought this priest unto confusion.

This false Chanon camin upon a daie
Unto this priest's chambir where he laie,
Beseeching him to lene him a certain
Of gold, and he would quite it him ayen,
Lenith me a Marke (qð he) but daies thre,
At my day I wolle sans faile quite it The,
And if it so be, that thou finde me false,
An other daie than hang me by the halfe.

This priest toke him a marke, and that aswith,
And this Chanon him thankid many sith,
And toke his leve, and went forth on his wey,
And at the third day brought him his money;
And to this priest he toke this gold ayen,
Whereof this priest was wondir glad and fain.

Certis (qð he) nothing anoyith me
To lene a man a noble, two or thre,
Or what thing were in my possession,
Whan he so true is of condicion,
That in no wise he brekin wolle his daie,
To soche a man I can never saie naie.

What qð this Chanon, should I be untrue?
Nay that were a thing fallin of the newe,
Trouth is a thing that I woll ever kepe
Unto the daie, in whiche that I shall crepe
Into my grave, or ellis God forbede,
Belevith this as sikir as your crede,
God thonke I, and in gode time he it saied,
That there n'as never man yet ill apaid
For gold ne silvir that he to me lent,
Ne never falshe in mine herte I ment.

And sir (qð he) now of my privite
Sithin so godelich ye have ben to me,
And kithid to me so grete gentilnesse,
Somwhat, to quite with you your kindnesse,
I woll you shewe, if that ye woll it lere,
(I shalle it shewe to you anon right here)
How I can werchin in Philosophie,
Take gode hede, ye shall it se with your eye,
That I woll doe a maistris or I go.

Yea, qð this priest, yea, Sir, and woll ye so,
Mary therof I praie you hartily.

At your commaundement, sir, truly,
Qð the Chanon, and ellis God forbede;
(Lo how this these ycouth his service beded!)

Full soth it is that such profered servise
Stinkith, as witnesstith the oldè wife,

And that full sone I woll it verifie
In this Chanon, rote of all trecherie,
That evirmore delite hath and gladnesse,
(Soche fendly thoughtis in his herte empreffe)
How Christ's peple he may to mischef bring;
God kepe us from his false dissimuling.

What wist this sely priest with whom he delt?
Ne of his harme comming nothing he felt;
O sely priest! O sely innocent!
With coverise anon thou shalt be bleint;
O gracelesse, and full blind is thy conceite,
Nothing art thou aware of his disceite,
Whiche that this Foxe hath shapin unto The,
His wilie wrenchis thou ne maiest not fle;
Wherefore to go to the conclusion,
That referrith to thy confusion.
Unhappie man, anon I woll me hie
To tellin thine unwitt, and thy folie,
And eke the falsnesse of that othir wretche,
As ferforth as my conning woll ystretche.

This Chanon was my lorde ye woulde wene,
Sir hoste, in faith, and by the hevin's Quene,

It was an othir Chanon, and not he,
That can an hundrid folde more subtilte,
He hath betrayid folke many a time,
Of his falsnesse it dolith me to rime,
And ever whan I speke of his falsheide,
For shame of him, my chekis waxin rede,
Algatis thei beginnin for to glowe,
For rednesse have I none, right well I know,
In my visage, for the fumis diverce
Of metals, whiche ye have herde me reherce,
Consumid and wastid have my rednesse.
Now take hede of this Chanon's curfinesse.

Sir (qð he) to the priest, let your man gon
For quicksilvir, that we had it anon,
And let him bringin uncis two or thre,
And whan he comith, as fast shall ye se
A wondir thing, whiche ye saw nere er this.

Sir (qð the priest) it shall be doen I wis.
He bad his servaunt fetchin him this thing,
And he all redy was at his bidding,
And went him forth, and came anon again
With this quicksilver, shortly for to fain,
And toke these uncis thre to the Chanoun,
And he hem layid well and faire adoun,
And bad the servaunt colis for to bring,
That he anon might go to his werking.

The colis right anon werin ifet,
And this Chanon toke out a crossilet
Of his bosome, and shewed it to the priest,
This instrument (qð he) which that thou seest,
Take in thy hond, and put thy self therin
Of this quicksilver an unce, and begin
In Christ's name to wexe a Philosopher,
There be full fewe, whiche that I would it profer
To shewin hem so moche of my science,
For here shall ye se by experience
That this quicksilver I woll mortife
Right in your sight anon withoutin lie,
And make it as gode silver and as fine
As there is any in your purse or mine,
Or ellis where, and make it malliable,
Or ellis holdith me false and unstable
Emongis folke for ever to appere.

I have a poulder, that cost me full dere;
Shall make all gode, for it is cause of all
My conning, whiche that I you shewin shall,
Voidith your man, and let him be thereout,
And shet the dore, whilis we ben about
Our privite, that no man us espie,
Whiles that we werk in our Philosophie;
All as he bad, fulfillid was in dede,
This ilke servaunt anon out he yede

And

And his maistr ysher the dore anon,
And to ther labour spidily thei gon.

This priest at this cursid Chanon's bidding

Upon the fire right anon set this thing,
And blewe the fire, and besied him full fast,
And this Chanon into this croslet cast

A pouder, I ne wote whereof it was
Ymakid, either of chalke, yearth, or glasse, 1170

Or somewhat ellis was not worth a flie,
To blind with this the priest, and bad him hie/
These colis for to couchin all above

The croslet, in token that I The love,
(Q<sup>d</sup> this Chanon) lo! thine own hondis two
Shall werke all thing that here shall be ydo.

Graunt mercie (q<sup>d</sup> the priest) and was full glad,
And couchid colis, as the Chanon bad,

And while he besy was, this fendly wretche,
This false Chanon, the foulè fende him fetch! 1180

Out of his bosome toke a Bechin cole,
In whiche full subtilly was made an hole,

And therein was put of silver limaile
An unce, and stoppid was withoutin faile
The hole with waxe, to kepe the limaile in.

And undirfondith wele that this false gin
Was not made there, but it was made bifore,

And other thinges that I shall tell you more
Hereafter, which that he had with him brought

Er he came there, to begile him he thought, 1190
And so he did, or that thei went a twinne,

'Till he betrayid him he could not blinne,
It dullith me, whan that I of him speke,

On his falshe, fain wouldin I me wreke,
If I wist how, but he is here and there,

He is so variaunt, he bidith no where.

But takith hede, sirs, now for Godd's love;

He toke his cole, of whiche I spake above,

And in his honde he bare it privily,

And whilis the priest couchid besily 1200

The colis, as I have told you er this,

This Chanon sayid, frende, ye doen amis,

This is not couchid as it ought to be,

But sone I shall amendin it (q<sup>d</sup> he)

Now let me medle therewith but a while,

For of you have I pite, by saint Gile,

Ye ben right hotte, I se well how you swete,

Have here a clothe, and wipe awaie the wete.

And whilis that the priest him wipid has,

This Chanon toke the cole, I shrewe his face, 1210

And layid it above on the midwarde

Of the croslet, and blewe well aftirwarde,

'Till that the colis began fast to brenne.

Now yewith us drinke, q<sup>d</sup> this Chanon then,

Afwith all shall be well I undirtake,

Sit we adoune, and let us mery make.

And whan that this Chanon's bechin cole

Was brent all, the limaile out of the hole

Into the croslet anon fel adoun,

And truly so it must nedes by resoun, 1220

Sens it so evin above couchid was,

But thereof wist the priest nothing, alas!

He demid all the colis yliche gode,

For of the sleight nothing he undirstode.

And whan this Alkamister sawe his time,

Rise up, sir priest, (q<sup>d</sup> he) and stondith by' me,

And for I wote well ingot have I none

Goth walkith forth, and bringith a chalke stone,

For I woll makin it of the same shappe

That an ingot is, if I maie have happe. 1230

And bringe eke with you a bolle or a panne

Full of watir, and ye shall wele se than

How that our befiness shall hap and preve;

And yet for ye shall have no misbeleve

Ne wrong conceite of me in your absence

I ne woll not ben out of your presence,

But go with you, and come with you again.

The chambir dorè, shortly for to fain,

Thei opened and shet, and went forth ther weie, 1240

And forth with 'hem they carryid the keie,

And come ayen without any delaie;

What should I tary all the longè daie?

He toke the chalke, and shope it in the wise,

Of an yngot, as I shall you devise.

I saie he tokin out of his own sleve

A teine of silver, evill mote he cheve!

Which that ne was not but an unce of weight,

And takith hede now of his cursid sleight,

He shope his yngot in length and in brede

Of this same teine, withoutin any drede, 1250

So sily that the priest it not aspide,

And in his sleve again he gan it hide,

And from the fire he toke up his matere,

And into the yngot put with mery chere,

And into the watir vessell he it cast,

Whan that him list, and bad the priest as fast

Loke what there is, put in thin hond and grope,

Thou shalt there findin silvir, as I hope.

What divell of hell should it ellis be?

Shaving of silvir, silvir is parde. 1260

He put in his honde, and toke up a teine

Of silver fine, and glad in every veine

Was this priest, whan he sawe that it was so,

God's blessing, and his mother's also

And all Hallowis, have ye, sir Chanon,

Sayid this priest, and I ther Malison

But and ye vouchsafe for to techin me

This noble craft and all this subtilte,

I woll be yours in all that evre' I maie.

Q<sup>d</sup> the Chanon, yet woll I make assaie 1270

The second time, that ye mow takin hede,

And ben expert of this, and in your nede

An othir daie assaie in mine absence

This discipline, and this craftie science.

Let take an othir unce now (q<sup>d</sup> he tho)

Of quicksilvir, withoutin wordis mo,

And doen therwith, as I have doen er this

With that othir, whiche that now silvir is.

The priest him besiet in all that he can

To doen as this Chanon, this cursid man, 1280

Commamdid him, and fast he blew the fire,

For to come to the effect of his desire.

And this Chanon right in the menè while

All redy was this priest est to begile,

And for a countinaunce in his honde bare

An halowe sticke, take kepe and well beware,

In the end of whiche an unce and no more

Of silvir limaile put was all before

As in his cole, and stoppid with waxe wele

For to kepe in his limaile every dele. 1290

And whiles this priest was in his besinesse

This Chanon with his sticke gan him adresse

To him anon, and his poudir cast in

As he did erst (the devill out of his skin

Him turne, I praie to God, for his falshe,

For he was evir false in thought and dede)

And with his sticke above the croslet,

That was ordainid with that false yett,

He stirrith the coles, till all relent gan

The waxe againe the fire, as every man, 1300

But he a sole be, wote well it mote nede,

And alle that in the sticke was out yede,

And into the croslet hastily it fell.

Now, gode fires, what woldin ye bet than wel?

Whan that this priest begylid was again,

Supposyng nothing but trouth, soth to fain,

He was so glad, that I can not expresse

In no manir his mirth and his gladnesse,

And to the Chanon he profered est sone

Body and gode: (q<sup>d</sup> the Chanon) anone

Tho I be pore, craftie thou shalt me finde,
 I warne The wele yet is there more behind.
 Is there any Copir within saied he?
 Ye sir (q<sup>d</sup> the Priest) I trowe that there be.
 Ellis goe beye us some, and that aswithe,
 Now, gode sir, goith forth thy way, and hithe.
 He went his waie, and with the copir came,
 And this Chanon in his hondis it name,
 And of that copir waied out but an unce.
 All to simple is my tong to pronounce,
 Or to moultre my wit the doublenesse
 Of this Chanon, rote of all cursidnesse,
 He semed frendly, to hem that knew him nought,
 But he was fendly, both in werke and thought,
 It werieth me to tell of his falschessle,
 And natheles, yet wol I it expresse,
 To the entent that men maie beware therby,
 And for none othir cause truely.
 He put this unce of copir in th' cros'let,
 And on the fire aswithe he hath it set,
 And cast in poudir, and made the priest blow,
 And in his werking for to stoupin low
 As he did erst, and all n'as but a jape,
 Right as him list, the priest he made his Ape,
 And afirward in the ingot he it cast,
 And in the panne he put it at the last
 Of watir, and in he put his owne hond
 And in his sleve, as ye bifore hond
 Yherd me tell, he had a silvir teine,
 He sily toke it out, this cursid heine,
 Unwiting this priest of his false craft,
 And in the pann's botome he it last,
 And in the watir romblith to and fro,
 And wondir privily toke up also
 The copir teine, not knowing it this priest,
 And hiddin it, and hent him by the brest,
 And to him spake, and thus saide in his game,
 Stroupih adoune, by God ye be to blame,
 Helpith me now, as I did you whilere,
 Put in your hond, and lokith what is there.
 This priest toke up this silvir teine anon,
 And than sayid the Chanon, let us gon
 With these thre teinis, whiche that we han wrought
 To some Goldsmith, and wete if it be ought,
 For by my faith, I ne wolde for my hode
 But if they were silvir both fine and gode,
 And that aswithe yprovid it shall be.
 Unto the Goldsmith, with these teinis thre,
 Thei went, and put these teinis in assaie
 To fire and hammer, might no man saie naie,
 But that thei wer as them ought for to be.
 This sottid priest, who was gladdir than he?
 Was nevir bird gladdir ayenst the daie,
 Ne nightingale in the seson of Maye
 Was nevir none, that list bettir to sing,
 Ne lady lustier in carolling,
 And for to speke of love and womanhede,
 Ne knight in armes, to doen a hardy dede,
 To stondin in grace of his lady dere,
 Than had this Priest, this sory craft to lere;
 And to the Chanon thus he spake, and seid,
 For the love of God, that for us all deid,
 And as I maie deserve it unto you
 What shall this receit cost, tellith me now?
 By our lady (q<sup>d</sup> this Chanon) it is dere
 I warne you well, that save I and a Frere
 In Engeloude, there can no man it make.
 No force (q<sup>d</sup> he) now sir, for Godd's sake,
 What shall I paie, tellith me I you praie.
 I wis (q<sup>d</sup> he) it is full dere I saie,
 Sir at one worde, if that ye list it have,
 Ye shall paie fourtie pound, so God me save,
 And n'ere the frendship that ye did er this
 To me, ye should ypayin more I wis.

This priest the somme of fourtie pound anon
 Of nobles fet, and told hem everichon
 Unto this Chanon, for this iike receite,
 All his worching was but fraude and deceite.
 Sir priest, he said, I kepe for to have no lose
 Of my craft, for I would it were kept close, 1390
 And as you love me, kepith it secre,
 For and men knowin all my subtilte;
 By God men wouldin have so grete envie
 To me, bicause of my Philosophie,
 I should be dedde, there were none othir waie.
 God it forbid (q<sup>d</sup> the priest) what ye saie,
 Yet had I levir spendin all the gode
 Whiche that I have, and ellis waxe I wode,
 Than that ye should fallin in soche mischese,
 For your gode will, sir, have ye right gode prefe, 1400
 (Q<sup>d</sup> the Chanon) then farewell graunt mercie.
 He went his waie, and nere the priest him seie
 After that daie: and whan that this priest should Makin assaie, at soche time as he would,
 Of this receite, farwell, it n'old not be.
 Lo thus bejapid and begiled was he,
 Thus makith he his introduction
 To bringin folke to ther destruction!
 Considerith sirs, how in eche estate
 Betwixtin men and golde there is debate, 1410
 So ferforth, that unnethis there is none,
 This moultiplying blindeth so many one,
 That in gode faith, I trowin that it be
 The grettist cause of such grete scarfite.
 These philosophers speke so mistily
 In this crafte, that men cannot come therby,
 For any wit that men have nowe a daies,
 They may well chattré and jangle as do jayes,
 And in ther termis, set ther lust and paine,
 But to ther purpose shul they ner attaine; 1420
 A man may lightly lerne, if he have ought
 To multiplie, and bring his gode to nought.
 Lo, suche a lucre is in this lusty game!
 A mann's mirth it wol turne all to grame,
 And emprin also gret and hevy purfes,
 And makin folke to purchasin fele curses
 Of them that han thereto ther gode ylent,
 O fye for shame! thei that han ones be brente
 Alas! can not thei slie the fir's hete?
 Ye that it use, I rede that ye it lete, 1430
 Lest ye lese alle; for bet than nere is late.
 Nevir to thrivin were to longe a date;
 Though ye prolle aye, ye shall it nevir find,
 Ye ben as bolde as is bayarde the blind,
 That b'onderith forth, and peril castirh none,
 He is as bold to renne ayenst a stone
 As for to go beside it in the way;
 So farin ye, that multiplien, I say;
 If that your eyin cannot sene a right,
 Lokith that your minde lackith not his sight; 1440
 For though ye loke nevir so brode, and stare.
 Ye shall not winne a mite in that chaffare
 But wastin al that ye may repe and renne;
 Withdrawe the fire; leste it to fast ybrenne,
 Medlith no more with that science, I mene,
 For if ye done, your thrift is gon full clene,
 And right aswithe I wol you tellin here
 What philosophers sain in this matere.
 Lo! thus saith Arnolde of the newe toun,
 As his rosarie makith mencion;
 He saith right thus, withoutin any lie
 There may no man Mercurie mortifie,
 But it be with his brother's knowleging,
 Lo! how that he, which first ysaid this thing,
 Of Philosophirs fathir was, Hermes.
 He sayith how that the Dragon doutles
 Ne dyith nor, but if that he be slaine
 With his brothir: And this is for to saine

By the dragon Mercury, and none other,
He undirstode the brimstone was his brother, 1460
That out of Sol and Luna were idrawe,
And therefore said he, take hede to my sawe,

Let no man besie him this arte to seche,
But he that the entencion and speche
Of Philosophers understondin can,
And if he do, he is a leude man,
For this science, and this conning (qð he)
Is of the secrete of secretes, parde.

Also there was a scholar of Plato,
That on a time said his maistir to, 1470
As in his boke Semor wol bere witnesse;
And this was his demaunde in sothfastnesse;
Tellith me the name of the privy stone.

And Plato answerd unto him anone,
Takith the stone that Titanos men name.

Which is that? (qð he) Magnatia' is the same
Said Plato: ye sir, qð he, is it thus?

This is ignotum per ignotius.

What is Magnatia, gode sir I you pray?

It is a watir that is made, I say, 1480

Of elementis four (qð then Plato)
Tellith me, gode sir, the rote, qð he tho,
Of that watir, if that it be your will.

Nay nay (qð Plato) certaine that I n'll;
The Philosophers were isworne echone,
That they shuld discovir it unto none;
Ne in no boke it write in no manere,
For unto Christ it is so lefe and dere,
That he wol not that it discovered be,
But where it likith to his deite. 1490

Man to enspire, and eke for to defende,
Whan that him likith; lo! this is his ende.

Than conclude I thus, sens the God of heaven
Ne will not that the philosophers nemen
How that a man shall come unto this stone,
I rede as for the beste, to let it gone:

For who so makith God his adversary,
As for to werche any thing in contrary
Unto his wil, certes nevir shal he thrive,
Though that he multiply terme of his live. 1500

And there a pointe, for ended is my tale,
God send every true man bote of his bale.

Here endith the TALE of the Chanon's YEMAN.

Here

Here followeth the Doctour of Phisike's PROLOGUE.

W H A N that this yeman his tale endid had
Of this false Chanon, whiche ywas so bad,
Our hoste gan say, truely and in certaine
This priest was begilid, soth for to saine,
He wenid to be a Philosopher,
Til he right no golde left in his cofer,
And sothly this Priest haddè all the jape,

This cursed Chanon put in his hode an ape,
But al this passe I ovir will as now;
Sir doctour of phisicke, yet I pray you,
Tel us a tale of some honest matere.

It shal be done, if that ye wol it here,
Said this doctour, and his tale gan anon;
Now gode men (qð he) herk'nith everichon.

Here endeth the Doctour of Phisike's PROLOGUE.

Here beginneth his TALE.

T Here was, as tellith Titus Livius,
A knight, that clepid was Virginius,
Fulfilled of honour and of worthinesse,
And strong of frendis, and eke of richesse.
A doughtir faire had this knight by his wife,
And nevir had he mo in all his life.
Fayre was this maide in excellent beaute
Abovin every wight that man may se,
For nature hath with soveraine deligence
Yformed her in so gret excellence,
As though that she would say, lo! I nature
Thus can yforme and paintin a cature,
Whan that me liste, who can me counterfete?
Pigmaleon? Not though he forge and bete?
Or grave or painte? for I dare well ysaine,
Appelles, or Xeuxis, should werche in vaine

To grave or painte, or for to forge or bete,
If they presumid me to counterfete;
For he that is the formir principal
Hath madin me his vicar generall
To fourme and paintin erthly creaturis,
Right as me liste; for al thing in my cure is
Undir the mone, that may or wane or waxe;
And for my werkè nothing wol I axe,
My lorde and I ben fully of accorde,
I made her to the worship of my lorde,
So do I all mine othir ceturis,
Of what colour they be, or figuris;
Thus semith me that nature wouldè say.

This maidin was of age xii, yere and tway,
In whiche that nature hath suche a delite,
For right as she can paint a lilye white

1540

1530

And

And tody as rose, right with such painture
 She paintid hath this noble creature
 Er she was borne, upon her limmis fre,
 Where as by right soche colouris shoulde be:
 And Phebus dyid had her tressis grete
 Like to the stremis of his burnid here,
 And if that excellent were her beaute,
 A thousande folde more vertuous was she;
 In her ne lackith no condicion
 That is to preise, as by discrecion
 As wel in body as goste chaste was she,
 For which she flourid in virginite,
 With all humilite and abstinence,
 With al attemperance, and pacience,
 With mesure eke, in bering of aray,
 Discrete she was in answering alway,
 Tho she were wise as Pallas, dare I saine,
 (Her faconde eke, full womanly and plaine)
 No counterfettid termis hadde she
 To semin wise: but aftir her degre
 She spake, and all her wordis more and lesse
 Sowning in vertue and in gentilnesse,
 Shamefast she was, in maidins shamfastnesse,
 Constant in hert, and evre' in businesse
 To drive her out of idle slogardie,
 Bacchus had of her mouthe no maisterie,
 For wine and youth done Venus aye encrece,
 As men in fyre wol castin oyle or grece;
 And of her ownè vertue unconstrained
 She hath full oftin her self like yfained,
 For that she wouldin sic the company
 Where likely was to tretin of foly,
 As is at festes, at revels, and at daunces,
 That ben occasions of daliaunces,
 Suche thingis makin children for to be
 To sonè ripe and bolde, as men may se,
 Whiche is ful perilous, and hath ben yore,
 For al to sonè may she lern the lore
 Of boldenefs, when she is wexin a wife.
 And ye maistressis in your oldè life
 That lordis doughtirs han in governaunce,
 Ne takith of my worde no displeaunce,
 Thinkith that ye ben set in governinges
 Of lordis doughtirs, onely for two thinges,
 Eithir for you han kepte your honeste,
 Or ellis ye han fallin in frelte,
 And knowin well inough the oldè daunce,
 And conne forsakin fully that mischaunce
 For evirmore; therefore for Christ's sake
 Kepith wel tho folke that ye undirtake.
 A thefe of venison, that hath forlaste
 His likerousnesse and all his thev'is crasse,
 Can kepe a forest beste of any man;
 Now kepeth 'hem well, for and ye wol ye can,
 Lokith well, to no vice that ye assent,
 Lest ye be dampnid for your ill entent,
 For who so dothe, a traytour is certain,
 And takith kepe of that I shall you sain,
 Of al treyson soveraine pestilence
 Is, when a wight betrayith innocence.
 Ye fathers, and eke ye mothers also,
 Though ye han children, be it one or mo,
 Yours is the charge of al ther surveyaunce,
 Whilis they ben undir your govinaunce,
 Beth ware, that by ensample of your living,
 Or by your negligence in chastising,
 That they ne perishe: for I dare wel say
 If that they don, ye shal ful fore obay:
 Undir a shepherde softe and negligent
 The wolf hath many a shepe and lambe to rent.
 Sufficith one ensample now as here,
 For I mote turne ayen to my matere.
 This maide of which I tell my tale expresse
 She kepte her selve, she nedid no maistresse,

1550 For in her living maidins mightin rede
 As in a boke, every gode worke and dede
 That longith to a maidin vertuous;
 She was so prudent and so bounteous,
 For whiche the fame out spronge on every side
 Bothe of her beaute and her bounte wide,
 That through the londe they preisid her echon
 That lovid vertue, save Envy alone,
 That sory is of othir mennis wele,
 And glad is of ther sorowe, and unhele. 1630
 The doctour makith this description.
 1560 This maide went on a day into the toun
 Towarde the temple, with her mothur dere,
 As is of all yonge maidins the manere.
 Now livid there a Justice in that tounne,
 That govinour was of that regionne,
 And so beset, this Justice his eyen cast
 Upon this maide, avising her ful fast
 As she came forth by ther as the Judge stode,
 Anon his hert ychaungid, and his mode, 1640
 So was he caught with beaute of this maide,
 And to himselte full previly he saide,
 This maidin shall be mine for any man.
 1570 Anon the fende into his herte ran,
 And he taught him sodainly, by what sleight
 The maidin to his purpose winne he might;
 For certis, by no force, ne by no mede
 Him thought he was not able for to spede,
 For she was stronge of frendis, and eke she
 Confirmit was in suche soveraine beaute, 1650
 That well he wist he might her nevir winne
 As for to make her with her body sinne;
 For whiche with grete deliberacioun
 1580 He sent after a client in the toun,
 The whiche he knew ful subtrill and ful bold;
 This Judge unto this client his tale told
 In secret wise, and made him to ensue
 He shulde it tellin unto no creature,
 And if he did, he shoulde letin his hede.
 And whan assentid was this cursid rede, 1660
 Glad was the Judge, and made mochtill gode chere,
 And yave him gifis precious and dere.
 When shapin was all this conspiracie
 1590 Fro point to point, how that his lecherie
 Parfourmid shoulidin be full subtilly,
 As ye shulle aftir herin opinly.
 Home gothe this client that hight Claudius,
 But this false Justice that hight Appius,
 So was his name, for it ne is no table,
 But knowen for thing historiall notable, 1670
 The sentence of it sothe is out of doubt,
 This false judge I say, gothe now fall about
 To hastin his delite, al that he may;
 And so bifel, sone aftir on a day
 This false judge, as tellich us the storie,
 As he was wonte, sate in his consistorie,
 And yave his domis upon sondry caas,
 This false client came forth a ful gret paas,
 And seide, Lord, if that it be your will,
 As doth me right upon this pitous bill, 1680
 In whiche I plaine upon Virginus,
 And if that he wol say it is not thus,
 I wol prove it, and findin gode witnesse,
 1610 That sothe is that which my bill wol expresse.
 The judge answerd, of this in his absence
 I may not yeve definitive sentence,
 Let do him call, and I woll gladly here,
 Thou shalt have all right, and nothing wrong here.
 Virginus came to wete the judg's will,
 And right anon was radde this cursid bill, 1690
 The sentence of it was as ye shall here.
 Unto you, my lorde Appius so dere,
 Shewith your pover servaunt Claudius,
 1620 How that a knight, callid Virginus,
 L 1

Ayent the lawe, and ayent equite
Holdith expresse ayent the will of me
My servaunt, which that is my thral by right,
Which from mine hous was stolin on a night,
Whilis she was full yonge, I will it preve,
By witnesse lord, so that ye you not greve,
She is not his doughtir, what so he say,
Wherefore, my lorde Justice, I do you pray
Yelde me my thral, it that it be your will.
Lo! this was all the sentence of that bill.

Virginus gan on the client beholde,
But hastily, er he his tale had tolde
He would have defendid, as shuld a knight,
And by witnesse of many a trewe wight,
That al was false, that said his adversary.

This cursid Justice would no lengir tary,
Ne here a worde more of Virginus,
But yave his judgement, and pronouncid thus.

I deme anon this man his servaunt have,
Thou shalt no lengir her in thine house save,
Go bring her forth, and put her in our warde,
This man shal have his thral, thus I award.
And when this worthy knight Virginus,
Through the assent of the judge Appius,
Ymust by force his dere doughtir up-yeven
Unto the judge, in lechery to liven,
He gothe him home, and set him in his hall,
And let anon his derè doughtir call,
And with a face as dede as athis colde
Upon her humble face he gan beholde,
With father's pite, sticking through his hert,
Al wolde he not from his purpose convert.

Doughter (qð he) Virginia by name,
There ben two wayis, either deth or shame
That thou must suffer, alas that I was borne!
For nevir thou deservedist wherforne
To dyin, with a sworde or with a knife.
Oh my dere doughtir, comfort of my life,
Whiche I have fostrid up with such plesaunce,
That thou ne were out of my remembraunce!
O doughtir mine, which that art my last wo,
And in my life my lastè joye also!
O jemme of chastite, in pacience
Take thou thy dethe, for this is my sentence,
For love and not for hate thou must be dede,
My pitous honde mote smitin of thine hede;
Alas that evir Appius The sey!
Thus hath he falsely judgid The to dey:
And told her al the case, as ye before
Han herd, it nedith not to tell it more.

O mercy dere fathir, than (qð this maide)
And with that worde she both her armis layde
About his necke, as she was wonte to do,

The teris braste out of her eyin two,
And sayd, O my gode fathir shall I die?
Is there no grace? is there no remedie?
No certis O dere doughtir mine (qð he)
Than geve me leve, my lefe faðir, qð she,
My deth for to complaine a litil space,
For parde, Jepte yave his doughtir grace
For to complaine, er he her slough, alas!
And God it wot, nothing was her trespas,
But that she ranne her fathir first to se
To welcome him, with gret solemprite.
And with that word she fel aswoune anon;
And aftir whan her swouning was agon
She risith up, and to her fathir sayde,
Blissid be God, that I shall die a mayde,
Yeve me my deth, er that I have a shame,
Dorh with your child your wil a God's name.
And with that word she prayith him ful ofte
That with his swerd he shouldin smit her softe;
And with that word in a swoune doun she fell.
Her fathir with sorouful hert and fell
Her hede of smote, and by the toppe it hente,
And to the judge he it yave in presente,
As he sat in dome in consistorie.

Whan the judge it sawe, as saith the storie,
He bad take him, and honge him also fast.
But right anon all the people in thrast
To save the knight, for routh and for pite,
For knowen was the judg's iniquite;
The peple anon had suspect in this thing
By manir of this clientes chalinging,
That it was by the assent of Appius,
They wist right well that he was lecherous;
For whiche unto this Appius they gon,
And kestin him in prison right anon,
Where as he slew himself; and Claudius,
That servaunt was unto this Appius,
Was demed for to be hongid on a tre.
But Virginus, of his grete pite
So prayid for him, that he was exiled,
And ellis certis he had ben begiled.
The remnaunt were hongid, both more and lesse,
That consentid were to this cursidnesse.

Here men may se how sin hath his merite;
Beware, for no man wot how God wol smite;
In no degre, ne in no maner wise,
The worne of conscience wollin arise
Of wickid life, though it so privy be
That no man wote of it but God and he,
Whethir he be a leude man or lered,
He n'ot how sone that he may ben affered.
Therefore I redin you this counsaile take,
Forsakith sinne, er that sinne you forfaketh.

Here endeth the Doctour of Phisikes TALE.

Here foloweth the wordes of our Hoste.

OUR Host gan swere as he were woxin
wode,
Harowe (qð he) by naylis and by blode,
This was a false thete, and a cursed Justice,
As shameful dethe, as hertè may devise
Come to false judgis, and ther advoca's,
Algate this sely maide is slain, alas!
Alas! to dere abought she her beaute.
Wherefore I say, that allè men may se,
That yettis of fortune, or of nature
Ben cause of dethe of many a cature.

Her beaute was her dethe, I dare wel faine;
Alas so pitously as she was slaine.
But herof wol I not procede as nowe,
Men have full ofte timis more harme than prowé.
But truily, mine ownè maistir dere,
This is a right petous tale for to here.
But nathèlesse, passe ovir, is no force,
I pray to God to save thy gentle corce,
And thy urinalles, and thy jordanis,
Thine ypocras, and eke thy galianis,

1820
And

And evèry boxe ful of letuarie
God blesse hem and our lady seint Marie.
So mote I the, thou arte a propir man,
And lyke a prelate by saint Damian,
Thou spake enough, I can not say in terme,
But welc I wore thou dost myne herte to yerne,
That I have almost caught a cardiacle,
By Corpus Domini, but I have triacle,
Or ellis a draught of moiste cornye ale,
Or but I here anothir mery tale,
My hert is losse, for pite of this maide;

1830

Thou belamy, John pardoncr, he saide,
Tel us some mery tale, or jape, anon.
It shal be don (qð he) by saint Runion;
But first, (qð he) here at this ale-house stake,
I woll bothe drinke, and etin of a cake.
But right anone, these gentils gon to crye,
Nay, let him tell us of no ribaudrye,
Tel us som moral thing, that we mow lere
Somc witte, and than wol we right gladly here.
I graunt (qð he) I wis, but I mote thinke
On some honest thing, whilis that I drinke.

Here endeth the wordes of the Hoste.

Here

Here followeth the PROLOGUE of the PARDONER.

Ordinges (qð he) in chyrch whan that
I preche,
I painin me to have an hautein speche,
And ring it out, as round as doth a bell,

For I can all by rote, which that I tell,
My theme is alwey one, and evir was,
(Radix malorum est cupiditas)
First I pronouncin from whence that I come,
And then my Bullis I shewe al and some,
Then our Liege Lord's sele on my patent,
That shewe I first, my body to warrent,
That no man be so bolde, ne preest ne clerke,
Me to distourbe of Christ's holy werke,
And aftir that, I tellin forth my tales
Bullis of Popis, and of Cardinales,
Of Patriarkes, and of Bishopes I shewe,
And in latin I speke wordis a fewe
To savir with my predicacion,
And for to stere men to devocion;
Than shewe I forth my longè cristal stones
Ycrammid ful of cloutis and of bones,
Relikes they ben, as wenin they echone.

Than have in laton a sholdir bone,
Whiche that was of an holy jew's shepe.

Gode men saye I, take of my wordis kepe,
If that this bone be washen in any wel,
If cove or calfe, or shepe, or oxin swel,
That any worme hath etin, or 'hem stonge,
Take watir of this wel, and washe his tongue, 1870
And it is hole anon: and farthirmore
Of pockis, and of scabbes, and every sore
Shall every shepe be hole, that of this well
Drinkith a draught, take kepe of that I tell.

If that the gode man, that the bestis oweth,
Wol every day, er that the cocke croweth
Fasting ydrinkin of this wel a draught,
As thilke holy jewe our elders taught,
His bestis, and his store shall multiply;
And sirs, also it helith jelosye, 1880
For though a man be fall in jelous rage,
Let makin with this watir his potage,
And nevir shall he more his wife mistrift,
Though he in soth the defaute by her wift,
Al had she takin priestis two or thre.

Here is a mittaine eke, that ye may se,
He that his honde wol put in this mittaine
He shal have multiplying of his graine,
Whan he hath sowin, be it whete or otes,
So that he bringe some pennys, or els grotes. 1890

And men and women, o thing I warne you,
If any wight ben in this churchè now,
That hath done sinne so horrible, that he
Dare not for shame of it yshrivin be, 1860
Or any woman, be she yonge or olde,
That hath ymade her husband a cokewolde,
Such folk shul have no powir ne no grace
To offir to my relikes in this place,
And who so findith them out of such blame,
Commith up, and offre in Godd's name, 1900
And I atfoyle him by the' auctorite,
Suche as by bulle was grauntid unto me.

And by this gaude have I wonne every yere
An hundrid marke, sith I was pardonere,
I stondin like a clerke in my pulper,
And whan the leude peple ben doune iser,
I preche so as ye have lered here before,
And tel to them an hundrid japis more,

Than paine I me to stretchin forth my necke,
 And este and west, upon the peple I becke, 1910
 As dothe a dove, sitting upon a berne,
 My hondis and my tonge goin so yerne;
 That it is joy to se my besidnesse,
 Of avarice and of suche cursidnesse
 Al my preching is for to maken 'hem fre
 To yeve ther pens, and namely unto me;
 For mine entent is not but for to winne,
 And nothing for correction of sinne,
 I reke not whan that thei ben buryid, 1920
 Though that ther soules gon a blackburyid.
 For certis many a predication
 Comith oft tyme of ill entencion;
 Some for plesauce of folke, and for flattery,
 To ben avauncid by hipocrisy,
 And some for veine glory, and some for hate;
 For whan I dare not other waies debate,
 Than wol I sling 'hem with my tonge smerte
 In preching, so that he shall not asterte
 To ben diffamid falsely, if that he
 Hath trespassed to my bretherne or to me; 1930
 For though I tellin not his propre name,
 Men shall wel knowin that it is the same
 By signis, or by othir circumstaunces,
 Thus quite I folke, that doth us displeaunces,
 Thus spitt I out my venim undir hewe
 Of holinesse, to semen holy and trewe.
 But shortly mine entent I wol devise,
 I preche of nothing but of covetise,
 Therefore my theme is yet; and evir was
Radix malorum est cupiditas. 1940
 Thus can I prechin ayenst the same vice
 Whiche that I use, and that is avarice.

But though my selfe be gilty in that sinne,
 Yet can I makin other folke to twinne
 From avarice, and fore 'hent to repent,
 But that is not my principall entent,
 I prechin nothing but for covetise,
 Of this matere it ought inough suffise.
 Than tell I 'hem ensamples many one 1950
 Of oldè stories, longe time agone,
 For leude peple lovin talis olde,
 Whiche thingis they can well report and holde;
 What trowin ye? whilis that I may preche,
 And winnin gold and silvir for to teche,
 That I wol live in povert wilfully?
 Nay nay, I nevir thoughtin it truly.
 For I wol preche and begge in sondric londes,
 I wol not do no labour with mine hondes,
 Ne makin baskettis, and live therby, 1960
 Bicause I wol not livin idilly,
 I wol none of the Apostels countrefete,
 I wol have money, mault, and chese, and whete,
 Al were it yevin of the porist page,
 Or of the porist widdow' in a village,
 All shulde her childrin stervin for famine,
 Nay, I wol drinke the licoure of the vine,
 And have a joly wenche in every toun.
 But herkenith, lordinges, my conclusioun.
 Your liking is that I should tel a tale, 1970
 Now I have dronken a draught of corny ale,
 By God I hope I shal tel you a thing,
 That shal by reson ben at your liking;
 For though my selfe be a full vicious man,
 A moral tale yet I you tellin can, 1980
 Which I am wont to preche silvir to winne;
 Now holde your pece, my tale I wol begin.

Here endeth the PARDONER'S PROLOGUE.

The PARDONER'S TALE.

IN Flaunders whilom was a company
 Of yongè folke, that haunted in foly,
 As hasard, riot, stewis, and tavernes,
 Where as with harpis, lutes, and geternes,
 Thei dauncen and plaien at dice both night and day,
 And eten also, ovir that ther might may,
 Through which they don the devil sacrifice
 Within the devil's temple, in cursid wise
 By superfluite abhominable,
 Ther othis ben so gret and dampnable
 That it is grisly for to here 'hem swere,
 Our blisshid Lord's body they al to tere,
 'Hem thought the Jewis rent him not inough,
 And eche of 'hem at others sinnè lough. 1990
 And right anon comen in the tomblesteres
 Fetis and smale, and yongè flutisteres,
 Singers with harpis, baudes, and wafereres,
 Suche ben the very Devil's officeres,
 To kindle and blowe the fire of lechery,
 That is annexid unto gloteny,
 The holy writte take I to my witnesse,
 That lechery is in wine and dronkenesse.

Lo how that dronkin Lot unkindly
 Lay by his doughters two unwetingly! 2000
 So dronke he was, he ne wist what he wrought,
 And therefore fore repentin him he ought.
 Herodes, who so wol the stories seche,
 There may ye lerne, and by ensample teche,
 When he of wine was replete at his feste,
 Right at his owne table he yave his heste
 To seene Johan the Baptiste ful gilleste.
 Seneca saith eke gode wordis douteles.
 He saith he can no difference yfinde
 Betwixt a man that is out of his minde 2010
 And betwixt a man that is dronkelew,
 But wodenesse that is fallin in a shrewe
 Perseverith lengir than dronkenesse.
 O gloteny, fulfilled of cursidnesse!
 O the cause first of our confusion!
 O originall of our dampnacion,
 Til Christ had bought us with his blode again!
 Lo se how dere, shortly for to sain,
 Abought was first this cursid vilonic!
 Corrupt was al this world through glotonic. 2020
 M m Adam

Adam our fornfathir, and Eve also
Fro Paradise, to labour and to wo
Were drivin for that vice, it is no drede;
For whiles that Adam fastid, as I rede
He was in Paradise, and whan that he
Ete of the fruit defendid on the tre,
Anon he was out cast to wo and pain;
O glotenie, on thee well ought us plain.

Oh, wist a man how many maladies
Folowe of excessse and of glotemies,
He wouldè ben the more mesurable
Of his diete, sitting at his table.
Alas! the short throte, and the tendir mouthe
Makith that East and West, and North and South,
In yerth, in aire, in watir men to swinke,
To getten a gloton deinte mete and drinke
Of this matter, o Paule, wel can'st thou trete,
Mete unto wombe, and wombe eke unto mete,
And yet shall God destroie both, as Paul faieth;
Alas! a foule thing it is, by my faieth,
To saie this worde, and foulir is the dede,
Whan man so drinkith of the white and rede,
That of his throte he makith his privie
Through thilkè cursid superfluite.

The Apostle faieth, weping full pitously,
There walkin many, of whiche told have I,
I saie it now weping with pitous voice,
That thei ben enemies of Christ's croice,
Of which the ende is deth, wombe is ther God.
O belie! O wombe! and O stinkin cod
Fulfilled of dong and of corrupcioun!
At eithir ende of The foule is the soun.
How grete the cost and labour is to finde
These cokis? how thei stamp, and strein, and grinde,
And tournin substaunce into accident!
To fulfill all thy likerous talent
Out of the hardè bonis knockin thei
The mary (for thei cast it not awaie)
That maie go through the gullet safe and sote,
Of spicerie, of levis, barke, and rote,
Shall ben his sauce imadin by delite
To maken hem have a newir appetite.
But certis he that hauntith soche delices
Is dedde, whiles that he livith in the vices.

A lecherous thing is wine and dronkenes,
It's full of striving and of wretchidnes;
Oh dronkin man, disfigured in thy face,
Sower is thy breth, foule art thou to embrace,
And through thy dronkin nose sownith the soun
As tho thou saidist aie, Sampson, Sampson;
And yet God wor Sampson dronk nevir wine;
Thou fallist, as it wer a stickid swine;
Thy tong is lost, and all thine honest cure;
For drokenesse is very sepulture
Of mann's witte, and his discrecion;
In whom that drinke hath dominacion
He can no counsaile kepe, it is no drede;
Now kepe you fro the white, and fro the rede,
And namily fro the White wine of Lepe,
That is to sell in Fishestrete and in Chepe;
This Wine of Spain crepith in subtilly,
And other winis growing fast thereby,
Of whiche there risith soche fumosite,
That whan a man hath dronkin draughtis thre,
And wenith that he be at home in Chepe,
He is in Spain, right at the toun of Lepe,
Nought at Rochell, ne at Burdeaux toun,
And than wollin he saie, Sampson, Sampson.
But herkenith, lordinges, o word, I you pray,
That all the soverain actis, dare I saie,
Of victories in the old Testament,
Through very God, that is omnipotent;
Were doen in abstinence and in praier;
Lokith the Bible, there ye mow it lere:

Lokith Attila, the grete conquerour
Died in his slepe, with shame and dishonour;
Bleding aie at his nose in dronkinnesse;
A capitain should live in sobirnesse.

And ovir all this, avise you right well
What was commaundid unto Lamuel,
Not Samuel but Lamuel saie I,
Rede the Bible, and finde it expresly
Of wine yeving to hem that have justice,
No more of this, for it maie wele suffice.

And now that I have spake of glotonie,
Now woll I defende you of hasardrie.
Hasarde is very mothir of lesinges,
And of deceit, and cursid forlweringes,
Blaspheme of Christ, manslaughter, wast also,
Of bataille oft time, and of othir wo,
It is repreve, and contrary to honour
For to be holden a common hasardour,
And evir higher that he is in state,
The more still he is holden desolate,
If that a Prince shall usin hasardrie,
In all governaunce and all policie
He is as by comen opinion
Holdin the lesse in reputacion.
Stillebon that was a wise ambassadour
Was unto Corinth sent with grete honour,
Fro Calidone, to makin aliaunce,
And whan he came, him happid this perchaunce,
That all the gretist that wer of the londe
Playing at hasarde besily he fonde,
For whiche, as sone as that it mightin be,
He stole him home ayen to his countre,
And sayid, there woll I not lese my name,
I n'll not take on me so grete defame,
For to alie you to none hasardours,
Sendith othir wisir enbassadours,
For by my trouth, me were levir to die
Than I should you to hasardours alie,
For ye that ben so glorious in honours
Shall not alyin you with hasardours
As by my will, ne by any tretie,
This wise Philosopher, thus sayid he.

Lokith eke how to king Demetrius
The king of Parthis, as the boke saieth us,
Sent him a paire of Dice of gold in scorne,
For he had used hasardrie there biforne,
For whiche he held his glory and renoun
At no value or reputacioun,
Lordis might findin othir manir plaie
Honest inough to drive the daie awaie.

Now woll I speke of othis false and grete
A worde or two, as oldè bokes entrete:
Grete swering is a thing abhominable,
And false swering is yet more reprovale,
The most hie God forbad swering at all,
Witnesse of Mathew, but in speciall,
Of swering, saieth the holy Jeromie,
Thou shalt swere soth thine othis, and not lie,
And swere in dome and eke in rightwisnesse,
But idle swering is a cursidnes.

Behold and se that in the first table
Of hie God's heftis honourable,
How that the seconde heste of him is this,
Take not my name in idelnesse amis.
Lo! he rathir forbiddith soche swering
Than homicide, or othir cursid thing;
I saie as thus, by order as it stondeth,
This knowe thei that his heftis understondeth,
How that the seconde heste of God is that,
And furthirmore, I woll The tell all plat,

That

That vengeance shall not depart fro his hous
That of his othis is outrageous,
By Godd's precious hart, and his nailes,
And by the blode of Christ that is in Hailes,
Sevin is my chaunce, and thin five and thre,
By Godd's armis, if thou false plaie me
This daggir shall thorough thine harte go.
This fruit comith of thilke bonis two,
Forswering, ire, falsnesse, and homicide.

Now for the love of Christ, that for us dide,
Levith your othis, bothe gret and smale,
For I shall tell you a mervailous tale.

These riotours thre, of whiche I you tell,
Long ere to prime were rongin any bell,
Were set 'hem in a Taverne for to drinke,
And as thei sat, thei herdin a Bell clinke
Biforne a cors, that was caried to' his grave,
That one of 'hem gan call unto his knave,
Go fast (q' he) and askin redily
What cors is this, that passith forth hereby?
And loke that thou reportin his name wele.

Sir (q' he) it nedith nevir a dele,
It was me tolde er ye came here two houres,
He was parde an old felowe of yours,
And all sodainly was he slain to night,
For dronke as he sat on his bench upright
There came a privie thefe, men clepin dethe,
That in this countrey all the peple slaeth,
And with his spere he smote his hert atwo,
And went his waie, withoutin wordis mo.
He hath a thousande slain, this pestilence,
And maistr, er ye come in his presence
Me thinkith that it were full necessarie
For to beware of soche an adversarie;
Bethe redy for to mete him evirmore:
Thus taught me my fa'ir, I saie no more.

By saint Mary, sayid this Tavernere,
The child saith forhe, for he hath slaine this yere
Hens ovir a mile, in a grete village,
Bothe man and woman, bothe child and page.
I trowe his habitation be there,
To ben avisid, gret wisdom it were
Er that he did a man soche dishonour.

Ye Godd's armis (q' this riotour)
Is it soche perill with him for to mete?
I shall him seche by stile and eke by strete,
I make a vowe, by Godd's digne bones.
Herkinith felowes, we thre ben all ones,
Let eche of us hold up his honde to other,
And eche of us become other's brother,
And we woll sekin this false traitour dethe,
He shall be slain, whiche that so many slaeth,
By God's dignite, er it be night.

Togi'ir han these thre ther trouthis plight
To live and die eche of them with othir,
As though he werin his owne born brothir.
And up thei sterten all dronkin in this rage,
And forth thei gon are toward that village,
Of whiche the Taverner hath spoke bifore;
And many a grisly othe han thei swore,
And Christ's blessid body thei to rent,
Deth shall be dedde, if that we maie him hent.

Whan thei han gon not fully half a mile,
Right as thei would have trodin ore a stile;
An olde man and a pore hath with 'hem met,
This old pore man full mekily 'hem gret,
And sayid thus, now lordinges God you se.

The proudist of these riotours thre
Answerd ayen, what chorle with forie grace
Why art thou all forwrappid, save thy face?
Why livist thou so long in so gret age?

This old man gan lokin in his visage,
And sayid thus: for I ne can not finde
A man, although I walkid into Inde;

Neither in cite, ne in no village,
That would exchaungin his youth for mine age, 2240
And therefore more I havin min age still,
For as long time as it is Godd's will.

Ne deth, alas! ne wolle not have my life,
Thus walke I like a restlessse caitife,
And on the ground, which is my mother's gate,
I knocke with my staffe both erliche and late,
And sayin thus, leve mothir, let me in,
Lo! how I vanishe, fleshe, and blode, and skin,
Alas! whan shall my bonis ben at rest?

Mothir, with you would I exchange my chest, 2250
That in my chambir long time hath ybin,
Ye for an herin clout to wrappe me in,
But yet to me she woll not doen that grace,
For whiche full pale and welkid is my face.

But sirs, to you it is no curtisie
To speke unto an old man ylonie,
But he trespas outhir in worde or dede,
In holy writ, you maie your self well rede.

Ayenst an old man, hore upon his hedde,
Ye should arise, and therefore I you rede 2260
Ne doeth to an old man no harme as now,
No more than ye would a man did to you
In age, if that ye maie so long abide:
And God be with you, wher' ye go or ride,
I mote go thi'ir as I have to go.

Naie naie old chorle, by God thou shalt not so,
Sayid these othir hasardours anon,
Thou partist not so lightly by saint John,
Thou spakist right now of thilke traitor deth,
That in this countre all our frendis slaeth, 2270
Have here my trowth, for thou art his espie,
Tell where he is, or ellis thou shalt die
By God and by the holy Sacrament,
For sothily thou art of his assent

To slayin us yonge folke, thou olde false thefe.

Now sirs, if that it be to you so lese
To findin deth, rourne up this crokid waie,
For in that grove I left him by my faie
Undir a tre, and there he woll abide,
Ne for your boste he n'll him nothing hide, 2280
Se ye that oke, right there ye shal him finde,
And God you save that bought ayen mankinde,
And you amende; thus sayid this old man.

Than everiche of these riotours ran
Til thei came to the tre, and there thei found
Floresines of gold fine and icoignid round
Well nie a sevin bushels, as 'nem thought;
And now no lengir aftir deth thei sought,
But eche of 'hem so glad was of that sight,
For that the Floresins so faire ben and bright, 2290
That doune thei sittin by the precious horde;
The yongist of them spake the firste worde,

Brethern (q' he) take kepe of what I saie
My wit is grete although I borde or plaie, 2220
This trefure hath fortune unto us yeven,
In mirthe and jolite our life to liven,
And lightly as it cometh, so woll we spend;
Heie, Godd's precious harte: who would have wend
To daie, that we should have so faire a grace?
But might this gold be caried fro this place
Home to my house, or ellis unto yours,
(For well I wote that all this gold is ours)
Than wcrin we in hie felicite,

But truly by daie it maie not be, 2230
Men wouldin saie, that we were thevis strong,
And for our own trefure doch us to hong.
This trefure must icaried be by night
As wisely and as silyly as it might; 2240
Wherefore I rede, let loke emong us all
To drawe, and let se where the cutte wol fall,
He that hath the shortist cut with hert bith
Shall renne unto the rounne, and that ful swith,

To bring us brede and drinke full privily,
And two of us shall kepe full subtilly
This trefure well, and if he woll not tarie
Whan it is night, we woll this trefure carie
By one assent, where as us listith best.

That one of 'hem tho brought grasie in his fest, 2320
And bad 'hem draw, and loke where it wold fal,
And it fel on the yongist of 'hem all,
And forth toward the toun he went anon,
And al so sone as that he was agone,
That one of 'hem yspake unto that other,
Thou wotist wele that thou art my sworne brother,
Thy profite woll I tell The right anone,
Thou wotist well that our felowe is gone,
And here is gold, and that full grete plente
That shall departid be emong us thre, 2330
But nathelste, if that I can shape it so
'That it departid were emong us two,
Had I not doen a frendly tourne to The?

That othir sayed, I n'ot how that might be,
I woll full well that the gold were ours two,
What should we doin that it might be so?

Shall it be counsaile (sayid the first shrew)
And I shall tellin The in wordis fewe
What we woll doen, and bring it well about.

I graunt it (q'ð that othir) out of doubt. 2340
That by my trouthe I wol The not bewrain.

Now (q'ð he) thou wost well that we ben twain,
And twain of us shall strongir be than one,
Lokith whan he is set, and than anone
Arise, as though thou wouldest with him plaie,
And I shall riven him through the sidis tway
Whiles that thou stugglist with him as in game,
And with thy daggir loke thou do the same,
And than shall all the golde departid be, 2350
My dereft frend, betwixtin The and me;
Than maie we bothe all our lustis fulfill,
And plaie at Dice, right at our ownè will.
And thus accordid ben these shrewis twaie
To slea the third, as ye han herd me saie.

This yongist, which that wentin to the toun
Full ofte in his hert rollid up and doune
The beaute of these floreins faire and bright,
O Lorde (q'ð he) if so were that I might
Have all this trefour to my self alone,
There n'is no man, that livith undir trone 2360
Of God, that should live so mery as I.
And at the last the fende our enemy
Put in his thought that he shuld poison beie,
With which he might slayin his felowes tweie.
For why? the fende fonde him in soche living,
That he had leve to sorowe him to bring,
For this was uttirly his whole entent
To slaen 'hem bothe, and nevir to repent.
And forth he goth, no lengir would he tary
Into the toun, unto a Potecary, 2370
And prayid him that he wolde to him sell
Some poison, that he might his rattis quell,
And eke there was a Polkat in his hawe,
That, as he saied, his Capons had islawe,
And faine he wolde awreke him, if he might,
Of vermin, that destroyid 'hem by night.

The Potecarie answerd, thou shalt have
A thing, as wisly God my soule save.
In all this worldè there n'is no cature
That eteth or drinkith of this confecture 2380
Not but the mountenance of a corne of where,
That he ne shall his life anon forlete,
Ye sterre he shall, and that in a lesse while
Than thou woldest gon a pace, not but a mile,
This poison is so strong and violent.

This cursid man hath in his hondè hent
This poison in a boxe, and swithe he ran
Into the nextè strete unto a man,

And borowid of him large botels thre,
And in the two the poison pourid he, 2390
But the third he kept clene for his own drinke,
For all the night he shope him for to swinke
In caryng of the gold out of that place.
And whan this riottour, with sorie grace,
Hath fillid with him his gret bottels thre,
To his felowes ayen repairid he.

What nedith it thereof to sermon more?
For right as thei had cast his deth before,
Right so thei han him slain, and that anone;
And whan that this was doen, than spake that one,
Now let us sit and drinke, and make us mery,
And aftirward thei wolne his body bury.
And aftir that it happid one, per caas,
To take the bottle there the poison was,
And dronke, and yave his felowe drinke also,
Through whiche anon thei stervin bothè two.

But certis I suppose that Avicenne
Wrote nevir in no cannon, ne no fenne
More wondir sorowes of empoisonning,
Than had these wretchis two in ther ending. 2410
Thus endid ben these homicidis two,
And eke the false enpoisonner also.

O cursid sinne, full of all cursidnesse!
O traitour homicide! O wickidnesse!
O glotenie, luxure, and hafardie,
Thou blasphemour of Christ with vilanie
And othis grete, of usage and of pride!
Alas mankind! how maie it so beride
That to thy creatour, which that The wrought,
And with his precious blode ayen The bought, 2420
Thou art so false and so unkinde, alas!

Now gode men, God foryeve you your trespas,
And ware you fro the sinne of avarice,
Mine holy pardon maie you all warishe,
So that ye offir nobles or starlinges,
Or ellis silvir spones, brochis, or ringes,
Bowith your hedde undir this holie Bulle,
Cometh up ye wives, and offirith of your wol,
Your names I enter in my rolle anon,
Into the blisse of heven shull ye all gon: 2430
I you assoilin by mine high powere,
All ye that offrin, as clene and eke clere
As ye were borne. Lo! sirs, thus I preche.
And Jesu Christ, that is our soulis leche,
So grauntin you his pardon to receive,
For that is best, I woll you not disceive.
But sirs, one worde foryate I in my tale,
I have relikes, and pardon in my male;
As faire as any man in Engèlonde,
Whiche were yevin me by the Pop'is honde. 2440
If any' of you woll of devocion
Offrin, and have mine absolucion,
Cometh forth anon, and knelith here adoun,
And mekily receivith your pardoun,
Or ellis takith pardon as ye wende,
All newe and freshe at every toun'is end,
So that ye offrin alweie newe and newe
Nobles or pens, whiche that ben gode and true;
It is grete honour to' everiche that is here,
That ye have a sufficient pardonere 2450
To assoile you, in countre there ye ride,
For aventuris, whiche that maie betide;
Peraventure there maie fall one or two
Doun of ther hors, and breke ther necke a two;
Loke whiche a suretie it is to you all,
That I am in your felowship ifall,
That maie assoilin you bothe more and lasse,
Whan that the soule shall fro the body passe.
I redè that our hoste here shall beginne,
For he is mošte envelopid in sinne; 2460
Come forth, sir hoste, and offir first anon,
And thou shalt kisse the relikes everichon,

Ye for a grote, unbokle' anon thy purse,
 Naie naie (qð he) than have I Christ's curse.
 Let be (qð he) it shall not be so theiche,
 Thou wouldist make me kisse thin eldè breche,
 And swere it were a relike of a saint,
 Though it wer with thy foundement depaint,
 But by the crosse, whiche that saint Helain fond,
 I would I had thine coilons in mine hond 2480
 Instede of relikes, or of sanctuarie,
 Let cut 'hem of, I woll help 'hem to carie,
 Thei shall be shrinid in an hogg's torde.
 This Pardoner answerid not a worde,

So wroth he was, he would no wordè saie.
 Now (qð our hoste) I woll no lengir plaie
 With The, ne with non othir angrie man.
 But right anon the worthy knight began,
 Whan that he sawe that al the people lough,
 No more of this, for it is right inough, 2490
 Sir Pardoner, be mery' and glad of chere,
 And ye sir hoste, that ben to me so dere;
 I praie you that ye kisse the Pardoner,
 And Pardoner, I praie The drawe The nere,
 And as we did, so let us laugh and plaie,
 Anon thei kised, and ridin forth ther waie.

Here endeth the PARDONER'S TALE.

Here beginneth the Host's words, and the Shipmann's Prologue.

NOW frendis all sayid our host so dere,
How likith you by John the Pardonere?
He hath unbokelid right well the male,
He hath us toldè right a thriftie tale 2500
As touching of mennis misgovernance,
I praye to God him yevin as gode chance

As ye han herde of these riottours thre.
I praye The, gentill Mariner, hertily,
Tell us a gode tale, and that right anon.
I shall be doen, by God and by saint John, 2510
Saièd this Mariner, as well as I can;
And right anon his tale he thus began.

Here endeth the SHIPMANN's PROLOGUE.

Here foloweth the SHIPMANN's TALE.

A Marchaunt whilom dwelled at saint Denise,
That rich was, for the which men held him wife; 2510
A wife he had of excellent beaute,
And compinable, and revelous was she,
Whiche is a thing that causith more dispence,
Than worth is all the chere and reverence
That men 'hem doen, at festis and at daunces,
Soche salutacions and countinaunces
Passith, as doeth a shadowe on a wall,
But wo is him that payin mote for all,
The sely husbonde algate he mote paie,
He mote them both clothin and eke arraie 2520
All for his owne worshippe full richily,
In whiche arraie thei dauncin jolily,
And if that he maie not, paraventure,
Or ellis list not soche dispence endure,

But thinkith, that it is wast and iloste,
Than more an othir payin for ther coste
And lende them gold, and that is perilous.
This noble Marchaunt held a noble hous,
For whiche he had all daie so grete repaire,
For his largesse, and for his wife was faire, 2530
That wondir was: but herkenith to my tale.
Emongis all his gestis grete and smale
There was a Monke, a faire man and a bold,
I trowe that thurtie Winter he was old,
That evre' in one was drawing to that place.
This yongè Monke, that so faire was of face,
Acquaintid was so wele with this gode man,
Sithinis that their first knowlege began,
That in his hous as familier was he
As it is possible' any frende to be. 2540
And for as moche as that this godè man
And eke this Monke, of the whiche I began,

Werin

Werin bothe two yborne in one village,
The Monke him claimid, as for cosinage,
And he again sayid not onis naie,
But was as glad thereof, as foule of daie,
For to his herte it was a grete plesauce.

Thus ben they knit with eterne aliaunce,
And eke of 'hem gan othe to ensue
Of brotherhed, whilis ther life may dure.

Fre was Dan John, and namely of dispens
As in that hous, and full of diligence
To doc plesauce, and also grete costage,
He foryate not to yevin the leste page.
In all that hous, but aftir ther degre,
He yave the lorde, and sithin his meine,
Whan that he came, some manir honest thing,
For whiche thei wer as glad of his comming
As foule is faine, whan that the sunne up riseth,
No more hereof as now, for it siffiseth.

But so bifell, this Marchaunt on a daie
Shope him to makin redy his araie,
Toward the toun of Bruges for to fare,
To buyin there a porcion of ware,
For whiche he hath sent to Paris anon,
A messenger, and prayid hath Dan John
That he should come to S. Denis to plain
With him, and with his wife, a day or twain,
Or he to Bruges went, in alle wise.

This noble Monke, of which I you devise,
Hath of his Abbot, as him list, licence,
Bicause he was a man of his prudence,
And eke an officer, out for to ride,
To sene ther graungis and ther bernis wide,
And unto saint Denis he cometh anon.

Who was so welcome, as my lorde Dan John
Our dere cosin, so full of curtesie?
With him he brought a jubbe of Malvesie,
And eke an othir full of fine vernage
And volatily, as was his usage;
And thus I let 'hem both ete, drinke, and plaie,
This marchaunt and this monke, a daie or tway.

The third daie this Marchaunt he up risith,
And on his nede sadly him avisith,
And up into his counting hous goth he
To rekin with himself, as well maie be,
Of thilke yere, how that it with him stode,
And how that he dispendid had his gode,
And if that he encrefid were or none;
His bokis and his baggis many one
He laieth afore him on his counter borde,
Full riche ywas his tresour and his horde,
For whiche ful fast his counter dore he shet,
And eke he n'olde that no man should him let
Of his accompris, for the menè time,
And thus he fare till it was passid prime.

Dan John was up on the morowe also,
And in the gardin walkid to and fro,
And hath his thingis saied full curtisly.

This gode wife comith walking privily
Into the gardin, where he walkid soft,
And him salueth, as she hath doen full oft,
A maidin child came in her companie,
Whiche as her lust, she maie governe and gie,
For as yet undir the yerde was the maied.

O dere cosin Dan John, this gode wife sayed,
What ailith you so rathe for to arise?

Nice (qð he) it ought inough to suffise
Five houris for to sleepin on a night,
But it were for an old and pallid wight,
As ben these weddid men, that lie and dare,
As in a forme sittith a wery Hare
All forstraughtin, with houndis gret and smale;
But my dere Nece, why loke ye now so pale?
I trowe for certaine that our gode man
Hath you labourid, sith this night began,

That you were nede to restin hastily,
And with that worde he lough full merily,
And with his own thought he woxin all red.
This faire wife began for to shake her hed,
And sayid thus, ye God wore all (qð she) 2620
Nai cosin mine, it stont not so with me,
For by that God that yave me soule and life
In al the relme of Fraunce, is there no wife
That leste lust hath unto that sorie plaie,
For I may singen alas, and welawaie
That I was borne! but to no wight (qð she)
Dare I not tellin how it stont with me.
Wherefore I thinke out of this world to wende,
Or els of my self sone to make an ende, 2630
So full I am of drede and eke of care.

This Monke began upon this wife to stare
And saied alas! naie, dere nece, God forbede
That ye for any sorowe, or for drede
Fordo your self, but tellith me your grefe,
Peraventure I maie in your mischefe
Counsaile or helpe, and therfore tellith me
All your anoie, for it shall seere be,
For on my Porthose I makin an othe,
That never in my life, for lefe ne lothe, 2640
Ne shall I of no counsaile you bewraie.

The same ayen to you (qð she) I saie
By God and by this Porthose I you swere,
Though men would me all into peeces tere,
Ne shall I nevir, for to go to hell,
Bewraie o worde, of thing that ye me tell,
Not for no cosinage, ne aliaunce,
But verily for love and affiaunce.

Thus ben thei sworne, and hereupon thei kiste,
And ilke of 'hem told othir what 'hem liste. 2650

Cosin (qð she) if that I had a space
As I have none, and namely in this place,
Than would I telle a legende of my life
That I suffrid have, sith I was a wife,
With mine husbond, though he be your cosin.

Naie (qð this Monke) by God and S. Martin
He n'is no more a cosin unto me
Than is this lefe, that hongith on the tre,
I clepe him so, by saint Denis of Fraunce,
To havin the more cause of acquaintaunce 2660
Of you, whom I have lovid specially
Aboven all othir women sikirly,
This swere I you on my professioun,
Tellith your grefe, lest that he come adome,
And haltith you, and goth your waie anon.

My dere love (qð she) O my own Dan John,
Full lefe me were this counsaile for to hide,
But out it mote, it maie no lengir bide.

My husbonde is to me the worstle man,
That evir was, sithin the worlde began, 2670
But sithen I am a wife, it sit not me
To tellin no wight of our privite
Neither in bed, ne in none othir place,
God shilde that I should tell it for his grace,
A wife ne should not say of her husbonde
But all honour, as I can undirstonde,
Save unto you, thus much I tellin shall,
As helpe me God, he is noughte worthe at all,
In no degre, the value of a flie,

But yet me grevith most his nigardie, 2680
And wel ye wot, that women nat'urally
Desirin thingis fixe, as well as I,
They woldin that ther husbondis should be
Hardy, and wise, and riche, and therto fre,
And buxom to his wife, and freshe abed,
But by that ilke Lorde that for us bled,
For his honoure, my selfe for to arraye
A sonday next, I mote nedis paye
An hundred frankes, or ellis am I lorne,
Yet were me levir that I were unborne 2690
Than

Than me were done flaundir or villanie,
 And if mine husbonde eke might it asprie
 I n'ere but lost, and therfore I you prey
 Lene me this summe, or ellis mote I dey,
 Dan John I say, lene me this hundrid frankes,
 Parde I wol not failin you my thanks,
 If that ye list to do that I you pray,
 For of a certaine day I wol you pay,
 And to don you what plesaunce and service
 That I may don, right as ye list devise,
 And but I do, God take on me vengeance,
 As soule as had Genilion of Fraunce.

This gentil Monke answerd in this manere,
 Now truly nece and mine owne lady dere,
 I have (q'ð he) on you so gret a routh,
 That I you swere, and plight to you my trouthe,
 That whan your husbond is to Flaunders fare
 I wol delivir you out of this care,
 For I wol bringin you an hundrid frankes,
 And with that worde he caughte her by the flankes,
 And her embracid hard, and killed her ofte;
 Goth now your way (q'ð he) al stil and softe,
 And let us dine as sone as ere ye may,
 For by my kalender 'tis prime of day,
 Goth now, and beth as true as I shal be.

Now ellis God forbede it, sir, q'ð she,
 And forth she goth, as joly as a pie,
 And bad the cokis that they should 'hem hic,
 So that men mightin dine, and that anone.
 Up to her husbonde is this wife ygone,
 And knockid at his counter dore boldely,
Qui est lu? (q'ð he) Peter it am I
 Q'ð she, what, sir, how long wollin ye fast?
 How long time wollin ye reckin and cast
 Your summis, and your bokis, and your thinges?
 The devel have part of al suche rekeninges,
 Ye have inough (q'ð she) of Godd's sonde,
 Come down to day, and let your baggis stonde,
 Ne'be ye not ashamid that Dan John
 Shal fastin al this longè day ygon?
 What? let us go here masse, and then go dine.

Wife (q'ð this man) litill canst thou divine
 The curious besinesse that we have,
 For of us chapmen all, so God me save,
 And by that lorde that callid is seint Ive,
 Scarfly amongis twenty twelve shal thrive
 Continuelly, lastin unto their age,
 We may wel makin chere and gode visage,
 And drivin forth the world, as it may be,
 And kepin our estate in privite
 Till we be dede, or ellis that we playe
 A pilgrimage, or gone out of the way;
 And therfore have I grete necessite
 Upon this queint world to arisin me,
 For evirmore we mote stondin in drede
 Of happe and fortune, in our chapmanhede.

To Flaunders woll I gon to morue' at day,
 And come ayen as sone as ere I may,
 For whiche my derè wife, I The beseke,
 As be to every wight buxom and meke,
 And for to kepe our gode be curiouse,
 And honestly to governe wel our house,
 Thou hast inough, in every manir wise,
 That to a thrifty huswife may suffise,
 The lackith none array, ne no vitaille,
 Of silvir in thy purse thou maicst not faile.
 And with that worde his counter dore he shette,
 And doune he goth, no lengir would he lette,
 And hastily a masse was there isaide,
 And spedily the tablis were ilaide,
 And unto dinner fast thei han 'hem spedde,
 And richily the chapman this Monke fedde.

And afir dinner, Dan John sobirly
 This chapman toke aparte al privily,

And said him thus, cousin, it stondith so
 That, wel I se, to Bruges ye wol go,
 God and seint Austen spede you wele and gide,
 I pray you, cousin, wisely that ye ride,
 Governe you wel also of your diete,
 Al tempe'ratly, and namely in this hete,
 Betwixt us two, nedith no straunge fare,
 Farwel cosin, and God shilde you fro care;
 If any thing ~~thing~~ there be by day or night,
 And it lie in my power or in my might,
 That ye me wol commaunde in any wise,
 It shal be done, right as ye wol devise.

But o thing or ye go, if it may be,
 I wolde prayin you for to lenè me
 An hundrid frankis, for a weke or twey,
 For certaine bestis, that I mote nedes bey,
 To storin therewith a place that is ours,
 God helpe me so, I would it werin yours;
 I shal not failin surely at my day,
 Not for a thousande frankis, a mile way,
 But let this thing be secrete, I you pray,
 For yet this night these bestis mote I bey,
 And fare now wele, mine owne cosin dere,
 Graunt mercy of your cost and of your chere.

This noble marchaunt gentilly anon,
 Answerde and said, O cosin mine Dan John,
 Now sikirly this is a smale requeste,
 My gold is yours, whan that evir you leste,
 And not onely my golde, but my chaffare,
 Take what you list, God shildè that you spare.
 But one thing is, ye knowe it well ynough
 Of chapmen, that ther money is ther plough,
 We may creauce while that we have a name,
 But godelesse for to be it is a shame,
 Pay it ayen, when it lieth at your ese,
 After my might fain wouldin I you plesse.
 The hundrid frankis fet he forth anon,
 And privily he toke 'hem to Dan John,
 No wight of all this worlde wist of this lone,
 Saving this Marchaunt, and Dan John alone,
 Thei drinke and speke, and rome a while and pley,
 Till that Dan John ridith to his abbey.

The morow came, and forth rid this marchaunt
 To Flaunders ward, his prentis him avaunt
 Till he to Bruges came full merily;
 Now goth this Marchaunt wel and besily
 About his nedes, and bieth, and creau'nsith,
 He neither playith at dice ne dauncith,
 But as a Marchaunt, shortly for to tell,
 He ledde his life, and there I let him dwell.

The sonday next that this Marchaunt was gon
 To seint Denis ycomin is Dan John,
 With croune and berde al fresch and new ishave,
 In al this house there n'as so lite a knave,
 Ne no wight ellis, but he was ful faine
 For that my lord Dan John was comen againe,
 And shortly to the pointe right for to gon,
 This faire wife is accordid with Dan John,
 That for these C. frankes he should al night
 Havin her in his armis bolte upright,
 And this acord parformid was in dede,
 In mirth al night a besy life they lede
 Til it was day, that Dan John yede his way,
 And bad the meine farwel and gode day,
 For non of 'hem, ne no wight in the toun
 Had of Dan John any suspectioun,
 And forth he ridith home to his abbey,
 Or where him list, no more of him I sey.

This marchaunt, whan that endid was the faire,
 To saint Denis he gan for to repaire,
 And with his wife he makith fest and chere,
 And tellith her the chaffare is so dere
 That nedis must he make a chevefaunce,
 For he was bonden in a reconyfaunce

To payin twenty thousande frankes anon;
 For which this Marchaunt is to Paris gon,
 To borue' of certaine frendis that he had
 A certain frankes, and som with him he lad.
 And whan he was comin into the toun,
 For chierthe and gret affectioun
 Unto Dan John he first goth him to pley,
 Nought for to borowe of him no money,
 But for to wete and se of his welfare,
 And for to tellin him of his chaffare,
 As frendis don, when they ben mette in fere.
 Dan John him makith fest and mery chere,
 And he him tolde ayen full specially
 How he had bought, ful wel and graciously,
 Thonkid be God, all whole his Marchaundise,
 Save that he muste in alle manir wise
 Makin a chevesaunce, as for his beste,
 And then shoulidin he be in joy and reste.
 Dan John answerd, certis I am right fain
 That ye in hele be comin home again,
 And if that I were riche, as have I blisse,
 Of twenty thousand shildes shuld ye not misse, 2860
 For ye so kindly, this othir day,
 Ylent me golde, and as I can and may
 I thonke you, by God and by saint Jame;
 But nathelesse, I toke it to our dame
 Your wife at home, the same golde againe,
 Upon your benche, she wote it wel certaine,
 By certaine tokins, that I can her tell.
 Now by your leve, I may no lengir dwell,
 Our abbot wol out of this toun anon,
 And in his company I mote agon, 2870
 Gretirh well your dame, mine own nece so swete,
 And farewell dere cosin, till that we mete.
 This Marchaunt which that was ful ware and wise
 Creauncid hath, and eke paide in Paris
 To certaine lombardes, ridy in ther hondes
 This somme of golde, and gate of hem the bondes,
 And hom he goth, as mery as a jaye,
 For wel he knewe he stode in suche aray,
 That nedis must he win by that viage
 A thousand frankes, above all his costage. 2880
 His wife ful redy mete him at the yate,
 As she was wonte, of old usage algate,
 And al that night in mirth thei ben yfette,
 For he was riche, and clerely out of dette.
 Whan it was day, this marchaunt gan embrace
 His wife al newe, and kissed her in her face,
 And up he goeth, and made it wonder tough.
 No more (qð she) by God ye have inough,
 And wantonly ayen with him she plaide,
 Til at the laste this marchaunt thus ysaide.

By God (qð he) I am a litill wrothe
 With you my wife, although it be me lothe,
 And wote ye why? by God as I may gesse
 For ye have made a manir of straungenesse
 Betwixtin me and my cosin Dan John,
 Ye should have warnid me, or I had gon.
 That he had you an hundrid frankis paide
 By redy token, and held him ill apaide
 For that I to him spake of chevesaunce,
 Me semid so, as by his countenance, 2900
 But nathelesse, by God our hevin King
 I ne thought not to aske of him nothing;
 I prai The wife, ne doith no more so,
 Tell me alway er that I fro The go,
 Yf any dettour hath in mine absence
 Ypayid The, lest through thy negligence
 I might him aske a thing that he hath paide.
 This wife was not aserde ne yet asstraide,
 But boldily she saide, and that anon,
 Mary I desie that false monke Dan John, 2910
 I kepe not of his tokins nevre' a dele,
 He toke me certaine golde, I wote it wele,
 What evill the dome on his monk's snoute,
 For God it wote, I wende withoutin doute,
 That he had yeve it me, bicause of you,
 To don therwith mine honour and my prow,
 For cosinage, and eke for belle chere,
 That he hath had ful oftin rimis here,
 But sith I se it stonte in suche disjoynte,
 I wol answer you shortely to the pointe. 2920
 Ye have mo slackir dettours than am I,
 For I wol pay you well and redily
 Fro day to daie, and if so be I faile,
 I am your wife, score it upon my taile,
 Or I shall paie as sone as ere I maie,
 For by my trueth, I have on mine aray,
 And not in waste, bestowed it every dele,
 And for I have bestowid it so wele,
 To your honour, for Godd's sake, I say,
 As be not wrothe, but let us laugh and playe; 2930
 Ye shall my joly body have to wedde,
 By God I n'il not pay you but a bedde,
 Foryeve it me, mine own spouse so dere,
 Turne hithirward, and makith better chere.
 This marchaunt sawe ther was no remedy,
 And for to chide it was but a foly,
 Sith that the thing may not amendid be,
 Now wife he said, I do foryeve it The,
 But in thy life, ne be no more so large,
 Kepe bet my gode, this yeve I The in charge. 2940
 Thus endith now my tale, and God us sende
 Taling inough, unto our our liv'is ende.

Here endeth the SHIPMAN'S TALE.

Here folowe the wordes of our Hoste.

ELL said by Corpus Domini (qð our Hoste)
 Now longe more thou sailin by the See
 coste,
 Thou gentil maistir, gentil marinere,
 God give the Monke a thousande last quad yere,
 Aha! felowes, beware of suche a jape,
 The monke put in the marchautes hode an ape,
 And in his wiv's eke, by saint Austyn
 Drawith no monkis more into your inne. 2950
 But nowe passe ovir, let us seke aboute

Who shall tel now the first of all this route
 Anothir tale, and with that worde he saide
 As curtisly, as it had ben a maide,
 My lady Prioress, now by your leve,
 So that I wil that I shuld you not greve,
 I wolde demin that ye tellin sholde
 A tale nexte, if so be that ye wolde.
 Now wollin ye vouchsafe my lady dere.
 Gladly (qð she) and said in this manere. 2960

Here endeth the wordes of our Hoste.

O o

Here

Here beginneth the PRIORESSE's PROLOGUE.

Domine Dominus noster, quàm admirabile est nomen tuum in universâ terrâ.

Orde our Orde, thy name how marveilouse
Is in this widè world ysprad, qð she,
For not only thy Laudis preciouſe
Parfourmid are by men of dignite,
But by the mouth of children thy bounte
Parfourmid is, for on the breste sucking
Sometimis shewin they thine herying.

Wherfore in laude, as I can best and may,
Of The and her that is the lilly floure
Whiche that The bare, and is a maide alway, 2970
To telle a storie, I wol do my laboure,
Nought that I may encrefin her honoure,
For she her selfe is honour and the rote
Of bountie, next her sonne, and soul's bote.

Mothir maidin, O maid and mothir fre,
O bushe unbrent, brenning in Moyſes sight,
That ravishedest down fro the deite,

Through thin humbleſſe, the Goſt that in The light,
Of whose vertue, when he in thin hert pight,
Concevid was the Father's ſapience, 2980
Helpe me to tel it in thy reverence.

Lady, thy bounte, and thy magnificence,
Thy vertue, and thy gret humilite
There may no tonge expreſſe, in no ſcience,
For ſomtime, lady, er men praie to The,
Thou goeſt before, of thy benignite,
And gettiſt us the light through thy prayere
To gidin us unto thy ſonne ſo dere,

My conning is to weke, O bliſful Quene,
For to declarin thy high worthineſſe, 2990
That I ne may the weight of it ſuſtene,
But as a childe of twelve moneth old and leſſe,
That can unnethis any worde expreſſe,
Right ſo fare I, and therefore I you pray
Gidith my ſonge, that I ſhal of you ſay.

Here endith the PRIORESSE's PROLOGUE.

Here

Here foloweth her TALE.

A Miracle of a Christian Child murder'd by the Jews.

Here was in Asie, in a grete cite;
Amongis christin folke a jewerie,
Sustenid by a lorde of that countre,
For soule usury, and lucre of villany,
Hateful to Christ, and to his company,
And thorough the strete men might ride and wende;
For it was fre, and open at every ende.

A litil schole of Christin folke there stode
Doun at the farthir ende, in whiche there were Children an hepe, comin of Christin blode,
That lernid in that schole fro yere to yere
Such manere doctrine, as men usin here,
This is to say, to singin and to rede,
As smale children done in ther childehede. 3010

Amonges these children was a wedowes son
A clergion, that vii. yere was of age,
That day by day unto schole was his won,
And also eke, where he sey the image
Of Christ's mothir, had he in usage,
As him was taught, to knele adoun and say
An Ave Maria, as he goth by the way.

Thus hath this wedow' her litil child itaught
Our blissid lady, Christ's mothir dere,
To worship aye, and he foryate it naught,
For the sely childe would al day sone lere;
But aye, when I remembre this matere,
Saint Nicholas stont aye in my presence,
For he so yonge to Christ did reverence. 3020

This litil childe his litil boke lerning
As he sate in the schole at his primere,
Herde Alma Redemptoris Mater singe,
As chidren lered ther antiphonere,
And as he durst, he drewe aye nere and nere,
And herkened to the wordis and the note, 3030
Til that he the first verse couth al by rote.

Nought wist he what this latin was to say,
For he so yonge and tendir was of age,
But on a day his felowe gan he pray
To expoun him the song, in his langage,
Or tell him why this song was in usage,
This praide he him to confire and declare
Fall oftin timis, upon his knees bare.

His felowe, which that elder was than he,
Answerd him thus, this song I have herd say 3040
Was made upon our blessid lady fre,
Her to salewe, and eke her for to prey
To ben our helpe, and succour, when we dey,
I can no more expoun in this mater,
I lerne to singe, I can but smal grammer.

And is this songe imade in reverence
Of Christ's mothir, said this innocent?
Now certis I wol done my diligence
To conne it al er Christinmasse be went,
Though that I for my primer should be shent, 3050
And should be betin thre times in an houre,
I wol it conne, our lady to honoure.

His felaw taught him homwarde privily
Fro day to day, til he couthe it by rote,

And than he songe it wel and boldly
Fro worde to worde, acordig to the note,
And twise a day it passith through his throte,
To scolewarde, and homewarde when that he went,
On Christ's mothir set was his entent.

As I have saide throughout the jewerie 3060
This litil childe as he came to and fro,
Ful merily then would he singe, and crye
Alma Redemptoris Mater, ere mo,
The swetenesse hath his herte yperfid so
Of Christ's mothir, that to her to pray
He cannot stinte of singing by the way.

Our firste foe, the Serpent Sathanas,
That hath in Jewis hert his waspis nest
Up swale and said, O Ebrake peple' alas!
Is this a thing to you that is honeste, 3070
That suche a boy shal walkin as him leste
In your dispite, and singen of suche sentence
Whiche is against your law's reverence?

From thence forth the jewis han conspirid
This innocent out of this worlde to chafe,
An homicide therto han thei hirid,
That in an aley had a privy place,
And as the child gan forth by for to pace,
This cursid Jewe him hent, and heldin faste,
And cutte his throte, and in a pitte him caste. 3080

I say that in a wardrope thei him threwe,
Where that the Jewis purgid ther intraille.
O cursid folke of Herodes all newe,
What may your evill entent you availe?
Murder wol out, certis it woll not faile,
And namely ther the' honor of God shal sprede,
The bloud out cryith on your cursid dede.

O martyr crownid in Virginite,
Now mayst thou singe folowing ay in one 3090
The pure white Lambe celestial, qd she,
Of whiche the gret evangliste seint John
In Pathmos wrote, which sayith that they gon
Before this lambe, and sing a song al newe,
That never fleshy woman thei ne knewe.

This pore widowe awaitith al the night
Aftir her litill childe, and he came nought,
For whiche as sone as it was day's light
With face all pale for drede, and bely thought
She hath at scole, and ellis where him sought,
Til finally, she gan so farre aspie 3010
That he was last seine in the jewerie.

With mother's pite in her bresle enclosed
She goth as she wer halfe out of her minde
To every place, where that she hath supposed
By likelyhode her litil childe to finde,
And ere on Christ's mothir, meke and kinde,
She cryid, and at the last thus she wrought,
Among the cursid Jewis she him sought.

She frenith, and she prayith pitoussly
To every Jewe that dwellith in thilke place, 3110
To tellin her, if her childe went there by,
They al say nay; but Jesu of his grace

Yave

Yave in her thought, within a litill space,
That in that place, aftir her sonne she criede
There he was caste into a pitte beside.

O grete God, that parfournidist thy laude
By mouthe of innocence, lo here thy might!
This Jemme of Chastite, this Emeraude,
And eke of martirdome the rubie bright,
There he with throte ycorvin lay upright, 3120
He (Alma redemptoris) gan to singe
So loude that all the place began to ringe.

The cristin folke, that thorough the strete went,
In comin, for to wondir on this thing,
And hastily they for the Provost sent,
Which foundin the child freshly yet bleding,
And heryeth Christ that is of Hevin King,
And eke his mothir, honoure of mankinde,
And aftir that, the Jewis let he binde.

This childe with pitous lamentacion 3130
Was up takin, singin his songe alway,
And with honoure, and grete procession
Thei carien him unto the nexte abbey,
His mothir sownin by the bere ylay,
Unnethis might the peple that wer there
This sorowful Rachell bring fro his bere.

With turment and with shamful deth eche one
This Provost doth these Jewis for to sterve,
That of this murdre wist, and that anone
He ne wolde no such cursidnesse observe, 3140
Evill shall he have that wol ill deserve,
Therefore with wild horses he did 'hem drawe,
And aftirwarde he honge 'hem by the lawe.

Upon his bere aye lieth this innocent
Before the chefe aulter, whiles the massc last,
And aftir that, the' abbot with his covent
Them speddin for to bury him ful fast,
And when they holy watir on him caste,
Yet spake the child, when sprint was holy water,
And songe, O alma redemptoris mater! 3150

This abbot, which that was an holy man,
As monkis ben, or ellis ought to be,
This yongè childe to covir he began,
And saide: O derè childe, I hailin The
By vertue of the holy Trinite

Tell me what is thy cause thus for to sing,
Sithins thy throte is cutte to my seming.

My throte is cutte, unto my neckè bone,
Sayid this child, and as by way of kind 3160
I shoulde have dyid, ye longe time agone,
But Jesu Christ, as ye in bokis finde,
Wol that his glory laste and be in minde,
And for the worship of his mothir dere
Yet may I sing (O alma) loude and clere.

This wel of mercy, Christ's mothir swete,
I lovid alway, aftir my conning,
And when that I my life yshold forlete
To me she came, and badde me for to sing
This antem verily in my dying, 3170
As ye han herde, and when that I had songe,
Me thought she layd a graine upon my tonge.

Wherefore I sing, and sing I mote certaine
In honour of the blisful maidin fre,
Til fro my tonge of takin is the graine;
And aftir that, thus she said unto me,
My litle childe, now wol I fetchin The
When that the graine is fro thy tong itake,
Be not agaste, I wol The not forsake.

This holy monke, this abbot, him mene I,
His tonge out caught, and toke away the grayne,
And he yave up the goste ful softly;
And when this abbot had this wondir seyne,
His saltè teris triklid doune as reyne,
And groling he fell plat upon the grounde,
And stil he lay, as he had ben ibounde.

The covent lay eke upon the pavement
Weping and herying Christ's mothir dere,
And aftir that thei risen, and forth ben went,
And toke away this martir fro the bere,
And in a tombe of marble stonis clere 3190
Enclosin they his litle body swete,
There he is now God graunt us for to mete.

O yongè Hewe of Lincoln, slaine also
With cursid Jewes, as it is notable,
For it is but a littil while ago,
Praise eke for us, we sinful folke unstable,
That of his mercy God be merciabie
On us, and his grete mercy multiply,
For revèrence of his mothir Mary.

Here endeth the PRIORESSE TALE.

~~~~~

Here foloweth the wordes of the Hoste to CHAUCER.

¶ When said was this miracle, every man 3200
As sobre was, as wondir was to se,
Til that our hoste to japiñ began,
And than at erste he lokid upon me
And saidè thus: what man arte thou? (qð he)
Thou lokist, as thou wouldist finde an hare,
For evir on the grounde I se The stare.

Aprochin nere, and loke up merily
Now ware you sirs, and let this man have place,
He in the waffe is shapen as wel as I,
This were a popet in armes to enbrace, 3210

For any woman, fmale and faire of face,
He semith elvishe by his countenance,
For unto no wight doth he daliaunce.

Say now somwhat sith othir folke han said,
Tel us a tale of mirthe and that anon.
Hoste (qð I) ne be not evil apaide,
For othir tale ne certis can I none
But of a rime, I lernid yore agone.
Ye that is gode (qð he) we shullin here
Some deinte thing, me thinkith by thy chere. 3220

Here endeth the wordes of the Hoste.

Here

A Northern Tale of an outlandish Knight, purposely utter'd by CHAUCER, in a Rime and Style differing from the rest, as though he himself were not the Author, but only the Reporter of the other Tales.

Listenith lordinges in gode entent,
And I wol tellin verament
Of mirth and of solas,
All of a knight was faire and gent
In batayle and in turnament,

His name was sir Thopas.
Iborne he was in ferre countre
In Flaunders, al beyonde the see,
At Popering in the place.
His fathir was a man ful fre,
And lorde he was of that countre,
As it was Godd's grace.
Sir Thopas was a doughty swaine,
White was his face as paine de maine,
His lippis redd as rose,
His rudde is like scarlet in graine,
And I you tell in gode certaine
He had a semely nose.
His here, his berde was like saffroun,
That to his girdel raught adoun,
His shone of cordewane.
Of Bruges were his hofin broun,
His robe was of chekelatoun,
That cost many a jane.
He couthe hunt at the wildè dere,
And ride an hauking by the rivere
With grey goshaue on honde.
Therto he was a gode archere,
Of wrastring was there none his pere,
There any Ram should stonde.
Full many a maide bright in bour
They mournid for him paramoure,
Whan hem were bet to slepe.
But he was chaste, and no lechoure,
And swete as is the Bramble floure,
That berith the redde hipe.
And so befell upon a daie
Forsoth, as I you tellin maie,
Sir Thopas would outride.
He worth upon his stede so graie,
And in his honde a launce so gaie,
A long swerde by his side.
He prickith through a faire forest,
Therein was many a wilde beste,
Ye bothe the Bucke and Hare.
And as he prickid North and Este
I tellin you, him had almeste
Beride a forie care.
There springin herbis grete and small,
The Licoris and Setuall,
And the Clove glosfer,
And Nutmigus, to put in ale,
Whither it be or newe or stale,
Or for to lie in cofer.
The birdis singen, it is no naie,
The Sperhaue and the Poppingaie,
That joie it was to here.
The Throstill Cock eke made his laie,
The wode Larke sitting on a spray,
She song full loud and clere.
Sir Thopas fill in love longing,
And whan he herd the Throstill sing,
He prickid as he were wode,
His faire courser in his pricking
So swette, that men mightin him wring,
His sidis were all blode.
Sir Thopas eke so werie was,

For pricking on the softè gras,
So fiers was his corage,
That doune he laied him in that place, 3290
To makin his stede some solace,
And gave him gode forage.
Oh, saint Mary, benedicte!
What ailith this same love at me
To blindè me so fore?
Me dremid all this night, parde,
An else quene shall my lemman be,
And slepe undir my gore.
An Else Quene woll I love I wis,
For in this worlde no woman is Worthy to be my make, 3300
All othir women I forsake,
And to an Else Quene I me take
By dale and eke by doune.
Into his saddle he clombe anone,
And prickid ovir stile and stone
An Else Quene to espie. 3240
Till he so long hath ridden and gone
That he fonde in a privie wone
The countre of Fairie.
Wherein he fought both North and South 3310
And oft he spirid with his mouth,
In many forest wilde;
But in that Countre n'as there none
Ne neither wife ne childe.
Till him there came a grete Giaunt,
His name was called sir Oliphaunt,
A perillous man of deede.
He sayid childe, by Termagaunt,
But if thou pricke out of my haunt,
Anon I slea thy stede.
Here wonith the Quene of Fairie, 3320
With Harpe and Pipe, and Simphonie,
Within this place and bour,
The child saied, also mote I the
To morowe woll I metin The Whan I have mine armoure. 3260
And yet I hopin par ma faie,
That thou shalt with this launcè gaie,
Abie it through thy mawe,
Thy hawbeck shall I, if I may,
Perce, er it be ful prime of day, 3330
For here thou shalt be slawe.
Sir Thopas drowe abacke full fast,
This Giaunt at him stonis cast
Out of a fell staffe sling. 3270
But faire escapid sir Thopas,
And all was thorough Godd's grace,
And through his faire bering.
Yet listenith lordinges to my tale,
Merier than the Nightingale,
For now I woll ye rounce, 3340
How sir Thopas, with sidis smale
Pricking all ovir doune and dale,
Is comen ayen to rounce.
His mery men commaundid he
To makin him bothe game and gle,
For nedis must he fight
With a Giaunt, with heddis thre,
For paramoures and jolite
Of one that shone full bright. 3350
Doc come he saied my ministralis
And jeflors, to tell us talis
Anon in mine arming,
P p Of

Of Romaunces that been roials
 Of Popis and of Cardinals
 And eke of love longing.
 Thei fet him first the swete wine,
 And Mede eke in a Mazeline,
 And roiall spicerie,
 Of Ginger brede that was full fine,
 Of Licoris, and eke Comine,
 With Suger that is trie.
 He did on next his white lere
 Of cloth of lake full fine and clere
 A breche and eke a sherte.
 And next his shert an haketon,
 And ovir that an habergeon
 For percing of his herte.
 And ovir that a fine hauberke
 Was all iwrought of Jewis werke,
 Full strong it was of plate.
 And over that his cote armoure
 As white as is the Lilly floure,
 In whiche he would debate.
 His shilde was all of gold so redde,
 And theron was a Bor's hedde,
 A carbocle beside.
 And there he swore by ale and brede
 How that the Giaunt should be dede
 Betide what so betide.
 His jambeux were of cure buly,
 His sword's shethe of Ivorie,
 His helme of Laton bright.
 His sadell was of ruel bone,
 His bridle as the Sunne yshone
 Or as the Mone ylight.
 His spere was of the fine Sypres
 That bodith warre, and nothing pece,
 The hedde full sharpe igrounde.

His stede ywas all dapple graie,
 He goth an aumble by the waie 3390
 Full softly and full round,
 There n'as his pere in any londe;
 Lo! Lordis mine, here is a fit,
 If ye woll any more of it
 To tell it woll I fonde.
 3360
NOW hold your mouth for charite
 Bothe Knight and also Lady fre,
 And kerkenith to my spell.
 Of battaile and of chevalrie,
 And eke of Ladies love drierie 3400
 Anon I woll you tell.
 Men speke of Romaunces of pris,
 Of Hornechild, and of Ipotis,
 Of Bevis and sir Gie,
 3370 Of sir Libeaux, and Blaindamoure,
 But sir Thopas berith the floure
 Of riall chevalrie.
 His gode Courser he hath bestrode,
 And forth upon his waie he rode
 As sparke out of the bronde. 3410
 Upon his creste he bare a toure,
 And therin sticked a Lilly floure,
 God shilde his cors fro shonde!
 And for he was a knight aventrous
 3380 He n'oldè slepin in none hous,
 But liggin in his hode.
 His bright helmet was his wanger,
 And by him baytid his destrer
 Of herbis fine and gode.
 Himself dronke watir of the well 3420
 As did the knight sir Persivell
 So worthy undir wede.
 Till it was on a day

Here our Hoste interrupteth the Rime of Sir THOPAS.

NO more of this for Godd's dignite,
 (Q' then our hoste) for thou makist me
 So wery of thy very leudenes,
 That al so wisly God my soule bleße
 Mine eris akin of thy draftie speche,
 Now soche a rime the devill I beteche,
 This maie well be clepe rime Dogrell (q' he)
 3430 Why so (q' I) why wolt thou lettin me
 More of my tale, than any othir man,
 Sens that it is the best rime that I can?
 By God (q' he) full plainly at o worde
 Thy draftie riming is not worth a torde,
 Thou dost nought ellis but dispendist time,
 Sir at one worde, thou shalt no lengir rime.
 Let se whither thou canst tell ought in gest,
 Or tellin in prose somewhat at the left,
 In whiche there maie be some mirthe or doctrine.
 Gladly (q' I) by Godd's swete pine 3440
 I woll you tell a little thing in prose,
 That ought to like you as I do suppose;
 Or els ye be certis to daungerous,
 For it is a morall tale vertuous,
 All be it tolde somtime in sondrie wise
 Of sondrie folke, as I shall you devise.
 As thus, ye wote that every' Evangelist,
 That tellich us the paine of Jesu Christ,
 Ne saiech not all thing as his felowe doeth,

But natheless ther sentence is all soth, 3450
 And all they acordin in ther sentence,
 All be there in ther telling difference,
 For some of 'hem saine more, and some saine lesse,
 Whan thei his pitous passion expresse.
 I mene of Mathew and Mark, Luke and John,
 But doutiless ther sentence is all one.
 And therefore, Lordingis, I you beseeche,
 If that you think I varie in my speche,
 As thus, although I tellin somewhat more
 Of proverbis, than ye han herd bfore 3460
 Comprehendid in this lite tretise here,
 To' enforcin with the' effect of my matere,
 And though I the same wordis do not say
 As ye han herd, yet to all you I praie,
 Blamith me not, for that in my sentence
 Shull ye not findin mochill difference
 Fro the sentencis of this tretis lite,
 After the whiche this merie tale I write.
 And therefore herkinith what I shall saie,
 And let me tell my tale I do you praie. 3470

MS. Ch. has these lines after.

Here endyth Chaucer's tale of Sire Thopas,
 A doughty Knight in alle his dede;
 God us helpe and Saynt Thomas,
 And graunte us alle grace weel to spede.

Here ende the wordes of our Hoste.

Here

Here beginneth CHAUCER's TALE of MELIBEUS.

Young manne called Melibeus, mightie and riche, begate upon his wife that called was Prudence, a doughtir whiche that called was Sophie.

Upon a daie bifell that he for his disport is went into the felde him to plaie: His wife and eke his doughtir hath he left within his hous, of whiche the dores were faste ishet. Four of his old foos han it aspied, and settin ladders to the walles of his hous, and by the windowes ben entred, and bet his wife, and wounded his daughter, with five mortall woundes, in five sondrie places: That is to saie, in her fere, in her hondes, in her eres, in her nose, and in her mouthe, and lesten her for ded, and wenten ther waie.

Whan Melibeus retourned was into his hous, and see all this mischief, he like a mad man renting his clothes, gan to wepe and crie.

Prudence his wife, as ferforth as she durst besought him of his weping for to stinte: But not forthy, he gan to wepe and crie ever lenger the more.

This noble wife Prudence remembred her upon the sentence of Ovide, in his boke that cleped is the remedy of love, wher as he saith he is a sole that distourbeth the mother to wepe, in the deth of her childe, till she have wepte her fill, as for a certain time: and than shall a man doen his diligence with amiable wordes, to recomfort and praie her of her weping for to stinte. For whiche reson this noble wife Prudence, suffered her husbende to wepe and crie, as for a certain space: and whan she sawe her time, she saied him in this wise. Alas my Lorde (qð she) why make ye your self for to be like a tole? Forsoth it apperteineth not unto a wise manne, to maken soche a forowe. Your doughter, with the grace of God, shall warishe and escape. And all were it so that the right now were ded, ye ne ought not as for her deth your self distroy. Senek saith the wise manne sha'l not take to grete discomfort for the deth of his children, but certes he should suffre it in pacience, as well as he abideth the deth of his owne proper person.

This Melibeus answerde anon and said: What man (qð he) should of his weping stinte, that hath so grete a cause for to wepe: Jesus himself our Lord wepte for the deth of Lazarus his frende. Prudence answered, certes well I wor, a temperate weping is nothing defended, to him that sorowfull is, emonge folke in sorow, but it is rather graunted him to wepe. The Apostle Poule unto the Romanes writeth, menne should rejoice with him that maketh joie, and wepe with soche folke as wepen. But though a temperate weping be graunted, certes outrageous weping is defended. Melire of weping should be considered, after the lore that techeth us Senek. Whan that thy frende is dedde (qð he) let not thin eyen to moule ben of teres, ne to moch drie: although teres comen to thine eyen, let hem not fal. And whan thou hast forgon thy frende, doe diligence to get an other frende: and this is more wisdom than for to wepe for thy frende, whiche thou haste lorne, for therein is no bote. And therefore if you governe you by sapience, put awaie sorowe out of your herte. Remembreth you that Jesus Sirake saieth, a man that is joyous and glad in herte it him conserveth flourishing in his age: But sothely a sorowfull herte maketh his bones drie. He saieth eke thus, that sorowe in herte slaketh lim by a manne. Salomon saieth, that right as mooghther in the shepes fleise anoieth the clothes, and the fleise wormes wormes the tre, right so anoieth sorowe the herte of man, wherfore us ought as well in the deth of our children, as in the losse of our temporall godes, have pacience.

Remember you upon pacient Jobe, whan he had losse his children and his temporalle substaunce, and in his body endured and received full many a grevous tribulacion, yet saied he thus: Our Lorde it sente to me, our Lorde hath biraft it me, right so as our Lorde would, right so it be don, iblest be the name of our Lorde. To these forsaied thinges Melibeus unto his wife Prudence answerd: All thy wordes (qð he) ben true, and therto profitable, but truly mine herte is troubled with this sorowe so greuously, that I n'ot what to do. Let call (qð Prudence) your true frendes al and thy linage, whiche that ben wise, and telleth to 'hem your case, and herkeneth what thei saie in counsailling, and govern you after ther sentence. Salomon saith, werke al thy things by counsaile, and thou shalt never rue. Than by counsaile of his wife Prudence, this Melibeus let cause a grete congregacion of peple, as Surgiens, Phisiciens, olde folke and yong, and some of his oide enemies reconciled (as by ther semblante) to his love and to his grace: and therwithal there came some of his neighbours, that did him reverence more for drede than for love, as it happe ofte. There comen also full many subtrill flatterers, and wise Advocates lerned in the lawe. And whan these folkes togethers assembled were, this Melibeus, in sorowful wise, shewed 'hem his case, and by the maner of his speche it semed that in herte he bare a cruell ire, redy to doen vengeance upon his foes, and sodainly he desired that warre should begin, but nathelste yet asked he counsaile upon this matter. A Surgien by licence and assent of soche as were wise up rose, and unto Melibeus saied, as ye shall here.

Sir (qð he) as to us Sergiens appartaineth, that we do to every wight the best that we can, where as we ben withholden, and to our paciente that we doen no damage: wherfore it happeth many time and oft, that whan two men have everiche wounded other, one Surgien heleth 'hem bothe, wherfore unto our art it is not pertinent to norish warre, ne parties to supporte. But certes, as to the warishing of your doughter, al be it so that perilously she be wounded, we shall doe so tentise businesse fro daie to night, that, with the grace of God, she shall ben whole and sounde, as sone as is possible. Almoste right in the same wise the Phisiciens answerde, save that thei saidin a fewe wordes more: That right as maladies ben by ther contraries cured, right so shall man warishe warre by pece. His neighbours full of envie, his sained frendes that semed reconciled, and his flatterers, maden semblaunce of weping, and enpaired and agnatched moche of this matter, in praifing gretly Melibe, of might, of power, of richesse, and of frendes, dispising the power of his adversaries: and saied utterly, that he anon should wrenken him on his foes, and begin warre.

Up rose than an Advocate that was wise, by leve and by counsaile of other that were wise, and saied: The nede, for the whiche we ben assembled in this place, is full hevie thing, and a grete matter, bicause of the wrong and of the wickednesse that hath be doen, and eke by reson of grete damages, that in time comming ben possible to fallen for the same, and eke by reson of the grete riches and power of the parties bothe; for the whiche resons, it wer a full grete perill to erren in this matter. Wherfore, Melibeus, this is our sentence, we counsaile you aboven al thing, that right anon thou doe thy diligence, in keping of thy proper person, in such a wise that thou ne wante no espie ne watche, thy body for to save: And after that, we counsaile that in thine hous thou set sufficient garrison, so as thei maie as well thy bodie as thy hous defende: but certes to moven warre, or to doen sodainly vengeance, we maie not deme in so little time, that it were profitable, wherfore we aske leiser and space, to have deliberacion in this case to deme, for the common proverbe saith thus: He that sone demeth sone shall repent. And eke men sain, thilke Judge is wise that sone understondeth a matter, and judgeth by leiser: For all be it taryng be noifull, algate it is not to be reproved in yeving of judgement, ne in vengeance taking, whan it is suffisiente and resonable. And that shewed our Lorde Jesu Christ by ensample, for whan the woman was taken in avoutrie, and was brought in his presens to knowen what shuld be doen of her persone, all be it that he wiste well himself what he would answer, yet ne would he not answer sodenly, but he would have deliberacion, and in the ground he wrote twise, and by this cause we asken deliberacion: and we shal than by the grace of God counsaile you that thing that shal be profitable.

Up sterte than the yong folke at ones, and the most part of that companie have skorned this olde wise man, and begon to make noise and saied. Right so as whiles that iron is hot men should smite, right so men should wrenken ther wronges while that thei ben freshe and newe, and with loude voice thei cried, warre, warre. Up rose tho one of the olde wise, and with his hond made countenaunce that thei should holden 'hem stil, and yeven him audience. Lordinges (qð he) there is ful many a manne that crieth warre warre, that wote full lite what warre amounteth. Warre at his beginning hath so grete an entring and so large, that every wight maie enter whan him liketh, and lightly find warre: but certes what ende thereof shall fall, it is not lightly to knowe. Whan that warre is ones begon, there is full many a child unborn of his mother, that shal sterve yong, bicause of thilke warre, other els live in sorowe, or dien in wretchednesse: And therefore or that any warre be bigon, menne must have grete counsaile and gode deliberacion. And whan this old manne wende to enforcen his tale by reson, well nie al at ones bigon for to rise, for to breken his tale, and bidden him full ofte his wordes to abregge: For certes he that precheth to 'hem that liste not to here his wordes, his sermon 'hem annoieth. For Jesus Sirake saith, that Musick in wepinge is a noious thinge. This is as moche to saie, as moche availleth it to speke biforne folke to whiche his speche anoieth, as it is for to singen biforne 'hem that wepe. And whan this wise man saw that him wanted audience, all shamfast he set him adoun ayen. For Salomon saith: there as thou maist not have audience, enforce The not to speke. I se well (qð this wiseman) that the common Proverbe is sothe, that gode counsaile wanteth, whan it is moste nede.

Yet hadde this Melibeus in his counsaile many folke, that privily in his ere counsailed him certain thinges, and counsailed him the contrary in generall audience. Whan Melibeus had herd that the grettest part of his counsaile were accorded that he should make warre, anon he consented to ther counsailling, and fully affirmed ther sentence. Than dame Prudence, whan that she sawe her husbonde shope him for to awreke him on his enemies, and to begin warre: she in full humble wise, whan she sawe her time, saied to him these wordes. My Lorde (qð she) I you beseche as hertly as I dare or can, ne haste you not to fast, and for all guerdons yeve me audience. For Peter Alphons saith, Who so doeth to The gode or harme, haste The not to quire it, for in in this wise thy frend wol abide, and thine enemye shall the longer live in drede. The Proverbe saith, he hasteth well that wisely can abide: And in wicked hast is no profite.

This Melibe answerd to his wife Prudence: I purpose not (quod he) to werke by thy counsaile, for many causes and reasons, for certes every wighte would holde me than a fole. This is to saie, if I for thy counsailling would chaunge thinges that ben ordained and affirmed by so many wise. Secondely, I saie that all women ben wicked, and none gode of hem al. For of a thousande men saith Salomon, I founde one gode man: but certes, of all women founde I never non. And also certes, if I governed me by thy counsaile, it should seme that I had yeve The over me the maistrie: and God forbid that so it were. For Jesus Sirake saith, that if the wife have maistrie, she is contrarious to her husbonde. And Salomon saith, Never in thy life, to thy wife, ne to thy childe, ne to thy frende, ne yeve no power over thy self, for better it wer that thy children aske of The thinges that hem nedeth, than thy self to be in the handes of thy children. And also if I woll werche by thy counsaile, certes my counsaile must be sum time secrete, till it were time that it must be known: and this ne maie not be, if I should be counsailed by The. When dame Prudence full debonairly and with grete patience, had herd all that her husbonde liked for to saie, than asked she of him licence for to speke, and saied in this wise. My lorde (quod she) as to your first reson, it maie lightly ben answerd. For I saie that it is no folie to chaunge counsaile whan the thing is chaunged, or els whan the thing semeth otherwise than it semed afore. And moreover I saie, though that ye have sworne and behight to performe your emprise, and by just cause ye doe it not: men should not saie therfore ye wer a lier and forsworne. For the boke saith, that the wise man maketh no lesing, whan he tourneth his corage for the better. And albeit that your emprise be established, and ordeined by grete multitude of folke, yet dare you not accomplishe thilke ordinance but you liketh: for the trouthe of thinges, and the profite ben rather founden in fewe folke that ben wise and full of reson, than by grete multitude of folke, there every man crieth and clattereth what him liketh: sothly soche multitude is not honest. And as to the second reson, where as ye saie, that al women ben wicked: save your grace, certes ye despise al women in this wise, and he that al despiseth, as saith the boke, al displeseth. And Senecke saith, that whoso wol have sapience, shall no man dispraise, but he shall gladly teche the science that he can, without presumption or pride: and soche thinges as he nought ne can, he shall not ben ashamed to lerne hem, and to enquire of lesse folke than himself. And that ther hath ben many a gode woman, maie lightly be proved: for certes, sir, our Lorde Jesu Christ n'olde never han descended to be borne of a woman, if al women had ben wicked. And after that, for the grete bounte that is in women, our Lorde Jesu Christ, whan he was risen fro deth to life, appered rather to a woman, than to his Apostles. And though that Salomon saied, he founde never woman gode, it foloweth not therefore that all women be wicked: for though that he ne founde no gode woman, certes many an other man hath founde many a woman full gode and true. Or els paraventure the entente of Salomon was this, that in sovereign bounte he found no woman, this is to say: that there is no wight that hath parfite bounte save God alone, as he himself recordeth in his Evangelie. For there n'is no creature so gode, that him ne wanteth somewhat of the perfeccion of God that is his maker.

Your third reson is this, ye say that if ye governe you by my counsaile, it should seme that ye had yeve me the maistrie and the lordship of your person. Sir, save your grace it is not so, for if it were that no man should be counsailed but onely of hem that han lordship and maistrie of his persone, men n'olde not be counsailed so ofte. For sothly thilke man that asketh counsaile of a purpose, yet hath he fre will whither he woll doe after that counsaile or non. And as to your fourth reson, there as ye saie that the janglerie of women can hide thinges that thei wote not, as who so saith, that a woman can not hide that she wote. Sir, these wordes ben understonde of women that ben jangelers and wicked, of whiche women men sain that thre thinges driven a manne out of his hous, that is to saie, smoke, dropping of rain, and wicked wives. And of soche women Salomon saith, that a man were better dwell in deserte, than with a woman that is riotous. And by your leave it am not I, for ye have ful oft assaied my grete silence and my grete patience, and eke how well that I can hide and hele thinges, that men oughten secretly to hiden. And sothly as to your fift reson, where as ye saie that in wicked counsaile women venquish men: God wot that thilke reson stant here in no stede: for understondeth now ye asken counsaile for to doe wickednes: And if ye would werken wickednesse, and your wife restraineth thilke wicked purpose, and overcome you by reson and by gode counsaile, certes your wife ought rather to be praised than blamed. Thus should ye understond the Philosopher that saith, in wicked counsaile women venqueshe ther husbondes. And there as ye blame all women and ther reasons, I shall shewe you by many ensamples, that many women have be ful gode and yet ben, and ther counsaile wholsome and profitable. Eke some men han saied, that the counsaile of women is either to dere, or to little worth. But albeit so that full many women be bad, and ther counsaile vile and nought worth, yet han menne found full many a gode woman, and full discrete and wise in counsailling. Lo Jacob through the counsaile of his mother Rebecke, wan the benison of his father, and the Lordship of all his brethern. Judith, thorowe her gode counsaile, delivered the cite of Bethule, in whiche she dwelt, out of the hond of Holoferne that had it all besieged, and would have destroyed it. Abigaile delivered Naball her husbond, fro David the King, that would have slaine him, and appeased the ire of the King by her wit, and by her gode counsaile. Hester by her counsaile enhaunced grete the peple of God, in the reigne of Assuerus the king. And the same bountie in gode counsailling of many a gode woman maie men rede and tell. And furthermore, whan that our Lorde had created Adam our forme father, he saied in this wise: It is not gode to be a manne alone: make we an helper to himself semblable. Here maie ye se that if that women were not gode, and ther counsaile gode and profitable, our Lorde God of heven ne would neither han wrought hem, ne called hem the helper of man, but rather confusion to man. And there saied a clerke ones in two verses. What is better than golde? Jasper. What is better than Jasper? Wisedome. And what is better than Wisedome? Woman. And what is better than a gode woman? That is a gode man. And what is better than a gode man? Nothing. And sir, by many other reasons maie ye sene that many women ben gode, and eke ther counsaile gode and profitable. And therefore, sir, if that ye woll truste to my counsaile, I shall restore you your daughter hole and sounde, and eke that I woll doe you so moche, that ye shall have honour in this case.

Whan Melibe had herd the wordes of his wife Prudence, he saide thus. I se well that the wordes of Salomon be soth. For he saith the wordes that be spoken discretly by ordinaunce, ben Honie Combes, for thei yeven swetnesse to the soule, and holsomnesse to the body. And wife, bicause of thy swete wordes, and eke for I have proved and assaied thy grete Sapience and thy grete trowth: I woll governe me by thy counsaile in all thing.

Now sir (q^d dame Prudence) and sithens that ye vouchsafe to be governed by my counsaile, I woll enforme you how that ye shall governe your self, in chosing of your counsaillours. Ye shall first in all your werke, mekely bescechyng to the hie God that he woulde be youre counsaillour, and shapeth you to suche entent that he yeve you counsaile and comforte, as taught Thobie his sonne; At all times thou shalt blisse God, and praie him to dresse thy waies, and loke eke that thy counsailes ben in him ever more. Saint James saith, if anye man of you have nede of sapience, aske it of God. And afterwarde, than shullen ye take counsaile in youre selfe, and examine well your owne thoughtes, of suche thinges as you thinke that ben beste for youre profite. And than shal ye drive fro your herte thinges that be contrarious to gode counsaile: that is to saye, ire, covetise, and hastinesse.

First he that asketh counsaile of himselfe, certes he must be withouten ire and wrath in himselfe, for many causes. The firste is this: He that hath gret ire and wrath in himselfe he wenerh alwaye that he may doe thing that he may not do. And secondly, he that is yrous and wrothful, he may not well deme: And he that maye not well deme, maye not well counsell. The thirde is this, he that is yrous and wroth, as saith Seneca, maie not speke but blamefull thinges, and with thilke vicious wordes he stirreth other folke to angre and to ire. And eke sir ye muste drive covetise out of your herte. For the Apostle saith, that covetise is the rote of all harmes. And trusteth right well that a covetous man ne can not deme ne thinke but onely to fulfil the ende of his covetise: and certes that ne may never be accomplished, for evermore, the more habundaunce that he hath of richesses, the more he desireth. And sir ye muste also drive oute of your hert hastinesse: For certes ye may not deme for the best a sodaine thought that falleth in your herte, but ye muste avise you on it full ofte: For as ye have herde here bifore, the comen Proverbe is this. He that sone demeth, sone repenteth.

Sir, ye ne be not alway in like disposicion, for certes some thing that semeth somtime to you that is gode for to do, an other time it semeth to you the contrarie.

And whan ye han taken counsaile in your selfe, and han demed by gode deliberacion suche thing as you semeth beste, than rede I you that ye kepe it secrete. Bewraye ye not your counsaile to no person, but if so be that ye wene sikerly that through your bewraynge, your condicion shall be to you the more profitable. For Jhesus Sirake saith: neyther to thy foe ne to thy frende, discover not thy secret, ne thy folie: for they woll yeve you audience and lokinge, and supportacion in your presence, and scorne you in your absence. Another Clerke saith, that scarslie shall you finde anie person that maie kepe counsaile sykerly. The boke saith, while that thou kepest thy counsaile in thine herte, thou kepest it in thy prizon: and whan thou bewrayist thy counsaile to anie wight, he holdeth The in his share. And therefore you is better to hide your counsaile in your hert, than to praie him to whom ye have bewrayde your counsaile, that he woll kepe it close still.

For Seneca saith: If so be that thou maiste not thine owne counsaile hide, how darste thou praie anie other wight thy counsaile secret to kepe. But nathelesse if thou wene sikerly that the bewrayinge of thy counsaile to a person wol make thy condicion stonde in the better plichte, than shalt thou tell him thy counsaile in this wise. First thou shalt make no semblant whether The were leve pece or warre, or this or that, ne shewe him not thy will ne thine entent: For truste well that comenly these counsaillours ben flatterers, namely the counsaillours of grete lordes, for they enforce hem alway rather to speke pleasaunt wordes enclinyng to the lord's luste, than wordes that ben trew or profitable, and therefore men saye that the riche man hath selde gode counsaile, but if he have it of himselfe. And after that thou shalt consider thy frendes and thine enemies. And as touching thy frendes, thou shalt consider whiche of hem ben moste faithfull and most wise, and eldest, and moste approved in counsailling: and of hem shalt thou aske thou counsaile, as the case requireth.

I saye, that first ye shall call to your counsaile your frendes that ben trewe. For Salomon saith: that right as the herte of a man deliteth in savoute that is sote, righte so the counsaile of trewe frendes yeveth swetenesse to the soule. And he saith also, there maye nothing be likened to the trewe frende: For certes golde ne silver be not so muche worth as the gode will of a trewe frende. And also he saith that a trewe frende is a strong defence, who so that it findeth, certis he findyth a grete tresure. Than shall ye also consider if that your true frendes be discrete and wise: for the boke saith, aske alwaye thy counsaile of them that be wise. And by this same reson shall ye call to your counsaile your frendes that ben of age, suche as seme and ben expert in many thinges, and ben approved in counsailling. For the boke saith, that in olde menne is sapience, and in longe time the prudence. And Tullius saith, that grete thinges ben not aye accomplished by strength, ne by delivernesse of body, but by counsaile, by auctorite of persones, and by science: the whiche thre thinges ne ben not feble by age, but certes they enforce and encrece daye by daye; and than shall ye kepe this for a generall rule. Firste shall ye call to your counsaile a fewe of your frendes that ben especiall. For Salomon saith, many frendes have thou, but amonge a thousande chose The one to be thy counsaillour: For al be it so that thou firste ne tell thy Counsaile but to a fewe, thou mayste afterwarde tell it to moe folke if it be nede. But loke alwaie that thy counsaillers have those condicions that I have sayd before, that is to saie, that thei be trew, wise, and of olde experience. And werke not alway in every nede by one Counsailler alone: for sometime behoveth it to be counsailed by manie. For Salomon saith, salvation of thinges is where as there be many counsaillers.

Nowe have I tolde you of whiche folke ye shall be counsailed: nowe wol I tel you whiche counsaile ye ought to eschue. First ye shal eschue the counsaillinge of foles. Salomon saith, take no counsaile of a fole: for he woll counsaile but after his owne lust and his affection. The boke saith, that the proper tie of a fole is this: He troweth lightly harme of every man, and lightly troweth all bountie in himself. Thou shalt eschue the counsailling of all flatterers, which as enforcen hem rather to praise your person by flattery, than for to tell you the sothfastnesse of thinges. Wherefore, Tullius saith, amonge all the pestilence that ben in frendeship, the gretist is flattery. And therefore it is more nede that thou eschue and drede flaterers, than any other peple. The boke saith, thou shalt rather fle fro the swete wordes of flatteryng and praising, than fro the egre wordes of thy frendes that saith The sothes. Salomon saith, that the wordes of a flaterer is a snare to catche Innocentis. He saith also, he that speketh to his frende wordes of flaterie and of plesauce, he setteth a net beforne his fete to catche him. And therfore Tullius saith. Encline not thine eres to flaterers, ne take no counsaile of flaterers. And Caton saith, Avise The well, and eschue the wordes of swetenesse and plesauce. And eke thou shalte eschue the counsaile of thine olde enemies that ben reconciled. The boke saith, that no wight returneth safelie into the grace of his olde enemy. And Ilope saith, ne trust not to hem, to which thou hast somtime had warre or enemite, ne tel hem not thy counsaile. And Senek telleth the cause why it maye not be, for he saith, there as grete fire hath longe time endured, that there dwel- leth some vapoure of hete. And therfore saith Sa- lomon, in thine olde foe truste thou never. For si- kerly though thine enemy be reconciled, and make The signe of humilite, and loute to The with his hed, truste him never: for certes he maketh thiike fained humilite more for his profite then for any humilite, or for any love of thy person, bicause that he demeth to have victory over thy persone by such fained coun- tinaunce, the whiche victorie he might not have by strile or warre. And Petrus Alphons saith, make no felowship with thine olde enemies, for if thou do hem bountie, they wollen pervert it to wickednesse. And eke thou must eschue the counsaile of hem that ben thy servautes, and beren The grete reve- rence: for peraventure they sain it more for drede than for love. And therfore saith a philosopher in this wise; There is no wight parsitly true to him that he dredeth. And Tullius saith, there is no might so grete of any emperour that long may en- dure, but he have love of the peple and drede. Ye shall eschue also the counsaile of folke that ben dronkelewe, for they ne can no counsaile hide. For Salomon saith, ther n'is no privitye there as reigneth dronknesse. Ye shal have also in suspecte the coun- saile of suche folke as counsaile you one thing pri- vely, and counsaile you the contrarie openly. For Cassidorie saith, that it is a maner of sleight to hin- der his enemy when he sheweth to done a thing o- penly, and werketh prively the contrary. Thou shalte have also in suspecte the counsaile of wicked folke, that be alwaie full of fraude. And David saith, that blisful is the manne that hath not fo- llowed the counsaile of shrewes. Thou shalt al- so eschue the counsaile of yonge folke, for ther counsaile is not ripe, as Salomon saith.

that

Nowe sir, sithens I have shewed you of suche folke as ye shal be counsaile of, and folowe it: nowe woll I teche you howe ye shall examine your coun- saile. After the doctrine of Tullius, in exami- ning of youre counsaile, ye shall consider many thinges.

First thou shalt consider thiike thing that thou pur- posest, and upon that thing that thou wolt have counsaile, that very trueth be said and conserved, this is to say, tel truly thy tale, for he that saith false, may not well be counsaile in that case, of whiche he lieth. After this thou shalte consider the thinges that acorden to that thou purposest for to doe by thy counsaile, if reson acorde therto, and eke if thy might maie attaine therto: and if the more parte and the better parte of your counsaile accorden therto or no. Than shalt thou consider what thing shall folowe of ther counsaile: As hate, pece, warre, grace, profite, or damage, and many other thinges: and in all thinges thou shalte chose the beste, and weye all other thinges. Than shalt thou confi- der of what rote is engendred the matter of thy counsaile, and what fruite it may conceive and engender. Thou shalt eke consider all the causes, from whence they be sprong. And when thou hast exa- mined thy counsaile, as I have said, and which par- ty is the better and more profitable, and haste ap- proved it by many wise folke and olde, than thou shalt consider, if thou maiste performe it and make of it a gode ende. For certes reson wol not that a- ny man shall beginne a thinge, but if he might per- forme it as him ought: ne no wight shoulde take upon him so hevie a charge, but that he might bere it. For the proverbe saith, he that to muche enbra- ceth distraineth litell. And Caton saith, assaie to do suche thinges as thou hast power to done, lest the charge oppresse The to sore, that The behoveth weive thinge that thou hast begonne. And if so be that thou be in doute, whether thou maist per- fourme a thing or none, chose rather for to suffer than to beginne. And Peter Alphons saith, if thou hast might to do a thing, of which thou must re- pent, it is better holde thy tonge still than for to speke. Than maiste thou understonde by stronger resons, that if thou hast power to perfourme a werke of whiche thou shalte repent The, than is it better thou suffer than begin. Wel saine they that defenden everie wight to assaie a thing of whiche he is in dout whether he maye performe it or none. And after when ye have examined your counsaile (as I have saide before) and knowe well that ye maye performe your emprise: conferme it than sadly till it be at an ende.

Nowe it is reson and time that I shewe you, whan and wherfore that ye may chaunge your counsaile, withouten reprove. Sothly a man may chaunge his purpose and his counsaile; if the cause ceseth, or whan a new case betideth. For the lawe saith, that upon thinges that newly betideth, behoveth newe counsaile. And Senek saith, if thy counsaile is come to the eres of thine enemies, chaunge thy counsaile. Thou maiste also chaunge thy counsaile, if so be thou finde that by errour or by any other cause, harme or damage maie betide. Also if thy counsaile be dishonest, other els come of dishonest cause, chaunge thy counsaile. For the lawe saith, that all behestes that be dishoneste, ne ben of no value: And eke, if so be that it be impossible or maye not gladly be perfourmed or kepte.

And take this for a generall rule, that every coun- saile that is affirmed stronglye, that it may not be chaunged for no condicion that maie betide, I say that ilke counsaile is wicked.

MElibeus, when he had herde the doctrine of his wyfe Dame Prudence, aunswerde in this wise. Dame (q^d he) as yet unto this time ye han well taught me, as in governaile howe I shall governe me in the chosinge and in the withholdinge of my counsaile: But nowe should I faine that ye would condescende in especiall, howe that ye semeth by our counsaile that we have chose in this present nede.

My lorde (q^d she) I beseeche you in all humblyte, that ye woll not wilfully replie ayenst my resons, ne distemper your hert though I speke thing that you displese, for God wot as in mine entente, I speke it as youre beste and for the beste for your honoure and profit eke, and sothly I hope that your benignite woll take it in pacience. And trusteth me well that your counsaile in this case ne shuld not (as to speke properly) be called a counsaile, but a mocion or a movinge of folye, in whiche counsaile ye have erred in many a sondrie wise.

Firste ye have erred in the assemblinge of your counsaile: For firste ye should have cleped a fewe folke to your counsaile, and after ye might have shew- ed it to mo, if it had be nede. But ye have cleped to your counsaile a grete multitude of peple, ful chargeous chargeous and full noyous for to here. Also ye have erred, for there as ye shoulde have onelie cleped to your counsaile your trewe frendes, olde and wise, ye have cleped straunge folke, yonge folke, false flatterers, and enemies reconciled, and folke that done you reverence withouten love. And eke ye have erred, for ye have brought with you to your counsaile, ire, covetise, and hastinesse, the which thre thinges ben contrary to every gode counsaile, honest and profitable, the whiche thre thinges ye have not destroyed neither in your selfe ne in your counsaillours, as ye ought. Ye have erred also for ye have shewed to your counsaillours your talent and your affections to make waire anon, and for to doe vengeance, and they have espyde by your wordes, to what thing ye ben enclined: and therefore han they rather counsailed you to your talent, than to youre profite. Ye han erred eke, for it semeth that you suffiseth to have be counsailed by these counsaillours onely, and with litle avisement, where as in so hie and in so gret a nede, it had ben necessarie mo counsaillours, and more deliberacion to performe your emprise. Ye han erred also, for ye have not examined your counsaile in the forsayd maters, ne in dewe maner as the case requirith. Ye have erred also, for ye made no division bytwene your trewe frendes and your fained counsaillours: ne ye have not knowen the will of your trewe counsaillours and frendes, olde, and wise, but ye have caste all ther wordes in an hoche poche, and enclined your herte to the more parte and to the gretter nombre of foles than of wise men. And therefore the counsaillings that ben at congregacions and multitudes of folke, there as men take more regarde to the nombre than to the sapience of persons, ye fene well, that in suche counsaillings, foles han the maistrie. Melibe answerde and said aye: I graunt well that I have erred, but there as thou haste told me here biforne, that he n'is not to blame that chaungeth his counsaile in certaine case, and for certaine and juste cause, I am all redye to chaunge my counsaillours righte as thou wouldest devise. The Proverbe saith, for to done sinne is mannishe, but certes for to percever longe in sinne, is the werke of the Divell.

To this sentence answereth anon dame Prudence and saide: Examineth (q'ð she) well youre counsaile, and let us se whiche of 'hem hathe spoke most resonably, and taughte you beste counsaile. And for as muche as the examinacion is necessarie, lette us begin at Surgens and Phisiciens, that first spake of this mater. I say that Phisiciens and Surgiens have saide you in your counsaile discretly, as 'hem ought: and in ther speche saide full wisely, that to the office of 'hem appertaineth to donne to everye wighte honoure and profite, and no wight to anoie, and after ther craite to done grete diligence unto the cure of 'hem, which they have in ther governaunce. And sir, right as they have answerde wisely and discretly, righte so rede I that they ben hiely and soverainly guerdoned for ther noble speche, and eke for they shall more done ther ententive besinesse in the curacion of your doughter; for al be it so they ben your frendes, therefore shullen ye not suffre, that they serve you for naught, but ye ought therafter guerdon 'hem, and pay 'hem ther largesse. And as touching the propocicion, whiche the Phisiciens entreteden in this case, this is to saine, that in maladies is, that contrarie is warished by an other contrarie: I wold faine knowe howe ye understonde thilke texte, and what is your sentence. Certes (q'ð Melibeus) I understond it in this wise. Righte as they han done me a contrarie, so shoulde I done 'hem an other, for righte as they han venged 'hem upon me, and done me wronge, right so wold I venge me upon 'hem, and done 'hem wrong, and than I cured one contrarye by an other.

Lo lo (q'ð dame Prudence) how lightly is every man enclined to his owne desire and his owne pleasure! Certes (q'ð she) the wordes of the Phisiciens ne shoulde not ben understond in that wise, for certes wickenesse is not contrary to wickednesse, ne vengeance is not contrarie to vengeance, ne wronge to wronge, but everye of 'hem encreseth and engendreth other. But certes the wordes of the Phisiciens shoulde be understond in this wise, for gode and wickednesse ben two contraries: and pece and warre, vengeance, and suffraunce, discord, and acorde, and many other thinges: But certes wickednesse shal be warished with godenes, discorde by acorde, warre by pece, and so forthe in other thinges. And therto acordeth saint Paule the Apostell in many places: He saith, ne yelde not harme for harme, ne wicked spech for wicked speche, but do wel to 'hem that don to The harme, and blesse them that saith The harme. And in many other places he amonisheth pece and acord. But now wol I speke of the counsaile which was iyeve unto you by menne of Lawe, and the wise folke, and olde folke, that sayden all by one acorde as ye herde before, that over all thinges ye shall done your besinesse and diligence to kepe your persone, and to warnstore your house: And they saide also, that in this case ye ought to werchen ful wisely and with grete deliberacion. And sir, as to the firste pointe, that toucheth the keping of your persone: ye shall understonde that he that hath warre, shal ever devoutly and mekely praien, biforne all thinges, that Jesu Christ of his mercy wold have him in his proteccion, and to be his soveraine helper at his nede: For certes in this worlde there n'is no wight that maie be counsailed ne kepte sufficiently without the keping of our lorde Jesu Christe. To this sentence acordeth the Prophet David that saith: if God ne kepte the Cite, in idel waketh he that it kepeth. Nowe sir, than shoulde ye committe the keping of your person to your true frendes, that ben approved and iknow, and of them shoulde ye aske helpe, your person to kepe. For Caton saith: If thou have nede of helpe aske it of thy frendes, for there n'is none so gode a Phisicien as thy true frende. And after this than shal ye kepe you fro all straunge folke, and fro liers, and have alwaie in suspecte ther companie. For Peter Alphons saith, Ne take no company by the waie of no straunge man, but if so be that thou haste knowen him of lenger time: And if so be that he fall into thy companie, paraventure withouten thyne assente and gode will, enquire than as subtilly as thou canste of his conversacion, and of his life biforne, and saine thy waie, saying thou wouldest go thiðer as thou wolte not go, and if he bere a spere, holde The on the righte side of him, and if he bere a swerde, holde The on the lefte side of him. And than shal ye kepe you wisely from all maner of suche people as I have saide you here before, and 'hem and ther counsaile eschue. And after this than shal ye kepe you, in suche maner, that for anye presumption of your bodely strength, that ye dispise not ne acounte not the might of your adversary so lite, that ye lette the kepinge of your person for your presumption, for every wise man dredeth his enemy. And Salomon saith: A very fole is he that of al hath drede: But certes he that thorowe hardenesse of his hert and through the hardinesse of himselfe hath to grete presumption, him shall yvell betide. Than shal ye evermore encounterwaite enbusshementes, and all espiaile. For Seneke saith: The wise man that dredeth harmes, eschueth harmes: He ne falleth in to no perilles, that perill eschueth. And all be it so that thou seme, that thou be in secret place, yet shalt shalt thou alwaie done diligence in keping of thy person, this is to saie, ne be not negligent to kepe thine owne person, not onely for thy grettest enemy, but also for thy leste enemy. Seneke saith, a man that is wel advised, he dredeth his leste enemy. Ovide saith, that the litel wesele wol fle the grete Bulle and the wilde Herte. And the proverbe saith, that a litell thorne woll greve a King ful sore, and a litell hounde woll holde the wilde Bore. But nathelesse I say not thou shalt be so cowarde, that thou doute where as is no drede. The boke saith, that some men have grete luste to disceive, but yet they dreded to be disceived. And kepe The fro the companie of skorners: For the boke saith, with skorners ne make no company, but fle ther wordes as venim.

Now as to the seconde point, where as youre wyfe Counsaylours counsayled you to warnestore your house with grete diligence, I woulde fayne knowe howe ye understonde thilke wordes, and what is your sentence.

Melibeus answerde and said, certes I understonde it in this wise, that I shall warnestore mine house with toures, suche as have castels and other maner edifices, and armure and archeries, betwene whiche thinges I may my person and my house so kepe and defende, that mine enemies shullen be in drede mine house to aproche. To this sentence answerde anon Prudence. Warnstoringe (qð she) of hie toures and of hie edifices, is with grete costages and with grete travaile, and whan that they ben accomplished, yet ben they not worth a strawe, but if they ben defended with trew frendes, that ben olde and wise. And understondeth well, that the grettest and the strongest garison that riche men may have, as well to kepen ther person as ther godes is, that they be beloved with ther subjectes, and with ther neighbours. For thus saith Tullius, that there is a maner garison, that no man maie venquish ne discomfite, and that is a lorde to be biloved of his citeizins, and of his peple.

Nowe sir, as to the thirde point, where as your olde and wise Counsaylours saide, that ye ought not sodainly ne hastily procede in this nede, but that ye oughten purvayen and aparayle you in this case, with grete diligence and deliberacion. Verely I trowe that they saied right treuly and right soth. For Tullius saith: In every dede or thou begin it, apparaile The with grete diligence. Than saie I, in vengeance taking, in warre, in bataile, and in warnestoringe, or thou begin I rede that thou aparaille The therto, and do it with grete deliberacion. For Tullius saith: The longe apparailing tofore the bataile maketh short victorie. And Cassiodorus saith: The garison is stronger, whan it is longe time avised. But nowe let us speke of the Counsayle that was accorded by youre neighbours, such as done you reverence withouten love, your olde enemies reconciled, your flatterers, that counsailed you certaine thinges prively, and openly counsailed you the contrarie. The yonge folke also, that counsailed you to venge you, and to make warre anon. Certes sir, as I have saide byfore, ye have gretly erred to clepe suche maner of folke to your counsaile, whiche counsaylours ben inoughe reproved by the resons afore-said. But nathelesse let us now discende to the speciall. Ye shall first procede after the doctrine of Tullius. Certes the trouthe of this mater or of this counsaile, nedeth not diligently to enquire, for it is well wiste, which they ben that han don you this trespass and villanie, and howe many trespassours, and in what maner they have done all this wronge to you, and all this villany. And after this, then shall ye examine the seconde condicion, whiche Tullius addeth in this matter. For Tullius putteth a thing, whiche that he clepeth consenting: this is to saie, who ben thei, and whiche ben they, and howe manie, that consenten to thy counsaile in thy wilfulnesse, to done hastie vengeance. And let us consider also who ben they, and how manie they ben that consented to your adversaries. As to the firste point, it is well knowen whiche folke they be, that consented to your hastie wilfulnesse. For truely all tho that counsaile you to maken sodaine warre, ne be not your frendes. Let se nowe whiche ben they that ye holden so gretly your frendes, as to your person: For albeit so that ye be mighty and riche, certes ye ben but alone: for truely ye ne have no childe but a doughter, ne ye have no brethren ne Cosins Germaines, ne none other nie kinrede, wherefore your enemies should stinte to plede with you, ne to distroy your person. Ye know also that your richesse mote be dispended in diverse parties. And whan that everie wight hath his parte, they wollen take but litell regarde to venge your deth. But thine enemies ben thre, and they have many Brethren, Children, Cosins, and other nie Kinrede: and though so were, that thou haddest flaine of hem two or thre, yet dwelleth there inowe to avenge ther deth, and to fle thy person. And though so be that your kinrede be more stedfaste and siker than the kinne of your adversaries, yet nathelesse your kinrede is but after kinrede, for they ben but litell sibbe to you, and the kinne of your enemies ben nie sibbe to hem. And certes as in that, ther condicion is better than is yours. Than lette us consider also of the counsaillinge of hem, that counsailed you to take sodaine vengeance, whether it acorde to reson or non: And certes ye knowe wel nay, for as by right and reson, there may no man take vengeance of no wight, but the judge that hath jurisdiction of it, when it is graunted him to take vengeance, hastelie, or attemperatly as the Lawe requireth. And yet more over of thilke worde that Tullius clepeth consenting, thou shalt consider, if that thy mighte and thy power maye consente and suffise to thy wilfulnesse, and to thy counsaylours: And certes thou maiste well saie naye, for sikerlye as for to speke properly, we maie doe nothing but suche thinge as we maie done rightfully: and certes rightfully ye may take no vengeance, as of your own proper auctorite. Than maye ye se that your power ne consenteth not ne accordeth not with your wilfulnesse. Nowe lette us examine the thirde point, that Tullius clepeth consequence. Thou shalt undirsonde that the vengeance that thou purposeth for to take is consequent, and therof foloweth an other vengeance, perill, and warre, and other damages withouten nombre, of which we be not ware, as at this time. And as touchinge the fourthe point, that Tullius clepeth engendring thou shalt consider, that this wrong, whiche that is don to The, is engendred of the hate of thin enemies, and of the vengeance taking upon hem, that wolde engender another vengeance, and muchel sorow and wastinge of richesse, as I sayde ere. Nowe sir, as touchinge the fift point, that Tully clepeth causes, whiche is the lasse point, thou shalt undirsonde, that the wronge that thou haste received hath certayne causes, whiche that clerkes callen oriens, and efficiens, and causa longinqua, and causa propinqua, that is to saie, the ferre cause, and the nighe cause. The ferre cause is almighty God, that is cause of all thinges. The nere cause is thy thre enemies. The cause accidental was hate. The cause materiall, ben the five woundes of thy doughter. The cause tormalle, is the maner of their werking that brought laders and clambe in at thy windowes. The cause finall was for to flea thy doughter. it letted not in as moche as in them was. But for to speke of the ferre cause, as to what ende thei shall come, or finally what shal betide of them in this case, ne can I not deme, but by coniecting and supposing: For we shall suppose that thei shall come to a wicked end, bicause that the boke of decrees saith. Seld or with grete pain ben causes brought to a gode ende, whan thei ben badly begon.

Now sir, if men would aske me, why that God suffered menne to doe you this villanie? Truly I can not wel answer, as for no sothfastnesse. For the Apostle saith, that the sciences, and the judgments of our Lorde God Almighty ben full depe, there maie no man comprehende ne serche 'hem suffisantly. Nathelesse by certaine presumpcions and coniectinges, I hold and bileve, that God, whiche that is full of Justice and of rightousnesse, hath suffered this betide, by just cause resonable.

Thy name is, Melibee, this is to saie, a man that drinkith Honie. Thou haste dronke so moche honie of swete temporell richesse, and delices of honours of this worlde, that thou arte dronke, and hast forgotten Jesu Christe thy creatour: Thou ne hast not doen to him soche honour and reverence as The ought, ne thou ne hast not taken kepe to the wordes of Ovide, that saith, Under the Honie of the godes of thy bodie, is hid the venime that slaeth thy soule.

And Salomon saith: if it so be that thou hast found honie, etc of the same honie, that that suffiseth: for if so be that thou etc of the same honie out of mesure, thou shalt spewe, and also be neddy and pore. And paraventure almighty God Jesu Christ hath The in dispire, and hath touned awaie fro The his face, and his eres of misericorde and mercie. And also he hath suffred and give licence, that thou thus shouldest be punished and chastised in the maner that thou hast trespassed and offended. Thou haste doen sinne against our Lorde Christe, for certes the thre enemies of mankinde, that is to saie: the fleshe, the fend, and the worlde, thou hast suffred 'hem entre into thine herte wilfully, by the windowes of thy bodie, and hast not defended thy self suffisiently against their assautes, and their temptacions, so that thei have wounded thy soul in five places, this is to saie: the dedly sinnes that ben entered into thy herte by thy five wittes. And in the same maner our Lorde Christ hath would and suffred, that thy thre enemies ben entered into thy hous, by the windowes, and have wounded thy doughter in the forsaied maner.

Truely (q^d Melibee) I se wel that ye enforce you moche by wordes to overcome me, in soche maner, that I shall not venge me on mine enemies, shewing me the perilles and the evils that might fall of this vengeance, but who so would consider in all vengeance, the perilles and evils that might sue of vengeance taking, a man would never take vengeance, and that were harme: for by the vengeance taking, ben the wicked men discovered fro the gode men. And thei that have will to doe wickednesse, restrain their wicked purpose, whan thei se the punishing and chastising of the trespassours: and yet saie I more that right as a singuler persone sinneth, in taking vengeance of an other man, right so sinneth the judge, if he do no vengeance of 'hem that have deserved. For Senek saith thus: That maister he saith is gode, that preveth shrewes. And as Cassiodor saith: A man dredeth to doe outrages, whan he wote and knoweth, that it displeth to the Judges and Soveraines. And an other saith: the judge that dredeth to doe right, maketh men shrewes, And saint Poule the Apostle saith in his Epistle, whan he writeth unto the Romanes, that the Judge bere not the spere without cause, but thei bere it to punish the shrewes and misdoers, and for to defende the gode menne.

If ye woll than take vengeance of your enemies, ye shall retourne and have your recourse to the Judge, that hath the jurisdiction upon 'hem, and he shall punish 'hem, as the lawe asketh and requieth.

A ha, saied Melibee, this vengeance liketh me nothing, I bethinke me now, and take hede how that fortune hath nourished me fro my childhode, and hath holpe me to passe many a strong paas: Now I would assaie her, trowing with Godd's help; that she shall helpe me my shame for to avenge.

Truely saied Prudence, if ye woll werke by my counsaile, ye shall not assaie fortune by no waie: ne ye shall not lene or bowe unto her, after the worde of Senek; for thinges that ben foolishly doen, and that ben doen in hope of fortune, shall never come to gode ende. And as the same Senek saith: the more clere and the more shining that fortune is, the more brittle and the soner broke she is. Trusteth not in her, for she is not stedfaste ne stable. For whan thou trowest to be moste sure and stedfast of her helpe, she woll faile and disceive The. And where as ye saie, that fortune hath nourished you fro your childhode, I say that in so moche ye shall the lesse trust in her, and in her wit. For Senek saith: what man that is nourished by fortune, she maketh him a grete sole. Now than sith ye desire and aske vengeance, and the vengeance that is don after the lawe, and bifore the judge, ne liketh you not, and the vengeance that is doen in hope of fortune, is perillous and uncerteine, than have ye none other remedie, but for to have your recourse unto the soverain judge, that venge al villanies and wronges. And he shal venge you, after that himself witnesseth, where as he saith: leve the vengeance to me, and I shall doe it.

Melibe answerde, if I ne venge me of the villanie, that men have doen to me, I sommon or warne 'hem, that have doen to me that villanie, and all other, to doe me an other villanie. For it is written: if thou take no vengeance of an old villanie, thou summonest thine adversaries, to doe The a newe villanie: and also for my sufferance, men would doe me so moche villanie, that I might neither bere it ne sustain it, and so should I be put and holden over lowe. For men saie, in mikell suffring shall many thinges fall unto The, whiche thou shalt not mowe suffer.

Certes (q^d Prudence) I graunt you, that over moche sufferance is not gode, but yet ne foloweth it not therof, that every persone, to whom men doe villanie, should take of it vengeance: for that appertaineth and longeth all onely to Judges, for thei should venge the villanies and injuries: And therefore those two auctorities, that ye have saied afore, ben onely understonde in the Judges: For whan thei suffer over moche the wronges and villanies to be doen, without punishment, thei sommon not a man all onely for to doe newe wronges, but thei commaunde it. Also a wise man saith, that the Judge that correcteth not the sinner, commaundeth and biddeth him do sinne. And the Judges and soveraines, might in their londe so moche suffice of the shrewes and misdoers, that they should by soche sufferance, by processe time, waxe of soche power and might, that thei should put out the Judges and the Soveraines from their places, and at laste, make 'hem lese their Lordshippes.

But

But let us now suppose, that ye have leve to venge you: I saie ye be not of might and power, as now to venge you, for if ye wolle make comparison unto the might of your adversaries, ye shuld finde in many thinges, that I have shewed your er this, that their condicion is better than yours, and therefore saie I, that it is gode as now, that ye suffer and be pacient.

Ferthermore, ye knowe wel that after the common sawe, it is a wodenesse, a manne to strive with a stronger, or a more mightie man than he is himself, and for to strive with a man of even strength, that is to saie, with as strong a manne as he is, it is perill: and for to strive with a weker man, it is folie, and therefore shoud a manne flie striving, as mikell as he might. For Salomon saierh: It is a grete worship to a man, to kepe fro noise and strief; and if it so befall and hap, that a man of greter might and strength than thou art, doe The grevaunce: studie and busie The rather to still the same grevaunce, than for to venge The. For Senek saierh, that he putteth him in grete perill, that striveth with a greter manne than he is himself. And Caton saierh, if a manne of higher estate or degre, or more mightie than thou, do The annoy or grevaunce, suffer him: for he that ones hath greved The, maie an other time releve The and helpe The. Yet sette I case ye have licence for to venge you, I saie that there ben full many thinges, that shall restrain you of vengeance taking, and make you for to encline to suffice, and for to have pacience in the wronges that have ben doen to you. First and formest, if ye wolle consider the fautes that ben in your own persone, for whiche fautes God hath suffred you have this tribulacion, as I have saied to you here before. For the Poete saierh, that we ought paciently take the tribulacions that come to us, whan that we thinke and consider, that we have deserved to have them. And saint Gregorie saierh, that whan a manne considereth well the number of his defautes and of his sinnes, the paines and the tribulacions, that he suffereth, seme the lesse unto him. And in as moche as him thinketh his sinnes, more hevie and grievous, in so moche semeth his paine the lighter and the esier unto him. Also ye owe to encline and bowe your herte, to take the pacience of our Lorde Jesu Christ, as saierh saint Peter in his Epistles. Jesu Christ he saith hath suffred for us, and yeven ensample to every man to folowe and sue him, for he did never sinne ne never came there a villainous worde out of his mouth. Whan men cursed him, he cursed 'hem not. And whan men bete him, he menaced hem not. Also the grete pacience, which Saintes, that ben in Paradise, have had in tribulacion that thei have suffred, without thei deferte or gilte, ought moche stirre you to pacience. Ferthermore, ye shul enforce you to have pacience, considering that the tribulacions of this worlde but little while endure, and sone passen ben and gone, and the joye that a man seketh to have by pacience in tribulacions is perdurable, after that the Apostle saierh in his Epistle, The joye of God he saierh, is perdurable, that is to saie, everlasting. Also troweth and bileveth stedfastly, that he is not well norished and well taught, that con not have pacience, or wol not receive pacience. For Salomon saierh, that the doctrine and the witte of a man, is knowen by pacience. And in an other place he saierh, that he that is pacient, governeth him by grete prudence.

And the same Salomon saith, The angrie and wrothefull man maketh noises, and the pacient man attempreth and stilleth 'hem. He saith also, it is more worth to be pacient than to be right strong. And he that maie have the Lordship of his own herte, is more to praise, than he that by his force or strengthe taketh grete citees. And therefore saierh saint James in his Epistle, that pacience is a grete vertue of perfeccion.

Certes (q^d Melibee) I graunte you Dame Prudence, that pacience is a grete vertue of perfeccion, but every manne maie not have the perfeccion that ye seke, ne I am not of the number of right perfite men. For mine herte maie never be in pece, unto the time it be avenged. And albeit so that it was grete perill to mine enemies, to doe me a villanie, in taking vengeance upon me, yet toke thei no hede of the perille, but fulfilled ther wicked will and ther corage: and therefore me thinketh men ought not to repreve me, though I put me in a little perill, for to avenge me, and though I doe a grete excesse, that is to saie: that I venge one outrage by an other.

Ah (q^d dame Prudence) ye saie your will as you liketh: but in no case of the world, a man shoud not do outrage ne excesse, for to venge him. For Cassiodor saierh, that as evill doeth he, that vengeth him by outrage, as he that doeth the outrage. And therfore ye shall venge you after the order of right, that is to saie, by the Lawe, and not by excesse, ne by outrage. And also if you wol venge you of the outrage of your adversaries, in other maner than right commaundeth, ye sinne. And therfore saierh Senek: that a man shal never venge shreudnesse by shreudnesse. And if ye saie that right asketh to defende violence, and fighting by fighting: certes ye saie soth, whan the defence is doen without intervall, or without tarying or delaie, for to defende him, and not for to venge him. And it behoveth that a man put soch attemperaunce in his defence, that men have no cause ne matter to repreve him, that defendeth him of outrage and excesse, for els were it againe reson. Parde ye knowe well, that ye make no defence as now, for to defende you, but for to venge you: and so sheweth it, that ye have no will to doe your dede attemperately, and therfore me thinketh that pacience is gode. For Salomon saierh, that he that is not pacient, shall have grete harme.

Certes saied Melibee I graunte you, that whan a man is impaciente and wrothe, of that that toucheth him not, and that appertaineth not unto him, though it harme him it is no wonder. For the lawe saith, that he is culpable, that entremetleth or medleth with soche thinges, as appertaineth not unto him. And Salomon saith, that he that entremetleth of the noise or stricte of an other manne, is like to him that taketh a straunge hounde by the eres: For right as he, that taketh a straunge hounde by the eres, is other while bitten by the hond, right so in the same wise, it is reson that he have harme, that by his impacience, medleth him of the noise of an other man, where as it appertaineth not unto him. But ye knowe well that this dede, that is to saie, my grief and my disese, toucheth me right nigh. And therfore though I be wrothe and impatient, it is no mervaille: and saving your grace, I cannot se that it might gretely harme me, though I toke vengeance, for I am richer and more mightie than mine enemies be: And well knowe ye that by money and by havynge grete possessions, ben all thinges of this worlde governed. And Salomon saierh, all these thinges obei to money.

Whan Prudence had herd her husbonde, avaunte him of his richesse and money, dispraising the power of his adversaries, she spake and saied in this wise. Certes dere sir, I graunte you that ye be riche and mightie, and that the richesse is gode to them that have have well gotten 'hem, and that well can use them. For righte as the bodie of a manne maie not live without the soule, no more maie it live without the temporell godes, and by richesse maie a manne get him grete frendes. And therefore saith Pamphillus: If a Nerthes doughter he saith be riche, she maie chese of a thousande menne, whiche she wolle take to her husbonde: for of a thousande one wolle not forsake her ne refuse her. And this Pamphillus saith also: if thou be right happie, that is to saie, if thou be riche, thou shalte finde a grete number of fellowes and frendes. And if thy fortune change, farewell frendship and felowship, for thou shalte be alone without any companie, but if it be the companie of pore folke. And yet saith this Pamphillus more over, that thei that ben bonde and thrall of linage, shal be made worthy and noble by the richesles. And right so as by the richesles there come many gode-nesses, right so by povertie come there many harmes and evilles, for grete povertie constraineth a manne to doe many evilles. And therefore calleth Cassiodor povertie the mother of ruine, that is to saie, the mother of overthrowing or of falling doune. And therefore saith Peter Alfoune: One of the grettest adversities of this world, is whan a fre man by kinde or of birth, is constrained by povertie, to ete the almose of his enemy. And the same saith Innocente, in one of his bokes: As saith, that sorowfull and mishap is the condicion of a pore begger, for if he aske not his mete, he dieth for hunger, and if he aske he dieth for shame: and algates necessite constraineth him to aske. And therefore saith Salomon, that better is to die, than for to have soche povertie. And as the same Salomon saith: Better is to die of bitter deth, than for to live in soche wise. By these retons that I have saied unto you, and by many other retons that I could saie, I graunt you that richesles ben gode, to 'hem that 'hem well getten, and to 'hem that well usen tho richesles: And therefore wolle I shewe you how ye shall behave you in gathering of richesles, and in what maner she shullen use 'hem.

Firste, ye shall gette 'hem withouten gret desire, by gode leiser, sokingly and not over hastely; for a manne that is to desiring to get richesle, habandoneth him firste to theft and to all other evilles. And therefore saith Salomon: he that hasteth him to busily to wexe riche, he shall be none innocent. He saith also, that the richesle that hastely cometh to a manne, sone and lightly goeth and passeth from a manne, but that richesle that cometh litte and litte, wexeth alwaie and multiplieth. And sir, ye shall get richesle by your wit and by your travaile, unto your profite, and that without wrong or harme doing to any other persone. For the Lawe saith, there maketh no man him self riche, if he doe harme to an other wight, this is to saie: that nature defendeth and forbiddeth by righte, that no manne make himselfe riche, unto the harme of an other person. And Tullius saith that no sorowe ne no drede of deth, ne nothing that maie fall unto a man, is so moche ayenst nature, as a man to encrece his own profite. to the harme of an other manne. And though the grete and mightie menne gette richesles more lightly than thou, yet shalte thou not be idle, ne slowe to do thy profite, for thou shalte in all wise fle idleness. For Salomon saith, that idleness teacheth a man to doe many evilles. And the same Salomon saith, that he that travaileth and busieth him to tilthe his lond, shal ete bred: but he that is idell, and casteth him to no business ne occupacion, shall fall into povertie, and die for hunger. And he that is idell and slowe, can never find covenable time for to doe his profite. For there is a versifiour saith, that the idell manne excuseth him in Winter, bicause of the grete cold, and in Sommer bicause of the hete. For these causes saith Caton, waketh and encline you not over moche for to slepe, for over moche rest norissheth and causeth many vices. And therefore saith saint Hierom, doe some gode dedes, that the devil, whiche is our enemy, ne finde you not unoccupied, for the devil ne taketh not lightly unto his working, soche as he findeth occupied in gode werkes.

Than thus, in getting richesles ye must fle idleness. And afterwarde ye shall use the richesles, whiche ye have gotte by your wit and by your travaile, in soche maner, that men hold you not to scarce, ne to sparing, ne sole large, that is to saie, over large a spender: for right as men blame an avaricious man, bicause of his scarstie and chincherie, in the same wise is he to blame, that spendeth over largely. And therefore saith Caton: use (saith he) the richesles that thou hast gotten in soche maner, that men maie have no matter, ne cause to call The nother wretche ne chinch: For it is a grete shame to a manne, to have a pore herte, and a riche purse. He saith also, the godes that thou hast gotte, use them by mesure, that is to saie, spende mesurably, for thei that folishly waste and dispende the godes that thei have, whan thei have no more proper of ther own, than thei shape 'hem to take the godes of an other manne. I saie than that ye shall fle avarice, using your richesles in soche maner, that men saie not that your richesle ben buried, but that ye have 'hem in your might, and in your welding. For a wise man repreve the avaricious man, and saith thus in these verses two. Whereto and why burieth a manne his godes by his gret avarice, and knoweth well, that nedes he must die, for deth is the ende of every man, as in this present life? And for what cause or encheson joineth he him, or knitteth he him so faste unto his godes, that all his wittes mowe not discover him, ne departe him fro his godes, and knoweth well, or ought to knowe, that whan he is ded, he shall nothing bere with him out of this worlde.

And therefore saith saint Augustin, that the avaricious manne is likened unto helle, that the more it swalloweth, the more desire it hath to swalowe and devoure. And as wel as ye would eschue to be called an avaricious manne or chinch, as wel should ye kepe and governe you in soche a wise, that menne call you not sole large. Therefore saith Tullius: The godes of thing hous ne should not be hid ne kept so close, but that thei might be opened by pite and debonaite, that is to saie to yeve 'hem parte that have grete nede. Ne thy godes should not be so open, to be every mann's godes. Afterwarde in getting of your richesles, and in using 'hem, ye shall alwaie have thre thinges in your herte, that is to saie, our Lorde God, conscience, and gode name. First, ye shall have God in your herte, and for no richesle ye shuld doe any thing, whiche maie in any maner displese GOD your creatour and maker. For after the worde of Salomon, it is better to have a litte gode with the love of GOD, than to have moche gode and treasure, and lese the love of his Lorde GOD. And the Prophete saith, that better it is to be a gode manne, and have litte gode and treasure, than to be holden a shrewe, and have grete richesle. And yet I saie ferthermore, that ye should alwaie doe your business to gette your richesle, so that ye get 'hem with gode conscience. And the Apostle saith, that there n'is thing in this world, of whiche we should have so grete joye, as whan our conscience bereth us gode witnesse. And the Wise manne saith: That the substance of a manne is full gode, whan sinne is not in mann's conscience. Afterwarde in getting of your riches, and in using of 'hem ye must have grete busynesse, and grete diligence, that your gode name be alwaie kept and conserved. For Salomon saith, that better it is, and more it availeth a man to have a gode name, than for to have grete riches: And therefore he saith in an other place, Doe grete diligence saith Salomon, in keping of thy frendes, and of thy gode name, for it shall lengir abide with The, than any tresoure, be it never so precious. And certes he should not be called a grete gentleman, that after God and gode conscience, all thinges left, ne doeth his diligence and busynesse, to kepe his gode name. And Cassiodor saith, that is a signe of a gentle herte, whan a manne loveth and desireth to have a gode name. And therefore saith saint Augustin, that there ben two thinges that ben right necessarie and also nedeful: and that is gode conscience, and gode lose, that is to saie: gode conscience to thine owne persone inward, and gode lose for thy neighbour outward. And he that trusteth hym so moche in his gode conscience, that he despiseth and setteth at nought his gode name or lose, and recketh not though he kepe not his gode name, n'is but a cruell churle.

Sir, now have I shewed you how ye shuld doe in getting riches, and how ye should use 'hem: And I se well that for the trust that ye have in your riches, ye wol move warre and bataille; I counsaile you that ye begin no warre, in truste of your riches, for thei ne suffise not warres to maintain. And therefore saith a Philosopher: That manne that desireth and would algates have warre, shal never have suffisaunce: for the richer that he is, the greter dispences must he make, if he woll have worship and victorie. And Salomon saith, that the grete riches that a man hath, the more dispendours he hath. And therefore, sir, albeit so that for your riches, ye may have moche folke, yet behoveth it not, ne it is not gode to begin warre, where as ye maie in other maner have pece, unto your worship and profite: For the victories in batailles, that ben in this worlde, lieth not in grete number or multitude of peple, ne in the vertue of man, but it lieth in the will, and in the honde of our Lorde God Almighty. And therefore Judas Machabeus, whiche was God's knight, whan he should fight against his adversarie, that had a greter number, and a greter multitude of folke, and stronger than was his peple of Machabe, yet he recomforted his little companie, and saied right in this wise: Al so lightly, said he, maie our Lorde God Almighty yeve victorie to a fewe folke, as to many folke, for the victorie of a bataille commeth not by the grete number of peple, but it commeth from our Lorde GOD of heaven. And dere sir, for as moche as there is no manne certaine, if it be worthie that God yeve him victorie or not, after that Salomon saith, therefore every manne should gretely drede warres to begin: and bicause that in batailles fall many perills, and happeth other while, that as sone is the grete manne slaine, as the little manne. And as it is written in the seconde boke of Kinges: The dedes of batailles ben adventurous, and nothing certain, for as lightly is one hurte with a Spere, as an other: and for there is grete peril in warre, therefore should a man flie and eschue warre in as moche as a manne maie godlye. For Salomon saith, he that loveth perille, shall fall in perill.

After that Dame Prudence had spoken in this maner, Melibe answerde and saied. I se well dame Prudence, that by your faire wordes and youre resons, that ye have shewed me, that the warre liketh you nothing, but I have not yet herd your counsaile, howe I shall doe in this nede.

Certes (saied she) I counsaile you that ye accorde with your advertaries, and that ye have pece with 'hem. For saint James saith in his Epistle: That by concorde and pece, small riches wexe grete: and by debate and discorde, riches decaie. And ye knowe well, that one of the grettest and most soveraine thing that is in this worlde, is unite and pece. And therefore saith our Lorde Jesu Christe to his Apostles, in this wise: well happy ben thei, that love and purchase pece, for thei be called the childern of God. Ah, saied Melibe, now se I well, that ye love not mine honour ne my worship. Ye knowe well that mine adversaries have begon this debate and brige by their outrage. And ye se well that thei ne require ne praie me of pece, ne thei aske not to be reconciled. Woll ye than that I go meke me, and obeie me to 'hem, and crye 'hem mercie? Forsothe that were not my worship. For right as menne saie, over grete humblenes engendreth dispraisinge, so fareth it by to grete humilite or mekenesse.

Than began dame Prudence to make semblaunte of wrathe, and saied: Certes sir, save your grace, I love your honour and profite, as I doe mine owne, and ever have doe: ye ne none other never see the contrary. And yet, if I had saied, that ye should have purchased pece and reconciliacion, I ne had moche mistake me, ne saied amysse. For the Wife man saith: the discencion beginneth by an other man, and the reconciling beginneth by thy self. And the Prophete saith: she shrewdnes and doe gode-nesse, seke pece and folowe it, in as moche as in The is. Yet saie I not, that ye should rather pursue to your adversaries for pece, than thei should to you: for I knowe well that ye ben so hard herted, that ye wol do nothing for me. And Salomon saith: he that hath over harde an herte, he at last shall mishappe or misbetide.

Whan Melibe had herd dame Prudence make semblaunte of wrathe, he saied in this wise. Dame I praie you, that ye be not displefed of thing that I saie, for ye know wel that I am angrie and wrothe, and that is no wonder: and thei that ben wrothe wot not well what thei doe, ne what thei saie. Therefore the Prophete saith: that troubled eyen have no clere sight. But saie and counsaile me as you liketh, for I am redy to doe right as ye woll desire: And if ye repreve me of my folie, I am the more holden to love and praie you. For Salomon saith, that he that repreveth him that doeth folie, he shall finde greter grace, than he that disceiveth hym by swete wordes.

Than saied Dame Prudence, I make no semblaunt of wrath ne of anger, but for your grete profite, for Salomon saith: he is more worth, that repreveth or chiderh a folie for his folie, shewing him semblaunt of wrath, than he that supporteth him and praiseth him in his misdoynge, and laugheth at his folie. And this same Salomon saith afterwarde: That by the sorowfull visage of a manne, that is to saye, by the sorie and hevy countenance of a manne, the folie correcteth and amendeth himselfe.

Than saied Melibe, I shall not conne aunswere unto so manie faire resons as ye put to me and shewe: saye shortly your will and your counsaile, and I am al redy to performe and fulfill it.

Than Dame Prudence discovered all her will unto him and saied. I counsaile you (saied she) above all thinges, that ye make pece bitwene God and you, and be reconciled unto him and to his grace, for as I have saide you here before, God hath suffred you to have this tribulacion and disese for your sinnes: and if ye do as I saye you, God woll sende youre adversaries unto you, and make 'hem fall at your fete, redy to do your will and your commaundement. For Salomon saith, whan the condicion of man is plesaunt and liking to God, he chaungeth the hertes of the man's adversaries, and constraineth hem to beseeche him of pece and of grace. And I pray you let me speke with your adversaries prively, for thy shall not knowe that it be of your wil or your assent: And than whan I knowe theyr will and their entent, I may counsaile you the more surely.

Dame saide Melibe, doeth your will and your liking, for I put me holly in your disposicion and ordinance.

Than dame Prudence, when she sawe the gode will of her husbonde, bythoughte hiere and toke advise in her selfe, thinking howe she mighte bringe this nede unto a gode conclusion and to a gode ende: And whan she sawe her time, she sente for these adversaries to come unto her in a prive place. And shewed wisely unto hem the grete godes that come of pece, and the grete harmes and perils that ben in warre, and said to hem in a godelye maner: how that hem ought to have grete repentaunce of the injury and wrong, that they had done to Melibeus her lord, and unto her and to her doughter.

And whan they herd the godely wordes of Dame Prudence, they were so supprised and ravished, and had so gret joye of her, that wonder was to tell.

Ah, lady (saide they) ye have shewed unto us the blissinge of sweetnesse after the saying of David the Prophet. For the reconfiling whiche we be not worthy to have in no manere. But we ought require it with grete contricion and humilite, that ye of your godenesse have presented unto us. Now se we wel, that the science and conning of Salomon is full trewe, for he saith: That swete wordes multiply and encrece frendes, and maketh shrewes to be debonaire and meke.

Certes (saide they) we put our dede and all our matter and cause all holly in your gode will, and ben redy to obey at the commaundement of our lorde Melibeus. And therefore dere and benigne lady, we praie and beseeche you, as mekely as we can and maie, that it like unto your grete godenesse, to fulfill in dede your godely wordes. For we consider and knowe, that we have offended and greved our Lorde Melibeus out of mesure: so ferforthe that we be nat of power to make him amendes. And therefore we oblige and binde us and our frendes, for to doe all at his will and commaundement: but paraventure he hath suche hevynesse, and suche wraathe to us warde, bycause of our offence, that he woll enjoyne us suche a paine, as we mowe not bere ne sustayne. And therefore noble lady, we beseeche your womanly pite, to take suche advisement in this nede, that we ne oure frendes be not disherited ne distroied, through our foly.

Certes (saide Prudence) it is an harde thing and right perillous, that a man put him all utterly in arbitracion and judgement, and in the might and power of his enemy: For Salomon saith: levethe me, and yeve credence to that I shal say: Ne yeverth never the power ne governaunce of thy godes, to thy son, to thy wife, to thy frende, ne to thy brother: ne yeve thou never mighte ne maystrye over thy body while thou livest. Nowe, sith he defendeth that a man should nat yeve to his brother ne to his frende, the might of his bodye; By a stronger reson he defendeth and forbiddeth a manne to yeve himselfe to his enemy. And nathelesse I counsaile you that ye mistrust nat my lorde: for I wote well and know verely, that he is debonaire and meke, large, curteis, and nothing desirous ne covitous of godes riches. For there is nothing in this worlde that he desireth, save onely worship and honoure. Ferthermore I knowe, and am right sure, that he shall nothinge doe in this nede, without my counsaile: and I shall so werke in this case, that by the grace of oure Lorde God, ye shall be reconfild unto us.

Than saide they with one voice, worshipful lady, we put us and our godes all fully in your will and disposicion, and ben redy to come, what daie that it liketh unto your noblesse to limite us or assine us, for to make our obligacion and bonde, as stronge as it liketh unto your godenesse, that we mowe fulfill the wil of you and of my lorde Melibe.

Whan dame Prudence had herd the answere of these men, she bad hem goe ayen prively and she returned to her lord Melibe, and tolde him howe she founde his adversaries full repentaunt, knowleging full lowly ther sinnes and trespas, and how thei were redy to suffer all paine, requiring and praying him of mercy and pite.

Than saide Melibe, he is well worthy to have pardon and foryeveness of his sinne, that excuseth not his sinne, but knowlegeth and repenteth him, asking indulgence. For Seneke saith, there is the remission and foryevenesse, where as the confession is: for confession is neighbour to innocence. And therefore I assent and confirme me to have pece, but it is gode that we doe nought without the assent and wil of our frendes.

Than was Prudence right gladde and joyfull, and saide: Certes sir, ye have well and godely answered: for righte as by the counsaile, assente, and helpe of your frendes, ye have be stered to venge you and make war: Right so, without ther counsaile shall ye not accorde you, ne have pece with your adversaries. For the lawe saith: there is nothing so gode, by waie of kinde, as a thing to be unbounde by him that it was ibounde.

Than dame Prudence, without delay or tarying, sent anone her messenger, for her kinstolke and her olde frendes, whiche that were trewe and wise: and tolde hem by order, in the presence of Melibe, all the mater, as it is above expresed and declared. And praied hem that they would saye their advise and counsaile, what best were to do in this nede. And when Melibeus frendes had taken ther advise and deliberacion of the forsaide mater, and had examined it by grete besinesse and diligence, thei yave ful counsaile for to have pece and reste, and that Melibe should receive with gode hert his adversaries, to foryevenesse and mercy.

And when dame Prudence had herde th' assent of her lorde Melibe, and the counsaile of his frendes accorde with her will and her entencion, she was wonderfully glad in her hert, and said. There is an olde Proverbe (saide she) That the godenesse that thou maiste doe this daie, doe it, and abide it not, ne delaye it nat till the nexte daie. And therefore I counsaile, that ye sende your messengers, suche as be discrete and wise, unto your adversaries: telling hem on your behalfe, that if they woll trete of pece and accorde, that they shape hem without delay or tarying, to come unto us: whiche thinge perfourmed was in dede. And when these trespassours, and repenting folke of ther folies, that is to saye, the adversaries of Melibeus, had herde what these messengers saide unto hem, they were right gladde and joyfull, and answered full mekely and benignely, yeldinge grace and thanks to ther lorde, Melibee, and to all his companie: and shope hem without delaye to go with the messengers, and obeyed the commaundement of ther lorde Melibeus. And right anone they toke ther waye to the court of Melibe, and toke with hem some of ther true frendes, to make faith for hem, and for to be ther borowes: And whan they were comen to the presence of Melibe, he said to hem these wordes. It stondeth thus, said Melibe, and sothe it is, that causelesse and without skill skill and reson, ye have done gret injuries and wronges o me and my wife Prudence, and to my doughter also, for ye have entred into my house by violence, and have don such outrage, that all men know wel that ye have deserved dethe. And therefore woll I knowe and wete of you, whether ye woll put the punishing and the chastising and the vengeaunce of this outrage, in the will of me and my wife, or ye wol not.

Then the wifest of 'hem thre answerde for 'hem al, and said. Sir (said he) we knowe well that we ben unworthy to come to the courte of so gret a lorde and so worthy as ye be, for we have so gretly mistaken us, and have offended and agilted in such wise againe your high lordship, that truly we have deserved the dethe, but yet for the grete godenesse and debonaite, that all the worlde witneseth of your person, we submitte us to the excellence and benigne of your gracious lordshippe, and ben redy to obey to all your commaundementes, beseeching you, that of your merciable pite ye woll consider our grete repentaunce, and lowe submission, and graunte us foryevenesse of our outrageous trespasses and offence: For wel we knowe, that your liberall grace and mercy stretcheth ferther in to the godenesse, than doen our outrageous giltes and trespasses into the wickednesse. Al be it that curdily and dampnably we have agilted against your high lordship.

THan Melibe toke 'hem up fro the ground full benignely, and received ther obligations and ther bondes, by ther othes upon ther pledges and borowes, and allyned 'hem a certayne day to returne unto his court for to receyve and accept sentence and judgement, that Melibens would commaunde to be don on 'hem, by the causes asoraid, which thinges ordained, every man returned to his house.

And when dame Prudence sawe her time, she fained and asked her lorde Melibe, what vengeaunce he thought take on his adversaries.

To which Melibe answerde, and said: Certes (said he), I thinke and purpose me fully to disherite 'hem of all that ever they have, and for to put them in exile for ever.

Certes said dame Prudence, this were a cruell sentence, and muche ayenst reson. For ye be riche inough, and have no nede of other mennes riches. And ye might lightly in this wise gete you a covetous name, whiche is a vicious thing, and ought be eschewed of every gode manne. For after the saying of the Apostel, Covetise is rote of all harmes. And therefore it were better to you lese so muche gode of your owne, than for to take of their gode in this manner. For better it is to lese gode with worship, than to winne gode with villane and shame. And every man ought to do his diligence and his busynesse, to gete him a gode name. And yet shall he not only busy him in kepinge his gode name, but he shall also enforce him alwaie to doe some thinge, by whiche he maye renewe his gode name. For it is written, that the olde gode lose of a manne or gode name, is sone gon and passe, whan it is not renewed. And as touchinge, that ye saie that ye woll exile your adversaries: that thinketh me muche ayenst reson, and out of mesure, considringe the power, that they have yeve you upon them self. And it is writen: that he is worthy to lose his privilege, that misuseth the mighte and power that is given him. And I sette case, ye might enjoyne 'hem that paine by righte and lawe, whiche I trowe ye maie not doe: I saie, ye might not put it to execution, for peraventure than it were like to turne to the warre, as it was before. And therefore if ye woll that men do you obeisaunce, ye must demene you more courteisly, that is to saye: ye must yeve more cly sentences and judgement. For it is written: he that most curteisly commaundeth, to him men most obey. And therefore I praye you, that in this necessite and in this nede, ye casse ye to overcome your herte. For as Senek saith: he that overcometh his hert, overcometh twise. And Tully saith: there is nothing so commendable in a grete lord, as when he is debonaire and meke, and apeseth him lightly. And I pray you that ye wol now forbere to do vengeaunce in suche a maner, that your gode name maie be kept and conserved, and that men maie have cause and matter to praise you of pite and mercy: and that ye have no cause to repent you of thing that is done. For Senek saith: he overcometh in an yvell manere, that repenteth him of his victorie. Wherfore I praye you, lette mercy be in your hert, to th' effect and entent, that God Almighty have mercie upon you in his laste judgement. For saint James saith in his Epistel: judgement without mercy shal be do to him, that hath no mercy of another wight.

Whan Melibe had herde the grete skilles and reasons of dame Prudence, and her wise informacions and techinges, his herte gan encline to the will of his wife, considring her trewe entent, conformynge him anon and assented fully to worke after her counsaile: and thanked God, of whom procedeth all godenesse and vertue, that him had sent a wife of so grete discretion. And whan the day came that his adversaries should apere in his presence, he spake to 'hem godely, and saide in this wise.

Al be it so, that of your pride and high presumption and solie, and of your negligence and unconninge, ye have misborne you, and trespaced unto me, yet for as mikell as I se and beholde your gret humilite, and that ye be sory and repentaunt of your giltes, it constraineth me to doe you grace and mercy: Wherfore I receive you to my grace, and forgeve you holly all the offences, injuries, and wronges, that ye have done ayenst me and mine, to th' effecte and ende, that God of his endlesse mercy woll at the time of our dyinge foryeve us our giltes, that we have trespaced to him in this wretched worlde. For doubtlesse if we be sory and repentaunt for the sumes and giltes, whiche we have trespaced in the sight of our Lord God: he is so fre and so merciable, that he woll forgive us our giltes, and bring us to the blisse that never shall have ende. Amen.

Here endeth the TALE of CHAUCER.

Here

Here foloweth the MONKE's PROLOGUE.

Han endid was the tale of Melibee
 And of Prudence, and her benigne,
 Our hoste saide, as I am a faithful man,
 And by the precious corpus Madrian,

I had levir than a baril of ale
 That goodlese my wife had yherde this tale,
 For she nothing is of suche pacience
 As was this Melibeus wife Prudence.

By godd's bonis, when I bete my knaves
 She bringith to me the grete clubbid staves,
 And cryth, flee the doggis everichone,
 And breke of them the backe and every bone
 And it so be any neighbour of mine
 Wol not in chunche unto my wife encline,
 Or be so hardy to her to trespase,
 Whan she cometh home she remnith in my face,
 And cryth, false cowarde, awreke thy wife,
 By Corpus Domini, I wol have thy knife,
 And thou shalt have my distafe, and go spinne,
 Fro day til night, she wol right thus beginne.

Alas! she saith, that ever she was shape
 To weddin a milkop, a cowarde ape,
 That wol be overlode with every wight,
 Thou darst not floundin by thy wif's right.

This is my lye, but it that I wol fight,
 And out at dore, anon I mote me dight,
 And ellis I am losse, but it that I
 Be like a wilde lion, and tole hardy.

I wot well the wol do me flee some day
 Some neighbour or othir and goe my way,
 For I am perillous with knife in honde,
 Al be it that I dare not her withflonde,
 For she is bigge in armis by my faith,
 That that he finde, that her mildoth or faith:

But let us passe away from this mattere.

My lord he said, sir monke, be mery of chere,
 For ye shall tellin us a tale truely.

Lo Rochester ystondeth here fast by,
 Ride forth min own lord, and breke not our game,
 But by my trowth I knowin not your name, 40
 Whether I shal cal you my lorde dan John,
 Or dan Thomas, dan Robert, or Albon,
 Or what house be ye, by your father kin,
 I vowe to God, thou hast a ful faire skyn,
 It is a gentle pasture there thou gost,
 Thou art not like a pinaunt or a ghost.

Uppon my faith thou art some officere,
 Some worthy Sexten, or some Celerere,
 For by my father's soule, as to my dome 50
 Thou art a maistir, when thou art at home,
 No pore cloisterer, ne no pore novise,
 But a governour both wity and wise,
 And therewithall of braune and eke of bones
 A right well faring person for the nones.

I prae to God yeve him confusoun
 That first The brought into religion,
 Thou woldist have ben a trede soule aright,
 Haddist thou as grete leve, as thou haste might
 To persourm al thy lust in ingendrure,
 Thou haddest begottin many a cature, 60
 Alas! why werist thou so wide a cope,
 God yeve me sorowe, and I werin Pope,
 Not onely thou, but every mighty man,
 Though he were shorin high upon his pan,
 Should have a wife, for al this world is lorn,
 Religion hath take up al the corne
 Of treading, and we borel men ben shrimpes,
 Of feble trees there comith wretched impes,

This

This makith that our childern be so slender
And feble, that thei may not well engender,
This makith that our wivis wol assay
Religious folke, for they may bettir pay
Of Venus paimentes, bettir than mowe we,
For God wote no luffburghis payin ye,
But be not wroth my lord, although I playe;
Ful ofte in game a sothe have I herde say.

This worthy monke toke al in pacience,
And said, I wol doin my diligence
As ferre as founith into honeste,
To tellin you a tale, ye two or thre,
And if ye liste to herkin hitherwarde,
I wol you saine the life of saint Edwarde,
Or ellis tragidies first I wol tell,
Of whiche I have an hundrid in my cell.
Tragidy is to tell a certaine story

70 As olde bokis maken ofte memory
Of hem that stode in grete prosperite,
And be fallin out of ther hie degre
In to misery, and endid wretchidly,
And thei ben verifiyd comonly 90
Of fixe fete, whiche men clepen hexameton,
In prose eke ben enditid many one,
And in metre, many a sondry wise,
Lo! this ought mough you for to lustie.
Now herewith, if you list for to here,
But first I you besike in this matere,
80 Though I by ordir tellin not these thinges,
Be it of Popis, Emperours, or Kinges,
After ther agis, as men writin hinde,
But telle hem, some before and some behinde, 100
As it comith nowe to my remembraunce,
Have me excusid of mine ignorance.

Here endeth the MONKE's PROLOGUE.

Here beginneth his TALE.

A Tragical Discourse of many who have fallen from high Estate to extreme Misery.

Wol bewaile in manre' of Tragedy
The harme of them that stode in hie
degre,

And fell so that there was no remedy
To bring hem out of ther adversite.
For certaine whan that fortune list to flye,
There may no man of her the courte withhold,
Let no man trust to blind prosperity,
Beth ware by these ensamples yonge and olde. 110

Lucifer.

At Lucifer, though he an angel were
And nat a man, at him will I beginne,
For though fortune may nat an angel dere,
From hie degre, yet fel he for his sinne,
Down into hell, where as he is yet inne.
O Lucifer, brightist of angels all,
Now art thou Sathanas, that maist not twin
Out of misery, in whiche thou art fall.

Adam.

Lo Adam! in the felde of Damascene
With Godd's owne finger ywrought was he, 120
And not begotin of mannes strene unelene,
And welte al paradise savoring o tre,
Had nevere worldely man so hie degre
As Adam, til he for misgovernance
Was driven out of his high prosperite,
To labour unto Helle, and to mischaunce

Sampson.

Lo Sampson! which that was annunciate
By the' angel, long or his nativite,
And was to God almighty consecrate,
And stode in nobles whilis he might fe, 130
Was nevere suche another, as was he,
To speke of strength, and therto hardinesse,
But to his wivis tolde he his previte,
Through which he slough himself for wretchidnesse.

Sampson, this noble and mighty champion,
Withoutin wepin, save his handis twey,
He slough and al to rente the strong lion

Towarde his wedding, walking by the wey,
His false wife coude him so plete and pray,
Till she his counsaile knewe, and the untrewe 140
Unto his foes his counsaile gan bewray,
And him forsake, and toke another newe.

An hundrid f'axs toke Sampson for yre
And all ther tailis he together bonde,
And set the foxis ta his al on fire,
For he in every taile hath put a honde,
And ther brent all the cornis in that londe,
And ther olivis, and ther vines eke,
A thousand men eke he slough with his bonde,
And had no wepin, but an aly's cleke. 150

Whan thei were slaine, so thrilled him that he
Was wel me lorne, for which he gan to prey
That God wold of his paine have some pite
And sende him driue, or ellis mote he dey,
And of this aly's cleke, that was so dey,
Out of a wange toke he sprang anon a well,
Of whiche he dronke mough, shottly to sey,
Thus halpe him God, as Judicium can tell.

By very force, at Gaza on a night,
Maugre the Philistins of that cite, 160
The gatis of the toune he hath up pight,
And on his backe reared hem hath he
High on an hill, where men might hem fe.
O noble mighty Sampson, lefe and dere,
Had thou not tolde the woman thy secre,
In al this worlden he had be thy pere

This Sampson neither sider dronke ne wine,
Ne on his hed came refore none ne crene,
By precepte of the messangere divine,
For all his strenght was locked in his hirs, 170
And ful y twenty winter yere by yere
Of Israel he had the governaunce,
But after some tyme he wepe many a tere,
For women that bring him to his end and dre

Unto his leman Dalila he tolde

That

That

That in his heris al his strength ylay,
And falsely to his foemen she him folde,
And sleping in her barme upon a day
She made to clippe or shere his heres away,
And made his fomen al his craft espien,
And whan that thei him fonde in suche aray
They bounde him faste, and tho put out his eyen.

But er his heres were clippid or ishave
There n'as no bond with which men might him
binde,
But nowe is he imprison'd in a cave,
Where as thei made him at the querne to grinde.
O noble Sampson, strongist of mankinde,
O whilom judge in glory and richesse!
Now maist thou wepin with thine eyin blinde,
Sith thou art from weie fal to wretchidnesse.

The'ende of these caitives was, as I shal sey,
His fomen made a fest upon a daie
And made him, as their sole, before 'hem pley,
And this was in a temple' of gret araie,
But at the last he made a foule affray,
For he two postis shoke, and made 'hem fall,
Dounc fel the temple al, and there it laie,
And sloughe himself, and eke his fomen all.

This is to say, the princes everichone,
And eke thre thousand bodies were ther slain
With falling of the grete temple of stone.
Of this Sampson now wol I no more faine,
Both ware by this ensample olde and plain
That no men tel ther counsaile to ther wives
Of such thing as thei would have secret fain,
If that it touche ther limmis or ther lives.

Of Hercules.

Of Hercules the souveraine conqueroure
Singin his werkis, laude, and hie renoun,
For in his time of strength he bare the floure,
He slough and rafte the skin of the lioun
And of the Centaurs laide the bofte adoune,
He Harpyes slewe, the cruel birdis fell,
He goldin appels rafte fro the dragon,
He drewe out Cerberus the hounde of hell.

He slewe the cruel tiraunt Busyris,
He made his horse to frete him fleshe and bone,
He sloughe the very serpent venomous,
Of Achelous hornes brake he that one,
And he slewe Cacus in a cave of stone,
He sloughe the giaunt Antæus the stronge,
He sloughe the grisly bore, and that anon,
And bare his hed upon his sperè longe.

Was nevir wight, sithin the world began,
That slough so many monsters, as did he,
Throughout this widè world his name it ran,
What for his strength, and what for his bounte,
And evèry relme went he for to se,
He was so strong, that no man might him let,
And at the world's end he, for Trophe,
Instede of boundes of brasse 2 pillours set.

A lemman had this noble champion
That hight Deianire, as fresh as Maye,
And as these clerkis makin mention
She hath him sent a shirt both fresh and gaie,
Alas: this shirte, alas and well awaie!
Envenomid was subtilly withall,
That er he had werid it halfe a daie
It made his bonis fro his fleshe to fall.

But nathelesse, some clerkis here excusen

By one that hight Nessus, that it makid,
Be as be may, I wol her not accusen,
But on his bak the' shirte he ware nakid,
Til the fleshe was with the venim blakid,
And when he sawe none othir remedie,
In hore colis he hath himselfe irakid
For with no venim dainid he to die.

Thus sterfe this worthy mighty Hercules,
Lo! who may trust in fortune any throwe?
For him that foloweth of this world the pres
Or he beware, is oftin laide ful lowe,
Ful wise is he, which that himselfe can knowe,
Beware, for when that fortune liste to glose
Than waitith she, her man adoune to throwe
By suche a way, as he would leste suppose.

Nabuchodonosor.

THE mighty trone, the precious trefore,
The glorious septer, royal majeste,
That hath the King Nabuchodonosore,
With tonge unnethis may discrivid be.
He twise wanne Hierusalem, that cite,
The vesicles of the temple' he with him lad,
At Babilon was his souveraine se,
In whiche his glory and delite he had.

The fairist childrin of the blode royall
Of Israel he did do gelde anone,
And make eche of 'hem for to ben his thrall,
Amonge all othir Daniell was one,
That was the wisist childe of everichone,
For he the dremis of the king expouned,
Where as in Caldec clerkis were there none
That wist unto what fine his dremis souned.

This proude king let make a statu of golde
Sixty cubites in lengthe, and sevin in brede,
To whiche ymage, to bothe the yonge and olde
Commaundid he to loure, and have in drede,
Or in a forneis, ful of flamis rede,
He should be brente, that ne would not obey,
But never would assent unto that dede
Daniell, ne his yong felowis twey.

This king of kingis, so proude and elate
Wende God, that sittith hie in majeste
Ne might him nat birese of his estate,
But sodainly he losse his dignite,
And like a best him semid for to be,
And ete hey as an oxe, and laye therout
In rain, and with wilde bestis walkid he,
Til that a certain time was come about.

And like an Egl's fethers were his heres,
And his neillis like birdis clawis were,
But God relevid him at certain yeres,
And yave him wit, and than with many' a tere
He thonkid God, and al his life in fere
Was he to doc amisse, or more trespase,
And ere that he layid was on his bere
He knew that God was full of might and grace.

Balthasar.

HIS sonnè, which that hightin Balthasare,
That helde the reign after his faðir's daie,
He by his faðir could not be aware,
For proude he was of herte, and of arraie,
And eke an Ydolaster was he aie,
His high estate assurid him in pride,
But fortune cast him down, and there he laie,
And sodainly his reigne bygan devide.

A fest he made unto his lordis all

Upon

Upon a time, he made him blith to be,
And than his officeris gan he call,
Goth bringith forth the Vessellis, q^d he,
Whiche that my fathre in his prosperite
Out fro the Temple of Jerus'lem beraft,
And to our Goddis thonkis yeldin we
Of honour, that our eldiris with us laft.

His wife, his lordis, and his concubines
Aie dronkin, whiles ther appetyte wold laft,
Out of these noble vessels, sondrie wines,
And on a wall this king his eyin cast,
And sawe an hond armelette, that wrote full fast,
For fere of whiche he quoke, and sighid sore,
This hond, that Balthasar made fore agast,
Wrote Mene Techel Phares and no more.

In all that londe Magicien was ther non
That cou^d expounin what this letter ment,
But Daniel expounid it anon,
And saied, O king, God to thy fathir sent
Glorie and honour, reign, trefour, and rent,
And he was proude, and nothing God he drad,
And therefore grete wrath God upon him sent,
And him biraft the reigne that he had.

He was out cast of mann's companie,
With Assis was his habitacion,
And ete haie as a best, in were and drie,
Till that he knewe, by grace and by reson,
That God of heven hath dominacion
Ovir every reigne, and every cature,
And than had God of him compassion,
And him restored his reigne and his figure.

Eke thou, that art his sonne, art proud also,
And knowist all these thingis privily,
And rebell unto God art, and his foe,
Thou dranke eke of his vessels boldily,
Thy wife eke, and thy wenchis sinfully
Dronke of the same vessels sondrie winis,
And heryid false Goddis cursidly,
Therefore unto The shapin full gret pync is.

This hond was sent fro God, that on the wal
Wrote Mene Techel Phares trustith me,
Thy reigne is doen, thou weldest it not at all,
Devidid is thy relme, and it shall be
To Medis and to Perciens (q^d he)
And that same night in bed the king was slawe, 250
And Darius occupied his degre,
Though he therto had neither right ne law.

Lordinges, here by ensample mowe ye take
How that in lordship is no sikirnesse,
For whan that fortune woll a man forsake,
She bereth awaie his reigne, and his richesse,
And eke his frendis, bothe more and lesse,
And whanne a man hath frendis through fortune
Mishap woll make them enemies I gesse,
This proverbe is full soth, and ful commune. 360

Zenobia.

Zenobia of Palmerie the Quene
(As writith Perciens of her noblesse)
So worthy was in armis, and so kene,
That no wight passid her in hardinesse,
Ne in linage, ne othir gentilesse,
Of kingis blode of Perce she is discended,
I saie that she ne had not moste fairenesse,
But of her shap she might not be amended.

From her childhode I findin that she fled
Office of woman, and to wode she went,

370

And many a wilde Hert's blode she shed ;
With arrowis brode, that she to 'hem sent,
She was so swift, that she anon 'hem hent,
And whan that she was eldir, she would kill
Lions, Libardes, and Beris all to rent,
And in her armis welde 'hem at her will.

She durst the wildè bestis dennis seke,
And rennin in the mountaines all the night,
And slepe under a bushe ; and she could eke
Wrastill by very force, and very might 380
With any yong man, were he nere so wight,
There mightin nothing in her armis stonde,
She kept her maidinhd from every wight,
To no man dained she to be ybounde.

But at the last, her frendis haven her married
To Odenat, a Prince of that countre,
All were it so, that she 'hem long ytaried,
And ye shall understondin how that he
Yhad soche fantasys as had she,
But nathelèsse, whan thei were knit in fere, 390
Thei lived in joye and in felicite,
For eche of 'hem had othir lefe and dere.

Save one thing, that she n'olde nevir assent
By no waie, that he shouldin by her lie
But onis, for it was her plain entent.
To have a child, the worlde to multiplie,
And al so sone as that she might asprie
That she was not with childè with that dede,
Than would she suffre him do his fantasie
Eftsonis, and but onis out of drede. 400

And if she were with childe at thilkè cast,
Than no more should he play with her that game
Till fully fourtie dayis werin past
Than would she onis suffir him the same,
All were this Odenat or wilde or tame 340
He gate no more of her, for thus she saied,
It was to wivis lecherie and shame,
In othir case if that men with 'hem plaid.

Two sonnis by this Odenat had she,
The whiche she kept in vertue and lettrure, 410
But now unto our tale tournin we,
I saie that so worshipfull a cature
And wife therwith, and eke large with mesure,
So penible in warre, and curteis eke,
Ne more labour mightin in warre endure
Was non, though al this world men woldin seke.

Her riche araie he might not be ytold
As well in vessell as in her clothing,
She was all cladde in pierrie and in gold,
And eke she ne left not for none hunting ; 420
To have of sondrie tonguis folke knowing
Whan that she leisur had for to entende
To lernin bokis was all her liking,
How she in vertue might her life dispende.

And shortly of this storie for to trete,
As doughtie was her husbonde as was she,
So that thei conquered many reigneis grete
In the Orient, with many a faire cite
Apperteinaunt unto the Majeste
Of Rome, and with strong hond them held ful faste,
Ne nevir might her foemen doe her sle
As long as Odenat's dayis last.

Her battailes, who so listè 'hem for to rede,
Again Sapor the king, and othir mo,
And how that all this proces fill in dede,
Why she conquered, what title she had therto, And

And after of her mischief, and her wo,
How that she was besiegid, and itake,
Let him unto my maister Petrarke go,
That write inough of this, I undertake.

440

Whan Odenat was dedde, she mightily
The relmis held, and with her propre honde
Ayenst her foes she fought so truily,
That there n'as prince ne king in all that londe
That he n'as glad, if that the grace he fonde,
That she ne should upon his londe warrey,
With her thei maidin aliaunce by bonde
To be in pece, and let 'hem ride and pley.

The Emperour of Rome hight Claudius,
Ne him besorne, the Romain Galien
Ne durst nevir be so coragious
Ne non Armen, ne non Arabiene,
That durstle onys before hiere be fene
Within the field, that durst with her to fight,
Lest that she would 'hem with her hondis slene,
Or with her meine, put 'hem all to flight.

450

In king's habite, went her sonnis two,
As lawfull heiris of her relmis all,
And Hermano and Titamallio
Ther namis were, as Perciens 'hem call
But aie fortune, hath in her honie gall,
This mightie Quene, ne maie no while endure
Fortune out of her reigne made her to fall
To wretchidnesse, and to misaventure.

460

Aurelian, whan that the governaunce
Of Rome was come into his hondis twey,
He shope upon this quene to doe vengeance,
And with his legions, he toke his wey
Toward Zenobia, and shortly for to saie
He made her slie, and at the last her hent,
And fettered her, and eke her children twaie,
And wan the lond, and home to Rome he went.

470

Emongis othir thingis that he wan
Her chare, that of gold was wrought and pierre,
This grette Romaine, this Aurelian
Hath with him lad, for that men should it se,
And besorne his triumph ywalkid she
With golden chainis on her necke honging,
Crounid she was, as aftir her degre,
And full of pierre chargid her clothing.

480

Alas fortune, she that whilom ywas
Dredfull to Kingis, and to Emperoures,
Now gaurith all the peple' on her, alas!
And she that helmid was in starke flouris
And wan by force tounis strong, and touris,
Shall on her hedde now werin autremite!
And she that bare the scepter full of flouris,
Shall bere a distasse, her coste for to quite!

Nero.

Although that Nero were as vicious
As any fende, that lieth full low adoun, 490
Yet he, as tellith us Suetonius,
All this wide worlde had in subjeccioun
Bothe East and West, South and Septentrioun,
Of Rubies, Saphers, and of Perlis white
Were all his clothis broudrid up and down,
For he in gemmis gretely gan delite.

490

More delicate, more pompous of araie,
More proude, was nevir Emperour, than he,
That ilke clothe that he had werid o daie,
Aftir that time he n'old it nevir se,
Nettis of gold threde had he grette plente

500

To fishe in Tiber, whan him list to plaie,
His lustis were as lawe, in his degre,
For fortune, as his frende, would him obaie.

He Rome ybrent for his delicacie,
The Senatours he slue upon a daie,
To here how ther wivis would wepe and crie,
And slowe his brothir, by his siltir laie,
His mothir made he in pitous araie,
For he her wombe let slitte for to beholde 520
Where he conceivid was, so welawaie
That he so little of his mothir tolde.

No teres out of his eyin for that sight
Ne came, but saied a faire woman was she,
Grette wondir is, how that he cou'd or might
Be the Domisman of her dedde beaute,
The wine to bringin him commaundid he,
And dranke anon, none othir wo he made;
Whan might is joignid unto cruelte
Alas! to depe wollin the venim wade. 520

In youth a maistir had this Emperour
To techin him lettrure, and curtesie,
For of moralite he was the floure,
As in his time, but if these bokis lie,
And whiles his maistir had of him maistre
He made him so conning and so souple,
That long time it was or that tirannie,
Or any vice, durst in him uncouple.

This Seneca of which I you devise,
Bicause that Nero had of him soche drede,
For he for his vicis would him chastise
Discretly as by worde, and not by dede,
Sir, he would saie, an Emperour mote nede
Be vertuous, and hatin tirannie,
For whiche he made him in a bathe to blede
On bothe his armis, till he must ydie.

This Nero had eke of a customaunce
In youth, ayenst his maistir for to rise,
Which aftirward him thought a grette grevaunce,
Therefore he made him dey in this wyse,
But natheless this Seneca the wise 540
Chese in a Bath to dye in this manere,
Rathir than have anothir turmentise,
And thus hath Nero slain his maistir dere.

Now fell it so, that fortune list no longer
The high pride of this Nero to cherishe
For tho that he were strong, yet was she stronger,
And thus she thought by God I am to nise
To set a man, that is fulfilled of vice,
In his degre, and Emperour him call,
By God out of his fete I woll him trice, 550
Whan he left wenith, sonist shall he fall.

The peple rose upon him on a night
For his defeute, and whan he it aspied,
Out of his dores anon he hath him dight
Alone, and there he wende have ben alied,
He knockid fast, and aie the more he cried,
The fallir shette han thei the doris all,
Tho wist he well, he had himself begiled,
And went his waie, no lengir durst he call.

The peple cried and romblid up and down, 560
That with his eris he herd how thei saied,
Where is this false Traytour, this fell Neroun?
For fere full nere out of his wit he braied,
And to his Goddes right pitously he praied
For focoure, but it might not him betide,
For drede of this him thoughtin that he deide,

And

And ran into a gardein, him to hide.

And in this gardeine found he chorlis twey
That fartin by a fire full grete and redde,
And to the chorlis two he gan to prey
To flea him, and to girdin of his hedde,
That to his body, whan that he were dedde,
Were no despite ido, for his deffame,
Himself he slough, he could not better redde,
Of which fortune ylough and made a game.

Holofernes.

WAS never a capteyn undir a king,
That reignis mo pur in subjeccion,
Ne strongir was in field, of alle thing
As in his time, ne gretir of renoun,
Ne more pompous in high presumpcioun,
Than Holofernes which fortune aic kiste,
And so licorously lad up and down,
Till that his hedde was off er that he wiste.

Not only that this worlde had of him awe,
For lesing of richesse and liberte,
But he made every man renie his lawe,
Nabuchodonosor was lorde, saied he;
None othir God yshould honourid be,
Ayenit his hest, there dare no wight trespase,
Save in Berhulia, a strong cite,
Where Eliachem was priest of that place.

But take kepe of the deth of Holoferne;
Amid his hoste he dronkin laie all night
Within his tent, as large as is a berney,
And yet for all his pompe, and all his might,
Judith, a woman, as he laie upright
Slepinge, his hedde of smote, and fro his tent
Full privily she stole, from every wight,
And skatheless fram hem all she went.

Antiochus.

WHat nedith it of king Antiochus
To tell his high and roiall majeste?
His grete pride, and his werkis venemus,
For soche an othir nas nevere noon but he;
Redith what that he was in Machabe,
And redith the proude wordis that he saied,
And why he fil from his prosperite,
And in an hill how wretchidly he died.

Fortune him had enhaunsid so in pride,
That verily he wende he might attaine
Unto the steris, upon every side,
And in a balounce to wey eche mouuntain,
And all the floudis of the se restrain,
And Godd's peple had he moste in hate,
Them would he flea, in turment, and in pain,
Wening that God ne might his pride abate.

And for that Nichanore and Timothe
By Jewis were venquishid mightily,
Unto the Jewis soche an hate had he,
That he bad greithe his chare full hastily,
And swore and sayid, full dispitously,
Unto Hierusalem he would estsone,
To wreke his ire on it full cruilly;
But of his purpose was he let full sone.

God for his menace him so fore hath smote,
With woundes invisable, incurable,
That in his guttis carfid so and bore,
That his peynis werin importable,
And certainly the wreche was resonable,
For many a mann's guttis did he pain,
But from his purpose, cursed and dampnable,
For all his smert, he n'old him not restrain.

But bade anon, aparailin his hoste;
And sodainly, er he was of it ware,
God dauntid all his pride, and all his hoste;
For he so fore yfell out of his chare,
That all his limmis and his skin to rare,
So that he no more ne might go ne ride;
But in a chaire men doe about him bare
Alle forbrusid both in back and side.

The wreche of God him smote so cruilly
That in his body wickid wormis crept,
And therwithall he stanke so horribly,
That none of all his meine, that him kept,
Whethir that he awoke, or ellis slepte,
Ne mightin not of him the stinke endure,
And in his mischief he wailid and wept,
And knewe God was Lorde of every creature.

To all his hoste, and to himself also,
Full lothsome was the stinke of his caraine,
There n'as no man might bere him to and fro,
And in his stinke, and his horrible pain
He sterte full wretchidly on a mountain.
Thus hath this robbour, and this homicide,
That many a man made to wepe and plain,
Soche guerdon, as belongeth unto pride.

Alexander.

ALisaunders storie is so commune,
That every wight, that hath discrecioun,
Hath herde somewhat or all of his fortune,
This wide worlde, as in conclusioun,
He wan by strength, or for his high renoun
Thei werin glad for pece unto him sende,
The pride of man and beeste he laied adoun
Where so he came, unto the world's ende.

Comparioun might yet nevir be maked
Betwixt him, and an othir conquerour,
For al this world for dred of him hath quaked,
He was of knighthode, and of stedome floure,
Fortune him made the heir of high honour,
Save wine and women, nothing might aswage
His high entent in armis and laboure,
So was he full of Leonine corage.

What price were it to him, though I you told
Of Darius, and of a thousande mo,
Of Princis, Erlis, and of Knightis bold,
Whiche that he conquerid, and brought to wo?
I saie as ferre as man mai ride or go
The world was his, what shuld I more devise?
For though I wrote and told you evir mo
Of his knighthode, it mightin not suffice.

Twelve yere he reighid, as sayeth Machabe,
Philipp's sonne of Macedone was he,
Which that first King was of Grece the countre;
O worthy gentill Alisaundre, alas! qd he
That evir it sholde falle in swyche degree,
Enpoisonid of thy own folke thou were,
Thy fortune to an alle hath turnede thee,
And yet for The ne wept she ner a tere.

O who shall yeve me teris to complain
The deth of gentilnesse, and of fraunchise,
That all the worlde weldid in his demain,
And yet him thought it mightin not suffice,
So full was his corage of high emprise!
Alas! who shall me helpin to endite
False fortune, and her poison to dispise,
The whiche two of all this wo I wite.

U u

Julius

Julius Cesar.

BY wisedome, manhode, and by grete labour,
 From humble bed to roiall Majeste
 Up rose he, Julius the Conquerour,
 That all the Occident, by londe and see,
 Wan by strength of hond, or els by trete, 700
 And unto Rome made them tributarie,
 And sith of Rome the Emperour was he
 Till that fortune wext his adversarie.

O mightie Cesar, that in Theffaly
 Ayenst Pompeius father thine in lawe,
 That of the' Orient had the chivalrie
 As ferre as that the daie beginneth to dawe,
 Them thorough knighthode thou hast take and slaw,
 Save a fewe folke that with Pompeius fled,
 Through which thou puttest al the' orient in awe; 710
 Thonkith fortune that The so well yspedde.

But now a little while I woll bewaile
 This Pompeius, this noble governour
 Of Rome, which that yfied at this battaile,
 I saie one of his men, a false traitour,
 His hedde of smote, to winnin him favour
 Of Julius, and to him the' hedde ybrought.
 Alas Pompei, of the' Orient conquerour
 That fortune unto soch a fine The wrought!

To Rome again repairith Julius 720
 With his triumphè laureate full hie,
 But on a time Brutus and Cassius,
 That evre' had of his hie estate envie,
 Full privilie had made conspiracie
 Ayenst this Julius, in subtilt wise,
 And cast the place, in whiche he should ydie
 With bodèkins, as I shall you devise.

This Julius to the Capitoll went
 Upon a daie, as he was wont to gone,
 And in the Capitoll anon him hent 730
 This false Brutus, and his othir fone,
 And stickid him with bodèkins anone
 With many' a wound, and thus thei let him lie,
 But never groned he at no stroke but one,
 Or els at two, but if his storie lie.

So manly was this Julius of herte,
 And so well loved estatey honeste
 That tho his dedly woundis so fore smerte,
 His mantell ovir his hippis cast he,
 For no man should yse his private, 740
 And as he laie in dying on a traunce,
 And wist verrily that ded shuld he be,
 Of honestie yet had he remembrance.

Lucan, to The this storie I commende,
 And to Sueron, and Valerie also,
 That of this storie writin orde and ende
 How that to these grete Conquerouris two
 Fortune was first a frende, and lithe a foe,
 Let no man trust upon her favour long,
 But have her in awaite for evermo; 750
 Witnesse on all the conquerouris strong.

Cresus.

THE riche Cresus, whilom was king of Lide
 (Of which Cresus Cyrus fore him ydrad)
 Yet was he caught amidis all his pride,
 And to be bient men to the fire him lad,
 But soche a rain down from the welkin shad
 That quent the fire, and made him to escape,
 But to beware yet no grace he had,
 Till fortune on the galowes made him gape.

Whan he escapid was he could not stint 760
 For to begin a newe araie again,
 He wenid well, for that fortune him sent
 Soche hap, that he escapid through the rain,
 That of his fois he might not be slain,
 And eke asweven' upon a night he met,
 Of whiche he was so proude, and eke so fain,
 That in vengeaunce he all his herte yset.

Upon a tre he was, as that him thought,
 Ther Jupiter him wishe, both hals and side,
 And Phebus eke a faire rowayle him brought 770
 To drie him with, and therwith wexe his pride,
 And to his doughtir, that stode him beside,
 Which that he knewe in hie sentence habound,
 He bad her tell him what it signified,
 And she his dreame right thus began expound.

The tre (qð she) the galous is to mene,
 And Jupiter betokeneth snowe and rain,
 And Phebus, with his towell all so clene
 Betokeneth the Sunne bemis, soth to fain,
 Thou shalt hongid be, fathir myne certain, 780
 Rain shall The washe, and sunne shall The ydrie.
 Thus she warnid him full plat and full plain,
 His doughtir, which that callid was Phanie.

And hongid was this Cresus the proude king,
 His roiall throne ne might him not availe;
 Tragedie is none othir manir thing,
 Ne can in singing, crying ne bewaile,
 But for that fortune aldaie woll assaile,
 With unaware stroke, the reigis that ben proud,
 For whan men trustith her, than wol she faile, 790
 And covir her bright face undir a cloude.

Petro of Spain.

O Noble, worthy Petro, King of Spain,
 Whom fortune held so high in Majeste,
 Well oughtin men thy pitous deth complain, 730
 Out of thy londe thy brothir made The fle,
 And aftir at a siege by subtilte
 Thou wer. betraied, and ladde unto his tent,
 Where as he with his owne honde slue The,
 Succeding in thy reigne and in thy rent.

The felde of snowe, with th' egle black therin, 800
 Caught with the limrod, coloured as the glede,
 He brewe this cursidnesse, and all this sinne,
 The wicked neste was werker of this dede,
 Not Charles, ne Oliver, that toke aie hede 740
 Of trouth and honour, but of Armorike
 Genillion Oliver, corrupt for mede,
 Brought this worthie king into soche a brike.

Petro King of Cipre.

O Worthy Petro, king of Cipre' also,
 That Alixandrie wan by high maistrise, 810
 Full many an Hethin wroughtist thou wo,
 Of whiche thine owne liegis had envie,
 And for nothing, but for thy chivalrie,
 Thei in thy bed han slain The by the morow;
 Thus can fortune her whele govern and gie,
 And out of joye bringin men into sorowe.

Barnabo Visconti.

O F Milan, the grete Barnabo Vicounte,
 God of delite, and scourge of Lumbardie,
 Why should I not thine infortune accounte,
 Sens in estate thou clombin were so hie?
 Thy brothir's sonne, that was thy double alie,
 For he thy nevewe was, and sonne in lawe,
 Within his Prifon made The for to die,
 But why ne how n'ot I, that thou wer slawe.

Hugeline

Hugeline of Pise.

OF the' erle Hugeline of Pise the langoure
 Ther maie no tong ytellin for pite,
 But lityl out of Pise there stont a toure,
 In the whiche toure in prison put was he,
 And with him ben his little childrin thre,
 The eldist scarcely five yere was of age;
 Alas fortune, it was grete cruelte
 Soche birdis for to put in soche a cage!

Dampnid was he to die in that prison,
 For Roger, whiche that bishop was of Pise,
 Had on him made a false suggestion,
 Through which the peple gan upon him rise,
 And put him in prison, in soche a wise
 As ye have herd, and mete and drinke he had
 So small, that unnethis it maie suffise,
 And therewithall it was full pore and bad.

And on a daie bifell, that in that houre 840
 Whan that his mete wont was for to be brought,
 The geilour shett the doris of the toure,
 He herd it well, but yet he spake right nought,
 And in his herte anon there fill a thought,
 That thei for hungir wouldin doe him dien,
 Alas (qð he) alas that I was wrought!
 And therewithal the teres fell from his eyen.

His yongè sonne, that thre yere was of age,
 Unto him said, fathir, why do ye wepe?
 Whan will the geilour bring us our potage? 850

Is there no morsell bred that ye do kepe?
 I am so hungrie, that I maie not slepe;
 Now would to God that I might slepe for ever!
 Than should not hunger in my belly crepe,
 There n'is nothing but bred that me were lever.

Thus daie by daie this child began to crie,
 Till in his fathir's barme adoune it laie,
 And sayid farewell fathir, I mote die, 830
 And kist his fathir, and deide the same daie,
 And whan the wofull fathir did it sey, 860
 For wo his armis two he gan to bite,
 And saied alas: fortune, and welawaie
 Thy false wylis my woo I may wyte.

His childrin wend, that it for hungir was
 That he his armis gnawe, and not for wo,
 And sayid: fathir, do not so (alas!)
 But rathir ete the fleshe upon us two,
 Our fleshe thou yave us, take our fleshe us fro,
 And ete inough; right thus thei to him said;
 And aftir that within a day or two 870
 Thei laid 'hem in his lappe adoun, and deide.

Thus endid is this mighty erle of Pise
 Himself dispeirid eke, for hungir starfe,
 From high estate fortune away him carfe,
 Of this Tragedy', it ought inough suffise,
 Who so wol here it in a longir wise,
 Yredith the grete poete of Itaile,
 That hight Dante, for he can it all devise,
 Fro point to point, not a worde wol he faile.

Here endeth the MONKE's TALE.

Here

Here stinteth the Knight the Monke of his Tale, and here foloweth the Prologue of the Nonne's Priest.

HO ! (q'ð the knight) gode sir no more of this,
That ye have sayd is right ynough I wis,
And mokil more ; for litill hevinessle,
Is right inough to mochell folk I gesse,
I saie for me, it is a grete disese
Wheras men havin ben in welth and ese,
To herin of ther sodaine fal, alas !
And the contrary is joye and solas,
As when a man hath ben in pore estate
And climbith up, and wexith fortunate,
And there abidich in prosperite,
Such thingis are gladsome, as thinkith me,
And of suche thingis were gode for to tell.
Ye (q'ð our hoste) by saint Poul's bell
Ye say right soth, this monke he clappith lowde,
He spake, how fortune covered with a cloude
I wote not what, and also' of a Tragedy
Right nowe ye herde, and parde no remedy
It is for to bewailin, ne complaine
That that is done, and als it is a paine,
As ye have saide, to here of hevinessle ;
Sir monke no more of this, so God you blesse,
Your tale anoyith all this company,
Suche talking is not worth a butterfly,
For therin is there no disporte ne game,
Therefore sir monke, dan Piers by your name,
I pray you hertely, tell us somewhat elles,

For sikirly, n'ere clinking of your belles,
That on your bridill honge on every side,
By hevin king, that for us allè dide,
I should er this han fallin doune for slepe,
Although the slough had ben nevir so depe,
Than had your tale al be toldin in vaine,
For certainly, as that these clerkis saine,
Where as a man may have none audience
Nought helpith it to tellin his sentence ;
And wel I wote the substaunce is in me,
If any thing shal well reportid be.

890

Sir, say somewhat of hunting, I you pray.

Nay (q'ð this monke) I have no lust to play,
Now let an othir tel, as I have tolde.

910

Than spake our hoste with rude speche and bolde,
And saied unto the Nonn's priest anon,
Come nere thou preest, come hithir thou fire John,
Tel us such thing, as may our hertis glade,
Be blithe, although thou ride upon a jade,
What though thy horse ybe be both foule and lene,
If he wol servin The, recke not a bene,
Loke that thy herte be mery ever mo.

900

Yes Ooste, q'ð he, soo mote I ryde or goo,
But I be mery', I wis I wol be blamed,
And right anon his tale he hath atamed,
And thus he saide unto us everichon,
This swetè preest, this godely man sir John.

930

Here endeth the PROLOGUE of the Nonne's PRIEST.

Here

Here foloweth his TALE.

Of a Cock and a Hen. The Morall whereof is to embrace true friends, and to beware of flatterers.

Pore widowe, somdele iſtept in age,
Was whilom dwelling in a narwe cōtage
Beside a grene, yſtōnding in a dale;
This widowe, of the whiche I telle my tale,
Sithins the day that she was laſt a wife
In pacience ledde ſchee a full ſimple life,
For litill was her catill and her rent,
By husbondry, of ſuche as God her ſent,
She ſonde her ſelf, and eke her doughtirs two;
Thre large ſowis had ſhe, and no mo,
Thre kine, and eke a ſhepe which that hight Mall;
Full ſooty was her bour, and eke her hall,
In whiche ſhe ete many a ſengell meale,
Of pōinant ſauce hiee nededenere a dele,
Noo deinty morcill paſſid through her throte,
Her diet was acordaunt to her cote,
Replecion ne made her nevir ſike,
A temperate diete was all her phiſike,
And exerciſe, and hert'is ſuffiſaunce,
The gout ne let her nothing for to daunce,
Ne apoplexie ne ſhent nat her hed,
No wine drank evir ſhe, ne white ne red.
Her borde was moſt ſervid with white and blacke,
Milke and broun bred, in which ſhe ſonde no lack,
Seinde bakon, and ſometime an eye or twey,
For ſhe was as it were a manir dey.
A gardyn ſhe had, encloſid al aboute
With ſtickis, and with a drie ditch without,
In whiche ſhe had a cocke hight chaunteclere,
In al the lande of crowing n'as his pere,
His voice was merier than the merie orgon
On maſſe dayis that in the churchis gon,
Wel ſikerer was his crowing in his loge
Than is a clock, or Abbey-horologe,
By nature he knew eche aſſencion
Of the' equinoctial in that ilke toun,
For when degrees xv. werin aſſended
Than crew he, that it might not be amended.
His comb was reddir than the ſine corall,
And bartelled, as it were a caſtill wall,
His beke was blacke, as any get it ſhone,
Like aſure were his leggis and his tone,
His nailis whitir than the lilly floure,
And like the burnid golde was his coloure.
This gentel cocke had in his governaunce
Seven hennis, for to donne all his pleaſaunce,
Which were his ſuſtirs, and his paramours,
And wondir like to him, as of colours,
Of whiche the fayriſt hewed under the throte
Was callid faire damoſell Pertelote;
He fethered her a hundred times a day,
And ſhe him pleaſith al that ere ſhe may,
Curteis ſhe was: diſcrete and debonaire,
And compenable, and bare her ſelfe ſo faire
Sithins the time that ſhe was ſevenight olde,
That truiliche ſhe hath the herte in holde
Of Chaunteclere, loking in every lith,
He loved her ſo, that wel was him therwith;
But ſuche a joye it was to here him ſing,
Whan that the brighte Sunne began to ſpring,
In ſwete acorde, My leſe is faren in londe.
For at that time as I have undirſtonde
Beſtis and birdis couldin ſpeke and ſing,
And it ſo fell, that in the day dawninge
As Chaunteclere, among his wivis all,

Sat on his perche, that was within the hall,
And nexte to him ſat his faire Pertelote,
This Chaunteclere gan to grone in his throte, 1000
As a man in his dreame is dreethed ſone,
And whan that Pertelot thus herde him grone,
She was agaſt, and ſaid my hertè dere,
What cylith you to grone in this manere?
Ye be a very ſlepir, ſie for ſhame!
And he answerid thus, by God madame,
I pray you, that ye take it not in greſe,
By God I mette, I was in ſuche miſtheſe
Right now; that yet mine hert is ſore afright, 1010
Now God (q'ð he) my ſwevin rede aright,
And kepe my body out of ſoule priſoun.
Me mette, how that I romid up and down
Within our yerde, wher as I ſawe a beſt
Was like an hound, and would have made areſt 950
Upon my body, and have had me ded,
His colour was betwixt yelow and red,
And tippid was his taile, and both his cres
With black, unlike the remenant of his heres,
His ſnoute was ſmall, with glowing eyin twey, 1020
Yet for his loke almoſt for fere I dey,
This cauſith me my groning doutileſſe.
Away, q'ð ſhe, ſie on you hertileſſ!
Alas (q'ð ſhe) for by that God above 960
Now have ye loſte my hert, and al my love;
I can not love a cowarde by my faithe,
For certis, what ſo any woman ſaith,
We all deſirin, if that it might be
To have husbondis, hardy, wiſe, and fre,
But ſiker no nigarde, ne no ſole, 1030
Ne him that is agaſt of every tole,
Ne none avowtour, by that God above,
How durſt ye ſay for ſhame unto your love
That any ſwevin might make you aſerde?
Have ye no mann'is hert, and have a berde?
And con ye be aſerde of ſwevenis?
Nothing bi't God woot, but fantaſye it ne' is.
Swevins engendir of repletions,
And oft of fume, and of complections,
When humours ben to' habundaunt in a wight; 1040
Certis this dreame, which ye have met to night,
Comith of the grete ſuperfluite
Of youre reede coloure that yee have parde,
Which cauſith folk to dredin in ther dremes 980
Of arowes, and of ſiris with red lemes,
And of red beſtis that wollin 'hem bite,
Of conteke, and of whelpis gret and light,
Right as the humour of melancholye
Cauſith many a man in ſlepe to crye
For fere of beris ore of bolis blake, 1050
Or ellis that blacke buggys wol him take.
Of othir humours coulde I tell alſo,
That werkin a man in ſlepe mochi' wo,
But I wol paſſe, as lightly as I can.
Lo Caton, whiche that was ſo wiſe a man!
Said he not thus? ne do no force of dremes.
Now ſir (q'ð ſhe) when we ſlie fro the bemes,
For Godd'is love takith ſome laxatiſe,
Up peril of my ſoule, and of my life
I counſaile you the beſte, I woll not lie, 1060
That bothe of coloure, and melancholye
Ye purgin you, and for ye ſhel not tarie,
Though in this toun be none apotecarie,
X x
I ſhal

I shal my self two herbis techin you,
That shall be for your hele, and for your prow,
In the gardyn two herbis shall I finde
The whiche havin ther properte by kinde
To purgin you bineth, and eke above,
Foryet not this for Godd's ownè love;
Ye be right colerike of complection,
Ware, the sunne is in his ascention,
Ne finde you not replete of humours hote?
For if ye do, I dare wel lay a grote
That ye shal have a fever terciane,
Or els an ague, that may be your banc.
A day or two ye shal have digestives
Of wormis, or ye take your laxatives,
Of laurel, centorie, and femetere,
Or els of elder beries, that growe there
Of Catapuce, or of gaitre beries,
Or erve Ive growinge in oure erberis,
Pecke 'hem up as thei growe, and etc 'hem in,
Be mery husbonde, for your fathir kin
Dredith no dreme, I can say you no more.

Madame (qð he) gramercy for your lore,
But nathèlesse, as touching dan Catoun,
That of wisdom hath such a grete renoun,
Though that he bade no dremis for to drede,
By God, men may in oldè bokis rede
Of many' a man, more of auctorite
Than ever Caton was, so mote I the,
That al the revers saieth of his sentence,
And have well foundin by experience
That dremis ben significacions
As wel of joye, as tribulacions,
That folke endurin in this life present,
There nedith make of this none argument,
The very prefe shewith it us in dede,
One of the gretist auctours out of drede
Saith thus; that whilom two felowes ywent
On pilgrimage, in a ful gode entent,
And happid so, thei come in to a toun
Where as there was suche congregacioun
Of peple, and eke of straite herbigage,
That thei ne founde as muche as a cotage,
In whiche thei bothe mightin ilogid be
Wherfore thei motin of necessite
As for that night departin company,
And eche of 'hem goeth to his hostelry,
And toke his ostre, as it would yfall.

That one of 'hem was lodgid in a stall
Farre in a yerde, with oxin of the plough,
That other man was lodgid wel inough,
As was his aventure, or his fortune,
That us governith all, as in comune.

And so befel, that longe or it were day
This man mette in his bedde, there as he lay,
How that his felowe gan upon him call,
And said (alas) for in an ox's stall
'This night shal I be murdered, there I lie,
Now helpith me dere brothir, or I die,
In all haste comith unto me, he sayed,

This man out of his slepe for fere abraid,
But whan he was awakid of his slepe
He turnid him, and toke of this no kepe,
Him thought his dreme was but a vanite,
Thus twise in his sleeping ydremid he,

And at the thirde time yet his felawe
Cam as him thought, and said I now am slawe,
Beholde my bloudy woundis, depe and wide, 1130
Arise up erly, in the morow tide,
And at the west gate of the toun (qð he)
A carte ful of donge there shalt thou se,
In whiche my body' is hide ful privily;
Do thou that carte arestin boldly,
My golde causid my deth, soth for to saine,
And told him every point how he was slaine,

With a ful petous face, all pale of hewe,
And trustith wel his dreme he founde right trewe,
For on the morue, as sone as it was day 1140
To his felow's inne he toke the way,
And when that he came to the ox's stall
After his felowe lowde gan he to call.

1070 The hostiler answeride him anon,
And seide, fir, your felawe is ygone,
As sone as day he went out of the toun.

This man gan fal into suspeccioun,
Remembring of his dremis that he mette,
And forth he goeth, no lengir would he lette,
Unto the west gate of the toun, and fonde 1150
A donge carte, as hec wentte to donge the londe,
That was arayid in the same wise

As ye have herde the ded man did devise,
And with an hardy herte he gan to crie
Vengeance and justice on this felonie,
My felowe murdris is this same night,
And in this carte he lieth, gaping upright,
I cry out on the ministers (qð he)

That sholdin kepe and rulin this cite,
Harowe alas, here lieth my felowe slaine! 1160

What sholdin I more of this tale saine?
The peple' out start and cast the cart to grounde,
And in the middill of the donge thei founde
The ded man, that murderid was al newe.

O blisful God! that arte so gode and trewe,
Lo! how thou bewrayist murdre alway!
Murdre wol out, that se we day by day,
Murdre' is so walsome and abhominable
To God, that so juste is and resonable
That he ne wol it suffre heled to be, 1170
Though it abide a yere, or two, or thre,
Murdre wol out, this is my conclusioun.

And right anon the ministers o'rh toun
Have hent the cartir, and so fore him pined,
And eke the hostiler so fore constreynede,
That thei beknew ther wickidnesse anone,
And thei were hongid up by the neck bone.

Here maie ye se that dremis ben to drede.
And certis, in the same boke men may rede
Right in the next chapter I rede of this, 1180
I gabbè not, so have I joye and blis.

Two men would have passid ovr the se
For certaine cause, into a ferre cowntre,
If that the winde ne had ben contrarie,
That made 'hem in a cite to tarie,
That stode ful mery' upon an havin side,
But on a day, ayenst an evin tide,
The winde gan chaunge, and blewe right as 'hem lest,
Joly and glad they wentin to ther rest;
And castin 'hem full erly for to faile, 1190
But herkin, to one man fell grete mervaille.

That one of 'hem, in sleeping as he lay
He met a wondir's dreme, again the day,
Him thought a man stode by his bedd's side, 1120
And him commaundid, that he should abide,
And said him thus, if thou to morow wende,
Thou shalt be dreint, my tale is at ende.

He woke, and tolde his felow what he mette,
And prayid him his voyage for to lette,
As for that day he prayd him for to abide. 1200

His felowe that laie in his bedde that tyde
Gan for to laugh, and skornid him ful faste,
No dreme (qð he) may so my herte agaste,
That I woll letin for to do my thinges,
I ne set not a strawe for thy dreminges,
For swevins ben but vanites and japes,
Men meten' al day of oulis and of apes,
And eke of many a mase ther withal,
And dremen' of thing that nevir was, ne shal,
But sihe I se that thou wolt here abide, 1210
And thus forslouthin wilfully thy tide,

God

God wote it ruith me, and have gode day,
And thus he toke his leve, and went his way.

But er that he had halfe his course ifailed,
I ne wote why, ne what mischaunce it ayled,
But casuelly the schippis bothom rent,
And ship and men undir the watir went,
In sight of othir shippis there beside,
That with 'hem sailid at the samè tide.

And therfore my faire Pertelot so dere,
By such ensamples olde mayist thou lere
That no man should ybe to rechilese
Of dremis, for I say The doutilese
That many' a dreme ful sore is for to drede.

Lo! in the life of saint Kenelme we rede,
That was Kenelphus sonne, the noble king
Of Merkenrick, how Kenelm mette a thing,
A lite er he were murdrid on a day,
His murdir in his vision he say,
His norice him expounid every dele
His swevin, and badde him to kepe him wele
Fro trayson, but he was but seven yere old,
And therfore litill tale he therof tolde
Of any dreme, so holy was his herte,
By God, I had full rather than my sherte
That ye hadde herde his legende, as have I.

Dame Pertelot, I say to you truly,
Macrobius, that writith the' avision
In Affrike, of the worthy Scipion,
Affirmith dremis, and saith that they ben
Warning of thingis that men astir sene.

And ferthirmore I pray you lokith well
In the olde Testament, of Daniell,
Yf he held dremis only vanite.

Rede eke of Joseph, and there shal ye se
Dremis ben sometime, but I say nat all
Warning of thingis, that astir shall fall.

Lo! of Egypt the king, that hight Pharaos,
His baker, and his buttiler also
Wheðer they feltin none effect in dremes?
Who so wol seke actis of sondrie remedies
May rede of dremis many' a wondir thing.

Lo! Cresus whiche that was of Lide king
Mette he not that he satte upon a tre?
Whiche signified that he should hongid be.

Lo! Andromache, that was Hector's wife,
That day that Hector should ylese his life
She dremid in the samè night beforne
How that the life of Hector should be lorne,
Yf that day he went unto the battaile;
She warnid him, but it might not availe,
He went for to fightin neverthelesse,
But he was slain anone of Achilles;
But that ilke tale is all to long to tell,
And eke it is nigh day I may nat dwell.

Shortely I say, as for conclusion,
That I shall have of this avision
Adversite: and I say farthirmore
That I ne tell of laxatives no store,
For they ben venomous, I wote it wele,
I them desie, I love 'hem nevre' a dele.

But let us speke of mirthe, and stinte all this,
Dame Pertelot, so have I joye and blisse,
Of one thing God hath sent me a large grace,
For when I se the beaute of your face,
Ye ben so scarlet red about your eyen,
It makith al my dredè for to dien,
For also siker, as In principio
Mulier est hominis confusio.

Madame, the sentence of this latin is
Woman is mann's joye and all his blis;
For when I fele on night your softè side,
Al be it that I may not on you ride,
For that our perche is made so narowe' alas!
I am so full of joye, merthe and solas,

That I desie bothè swevin and dreme.

And with that word he flewe down fro the beme,

For it was day, and eke the hennis all,
And with a chucked he gan 'hem for to call,
For he had founde a corne lay in the yerde, 1290
Royall he was, he n'as no more aferde,
He fetherid Pertelot twenty time,
And tradde her eke as ofte, er it was prime;

1220 He lokede as it were a grimme lion,
And on his toes he romid up and down,
Him deivid not to set his fete to grounde,
He chuckid, when he had a corne ifounde,
And to him than rennin his wivis all.

As royall as a prince is in his hall
Leave I this Chaunteclere, in his pasture, 1300
And after woll I tel his adventure.

Whan that the moneth in whiche the world began
That hight March, in which God first makid man, 1230 Was complete, and ypassid were also
Sith Marche began twenty dayis and two,
Befill that Chaunteclere, in all his pride,
His sevin wivis walking him beside,
Cast up his eyin to the brightè sunne,
That in the signe of Taurus was irunne
Twenty degres and one, and somewhat more,
He knew by kinde, and by none othir lore,
That it was prime, and crew with blisfull steven,
The sunne he said is clombin up to heven

1240 Twenty degres and one, and more iwis,
Now Madame Pertelot, my world's blisse,
Herkinith how these blisful birdis singe,
And se the freshe flouris howe thei springe,
Full is min hert of revel, and solas;
But sodainly him fel a sory caas,

For er the lattir ende of joye is wo, 1320
God wote that worldely joye is sone ago,
And if that a rethore coud faire endite,
He in a cronicle might savelly write
It as a soveraine notabilite;

Nowe evèry wise man herkin to me,
This story' is al so true I undirtake
As is the boke of Launcelot du lake,
That women holden in ful grete reverence.
Now wol I turne ayen to my sentence.

A col foxe (ful of sle iniquite) 1330
That in the grove had wonnid yeris thre,
By high imaginacion aforne caste

1260 On a night thorghw the hoggis sty hee brafte
Into the yerde, there Chaunteclere the faire
Was wont, and eke his wivis to repaire,
And in a bedde of wortis still he laye,
Til it was passid undren of the day
Waiting his time on Chaunteclere to fall,
As gladly done these homicidis all,

That in a waite liggin to murdre men. 1340
O false murderer, rucking in thy den!
O newe Scariot, and newe Ganilion!

1270 O false dissimuler! O greke Sinon
That broughtist Troy all uttirly to sorowe!
O Chaunteclere, accursid be the morowe,
That thou into thy yerde flewe fro the bemes,
Thou were ful well ywarnid by thy dremes,
That ilke day was perillous to The,
But what that God afore wote, must nedes be,
After the opinion of certaine clerkis, 1350

1280 Witnesse on hem that conne of that werkys,
That in scole is grete altercacion
In this matere, and grete disputacion,
And hath ben of an hundrid thousande men,
But I ne can not boulte it to the brenne,
As can the holy doctour saint Austin,
Or Boece, or the Bishop Bradwardin,
Whethir that Godd's wille by forweting
Steryth me nedily to do a thing,

(Nedely)

(Nedely clepe I simple necessite)
 Or ellis if fre choice be grauntid me
 To doin the same thing, or do it nought,
 Though God forewote it, or that it was wrought,
 Or if his weting strainith ner a dele,
 But by necessite condicionele,
 I wol not have to done of suche matere,
 My tale is of a cocke, as ye shal here,
 That toke his counsaile of his wife with sorowe,
 To walkin in the yerde upon the morowe,
 That he had met the dreame, as I you tolde, 1370
 Womens counsaillis ben oftin ful colde,
 And womens counsaile brought us first to wo,
 And made Adam fro paradise to go,
 There as he was ful mery, and well at ese,
 But for I n'ot whom that I might displese
 If I the counsaile of women would blame,
 Passe ovir, for I said it in my game,
 Rede authors, wher thei trete of such matere,
 And what thei say of women ye mowe here,
 These ben the Cock's wordis, and not mine, 1380
 I can noon harme of no woman divine.
 Faire in the sonde, to bathe her merily,
 Lieth Pertelot, and al her sustirs by
 Ayenst the sunne, and Chaunteclere so fre
 Songe merier, than the Marmaide in the se,
 For Phisilogus saith skirly
 How that they singin wel and merily.
 And so befill that as he cast his eye
 Among the wortis on a butterflie,
 He was ware of the foxe that laie ful lowe,
 But nothing than ne list him for to crowe,
 But cried anon cocke cock, and up he stert
 As one that was affrayid in his hert,
 For nat'urally bestis desire to fle
 Fro ther contrarie, if they may it se.
 Tho he ner erst had sene him with his eye,
 This Chaunteclere, when he gan him espie,
 He would have fledde, but that the foxe anone
 Said, gentil sir, alas! what wol ye done?
 Be ye affraide of me, that am your frende?
 Nowe certis I were worse than is a fende
 Yf I to you would harme, or villanny,
 I am not come your counsaile to espie,
 But trewily the cause of my comminge
 Was only for to herkin howe ye singe,
 For sothly ye have as mery a steven
 As any angel hath, that is in heven,
 Therwith ye have of musike more feling
 Than had Boece, or any that can sing,
 My lorde your fathir, God his soule yblese, 1410
 And eke your mothir of her gentilnesse
 Have in my house yben, to my grete ese,
 And certis, sir, ful fain would I you plesse.
 But for men speken of singing, I wol sey
 So mote I brokin wel mine eyin twey
 Save you, ne herde I never man so singe
 As did your father in the morowninge,
 Certis it was of herte, all that he song,
 And for to make his voice more shrill and strong,
 He would so paine him, that with both his eyen 1420
 He must ywinke, so loude he must ycrien,
 And stonidin on his tiptoes therwithall,
 And stretchin forth his necke so long and small,
 And eke he was of suche discrecion,
 That ther was no man in no region
 That him in songe or wisdom might ypasse;
 I have wel reddin dan Burnel the asse
 Among his verdis, how there was a Cocke,
 For that a prest's sonne yave him a knocke,
 Upon his legges, while he was yong and nice, 1430
 He made him for to lese his benefice,
 But certaine there is no comparison
 Betwixt the wisdom and discrecion

2360 Of your fathir, and of his subtilte;
 Nowe singith sir, for swete saint charite,
 Let se, can ye your father counterfere.
 This Chaunteclere his wingis gan to bete,
 As one that could not his treson aspie,
 So was he ravished with his flaterie!
 Alas ye lordes, many' a false flaterour
 Is in your courte, and many a lesingour,
 That plesith you wel more, by my faith,
 Than he that sothfastnesse unto you saith.
 Redith Ecclesiast of flaterie,
 Beware ye lordis of ther trecherie.
 This Chaunteclere stode hie upon his toos
 Stretching his necke, and held his eyin cloos,
 And gan to crowin loudè for the nones,
 And dan Russel the foxe starte up at ones,
 And by the gorger hath hent Chaunteclere, 1450
 And on his backe towarde the wode him bere,
 For yet ne was there no man that him sued.
 O destine, that maiste not be eschued!
 Alas that Chaunteclere flewe fro the bemes!
 Alas his wife ne rought not of his dremes!
 And on a friday fill al this mischaunce.
 O Venus, that art goddesse of plesaunce,
 Sithnes that thy servaunt was this Chaunteclere,
 And in thy service did all his powere,
 More for delite, than kind to multiplie,
 Why woldest thou suffre' him on thy day to die?
 O Gaulfride, my dere maistir soveraine,
 That whan that worthy king Richard was slaine
 With shot, complanedist his deth so sore,
 Why n'ad I now thy science and thy lore,
 The friday for to chide, as didin ye?
 (For on a friday sothly slaine was he)
 Than wold I shew you how that I coud plaine
 For Chauntecler's drede, and for his paine.
 Certis such cry, ne lamentacion 1470
 N'as ner of ladies made, whan Ilion
 Was won, and Pirrus with his brightè swerde
 Whan he had hent king Priam by the berde
 And slough him (as sayith Eneidos)
 As madin all the hennis in the close,
 Whan they had losse of Chaunteclere the sight,
 But soverainly dam Pertelot she shrigh
 Wel loudir than did Hasdrubal's wife,
 Whan that her husbond had ylost his life,
 And that the Romans had ybrent Cartage, 1480
 She was so ful of turment and of rage,
 That wilfully into the fire she sterre,
 And brent her self with a full stedfast herte.
 O woful hennis, right so cryid ye,
 As whan that Nero brennid the cite
 Of Rome, cryid the senatouris wives,
 For that ther husbondis should lese their lives,
 Withoutin gilte this Nero hath 'hem slaine.
 Now wol I turne unto my tale againe.
 The sely widowe and her doughtirs two 1490
 Yherde the hennis crie and makin wo,
 And our at the dore stertin thei anon,
 And saw the foxe towarde the wode ygon,
 And bare upon his backe the Cocke away,
 And cryid out harow and well away!
 A ha! the Foxe! and after him thei ran,
 And eke with stavis many' anothir man,
 Ran Coll our dogge, Talbot, and eke Garlonde,
 And Malkin, with her distaffe in her honde,
 Ran Cowe and Calfe, and eke the very Hogges, 1500
 So ferid thei the barking of the Dogs,
 And shouting of the men, and women eke,
 They ran so that them thought ther herts shuld breke,
 They yellin loude as fendis do in hell,
 The Duckis cryid as men would 'hem quell,
 The Geese for fere flewin ovir the trees
 Out of the Hivis came the swarme of Bees,

So hidous was the noise, ah benedicite !
 Certis ne Jacke Strawe, ne all his meine
 Ne madin nevir shouris half so shrill, 1510
 Whan that thei wouldin any Flemming kill,
 As that ilke daie was made upon the Foxe;
 Of brasce thei blewe the trompis, and of boxe,
 Of horne and bone, in which thei blew and pouped,
 And therewithal thei shrikid and thei howpede,
 It semid, as though hevin should yfall.
 Now gode men I praie you herkinith all.
 Lo how that fortune tournith sodainly
 The hope and the pride of ther enemy !
 This Cocke that laie upon the Fox's backe 1520
 In all his drede, unto the Foxe he spake
 And sayid, gode sir: if I were as ye,
 Yet should I saie, as wise God helpe me,
 Tournith ayen, ye proudè churlis all,
 A very pestilence upon you fall,
 Now am I come unto this wod's side,
 Maugre of you alle, the Cocke shal here abide,
 I woll him ete in faith, and that anon.
 The Foxe answerd, in faith it shal be doen.
 And as he spake the worde, all sodainly 1530
 This Cocke brake from his mouth delivirly,
 And high upon a tree he fiewe anon,
 And whan the Foxe sawe that he was agon,
 Alas! (qð he) O Chaunteclere alas!

I have (qð he) doe to you grete trespas,
 In as moche as I makid you aferde
 Whan I you hent, and brought out of your yerde,
 But sir, I did it in no wick entent,
 Come down, and I shall tell you what I ment,
 I shall to you saie sothe, God helpe me so. 1540
 Naie than (qð he) I shrewe us bothè two,
 And first I shrewe my self, both blode and bones,
 If thou begile me oftir time than ones,
 Thou shalt no more thorough thy flatterie
 Doe me to sing, and winkin with myne eye,
 For he that winkith, whan he should yse
 All wilfully, God let him nevir the.
 Naie (qð the Foxe) but God yeve him mischaunce,
 That is so indiscrete of governaunce,
 That janglith, whan that he should hold his pees.
 Lo, soche it is for to be rechiles,
 And negligent, and trust on flaterie !
 But ye that holde this Tale for a folie,
 As of a Fox, or of a Cock, or Henne,
 Ytakith the moralite gode men ;
 For saint Poule sayith, all that writtin is
 To our doctrine it is writtin, iwis,
 Takith the corn, and let the chaffe be still.
 And now, gode God, if that it be thy will,
 As saieth my lorde, so make us all gode men, 1560
 And bring us unto thy high blisse. Amen.

Here endeth the TALE of the Nonnes PRIEST.

Y y

Here

Here foloweth the MANCIPLE's PROLOGUE.

SIR Nonn'is Prieste, our hoste faied anone,
 Iblessid be thy breche and every stone,
 This was a merie tale of Chauntecler,
 But by my trouth, if thou were secular
 Thou wouldist be a trefesoule aright,
 For if thou have corage, as thou hast might,
 The werin nede of hennis, as I wene,
 Ye more than sevin timis sevintene,
 Se whichè braunis hath this gentle priest,
 So grete a necke, and soche a large brest,
 He lokith as a Sparhauke with his ceyn,
 Him nedith not his colours for to dien
 With Brasill, ne with grain of Portingale.
 But sir, full faire yfall you for your tale.
 And aftir that, he with full mery chere
 Saied to an othir man, as ye shall here.
 Wote ye not where stondith a little tounne
 Whiche that yclepid is Bob up and doune
 Undir the blee, in Caunterburie waie?
 There gan our hoste to japin and to plaie,
 And sayid, sirs: what? Dunne is in the mire,
 Is there no man, for praier ne for hire
 That woll awake our felowe here behinde?
 A thefe him might full lightly rob and binde,
 Se how he nappith, se for cock'is bones
 How he woll fallin from his hors at ones;
 Is that a Coke of London, with mischaunce?
 Doe him comfort, he knowith his penaunce,
 For he shall tellin a tale by my fey
 Although it be not worth a bottle' of hey.
 Awake thou Coke (q's he) God yeve The sorow,
 What cilith The to slepin by the morow,
 Hast thou had sleen al night, or art thou dronk,
 Or hast thou al night with some quene iswonke,

So that thou maiest not holdin up thine hedde?
 This Coke that was ful pale, and nothing redde,
 Sayid, sir hoste: so God my soule yblesse
 There is fallin on me grete hevinesse,
 But I n'ot why, me were levir to slepe 1600
 Than the best gallon wine that is in Chepe.
 Well (q's the Manciple') if it maie doe ese
 To The sir Coke, and to no wight displese
 1570 Whiche that here ridith in this companie,
 And that our hoste will of his curtesie,
 I woll as now excuse The of thy tale,
 For in gode faith thy visage is full pale,
 Thine eyin dasin sothly as me thinketh,
 And wel I wote thy breth ful soure ystinketh,
 That shewith wel thou art not well disposed, 1610
 Of me certaine thou shalt not be yglosed,
 Se how he galpith, lo this dronkin wight!
 As though he would us swalowe anon right.
 1580 Holde close thy mouthe man, by thy fathir kin,
 The devill of hell set his fote therein,
 Thy cursid breth will now enfect us all,
 Fic stinking swine! fic foule mote The befall!
 Ah! takith hede sirs of this lustie man.
 Now swete sir, woll ye justin at the van?
 Thereto me thinkith ye be we'l ystape, 1620
 I trowe that ye have dronkin wine you ape,
 And that is whan men playin a: a strawe.
 And with his spech the coke waxid al wrawe,
 And on the Manciple gan to nodde fast
 For lacke of speche: and down his hors him cast,
 Where as he laie, till that men up him toke,
 This was a faire chevesaunce of a coke,
 Alas that he n'ad holde him by his ladill!
 And er that he ayen were in the sadill

There

There was a gretè shoving to and fro
To lift him up, and mochill care and wo,
So' unwelody was this fely pallid goste,
And to the Manciple than spake our hoste.

Bicause that drinke hath dominacion
Upon this man, by my salvacion
I trowe that leudely woll he tell his tale,
For were it wine, or stronge old moistie ale
That he hath dronke, he spekith in the nose,
And snivelith fast, and eke hath caught the pose.
He also hath to doe more than inough
To kepe him on his caple' out of the slough,
And if he fall from his caple estsone,
Than shall we all havin inough to doen
And lifting up again his dronkin corce;
Tell on thy tale, of him make I no force.

But Manciple, in faith thou art to nice
Thus opinly to reprevin his vice,
An othir daie he woll paraventure
Reclime The, and bringin The to lure,
I mene he spekin will of smale thinges,
And for to pinchin at thy reckinings,
That were not honest, if it came to prese.
No (qð the Manciple) that wer mischese,
So might he bringin me into the snare,
Yet had I levir payin for the Mare

1630

He ridith on, than he should with me strive,
I woll not wrathe him, all so mote I thrive,
That which I spake, I saied it but in bourde,
And wore ye what? I have here in my gourde
A draught of wine, it is of a ripe grape,
And right anon ye shall se a gode jape,
This Coke shall drinke thereof, if that I maie,
Up pain of my life he woll not saie naie.

1660

And certainly, to tellin as it was,
Of this vessell the Coke dranke fast, alas!
What nedith it, he drank inough beforne,
And whan he had ypoupid in his horne
To the' Manciple he toke the gourde again,
And of the drinke the Coke was wondir fain,
And thonkid him, in soche wise as he cond.

1670

Than gan our hoste to laughin wondir loude,
And saied: I se well it is necessary
Where that we gon, gode drinke with us to cary,
For that will tournin rancour and disese
To' accord and love, and many' a worde to pese.

1650

O Bacchus! blessid be thy holy name!
That so canst tournin earnest into game;
Worship and thonke be to thy deite.
Of that mattir ye get no more of me.

Tell on thy tale thou Manciple', I The praie. 1680
Well sir (qð he) herkinith what I saie.

Here endeth the MANCIPLE's PROLOGUE.

Here foloweth his TALE.

Phœbus kepeth a white Crow, which can speak as a Jay. The Crow accuseth his Wife, of whom he was too jealous, to have play'd false in his Absence.
Hereupon with an Arrow he slayeth his Wife; but after repenting of his Rashness, he taketh revenge of the Crow.

¶ Han Phebus dwellid here in yerth adoun,
As oldè bokis makin mencionun,
He held was the moste lustie bachelor
Of all the worlde, and eke the best archer!
He slough Python the serpent, as he laie
Sleeping ayenst the Sonne upon a daie,
And many' an othir noble worthy dede
He with his bowe ywrought as men mow rede.

Playin he could on every minstrelcie,
And singin that it was a melodie
To herin of his clerè voice the soun.
Certis the king of Thebis, Amphionun,
That with his singin, wallid the cite,
Could nevir singin halfe so well as he.
And therto he ywas the semelyist man,
That is or was, sithe that the worlde began.
What nedith it his seturys to discrive?
For in this world n'as none so faire alive.
He was therewith fulfilled of gentilnesse,
Of honour, and of perfite worthinesse.

This Phebus, that was floure of bachelorie
As well in fredome, as in chivalrie,
For his disport, in signe of victorie
Of Python, so as tellith us the storie,
Was wont to berin in his hond a bowe.
Now had this Phebus in his hous a crowe,
Whiche in a cage he fostrede many' a daie,
And taught to speke, as men techin a jaye,
White was this crowe, as is a snow-white Swan, 1710
And counterfete the speche of every man

1690

1700

He could, whan that he tellin should a tale,
There was in all this world no Nightingale
Ne couldè by an hundrid thousand dele
Singin so wondir merrily and wele.
Now had this Phebus in his hous a wife,
Whiche that he lovid more than his own life;
And night and daie did evre' his diligence
Her for to plese, and doe her reverence,
Save onily, if I the soth shall fain,
Jelous he was, and would have kept her fain,
For him were lothe yjapid for to be,
And so is every wight in soche degre,
But all for nought, for it availith nought,
A gode wife, that is clene of werke and thought,
Should not be kept in none awaite certain,
And truely the labour is vain
To kepe a shrewe, for it woll not ybe,
This holde I for a very nicere
To spill our labour for to kepe our wives,
Thus writith oldè clerkis in ther lives.
But now to purpose, as I first began.
This worthy Phebus doeth all that he can
To plesin her, wening through soch plesauce,
And for his manhode, and his governaunce,
That no man should have put him from her grace,
But God it wore, there maie no man enbrace
As to distraine a thing, whiche that nature
Hath naturally sette in a cature.

1720

1730

Take any birde, and put him in a cage, 1740
And doe all thine entent, and thy corage

To

To fostre' it tendirly with mete and drinke
Of all the dainties that thou canste bethinke;
And kepe it also clenely as thou maie,
Although the cage of gold be ner so gaie,
Yet had this birde by twentie thousand fold
Levre' in a forest, that is wide and cold,
Go etin wormis, and soche wretchidnesse,
For er this birde will doe his businesse
To' escape out of his cage, whan that he maie, 1750
His libertie the birde desirith aie.

Let take a Cat, and fostir her with milke
And tender fleshe, and make her couch of silke,
And let her se a Mousc go by the wall,
Anon she weivith fleshe, and couche, and all,
And every deinte, that is in that hous,
Soche appetite hath she to ete the Mous.
Lo! here hath lust his dominacion,
And apperite flemith discrecion.

A she Wolfe hath also a vila'nous kinde,
The leudist Wolfe, that evir she maie finde,
Or lest of reputacion wolle she take,
In time whan that her lust to have a make.

All these ensamples speke I by these men,
That ben untrue, and nothing by women,
For men have er a lico'rous appetite
On lowir thinge to performe ther delite,
Than on their wivis, be thei ner so faire,
Ne nevir so true, ne so debonaire,
The fleshe is so newfangell, with mischaunce, 1770
That we ne con in nothing have plesauce,
That sounith unto vertue any while.

This Phebus, which that thought upon no gile,
Disceivid was, for all his jolite,
For bysyde hym another love hadde she,
A man of little reputacion,
Nought worth to Phebus, in comparison,
The more harme is, it happith oftin so,
Of whiche there comith mochill harme, and wo.

And so bifell, whan Phebus was absent, 1780
His wife anon hath for her lemman sent,
Her lemman, certes that is a knavishe speche,
Foryeve it me, and that I you besече.
The wise Plato sayith, as ye mowe rede,
The worde must nedis acorde with the dede,
If men should tellin propirly a thing,
The worde must cosin be to the working;
I am a boistous man, right thus saie I,
There is but little difference truely
Betwixt a wife, that is of hie degre, 1790
If of her body dishonest she be,
And a pore fely wenche, othir than this,
If it so be thei werkin bothe amis,
But for the gentill is in state above
She shall be called his lady and his love,
And for that tothir is a pore woman
She shall be called his wenche or his lemman,
And God it wote, mine ownè dere brothir,
Men laie as lowe that one as that othir,
Right so betwixt a titletelle tiraunt
And an outlawe, or elles a thefe erraunt
The same I saie, there is no difference,
To Alexaunder was told this sentence,
That for the tiraunt is of gretir might
By force of meine for to flea doune right,
And brenin hous and home, and make al plain,
Lo therefore is he called a capitain,
And for the outlawe hath but small meine,
And maie not doe so grete an harme, as he,
Ne bring a countrey to so grete mischefe, 1810
Men callin him an outlawe or a thefe.

But for I am a man not textuele,
I wolle not tell of textis ner a dele,
I wolle go to my tale, as I began.

Whan Phebus wife had sent for her lemman,

Anon thei wroughtin all their luste volage.
This whitè crowe, that hing aie in the cage,
Behelde their werke, and saied nevir a worde;
And whan that home was come Phebus the lorde,
This crowe ysong, cuckowe, cuckowe, cuckow.

What bird (qð Phebus) what song singist thou?
N'ere thou not wont so merily to sing
That to my herte it was a rejoising
To heare thy voice? alas! what song is this?

By God (qð he) I singin not amis,
Phebus (qð he) for all thy worthinesse
For all thy beaute, and thy gentilnesse,
For all thy songis, and thy minstralcie,
For all thy waiting, blerid is thine eye
With one of little reputacion, 1830

Not worth to The as in comparison
The mountenance of a gnat, so mote I thrive,
For on thy bedde thy wife I sawe him swive.

What wol you more? the crow anon him told,
By sad tokinis, and by wordis bold
How that his wife had doen her lecherie,
Him to grete shame, and to grete villanie,
And tolde how oft, he sawe it with his eyen.

This Phebus gan awaiward for to prien,
Him thought his wofull herte ybstrait a two, 1840 ybra
His bowe he bent, and set therein a flo,
And in his ire he hath his wife yslain,
This is the effect, there is no more to sain,
For sorowe then he brake his minstralcie
Bothe Harpe and Lute, and Getern, and Sautrie,
And eke he brake his arowes, and his bowe,
And aftir that, thus spake he to the crowe.

Traitour (qð he) with tong of Scorpion,
Thou hast me brought to my confusion,
Alas that I was wrought! why n'ere I dedde? 1850

O dere wyif, O gemme of all lustihede,
That were to me so sad, and eke so true,
Now liest thou dedde, with face all pale of hewe
Full giltlesse, that durst I swere iwis,
O rakell honde, to doe so foule amis!

O troublid wit, O ire wretchillesse,
That unavisid smitist giltlesse!

O wantrust, full of false suspeccion!
Where was thy wit and thy discrecion?

Oh every man beware of rekilnesse 1860
Ne trowe nothing, withoutin strong witnesse,
Smite not to sone, or that thou werè why,
And be avisid well and soberly

Or ye do any execucion
Upon your ire, thorough suspection.

Alas; a thousand folke hath rekell ire
Fully fordoen, and brought hem in the mire.

Alas! for sorowe I wolle my self fle.
And to the crowe, O false thefe sayid he, 1870
I wolle the quite anon thy false tale.

Thou songist whilom, like a Nightingale,
Now shalt thou false thefe, thy song forgone,
And also thy white fethers everychone
Ne nevir in all thy life shalt thou speke,
Thus shall men on a traytour be awreke,
Thou and thin offspring ever shall be blake,
Ne nevir aftir swete noise shall ye make,
But evir crye ayenst tempest and rain,
In token, that through The my wife is slain, 1880
And to the crow he stert, and that anon,
And pulled of his white fethers everichon,
And made him blacke, and rest him al his song,
And eke his speche, and out at dore him song
Unto the devill, whiche I him betake,
And for this cause yben all crowis blake.

Lordinges, by this ensample I wol you pray
Beth ware, and takith kepe what that I say,
Ne tellith nevir no man in your life
How that an othir man hath dight his wife. 1890
He

He woll you hatin mortally certain.
 Dan Salomon, as thes wise clerkis sain;
 Tech:ith a man to kepin his tong well,
 But as I saied, I am not textuell;
 But nathelless, thus taughte me my dame,
 My sonne thinke on the crowe a God's name;
 My sonne kepe wel thy tong, and kepe thy frend,
 A wicked tong is worse than is a fend;
 My sonne, from any fende men may 'hem blesse,
 My sonne, God of his endilesse godenesse 1900
 Wallid a tong with tethe, and lippis eke,
 For man shuld him avisin what he speke;
 My sonne, full oftin for to mikill speche
 Hath many' a man be spilt, as clerkis teche,
 But for lite speche, spokin avisidly
 Is no man shent, to spekin generally;
 My sonne, thy tong yshouldist thou restrain
 At all timis, but whan thou doest thy pain
 To speke of God, in honour and praierc;
 The first vertue my sonne, if thou wolt lere, 1915
 Is to restrain, and kepin well thy tong,
 Thus lernin children, whan that thei be yonge,
 My sonne, of mikill speking unavisid
 (There whan lasse speking had inough suffised)
 Comith moche harme; thus was me told and taught.

In mochil speche there ne sin wantith nor.
 Wofte thou wherfore a rakell tong yserverh?
 Right as a sworde forcuttith and forkerverh
 An arme on two, my derè sonne right so
 A tong ycuttith frendship all atwo; 1920
 A jangler is to God abhominable,
 Rede Salomon, so wise and honourable,
 Rede David in his Psalms, rede Senecke,
 My sonne speke not, but with thyin hed thow beck,
 Dissimule' as thou were dese, if that thou here
 A janglour speke of perilous matterc.
 The Fleming sayeth, and lerne it if thou lest,
 That lityl jangling causith mochil reste;
 My sonne, if thou no wickid word hast said
 The thereof dredè not to be bewraid, 1930
 But he that hath mislaied, I dare well sain
 He maie by no waie clepe his worde again,
 Thing that is saied, is saied, and forth it goth,
 Though him repent, or him be ner so loth,
 He is his thrall to whom that he hath saied
 A tale for whiche he is now ill apaied;
 My sonne beware, and be non authour new
 Of tidinges, whether thei be false or true,
 Where so thou come, emongis hie or lowe
 Kepe well thy tong, and thinke upon the crowe. 1940

Here endeth the MANCIPLE's TALE.

Here beginneth the PLOWMAN's PROLOGUE.

This and the Tale is in none of the MSS that I have seen, nor in any of the first Printed Books; Caxton and Pynsent, I presume, durst not publish it: The former printed this Poet's Works in Westminster-Abbey, and both before the Abolition of Popery; and the MSS being before that, I fancy the Scriveners were prohibited transcribing it, and enjoyn'd to subscribe an Instrument at the end of the Canterbury Tales, call'd his Retraction. So that if this Tale had not been carefully collected and preserv'd in Master Stowe's Library, as the Editor of Islip's 1602 Book says he has seen it, in a hand of near to Chaucer's time for Antiquity, in all likelihood it had been lost.

THE Plowman pluckid up his plowe,
Whan Midsomer Mone was comen' in,
And saied his bestes shoulde ere inowe,
And lige in grasse up to the chin,
Thei ben feble both Oxe and Cowe,
Of 'hem n'is left but bone and skinne,
He shoke of shere, and couler' off drowe,
And honged his harnis on a pinne.

He toke his tabarde and staffe eke,
And on his hedde he set his hat,
And saied he would saint Thomas seke,
On pilgrimage he goth forth plat;
In scrippe he bare bothe bred and lekes,
He was forswonke and all forswar,
Men might have sene through both his chekes,
And every wang tothe where it fat.

Our hoste behelde well all about,
And sawe this man was Sunne ibrent,
He knewe well by his singid snout,
And by his clothes that were to rent,
He was a man wont walke about,
He n'as not aye in cloister pent,
Ne couthe religiousliche lout,
And therefore was he full ill shent.

Our hoste him axed, what man art thou?
Sir Hoste (q'ð he) I am an hine,

For I am wont to go to plow,
And erne my mete yer that I dine,
To swette and swinke I make avowe,
My wife and babes therewith to finde, 1970
And servin God and I wist how,
But we leude men yben full blinde.

For clerkes saie we shullin be fain
For ther livelod to swette and swinke,
And thei right nought us give again, 1950
Neither to ete ne yet to drinke,
Thei mowe by lawe, as that thei fain,
Us curse and dampne to hell's brinke,
And thus thei puttin us to pain
With candlis queint and bell's clinke. 1980

Thei make us thrallis at ther lust,
And fain we mowe not els be saved,
Thei have the corne and we the dust,
Who gainfayes them, they saye he raved.
What? man (q'ð our hoste) canst thou preche? 1960
Come nere and tel some holy thing.
Sir, q'ð he, I herd onis teche
A preest in pulpit gode preching.

Saie on, q'ð he, I The besече.
Sir I am redy at your bidding, 1980
I praie that no man me reproche,
While that I am my tale telling.

Thus endeth the PROLOGUE.

Here

Here foloweth the first Part of the TALE.

A Complaint against the Pride and Covetousness of the Clergy, made no doubt by Chaucer, says the Editor of Chaucer's Works; Printed for Ad. Islip at London. A.D. 1602.

Full sterne strief is stirid newe,
In many stedis in a stounde,
Of sondry sedis that ben sewe,
It semith that some ben unsounde,

For some be grete growin on grounde,
Some ben souble, simple and small,
Whethir of 'hem is falsir founde,
The falsir foule mote him bifall.

2000

That one side is that I of tell;
Popis, Cardinals, and Prelates;
Parsons, Monkis, and Freris fell,
Priours, Abbotes, of grete estates,
Of heven and hell thei kepe the yeates,
And Peter's successeurs ben all,
And this is demid by old dates,
But falshed foule mote it befall.

The othir side ben pore and pale,
And peple yput out of prese,
And semin caitiffes fore a cale,
And er in one without encrese,
Iclepid lollers and londlese,
Who toteth on 'hem thei ben untall,
Thei ben arayid all for pece,
But falshed foule mote it befall.

2010

Many a countrey have I fought,
To knowe the falsir of these two,
But aye my travaile was for nought
All so ferre as I have ygo;
But as I wandrid in a wro
Within a wode beside a wall,
Two foulis sawe I sitting tho,
The falsir foule mote him befall.

2020

That one did plete on the Popes side,
A Griffon of a grimme stature,
A Pellicane withoutin pride
To these lollers ylaied his lure,
He mused his mattir in mesure
To counsaile, Christ ay gan he call,
The Griffon shewed as sharpe as fire,
But falshed foule mote it befall.

2030

The Pellicane began to preche
Bothe of mercie and of mekenesse,
And saied that Christ so gan us teche;
And meke and merciabie gan blesse,
The' Evangely berith witnesse,
A lambe he likeneth Christ ovre' all,
In tokening that he mekist was,
Sith pride was out of hevin fall.

2040

And so shoul'd every Christened be;
Priestis, and Peter's successeurs,
Beth lowliche and of lowe degre,
And usin none yerthly honours,
Ne croune, ne curious covertours,
Ne pilloure, ne othir proude pall,
Ne to cofrin up grete tresours,
For falshed foule mote it befall.

Priestis should for no cattill plede,
But chaftin 'hem in charite,
Ne to no baptaile should men lede
For inhaunsing ther owne degre,
Nat willin sittinges in hie se,
Ne soverainte in hous ne hall,
Worldly worship desie and fle,
Who willith highnes foule shall fall.

2050

Alas! who maie soche saintis call
That wilnith welde yerthly honour,
Lowe as Lucifere soche shall fall,
In balefull blacknesse build ther boure,
That eggith peple to erreure,
And makith them unto 'hem thrall,
To Christ I holde soche one traitour,
Lowe as Lucifer soche shall fall.

2060

That willith to be kingis peres,
And higher than the Emperour,
And some that werin but pore Freres
Now wollin waxe a warriour,
God ne is not ther governour,
That holdith none his permagall,
While cove'tise is ther counsaillour,
All soche falschede mote nedis fall.

2070

That hie on horse willith to ride
In glitterande golde of grete araie,
Paintid and portrid all in pride,
No common knight maie go so gaie,
Change of clothing every daie,
With goldin girdils grete and small,
As boillous as is Bere at baie,
All soche falschede mote nedis fall.

2080

With pride punishith thei the pore;
And some one thei sustain with sale,
Of holic churchie makith an hore,
And fill ther wombe with wine and ale,
With money fille thei many a male,
And chaftin churchis when thei fall,
And telle the peple a leude tale,
Soche false faitours foule 'hem befall.

Thei fede of many manir metes,
With song and solas sitting long,
And fillith ther wombe, and fast fretes,
And from the mete unto the gong,
And astir mete with harpe and song,
And eche man mote 'hem Lordis call,
And hote spicis evir emong,
Soche false faitours foule 'hem befall.

2090

Miters thei werin mo than two
Iperlid as the quen's hedde,
A staffe of golde, and pirrie lo!
As hevie as' it were made of ledde,
With clothe of gold bothe newe and redde,
With glitterande gold as grene as gall,
By dome thei dampne men to be dedde,
All soche faitours foule 'hem befall.

2100

And

And Christ's peple proudly curfe
With brode boke, and braying bell,
And to put pennies in ther purse
Thei woil fell bothe hevin and hell,
In ther sentence and thou wilt dwell
Thei willin gesse in ther gaie hall,
And though the soth thou of hem tell
In the grete cursing shalt thou fall.

That is yblessid, that thei blesse,
And cursid that thei cursin woll,
And thus the peple thei oppresse,
And have ther lordshippis at full,
And many be marchauntes of woll,
And to purs pennies woll come thrall,
The pore peple thei al to pull,
Suche false faitours foule 'hem befall.

Lordis also mote to 'hem loute
Obeysaunt to ther brode blessing,
Thei ridin with ther royal route
On a coursir, as' it were a king,
With sadle of golde glittering,
With curious harneis quaintly crallit,
Stiropis gaie of golde mastling
All suche falsched foule may befall it.

Christes ministers clepid thei bene,
And rulin al in robberie,
But Antichriste thei servin clene,
Attirid al in tirannie,
Witnesse of John his prophecie,
Antichriste is ther admirall,
Tiffelers attired in trecherie,
Al suche faitours foule 'hem befall.

Who faith that some of 'hem may sinne
He shal be domid to be ded,
Some of 'hem wollin gladly winne
Al ayenst that whiche God torbed,
Al holiest they clepe ther hed,
That of ther rule is full regall,
Alas that evir thei ere bred!
For al such falsched wol foule fall.

Ther hed covitith al honour,
To be worshipped in worde and dede,
Kings mote to him knele and coure
To the' Apostles that Christ forbede,
To popis heste such take more hede
Than to kepe Christes commaundement,
Of gold and silvir ben ther wede,
Thei holde him hole omnipotent.

He ordaineth by his ordinaunce
To parishe priestis a powere,
To' anothir a gretir avaanee,
A gretir point to his mistere,
But for he' is highist in erth here
To him reserveth he many' a point,
But unto Christ, that hath no pere,
Reservith he no pin, no joynt.

So semith he abovin all,
And Christ abovin him nothings,
Whan that he sittith in his stall,
Dampnith and savith as him thinke,
Suche pride tofore hie God dorth stinke,
An angel bad John to' him not knele,
Only to God do his bowinge,
Soche worship-willers mote ill fele.

Thei ne clepe Christ but sanctus Deus,
And clepe ther hed sanctusimus,

All they that suche a secte sewis
I trowe thei takin 'hem amisse,
In erth here they havin ther blisse,
Ther hie mastir is Beliall,
Christ his pore peple from 'hem wisse,
For al suche false will foule befall.

They mowin both ybinde and lose,
And all is for ther holy life
To save or dampne they mowin chose,
Betwene 'hem now is a grete strife,
Many' a man is killed with a knife,
To were which havin lordship shall,
For suche Christ suffrid woundis five,
For all suche falsched will foule fall.

Christ said: Qui gladio percutit
With swerde surely he shall die,
He bad his priestis pece and grith,
And bad 'hem not drede for to die,
And bad them be both simple' and slic
And carkè not for no cattell,
And truste on God that sitteth on hie,
For al false shal full foule befall.

These wollin makè men to swere,
Ayenst Christ's commaundement,
And Christ's members al to tere,
On rode as he were newe yrent,
Suche lawes thei makin by assent
Eche on it throwith as a ball,
And thus the pore be fully shent,
But falsched foule it shulle befall.

Ne usin thei no simonie
But selle churchis and priorities,
Ne they usin to none envie
But cursin al 'hem contraries,
And hirith men by daies and yeres
With strength to hold 'hem in ther stall,
And culle all ther adversaries,
Therefore falsched foule thou them fall.

With purse they purchase personage,
With purse thei payin 'hem to plede,
And men of warre thei wollin wage
To bring ther enemies to dede,
And lordis livis they wol lede,
And muchil take, and give but small,
But he' it so get, from it shal shede,
And make suche false right foule yfall.

They halowe nothing but for hire,
Ne churche, ne font, ne vestiment
And make orders in every shire,
But priestis pay for the parchment,
Of riotours they takin rent,
Therwith they sinere the shep's skull,
For many churches ben suspent,
Al suche falsched foule it befall.

Some livith not in lecherie,
But hapnte wenchis, widows, and wives,
And punish the pore for putre,
Themselve it usith al ther lives,
And but a man to them him shrives,
To hevin come he nevir shall,
He shal be cursed as be catives,
To hel thei saine that he shal fall.

There was more mercy' in Maximine,
And Nero, that nevir was gode,
Than there is now in some of them,
Whan he hath on his furrid hode,

They

They folowe Christ that shede his blode To heven, as bucker to the wall, Suche wrechis yben worfe than wode, And al suche faitours foule 'hem fall.		And Godd'is lawe they all dispice, And al suche faitours shul foule fall.
They give ther almis to the riche, To mainteynours, and men of lawe, For to lordis they wol be liche, An harlottes sonne not worth an hawe, Sorthfastnesse alle suche han flawe, They kembe ther crokettes with cristall, And drede of God they have doune drawe, Al suche faitours foule 'hem befall.	2240	They saine that Peter had the key Of heven and hel, to have and holde, I trowe Peter toke no money For no finnis that he ysolde, Suche successours yben to bolde, In winning all ther witte they wrai, Ther conscience is waxin colde, And al suche faitours foule 'hem fal.	2310
They make parsons for the pennie, And Canons and ther Cardinals, Unnethe amongst 'hem al is any That ne hath glosed the gospel fals, For Christ made ner no Cathedrals, Ne with him was no Cardinal With a redde harte, as use ministrals, But falsheid foule more it befall.	2250	Peter was ner so grete a sole To leve his key with suche a lorell, Or take suche curfid soc or tole, He was advisid nothing well, I trowe they have the key of hell, Their maistris is of that marshall, For there thei dressin 'hem to dwell, And with false Lucifer to fall.	2320
Ther tithing, and ther offring bothe They clemith by possession, Ne therof n'il they none forgo, But robbin men as a raunlome, The tithing of Tirpe lucrum With these maistris is veniall, Tithinge of bribery, and larson Will make falsheid full foule to fall.	2260	Thei ben as proude as Lucifarre, As angry, and as envious, From a gode faith they ben ful farre, In covetise they ben curious, To cathe catil as covitous As hounde, that for hungre wol yall, Ungodly, and ungracious, And nedely suche false shal foule fall.
They takin to ferme ther sompnours To harme the peple what they may, To pardoners, and false faitours Thei sell ther soles I dare well say, And all to holdin gret arraie, To multiplie 'hem more metall, They drede ful litil dom'is day, Whan al suche falsheid shal foule fall.	2270	The Pope, and he were Peter's heire, Me thinke he errith in this case, Whan choise of bishop's in dispaire To chosin 'hem in divers place, A lorde shal write to him for grace, For his clerke anone pray he shall, So shal he spedin his purchase, And al suche false foule 'hem befall.	2330
Suche harlottes shul men disclaunder, For that they shullin make them gre, And ben as proud as Alexander, And sain to the pore, wo be ye, By yere eche priest shal paie his fe, For to encrese his lemmans call, Suche herdis shul wel ivil the, And al suche false shal foule befall.		Although he can no manir gode A lord'is prayir shal be spedde, Though he be wilde of wil or wode, Nat understanding what men redde, A lende bostir, that God forbedde, As gode a Bishoppe' is my horse Ball, Suche a Pope is full foule bestede, And at the lasse wol foule yfall.	2340
And if a man be falsely famed, And wol ymake purgacioun, Than wol the' officers be agramed, And assign him fro toun to toun, So nede he must payin raunsome, Though he be clene as is cristall, And than have an absolution, But al suche false shal foule befall.	2280	He makith Priestles for erthly thanke, And not at all for Christ'is sake, Suche that yben ful fat and ranke, To soul'is hele none hede they take, Al is wel done what er they make, For they shal answeere ones for all, For world'is thank such worch and wake, And al suche false shal foule befall.	2350
Though he be giltye of the dede, And that he may the money paie, Al the while his purse wol yblede He may use it fro day to day, The bishop's officers gone gay, And this game they use ovir all, The pore to pil is al their pray, But al suche false shul foule befall.	2290	Suche that can nat yfay ther Crede, With prayir shul be made Prelates, Nothir canne thei the gospel rede, Suche shul now weldin hie estates, The hie godes frendship 'hem makes, Thei totith on ther summe totall, Suche bere the keyes of hell'is yates, And all suche false shal foule befall.	2360
Alas! God ordained no suche lawe, Ne no suche crafte of covetise, But he forbad it by his lawe, Suche rulers mowen of God agrise, For al his rulis ben rightwise, These newe pointis ben pure papall,	2300	Thei forsakin for Christ'is love Travaile, and hungre, thurstle, and colde, They ben ordrid or al above, Out of youthed til they ben olde By the' dore they go nat to the folde, To helpe ther shepe they nought traval, For hirid men al suche I holde, And al suche false foule 'hem befall.
		A a a	For

For Christ our king thei wol forfakē,
And knowe him nought for his povertē,
For Christ's love they wol awake
And drinke piement ale aperte,
Of God they seme nothing aferde,
As lusty live, as Lamual,
And drive ther shepe into desert,
Al suche false faitours shul foule fal.

Christ yhad xii. Apostles here,
Nowe say they, there may be but one,
That may not erre in no manere,
Who leve not this ben lost echone,
Peter errid, so did not John,
Why is he cleped the principall?
Christe cleped him Peter, not the Stone,
Al false faitours foule 'hem befall.

Why cursin they the croisfery
Christ's Christian creturis?
For bytwene them is now envy
To be enhaunsid in honours;
Christin livers with ther labours,
For they levin on no mortal,
Ben do to deth with dishonours,
And al suche false foule 'hem befall.

What knoweth a tilloure at the plowe
The Pop's name, and what he hate?
His crede suffisith to' him inowe,
And knoweth a card'nal by his hatte;
Rough is the pore unrightly latte,
That knowith Christ his God royal;
Suche maters be not worth a gnatte,
But suche false faitours foule 'hem fal.

A king shal knele and kisse his showe,
Christ let a sinful kisse his fete,
Me thinke he holdeth him hie inowe,
So Lucifer did, that hie set,
Suche one me thinke himselfe foryet,
Or to the trouth he was nat cal,
Christe that suffrid woundis were
Shall make all suche falschod foule fall.

They layith out ther largè nettes
For to takin silvir and golde,
Thei fillin coffers, and sackes fettes
There as they foulis catchin sholde,
Ther ferrauntes be to them unholde
But they can doublin ther rentall,
To bigge 'hem castles, bigge 'hem holde,
And al suche false foule 'hem befall.

Here endeth the first parte of this tale, and hereafter followeth the seconde parte.

TO accorde what this wordè fall
No more Englishe ne can I finde,
Shewin anothir nowe I shall,
For I have moche to saye behinde,
How priestis han the peple pinde,
As curteis Christe yhath me kinde,
And put this matter in my minde,
To make this manir men amende.

Shortely to shende 'hem, and shewe nowe
How wrongfully they wèrche and walke,
Of hie God nothing tell, ne howe,
But in Goddes worde tell many a balke,
In harnis holde 'hem and in halke,
And prechen' of tithis and offrende,
And untruely' of the gospel talke,
For his mercy God it amende.

What els is Antichriste to saie
But even Christ's adversarie?
Suche hath now ben many a daie
To Christ's bidding ful contrarie,
That from the trouthe clene ywarry,
Out of the way they ben ywende,
And Christ's peple' untruely cary,
God for his pitie it amende.

They live contrary to Christes life,
In hie pride against mekenesse,
Against suffraunce they usin strife,
And angre ayenst sobrenesse,
Ayenist wisdom wilfulnesse,
To Christ's talis litil tende,
Against mesure outrageousnesse,
But whan God wol, it may amende.

Lordely life ayenst lowlinesse,
And demin al without mercy,
And covetise ayenst largesse,
Ayenist trouthe trechery,
And ayenist almesse envy,
Ayenist Christ they comprehendē,
For chastite mainteinc lechery,
God for his grace this amende.

Against penaunce thei use delightes,
Ayenist suffraunce strong defence,
Ayenst God they usin ill rightes,
Ayenist pitie punishmentes,
Open' evil ayenst continence,
Ther wickid winning worse dispende,
Sobirnesse sette in to dispende,
God for his godenesse it amende.

Why cleimin they holy' his powere
And wranglin ayenst al his hestes?
His living folowe thei nought here,
But livin worse than witlese bestes,
Of fishe and fleshe they lovin festes,
As lordis thei ben brode ikende,
Of Godd's pore thei hatin gestes,
God for his mercy this amende.

With Dives suche shal have ther dome,
That saine that they be Christ's frendes,
And do nothing as they should done,
Al suche ben falsir than ben fendes,
On the peple they ley suche bendes,
As God in erth they han offende,
Succour for such Christe now send us,
And for his mercy this amende.

A token' of Antichrist they be
His careckes ben now wide iknowe,
Receved to preche shal no man be,
Without token of him, I trowe,
Eche christin priest to prechin owe
From God above, thei ben yfende
Goddes word to al folke for to showe,
And sinful man for to amende.

Christ sent the pore for to preche,
The royal riche he did not so,
Now dare no pore the peple teche,
For Antichrist is al ther foe,
Among the peple he mote go,
He hath biddin al suche suspende,
Some hath he hent, and thinketh yet mo,
But al this God may wel amende.

Al tho that han the worlde forfakē,
And livin lowly, as God badde,

Into

Into ther prifon fhulle be take, Betin and boundin, and forth ladde, Hereof I rede no man be dradde, Christ faid that his fhould be yfhende, Eche man ought hereof to be gladde, For God ful wel it wol amende.		They be fike ^r of the felfe enfife, From all forhnetle they ben yfhende, And covetife chaunge with quentife, Almighty God al fuche amende.
They take on 'hem royall power, And fay they havin fwerdis two, One curfe to hel, one fle men here, At his taking Christ had no mo, Yet Peter had but one of tho, And Christ to him fmite gan defende; And into the' fheth badde put it tho, And al fuche mifcheves God amende.	2500	Were Christ upon erth here efre fone, Thefe wouldin dampnè him to dic, All his hestis they han fordōne, And faine his fawes ben herefie, Ayenft his commaundementes they crie, And dampnin all his to be brende, For thei ne like fuche lofengrie, God Almighty all fuche amende.	2570
Christ bad Peter to kepe his shepe, And with his sworde forbade 'hem fmite, Swerde is no tole with shepe to kepe, But to fhepherdes that shepe wol bite, Me thinke fuche fhepherdes ben to wite Who' ayen ther shepe with fwerde contende, They drive ther shepe with grete difpite, But al this God may well amende.	2510	These han more might in Englande here Than hath the king and all his lawe, They han purchafid fuche powere To takin 'hem whom list not knawe, And fay that herefie' is ther fawe, And fo to prifon wol 'hem fende, It was not fo by eldir dawe, God for his mercy it amende.	2580
Peter's fuccellours be thei nought, Whom Christ ymade his cheke pafoure, A fwerde no fhepherde ufin ought, But he would fle, as a bochoure, Who fo were Peter's fuccelloure Should bere his shepe til his backe bende, And shadowe 'hem from every fhoure, And al this God may wel amende.	2520	The king's lawe wol no man deme Angerliche withoutin anfwere, But if any man thefe mifqueme He fhall be baightid as a bere, And yet wel worfe they wol him tere, And in prifon wollin him pende In ginis, and in othir gere Whan that God woll, it may amende.	2590
Succellours to Peter ben thefe In that, that Peter Christe forfoke, That levir had God's love to lefe, Than fhepherde had to lefe his hoke, He culleth the shepe as doth the Coke, Of 'hem takin they woll untrende, And falsely glose the Gofpell boke, God for his mercy them amende.	2530	The king ne taxith nat his men But by' affent of the commi'nalte, But thefe eche yere wol raunfom 'hem Maiftirfully, more than dothe he, Ther felis by yere bettir be Than is the king's in extende, Ther officers han gretir fe But alle this mifchefe God amende.	2600
Whan Christ had take Peter the kay Christ faide, he muft ydie for man, That Peter to Christ gan withfay, Christe bad him go behinde Sathan, Suche counfaiours many' of thefe han, For world's wele God to offende, Peters fuccellours they ben than, But al fuche God may wel amende.	2540	Who fo wol prove a reftament, That is nat al worth tennè ponde, He fhall paye for the parchement The thirde of the money all rounde, Thus the pore peple is ranfounde, They fay fuche parte t'em fhould apende, There as they gripen' it goeth to grounde, God for his mercy it amende.
For Sathan is to fay no more But he that contrary to Christ is, In this they lernin Peter's lore, They fegin him whan he did miffe, They folowe him forsoth in this That Christ would Peter reprehende, But nat that longith to' hevin bliffe, God for his mercy 'hem amende.	2550	A fimple fornicacion Twenty fhillingis he fhall pay, And than have abfolucion And al the yere ufe it he may, Thus thei lettin 'hem go aftray, Thei recke nat though the foule be brende, These kepin evill Peter's kay, And al fuche fhepherdes God amende.	2610
Thei none Apoflle fepen, in cafe Of ought that I can underftonde, But him that betraied Christ, Judas, That bare the purfe in every londe, And al that he might sette on honde He hidde and ftale, and it mifpende, His rule thefe traitours han in honde, Almighty God all fuche amende.	2560	Wondir is, that the parliamente, And al the lordis of this londe, Here go takin fo lite entente To helpe the peple' out of ther honde, For thei ben hardir in ther bonde, Worfe bete, and cruellir ybrende, Than to the king is underftand, God him helpe this for to amende.	2620
And at the laft his Lorde gan tray Curfidly through false covetife, So would thefe traine him for money, And they ywiftin in what wife,		What Bifhoppes, what religions Han in this lande as muche lay fe, Lordefhippis and poffeffions, More than Lordis, it femith me; That makith 'hem lefe charite, They mowin not to God attende,	2630 In

In erth thei have so highe degre;
God for his mercy it amende.

The Empe'rour yafe the Pope somtime
So highe lordeship him about,
That at the last the fely kime,
The proudè Pope yput him out,
So of this relme is in grete dout,
But lordes beware and them defende,
For nowe these folke be wondir stoute,
The King and Lords now this amende. 2640

*Thus endeth the secunde parte of this tale, and hereafter
foloweth the thirde.*

MOyses lawe forbode it tho
That prestis should no lordshippes welde,
Christ's gospel biddith also
That they should no lordshippis helde,
Christes apostels were ner so bolde
No sliche lordshippes to 'hem enbrace,
But sklere ther shepe and kepe ther folde,
May God amende 'hem for his grace.

For thei ne ben but counterfete,
Men may yknow 'hem by ther fruite, 2650
Ther greteneße maketh 'hem God foryete,
And take his mekenesse in dispite,
And thei were pore and had but lite,
Thei n'old nat demen' astir the face,
Norishe ther shepe, and 'hem nat bite,
May God amende 'hem for his grace.

Griffon.

What canst thou preche ayenst Chanons
That men yclepin seculere?
Peli. Thei ben curates of many tonnes,
On yerth they havin grete powere, 2660
They have grete prebendis and dere,
Some two or thre, and some have mo
A parsonage to ben playing fere,
And yet thei serve the king also,

And let to ferme all that fare
To whom that wol moste give therfore,
Some wollin spende, and some woll spare,
And some wol laye it up in store,
A cure of soule they care not fore,
So that they mowin money take,
Whethir ther soules be wonne or lore,
Ther profites they woll not forsake.

They have a geßering procuratour,
That can the pore peple enplede,
And robbe 'hem as a ravinour,
And to his lorde the mony lede,
And catche of quicke and eke of dede,
And richin him and his lorde eke,
And to robbe the pore give gode rede
Of olde and yonge, of hole and sicke. 2680

Therwith they purchase 'hem lay fe
In londe, there as 'hem likith best,
And buildin brode as a cite
Both in the Est, and in the West,
To purchase thus they ben ful prest,
But on the pore they woll nought spende,
Ne no gode give to Godd's gest,
Ne sende him some that all hath sende.

By ther service soche wollin live,
And trust that othir to trefure, 2690
Though all ther parishe die unshrive,
Thei woll nat givin a rose floure,

Ther life should be as a mirrour
Both to lerid and lende also,
And teche the folke ther lele labour,
Soche miste men ben all misgo.

Some of 'hem yben full harde nigges,
And some of 'hem ben proude and gaie,
Some spendin ther gode upon gigges,
And findin 'hem of grete araie, 2700
Alas! what thinke these men to saie
That thus dispendin Godd's gode
At the grete dredefull dom's daie?
Soche wretchis shull be worse than wode.

Some ther churchis nevir ne sie,
Ne ner o penie thiðir sende,
Though that the pore for hungir die,
O penie' on 'hem will thei not spende,
Have thei receiving of the rente 2710
Thei recke ner of the remenaunt,
Alas! the devill hath clene 'hem blente,
Soche one is Sathanes sojournaunt.

And use horedome and harlottrie,
And covetise, and pompe, and pride,
And slothe, and wrathe, and eke envie,
And sewin sinne by every side,
Alas! where thinkin soche t' abide?
How woll thei ther accomptis yeld?
From hie God thei mowe 'hem not hide,
Soche willers witte' is not worth a nelde. 2720

Thei ben so rotid in richesße
That Christ's povert is foryet,
Yservid with so many messe
Hem thinke that Manna is no mete,
All is gode that thei mowin gete, 2660
Thei wene to livin evirmore,
But whan that God at dome is sete,
Soche trefour is a feble store.

Unnethis mote thei Matins saie
For counting and for courtholding, 2730
And yet he jangilith as Jaie,
And understont himself nothing,
He woll yserve bothe Erle and King
For his finding and for his fe,
And hide his tithing and offring,
This is a feble charite. 2670

Othir thei ben proude, or cove'tous,
Or elles thei ben hard, or hungrie,
Or thei ben libe'rall or lecherous,
Or els medlers with Marchandrie, 2740
Maintainers of men with maistrie,
Or stewardes, countours, or pledours,
And serve God in ypocrisie,
Soche priestis ben Christes false traitours.

Thei ben false, thei ben vengeable,
And begile men in Christ's name,
Thei ben unstedfast and unstable,
To traie ther Lorde, 'hem thinke no shame,
To servin God thei ben full lame,
Godd's thevis, and falsely stele, 2750
And falsely Godd's worde defame,
In winning is ther world's wele.

Antichrist these priestis serve all,
I praie The who maie sayin naie?
With Antichrist soche shullin fall,
Thei folowen him in dede and faie, 2690
Thei servin him in riche araie,
To servin Christ soche falsely fain,

Why,

Why, at the dredfull dom'is daie
Shull thei not folowe him to pain,

2760

That knowen 'hem self that thei doen ill
Ayenst Christ'is commaundement,
And amende 'hem ner ne will,
But serve Sathan by one assent?
Who sayith sothe he shall be shent,
Or speketh ayenst ther false living,
Who so well livith shall be brent,
For soche ben gretir than the king.

Popis, Bishops, and Cardinals,
Chanons, and Parsons, and Vicare
In Goddes service I trowe ben fals,
That Sacramentis sellin here,
And ben as proude as Lucifere,
Eche man loke whethir that I lie,
Who so spekith ayenst ther powere
It shall be holdin heresie.

Lokith how many orders take
Onely of Christ, for his service,
That the world'is godis forsake;
Who so take ordirs othir wise,
I trowe that thei shall fore agrise,
For all the glose, that thei conne,
All ne shewin not this assise,
In evill time thei thus begonne.

Loke how many among 'hem all
Ne holdin not this hie waie,
With Antichrist thei shullin fall,
For that thei wollin God betraie,
God amende 'hem that best ymaie,
For many men thei makin shende,
Thei wetin well the sothe I saie,
But the devill hath soule 'hem blende.

Some of 'hem on ther Churchis dwell
Apparailled porely, proude of porte,
The seven sacramentes thei doen sell,
In cartell catching' is ther comfort,
Of eche mattir thei wollin mell,
To doen 'hem wrong is ther disport,
To' afraie the peple thei ben fell,
And hold 'hem lower than doeth the lorde.

2800

And for the tithing of a Ducke,
Or of an Apple, or an Aie,
Thei make men swere upon a boke,
Lo! thus thei foulin Christ'is saie,
Soche berin evill hevin kaie,
Thei mowin assoile, thei mowe thrive,
With mennis wivis strongly plaie,
And with true tillers sturte and strive.

At the wrestling, and at the wake,
And the chief chauntours at the nale,
Market beters, and medling make,
Hoppen' and houtin with heve and hale,
At faire freshe, and at wine stale
Thei dine and drinke, and make debate,
The seven Sacramentes set a saile,
Kepe soche the kaies of hevin gate?

Mennis wivis thei wollin hold,
And though that thei ben right fory,
To speke thei shull not be so bold,
For sompning to' the Consistory,
And make 'hem saie with mouthe I lie,
Though thei it sawin with ther eye
His lemman holdin opinly,
No man so hardy to aske why.

2820

He woll have tithing and offring,
Maugre whosoever it grutche,
And twise on the daie he woll sing,
Godd'is priestis ne were none soche.
He mote go hunte with dogge and biche,
And blowen his horne, and cryin hey,
And forcerie usen as a Witche,
Soche kepin evill Peter's key.

2830

Yet thei mote have some stocke or stone
Gaily paintid, and proudly dight,
To makin men livin upon,
And saie that it is full of might,
About soche men set up grete light,
Other soche stockes shull stande therby,
As darke as if it were midnight,
For it maie makin no mastreie.

2840

That it the leude peple se mowe,
Thou Mary, thou worchest wondir thinges,
About that, that men offir to, ^{now}
Hongin brochis, ouchis, and ringes,
The priest purchasith the offringes,
But he n'ill offir to' none Image,
Wo is the soule that he forsinges,
That prechith for soche pilgrimage!

2780

To men and women that ben pore,
Which that ben Christ'is owne likencle,
Men shullin offir at ther dore,
That suffre hungir and distresle,
And to soche Image offir lesle,
That mowe not sele ne thirste ne cold,
The pore in spirite gan Christ blesle,
Therefore offirith to feble' and old.

2850

Buckilers brode, and swerdis long,
Baudrike, with baselardis kene,
Soche toles about ther necke thei hong,
With Antichrist soche priestis ben,
Upon ther dedes it is well sene
Whom thei servin, whom thei honouren,
Antichrist'is thei ben all clene,
And Godd'is godes fallly devouren.

2860

Of scarlet and grene gaië gounes,
That mote be shapin for the newe,
To clippin and kissin in tounes
The damoseles that to the daunce sewe,
Cutrid clothis to sewe ther hewe,
With longe pikis on ther shone,
Our Godd'is Gospell is not true,
Eithir thei serve the devill or none.

2870

Now ben the priestis pokes so wide,
Men must enlarge the vestiment,
The holy Gospell thei doen hide
For the contrarien in raiment,
Soche priestes of Lucifer ben sent,
Like conquerours thei ben araied,
The proude pendauntes at ther ars pent,
Falsely the trueth thei han betraied.

2880

Shrift silvir soche wollin askeis,
And wollin men crepe to the crouche,
None of the Sacramentes save askis,
Withoutin mede shall no man touche,
On ther Bishop ther warrant vouche,
That is a lawe of the decre,
With mede and money thus thei mouche,
And thus thei sain is charite.

Within the middis of ther Masse
Thei n'ill have no man but for hire,
B b b

2890
A b b

And full shortly let forth ypassé,
 Soche shull men findin in eche shire,
 That Parsonages for game desire,
 To live in liking and in lustes,
 I dare not fain, Sans ose jeo dire
 That soche ben Antichrist's priestes.

Or thei yef the Bishoppis why,
 Or thei more ben in his service,
 And holdin forth ther harlottrie,
 Soche Pielates ben of feble' emprise,
 Of Godd's grame soche men agrise,
 For soche mattirs that takin mede,
 How thei' excuse 'hem, and in what wise
 Me thinkith thei ought gretely drede.

Thei fain that it to no man longeth
 To reprove them though that thei erre,
 But falsly Godd's godes thei songeth,
 And therwith maintein wo and werre,
 Ther dedes should be as bright as sterre,
 Ther living, lendè mann's light,
 Thei saie the Pope ne maie not erre,
 Nede must that passin mann's might:

Though' a priest lie with his lemman' al night,
 And tellen his felowe, and he him,
 He goith to Masse anon right,
 And saith he fingerh out of sinne,
 His birde abideth him at his inne,
 And dighteth his diner the mene while,
 He fingerh his Masse for he would winne,
 And so he wenith God begile:

'Hem thinkith long till thei be met,
 And that thei use forth all the yere,
 Emong the folke whan he is set
 He holdith no man half his pere,
 Of the B.shop he hath powere
 To soile men, or els thei ben lore,
 His absolucion maketh them skere,
 Wo is the foule that he fingerh for.

The Griffon began for to threte
 And saied, of Monkis canst thou ought? 2930
 The Pelli'can saied, thei ben full grete,
 And in this world moche wo hath wrought,
 Sainct Benet, that ther ordir brought,
 Ne made 'hem ner in soche manere,
 I trowe it came ner in his thought
 That thei should use so grete powere.

That a man should a Monke lorde call,
 Ne serve him on knees, as a king;
 He is as proude as Prince in pall,
 In mete, and drinke, and in all thing, 2940
 Some werin a miter and ring
 With double Worstid well idight,
 With roiall mete and richè drinke,
 And ride on courser as a knight.

With haukis and with boundis eke,
 With broche or ouchis on his hode,
 Some saie no Masse in all a weke,
 Of deinties is ther mostè fode,
 With lordshippis and with bondmen,
 This is a roiall regioun,
 Sainct Benet made ner non of 'hem
 To have lordship of man ne toun.

Now thei ben queint and curious,
 With fine clothe clad and servid clene,
 Proude, and angrie, and envious,
 Malice is mochil that thei mene,

In catching craftie and covetous,
 Lordly livin in grete liking,
 This living' is not religious
 According to Benet's living. 2960

Thei ben clerkes, and courts ovir se,
 Ther pore tenaunce fully thei slite,
 The hier a man amercid be
 The gladlyr thei woll it write,
 This is farre from Christes poverté,
 For all with cove'tise thei endire,
 On the pore thei have no pite,
 Ne ner 'hem cherishe but or bite. 2970

And comminly soche ben comen
 Of pore peple', and of 'hem begete,
 That this perfection han inomen,
 Ther fathirs ride but on ther fete,
 And travaile sore for that thei ete,
 In povert livith yong and old,
 Ther fathirs suffreth drought and wete,
 Many hungrie meles, thursté, and cold. 2980

And all this the Monkes han forsake
 For Christ's love and sainct Benete,
 To pride and ese have 'hem betake,
 This religion is ill besete, 2980
 Had thei ben out of religion
 Thei must have hangid at the plowe,
 Threshid and diked fro tounne to tounne,
 With sorie mere, not halfe inowe.

Therefore thei han this all forsake,
 And take to riches, pride, and ese,
 Full fewe for God woll Monkes 'hem make,
 Lite is soche ordir for to praise,
 Sainct Benet ordained it not so,
 But had 'hem to be cherèliche, 2990
 In churliche manir live and go,
 Boistous in yerth, and not lordliche.

Thei disclaunderin sainct Benet,
 Therefore thei have his holy curse,
 Sainct Benet with 'hem nevir met
 But if thei thought to robbe his purse;
 I can no more here of 'hem tell,
 But that thei ben like tho before,
 And clene serve the devill of hell,
 And ben his trefure and his store. 3000

And all soche othir counterfaitours
 Chanons, Canons, and soche disgised,
 Ben Godd's enemies and traitours,
 His religion han foule dispised,
 And of Freris I have before
 Told in a makin of a Crede, 3010
 And yet I could tell worse and more,
 But men would werien it to rede.

As Goddes godenes no man tell might,
 Ne write ne speke, ne thinke in thought, 3010
 So ther falschid, and ther unright
 Maie no man tell that ere God wrought;
 The Griffon saied, thou canst no gode,
 Thou came ner of no gentill kinde,
 Othir I trowe thou waxist wode,
 Or ellis thou hast loste thy minde. 2950

Should holy churche yhave no hedde?
 Who should ybe her governaile?
 Who should her rule, who should her redde?
 Who should her forthren, who availe? 3020
 Eche man shall live by his travaile,
 Who best doith, shall have most mede,

With

With strength if men the churche assaile,
With strength men must defende her nede.

And if the Pope were purely pore
And neddy, and nothing ne had,
He should be drive from dore to dore,
The wickid of him n'olde not drad,
Of soche an hedde men would be fode,
And sinfully liven' as 'hem lust,
With strength amendis soche be made,
With wepin Wolves from shepe be wust.

If that the Pope and Prelates would
So begge, and bid, bowe and borowe,
Holy churche should ystande full cold,
Her servauntes sit and soupe sorowe,
And thei wer noughtie foule and horowe
To worship God men would wlate
Both on evin and on morowe,
Soche harlotrie men would hate.

And therfore men of holyc churche
Shouldin be honeste in all thing,
And worshipfull God's workis werche,
So semeth it to serve Christ ther king
In honest and in clene clothing,
With vessels of gold and clothes riche
To God honestly to' make offring,
For to his lordship none is liche.

The Pellican cast an honge crie
And saied alas! why saiest thou so?
Christ is our hedde that sitteth on hie,
Heddis ne ought we have no mo,
We ben his membres bothe also,
Fathir he taught us call him als,
Maisters to call forbad he tho,
All maisters ben wickid and fals.

That takith maistrice in his name
Ghostly, and to win yerthly gode,
Kings and lordes should lordship have
And rule the peple with milde mode,
But Christ for us that shed his blode
Bad his priests no maistrice have,
Ne carke not for clothis ne fode,
From all mischief he woll 'hem save.

Ther riche clothes shall be rightwisnesse,
Ther tresure a true life shall be,
Charite shall be ther richesse,
Ther Lordship shall be unite,
And hope in God ther honeste,
Ther vessell a clene conscience,
Pore in sprite, and humilite
Shall be holy church's defence.

What, saied the Griffon, maie The greve
That othir folkis farin wele?
What hast thou to doen with ther live?
Thy falsed every man maie fele,
For thou ne canst no cattell gete,
But livest in londe as a lorell,
With glosing gettist thou thy mete,
So farith the devil in hell.

He would that eche man there should dwell,
For he livith in clene envie,
So with the tales that thou doest tell
Thou wouldest othir peple destric,
With your glose, and your heresie,
For ye can live no bettir life
But clene in fals Hypocrisie,
And bringist The in wo and strife.

And therwith have ye not to doen,
For ye ne havin here no cure,
Ye serve the devill, not God ne man.
And he shall payin you your hire,
For ye woll farin well at festes,
And be warm clothid for the cold,
Therefore ye glosin Godd's hettis,
And begile peple yong and old.

3030 And all the seven Sacramentes
Ye speke ayenst, as ye were flie,
Tithings, offringes with your ententes,
And on our Lord's body lie,
3100 All this ye doen to live in ese,
As who sayith, there ben none socie,
And sain the Pope' is not worth a pese,
To make the peple' ayen him gioche.

3040 And this ycommith in by fendes
To bring the cristin in distaunce,
For thei would that no man were frendes;
Levith thy chattring with mischaunce,
If thou live well, what wilt thou more,
Let othir men live as 'hem list,
3110 Spendin ther gode, or kepe in flore,
Othir mennes conscience ner thou n'ist.

Ye han no cure to answer fore,
What meddle' ye, that han not to doen?
Let men live as thei han doen yore,
For thou shalt answer for no man.
3050 The Pellican sayid, sir, naie,
I ne dispisid not the Pope,
Ne no Sacrament, sothe to saie,
But speke in charite' and gode hope. 3120

But I dispise ther hið pride,
Ther welthe, that should be pore in sprite,
Ther wickidnesse is knowe so wide,
Thei servin God in false habite,
And tournin mekenesse into pride,
And lowlinesse into' hie degre,
3060 And Godd's wordis tourne and hide,
And I am moved by charite.

To lettin men to livin so
With all my conning and my might,
3130 And to warnin men of ther wo,
And to tellin 'hem trouth and right,
The Sacramentes be foul's hele,
If thei ben usid in gode use,
Ayenst that speke I ner a dele,
For than ne were I nothing wise,

3080 But thei that use 'hem in missie manere,
Or set 'hem up to any sale,
I trowe thei shall abie 'hem dere,
This is my reson, this my tale,
3140 Who so taketh 'hem unrightfullliche
Ayenst the ten commaundementes,
Or ellis by glose wrechidliche,
Selleth any of the Sacramentes,

3080 I trowe thei doe the devill homage,
In that thei wetin thei doe wrong,
And therto I dare well to wage
Thei serve Sathan for all ther song,
To tithen' and offre' is holsome life,
3140 So it be doen in due manere,
A man to housclin and to shrive,
Wedding, and all othir in fere.

So it be nother solde ne bought,
Ne take ne give for covetise.

And

And it be so taken' it is nought,
Who selleth him so, maie fore agrise;
On our Lordes body' I doe not lie,
I saie the sothe thorough tpe rede,
His fleshe and blode through his misterie
Is there all in the forme of brede.

How it is there, it nedeth not strive,
Whethre' it be subget or accident,
But as Christ was, whan he' was on live
So is he there in verament,
If Pope or Cardi'nall live gode live
As Christ us bad in his Gospell,
Ayenst that ne woll I not strive,
But me thinkith thei live not well.

For if the Pope lived as God bedde,
Pride and highnesse he should dispise,
Richesse, covetise, and croune on hedde,
Mekenesse and poverté he should use.
The Griffon saied he should abie,
Thou shalt be brent in balefull fire,
And all thy set I shall distrie,
Ye shall be hangid by the swire.

Ye shulle be hangid and to drawe
Who givith you leve for to preche,
Or spekin' against Godd's lawe,
And the peple this falsely teche?
Thou shalt be cursed with boke and bell,
And dislevered from holic churche,
And clene idampnid into hell,
Othirwise but ye wollin worche.

The Pelli'can saied that I ne drede,
Your cursing is of lite value,
Of God I hope to have my mede,
For it is falsed that ye shewe,
For ye ben out of charite,
And wilne vengeance, as did Nero,
To sufferin I woll redy be,
I drede not all that thou canst do.

Christ bad ones suffre for his love,
And so he taught all his servauntes,
But thou' amende for his sake above,
I drede not all thy maintenaunce,
For if I drede the world's hate
Me thinkith I were lite to praise,
I drede nothing your hie estate,
Ne I ne drede not your disce.

Wollin ye tourne and leve your pride,
And your hie porte, and your richesse,
Your cursing should not go so wide,
God bring you into rightwisenesse,
For I drede not your tirannie,
For nothing that ye can ydoen,
To suffer I am all redie,
Sikir I recke never how sone.

The Griffon grinned as he were wode,
And lokid lovely as an Owle,
And swore by cock's herte and blode,
He would him tere every doule,
Holy churche thou disclaundrist foule,
For thy speche I woll The to race,
And make thy fleshe to rote and moule,
Lofell, thou shalt have hardè grace.

The Griffon flewe forth on his waie,
The Pellican did sit and wepe,
And to himself he gan to saie
God would that any of Christes shepe

Had herdin, and itakin kepe
Eche a worde that here sayid was,
And would it write and well ikepe,
God would it were all for his grace.

3150 Plowman.
I answerid, and saied I would,
If for my travaile one would pey.
Pelican. He saied yes, these ther God han sold,
For thei han grete store of money.
Plowman. I sayid, tell me and thou maie,
Why tellist thou menn's trespace? 3220
Pellican. He saied, to' amende' nem in gode fay
If God woll give me any grace.

3160 For Christ himself is liken to me,
That for his peple died on Rode,
As fare I, right so farith he,
He fedith his birdes with his blode,
But these doen evill ayenst gode,
And ben his foen undir frendes face,
I told 'hem how ther living stode,
And God amende 'hem for his grace. 3230

Plowman.
What ailith the Griffon, tell why
That he holdith on the' othir side,
For thei two yben likily
And with kindis yrobin wide. 3170
Pellican. The foule betokinith pride,
As Lucifer, that high flewe was,
And sith he did him in ill hide,
For he agiltid Godd's grace.

As birde flyith up in the aire,
And livith by birdes that ben meke, 3240
So these ben flowe up in dispaire,
And shendin sely foulis eke,
The foulis that ben in sinnes eke:
3180 He culleth 'hem, knele therfore alas!
For bribrie Godd's forbode breke,
But God amende it for his grace.

The hinder parte is a Lioun,
A robber and a raviner,
That robberth the peple in yerth doune,
And in yerth holdith none his pere, 3250
So fareth this foule both ferre and nere,
With tempo'el strength, the peple chafe,
As a Lion proude in yerth here,
3190 May God amende 'hem for his grace.

Pellican.
He flewe forth with his wingis twain
All drouping, and dasid, and dull,
But sone the Griffon came again,
Of his foulis the yerth was full,
The Pelli'can he had cast to pull,
So grete number ner sene there was, 3260
What manir of foules telle I woll,
If God woll give me of his grace.

3200 With the Griffon come foulis fele,
Ravins, Rokis, Crowis, and Pie,
And graie foulis, aga'drid wele,
Igurde above they wouldin hie,
Gledis and bosardes weren 'hem by,
White molles and puttockes toke ther place,
And lapwinges, that wel conith lie,
This Company' han forlete ther grace. 3270

3280 Long while the Pellican was oute,
But at last he commith againe,
And brought with him the Phenix stoute,

The Griffon would have flow ful faine,
His foulis fiewen as thicke as raine,
The Phenix tho began 'hem chace,
To fle from him it was in vaine,
For he did vengeaunce and no grace.

He flewe 'hem doune without mercy,
There astarte neither fre ne thrall,
On him they cast a rufull crie,
Whan that the Griffon doun was fall,
He bete him not, but flewe 'hem all,
Where he 'hem drove; no man may trace,
Under the erth me thought they yall,
Alas they had a feble grace!

The Pellican then axid right
For my writing if I have blame,
Who then wol for me fight of flight?
Who shullin sheldè me from shame?
He that yhad a maide to dame,
And the lambè that slaine ywas,

Shal sheldin me from goistly blame,
For erthely harme is Godd'is grace

3280 Therefore I pray evèry man
Of my writing have me excused,
This writing writeth the Pellican,
That thus these peple hath dispised,
For I am freshe fully advised,
I n'll not mainteine his menace,
3300 For the Devill is ofte disguised
To bring a man to evil grace.

Witith the Pelli'can and not me,
For herof I n'il not avowe,
In hic ne lowe, ne no degre,
But as fable take it ye mowe,
To holy church I will me bowe,
Eche man to' amende him Christe sende space,
3290 And for my writing me alowe
He that' is almighty for his grace.

Here endeth the PLOWMAN's TALE.

C c c

Here

Here foloweth the PARSON'S PROLOGUE.

B Y that the Plowman had his tale endid
The sunne fro the southe side is discendid
So lowe, that it was nat unto my sight
Degrees of five and twenty upon hight,
Tenne of the clocke it was, so as I gesse,
For enlevyn fote, a lite more or lesse
My shadowe was at thilke time, as there
Of suche fete as my length ypartid were
In fixe fete equalle of proporcion,
Therwith the mon'is exaltacion
I menè Libra, alway gan ascende,
As we were entring at the throp'is ende;
For which our Hoste, as he was wont to gic
Aye in this case this joly companie,
Said in this wise, lordingis everichone,
Now lackith us no talè more than one,
Fulfilled is my sentence, and my decre,
Who wol now tellin a tale let us se,
Almost fulfillid is my ordinaunce,
I pray to God so yeve him right gode chaunce, 3330
That tellith this tale to us lustily.

Sir priest (qð he) arte thou a vicary,
Or art thou a parson, say soth by fay?
Be what thou be, ne breke thou not our play,
For every man save thou hath tolde his tale,
Unbokle, and shewe us what is in thy male;
For trewily me thinkith by thy chere,
Thou shouldist knit up well a grete matere,
Tel us a fable anon, for cock'is bones.

This Person him answeride al at ones,
Thou gettist fable none ytolde of me,
For Poule, that writith unto Timothe,

Reprevith 'hem that waivin sothfastnesse,
And techin fables, and suche wretchidnesse;
Why should I sowin draffe out of my fiste,
Whan I may sowin whete, if that me list?
For whiche I saye, if that ye list to here
Moralite', and of vertuous matere,
And than, if ye wol yeve me audience,
I would ful fame at Christ'is reverence
Doin you plesauce lesul, as I can;
But trusterh wel, I am a sotherne man,
I can not jesse, rum, ram, ruf, by letter,
And God wote, rime holde I but litle better;
And therefore if ye list, I wol not glose,
I wol you tell a litil tale in prose,
To knit up al this fest, and make an ende;
And Jesu for his grace, wit me sende
To shewin you the way in this voyage
Of thilke perfite gloriouse pilgrimage,
That hight Hierusalem celestiall,
And if that you vouchsave, anon I shall
Begin upon my tale, for whiche I pray
Tel your advise, I can not bettir say.

But nathèlesse this meditacion
I put it aye undir correccion
Of clerkis, for I am not textuell,
I take but the sentence ytrustith well,
Therefore I make a protestacion
That I woll standin to correccion.

Upon this worde, we have assentid sone,
For as it semid it was for to done
To endin in some vertuous sentence,
And for to yeve him space and audience,

3350

3360

3370

And

And bade our Hoste that he should to him say;
That al we to tellin his tale him pray:
Our Hoste had the wordis for us all,
Sir priest (q^d he) now fayre mote you befall,
Say what ye liste, and we shall gladly here,

And with that worde he said in this manere, 3380
Telleth (q^d he) your meditation,
But hastith you, for the sunne wol a down,
Berli fructuous, and that in litil space,
And to do wel God sende you of his grace.

Here endeth the PARSON'S PROLOGUE.

Here foloweth his TALE.

Jerem. vi. State super vias, & videte, & interrogate de semitis antiquis, quæ sit via bona, & ambulate in eâ: & invenietis refrigerium animabus vestris.

that wol
OUR swete Lorde God of heven, that no man wol peryshe, but (wol) that we turne all to the knowlege of him, and to the blisfull life that is perdurable, amonesteth us by the Prophete Jeremie, that faith in this wise: Stondeth upon the wayes and seeth, and asketh of olde pathes; that is to saie, of olde sentences, whiche is the gode waie, and walketh in that waye, and ye shall finde refreshing for your soules, &c. Manie ben the waies espirituelles that lede folke to our Lorde Jesu Christ, and to the reigne of glory: Of whiche waies there is a full noble waye, and full convenable, whiche maye not faile to man ne to woman, that through sinne hath misgone fro the right way of Hierusalem celestiall; and this waye is called penitence, of whiche man should gladly herken and enquire with al his hert, to wete what is penitence, and whiche is called penitence, and howe many maners bene of actions or werkinges of penitence, and howe many speses there ben of penitence, and which thinges apertaine and behove to penitence, and which thinges distourbe penitence.

Saint Ambrose faith, that penitence is the plaining of manne for the gilte that he hath doen, and no more to do any thing for which him oughte to playne. And some doctours faith, Penitence is the waimenting of man that soroweth for his sinne, and paineth himselfe, for he hath misdoun. Penitence with certaine circumstances, is very repentaunce of a man that holte himself in sorow, and other payne for his giltes: and for he shall be verie penitent, he shall first bewaile sinnes that he hath done, and stedfastly purpose in his hert to have shrifte of mouthe, and to do satisfaccion, and never to doe thing, for whiche him ought more bewaile or complaine, and continue in gode workes; or els his repentaunce may not avale. For as saint Isidore faith, He is a japer and a lye, and no very repentaunt, that effone doth thing, for which him ought repente. Weping and not for to stinte to do sinne, maye not avale: But nathelesse men shall hope that at every time that man falleth, be it never so ofte, that he may arise through penaunce, if he have grace: But certaing it is grete doute; for as faith S. Gregory, Unnethes ariseth out of sinne, that is charged with the charge of evil usage. And therefore repentaunt folke, that stinte for to sinne, and leve sinne or sinne leve them, holy Church holderh them siker of their salvacion. And he that sinneth, and verely repenteth him in his last end, holy church yet hopeth his salvacion, by the grete mercy of our Lorde Jesu Christe, for his repentaunce; but take the siker waye.

And nowe sith I have declared you, what thing is Penitence, now ye shal understonde, that there ben thre actions of Penitence. The firste is, that a manne be baptised after that he hath sinned, Saint Augustin saith, but he be penitent for his olde sinfull life, he may not beginne the newe clene life: For certes if he be baptised without penitence of his olde gilt, he retaineth the marke of baptisme, but not the grace ne the remission of his sinnes, till he have very repentaunce. An other defeaute is this, that men doe dedly sinne after that they have receyved baptisme. The thirde defeaute is this, that men fall in venial sinnes after ther baptisme, fro day to day: Thereof faith saint Augustin, that penitence of gode and humble folke, is the penitence of every daie.

The speses of penitence ben thre; That one of hem is solempne; an other is commune; and the thirde is privy. That penaunce that is solempne is in two maners: As to be put out of holy church in lent, for slaughter of children, and suche maner thinge. An other is when a man hath sinned openlye, of whiche sinne the same is openly spoken in the countre; and than holy church by judgment distraineth him for to do open penaunce.

Commen penaunce is, that prestes enjoyne men in certaine case: as for to go peraventure naked in pilgrimage, or bare fore. Privy penaunce is that, that men do all daie for privy sinnes, of whiche we shrive us prively, and receive privy penaunce.

Nowe shalt thou understand, what is behovefull and necessary to very persite penitence; and this stonde on thre thinges. Contricion of herte, confession of mouthe, and satisfaccion. For whiche faith saint Johan Chrisostom; Penitence distraineth a man to accept benignely every paine, that him is enjoined, with contricion of herte, and shrifte of mouthe, with satisfaccion; and in working of al maner humilité. And this is fruitfull penitence ayenst thre thinges, in whiche we wrauche our Lorde Jesu Christ: this is to saie, By delite in thinkinge, by rechelesse speking, and by wicked sinnefull working. And ayenst these wicked giltes is penitence, that maie be likened unto a tre.

The rote of this tre is contricion, that hideth him in the herte of him that is very repentaunt, right as the rote of the tre hideth him in the erth. Of this rote of contricion springeth a stalke, that bereth branches and leves of confession, and frute of satisfaccion. For whiche Christ faith in his gospels, Doth digne frute of penitence; for by this frute men may knowe the tre, and not by the rote that is hid in the herte of manne, ne by the branches, ne the leves of confession. And therefore our Lord Jesu Christ faith thus; By the frute of hem shal ye knowe hem. Of this rote also springeth a fede of grace; the which fede is mother of al likeress, and this fede is eiger and hote. The grace of this fede springeth of God through remembraunce on the daye of dome, and on the

the egeress of the scope of the grace of god

the paines of hell. Of this matter saith Salomon, that in the drede of God, man forgetteth his sin. The herte of this fede is the love of God, and the desiring of the joy perdurable: This herte draweth the hert of man to God, and doth him hate his sinne: For sothely there is nothing that favoureth so wel to a childe, as the milke of his nourice; ne nothinge is to him more abhominable than that milke, when it is medled with other mete. Right so the sinfull man that loveth his sinne, him semeth that it is to him moste swete of any thinge; but fro that time he loveth sadly our Lorde Jesu Christ, and desireth the life perdurable, there is to him no thing more abhominable: For sothely the lawe of God is the love of God. For which David the prophete saith; I have loved thy lawe, and hated wickednesse: He that loveth God, kepeth his lawe and his worde.

— This tre sawe the prophete Daniel in spirite, on the vision of Nabuchodonosor, when he counsailed him to do penitence. Penance is the tre of life, to hem that it receyve; and he that holdeth him in very penitence is blessed after the sentence of Salomon.

In this penitence or contricion man shall undirstonde foure thinges, that is to say; What is contricion, and whiche ben the causes that move a man to contricion, and how he shulde be contrite, and what contricion availeth to the soule. Than is it thus, that contricion is the very sorow, that a man receiveth in his hert for his sinnes, with sadde purpose to shrive him, and to do penance, and never more to doe sinne: And this sorowe shall be in this maner, as saith saint Bernard; It shal be hevie and grievously, and ful sharpe and poynaunte in herte;

— First, for a man hath agilted his Lorde and his creatoure, and more sharpe and poynaunt, for he hath agilted his father celestiall; And yet more sharpe and poynaunt, for he hath wrathed and agilted him that boughte him, that with his precious blode hath delivered us fro the bondes of sinne, and fro the crueltie of the devel, and fro the paines of hell.

The causes that ought move a man to contricion bene fixe; First a man shall remembre him of his sinnes, but loke that that remembraunce ne be to him no delite, by no waye, but grete shame and sorowe for his sinnes. For Job saith, sinfull men done workes worthy of confession. And therefore saith Ezechiell; I wol remembre me al the yerres of my life, in the bitternesse of my herte. And God saith in the Apocalypse; Remembre ye from whence that ye ben fall; for before that time that ye sinned, ye were children of God, and limmes of the reigne of God; But for your sin ye ben waxen thrall and foule, and membres of the fende, hate of angels, slander of hollye church, and fode of the false serpent, perpetuell mattere of the fyre of hell; And yet more foule and abhominable, for ye trespase so oft times, as doeth an hounde that returneth ayen to ete his owne spewing; and yet be ye fouler, for your long continuing in sinne, and your sinful usage, for whiche ye be roted in your sinne, as a beste in his donge. Suche maner of thoughtes make a manne to have shame of his sin, and no delite: As God saith, by the prophete Ezechiell; Ye shall remembre you of your waies, and they shal displese you sothly. Sinnes ben the waies that lede folke to Hell.

THE seconde cause that ought make a man to have disdaine of sinne is this, that as saith saint Peter; Who so doth sinne, is thrall of sinne; and sinne putteth a man in grete thraldome. And therefore saith the prophete Ezechiell; I wente sorowful, in disdaine of my selfe. Certes wel ought a manne have disdaine of sinne, and withdrawe him fro that thraldome and vilany. And lo! what saith Seneke in this matter? he saith thus; Though I wiste, that neither God ne manne should never knowe it, yet would I have disdaine for to do sinne. And the same Seneke also saith; I am borne to greter thinge, than to be thrall to my body, or for to make of my body a thrall. Ne a fouler thrall maye no man ne woman make of his bodie, than for to yeeve his body to sinne; all were it the foulest churle, or the foulest woman that liveth, and leste of value, yet is he than more foule, and more in servitude. Ever fro the higher degre that man falleth, the more is he thrall, and more to God and to the worlde vile and abhominable. O gode God! wel oughte man have grete disdaine of sin, sith that through sinne, there he was fre, he is made bonde. And therefore saith saint Augustin; If thou hast disdaine of thy servaunt, if he offende or sinne, have thou than disdaine that thou thy selfe shuldest do sinne. Take rewarde of thine owne valewe, that thou ne be to foule to thy selfe. Alas! well ought they than have disdaine to be servautes and thralles to sinne, and fore to be ashamed of themselves, that God of his endles godenesse hath sette in highe estate, or yeeve hem witte, strength of bodye, heile, beutie, or prosperite, and bought hem fro the deth with his hert-blode, that thei so unkindly, ayenst his gentilnesse, quite him so villainously, to slaughter of ther owne soules; O gode God! ye women that ben of grete beutie, remembreth you on the proverbe of Salomon; He saith, he likeneth a faire woman, that is a sole of her bodie, to a ringe of gold that were worne on the groine of a sow; For right as a sowe wrotheth in every ordure, so wrotheth she her beaute in stinking ordure of sinne.

THE thirde cause that ought move a man to contricion, is drede of the daye of dome, and of the horrible paines of hel. For as sainte Jerom saith; At every time that me remembreth of the daye of dome, I quake; For when I ete and drinke, or what so that I do, ever semeth me that the trompe sowneth in mine ere; Riseth ye up that ben ded, and cometh to the judgment. O gode God! muche ought a manne to drede suche a judgement, there as we shall be all, as sainte Poule saith, before the sete of oure Lorde Jesu Christ, where as he shal make a general congregacion, where as no man may be absent, for certes there avayleth none esloyne ne excusacion; and not onely that our defautes shal be judged, but also that all our werkes shal openly be known. And as saith saint Barnarde; there ne shall no pleding availe, ne no sleight: We shall yeve rekeninge of every idle worde. There shall we have a judge that maie not be disceived ne corrupt; and why? For certes, all our thoughtes ben discovered, as to him, ne for prayer ne for mede he shall not be corrupte. And therefore saith Salomon; The wrathe of God ne wol not spare no wight, for prayer ne for yeste: And therefore at the day of dome, there is no hope to escape. Wherefore, as saith saint Anselm; ful grete anguishe shall the sinnefull folke have at that time; There shal the fiers and wrothe judge sitte above, and under him the horrible pitte of hel open, to destroy him that must beknowe his sinnes; which sinnes, openly ben shewed before God and before every creature; And on the leste side, mo Devils than anie herte maye thinke, for to hale and drawe the sinful soules to the paine of hell; and within the hertes of folke shal be the biting conscience, and without forth shal be the worlde al brenning; whether shal than the wretched sinfull man fye to hide him? Certes he may not hide him, he must come forth and shewe him. For certes, as saith S. Jerom, the the erth shal cast him out of it, and the se also, and the ayre that shal be ful of thonderclappes and lightnings. Now sothly, who so wel remembreth him of these thinges, I gesse that his sinne shal not turne him into delite, but to grete sorowe, for drede of the paine of hell. And therefore saith Job to God; suffice Lord, that I may awhile bewaile and wepe, er I go without returning to the derke londe, covered with the derkenesse of deth, to the londe of misere and of derkenesse, where as is the shadowe of deth, where as there is none order or ordinaunce, but ferefull drede that ever shall last. Lo! here may you se, that Job praied respite a while, to bewepe and waile his trespase: for sothely one day of respite is better than all the trespase of this world. And for as much as a man may acquite himself before God by penitence in this world, and not by trespase; therefore should he pray to God to yeve him respite a while, to bewepe and waile his trespase: for certes, al the sorowe that a man might make fro the beginning of the world, n'is but a litel thing, at regarde of the sorowe of hell. The cause why that Job calleth hell the londe of derkenesse, understondeth that he calleth it londe or erth, for it is stable and never shall faile; and derkenesse; For he that is in hell hath defaute of light materiall; for certes the derke light, that shal come out of the fire that ever shall brenne, shal turne him al to pain that is in hell; for it sheweth him to the horrible Divels that him tormenteth; covered with the derkenesse of deth, that is to say, that he that is in hel, shal have defaute of the sight of God: for certes the sight of God is the life perdurable. The derkenesse of deth ben the sinnes that the wretched man hath don, which that disturbe him to se the face of God, right as the derke cloude betwixt us and the sunne. Londe of misere; because that there ben thre maner of defautes ayenst thre thinges that folke of this worlde have in this present life; that is to saie; honours, delices, and riches. Ayenst honour have they in hel shame and confusion: For wel ye wote, that men call honour the reverence that man doth to man; but in hell is none honour ne reverence. For certes, no more reverence shal be do ther to a kinge, than to a knave. For whiche God saith by the Prophet Jeremy; Those folke that me dispise, shal ben in dispyr. Honour is also called grete lordship; there shal no wight serve other; but of harme and tument. Honour is also called grete dignite and highnesse; but in hell shal thei be al fortoden of divelles. As God saith; the horrible divels shal goe and come upon the hedes of dampned folke; and this is, for as much as the higher that thei were in this present life, the more shal thei be abated and dejoyed in hell. Ayenst the riches of this world shal they have misere of povertie; that shal be in foure thinges: In defaute of trespase, Of which David saith; The riche folke that embrace and knyt al ther herte to trespase of this worlde, shal slepe in the slepinge of deth, and nothing ne shall they finde in ther hondes of al ther trespase. And more over the misere of hel shal be in defaute of mete and drinke: For God saith thus by Moyse; They shal be wasted with hunger, and the byrdes of hell shal devour hem with bitter deth, and the gal of the dragon shal be ther drinke, and the venom of the dragon ther morsel. Also ther misere shal be in defaute of clothing; for thei shal be naked in body, as of clothing, save the fire in whiche they brenne, and other fithes: and naked shal they be of soule, of al maner vertues, whiche that is the clothing of the soule. Where ben than the gay robes, the soft shertes, and the smal shertes? Lo! what saith God of hem by the Prophet Isaie; that under hem shal be strewed moughtes, and ther covertures shal be of wormes of hel. Also ther misere shal be in defaute of frendes, for he is not pore that hath gode frendes; but ther is no frende; for neither God ne creature shal be frende to hem, and eche of hem shal hate other with dedly hate: The sonnes and the daughters shal rebell ayenst father and mother, and kinred ayenst kinred, chide and dispise eche other, both day and night, as God saith by the Prophet Micha: And the loving children that whilom loved so fleshy eche other, would eche of hem etc other if they might. For howe should they love together in the paines of hel, whan they hated eche other in prosperite of this life? for truste wel ther fleshy love was dedly hate: As saith the Prophet David; Who so that loveth wickednesse, he hateth his soule; and who so hateth his owne soule, certes he may love none other wight in no maner: And therefore in hel is no solace ne no frendship; but ever the more kinredes that ben in hel, the more cursinges, the more chidinges, and the more dedly hate there is amonge hem. Also they shal have defaute of all maner delices; for certes delices ben after the appetites of the five wittes: As sight, hering, smellinge, savouring, and touchinge. But in Hell ther sight shal be full of derkenesse and of smoke, and therefore full of teres; and ther heringe full of waylinge and grintage of tethe; As saith Jesu Christ. Ther nostrilles shal be ful of stinking. And, as saith Isaie the propete; Ther savouring shal be ful of bitter gall; and as of touching, all ther bodies, icovered with fire, that never shall quenche; and with wormes that never shall die; As God saith by the mouth of Isaie: And for as muche as they shal not wene that they may die for paine, and by deth lye fro paine, that maye they understonde in the wordes of Job, that saith; There is the shadowe of deth. Certes a shadowe hath likenesse of the thing of whiche it is shadowed; but shadowe is not the same thing of whiche it is shadowed; right so fareth the paine of hel; it is like deth, for the horrible anguisse. And why? For it paineth hem ever as though they should die anon, but certes thei shal not die. For as saith saint Greg, to wretched caitifes shal be deth without deth, and ende without ende, and defaute without failing; for ther deth shal alway live, and ther ende shal ever more begin, and ther defaute shal not faile.

And therefore saith saint John the Evangelist, they shal folowe deth, and they shal nat finde him, and they shal desire to die, and deth shal lye from hem. And also Job saith, that in hel is no order or rule. And al be it so, that God hath created al thing in right order, and nothing without order, but all thinges ben ordred and numbrad; yet nathelesse they that ben dampned ben nothing in order, ne holde none order, for the erth ne shal bere hem no fruite. For, as the prophete David saith; God shal distroie the fruite of the erth, as for hem; ne water ne shal yeve hem no moillure, ne the eyre no refresinge, ne fire no lighte. For as saith saint Basilie; The brenning of the fire of this world shal God yeve in hel to hem that ben dampned, but the light and the clerenesse shal be yeve in Heaven to his children: right as gode men yeve flesh to ther children, and bones to ther houndes. And for they shal have none hope to escape, as saith saint Job at latte, that there shal horror and gresly drede dwell without ende. Horror is alway drede that is to come, and this drede shal alway dwell in the hertes of hem that be dampned. And therefore have thei losse all ther hope for seven causes. First for God that is ther Judge shal be without mercy to hem, and they may not plesse him ne none of his saintes, ne they maie not yeve nothinge for ther rauntome, ne thei shal have no voice to speke to him, ne they may not

He fro paine, ne they have no godenesse in hem that they maye shewe to deliver hem fro paine. And therfore saith Salomon: The wicked manne dieth, and whan he is ded, he shall have no hope to escape fro paine. Who so than would wel understonde the paines, and bethinke him well that he hath deserved those paines for his sinnes, certes he should have more talent to fighe and wepe, than for to singe and playe. For as saith Salomon, who so that had the science to know the paines that ben ordained for sinne, he woulde make grete sorowe. That science, as saith saint Austyn, maketh a man to weiment in his herte.

THE fourth point that ought make a man have contricion, is the forowful remembraunce of the gode that he hath leste to doe here in erth, and also the gode that he hath loste. Sothly the gode werkes that he hath leste, either they be the gode werkes that he wroughte er he fill in dedly sinne, or elles the gode werkes that he wrought while he laie in sin. Sothly the gode werkes that he did before that he fill in sinne ben al mortified, astoned, and dull by ofte sinninge. The werkes that he did while he lay in sinne be ded, as to the life perdurable in Heaven: than the gode werkes that ben mortified by oft sinning, whiche he did beyng in charite, may not quicke ayen without very penitence. And of it saith God by the mouthe of Ezechiel: If the rightfull man returne ayen fro his rightwisnesse and do wickednesse, shal he live? nay, for the gode werkes that he hath do ne shal never be in remembraunce, for he shall die in his sin. And upon that chapitre saith saint Gregoric thus, that we shall understond this principally: If that we don dedly sin, it is for nought than to reherce or drawe in to memory the gode werkes that we have wrought before: for certes in the working of dedly sinne, there is no truste to no gode werke that we have doen before; that is to say, as for to have thereby the life perdurable in Heaven. (But nathelesse the gode werkes quicken and come againe, and helpe and availe to have the life perdurable in Heaven whan we have contricion: But sothly the gode werkes that men don while they be in dedly sinne, for as moche as thei were doen in dedly sinne, thei maie never quicken; For certes, thing that never had life, maie never quicken: And nathelesse, albeit that thei availe not to have the life perdurable, yet availe thei to abredge of the paine of hell, or els to get temporell riches, or els that God wold the rather enlumine or light the hert of the sinful man to have repentaunce, and eke thei availe for to use a manne to doe gode werkes, that the fende have the lesse power of his soule. And thus the curteis Lorde Jesu Christe ne wold that no gode werke be loste, for in somewhat it shall availe. But for as moche as the gode werkes that menne doen while thei ben in godelife, ben al amortised by sinne folowing: and also sithe that all the gode werkes that men doen while they be in dedly sinne, ben utterly dedde, as for to have the life perdurable, well maie that manne that no gode werke ne doeth, sing that newe freshe song (Jay tout perdu mon temps, & mon labure.) For certes sinne bireveth a man bothe godenesse of nature, and also the godenesse of grace. For sothly the grace of the Holy Ghoste fareth like fire that maie not be idell, for fire faileth anon as it forletheth his working: and right so grace faileth anon, as it forletheth his working. Than leseth the sinful man the godenesse of glory, that onely is beight to gode men that labour and werke. Well maie he be sorie than, that oweth all his life to God, as long as he hath lived, and also as long as he shall live, that no godenesse ne hath to paie with his debt to God, to whom he oweth all his life: for trust, well he shall yeve accomptes (as saith saint Bernarde) of all the godes that have ben yve him in this present life, and how he hath hem dispended, in so moche that there shall not perishe an here of his hedde, ne a moment of an houre ne shall not perishe of his time, that he ne shall yeve of it a rekening. Fit in a reb.

THE fifthe thing that ought to move a man to contricion, is remembraunce of the passion that our Lorde Jesu Christ suffered for our sinnes. For as saith saint Bernarde, while that I live, I shall have remembraunce of the travailes, that our Lord Jesu Christe suffred in preching, his werinesse in travailling, his temptacions whan he fasted, his long walkinges whan he praied, his teres whan that he wept for pite of gode peple, the wo, the shame, and the filthe that menne said to him of the foule spitting that menne spitt in his face, of the buffettes that men yave him: of the foule mowes and of the reproches that men said to him: of the nailes with whiche he was nailed to the crosse, and of all the remnaunt of his passion, that he suffred for my sinnes, and nothing for his gilte. And ye shall understonde, that in mann's sin is every maner order or ordinance tourned up side doune. For it is sothe, that God, reson, sensualite, and the body of man, ben ordained, that eche of these fower thinges, should have Lordship over that other: as thus, God should have Lordship over reson, and reson over sensualite, and sensualite over the body of man. But sothly whan man sinneth, all this order or ordinance, is turned upside down. And therfore than, for as moche as reson of man ne wold not be subiecte ne obeisaut to God, that is his Lorde by right, therfore leseth it the Lordship that it should have over sensualite, and also over the bodie of manne. And why? For sensualite rebelleth than ayenst reson: and by that waie leseth reson the lordship over sensualite, and over the bodie: For right as reson is rebell to God; right so is both sensualite rebell to reson, and the body also. And certes this disordinaunce and this rebellion our Lorde Jesu Christ bought upon his precious body full dere; and herkeneth in what wise. For as moche than as reson is rebell to God, therfore is man worthy to have sorow, and to be dedde. Thus suffred our Lorde Jesu Christe for manne, after that he had be betrayed of his disciple, and distrained and bounde, so that his blode brasste out at every naile of his hondes, as saith S. Augustyn. And ferthermore, for as moche as reson of manne wold not daunt sensualite, whan it maie; therfore is manne worthie to have shame; and this suffred our Lorde Jesu Christ for man, whan thei spie in his visage. And ferthermore, for as moche than as the caitife body of man is rebell both to reson and to sensualite, therfore it is worthy deth, and this suffred our Lorde Jesu Christe upon the crosse, where as there was no part of his bodie fre, without grete pain and bitter passion; and al this suffred our Lorde Jesu Christ that never forfeited. And therfore resonably maie be said of Jesu in this maner; To moche, am I pained for thinges that I never deserved, and to moche defouled for shame that manne is worthy to have: And therfore maie the sinful man well saie, as saith S. Bernarde, Acurfed be the bitterness of my sinne, for whiche there muste be suffered so moche bitterness. For certes, after the divers discordaunce of our wickednes, was the passion of Jesu Christe ordained in divers thinges; as thus: Certes sinful mann's soule is betrayed of the devill, by covetise of temporell prosperite, and scorned by disceite, whan that he cheseth fleshy delices, and yet it is turmented by impacience of adversite, and belpet by servage and subjection of sinne, sinne, and at the last it is slain finally. For this ordinance of sinfull man was Jesu Christ first betrayed, and after that he was bounde, that came for to unbinde us of sinne and of paine. Than was he bescorned, that onely should have be honoured in all thinges. Than was his visage that ought be desired to be sene of all mankind, in whiche visage Angels desire to loke, villainously bespet. Than was he scourged that nothing had trespassed; and finally, than was he crucified and slain. Than was accomplished the wordes of Isaie; He was wounded for our misdeds, and defoiled for our felonies. Now sihe that Jesu

Christ roke on him the pain of all our wickednesses, moche ought sinfull manne wepe and bewaile, that for his sinnes, Godd's sonne of heven should all this pain endure.

THE sixt thing that should meve a man to contricion, is the hope of thre thinges; that is to saie; foryevenesse of sin, and the yeste of grace for to doe well, and the glorie of heven, with whiche
God shall rewarde manne for his gode dedes: And for as moche as Jesu Christ yeveth us these yestes of his largesse, and of his soverain bounte therfore is he called (Jesu Nazareus Rex Judaeorum); Jesus is to saie, saviour or salvacion, on whom men shal hope to have foryevenesse of sinnes, whiche that is properly savation of soulis. And therfore saied the Angel to Joseph, thou shalt call his name Jesus, that shall save his peple of ther sinnes. And hereof saith saint Peter: There is none other name under heven, that is yeve to any man, by whiche a man maie be saved, but onely Jesus. Nazareus is as moche for to saie, as flourishinge, in whiche a manne shall hope, that he that yeveth him remission of sinnes, shall yeve him also grace well for to doe. I was at the dore of thine herte, saith Jesus, and called for to enter: he that openeth to me, shall have foryevenesse of his sinne. I woll entre into him by my grace, and suppe with him by the gode werkes that he shall doe, whiche werkes ben the fode of the soule, and he shall suppe with me, by the grete joye that I shall yeve him. Thus shall man hope for his werkes of penaunce, that GOD shall yeve him his reign, as he beight him in the Gospell. Now shal a manne un-derstonde, in whiche maner shal be his contricion: I saie, that it shall be universell and totall, this is to saie; a man shall be very repentaunt, for al his sinnes that he hath doen in delite of his thought; for delyt is full perillous.

For there ben two maner of consentinges, that one of hem is called consenting of affection, whan a man is moved to do sinne, and than deliteth him long for to thinke on that sinne, and his reson apperceiveth it wel, that it is sinne ayenst the Lawe of God, and yet his reson refraineth not his soule delite to talent, though he se wel apertly, that it is ayenst
the reverence of God; although his reson consent not, to do that sinne in dede, yet saie some Doctours, that soche delite that dwelleth long is full perillous, al
be it never so little. And also a man should sorowe, namely for all that ever he hath desired ayenst the Lawe of God, with perfite consenting of his reson, for thercof is no doubte, that it is dedly sinne in consenting; for certes, there is no dedly sinne, but that it is first in mann's thought, and after that in his delite, and so forth into consenting, and into dede. Wherefore I saie that many men, ne repent hem never of soche thoughtes and delices, ne never shrive hem of it, but onely of the dede of grete sinnes outward: wherefore, I saie that soche wicked delites ben subtil begilers of hem that shall be damp-ned.

Moreover, man ought to sorowe for his wicked

wordes, as well as for his wicked dedes; for certes
the repentaunce of a singuler sinne, and nor repentaunt of al his other sinnes, or els repent him of all his other sinnes, and not of a singuler sinne, maie not availe: For certes GOD Almighty is all gode;
and therefore, either he foryeveth all, or els right
nought. And therefore saith saint Augustin; I wote certainly, that God is enemy to every sinner: and how than he that observeth one sinne, shall he have foryevenesse of the remnaunt of his other sinnes? Naie.
[And moreover, contricion should be wonder sorowfull
and anguissous; and therefore yeveth him God plainly his mercie: and therefore whan my soule was anguiss-
ed, and sorowfull within me, than had I remem-
braunce of God, that my praier might come to him.
Ferthermore, contricion must be continuell, and that manne have stedfast purpose to shrive him, and to amende him of his life. For sothly while contricion lasteth, man maie ever hope to have foryevenesse. And of this cometh hate of sinne, that distroicth both sinne in himself, and also in other folk at his power.
For whiche saith David; thei that love God hate wickednesse: For to love GOD, is for to love that he loveth, and hate that he hateth. [The last thing that men shal understonde, is this, 'wherefore availleth contricion? I saie, that contricion sometime delivereth manne fro sinne; Of whiche David saith, 'I saie (saied David) I purposed firmly to shrive me, and thou Lorde relese me my sinne. And right so as contricion availleth not without sad purpose of shrifte;
if manne have opportunitie, right so litle worth is shrifte or satisfaction without contricion. And more over contricion distroicth the stronge prison of helle;
and maketh weke and feble all the strengthes of the devils, and restoreth the yestes of the Holy Ghost, and of all gode vertues, and it cleneth the soule of sinne;
and delivereth it fro the pain of helle, and fro the companie of the Devill, and fro the servage of sinne;
and restoreth it to all gode spirituells, and to the companie and communion of holic church. Ferther-more, it maketh him that whilom was sonne of Ire, to be the sonne of Grace: And all these thinges ben proved by holic writte. And therefore, he that would set his entent to these thinges, he were full wise; for truly he ne should have than in all his life corage to sinne, but yeve his herte and bodie to serve Christ, and thercof doe him homage. For truly our Lorde hath spared us so mekely in our folies, that if he ne had pitie of mann's soule, a sory song might we all sing.

Explicit prima pars penitentie, & incipit pars secunda.

THE seconde parte of penitence is Confession, that is signe of contricion. Now shall ye under-stonde what is confession, and whither it ought nedes be doen or no, and whiche thinges be covenable to very confession.

First shalt thou understonde, that confession is very shewing of sinnes to the Prieste; this is to saie, very, for he muste confesse him of all the condicions that belong to his sinne, as farforth as he can: all must be saied, and nothing excused ne hid, and not avaunt The of thy gode werkes. Also it is necessarie to understonde whens that sinnes spring, and how thei encrese, and whiche thei ben.

Of the springe of sinnes, saith S. Poule in this wise; that right as by one man sinne entred first into this worlde, and through sinne deth; right so the deth encreth into al men that sinne; and this man was Adam, by whom sinne entred into this world, whan he brake the commaundement of God.
And therefore he that first was so mightie, that he ne shuld have died, became so that he muste nedes die.

197. I sayde quoth David that is to say
I purposed &c.

38. After doe add. For in the flower is hope of fruit in time coming [al. to come] & in forgiveness of sinnes is hope of grace. well for to doe.

whether he would or no, and all his progeny, in this worde, that in the saied manne sinned. Loke that in the estate of innocencie, whan Adam and Eve were naked in Paradise, and shamed not thereof, how the serpente, that was most wily of all other bestes that GOD made, saied to the woman: [why] commaunded God you, that ye should not ete of every tre in Paradise? The woman answered: of the fruite of the trees of Paradise he defended us nought, but of the fruite of the middle tre of Paradise, God forbode us to ete and touche, lest we should die. The serpente saied to the woman; naie, naie, ye shall not die of deth; for sothe God worte that what daie that ye ete therof your eyen shall open, and ye shall be as Gods knowing gode and harme. The woman than sawe that the tre was gode to feding, and faire to the eyen, and delectable to sight, she toke of the fruite of the tre and ete, and yave to her husbende, and he ete, and anon the eyen of hem both opened: and whan that thei knewe that thei were naked; thei token the levys of fygetreys, and soweden hem togedere, and maden hem in maner of breches, to hide ther members.

There maie ye se that dedly sin hath first suggestion of the fende, as sheweth here by the Adder, and afterwarde the delite of the flesch, as sheweth by Eve, and after that, consenting of reson, as sheweth here by Adam. For trust wel, though so 'it were, that the fende tempted Eve, that is to saie, the fleshe, and the fleshe had delite in the beaute of the fruite defended, yet certes till that reson, that is to saie Adam, consented to the eting of the fruite, yet stode he in the state of innocencie. Of the saied Adam roke we the saied originall sinne; for of him fleschly disceded be we all, and engendered of vile and corrupt matter: And whan the soule is put in our bodies, right anon is contract originall sinne; and that was erst but onely pain of concupiscence, is afterward both paine and sinne; and therefore we ben all borne sonnes of wrath, and of dampnacion perdurable, if it n'ere Baptisme that we receiue, which benimmereth us the coulpe, but forsoth the pine dwelleth with us as to temptation; whiche pine hight concupiscence. This concupiscence whan it is wrongfully disposed or ordained in man, it maketh him couite by covetise of fleshe, fleschly sinne by sight of his eyen, as to yerthly thinges, and also covetise of highnes by pride of herte.

Now as to speke of the first covetise, that is concupiscence, after the lawe of our members, that were lawfully made, and by rightfull judgement of God, I saie, for as moche as manne is not obeissaunt to God, that is his Lorde, therefore is the fleshe to him disobeissaunt through concupiscence, whiche is called nourishing of sinne, and occasion of sinne. Therefore, all the while that a manne hath within him the pine of concupiscence, it is impossible but he be tempted somtime, and moved in his fleshe to sin. And this thing maie not faile, as long as he liveth. It maie well wexe feble, by vertue of Baptisme, and by the grace of God through penitence, but fully ne shall it never quenche that he ne shall sometime be moved in himself, but if he were all restrained by sicknesse, or by malice of forcerie or cold drinkes. For lo, what saith S. Poule? the fleshe covereth ayenst the spirite, and the spirite against the fleshe; they ben so contrarie and so striven, that a manne maie nat alwaie do as he would. The same S. Poule, after his grete Penaunce, in water and in lond; in water, by night and by daie, in grete peril, and in grete pain; In lond, famine and thirst, cold and clothlesse, and ones stoned almoste to deth: Yet (saied he) alas, I caitife man! who shall deliver me fro the prisone of my caitife bodie? And saint Jerom, whan he long time had dwelled in desert, where as he had no company, but of wilde bestes, where as he had no mete, but herbes, and water to drinke, ne no bed, but the naked yerth; wherfore his fleshe was blacke, as an Ethiopien for hete, and nie distroied for cold. Yet (saied he) that the brenning of lecherie boiled in all his bodie. Wherfore I wot well that thei be disceaved that saie, thei be nat tempted in ther bodies. Witnesse sainte James that saith, that every wight is tempted in his own concupiscence, that is to saie; That ech of us hath matter and occasion, to be tempted of the nourishing of sinne, that is in his body. And therfore saith saint John the Evangelist: if we saie that we ben without sinne, we deceive our self, and truthe is not in us. [Now shal ye understonde, how sinne wexeth and encrefeth in man. The first thing is the same nourishing of sinne, of which I spake before, the fleschly concupiscence; and after that cometh suggestion of the devill; that is to saie, the devil's belous, with which he bloweth in man the fire of concupiscence; and after that a man bethinketh him whether he woll doe or no, that thing to whiche he is tempted. And than if a man withstonde and weive the first entising of his fleshe, and of the fende, than it is no sinne; and if so be he doe not, than felth he anon a flame of delite, and than it is gode to beware and kepe him well, or els he wolle fall anone to consenting of sinne, and than woll he do it, if he maie have time and place. And of this matter saith Moses by the Devill, in this maner: The fende saith, I woll chace and pursue man by wicked suggestion; and I woll take him by moving and stering of sinne, and I woll depart my prise of my praie by deliberacion, and my lust shall be accomplished in delite, I woll drawe my sward in consenting: For certes, right as a sward departeth a thing in two peces, right so consenting departeth God fro manne, and than wolle I slea him with my honde in dede of sinne; thus saith the fende: For certes, than is a man all dedde in soule; and thus is sinne accomplished with temptacion, by delite and consenting; and than is the sinne, actuall. Forsoth sinne is in two maners, either it is veniall or dedly sinne. Sothly whan a man loveth any creature more than Jesu Christ our creatour, than it is dedly sinne, and veniall sinne it is, if man love Jesu Christe lesse than him ought. Forsoth the dede of this venial sinne is full perillous, for it miniseth the love that man should have to God more and more. And therefore, if a man charge himself with many soche veniall sinnes; certes but if so be that he sometime discharge him of hem by shrifte, Thei maie full lightly minishe in him al the love that he hath to Jesu Christ; and in this wise skippeth veniall sinne into dedly sinne. For certes, the more that a man chargeth his soule with veniall sinnes, the more he is enclined to fall into dedly sinne. And therefore let us not be negligent, ne to boold to charge us of veniall sinnes. For the Proverbe saith, that many small make a grete. Herken this ensample; A grete wave of the sea cometh sometime with so gret a violence, that it drouneth the shippe. And the same harme doeth sometime the smal droppes of water, that entret through a little creveis into the timber, and into the botome of the shippe, if men be so negligent, that thei discharge hem not by times. And therefore although there be a difference, betwixt these two causes of drouning, a gates the shippe is drouned. Right so fareth it sometime of dedly sinne, and of anoious veniall sinnes, whan thei multiple in man so gretly, that those worldly thinges that he loveth, through whiche he sinneth venially, is as grete in his hert as the love of God, or more: and therefore the love of every thing is not beset in God, ne doen principally for God's sake, although that a manne love it lesse than than God, yet is it venial sinne, and dedlie sinne whan the love of any thing wegeth in the hert of a man as moche as the love of God or more. Dedly sinne, as saith saint Augustine, is whan a man tourneth his herte fro God, whiche that is very soveraine bountie, that maie not chaunge, and yeveth his hert to thing that maie chaunge and flit; and certes, that is every thing save God of heaven. For soth is, that if a man yve his love, which that he oweth to God with all his herte, unto a creature, certes, as moche of love as he yeveth to the same creature, so moche he bireveth fro God, and therefore doeth he sinne: For he that is debtour to God, ne yeldeth not to God al his debt, that is to saie, all the love of his herte. [Now sith manne understandeth generally, whiche is venial sinne, than it is covenable to tell specially of sinne, whiche that many a man peraventure demeth hem no sinnes, and shriveth him not of the same thinges; and yet natheles thei be sinnes sothly, as these clerkes write, this is to saie: At every time that manne eteth and drinketh more than sufficeth to the sustenance of his body, in certene he doeth sinne: and also whan he speketh more than it nedeth, it is sinne. al. nece is he doth it. — Also whan he herkeneth not benignely the complainte of the pore: Also whan he is in hele of body, and wolle not fast whan other folke fast, without cause resonable: also whan he slepeth more than nedeth, or whan he cometh by thilke encheson the lattere to Churche, or to other werkes of charite: Also whan he useth his wife without soveraine desire of engendrure, to the honour of God, or for the entent to yelde to his wife the debte of his bodye. Also whan he wol not visite the sick, or the prisoner, whanne he may (do it). Also if he love wife or child, or other worldly thing, more than reson requireth. Also if he flatter or blandise more than him ought for any necessite. Also if he minish or withdrawe the almose of the pore. Also, if he appaile his mete more deliciously than nede is, or ete hastily by likorousnes. Also, if he talke vanities at churche, or at Godd's service, or that he be a talker of idle wordes of folie or vilanie, for he shall yelde accomptes of it at the daie of dome. Also, whan he behighteth or assureth to doe thinges, that he maie not performe. Also, whan that he by lightnesse of foly misaieth or scorneth his neighbour. Also, whan he hath any wicked suspicion of thing, that he ne wote of it no sothfastnesse. These thinges and mo without nomber be sinnes, as saith S. Augustine. Now shall men understonde, that all be it so that non yerthly manne maie eschue all venial sinnes, yet maie he refrain him, by the brenning love that he hath to our Lorde Jesu Christ, and by praier and confession, and other gode werkes, so that it shall (be) but little greffe. For as saith S. Augustin, If a man love God in soche maner, that all that ever he doth is, the love of God, or for the love of God verely, for he brenneth in the love of GOD: loke how moche that one drop of water, whiche doeth fall into a grete founne full of fire, anoieth or greveth the brenning of the fire: in like maner anoieth or greveth a venial sinne unto that manne, whiche is stedfast and perfite in the love of our Saviour Jesu Christ. Ferthermore, men maie also refraine and put awaie venial sinne, by [commoning and] receiving worthely the body of our saviour Jesu Christ. Also, by taking of holy water, by almose dede, by general confession of Confiteor at Masse, and at Complin, and by blessing of Bishops, and priestes, and by other gode werkes.

* 1. 74. f. 1. the love of the wo. th.

De septem peccatis mortalibus, & de eorum dependentiis, circumstantiis, & speciebus.

NOW it is behorely thinge to tell, whiche ben the seven dedly sinnes, that is to saie, chieftains of sinnes. Al thei ren in o leas, but in divers maners. Now ben ther called seven Sins, for as moche as thei be chieft, and springe of all other sinnes. Of the roote of these seven sinnes, than is Pride the general roote of all harmes. For of this roote springeth certain braunches: as Ire, Envie, Accidie or Sloth, Avarice (or Covetise, to common understanding) Glotonic and Lecherie: and eche of these chief sinnes have ther braunches and twigges, as it shall be declared in ther chapters following. And though so be, that no manne can utterly tell the number of twigges, and of the harmes that come of Pride, yet wolle I shewe a part of hem, as ye shall understonde. There is inobedience, avaunting, ipocrisie, dispite, arrogance, impudence, swelling of hert, insolence, elacion, impaciencie, stric, contumacie, presumption, irreverence, pertinacie, vainglorie, and many other twigges that I can not declare. Inobedience is he that disobeyeth for dispite, the commaundementes of God, to his soveraines, and to his ghostly father. Avaunter is he that boasteth of the harme or of the bounte that he hath doen. Ipocrite is he that hideth to shewe him soche as he is, and sheweth him to seme soche as he is nat. Dispitous, is he that hath disdain of his neighbour, that is to saie, of his evin Christen, or hath dispite to doe that him ought to doe. Arrogance is he that thinketh that he hath those bounties in him, that he hath nat, or weneeth that he should have hem by his desertes, or els that he demeth, he is that he is nat. Impudent, is he that for his pride hath no shame of his pride ne sinne. Swelling of herte is whan man rejoiceth him of harme that he hath doen. Insolence is he that dispiseth in his judgement all other folke, as in regarde of his value, of his conning, of his speking, and of his being. Elacion is whan he ne maie neither suffer to have maister ne felowe. Impaciencie is he that wolle not be taughte, ne rebuked of his vice, and by stric denieth trouthe wittingly, and defendeth his folie. Contumacious is he that through his indignacion is ayenst every authorite or power of hem that ben his Soveraines. Presumption is whan a manne undertaketh an emprise that him ought not to do, or els that he maie not doe, and this is called surquidrie. Irreverence, is whan man doeth not honor there, as him ought to doe, and awaytith to be revered. Pertinacie, is whan men defende their folie, and trust to moche on ther own wit. Vainglorie, is for to have pompe, and delite in his temporel hinesse, and glory him in worldly estates. Jangling, is whan men speke to moche before folke, and clappeth as a mille, and take no kepe what thei saie. And yet there is a privie spice of pride, that waiteth first to be salewed, or he wolle salew, all be he lesse worthy than that other is. And also he waiteth or desireth to sit, or els to go above him in the waie, or kille pax, to be encenced, or go to offring before his neighbour, and soche temblable thinges, ayenst his dutie peraventure, but that he hath his herte and his entent in soche a pride desire to be magnified and honoured before the peple.

Now ben there two maner of prides. One of hem is within the hert of a man, and that other is without. Of whiche forsaide thinges sothly, and mo than I have said, appertain to pride, that is in the hert of man; and other spices of pride ben without, but nathelesse, that one of these spices of pride is signe

E e c

signe of that other, righte as the gaie leuefell at the Taverne is signe of the Wine that is in the Cellere. And this is in many thinges: as in speche and countenaunce, and outrageous arraie of clothing: for certes, if there had ben no sinne in clothing, Christ would not so sone have noted, and spoken of the clothing of thiske riche man in the Gospell. And as S. Grego. saith, that precious clothing is culpable, for the derth of it, and for his softnesse, and for his straungenesse and disguising. And for the superfluite, or for th' inordinate scantnes of it. Alas! maie not a man se as in our daies the sinnefull costlewe arraie of clothing, and namely in to moche superfluite, or els in to disordinate scantnesse?

As to the first sinne in superfluite of clothing, soche that maketh it so dere, to the harme of the peple, nat only the cost of enbrauderung, the disguised endenting, or barring, ounding, paling, winding, or bending, and semblable wast of clothe in vanite. But there is also the costlewe Furring in ther gounes, so moche pounsing of chesel to make holes, so moche dagging with Sheres forth, with the superfluite in length of the forsaied gounes, trailing in the dong and in the mire, on hors, and also on fote, as well of man as of woman. That all that trailing is verely as in effect wasted, consumed, treadbare, and rotten with dung, rather than it is yve to the pore, to grete damage of the forsaied pore folke, and that in sondrie wise; this is to saie that the more the clothe is wasted, the more must it cost to the pore peple for the scarsenesse. And more over, if so be that thei would yeve suche pounsed and dagged clothing to the pore peple, it is nat convenient to were for ther estate, ne sufficient to ther necessite, to kepe hem fro the distemperaunce of the firmament. Upon that other side, to speke of the horrible disordinate scantnesse of clothing, as ben these cutted sloppes or hanfelines, that through ther shortnesse, cover not the shamefull membres of manne, to wicked entent. Alas! some of hem shewe the bosse of ther shap, and the horrible swolne membres that semeth like the madaye of Hernia, in the wrapping of ther hosen, and also the buttockes of hem far as it were the hinder parte of a she-Ape in the full of the mone. And more over the wretched swollen membres that they shewe throughe disguising, in departing of ther hosen, in white and red semeth that halfe ther shamefull privy membres were slain. And if so be that they departe ther hosen in other colours, as is white and blew, or white and blacke, or blacke and red, and so forth: Than semeth it as by variaunce of colour that the halfe part of ther privy membres ben corrupt by the fire of saint Anthony, or by canker, or other suche mischaunce. Of the hinder parte of the buttockes it is full horrible for to se, for certes in that partie of ther body there as thei purge ther stinking ordure, that foule partie shewe thei to the peple proudly in dispite of honestie, whiche honestie that Jesu Christ and his frendes observed to shewe in ther life. Now as to the outrageous aray of women, God wote that though the visages of some of hem seme full chaste and debonaire, yet notify in ther aray or attire, licorousnesse and pride. I say not that honestie in clothing of man or woman is uncovenable, but certes the superfluite of disordinate quantite of clothing is reprovabill. [Also the sinne of ornament or of aparaile is in thinges that appertaine to riding, as in company, delicate horses that ben holden for delite, that ben so faire, fatte, and costlewe; and also in many a vicious knave, that is susteined bicause of hem, in curious harnais, as in sadels, cropers, peitrels, and bridels covered with precious clothing, and riche barres of plates, of golde and of silver. For which God saith by Zacharie the prophete, I woll confounde the riders of suche horses. These folke take litel regarde of the riding of Godd's sonne of heaven, and of his harnais when he rode upon the Ass, and had none other harnais but the pore clothes of his disciples, ne we rede not that ever he rode on other best but on an ass. I speke this for the sinne of superfluite, and not for resonable honestie, when reson it requirith. And more over, certes pride is gretly notified in holdinge of grete meinè, when they ben of litell profite or of right no profite; and namely when that meinè is felonous and damageous to the peple by hardinesse of highe lordship, or by waye of offices. For certes, suche lordes sell than ther lordshippe to the Devill of Hell, when they susteine the wickednesse of ther meinè. Or els, when these folke of lowe degre, as those that kepe hostelryes, susteine thefte of ther hostellers, and that is in manie maner of disceites: those maner of folke ben the flies that folow the hony, or els the houndes that folowe the caraine. Suche forsaied folke strangell spirituallly ther lordships; For suche thus saith David the Prophete. Wicked deth might come on those lordshippes, and GOD yeve that they might discende into Hell, all down, all downe. For in ther houses ben iniquities and shreudenesse, and not GOD of heaven. And certes, till they doen amendement, right as God yave his blessing to Pharao by the service of Joseph, and to Laban by the service of Jacob: Right so God woll yeve his malis on to suche lordshippes, as susteine the wickednesse of ther servauntes, but they come to amendement. [Pride of the table appereth also full ofte; for certes, riche menne be called to festes, and pore folke ben put awaye and rebuked; And also in excesse of divers metes and drinckes, and namely suche maner bakè metes and [dishe] metes brenninge of wilde fire, peynted and castelled with paper and semblable waste, so that it is abusyon to thinke; And also in to grete preciousnesse of vessell, and curiosite of minstrelcy, by whiche a man is sterred more to delices of lecherie; if so be that he sette his herte the lesse upon our Lorde Jesu Christe, certeinly it is a sinne. And certainly the delices mighte be so grete in this case, that a manne might lightly fall by hem into a dedly sinne. [The especes that sould of pride, forthely when they sould of malice imagined, avised, and forcaste, or els of usage, ben dedly sinne, it is no doute: And when they sould by freltè unavised sodenly, and sodenly withdrawe ayen, all be they grevous sinnes, I gesse that they be not dedly. Nowe mighte menne aske, whereof that pride souldeth and springeth. I say that somtime it springeth of the godes of nature, somtime of the godes of fortune, and somtime of the godes of grace. Certes the godes of nature stonde thonly in godes of bodye, or godes of the soule. Certes godes of bodie ben hele of body, strength, deliverance, beaute, gentrie, franchise. Godes of nature of the soule ben gode with sharpe understanding, subtel engine, vertue naturel, gode memory. Godes of fortune be riches, hie degrees of lordships, prayfinges of the peple. Godes of grace ben science, power to suffice, spirituall travaile, benigne, vertuous contemplacion, understanding, of temptation, and semblable thinges: of whiche forsaied godes certes it is a full grete folie a manne to have pride in any of hem all. Now, as for to speke of godes of nature, God wote that somtime we have hem in nature as muche to our damage as to our profite. As to speke of hele of body, truly it passeth full lightly, and also it is full ofte occasion of sicknesse of the soule; for God wote the fleshe is a grete enemy to the soule; and therefore the more that the body is hole, the more we be in perill to fall. Also for to have pride in his strength of body it is an hie folie; for certes the fleshe coveteth ayenst the

1. the which
2. and namely in the
3. and namely in the
4. and namely in the
5. and namely in the
6. and namely in the
7. and namely in the
8. and namely in the
9. and namely in the
10. and namely in the
11. and namely in the
12. and namely in the
13. and namely in the
14. and namely in the
15. and namely in the
16. and namely in the
17. and namely in the
18. and namely in the
19. and namely in the
20. and namely in the

the spirite: and the more strong that the fleshe is, the forier maye the soule be. And over all this strength of body and worldly hardinesse causeth full ofte manie manne to perill and mischaunce; and also to 'have pride' of his gentry, is right grete foly; for ofttime the gentry of the bodye taketh awaye the gentry of the soule: and also we ben all of o father and mother; and all we ben of o nature, rotten and corrupt, both riche and pore. Forsoth o maner gentry is for to praise, that apparelleth mann's courage, Witte, vertue, and moralite, maketh him Christ's childe. For truste well, that over what manne that sinne hath maystry, he is a very churle to sinne.

Nowe ben there generall signes of gentilnesse: as eschewing of vice and ribaudrie, and servage of sinne: in worde, in werke, and continuzunce of using and vertue, curtesy, and clennesse, and to be liberall; that is to saye, large by mesure: for that that passeth mesure, is foly and sin: Another is to remembre him of bounte, that he of other folke hath received: An other is to be benigne to his gode subjectes. Wherefore saith Senecke; there is nothing more convenient to a manne of highe astate than debonairte and pite. And therefore these flies that men call bees, whan they make ther kinge, they chese one that hath no pricke, wherwith he may stinge.

Another is, manne to have a noble herte and a diligent, to attayne to the highe vertuous thinges. Nowe certes, a manne to have pride in the godes of grace is also an outrageous foly; for those giftes of grace that shuld have turned him to godenesse, and to medicine, tourneth him to venom and confusion, as saith saint Gregory. Certes also, who so hath pride in the gode of fortune, he is a full grete foly: For sometime is a manne a grete Lord by the morne that is a caitsie and a wretche or it be nighte: and sometime the riches of a manne is cause of his deth: Sometime the delices of a manne is cause of grevous maladie through whiche he dieth. Certes, the commendacion of the peple is sometime full false and brotell for to truste. This day they praise, to morowe they blame. God wote, desire to have commendacion of the peple hath caused deth to manie a busie manne. [Nowe sith that so is, that ye have understonde what is pride, and whiche be the speces of it, and whence it fowrdeth and springeth; nowe ye shall understonde whiche is the remedy ayenst it. Humilite or mekenesse is the remedy ayenst pride, that is a vertue, thorowe whiche a manne hath very knowlege of him self, and holdeth of himselfe no price ne daintie, as in regarde of his desertes, considering ever his frete. Nowe ben there thre maner of humilites; As humilite in hert, an other humilite is in mouthe, and the thirde is in werkes. The humilite in hert is in four maners; That one is, whan a manne holderth himselfe as nought worth before GOD of heven. The second is, whan he dispiseth none other man. The thirde is, whan he ne recketh nat, though men hold him noughte worthe. And the fourth is, whan he is not fory of his humiliacion. Also the humilite of mouthe is in four thinges. In a temperate speche, in humilite of spech, and when he confesseth with his owne mouth, that he is such as him thinketh that he is in his herte: Another is when he prayseth the bounte of another manne and nothing therof minisbeth. Humilite also in werke, is in four maners: The firste is, when he putteth other menne before him; the seconde is to chese the lowest place over al; the thirde is gladly to assent to gode counsaile; the fourth is, to stonde gladly to the awarde of his soveraines, or of him that is in hier degre: Certaine this is grete werke of humilite.

De Invidia.

After pride woll I speke of the soule sinne of Envy, whiche that is after the worde of the Philosopher, sorowe of other mennes prosperite, And after the worde of saint Augustin; it is the sorowe of other mennes wele, and the joy of other mennes harme. This soule sinne is platly ayenst the Holie Ghozte: All be it so, that every sinne is ayenst the Holy Ghozte; Yet nathelesse, for as muche as bounte apertaineth properly to the Holy Gost, and Envy cometh properly of malice, therefore it is properly ayenst the bounte of the Holy Gost. [Now hath malice two spices, that is to saie, hardinesse of herte in wickedness, or els the fleshe of a manne is so blinde, that he considreth nat that he is in sinne, or recketh not that he is in sinne, which is the hardinesse of the devyl. That other spice of Envy is, when that a man denieth trouthe, when he knoweth that it is trouthe, and also when he repenteth the grace that God hath yve to his neighbour; and all this is by Envy. Certes, than is Envy the worst sinne that is; for sothly all other sinnes be sometime onely ayenst o speciall vertue; but certes, envy is ayenst al vertues and al godenesse. For it is fory ayenst all the bountes of ther neighbour, and in this maner, it is divers from al other sinnes. [Alas! For there ne is any sinne that it ne hath some delire in it selfe, save only Envy, that ever hath in it self anguish and sorowe. [The speces of Envy ben these; there is, firste, sorowe of other mennes godenesse and of ther prosperite, and prosperite is kindly matter of joye; Than is envy a sinne ayenst kinde. The seconde spece of Envy is joye of other mennes harme, and that is properly like to the Devill, that ever rejoyseth him of mann's harme. [Of these two speces cometh backbiting; and this sinne of backbiting or detracting hath certaine speces, as thus; Some manne praiseth his neighbour by a wicked entent, for he maketh alway a wicked knot at the laste ende, alwaie he maketh a But at the last ende, that is digne of more blame, than is worth al the praising. The seconde spece is, that if a man be gode, or doth or saith a thing to gode entent, the backbiter wol turne al that godenesse upside down, to his shreude entent. The thirde is to aminshe the bounte of his neighbour. The fourthe spece of backbiting is this, that if menne speke godenesse of a manne, than wol the backbiter saye; Perseye suche a manne is yet better than he, in dispraising of him that menne praise. The fiftie spece is this, for to consent gladly and herke gladly to the harme that men speke of other folke: This sinne is full grete, and aye encreseth after the wicked entent of the backbiter. [After backbiting cometh grutchinge or murmuration; and sometime it springeth of impaciencie ayenst God, and sometime ayenst manne. Ayenst God it is whan a man grutcheth ayenst paine of hell, or ayenst poverty, or losse of cattell, or ayenst raine or tempest, or els grutcheth that shrewes have prosperite, or els for that gode menne have advertite; and all these thinges shoud menne suffre patiently, for they come by the rightful judgement and ordinaunce of God. Sometime cometh grutchinge of avarice; Judas gruched ayenst Maudelein, whan she anointed the hed of our Lorde Jesu Christ, with her precious ointment. This maner murmuring is such as whan man grutcheth of godenesse that himself doth, or that other folke doth of ther owne cattell. Sometime cometh murmure of pride, as whan Simon the Pharise gruched ayenst Maudelein when she aproched to Jesu Christ and wepte at his fete for her sinnes. And sometime it fowrdeth of Envy, whan men discover a man's harme that was privy, or b. rith him an honde thing that is false. Murmure also is ofte among seruautes that grutche whan ther souveraines bidde hem do lesull thinges; and for as much as they dare not openly withsaye the commaundement of ther souveraines, yet wol they say harme and grutche and murmure prively for very dispite: which wordes they call the divels Pater noster, though so be that the divell had never Pater noster, but that leude folke yeveth it fuche a name. Somtime it cometh of ire or privy hate, that norissheth rancour in the hert, as afterward I shall declare. Than cometh also bitterness of herte, thorowe which bitternes every gode dede of his neighbour semeth to him bitter and unfavory. Than cometh discorde that unbindeth al maner of frendship. Than cometh scorninge of his neighbour, all do he never so well. Than cometh accusing, as whan man seketh occasion to anoie his neighbour, which is like the crafte of the divel, that waiteth both day and night to accuse us all. Than cometh malignite, through which a manne anoieth his neighbour prively if he may, and if he maye not, algate his wicked wil shall not let, as for to brenne his house prively, or enpoison or sle his bestes, and semblable thinges. [Nowe wolle I speke of the remedie ayenst this foule sinne of envy. Firste is the love of God principally, and loving of his neighbour as himselfe; for sothly that one ne may not be without that other. And trust well that in the name of thy neighbour thou shalt understande the name of thy brother; for certes all we have one father fleshy and one mother, that is to saie Adam and Eve, and also one father spirituall, that is God of heven. Thy neighbour art thou bound for to love, and will him all godenesse; and therefore saith God; Love thy neighbour as thy self, that is to say, to salvation both of life and soule. And more over thou shalt love him in worde and in benigne admonishing and chastisinge, and comfort him in his noyaunces, and praye for him with all thy herte. And in dede thou shalt love him in soche wise that thou shalt do to him in charite, as thou woldest that it were don to thin owne person: and therefore thou ne shalt do him no damage in wicked worde, ne harme in his body ne in his catel, ne in his soule by entising of wicked ensample. Thou shalt nat desire his wife ne none of his thinges. Understonde also that in the name of neighbour is comprehended thyn enemy: Certes man shall love his enemy by the commaundement of God; and sothly thy frende thou shalt love in God. I saie thin enemy; shalt thou love for Godd's sake, by his commaundement; for if it were reson that man should hate his enemy, forsoth God n'olde not receive us to his love that ben his enemies. Ayenst thre maner of wronges that his enemy doth to him, he shal do thre thinges, as thus; ayenst hate and rancour of hert, he shal love him in hert; Ayenst chiding and wicked wordes he shal praye for his enemy; Ayenst wicked dedes, he shall doe him bountie. For Christ saith; Love your enemies, and praie for hem that speke you harme, and for hem that chace and pursue you; and do bountie to hem that hate you. Lo! thus commaundeth us our Lorde Jesu Christe to do to our enemies: Forsothe nature driveth us to love our frendes; and parfay our enemies have more nede of love than our frendes, and they that more nede have, certes to hem shall men rather do godenesse. And certes in that dede have we remembrance of the love of Jesu Christe, that died for his enemies: And in as much as that love is more grevous to perfourme, so muche is the more grete the merite, and therefore the loving that our Lord loved his enemy hath confounded the devils venom: For right as the devill is discumfited by humilite, right so is he wounded to the deth by the love of our enemy; certes than is love the medicin that casteth out the venom of envie fro man's man's herte. The spices of this mattere shal be more largely schewed in the chapteris that folwen here afterward.

De Ira

After Envy wol I discrive the sinne of Ire, for sothely who so hath Envy upon his neighbour, anone he wolle comenly finde him a matter of wrathe in worde or in dede, ayenst him to whom he hath Envy: And as well cometh Ire of pride as of Envy; for sothly he that is proude or envious is lightly wrothe.

This sin of Ire, after the discribing of S. Austin, is wicked wil to be avenged by worde or by dede. Ire, after the Philosopher, is the fervent blode of man quickened in his herte, through which he would harme to him that he hateth; for certes the herte of manne by eschaufing and moving of his blode, wexeth so troubled, that it is out of all maner judgement of reson. But ye shal understonde that Ire is in two maners, that one of hem is gode, and that other is wicked. The gode ire is by jelousie of godenes through which a man is wrothe with wickednesse, and ayenst wickednesse. And therefore saith a wise man, that ire is bet than playe. This ire is with debonaire, and it is wroth without bitternesse, not wroth ayenst the man, but wrothe with the misdede of the manne. As saith the prophete David: Irafcimini, & nolite peccare. Nowe understonde that wicked Ire is in two maners, that is to saye, sodaine ire, or hasty ire, without avisement and consenting of reson: The meninge and the sence of this is, that the reson of a man ne consenteth not to that sodeine ire; and than it is veniall. Another ire is ful wicked, that cometh of villoney of herte, avised and cast before with wicked wil to do vengeance, and thereto his reson consenteth; and sothly this is dedly sin. This ire is so displeaunt to God, that it troubleth his house, and chaseth the Holy Goste out of man's soule, and wasteth and distroierth that likenesse of God, that is to say, the vertue that is in man's soule, and putteth in him the likenesse of the devill, and taketh the man fro God that is his rightfull Lord. This ire is a full grete pleasaunce to the devill, for it is the devil's forneis that is eschaufed with the fire of Hell: For certes right so as fire is more mighty to distroye erthly thinges, than any other element, right so ire is mighty to distroye al spiritual thinges. Loke howe that fire of smale coles that ben almost dede under ashen, wolle revive or quicken ayen whan thei ben touched with brimstone, right so ire wolle ever more quicken ayen when it is touched, by the pride that is covered in man's herte. For certes fire ne maie not come out of nothings, but if it were first in the same thing naturelly; as fire is drawn out of flintes with steel. And right so as pride is many times matter of ire, right so is rancour norice and keper of Ire. There is a maner tre, as saith saint Isidore, that whan a manne maketh fire of the said tre, and covereth the coles of it with ashen, sothely the fire of it wol last a yere or more: And right so fareth it of rancour, when it is ones conceived in the hert of some men, certes it wolle laste peraventure from one Ester-day untill an other Ester-daye or more. But certes the same man is ful ferre from the mercy of God all that while.

In this forsaide devils forneis there forge thre shrewes: Pride that aye bloweth and encrefeth the fire by chiding and wicked wordes: Than stondeth envy and holdeth hotte yron in the fire upon the hert of man, with a payre of long tonges of longe rancoure. And than stondeth the sinne of contumelie

x f. chasch

x al. of

+ al. want

+ al. openly.

h

+ al. willie

A dede; in word in ben. and nothing in chasch & in comforting & chasch in -

D.

x al. labo

+ have in the word in pr.

+ For sothly

+ for of our enemy ha. com.

al. the

al. benym

+ gladi
+ cut 9.+ a
+ often+ think
+ it

+ is

+ think

+ the

+ al. combr or strife

or strif and cheste, and battereth and forgeth by villainous reprevings. Certes this cursed thing anoieth bothe to the manne himself and also his neighbour. For sothely almoste all the harme for damage that any man dothe to his neighbour commeth of wrath; for certes outrageous wrathe dothe all that ever the foule fende willethe or commaundeth him, for he ne spareth neither our Lorde Jesu Christ, nether his swete mother. And in his outrageous angre and ire, (alas, alas!) full many oon at that time, feleth in his herte full wickedly bothe of Christ, and also of all his halowes: Is not this a cursed vice? yes certes. Alas! it taketh fro man his witte and his reson, and all his debonayre life spirituall that shoulde kepe his soule. Certes it benymyth God his dewe lordship, and that is man's soule, and the love of his neighbours. It striveth also al daye ayenst trouthe, it reveth him the quiete of his herte, and subverteth his soule.

Of ire cometh these stinking engendures: Firste hate, that is olde wrath; Discorde, thorowe which a man forsaketh his olde frende that he hath loved full longe: And than commeth warre and every maner of wrong that a man dothe to his neighbour in bodye or in catell. [Of this cursed sinne of ire cometh also manslaughter. And understonde well that homicide, that is manslaughter, is in divers wise. — Some maner of homicide is spirituall, and some is bodely. Spirituall manslaughter is in vi. thinges. Firste, by hate, as saith sainte John; He that hateth his brother is an homicide. Homicide is also by backbiting, of whiche backbiting saith Salomon, that thei have two swerdes, with whiche they sle their neighbours; For sothely as wicked is to take fro him his gode name as his life. Homicide is also in yevinge of wicked counsell by fraude; as for to yeve counsaile to areyfe wrongfull customes, and talages: Of whiche saith Salomon; A Lion roringe and a Bere hungry, be like to the cruell Lordes in withholding for abedging of the shepe of the hire or the wages of Servauntes; Or elles in usurie; or in withdrawinge of the Almesse of pore-folke; For whiche the wise man saith; Fedeth him that almoste dieth for hunger, for sothly but if ye fede him ye sle him. And all these ben dedly sinnes. Bodily manneslaughter is when thou sleest him with thy rounge: An other maner is, when thou commaundest to sle a man, or elles yevest counsaile to sle a man. Manslaughter in dede is in four maners; That one is by lawe; right as a Justice dampneth him that is culpable to the deth. But let the Justice beware that he doe it rightfully, and that he doe it not for delite to spill blode, but for keping of rightwisnesse. An other homicide is done for necessite, as when a man sleeth another in his defence, and that he ne may none other wise escape his owne deth; but certeynly if he may askape without slauttere of his adversarie, and sleeth him, he doth sinne, and he shall bere penaunce as for dedly sinne. Also if a manne by case or adventure shote an arrowe or caste a stone, with which he sleeth a man, he is an homicide. Also if a woman by negligence overlith her child in her slepinge, it is homicide and dedly sin. Also whan man disturbleth conception of a childe, and maketh a woman either bareyne by drinking of venemous herbes, throughe which she may not conceive, or sleeth a childe by drinkes, or els putteth certaine material thinges in her secret places to sle the childe, or els doth unkindly sinne, by whiche a man or a woman shedeth her nature in maner or in yplace there as a childe maye not be conceived; Or els if so be that a woman hath conceived, and hurteth her selfe, and by that mishappe the childe is slayne, yet it is homicide. What say we of those women that murder ther children for bicause of eschewynge of worldly shame? Certes it is an horrible homicide. Homicide is also if a manne approche to a woman by desire of lechery, thorowe whiche the child is perished, or els smiterh a woman wittingly, through which she leseth her childe: Al these ben homicides and horrible dedly sinnes. Yet come there of ire, mo sinnes, as well in worde as in thought, and dede. As he that arreteth upon God, or blameth God of the thing of which he is himselfe gilty, or dispiseth God and all his halowes, as don the cursid hasardours in divers countreis: This cursid sinne don they, whan they fele in ther herte ful wickedly of God and of his halowes. Also when they trete unreverently the sacrament of the auter, that sin is so gret that unmethe may be releced, but that the mercy of God passeth al his werkes; it is so gret and he so benigne. Than cometh of ire an atterly angre, whan a man is sharply amonished in his shriste to leve his sinne: Than wolle he be angrie, and answere hokerly and angerly, or defende or excuse his sinne by unstedfastnesse of his fleshe, or els he did it for to holde companie with wyse felowes, or els he saith the fende enticed him, or els he doth it for his youthe, or els his complexcion is so coragious that he may not forbere, or els it is his destenie (he saith) unto a certaine age, or els he saith it cometh him of gentilnesse of his auncelsters, and semblable thinges. All these maner of folke so wrappe hem in ther sinnes, that thei ne wolle nor deliver hemselfe: For sothly no wight that excuseth himselfe wilfully of his sinne, maye not be delivered of his sinne, till that he mekely beknoweth his sinne. After this than cometh sweringe, that is expresse ayenst the commaundement of God, and this befallith often of angre and of ire: God saith, Thou shalt not take the name of thy Lorde God insveine or in idell. Also our Lorde Jesu Christ saith by the worde of sainte Mathew: Ne shall ye not swere in no maner, neither by heaven, for it is Godd's tione, ne by erth, for it is the benche of his sete, ne by Hierusalem, for it is the cite of a grete King, ne by thine hed; for thou maiste not make an here neyther white ne blacke; but saye by youre wordes; ye, ye, naye, naye; and what that is more, it is of evill. Thus saith Christe. For Christ's sake swere not so sinfully in dismembinge of Christe; By soule, harte, bones, and body; for certes it semeth that ye thinke that the cursed Jewes ne dismembred not inoughe the precious person of Christ, but ye disembre him more. And if so be that the lawe compell you to swere, than ruleth you after the lawe of God in your swering, as saith Jeremie, iiii. cap. Thou shalt kepe thre condicions, thou shalt swere in trouthe, in dome, and in rightwisnesse, this is to saye, thou shalt swere soth: For every lesinge is ayenst Christ; for Christe is verie trouthe. And thinke well this that every grete swerer not compelled lawfully to swere, the plage shall not departe fro his hous, while he useth such unlesful swering. Thou shalt swere also in dome, whan thou arte constrained by thy dom's manne to witnesse the trouthe: Also thou shalt not swere for envie, neither for favour, nether for mede, for rewardes, but onely for rightwisnesse and for declaringe of it to the honour and worshippe of God, and to the aydinge and helpe of thine evin-Christen. And therefore every man that taketh Godd's name in idell, or falsely swerith with his mouth, or els taketh on him the name of Christe to be called a Christen man, and liveth ayenst Christ's livinge and his teching, all they take Godd's name in idell. Loke also what saith saynt Peter, Actuum iiii. capite Non est aliud nomen sub celo, &c. There is none other name saith saint Peter under heaven yevē to men, in which they may be saved, that is to say, but the name of

Jesu Christe. Take hede eke howe precious is the name of Jesu Christe, as saith sainte Poule, ad Philippienses ii. In nomine Jesu, &c. That in the name of Jesu every knee of Hevenly creatures, erthly, and of hel should bowe, for it is so hie and so worshipfull, that the cursed fende in hell should tremble to here it named. Than semeth it that men that swere so horribly by his blessed name, that they dispise it more boldly than the cursed Jews, or els the divel that trembleth whan he hereth his name.

Nowe certes sithe that swering, but it be lawfully done, is so hiely defended; moche wers is it for to swere falsely, and yet nedelesse.

What say we also of hem that delite hem in swering, and holde it a genterye or a manly dede to swere gret othes? And what of hem that of very usage ne cese not to swere gret othes, all be the cause not worthe a strawe? Certes, this is horrible sinne. Swering sodenly withouten aviselement is also a perous sinne. But lette us go now to that horrible sinne, swering of adjuration and conjuration, as doen these fals Enchauntours, or Necromancers in Basins full of water, or in bryght swerdis blade, in a circle, in a fire, or in the shulder bone of a shepe? I can not saie, but that thei doe cursedly and damnable ayenst Christ, and all the faith of holic church.

What say we of hem, that beleve on Devynales, as by flighte or by noyse of birdes or of best, or by sorte, by Geomancie, by dremes, by chirking of dores, or craking of houses, by gnawing of rattes, and soche maner wretchidnesse? Certes, all these thinges ben defended by God, and holy church, for whiche thei ben accursed, till thei come to amendement, that on soch filth set ther beleve. Charmes for woundes, or maladic, of menne, or of bestes, if thei take any effect, it maie be paraventure that God suffereth it, for folke shuld yeve the more faith, and reverence to his name.

Nowe woll I speke of lesinges, whiche generally is false signifiante of worde in intent, to disceive his evin-Christen. Some lesing is of whiche there cometh none avauntage to no wight, and some lesing turneth to the profite and ese of a man, and to the damage of an other man. An other lesing is, for to save his life or his catel. Another lesinge theer is which cometh of delite for to lie, in which delite thei woll forge a long tale, and peint it with all circumstances, where al the ground therooffe is false. Some lesing cometh, for he wolle susteine his wordes: Some lesing cometh of retchelesnesse without aviselement, and semblable thinges.

Let us now touche the vice of flatterie, whiche ne cometh not gladly but for drede, or for coverise. Flatterie is generally wrongfull praising. Flatterers ben the devill's norices, that norishe his children, with milke of losingerie: forsoth Salomon saith, that flatterie is worse than detraction, for sometime detraction maketh an hautein manne be the more humble, for he dredeth detraction, but certes flatterie maketh a man t'enhaunce his herte and his countenance. Flatterers be the Devill's enchauntours, for thei make a manne to wene himself be like that he is nat like. Those be like to Judas, that betraie a manne, to sell him to his enemy. Flatterers ben the devill's Chapeleins, that ever sing Placcho. I reken flatterie in the vices of ire; for oft time if a man be wroth with an other, than woll he flatter some wight, to susteine him in his quarrell.

Speke we now of soche cursing, as cometh of irous hert. Malison generally may be saied, every maner [power] of harme: soche cursing bereveth man fro the reigne of God, as saith S. Poule. And ofte time soche cursing wrongfully returneth ayen to him that curseth, as a birde that turneth again to his owne nest. And over all thing, men oughte eschue to curse ther children, and yeve to the Devill ther engendrure, as ferre forth as in hem is; certes, it is grete peril and grete sinne.

Let us than speke of chiding and reproch whiche benfullgrete woundes in mann's herte, for thei unfowe the semes of frendship in mann's herte: For certes, unneth maie a man plainly be accorded with him, that him openly hath reviled and reprevd, and disclaunders: This is a full grisely sinne, as Christe saith in the Gospel. And take hede now, that he that repreve his neighbour, ether he repreve him by some harme of pain, that he hath upon his bodie, as Mefell, croked, harlot, or by some sinne that he doeth. Now if he repreve him by any infirmitie of Godd's visitation that is harm to hym or payn, than turneth the repreve to Jesu Christ; for pain is send by the rightwise sonde of God, and by his sufferance, be it meselrie, maim, or malady: and if he repreve him uncharitably of sinne that he useth, as thou holour, thou dronkelewe harlot, and so forth, than pertaineth that to the rejoicing of the devill, whiche ever hath joie that men doen sin. And certes, chiding maie not come but of vilanous herte, for after the haboundance of the herte speketh the mouth full oft. And ye shall understond, that loke by any waie, whan any man shall chastise for correctyan other, that he beware from chiding or repreving; for truly but he beware, he maie ful lightly quicken the fire of angr and of wrath, whiche he should quenche: and peraventure, slæth him, which he might chastise with benigne. For as saith Salomon; the amiable tongue is the tre of life, that is to saie, of life spirituall. And sothly, a dissolute tong slæth the spirites of hem that repreve, and also of him whiche is repreved. Lo! what saith saint Augustin; There is nothing folike the devill's child, as he whiche oft chideth. Saint Poule seyth also, a servaunte of GOD behoveth not to chide. And though that chiding be a villainous thing, betwixt al maner folke, yet it is certes moste uncovenable, betwene a man and his wife, for there is never reste. And therefore saith Salomon; An hous that is uncovered in reyne, and a chiding wife, ben a like.

A manne, which is in a dropping hous in many places, though he eschue the dropping in o place, it droppeth on him in an other place: So fareth it by a chiding wife; if she chide him in one place, she woll chide him in an other: And therefore better and gretly more plesant is a morsell, for little gobet of brede with joye, than an hous filled full of delicies, with chiding and gnerring, saith Salomon. Saint Poule saith, O ye women, beth ye subgette to your husebandes, as [ye] behoveth [and ought] in God: And ye men loveth your wives. Ad Colossenses. iii.

Afterward speke we of scorning, whiche is a wicked sinne, and namely whan he scorneth a man for his gode werkes: For certes, soche scorners fare like the foule Tode, that maie not endure to smell the swete savour of the vine, whan it flouriseth. These scorners ben parting felowes with the devill; for thei have joie whan the Devill winneth, and sorrow if he leseth. Thei ben adversaries of Jesu Christ, for thei hate that he loveth, that is to saie, salvation of soulis.

Speke we now of wicked counsaile; the whiche is a Traiture, for he disceiveth him that trusteth in him: Ut Achitophel ad Absalom. But nathelesse, yet is his wicked counsaile, first ayenst himself; for as saith the Wiseman; Every false living man hath this propertie in himself, that he that woll anoie an other man, he anoie first himself. And men shall understond, that man shall not take his counsaile of false folke, ne of angrie folke, or-greuous folke, ne of folke that that love specially to moche her owne profit, ne to moche worldly folke, namely in counsailling of soules.

Now cometh the sinne of hem that sowe and make discorde among folke, whiche is a sinne that Christ hateth utterly, and no wonder is; for he died for to make concorde. And more shame doe thei to Christe, than did thei that him crucified; for God loveth better that frendship be amonges folke, than he did his owne body, whiche that he gave for unitè. Therefore ben thei likened to the devill, that ever be about to make discorde. [Now cometh the sinne of double tounge, soche as speke faire before folke, and wickedly behind, or els thei make semblaunte, as though thei spake of gode entencion, or els in game and plaie, and yet thei speke of wicked entent.

Now cometh bewraying of counsaile, through whiche a man is defamed: certes unneith maie he restore the damage. [Now cometh menace, that is an open folie; for he that ofte menaceth, he threteth more than he maie performe ful oft time. Now cometh idel wordes, that is without profite of him that speketh the wordes, and also of him that harkeneth the wordes: Or els idell wordes ben those that ben nedelesse, or without entente of naturell profite. And albe it that idel wordes be sometime veniall sinne, yet should men doubt hem, for we shall yere rekenyng of hem before God. [Now cometh jangling, that may not be without sinne: And as saith Salomon; it is a sign of apert folie. And therefore a Philosopher saied, whan menne asked him how that men shulde please God, he answerde; Doe many gode werkes, and speke few vanities. After this cometh the sin of japeries, that ben the devill's Apes, for thei make folke to laugh at ther japerie, as folke doe at the gaudes of an ape: whiche japes defendeth saint Poule. Loke how that vertuous wordes and holy comfort hem that travaile in the service of Christe: Right so comforteth the villainous wordes and knackes of japers hem, that travaile in the service of the devill. These ben the sinnes of the tounge, that come of ire, and of other sinnes.

The remedie ayenst Ire.

THE remedie ayenst Ire, is a vertue that men klepen mansuetudo that is debonaire, and also an other vertue that menne clepe [pacience] or sufferance.

Debonaire withdraweth and refraineth the sterings and movinges of mann's corage in herte, in soche maner that thei ne skip nat out by anger ne Ire. Sufferance suffreth swetely all the anoiaunces and wronges that men doon to man outward. S. Jerome saith this of debonaire, that it doeth no harme to no wight, ne saith: ne for no harme that men doe ne saie, he ne chafeth ayenst reson. This vertue sometime cometh of nature; for as saith the Philosopher, A man is a quicke thinge by nature, debonaire and trefable to godenes: but whan debonaire is enformed of grace, than it is the more worth.

Pacience is an other remedie ayenst ire, and is a vertue that suffreth swetely every mann's godenes, and is nat wroth for no harme that is doon to him. The Philosopher saith, that pacience is the vertue that suffreth debonairely all the outrages of adversite, and every wicked worde. This vertue maketh a man like to God, and maketh him Godd's owne child: as saith Christ. This vertue discomfitteth thine enemies. And therefore saith the Wiseman; if thou would venquish thine enemy, lerne to suffre. [And thou shalt understonde, that a man suffereth fower maner of grevaunces, in outward thinges, a-yenst the whiche fower he must have fower maner of paciencies.

The first grevaunce is of wicked wordes, whiche suffered Jesu Christe without grutchyng full patiently, whan the Jews dispised him full oft. Suffer thou therefore patiently, for the Wiseman saith; if thou strive with a fole, though the fole be wroth, or though he laugh, alwaie thou shalt have no reste. That other grevaunce outward, is to have dammage of thy cattell: There ayenst suffred Christ full patiently, whan he was dispoiled of all that he had in this life, and that was but his clothes. The thirde grevaunce, is a man to have harme in his body; that suffred Christ full patiently in all his passion. The fourth grevaunce, is an outrageous labour in werkes: wherefore I saie, that folke that make ther servauntes to travaile to grevously, or out of time, as in holydaies, sothly thei do grete sinne. Here ayenst suffred Christ full patiently, and taught us pacience, whan he bare upon his blessed shulders the crosse, upon which he should suffre dispitous deth. Here maie men lerne to be patient, for certes, not onely Christen, be patiente for love of Jesu Christ, and for guerdon of the blisse of hevenc, and of the blissfull life that is perdurable, but certes the olde Painims, that never were christened, commended and used the vertue of pacience.

A Philosopher uppon a time, that would have bete his disciple, for his grete trespass, for whiche he was moved, and brought a yerde to skore the childe, and whan this childe sawe the rodde, he said to his maister; what thinke ye to doe? I woll bete The saied the maister for thy correction: Forsothe saied the childe, ye ought firste correcte your selfe, that have lost all your pacience, for the offence of a childe. Forsothe saied the maister al weping, thou saiest soth: have thou the rodde in thy dere childe, and correcte me for mine impacience. Of pacience cometh obedience, through whiche a manne is obedient to Christ, and to all hem to which he ought be obedient in Christe. And understonde well, that obedience is persite, whan that a man doeth gladly and hastily, with gode herte entierly all that he should doe. Obedience generally, is to performe the doctrine of God, and of his soveraines, to whiche him ought to be obeisant in all rightwisnesse.

De Accidia.

After the sinnes of Envie and Ire, now woll I speke of the sinne of Accidie: for envie blindeth the herte of a manne, and ire troubleth a man, and Accidie maketh him hevy, thoughtfull and pensive. Envy and ire maken bitternesse in herte, whiche bitternesse is mother of accidie, and benymyth him the love of all godenesse, than is accidie the anguise of trouble of herte. And saint Augustin saith: It is anoie of godenesse and anoie of harme. Certes this is a dampnable sinne, for it doeth wrong to Jesu Christ, in as moch as it bremmeth the service that men ought to doe to owre Loide Jesu Crist with all the diligence, as saith Salomon; but Accidie doeth no soche diligence. He doeth al thing with anoie, and with wrauness, slackeness, and excusacion, with idelnesse and unlust. For whiche the boke saith, Accursed be he that doeth the service of God negligently. Than is accidie enemy to every estate of man. For certes the estate of man is in thre maners. Either it is in the estate of innocense, as was the estate of Adam, before that he fell into sinne, in which estate he was holde to worke, as in praising and lauding God. An other estate is the estate of sinfull men: in whiche estate men ben holden to labour in praying to God, for amendement of ther sinnes, and that he would graunt hem to rise out of ther sinnes.

An other estate is the estate of grace, in whiche state he is holden to do workes of penitence; and certes, to all these thinges is accidie contrary, for he loveth no busynesse at all. Now certes, this foule sinne accidie is also a full grete enemy to the livelode of the body, for it ne hath no purveiance ayenst temporell necessite; for it forlewethed and forslugged, and that distroicth al godes temporell by rechelesnes.

The fowerth thing is, that accidie is like hem that ben in the paine of hell, bicause of ther sloth and hevines; for thei that be damned ben so bound, that thei may neither wel doe ne thinke. Of accidie cometh first that a manne is anoied and encombred to doe any godenesse, and maketh that God hath abhominacion of soche accidie, as saith S. John.

Now cometh sloth, that woll nat suffre no hardnesse ne penance; for sloth is so tender and so delicate, as saith Salomon, that he woll suffer no hardnesse ne penance, and therefore he marreth all that he doeth. Ayenst this rotten hertid sinne of accidie and sloth, should men exercise hem self, and use hem to do gode workes; and manly and virtuously catch corage to doe, thinking that our Lorde Jesu Christ quicth every gode dede, be it never so lite. Usage of labour is a grete thing: For it maketh, as saith S. Bernarde, the labourer to have strong armes, and hard senewes; and sloth maketh hem hevy, feble, and tender. Than cometh drede to beginne to worke any gode workes. For certes, he that enclineth to sin, him thinketh it is so gret an emprise for to undertake the workes of godenesse, and casteth in his herte, that the circumstances of godenesse ben so grevous and weightie for to suffre, that he dare not undertake to doe workes of godenes, as saith saint Gregorie.

Now cometh wanhope, that is dispeire of the the mercie of God, that cometh somtime of to moche outrageous sorowe, and sometime of to moche drede, imagining that he hath doe so moche sinne, that it woll not availe him, tho he would repent him, and forsake it and doon good; through whiche dispeire or drede, he abandoneth all his herte to every maner sinne, as saith saint Augustine. Whiche dampnable sinne, if it continue unto his ende, it is called sinning in the Holy Ghost. This horrible sinne is so perillous, that he that is dispeired, ther n'is no felonie ne no sinne, that he doubteth for to doe, as sheweth well by Judas. For certes, above all sinnes than is this sinne moche displeaunte to Christe, and moche adversarie. Sothly, he that dispeireth him, is like to the coward champion recreaunt, that lieth without nede. Alas, alas! nedeles is he recreaunt, and nedelesse dispeired. For certes, the mercie of God is ever redy to the penitent person, and is above al his werkes. Alas! can not a man bethinke him on the Gospell of S. Luke xv. Where as Christ saith, that as well shal there be joie in heaven upon a sinfull manne that doeth penitence, as upon xcix. rightfull men that nede no penitence. Loke fether in the same Gospell, the joy and the fest of the gode man, that had lost his sonne, when his sonne with repentaunce was returned to his father. Can thei not remember hem also, that (as saith Saint Luke) Chapi. xxiii. How that thief that was hanged beside Jesu Christe, saied; Lord remember me, when thou comest in thy reigne. Forsoth saied Christ, [I saie to Thee] I shal daie shal thou be with me in Paradise. Certes, there is non so horrible sinne in man, that ne maie in his life be distroied by penitence, through vertue of the passion and of the deth of Christe. Alas: what nede men than to be dispeired, sith that his mercy is so redy and large? but aske and have. [Than cometh sompnolence, that is sluggie, slombing;

whiche maketh a man hevie, and dull in bodie and in soule, and this sinne cometh of sloth: And certes, the time that by waie of reson, man should not slepe, is by the morowe, but if ther were cause reasonable. For forhly, the morowe-tide is moche covenable, a manne to saie his praies, and for to thenke on God, and to honor God, and to yeve almose to the pore that cometh first in the name of Jesu Christ.

Loc! what saith Salomon? Who so woll by the morowe awake to seke me, he shal find me. [Than cometh negligence or rechelesnes that recketh of nothing. And though that ignoranne be mother of all harmes, certes, negligence is the norice. Negligence ne doth no force, when he shall doe a thing, whether he doe it well or evill.]

The remedy of these two sinnes is, as saith the Wiseman, that he that dredeth God, spareth not to doe that he ought to doe, and he that loveth GOD, he woll doe diligence to please GOD by his werkes, and abandone himself with all his might, well for to doe. [Than cometh idelnesse, that is the yate of all harmes. An idell manne is like to a place that hath no walles; the devill maie enter on every side, or shote at him [that is] discoverte, by temptacion on every side. This idleness is the thornlike of all wicked and vileynous thoughtis and of all janglingis. Certes, blis of hevenc is yevē to hem that will labour, and not to idel folke. Also David saith, that thei ne be not in the labour of menne, ne thei shal not be whipped with men, that is to saie in Purgatorie. Certes, than semeth it thei shal be turmented with the devils in hell, but if thei do penance.]

Than cometh the sinne, that men call tarditas, as when a man is so latered, or tarying or he woll tourne to God; and certes, that is a grete foly. He is like him that falleth in the ditche, and woll not arise. And this vice cometh of fals hope, that he thinketh he shal live long, but that hope faileth full oft.

Than cometh lachesse, that is he that when he beginneth any gode worke, anon he woll leve and stur it, as doen thei that have any persone to governe, and ne take of him no more hede, anon as thei finde any contrary or any anoi. These ben the newe sheperdes, that let ther shepe wittingly go ren to the Wolfe, that is in the breres, or doe not force of ther owne governaunce. Of this cometh povertie and distruction, both of spirituall and temporell thinges. Than cometh a maner coldnesse, that freth the herte of man. Than cometh undevocion, through whiche a man is so blont, and as saith S. Bernard, hath soche langoure in his soule, that he maie neither redene sing in holy churche, ne here ne think of no devocion, ne travaile with his hondes in no gode worke, that it n'is to him unsavery and all apalled. Than wexeth he slow and slombry, and sone woll be wroth, and sone is enclined to hate and envy. Than cometh the sinne of worldly sorowe, soche as is called Tristitia, that slæth a man, as saith sainte Poule. For certes, soche sorowe worketh the deth of the soule and the bodie also; for thereof cometh that a man is anoied of his own life. Wherefore soche sorowe shorteth ful oft the life of man, er that his time is come by waie of kinde.

Remedium contra peccatum Accidie.

Yenst this horrible sinne of accidie, and the braunches of the same, there is a vertue that is called Fortitudo or strengthe, that is an affection, through whiche a man dispiseth anoyous thinges: this vertue is so mightie and so vigorous, that it dare dare withstonde mightlie, and wisely kepe himself fro perilles that ben wicked, and wraistell ayenst the assautes of the devill; for it enhaunceth and enforceth the soul, right as accidie abateth and maketh it feble; for this fortitude maie endure by long sufferance the travailles that ben covenable.

This vertue hath many speces; the first is called Magnanimitie, that is to saie, grete corage. For certes, there behoveth grete corage ayenst Accidie, lest that it ~~be~~ swallowe the soule by the sinne of sorowe, or distroie it by wanhope. Certes, this vertue maketh folke undertake hard and grevous thinges by their own will, wisely and resonably. And for as moche as the devil fighteth ayenst a manne, more by subtilite and sleight, than by strength, therefore shall a man withstonde him by wit, reson, and discrecion. Than are there the vertues of faith, and hope in GOD and in his sainctes, to ~~eschue~~ and accomplishe the gode workes, in the which he purposeth ferrely to continue. Than cometh suretie or sikernes, and that is whan a man ~~be~~ doubteth no traivale in time comming of the gode workes that he hath begon. Than cometh Magnificence, that is to saie, whan a man doth performe grete workes of godenes, that he hath begon; and that is th'ende, why that men should doe gode workes. For in th'accomplishing of gode workes lieth the grete guerdon. Than is there Constaunce, that is stablesnes of corage; and this should be in herte by stedfast faith, and in mouth, in bering, in chere, and in dede. Also there ben mo speciall remedies ayenst accidie, in divers workes; as in consideration of the paines of hell, the joyes of heven, and in trust of the grace of the Holy Ghost, that will yeve him might to performe his gode entent.

De Avaritia.

After Accidie, woll I speke of Avarice, and of Covetise. Of which sinne S. Poule saith: the rote of all harmes is Covetise. Ad Timoth. vi. For sothly, whan the hert of manne is confounded in it self and troubled; and that the soule hath lost the comforte of God, than seketh he an idell solace of worldly thinges.

Avarice, after the discripcion of S. Augustine, is a licoroussnes in hert to have yerthly thinges. Some other folke saie, that Avarice is for to purchace many yerthly thinges, and nothing to yeve to hem that have nede. And understonde, that avarice standeth not onely in lande ne cattell; but sometime in science and glorie, and in every maner of outragious thinges is avarice and covetise; and the difference betwixe avarice and covetise is this:

Covetise, is for to covete soche thinges, that thou hast nat; And Avarice is to withholde and kepe soch thinges, as thou hast without rightfull nede. Sothly, this avarice is a sinne, that is full dampnable, for all holy writ curseth it, and speketh ayenst that vice; for it doeth wrong to Jesu Christe; for it taketh fro him the love that men to him owe, and tourneth it backwarde ayenst all reson, and maketh that the avaricious man hath more hope in his cattell, than in Jesu Christe, and doth more observance in keping of his tresour, than he doeth in the service of Jesu Christe. And therefore saith saint Poule; Ad Ephesios quinto: That an avaricious man is the thraldome of Idolatrie.

What difference is there betwixt an Idolaster, and an avaricious man? But that an Idolaster, peraventure ne hath nat but a Maumet or two, and the avaricious manne hath many: For certes, every Florein in his cofer, is his Maumet. And certes, the sinne of maumerie, is the first that God defended, [as] in the x. commaundmentis, it berith witnes, in Exod. Capi. xx. Thou shalt have no false Goddes before me, ne thou shalt make to The no graven thing. Thus is an avaricious man that loveth his tresure before God, an Idolaster. And through this cursed sinne of avarice and covetise, cometh these hard lordshippes, through which thei ben streined by raylliagys, customes, and cariages, more than thei duetie or reson is; or els take thei of ther bonde menne amerciamentes, which might more resonably be called extorcions, than amerciamentes. Of which amerciamentes, or raunfoming of bondmen, some Lordes stewardes saie, that it is rightfull; for as muche as a churche hath no temporell thing, that it ne is his lordes, as thei saie. But certes, these lordshippes doe wrong, that bereve their bondmen thinges that thei never yave hem. Augustinus de Civitate Dei. Libro. ix. Sothe is that the condicion of thraldome, and the first cause of thraldome was for sinne. Jer. v.

Thus maie ye se, that the offence deserved thraldome, but nat nature. Wherefore these Lordes ne should not moche glorifie hem in ther Lordshippes, sihe that thei by naturall condicion ben not lordes over thralles; but for that thraldome came firste by the deserte of sinne. And more over, there is the Lawe saith, that temporell godes of bonde-folke ben the godes of ther Lordes; yea, that is for to understonde, the godes of the Emperour, to defende hem in ther right, but not to robbe hem ne reve hem. Therefore saith Seneca: Thy prudence should teche The for to live benignly with thy thral. Those, that thou callest thy thralles, ben Godd's peple; and for humble peple ben Christ's frendes, thei ben consubernal with the Lord.

Thinke also, that if soche sede as churles spring, of soche sede spring Lordes: As well may the chorle be saved as the Lord. The same deth that taketh the chorle, soche deth taketh the Lorde. Wherefore I rede doe right so with thy chorle, as thou wouldst that thy lorde did with The, if thou wer in his plight. Every sinfull manne is a chorle to sinne: I rede The, Lorde, certes, that thou werke in soche wise with thy chorles, that thei rather love The than drede The. I wote well, that there is degre above degre, [as reson is;] and skill is that manne doe ther devout, there as it is due. But certes, extorcions, and dispote of your underlinges is dampnable.

And ferthermore understande well, that these Conquerours, or Tyrautes, make full ofte thralles of hem, that ben borne of as roiall blode, as ben thei that hem conquer. This name of Thraldome was never erste knowe, till that Noe saied that his sonne Canaan should be thral to his brethren for his sinne. What saie we than of hem, that pil and doe extorcions to holie Church? Certes, the swerd that manne yeve first to a knight, whan he is newe dubbed, signifieth that he should defende holie Church, and not robbe and pill it; and whoso doeth is Traitor to Christe. And as saith saint Augustine, thei ben the Devill's Wolves, that strangle the Shepe of Jesu Christe, and doen worse than Wolves; for sothe-ly, whan the Wolfe hath full his wombe, he flinteth to strangle shepe: But sothly, the pillours and distroiers of holie Church godes, ne doe not so, for thei ne flinte never to pill. Now as I have saied, sih so is that sinne was first cause of thraldome, than is it thus, that at the time that all this worlde was in sin, than was all this worlde in thraldome, and in subjection; but certes, sihe the time of grace came, GOD ordained that some folke should be more hie in estate and in degre, and some folke more lowe, and that eche should be served after his estate and in degre. And therefore, in some countreis there thei be thralles, whan thei have tourned hem to the faith, thei

thei make ther thralles fre out of the thraldome; and therefore, certes the Lord oweth to his man, that the man oweth to the lorde. And thierfore the Pope clepyth himself servaunt of the servautes of God; but for as the estate of holy Churche ne might not have ben, ne the common profite might not have be kept, ne pece ne reste in erth, but if God had ordained that some manne hath hier degre, and some menne lower; Therefore was soverainte ordained to kepe, maintaine, and defende ther underlinges and ther subjectes in reson, as fer forthe as it lieth in ther power, and not to distroy ne confounde hem. Wherefore I saye, that those lordes that ben like wolves that devour the possessions or the cattell of pore folkes wrongfully, without mercy or mesure, they shall receive by the same mesure that they have mesured to pore folke the mercy of Jesu Christ, but it be amended. [Nowe cometh disceite betwixt marchaunt and marchaunt. And thou shalt understond that marchaundise is in two maners; that one is bodily, and that other is ghostly; that one is honest and lesful, and that other is dishonest and unlesful. The bodely marchaundise that is lesful and honeste is this: that there as God hath ordained that a reigne or a countrie is sufficiente and plenteous withinne himselfe, than it is honest and lesful that of haboundaunce of this countrie menne helpe an other countrie that is nedey: And there muste be marchauntes to bring fro one countrie to that other ther marchaundise. That other marchaundise that menne haunten with fraude, and trecherie, and disceite, with lesinges and false othes, is righte cursed and dampnable. Espirituell Marchaundise is properly Simonie, that is, ententise desire to bie any thing espirituell, that is a thinge, whiche apertaineth to the saintuarie of GOD, and to cure of [the] soule. This desire if so be that a manne do his diligence to perfourme it, all be it that his desire ne take none effect, yet it is to him a dedly sinne; and if he be ordred, he is irregular. Certes Simonie is called of Simon Magus, that would have boughte for temporell cattel the yeste that God had yeve by the Holy Ghost to Saint Peter, and to the Apostels: And therefore understonde, that he that selleth and he that bieth thinges espirituels, ben called Simoniackes, be it by cattell, be it by procuring or by fleschly praier of his frendes, fleschly frendes or espirituel frendes; fleschly in two maners, as by kined or other frendes: Sothly if they praie for him that is not worthy and able, it is Simonie if he take the benefice, and if he be worthy and able there is none. That other maner is whan man or woman praieth for folke to avaunce him onely for wicked fleschly affection which thei have unto the persons, and that is soule simonie. But certes in service, for whiche menne yeven thinges espirituell unto there servautes, it must be understonde that the service muste be honest, or els not, and also that it be without bargeining, and that the person be able. For as saith saint Damascen; All the sinnes of the worlde, at regarde of this sinne, are as thing of noughte; for it is the gretest sinne that maie be after the sinne of Lucifer and of Antichriste: For by this sinne GOD forleth the Church and the Soule, which he bought with his precious blode, by hem that yeve Churches to hem that ben nought able of cunnynge, for they put in there shondes that stele the soules of Jesu Christe, and distroie his patrimonie. By suche unworthy priestes and curates have leude menne lesse reverence of the Sacramentes of holy Church, and suche yevers of churches put the children of Christ out, and put in the Church the Devils owne sonnes; thei sell the soules of the lambys that thei shold kepe fro the wolf that strangyleth hem: and therefore shall they never have parte of the pasture of lambes, that is the blisse of Heven. [Nowe cometh hasardrie with his apurtynauncis, as tables and rafes, of whiche cometh disceite, false othes, chidinges, and all ravinette, blaspheminges, and renyings of God, and hate of his neighbours, waste of godes, mispendinge of time, and sometime manslaughter. Certes hasardours ne mowe not be without grete sinne whiles that thei haunte that craste. [Of Avarice cometh also lesinges, theft, false witnesse, and false othes; and ye shall understonde that these be grete sinnes, and expresse ayenst the commaundementes of God, as I have saide. False witnesse is in worde, and also in dede; In worde, as for to bireve thy neighbour's gode name by thy false witnesse, or bireve him his cattell or his heritage, by thy false witnessing, whan thou for ire or for mede, or for envie, berest false witnesse, or accusest him, or excusest thy selfe falsely. Ware ye questmongers and notaries; certes for false witnessing was Susan in ful grete sorow and paine, and many an other mo. The sin of theft is also expresse ayenst Godd's heft, and in two maners, corporel and spirituel; the temporell theft is; As for to take thy neighbour's cattel ayenst his will, be it by force or by sleight, be it by mette or by mesure; by steling also of false enditementes upon him, and in borrowing of thy neighbour's cattel, intentent never to pay it ayen, and semblable thinges. The Espirituel theft is sacrilege, that is to say, hurting of holy things sacred to Christ in two maners, by reson of the holy place, as churches or churchwais; For which every vilainous sinne that men done in suche places, may be called sacrilege, or every violence in the semblable places. Also thei that withdrawe falsely the rightes that long to holy church, and pleasing. And generally sacrilege is to reve holy thing fro holy place, or unholy thing out of holy place, or holy thinge out of unholy place.

Relevatio contra peccatum Avaritie.

Nowe shall ye understond, that a releving of Avarice is misericorde and pite largely taken. And menne might aske why that misericorde and pite are relevinge of Avarice? Certes the avaricious man sheweth no pite ne misericorde to the nedefull man. — For he deliteth him in the keping of his tresure, and nat in the rescuing ne releving of his evin-Christen: And therefore speke I first of misericorde. Than is misericorde (as saith the Philosopher) a virtue, by whiche the corage of manne is stered by the misere of him that is disesed: Upon whiche misericorde soloweth pite, in performing and fulfilling of charitable workes of mercy, helpeth and comforteth him that is misefed. And certes these thinges move and stere a man to misericorde of Jesu Christe, that he yave himselfe for our offence, and suffred deth for misericorde, and foryave us our original sinnes, and therby relefed us fro the paines of hell, and minished the paines of purgatory by penitens, and yeveth grace well to doe, and at laste the blisse of Heven. The spesces of misericorde ben for to releve, and also for to yeve; for to foryeve and relece, and for to have pite in herte and compassion of the mischiefe of his evin-Christen, and also to chastise there as nede is. An other maner of remedy ayenst Avarice, is resonable largesse; but sothly here behoveth the consideracion of that grace of Jesu Christ, and of the temporell godes, and also of the godes perdurable that Jesu Christ yafe to us, and to have remembrance of the deth whiche he shal receive, he knoweth not whan, where, ne who; and also that he shall forgo all that he hath, save onely that which he may dispende in worldly gode.

But for as muche, as some folke ben unmesurable, menne oughte for to avoide and eschue folish largesse, the whiche some peple call waste.

Certes

Certes, he that is fole large, yeveth not his cattell, but he lefeth his cattell.

Sothly what thing that he yeveth for vein-glory, as to minstrels and to folke that berē his renome in the world, he hath sinne thereof and none almesse: Certes he lefeth foule his gode that he ne seketh with the yest of his gode nothing but sinne. He is like to an horse that seketh rather to drinke drovy or troubled water, than for to drinke water of the clere wel. To hem apperteinen the faide cursing, that Christ shall yeve at the daie of dome, to hem that shall be dampned.

Sequitur de Guli.

After Avarice cometh Gloteny, which is expresse ayenst the commaundement of God. Gloteny is unmesurable appetite to ete or to drinke, or els to do inough to the unmesurable appetite, and disordeined covetise to ete or to drinke. This sinne corrupteth all this worlde, as is well shewed in the sinne of Adam and of Eve. Loke also what saith sainte Poule of gloteny. Many (saith he) gon, of whiche I have often said to you, and now I saye it weping, that ben the enemies of the crosse of Christ, of whiche the ende is deth, and of which ther wombe is ther God and ther glorie, in confusion of hem that so devour erthly thinges. He that is used to this sinne of Gloteny, he ne maie no sinne withsonde, he must be in servage of all vices; for it is the Devil's houre; therē he hideth, and resteth him. This sinne hath manie speces: The firste is dronkenesse, that is the horrible sepulture of mann's reson: and therefore whan a manne is dronke he hath losse his reson: And this is dedly sinne. But sothly whan that a manne is not wonte to stronge drinke, and paraventure ne knoweth not the strength of the drinke, or hath feblesse in his hed, or hath travailed, through whiche he drinketh the more, all be he so dainly caught with drinke, it is no dedly sinne, but veniall. The second spece of gloteny is, that the spirite of a manne wexeth al troubled; for dronkenesse bireveth him the discrecion of his wit. The thirde maner spece of Glotenie is whan a manne devourerth his mete, and hath no right full maner of eting. The fowerth is, whan through the grete abundaunce of his mete the humours in his body ben distempered. The fift is, soryetfulnesse by to moch drinking, for whiche sometime a man forgetteth er the morning what he did at even or the night byforne.

In other maner ben distinct the speces of glotenie, after sainte Gregorie. The first is, for to ete before time to ete. The second is, whan a man giveth him to delicate mete, or drinke. The third is, whan men take to moche over mesure. The fourth is, curiosite, with gret entent to make and appareill his mete. The fift is, for to ete to gredely.

These ben the five fingers of the devill's hond, by whiche he draweth folke to sinne.

The remedie ayenst Glotenie.

Ayenst Glotenie, the remedie is abstinence, as saith Galiene: but that I holde nat meritorious, if he doe it for the hele of his bodie. Sainte Augustine woll that abstinence be doen for vertue, and with pacience. Abstinence (saith he) is little worthe, but if a man have gode will thereto, and but if he be enforced by pacience and charite, and that men doe it for God's sake, and in hope to have blisse in heaven.

The fellowes of abstinence be attemperance, that holdeth the mene in all thinges; Also shame that eschueth al dishonestie. Suffisaunce, that seketh no riche metes ne drinkes, ne doeth no force of outrageous apparrelling of mete. Mesure also, that restraineth by reson, the unmesurable appetite of eting. Sobernesse also, that restraineth the outrage of drinke. Sparing also, that restraineth the delicate ete to sit longe at mete, wherfore some folke standen of ther owne will whan thei ete, bicause thei woll ete at litle lesure.

De Luxuria.

After Glotenie cometh lecherie; for these two sinnes ben so nigh cosins, that oft time thei wol nat depart. God wore this sin is ful displeant to God, for he sayd himself; doe no lecherie: And therefore he putteth grete paines ayenst this sinne of lecherie in the olde lawe.

For in the old law, if a woman thrall wer take in this sinne, she should be bete with staves to deth; And if she were a gentill woman, she should be slain with stones; And if she were a Bishop's daughter, she should be brent by God's commaundement.

More over by the sinne of Lecherie God drowned all the worlde, at the deluge of Noe; and after that he brent fire citees with thunder and lightning, and sanke hem into hell.

Now let us speke than of the said stinking sinne of Lecherie, that menne call avoutrie of wedded folke, that is to saie, if that one of hem ben weddid, or els bothe. Saint John saith, that avouterers shall be in hell, in stynke brenning of fire and of brimstone, for the stynche of the ordure. Certes the breking of this Sacramente is an horrible thing; it was made of God himself in Paradise, and confirmed by Jesu Christe, as witnesseth S. Mathew in the Gospel; A manne shall leve father and mothere, and take him to his wife, and thei shall be one fleche.

This Sacramente betokeneth the knytting together of Christe and holie Church. And not only that God forbade avoutrie in dede, but also he commaunded that thou shouldest not covete thy neighbour's wife. In this helle saith saint Augustine, is forbidden all maner covetise to do Lecherie. Lo! what saith saint Mathewe in the Gospel; that who so seeth a woman, to covetise of his luste, he hath doen Lecherie with her in his herte. Here maie ye se, that not onely the dede of this sinne is forbidden, but also the desire to that sinne. This curied sinne anoieteth grevously hem that it haunt; and first to ther soule, for he obligeth it to sinne, and to paine of deth, whiche is perdurable. Unto the bodie anoieteth it grevously also, for it drieth him and wasteth, and shenteth him, and of his blode he maketh Sacrifice to the fend of helle; It wasteth his cattell and his substaunce. And certes, if it be a foule thing, a manne to waste his cattell on women; yet it is a fouler thing, whan that for soche ordure women dispende upon menne, ther cattell and ther substaunce. This sinne, as saith the prophete, taketh from manne and woman ther gode same and ther honour; and it is full delectable, and plesant to the devill. For therby winneth he the more parte of this wretched worlde. And righte as a Marchaunte deliveth him moste in that chaffare, whiche he hath moste avauntage and profite of, right so deliveth the fend in this ordure.

This is that other honde of the devill, with five fingers, to catche the peple to his vilanie. The firste is the folishe loking of the folishe woman and of the folishe man, that sleeth right as the Basilisk for Covetise; sleeth folke by venom of his sight; for the covetise of the eyen foloweth the covetise of the herte. The

The second finger is the villainous touching in wicked maner. And therefore saith Salomon; that who so toucheth and handeleth a woman, he fareth as the manne that handeleth the scorpion, which stingeth and sodainly fleeth through his envemining; or as who so that toucheth warme pitch blemisheth his fingers. The thirde is soule wordes, whiche fareth like fire, whiche right anon brenneth the herte. The fourthe finger is the kissing: And truly he were a grete sole that would kisse the mouthe of a brenninge oven or of a forneis. And more soles ben they that kisse in vilanie, for that mouthe is the mouthe of hel, and namely these olde dotardes holours, whiche wolle kisse and flicker, and besie hem self though thei maie nought do. Certes thei ben like to houndes: For an hounde whan he cometh nigh to the roser, or by other benches, though he so be that they maie not pisse, yet wolle he heve up his legges, and make a countenance to pisse. And for that manie manne weneth that he maie not sinne for no licorousnesse that he doth with his wife; truly that opinion is false: God wote a manne maie se himselfe with his owne knife, and make himselfe dronke with his owne tonne. Certes be it wife, be it childe, or any worldly thing, that he loveth before God, it is his maumette, and he is an idolaster. A manne should love his wife by discrecion, patiently and attemperatly, and than is she as though it were his suster. The fiftthe finger of the Divell is honde is the stinking dede of lechery. Truly the five fingers of glotonie the Divell putteth into the wombe of a man; And with his five fingers of lecherye he gripeth him by the reines, for to throwe him into the forneis of Hell, there as they shall have the fire and the wormes that ever shall laste, and weping and wailing, and sharpe hungre and thrust, grimnesse of Divels, whiche shall all to trede hem withouten ende. [Of lecherie as I saide fourde and springeth divers speces; as fornicacion, that is betwene man and woman whiche be not married, and is dedly sinne, and ayenst nature: All that is enemye and distraccion to nature is ayenst nature. Perfaie the reson of a man telleth him wel also that it is dedly sinne, for as much as God forbade lecherie. And saint Poule yeveth hem the reigne that n'is dewe to no wight but to hem that done dedly sinne. Another sinne of lechery is to bireve a maides maidenhed; for he that dothe, certes he casteth a maiden out of the hiest degre that is in this presente life, and bireveth her that precious fruite that the boke calleth the hundreth fruites; I ne can saye it none other wife in Englishe, but in Latin it highte Cemesimus fructus. Certes he that so doth is the cause of many damages and vilanies, mo than any manne can reken; righte as he is cause of many damages sometime that bestes doe in the felde, that breke the hedge or the closure through which he distroiet that maie not be restored: For certes no more maye maidenhed be restored, than an arme that is smitte fro the bodie maie returne ayen and waxe. She maie have mercy, this wote I well, if that she have will to doe penitence; but never shall it be that she n'as corrupte. And all be it so that I have spoke somewhat of avoutrie, also it is gode to shewe the perilles that longe to avoutrie, for to eschewe that soule sinne. Avoutrie in latin is for to saie, approching of an other mann's bedde; through whiche those that sometime were one fleshe, abandon ther bodies to other persons. Of this sinne as saith the wise man folowe many harmes: Firste breking of faithe, and certes in faithe is the keye of christendome: and whan that faithe is broke and losse, sothly christendom stont veine and withoute fruite. This sinne is also a theef; for theste generally is to reve a wight his thing ayenst his will. Certes, this is the foulest theft that may be, whan that a woman steleth her body fro her husbonde, and yeveth it to her holour to de-foyle her, and steleth her soule fro Christe, and yeveth it to the Devill: This is a fouler theste than for to breke a churche and stele away the chalice; for these avouterers breke the temple of God spiritu-ally, and stele the vessell of grace that is the bodie and the soule; For whiche Christe shall distroy hem, as saith saint Poule. Sothely of this theste douted gretly Joseph, whan that his Lord's wife prayed him of vilanie, whan he saide; Lo my Lady how my Lorde hath take to me under my warde, all that he hath in this world, ne nothing of his thinges is out of my power, but onely ye that be his wife; and how should I than do this wickednesse and sinne so horrible ayenst God, and ayenst my lorde! God it forbode. Alas! all to litell is suche trouthe now founde. The third harme is the filth, through which thei breke the commaundement of God, and defoyle the auter of matrimonie, that is Christ. For certes, in so muche as the Sacrament of mariage is so noble and so digne, so muche it is greter sin for to breke it: For God made mariage in paradise in the estate of innocencie, to multiplie mankinde in the service of God, and therefore is the brekinge thereof the more grevous; of whiche brekinge come false heires oft time, that wrongfully occupie folkes heritages; and therefore wolle Christe putte hem out of the reigne of heaven, that is heritage to gode folke. Of this brekinge cometh also oft time that folke unware wedde or sin with ther own kinrede; and namely these harlottes that haunte bordels of these soule women, that maie be likened to a commune gonge, where as menne poure ther ordure. What saie we also of putours, that live by the horrible sinne of putrie, and constreine women to yeve to hem a certaine rente of ther bodely puterie; yea sometime of his own wife or his childe; as don these baudes: Certes, these ben cursed sinnes. Understonde also that avoutrie is sette gladly in the ten commaundementes betwene theste and manslaughter; for it is the gretest theste that maie be, for it is theste of bodie and of soule; and it is like to homicide, for it kerveth a two and breketh a two hem that firste were made of one fleshe. And therefore by the olde lawe of GOD they should be slaine; but nathelesse by the lawe of Jesu Christ, that is law of pite, whan he said to the woman that was founde in avoutrie, and should have be slaine with stones after the will of the Jewes, as was ther lawe: God said Jesu Christ, and have no more will to do sinne. Sothely the vengeance of avoutrie is awarded to the paines of Hell, but if so be that it be distroyd by penitence. [Yet ben there mo speces of this cursed sinne, as whan that one of hem is religious or els bothe, or of folke that ben entred into ordre, as Subdeken, Deken, or Prieste, or hospitaliers: And ever the hier that he is in ordre, the greter is the sinne. The thinges that gretly agredge ther sinne is the breking of ther avowe of chastite, whan they receiveth the ordre. And more over sothe is that holy order is chefe of all the tresorie of GOD and his especie signe and marke of chastite, to shew that they ben joyned to chastite, whiche is the moste precious life that is; and these ordred folke ben specially titled to God and of the speciall meine of GOD, for whiche whan they doen dedly sinne they ben the traitours of GOD and of his peple, for they live by the peple for to preye for hem: Priestes ben Aungelles as by the dignite of ther misterie; but forsoth saint Poule saith, that Sathanas transfourmeth him in an Aungell of lighte. Sothely the Prieste that haunteth dedly sinne he may be likened to the Aungell of darkenesse, transfourmed in the Aungell of light; he semeth Aungell of light, but forsoth he is Aungell of darknesse. Such Priestes be the sonnes of

b. l. 67. after hem. And whiles they ben such traitours, her prayer availleth nought to the peple.

of Hely, as sheweth in the boke of Kinges, that they were the sonnes of Beliall, that is, the Divell. Beliall is to saie without judge, and so fare they; hem thinketh they be fre and have no judge, no more than hath a fre bulle that taketh whiche Cowe that him liketh in the toun. So fare thei by women, for right as one fre Bull is inough for all a toun, right so is a wicked Prielt corrupcion inough for all a parishe, or for al a countrey: These Priestes, as saith the boke, ne can not minstre the misterie of priesthode to the peple, ne they know not GOD, they ne helde hem not apayed, as saith the boke, of foddren fleshe that was to hem ofsted, but they toke by force the fleshe that was raw. Certes, so these firewesne helde hem not apayed of rosted and sodde fleshe, with whiche the peple fedde hem in grete reverence, but they woll have rawe fleshe of folkes wives and ther doughters; and certes these women that consent to ther harlotry don grete wrong to Christ and to holy Church, all Halowes, and all Soules; for they bireve all these hem that should worship CHRIST and holy Church, and praie for christen Soules; and therefore have suche Priestes and ther lemans also that consent to ther lecherie, the cursing of all the courte christien, till they come to amendement. [The thirde spece of avoutrie is somtime betwixt a manne and his wife, and that is whan they take no regarde in ther assembling, but onely to ther fleshy delite, as saith saint Jerome, and ne reken of nothing but that they ben assembled bicause they ben married, all is gode inoughe, as they thinke; but in suche folke hath the Divell power, as said the angel Raphael to Tobie, for in ther assembling they put Jesu Christe out of ther herte, and yeve hem selfe to all ordure. [The fourthe spece is the assemble of hem that ben of one affinite, or els of hem, with which ther fathers or ther kinred have deled in the sinne of lecherie: This sinne maketh hem like to houndes, that take no kepe to kinrede. And certes parentele is in two maners; either ghostly or fleshy: ghostly as for to dele with his godfibre; for right so as he that engendreth a childe is his fleshy father, right so is his Godfather his father espiituell; for whiche a woman may in no lesse sinne assemble with her Godfibre, than with her owne fleshy brother. [The fifthe spece is that abominable sinne, of whiche abominable sinne no man unneth ought speke ne write; nathelesse it is openly rehersed in holy writ. This cursed sinne doen menne and women in divers entent and in divers maner: But though that holy writte speke of horrible sinne, certes holy writte maie not be defoiled, no more than the sunne that shineth on the donghill. [An other sin apperteineth to lechery that cometh sleping, and this sinne cometh often to hem that ben maidens, and also to hem that be corrupt; and this sinne menne cal Pollucion, that cometh of iiii maners; Somtime of languishing of bodie, for the humours ben to ranke and habundaunt in the body of man; sometime of infirmitie, for febleness of the vertue retentive, as phisike maketh mention; Somtime for surfete of mete and drinke, and sometime of villainous thoughtes that ben enclosed in mann's minde whan he goeth to slepe, whiche maie not be without sinne, for whiche menne muste kepe hem wisely, or els maie men sinne ful grevously.

Remedium contra peccatum luxuria.

NOwe cometh the remedie ayenst lechery, and that is generally chastite and continence, that restrayne all disordinate mevinges that comē of fleshy talentes. And ever the greter merite shall he have that most restrineth the wicked chaufinges of the ordour of this sin; and this is in two maners; That is to saie, chastite in mariage, and chastite in widowhede. Nowe shalte thou understonde that matrimony is lesful assembling of man and woman that receiven, by vertue of this Sacrament, the bonde through whiche they maie not be departed in all ther life, that is to say, while that thei live bothe. This, as saith the boke, is a ful grete sacrament; God made it, as I have said, in paradise, and wold himselfe be borne in mariage: and for to halowe mariage he was at a weddinge, where as he tourned water into wine, whiche was the first miracle that he wrought in erth before his disciples. Trewerfecte of mariage clenseth fornicacion and replenisheth holy church of gode linage, for that is the ende of mariage, and chaungeth dedly sinne into veniall sin, bitwene hem that ben wedded, and maketh the hertes as one of hem that ben wedded, as well as the bodies.

Very mariage was established by God, er that sinne began, whan naturall lawe was in his right pointe in Paradise. And it was ordained that o man should have but o woman, and o woman but o man, as saith saint Augustin, by many reasons:

First, for mariage is figured betwix Christ and holy church.

Another is for a man is hed of a woman, alway by ordinaunce it should be so. For if a woman had mo menne than one, than should she have mo hedes than one, and that were a right horrible sinne before God; and also a woman mighte not plesse so many folke at ones; and also there should never be reste ne quiete among hem, for eche of hem would aske ther owne righte. And furthermore, no manne should knowe his owne engendrure, ne who shoulde have his heritage, and the woman should be the lesse beloved fro that time that she were comitted to many menne.

Now cometh how that a man should bere him with his wife, and namely in two thinges: that is to saye, in sufferance and reverence, as shewed Christe whan he first made woman. For he ne made her of the hed of Adam, for she should nat claime to grete lordshippe; for there as the woman hath the maistrice, she maketh to much variaunce, there nede no mo ensample of this, the experience of this day by day ought inough suffice.

Also certes, God ne made not woman of the fore of Adam, for she should not be holde to lowe, for she cannot paciently suffre; but God made woman of the ribbe of Adam, for woman should be felow unto man.

Man should bere him to his wife in faith, in trouth, and in love (as saith sainte Poule) that a man should love his wife, as Christ loveth holy Church, that loved it so well that he died for it: So should a man die for his wife, if it were nede.

Now how that a woman should be subject to her husbunde; that telleth S. Peter, first in obedience. And also as saith the Decree: a woman that is a wife, as long as she is a wife, she hath none authorite to swere ne bere witnesse, without leave of her housebunde, that is her Lorde; alwaie he should be so by reson. She should also serve him in al honeste, and be temperate of her arraie.

I wold well that thei should set ther entent to plesse ther husbondes, but nat by queintise of ther arraie. Sainte Jerom saith; Wives that be appareiled in silke and precious purple, ne mowe not clothe hem in Jesu Christe. S. Gregorie saith also; that no wight seketh precious array, but onely for vainglory, to be honoured the more of the peple. It is a grete folie, a woman to have gret arraie outward, and in her self be soule inward. A wife shuld also be mesurable in loking, in bering, and in lauguing, and discrete in all her wordes and her dedes, and above all worldly thinges, she should love her husbunde with al her hert, and to him be true of her body; she should an husbonde be to his wife: For sith that all the body is the husbondes, and the husbonde is the wyv's, so should her hert be, or els ther is betwixt hem two, as in that no perfite mariage. [Than shal men understonde, that for thre thinges, a manne and his wife fleshely maie assemble. The firste is, for th' entent of engendrure of children, to the service of God; for certes, that is the cause final of matrimonic. An other cause is, to yeld eche of hem to other the debtes of ther bodies; for neither of hem hath power over ther own bodies. The thirde is, for to eschue lecherie and vilanie. The fowerth is, forsooth dedly sinne. As to the first, it is meritorie: the second also, for as saith the Decree, that she hath merite of chastite, that yeldeth to her husbonde the debte of her bodie, ye though it be ayenst her liking, and the lust of her hert. The third maner is veniall sinne; and truly scarce maie any of these be without veniall sinne, for the corrupcion and for the delite. The fowerth maner is for to understonde, if thei assemble onely for amorous love, and for none of the forsaied causes, but for to accomplishe the brenning delite, thei reeke not how oite, sothly it is dedly sinne: and that with sorowe some folke woll pain hem more to doe, than to ther appetite suffiseth.

The second maner of chastite, is for to be a clene widowe, and eschue the enbrasinges of a man, and desire the enbrasing of Jesu Christe. These ben those that have ben wives, and have forgone ther husbondes; and also women that have doen lecherie, and ben received by penitence. And certes, if that a wife could kepe her all chaste, by licence of her husbende, so that she yeve never none occasion that he offende, it wer to her a grete merite. This maner of women that observeth chastite, mote ben clene in herte as well as in body, and in thought, and mesurable in clothing and in countenance, abstinent in eting and drinking, in speking, and in dede, she is the vessel of the boxe of the blessed Magdelain, that fulfilleth holy Church of gode odour. The thirde maner of chastite is virginite, and it behoveth that she be holy in hert, and clene of bodie, than is she spouse of Jesu Christe, and she is the life of Augels: she is the prailing of this World, and she is as these martyrs in regality; she hath in her, that tong maie not tel, ne herte thinke. Virginite bare our Lorde Jesu Christ, and virgin was himself.

An other remedie against lecherie, is specially to withdrawe soche thinges, as yeve occasion to that vilanie; as ese, cting, and drinking: for certes, when the pot boileth strongly, the best remedie is to withdrawe the fire. Sleeping long in grete quiet is also a grete nourice to Lecherie.

An other remedie ayenst lecherie is that a manne or a woman eschue the companie of hem, by whiche he doubteth to be tempted: For all be it so that the dede is withstode, yet is there grete temptacion. Sothly, a white wall, although it ne brenne not fully, by sticking of the Candell, yet is the wall black of the leyte. Full oft time I rede, that no man trust in his owne perfection, but he be stronger than Sampson, or holier than Daniell, or wiser than Salomon.

Now after that I have declared you, as I can, the seven dedly sinnes, and some of ther braunches, with ther remedies; Sothly if I could, I would tell you the ten commaundementes, but so hie doctrine I put to divines. Nathlesse I hope to God, thei ben touched in this tretise in Englishe eche of hem. [D. 1. 1.]

Sequitur secunda pars penitentiae.

NOW forasmoche as the second part of penitence stonde in confession of mouth, as I began in the first cap. I saie saint Augustine saith; Sin is every word and every dede, and all that men conveyen ayenst the lawe of Jesu Christe, and this is for to sinne in herte, in mouthe, and in dede, by the five wittes, whiche ben sight, hering, smelling, tasting or savoure, and feling. Now is it gode to understande, that that agregeth moche every sinne. Thou shalte consider what thou art that doest the sinne, whether thou be male or female, young or old, gentill or thrall, fre or servaunt, hole or sicke, weddid or single, ordred or unordred, wise or sole, clerke or secular, if she be of thy kinrede bodily or ghostly, or no, if any of thy kinrede have sinned with her or no, and many mo thinges.

An other circumstance is this, whether it be doen in fornicacion, or in advoutrie or no, in theeste or noon, in mayden or noon, in maner of homicide or no, horrible grete sinnes or smalle, and howe longe thou hast continued in sinne. The thirde circumstance is, the place there thou hast doen sin, whether in other mennes houses, or in thine own, in field, in church or in churchyarde, in church dedicate or no. For if the church be halowed, and man or woman spill his kinde within that place, by waie of sinne or wicked temptacion, the church is enterdited, tyl it were reconfyled by the Bychfehope; and the priest that did soche a vilanie, the terme of all his life; he should no more sing Masse, and if he did, he should doe dedly sinne, at every time that he so song Masse. The fowerth circumstance is, by whiche mediatours or by whiche messengers, or for enticement, or for consentment, to bere companie with felowshippe. For many a wretche for to bere companie, woll go to the devill of hell.

Wherefore, thei that egge or consente to the sinne, ben parteners of the sinne, and of the dampnacion of the sinner. The fifth circumstance is, how many times that he hath sinned, if it be in his minde, and how oft he hath fallen. For he that oft falleth in sinne, he dispiseth the mercie of God, and encrefeth his sinne, and is unkinde to Christe, and he wexeth the more feble to withstande sinne, and sinneth the more lightly, and the later riseth, and is more slowe to shrive him, and namely to him that is his confessor. For whiche that folke when thei fall ayen to ther olde folies, either thei leve their old confessor, or els thei depart ther shrifte in divers partes. But sothly soche departed shrifte deserveth no mercie of God for ther sinnes. The sixte circumstance is, why that a man sinneth; as by temptacion; and of him self procure that temptacion, or by the exciting of other folke, or if he sin with a woman by force or by her assente, or if the woman maugre her hed, have be forced or none. This shall she tell, whether it were for covetise or for povertie, or if it were by her procurement or no, and soche other thinges.

The seventh circumstance is, in what maner he hath doe his sinne, or how that she hath suffred that folke have doe to her. And the same shall the manne tell plainly, with all the circumstances, and whether he hath sinned with common bordell-women or none, or doen his sinne in holy times, or none, in fasting time or none, or before his shrift, or after his latter shrifte, and hath paraventure broke thereby his penance enjoined; by whose helpe or whose counsaile, by forcery or craft; all must be tolde; and al these thinges after as thei be gret or smale, agrege the conscience of manne or woman. And eke the priest, that is thy judge, maye the better be avised of his judgement in yeving of penance, and that is after thy contricion. For understonde well that after time that a man hath deffiled his baptism by sinne, if he wol come to salvacion, there is none other waie but by penance, shrifte, and satisfaction, and namely by thei two, if there be a confessor to whom he maie shrive him, and the thirde if he have life to performe it. Than shall a man loke and consider, that if he wolle make a trewe and a profitable confession, there must be foure condicions. First it must be in sorowfull bitternesse of hert, as saith the king Ezekiah to God, I wol remembre me all the yeres of my life in bitternesse of my herte. This condicion of bitternesse hath five signes. The first is, that confession must be shamefast, not for to cover ne hide ther sinne, for he hath offended his Lorde God, and defouled his soule. And herof saith S. Augustin; The hert travaileth for shame of his sinne, and for he hath grete shamefastnesse he is worthy to have gret mercy of God; whiche was the confession of the Publican, that would not heve up his eyen to heaven, for he had offended God of lieven: for which shamefastnesse he had anon the mercy of God. And therof saith saint Augustin: that suche shameful folke be nixte foryevnesse and mercy.

An other signe is humilite in confession of whiche saith saint Peter: Humbleth you under the mighte of GOD: the honde of God is strong in confession, for therby God foryeveth the thyssinnes, for he alone hath the power. And this humilite shal be in hert, and in outward signes: For right as he hath humilite to God in his hert, right so should he humble his body outwarde to the priest, that sitteth in Goddis stede. For which in no maner (sith that Christ is soveraine, and the priest mene and mediator betwixt Christ and the sinner, and the sinner is the laste by waie of reson) Than should not the sinner sitte as hie as his confessour, but knele before him or at his fete, but if sickenesse cause it: For he shall not rake hede who sitteth there, but in whose place he sitteth. A manne that hath trespassed to a Lorde, and cometh to aske mercie and make his accorde, and sitteth him doune, by him, men would hold him outrageous and not worthie so fone for to have remission for his trespasses.

The thirde signe is, howe thy shrift should be full of teres if thou maig; and if thou maie not wepe with thy bodily eyen, than wepe in thine herte, whiche was the confession of saint Peter. For after that he had forsake Jesu Christ, he went out and wepte ful bitterly.

The fourth signe is, that thou ne lette not for shame to shewe thy confession: Such was the confession of Magdalein, that ne spared for no shame of hem that were at the fest, to go to our Lord Jesu Christ and beknew to him her sinnes. The fiftie signe is, that a manne or a woman be obeisaunte to receive the penance that hem is enjoined. For certes Jesu Christ, for the offences of man was obedient to deth. [The seconde condicion of very confession is, that it be hastily done. For certes, if a man had a dedly wounde, ever the lenger that he tarieth to hele him self, the more would it corrupt and haste him to his deth, and also the wounde would be the worse for to hele. And right so fareth sinne, that longe time is in a manne unshewed. Certes a man oughte hastily shewe his sinnes for manie causes; as for drede of deth, that cometh oft sodainly, and no certaine what time it shall be, ne in what place; and also the drenching of o sinne draweth inyan other: and also the lenger that he tarieth the farther he is fro Christ. And if he abide to his last daie, scarcely maie he shrive him or amende hym for his sinnes, or repente for the grevous malady of his deth. And for as muche as he ne hath in his life herkened Jesu Christ whan he hath spoken, he shall crie to Jesu Christ at his last daie, and scarcely wolle he herken him. And understonde that this condicion muste have four thinges.

Thy shrift must be provided before and arised, for wicked hast doth no profite, if a man shrive him of his sinnes; be it of pride, or envy, and so forth with the spesces and circumstaunces of sinne. And that he have comprehended in his minde the nombre and gretenesse of his sinnes, and howe longe he hath lien in sinne. And also that he hath be contrite for his sinnes, and in stedfast purpose (by the grace of God) never ayen to fal to sinne. And also that he drede and coutherwayte himselfe that he shal the occasion of sinne, to whiche he is enclined. Also thou shalt shrive The of all thy sinnes to o manne, and nat parte to o manne, and parte to another, That is to understonde, in intent to departe thy confession for shame or drede, for it is but strangling of thy soule. For certes Jesu Christ is entirely all gode, in him is none imperfection, and therefore ether he foryeveth al perfetely, or els never a dele. I saie nat that, if thou be assigned to thy penitencer for certaine sin, that thou are bounde to shewe him all the remnant of thy sinnes, of whiche thou hast be shriven of thy curate, but if it like to The of thy humilite, for this is no departinge of shrifte: Ne I say not there as I speke of division of confession, that if thou have licence to shrive The to a discrete and honeste man, a gode priest, and where The liketh, and by licence of thy curate, that thou ne maigste well shrive The to him of all thy sinnes. Lette no sinne be untolde as ferre as thou haste remembraunce. And whan thou shalt be shriven to thy curat, tell him all thy sinnes that thou hast do sithe thou were last shriven. This is no wicked intent of division of shrifte.

Also the very shrift asketh certaine condicions. Firste that thou shrive The by thy fre will, nat constrained for shame of folke, sicknesse, ne such other thinges. For it is reson, that he that trespasseth by his fre will, that by his fre will he confesse his trespass, and that none other man tel his sin but himself, ne he shal nat nay ne deny his sin, ne wrathe him ayenst the priest for amonesting him to leave his sin. The seconde condicion is that thy shrift be lausfull, that is to saie, that thou shrivest The, and also the priest that hereth thy confession be verely in the faith of holy church, and that a man ne be not dispeired of the mercy of Jesu Christe, as Cain or Judas. And also a man must accuse himself of his owne trespass and not an other, but he shall blame and wite himselfe and his owne malice of his sinne, and none other: But nathelesse, if that an other man be occasion or enticer of his sinne, or the estate of a person be soche by whiche his sinne is agreeded, or els that he maie not plainly shrive him, but he tel the persone with whiche he hath sinned, than maie he tell, so that his entente ne be not to backbite the persone, but onely to declare his confession.

Thou ne shalt not also make no lesinges in thy confession for humilite, paraventure, to saie that thou hast commised and doen soche sinnes, as of which that thou ne wer never gilty. For saint Augustin saith, if that thou because of thine humilite, makest lesinges on thy self, though thou wer not in sinne before, yet arte thou than in sinne through thy lesing. Thou must also shewe thy sinne, by thine owne proper mouth (but thou be dombe) and not by no letter: for thou that haste doen the sinne, shalt have the shame therefore. Thou shalt not eke paint thy confession with faire subtell wordes, to cover the more thy sinne; for than begilest thou thy self, and nat the priest; thou must tell it plain, be it never so foule ne horrible. Thou shalt also shrive The to a priest that is discrete to counsaile The; and also thou shalt not shrive The for vainglorie, ne for ipocrisie, ne for no cause, but onely for the love and fere of Jesu Christ, and hele of thy soule. Thou shalt nat also ren to the priest sodainly, to tell him lightly thy sinne, as who saith, to tell a jape or a tale, but advisedly and with gode devocion: and generally shrive The ofte, if thou ofte fall, ofte arise by confession.

And

And though thou thrive The oſter than ones of the ſinne, whiche thou haſte be ſhriven of, it is the more merite, And, as ſaith ſainct Auguſtine, thou ſhall have the more lightly foryevenesse and grace of God, bothe of ſinne and pain. And certes ones a yere at leſt, it is lawfull to be houſeled, for ſurely ones a yere all thinges renovellen.

Now have I tolde you of veric confeſſion, that is the ſecond part of penitence.

Explicit ſecunda pars poenitentia: Et ſequitur tertia pars.

THE thirde part of penitence is ſatisfaction, and that ſtonte moſt generally in almoſe dede and bodily paine. Now ben there thre maner of almoſe. Contricion of herte, where a man offreth himſelf to God. An other is, to have pitie of the defaultis of his neighbour. And the third is, in giving of gode counſaile, ghofly and bodily, where as men have nede, and namely in ſuſtenaunce of mann's fode. And take kepe that a man hath nede of theſe thinges generally; he hath nede of fode, of clothing, and of herborowe; he hath nede of charitable counſaile, viſiting in priſon: in ſickeneſſe, and ſepulture of his bodie. And if thou maielt not viſite the nede-ful in priſon in thy perſon, viſite hem with thy meſſage and yeſtes. Theſe ben generally the almoſe and workes of charitie, of hem that have temporell richesse, or diſcrecion in counſailing. Of theſe workes ſhalt thou here at the daie of dome

Theſe almoſe ſhalt thou doe of thine own proper thinges, and haſtely and prively if thou maielt: but natheleſſe, if thou maielt nat doe it prively, thou ſhalt not forbere to doe almoſe though men ſe it, ſo that it be not doe for thanke of the worlde, but only for thanke of Jeſu Chriſt. For as witneſſeth ſainct Mathewe. Capi. v. A cite maie not be hid that is ſet on a mountaine, ne men light nat a lanterne, to put it under a buſhell, but ſet it upon a condilſticke, to yeve light to menne in the hous. Right ſo ſhall your light light before menne, that thei maie ſe your gode workes, and glorifie our father that is in heven.

Now as to ſpeke of bodily pain, it ſtonte in praiers, waking, faſting, vertuous teching of oriſons. And ye ſhall underſtonde, that oriſons, or praiers, is to ſaie, a pitous will of hert, that ſetteth it in God, and expreſſeth by worde outward to remeve harmes, and have thinges ſpirituell and perdurable, and ſometime temporell thinges. Of whiche oriſons, certes in the oriſon of the Pater noſter hath Jeſu Chriſt enclosed moſte thinges. Certes it is privileged of thre thinges, in his dignite, for whiche it is more digne than any other praier, for that Jeſu Chriſte himſelf made it, and it is ſhort, for it ſhould be lerned the more lightly, and to hold it the more eſie in hert, and helpe himſelf the oſter with that oriſon: And for a man ſhould be the leſſe very to ſay it, and nat excuſe him to lerne it, it is ſo ſhort and eſie, and for it comprehendeth in it ſelf, all gode praiers. The expoſicion of this holie praier, that is ſo excellent and digne, I refer to the maiſters of Theologie; ſave thus moche wol I ſaie, that whan thou praieſt, that God ſhould foryeve The thine offences, as thou foryeveſt hem that have offended The, be well ware that thou be nat out of charite. This holy oriſon aminiſheth alſo veniall ſin, and therefore it appertaineth ſpecially to penitence.

This praier muſte be truly ſaied, and in parſite faith, and that men praie to God ordinatly, diſcretely, and devoutly; and alwaie a manne ſhall put his will to be ſubject to the will of God. This oriſon muſt alſo be ſaied with grete humbleſſe, and full pure and honeſtly, and not to the anoiaunce of any man or woman. It muſt alſo be continued with the workes of charite. It availeth alſo ayenſt the vices of the ſoule; for as ſaith S. Jerom by faſting ben ſaved the vices of the fleſhe, and by praier the vices of the ſoule.

After this thou ſhalt underſtonde, that bodily payne ſtonte in waking. For Jeſu Chriſte ſaith; wake ye and praie, that ye ne entre into wicked temptacion. Ye ſhall underſtonde alſo, that faſting ſtonte in thre thinges; in forbering of bodily mete and drinke, in forbering of worldely jolite, and in forbering of dedly ſinne; this is to ſaie, that a man ſhall kepe him fro dedly ſinne with all his might.

And thou ſhalt underſtonde alſo, that God ordained faſting, and to faſting partaineth four thinges. Largeneſſe to pore folke, gladneſſe of herte ſpirituell; nat to be angrie ne anoied, ne grutche for he faſteth, and alſo reſonable houre to ete by meſure, that is to ſaie, a man ſhall not ete in untyme, ne ſit the lenger at the table for he faſteth.

Than ſhalt thou underſtonde, that bodily pain ſtonte in diſcipline, or teching by worde or writing, or by enſample. Alſo in wering of here or ſtamin, or of habergeons on ther naked fleſhe for Chriſt's ſake; but be welc awaard that ſoch maner penaunces ne make nat thine herte bitter or angrie, ne anoied of thy ſelf; for better is to caſt awaie thin here, than to caſt awaie the ſweteneſſe of Jeſu Chriſte. And therefore ſaith ſaincte Poule: clothe you, as thei that ben choſen of God in hert, of miſericorde, debonaite, ſuffraunce, and ſoche maner of clothing, of whiche Jeſu Chriſt is more plesed than with the heres or herbergeons.

Than is diſcipline alſo in knocking of thy brest, in ſcourging with rodde, in kneeling, in tribulacion, in ſuffring patiently wronges that ben doen to The, and alſo in pacient ſuffring of ſickeneſſe, or leſing of worldly godes or cattell, or wife, child, or other frendes.

Than ſhalt thou underſtonde, whiche thinges diſflourbe penaunce, and that is in fower maners; drede, ſhame, hope, and wanhope, that is desperacion. And for to ſpeke firſt of drede, for which he weneth that he maie ſuffre no penaunce, There ayenſt is remedy, for to thinke that bodily penaunce is but ſhorte and little, at regard of the pain of hell, that is ſo cruel and ſo longe, that it laſteth without ende.

Now ayenſt the ſhame that a man hath to thrive him, and namely theſe Ipocrites, that would be holde ſo parſite, that thei have no nede to thrive hem. Ayenſt that ſhame ſhould a man thinke, that by waie of reſon, that he that hath nat be aſhamed to doe foule thinges, certes him ought not be aſhamed for to doe faire thinges, and that is confeſſions. A manne ſhould alſo think, that God ſeeth and knoweth all his thoughtes, and all his werkes; to him maie nothing be hid ne covered. Men ſhould alſo remember hem of the ſhame that is to come at the daie of dome, to hem that be nat penitent, and ſhriven in this preſent life; for al the cretures, in yerth and in hell ſhall ſe apertly all that thei hid in this worlde.

Now for to ſpeke of the hope of hem, that ben ſo negligente and ſlowe to thrive hem; that ſtondeth in two maners. That one is, that he hopeth for to live long, and for to purchaſe moche richesse for his delite, and than he woll thrive him. And as he ſaith; him ſemeth than timely inough to come to ſhrifte. An other is, of ſurquidrie that he hath in Chriſt's mercie: Ayenſt the firſt vice, he ſhall thinke that our life is no ſikeneſſe, and alſo that all the riches in this worlde ben in adventure, and paſſe as a ſhadowe on the wal. And as ſaith ſainct Gregorie, that it appartaineth to the grete rightwiſeneſſe of God, that never ſhall the paine ſtinte of hem, that never never would withdrawe 'hem fro sinne ther thankes, but ever continued in sinne; for that perpetuell will to doe sinne, shall thei have perpetuell paine. Wanhope is in two maners. The first wanhope is, in the mercie of God. That other is, that thei think that thei ne might not long persever in godenes.

The firste wanhope cometh of that, he demeth that he hath sinned so gretly and so oft, and so long lien in sinne, that he shal not be saved. Certes ayenst that cursed wanhope should he thinke, that the Passion of Jesu Christe is more strong for to unbinde, than sinne is strong for to binde. Ayenst the second wanhope he shall thinke, that as often as he falleth, he maie rise again by penitence; and though he never so long hath lien in sinne, the mercie of Christ is alwaie redy to receive him to mercie. Ayenst the Wanhope that he demeth he should not long persever in godenesse, he shall thinke that the feblenesse of the devill maie nothing be, but if men wol suffre him; and also he shall have strength of the helpe of Jesu Christ, and of all holy church, and the protection of angels, if him list.

Than shall men understonde, what is the fruct of penaunce; and after the wordes of Jesu Christ, it is an endlesse blisse of heven. There joie hath never ende, no contrarie of wo ne grevaunce; there all harmes ben passed of this presente life, there as is the sikernes fro the paine of hell, there as is the blisfull companie, that rejoyce 'hem ever mo, everiche of other's joye: there as the body of man that sometime was foule and derke, is more clere than the Sunne: there as the body that sometime was sicke, freile, and feble, and mortall, is immortall, and so strong and hole, that there ne maie appeire: there as is neither hungre, thurst, ne colde, but every soule replenished with the sight of the parfit knowing of God. This blisfull reigne maie men purchase by povertie espiuell, and the glorie by lownesse, the plente of joie by hungre and thurst, and the reste by traveile, and the life by deth, and mortification of sinne: to whiche life he us bring, that bought us with his precious blode. Amen.

Here endeth the PARSON'S TALE.

What follows is published out of MS. Ch. with some amendments out of other MSS. where the sense required it.

May preye I to hem alle; that herken this litte tretise or reden it, that if ther be any thing in it, that likith hem, that theroff they thanke our Lord Jesu Crist, of whom procedith all witte and all godenesse; and if there be any thing that displeith hem, I preye hem also that they arrette it to the defawte of myn uncunninge, and nat to the wille of my simple witte, that wold full fayn have seyde bettere; if that I hadde had cuninge: for oure Boke seythe, all that is writen is writen for our doarine, and that is myn entent. Wherefore I beseeke you mekelle for the mercie of God, that ye preye for me; that Crist have mercie on me, and forgyve me my giltes, and namely for my transacions and enditinges of worldye vaniteis, the whiche I reboke me in my Retractions; as is the Boke of Troylus, the boke also of Fame, the boke of Sainte Valentines Day, of the Parlement of Birdis, the boke of the xiiij Ladies, the Tales of boke of the.

Here endeth the Tales of Canterbury, compiled by

Canterbury, thiske that sounen into synne; the boke of the Lyon, and many an othir boke, if they were in my remembraunce, and manye a song, and many a letcherous lay: Crist of his grete mercie forgyve me the synne. But of the translation of the Consolacion of Boys, and other bokes of Legendes of Seintes, and Omelies, and Moralite, and Devocion, that thanke I oure Lord Jesu Crist and his blisfull Mother, and alle the Seintes of Heven; beseeke him and hem that they fro hensforth unto my lyvis ende, sende me grace to bewaile my giltes, and to studie to the savacion of my soule, and graunte me grace of verray penitence, confession and satisfacion to don in this present lif, through the benigne grace of hym that is Kinge of all Kinges, and Prest of all Prestes, that boughte us with the precious blode of his herte, so mote I be oon of hem atte the day of dome, that shall be saved. Qui cum Patre, Et Spiritu sancto vivit et regnat. Amen.

GIFFREY CHAUCERIS, of whos Sowle Jesu Crist have mercy. Amen.

The Romaunt of the Rose.

This Book was begun in French verse by William de Lorris, and finish'd 40 Years after by John Clopinell, alias John Moone, born at Mewen upon the River of Loyer, not far from Paris, as appeareth by Molinet the French Author upon the morality of the Romaunt; and afterward translated for the most part into English Metre by Geffrey Chaucer, but not finish'd. It is entituled the Romaunt of the Rose, or the Art of Love; wherein are shew'd the helps and furtherances, as also the lets and impediments, that Lovers have in their suits. In this Book the Author hath many glances at the Hypocrisy of the Clergy, whereby he got himself such hatred amongst 'em, that Gerson, Chancellor of Paris, writeth thus of him; say'th he, There was one called Johannes Meldinensis, who wrote a Book called the Romaunt of the Rose; which Book if I only had, and that there were no more in the World, if I might have 500 Pound for the same, I would rather burn it than take the Money. He saith more, that if he thought the Author thereof did not repent him for that Book before he dyed, he would vouchsafe to pray for him no more than he would for Judas that betrayed Christ.

M Any menne saine that in sweveninges
Ther n'is but fables and lesinges,
But yet menne maie some swevin sene,
Whiche hardily that false ne bene,

But aftirwarde ben apparaunt;
This maie I drawin to warraunt—
An authour that hight Macrobes,
That halte not dremis false ne lese.
But undoth us the avisioun,
That whilom mette king Cipion. sc.
And who so saith, and weneth it be,
A jape or els a nicete
To wene that dremis aftir fal,
Let who so liste a sole me cal;
For this trowe I, and say for me,
That dremis signifiante be
Of gude and harme to many wightes,
That dremen in ther slepe a nightes
Full many thingis covirtly
That fallin aftir opinly.

Within my twenty yere of age,
Whan that love takith his corage
Of yonge folke, I wente sone
To bed, as I was wont to done,
And faste I slepte, and in sleping
Me mette suche a swevining,
That likid me wondrous wele,
But in that swevin' is ner a dele
That it n'is aftirwarde befall,
Right as this dreame wol tell us al.

Now this dreame wol I rime a right,
To make your hertis gay and light:
For love it prayith, and also
Commaundith me that it be so.

And if there any askin me
Whether that it be he or she,
And how this bokè, whiche is here,
Shal hate, which that I rede you here;
It is the Romaunt of the Rose,
In whiche all the art of love I close.

The matir faire is of to make,
God graunt in gre that she it take
For whom that it begonnin is,
And that is she, that hath iwis

So mokil prife, and therto she
So worthy is beloved to be,
That she wel ought of prife and right
Be clepid Rose of every wight.
That it was Mey me thoughtin tho,
(It is five yere or more ago)
That it was Mey, thus dremid me,
In time of love and jolite,
That al thing ginnith waxin gay,
For there is nethir buske nor hay,
In Mey that it n'ill shroudid bene,
And it with newe levis wrene;
These woddis eke recoveren grene,
That drie in winter ben to sene,
And the erth wexith proude withall
For sote dewis that on it fall,
And the povir estate forgette, sc.
In whiche that winter had it sette;
And than becometh the grounde so proude,
That it wol have a newe shroude,
And make so queint his robe and fayre,
That it had hewes an hundrid payre
Of grassie and flouris, Inde and Pers,
And many lawis full divers;
That is the robe I mene iwis,
Through whiche the ground to praisin is. sc.
The birdis that han lest ther songe
While thei han fustid coldeful stronge
In wethers grille, and derke to fight,
Ben in Mey, for the sunne bright
So glad, that they shewe in singin,
That in ther hert is suche liking,
That thei mote singin and ben light;
Than dothe the nightingale her might
To makin noise, and singen blithe;
Than is blisfull many a sithe,
The chelaundre, and the poppingay;
Than yonge folke entandin aye,
For to ben gaie and amorous;
The time is than so savourous.
Harde is his herte that lovith nought
In Mey, whan al this mirth is wrought,
Whan he may on these braunchis here
The smale birdis singin clere

50

60

70

80

Ther

Ther blisfull swete song pitous, -co.
 And in this felon delitous,
 Whan love affirmith alle thing,
 Me thought one night, in my sleping,
 Right in my bed, ful redily,
 That it was by the morowe'erly,
 And up I rose, and gan me clothe,
 Anon I wishe mine hondis bothe,
 A silvir nedil forth I drowe
 Out of aguiler queint inowe,
 And gan this nedill threde anone,
 For out of tounne me list to gone,
 The sounne of briddis for to here,
 That on the buskis singin clere,
 In the swete felon, that lefe is; v
 With a threde basting my slevis,
 Alone I went in my playing,
 The smale foulis songe herkening,
 That painid 'hem ful many' a paire
 To sing on bowis blossomed faire,
 Jolife and gaie, full of gladnesse;
 Towarde a River gan me dresse,
 Which that I herde renne faste by,
 For fairir playin, none saugh I, g
 Than playin, me by that rivere,
 For from an hill that stode there nere
 Come doune the streme full stiffe and bold,
 Clere was the watir, and as cold
 As any welle is, sothe to saine,
 And somdele lasse it was than Saine,
 But it was straitir, wele away;
 And nevir saugh I er that daie
 The watir that so wele liked me;
 And wondir glad was I to se
 That lusty place, and that rivere;
 With that watir, that ran so clere;
 My face I wishe, tho sawe I wele
 The botome ipaved everidele
 With gravell, ful of stonis shene,
 The medowis softe, sote, and grene,
 Beet right upon the watir side;
 Ful clere was than the morowe tide,
 And ful attempre out of drede;
 Tho gan I walkin throwe the mede
 Downwarde evir in my playing
 Nigh to the River's side coasting.
 And whan I had a while igone,
 I sawe a Gardin right anone
 Full long and brode, and everidele
 Enclosid was, and wallid wele,
 With hie walis enbataillid,
 Portrayed without, and well entaylid z
 With many full riche portreitures,
 And both the' imagis and peintures,
 Gan I beholdin besily;
 And I wol tel you redily
 Of thilke imagis the semblaunce,
 As ferre as I have remembraunce.
 Amiddis sawe I Hate ystonde,
 That for her wrathe and ire, and onde
 Semid to be a minoresse;
 An angry wight, a chidirelle,
 And ful of gile, and fell corage,
 By semblaunt, was that ilke image;
 And she was nothing wele araide,
 But like a wode woman afraide;
 Yfrouncid foule was her visage,
 And grinning for dispitous rage,
 Her nose ysnortid up for tene;
 Ful hidous was she for to sene,
 Ful foule and rusty was she this,
 Her hed iwrithin was iwis
 Ful grimly with a grete towaile,
 An image of anothre' entaile

A lifte halfe was her faste yby;
 Her name above her hed sawe I,
 And she was callid Felony.
 Anothre' image, that Villany
 Yclepid was, sawe I and fonde
 Upon the wall on her right honde;
 This Villany was like somdele
 That othre' image, and trustith wele 170
 She semid a wickid cature, a
 By countenaunce in portreiture
 She semid be ful dispitous, be.
 And eke ful proude, and outrageous.
 Wel coude he paint, I undertake,
 That such an image coude imake;
 Ful foule and chorlich semid she,
 And eke villeinous for to be,
 And litil could of noriture
 To worshippe any creature. 180
 And nexte was paintid Covetise, fr. Covetise
 That eggith folke in many' a gife
 To take, and yeve right nought again,
 And grete trefouris up to laine.
 And that is she, that for usure
 Lenith to many' a cature a
 The lasse for the more winning,
 So covitous is her brenning!
 And that is she for pennis fele,
 That techith for to robbe and stele 190
 These thevis, and these smale harlotes;
 And that' is routhe, for by ther throtes
 Ful many one hongith at last;
 She makith folke compasse and cast
 To takin othir folkis thing
 Through robbery, or milcoveting;
 And that is she that makith trechours,
 And she that makith false pledours,
 That with ther termis and ther domes
 Do maidins, childrin, and eke gromes 200
 Ther heritage (alas!) forgo:
 Ful crokid were her hondis two;
 For covetise is evir wode
 To gripin othir folkis gode,
 [For covetise, for her winning, These 2 V. seem only a different
 Ful lefe hath othir mennis thing.] Translation from the 2 former V.
 Another image set saugh I
 Nexte unto Covetise fast by,
 And she was clepid Avarice;
 Ful foule in painting was that vice, 210
 Ful sad and cairise was she eke,
 And also grene as any leke;
 So evill hewed was her coloure
 Her semed to have livid in langoure;
 She was like thing for hungir dede
 That lad her life onely by brede
 Knedin with eisel strong and egre;
 And therto she was lene and megre;
 And she was clad ful povirly -or
 Al in an oldè torne courtpye, -e 220
 As she were all with doggis torne,
 And bothe behinde and eke before
 Ycloutid was she beggirly.
 A mantil honge her faste by
 Upon a benche both weke and smale; f. perche. fr.
 A burnette cote honge there withal, -ru
 Yfurrid with no menivere,
 But with a furre rough of here,
 Of lambe skynnys hevy and blake;
 It was full olde I undirtake;
 For Avarice to clothe her wele
 Ne haltith her nevir adele;
 For certainly it were her lothe
 To werin of that ilke clothe;
 And if it were forwerid, she
 Would havin full gret nicete

Of clothing, er she bought her newe,
Al were it bad of wol and hewe.

This Avarice helde in her hande
A purse which that honge by a bande,
And that she hid and bonde so stronge,
Men must abidin wondir longe
Out of the purse er there come ought,
For that ne comith in her thought;
It was not certaine her entent
That fro that purse a peny went.

And by that image nigh inough
Was paintid Envy that nere lough,
Nor nevir wel in her hert ferde
But if she either sawe or herde
Some grete mischaunce, or grete disese;
Nothing ne may so much her plesse
As mischese and misaventure,
Or whan she seeth discomfiture
Upon any worthy man fall,
Than likith her right well withall;
She is full glad in her corage
Yf she se any grete linage
Be brought to naught, in shamful wif;
And if a man in honour rise
Or by his wit, or his prowesse,
Of that she hath gret hevinesse;
For trustith wele she goeth nie wode
Whan any chaunce yhapith gode.
Envy is of such cruelte,
That faith ne trouth ne holdith she
To frende ne felowe, badde or gode;
Ne she hath kinne none of her blode
That she n'is ful ther enemy;
She n'olde, I dare saine hardily,
That her own fathir farid wele:
And fore abieth she every dele
Her malice, and her malis-talent,
For she is in so grete turment
And hate suche, whan that folke doth gode,
That nigh she meltith for pure wode,
Her hert so kervith and so breketh,
That God the peple wel a wreket.

Envy I wis shall nevir let
Some blame upon the folke to set;
I trowe that if Envy i-wis
Yknew the beste man that is
On this side or beyonde the se,
Yet somewhat lackin him wold she;
And if he were so hende and wise,
That she ne might abate his prife,
Yet would she blame his worthinesse,
Or by her wordis make it lesse.
I sawe Envy in that painting
Yhad a wondirful lokin;
For she ne lokid but awrie
Or ovirthwarte, all baggingly,
And she had a full foule usage,
She mightin loke in no visage
Of man ne woman forth right plaine,
But shette her one eye for disdaine,
So for Envy ybrennid she, Fr. despot
Whan she might any man yse,
That faire, or worthy were, or wise,
Or ellis stode in folkis prife.

Sorowe was paintid next Envy
Upon that wal of masonrie;
But wel was sene in her colour
That she had livid in langour,
Her semid to have the jaundice;
Not halfe so pale was Avarice,
Ne nothing alike of lenesse;
For sorowe, thought, and grete distresse,
That she had suffrid day and night,
Made her yelow, and nothing bright:

Ful fade, pale, and megre also,
Was nevir wight yet halfe so wo,
As that her semid for to be,
Nor so fulfilled with yre, as she;
I trow that no wight might her plesse,
Nor do that thing that might her ese;
Nor she ne would her sorowe slake,
Nor comforte none unto her take,
So depe ywas her wo begonne,
And eke her hert in angre ronne!
A frowful thing wel semid she;
Nor she had nothing slowe ybe
For to bescratchin all her face,
And for to rent in many place
Her clothes, and for to tere her swire,
As she that was fulfilled of ire;
And all to torne laie eke her here
About her sholders, here and there,
As she that had it all to rent
For angre and for male talent.

And eke I tell you certainly
How that she wept full tendirly;
In worlde n'is wight so hard of herte,
That had yfene her sorowes smerte,
That n'olde have had of her pite,
So wo begon a thing was she!
She all to dasht her self for wo,
And smote togiſir her hondes two,
To ~~for~~we was she full ententise,
That wofull rechelesse caitise, that
Her roughte little of playing,
Or of clipping or of kissing;
For who so ~~for~~we is in herte
Him lustith not to plaie ne sterte,
Nor for to dauncin, ne to sing,
Ne maie his herte in temper bring
To make joie on even or morowe,
For joie is contrary to sorowe.

Elde was ypainted after this, Fr. La Vieillesse
That shortir was a fote i-wis

Than she was wont in her yonghede;
Unneth her self she might yfede;
So feble and so old was she

That fadid was all her beaute,
Full salowe was waxen her colour;
Her hedde for hore was white as flour;
Iwis grete qualme ne were it none,
Ne sinne, although her life were gone;
All woxin was her body' unwelde,
And drie and dwiniid all for elde;
A foule forwelkid thing was she,
That whilom round and soft had be,
Her heris shokin fast withall,
As from her hedde they wouldin fall;
Her face yfrouncid and forpined,
And bothe her hondis lorne fordwined;
So old she was, that she ne went
A fote, but it were by potent.

The time, that passith night and daie,
And restilesse travailith aie,
And stelieth from us privily,
That to us semith sikirly

That it in one poinet dwellith ever,
And certis it ne restith never,
But goeth so fast, and passith aie,
That there n'is man that thinkin maie
What time that now present is;
Askith at these grete clerkis this;
For men thinkin it redily
Thre timis ben ypassid by,
The time, that maie not sojourne,
But goth, and maie nevir retourne,
As watir that doune runnith aie,
But nevir droppe retourne maie;

K k k

There

There maie nothing as time endure,
 Ne metall, nor yerthly creature; a
 For alle thing is frette and shall;
 The time eke, that ychaungith all,
 And all doeth waxe, and fostrid be,
 And alle thing distroyich he;
 The time that eldith our aunccestours,
 And eldith Kinges and Emperours,
 And that us all shall overcomen,
 Er that deth us shall have noxmen,
 The time, that hath all in welde
 To elding folke, had made her elde
 So inly, that to my wering
 She mightin helpe her self nothing;
 But tourned ayen unto childhede,
 She had nothing her self to lede,
 Ne witte ne pithe within her hold,
 More than a child of two yere old.
 But nathelesse I trowe that she
 Was faire somtime, and freshe to se,
 Whan she was in her rightfull age;
 But she was past all that passage,
 And was a dored thing becomen;
 A furrid cappe on had she noxmen,
 Well had she cladde her self and warme,
 For cold might els doin her harme; -le-
 These old folke havin alwaie cold,
 Ther kinde is soche, whan thei ben old.

[An othir thing was down there write,
 That semid like an Ipocrite,
 And it was clepid Papelardie,
 That ilke is she, that privilie
 Ne sparith ner a wicked dede,
 Whan men of her takin none hede,
 And makith her outward precious,
 With pale visage and pitous, -er-
 And semith a simple creature; a
 But there n'is no misaventure;
 That she ne thinketh in her corage;
 Full like to her was thilke image,
 That makid was like her semblaunce,
 She was full simple of countenaunce,
 And she was clothid and eke shod,
 As she were for the love of God
 Yholdin to Religion,
 Soche semid her devocion:

A Psaltir helde she fast in honde,
 And busily she gan to fonde
 To make many a faint praire
 To God, and to his sainctis dere;
 Ne she was gaie, freshe, ne jolife,
 But semed to be full ententise
 To gode werkis, and to faire,
 And therto she had on an haire.

Ne certis she was fatte nothing,
 But semid werie for fasting,
 Of colour pale and dedde was she;
 From her the gates aie warnid be
 Of Paradise, that blisfull place;
 For soche folke makin lene ther grace,
 As Christ saieth in his Evangile,
 To get hem prife in tounce a while;
 And for a little glory reigne
 Thei lesin God and eke his reigne.

And aldir last of everichone
 Was paintid Poverté all alone,
 That not a peny had in hold,
 Although that she her clothis sold,
 And though she shold an hongid be,
 For nakid as a worme was she,
 And if the wether stormie were,
 For cold she shold have dyid there.

She ne had on but a straite old sacke,
 And many a cloute on it there stacke,

This was her cote, and her mantele,
 No more was there nevir a dele
 To clothe her with; I undirtake
 Grete lesir hadde she to quake;
 And she was put, that I of talke,
 Ferre fro these othre, up in an halke;
 There lurkid, and there courid she;
 For povir thing where so it be
 Is shamefast, and dispisid aie;
 Accursid maie well be that daie,
 That povir man conceivid is,
 For God wore all to selde i-wis
 Is any pore man well ifid,
 Or well arayid or icled,
 Or well beloved, in soche wise
 In honour that he maie arise.

Allè these thingis well avised,
 As I have you er this devised,
 With gold and asure ovir all
 Depaintid were upon the wall;
 Square was the wall, and high somdele,
 Enclosid, and ibarrid wele,
 In stede of hegge, was that gardin,
 Came nevir no Shepherd therein;
 Into that gardin, well ywrought,
 Who so that me coud have ybrought
 By ladders, or els by degre,
 It wouldè well have likid me,
 For soche solace, soche joie, and pleie
 I trowe that nevir man ne seie
 As was in that place delicious;
 The gardin was not daungerous,
 To herborowe birdes many one;
 So riche a yere was nevir none
 Of birdis song, and braunchis grene;
 Therin were birdis mo I wene
 Than ben in all the relme of Fraunce;
 Full blisfull was the accordaunce
 Of the swete petous song thei made,
 For all this worlde it ought to glade.

And I my self so mery ferde,
 Whan I ther blisfull songis herde,
 That for an hundrid pounce would I,
 (If that the passage opinly
 Haddin ybe unto me fre)
 That I n'olde entrin for to se
 Th' assemblè (God kepe it fro care)
 Of birdis, whiche that therein ware,
 That songin through ther mery throtes
 Dauncis of love, and mery notes.

Whan I thus herd the foulis sing,
 I fell fast in a waimenting,
 By whiche art, or by what engin
 I might come into that gardin,
 But waie I couthe ne findin none
 Into that gardin for to gone,
 Ne nought wist I if that there were
 Eithir a hole or a place where
 By whiche I mightin have entre,
 Ne there was none to techin me;
 For I was all alone i-wis,
 For wo and for anguisse of this,
 Till at the laste bethought I me;
 That by no waie ne might it be,
 There n'as ladder ne waie to pace,
 Or hole, into so faire a place;
 Tho gan I go a full grete pace
 Environ, evin in compas,
 The closing of the square wall,
 Till that I founde a wicket small
 So shette, that I ne might in gone,
 And othir entrè was there none.

face. Fr. Iv.

Upon

Upon this dore I gan to smite,
That was so fetis, and so lite,
For othir waie coud I not seke,
Full long I shofe, and knockid eke,
And stode full long all herkining
If I herd any wight coming,
Till that the dore of thilke entre
A maidin curteis opened me;
Her here was as yelow of hewe
As any basin scourid newe;
Her fleshe tendir as is a chike,
With bent browis both smothe and slike;
And thereto by mesure large were
The opening of her eyin clere,
Her nose of gode proporcion,
Her eyen graie as is a faucon,
With swete breth, and well favoured,
Her face white, and well coloured,
With litle mouthe and round to se;
A clovin chinnè eke had she;
Her necke was of gode fashion,
In length and greynesse by reson, e/
Withoutin bleine, or scabbe, or roine;
Fro Hierusalem to Burgoine
There n'is a fairer necke i-wis,
To fele how smothe and soft it is;
Her throte also so white of hewe
As snowe on braunche ysnowid newe;
Of body full well wrought was she,
Men nedin not in no countrè
A fairer bodie for to seke,
And of fine Orfrais had she eke
A chapilet, so semely on,
Ne nevir werid maide upon,
And faire above that chapilet
A rose garlande had she yset;
She had also a gaie mirrour,
And with a richè golde tresour
Her hedde was tressid full queintly, s/
Her slevis sowid fetously;
And for to kepe her hondis faire,
Of glovis white she had a paire;
And she had on a cote of grene
Of cloth of Gaunt, withoutin wene,
Well semid by her aparaile
She was not wont to grete travaile;
For whan she kempt was fetecously,
And well araied and richily,
Than had she doen all her journe;
For mery and well begon was she.
She had a lustie life in Maie,
She had no thought, by night ne daie,
Of nothing, but it were onely
To graieth her well and uncouthly.

Whan that this dore had opened me
This Maidin, semely for to se,
I thonkid her as I best might,
And askid her how that she hight,
And what she was I askid eke;
And she to me was nought unmeke,
Ne of her answer daungerous,
But faire answerde, and sayid thus:
Lo sir, my name is Idilnesse,
So clepin men me, more and lesse,
Full mightie and full riche am I,
And that of one thing namily;
For I entending to nothing
But to my joie, and my playing,
And for to kembe and tressè me;
Acquaintid am I and prive
With Mirth, the Lorde of this gardin,
That fro the londe of Alexandrin
Made the treis hithir be fet,

That in this gardin ben iset,
And whan the trees were woxe an hight,
This wall, that stant here in thy light,
Did Mirthe enclosin all about,
And these Imagis all without,
He did 'hem bothe entaile and paint,
That neither ben jolife ne quaint,
But thei ben full of frowe and wo,
As thou hast sene a while ago.

540

AND off timis him to solace,
Sir Mirthe comith into this place;
And eke with him come his meine;
That liven in lust and jolite;
And now is Mirthe therein, to here
The birdis how they singin clere,
The Mavis and the Nightingale,
And othir joly birdis smale;
And thus he walkith to solace
Him and his folke; for swettir place
To playin in he maie not finde,
Although he sought one in till Inde; f. until
The althir fairist folke to se,
That in this worlde maie founde ybe,
Hath Sir Mirthe with him in his rout,
That folowen him alwaies about.

610

620

Whan Idilnesse had tolde all this,
And I had harkened well i-wis,
Than saied I to dame Idilnesse,
Now all so wisely God me blesse,
Sith Mirthe, that is so faire and fre,
Is in this yerde, with his meine,
Fro thilke attemble, if I maie,
Shall no man wernè me to daie,
That I this night ne more it se;
For well wene I there with him be
A faire and joly companie,
Fulfillid of all curtisie;

630

640

And forth withoutin wordis mo
In at the wickit went I tho, e/
That Idilnesse had opened me,
Into that gardin faire to se.
And whan that I was in i-wis
Mine herte was full glad of this;
For well wende I full sikirly
Have ben in Paradise yerthly;
So faire it was, that trustith well
It semed a place espiituell;

650

For certis, as at my devise,
There is no place in Paradise
So gode in for to dwell or be,
As in that gardin thoughtin me;
For there was many a birde singing,
Thoroughtout the yerde all thringing;
In many placis Nightingales,
And Alpes, and Finches, and Wodewales,
That in ther swete song deliten,
In thilke placis as thei habiten.

660

There mightin men se many flockes
Of Turtels and of Laverockes,
Chalaundris fele ysawe I there,
That very nigh forsongin were,
And Thrustis, Terins, and Mavise,
That songin for to winne 'hem prise;
And eke to surmount in ther song
That othir birdis 'hem emong,
By note ymadin faire servise
These birdis, that I you devise,
Thei song ther song, as faire and wele
As angels doen espiituell;
And trustith me, whan I 'hem herde
Full lustie and full well I ferde;
For nevir yet soche melodie
Was herd of man that mightin die,

670

Soch

* 064 Tr. . . . qui talores
Nestor à chanter a d'avis.
f. l. end night many for singing corre.

Soche swete song as was 'hem emong,
That me thought it no bird's song;
But it was wondir like to be
Song of Mermaidins of the se,
That for her singing is so clere;
Though we Mermaidins clepe 'nem here
In Englishe, as is our usaunce,
Men clepin 'hem Screins in Fraunce.

ENtentise werin for to sing
These birdis, that not unkonning
Were of ther craft, and a prentise,
But of song subtile and eke wise;
And certis, whan I herd ther song,
And sawe the grene place emong,
In herte I went so wondir gaie,
That I was never et that daie
So jolife, nor so well bigo,
Ne mery' in herte, as I was tho;
And than wist I, and sawe full well,
That idilnesse me servid well,
That me put in soche jolite,
Her frende well ought I for to be,
Sith she the dore of that gardin
Had opnid, and let me in.

From hennis-forthe how that I wrought
I shall you tellin as me thought,
First whereof Mirthe yservid there,
And eke what folke there with him were,
Without fable I wold discrive;
And alle that gardin eke as blive,
I wold you tellin afir this
The faire fasson all i-wis,
That well ywrought was for the nones,
I maie not tell you all at ones,
But as I maie and can, I shall
By order tellin you it all.

Full faire service, and eke full swete
These birdis madin as thei fete;
Layis of love full well souning
Thei songin in ther jargoning,
Some hie, and some eke lowe ysong
Upon the braunchis grene isprong,
The swetenesse of ther melodie
Made all mine herte in revefrie.

And whan that I had herd I trowe
These birdis singing on a rowe,
Than might I not withholdin me
That I ne went in for to se
Sir Mirthe; for all my desiring
Was him to sene ovr all thing,
His countenance and his manere;
That sight was unto me full dere.

THO went I sorthe on my right honde,
Doun by a little pathe I fonde
Of Mintis full, and Fenell grene;
As faste by withoutin wene
Sir Mirthe I fonde, and right anon
Unto sir Mirthe gan I to gon,
There as he was him to solace;
And with him, in that lustie place,
So faire folke and so freshe had he,
That whan I sawe, I wondrid me
Fro whennis soche folke mightin come,
So faire thei werin all and some,
For thei weren like, as to my sight,
To angels, that ben fethered bright.

These folke, of whiche I tell you so,
Upon a karole wentin tho,
A Ladie karoled 'hem, that hight
Gladnesse, the blisfull and the light;
Well could she sing and lustily,

None halfe so well and semly,
And cothe make in song soche refraining,
It fate her wondir well to sing;
Her voice full clere was and full swete,
She was not rude ne yet unmete,
But couthe inough for soche doing
As longith unto karolling;
For she was wonte in every place
To singin first, folke to solace;
For singing moste she gave her to,
No crafte had she so lese to do.

THO mightist thou karollis sene
And folke daunce, and merie ben,
And made many a faire tournin
Upon the grene grasle springin;
There mightist thou se these Flutours,
Minstrallis and eke jogelours
That well to singin did ther paine
Some songin songis of Loraine,
For in Loraine ther notis be
Full sweter than in this contrè;
There was many a Timbestere
And sailours, that I dare well swere
Ycothe ther craft full parfitly,

The Timbris up full subtilly
Thei castin, and hent them full oft
Upon a singir faire and soft,
That thei ne failid never mo.
Full fetis damofellis two
Right yong, and full of semelyhede,
In kirtils, and none othir wede,
And faire ytreffid every tresse
Had Mirthe ydoen for his noblesse
Amidde the carole for to daunce.
But hereof lieth no remembraunce
How that thei daunsid queintily,
That one would come all privily
Ayen that othre, and whan thei were
Togithre' almoste, thei threwe ifere
Ther mouthis so, that through ther plaie
It semid as thei kist alwaie;
To dauncin well couthe thei the gife;
What should I more to you devise?

Ne bode I never thennis go
Whiles that I sawe 'hem dauncin so;
Upon the karoll wondir fast
I gan beholde, till at the last
A Ladie gan me for to' espie,
And she was clepid Curtesie,
The worshipfull, the debonaire,
I praie to God er fall her faire,
Full curtisly she callid me,
What do you there, Beau sire? (qð she)
Comith, and if it likith you
To dauncin, daunsith with us now.

And I withoutin tarying
Ywent into the karoling,
I was abashid ner a dele,
But it to me likid right wele
That Curtesie me clepid so,
And bade me on the daunce ygo;
For if I haddè durst certain
I would have karollid right fain,
As man that was to daunce right blithe.
Than gan I lokin oft sith
The shape, the bodies, and the cheres,
The countenance, and the maneres
Of all the folke that dauncid there
And I shall tellin what thei were.

Full faire was Mirthe, full longe and high,
A fairer man I never sigh,
As rounde as aple was his face,
Full roddie' and white in every place,

Fetis he was and well befeie,
With metely mouthe, and eyin greie;
His nose by mefure wrought full right;
Crispe was his here, and eke full bright;
His fhulderis of large brede,
And smalifhe in the girdelftede;
He femid like a puttreiture,
So noble he was of his ftature,
So faire, fo jolie, and fo fetife,
With limmis wrought at point devife;
Deliver, fmerte, and of grete might,
Ne fawe thou nevir man fo light;
Of berde unnerth had he nothing,
For it was in the firftè spring;
Full yong he was, and merie of thought;
And in famette, with birdis wrought,
And with golde bete full fetoufly
His bodie was clad full richely;
Wrought was his robe in ftraunge gife,
And all to flittered for queintife
In many a place, lowe and hie;
And fhode he was with grete maiftrie
With fhone decopid, and with lace;
By drurie, and eke by folace
His lefe a rofin chapilet
Had made, and on his hedde it fet.

And wetin ye who was his lefe?
Dame gladdeffe there was him fo lefe, N. 74.
That fingeth fo well with glad corage,
That from fhe was twelve yere of age,
She of her love graunt to him made;
Sir Mirthe her by the fingir hade.
A daunfing, and fhe him alfo;
Grete love there was a twix hem two;
Bothe were thei faire and bright of hewe;
She femid like a rofe newe
Of colours, and her flefhe fo tender,
That with a Brere fmale and tender
Men might it cleve, I dare well fain;
Her forhedde frounciles, all plain;
Bent werin her eye-browis two;
Her eyin graie, and glad alfo,
That laughdiſt aie in her femblaunt,
First or the mouthe by covenant:
I n'ot what of her nose difcrive,
So faire hath no woman alive;
Her here was yelowè, and clere fhining;
I wot no lady fo liking.

Of Orfraies freffe was her garlande;
I, whiche that fene have a thoufande,
Sawe ner i-wis no garlande yet
So well ywrought of filke as it;
And in an ovir gilt famite
Yeladde fhe was, by grete delite,
Of whiche her lefe a robe ywerde;
The merier fhe in herte ferde.
Next her went, on her othir fide,
The God of love, that can devide
Love, and as him likith it be, to
But he can cherlis dauntin, he,
And many folkis pridè fallen, f. do
And he can well thefe lordis thraffen,
And ladies put at lowe degre,
When he maie hem to proude yfe.

This God of love of his fafion
Was like no knave, ne no quiftron;
His bentie greteley was to prife;
But of his robis to devife
I drede encombrid for to be,
For nor icladde in filke was he,
But all in flouris and flourettes,
Ipaintid all with amorettes,
And with lofingis and fcochons,

With birdis, Liberdes, and Lions,
And othir beftis wrought full wele;
His garment was every dele
Ipurtraied and iwrought with floures,
By divers medeling of coloures;
Flouris there were of many gife
Iset by compace in a fife;
There lackid no floure, to my dome,
Ne not fo moche as floure of Brome,
Ne violet, ne eke petrinke,
Ne floure none, that men can on thinke,
And many a rofe-lefe full long
Was entremedlid there emong;
And alfo on his hedde was fet
Of rofes redde a chapilet.

But Nightingales a full grete rout,
That flien ovir his hedde about,
The levis feldin as thei flien,
And he was all with birdis wtien,
830 With Poppingaie, with Nightingale,
With Chalaundre, and with Wodewale,
With finche, with larke, and with archangel;
He femid as he were an angell,
That doune were come fro hevin clere.

Love had with him a bachilere
That he made alwaies with him be,
And fweete lokig clepid was he. N.
This bachilere ftode beholding
The daunce, and in his honde holding 850 Turke bowes two, well devised had he,
That one of hem was of a tre
That berith fruit of favour wicke;
Full crokid was that foulè flicke,
And knottie here and there alfo,
And blacke as berie, or any flo.

That othir bowe was of a plant
Withoutin wemme, I dare warant,
Full even and by proporcion
Trectis and long, and of gode facion,
860 And it was paintid well and thwitten,
And ore all diapid and written,
With ladies and with bachileres,
Full lightfome and full glad of cheres;
Thefe bowis two held Swete lokig,
That ne femid like no gadling;
And ten brode arowes helde he there,
Of whiche five in his honde were, right
But thei were shavin well and dight, 940
Nockid and fetherid a right,
And all thei were with golde begon,
870 And ftrong ypoinctid everichon,
And sharpe for to ykervin wele,
But iron was there none ne ftele;
For all was golde, men might it fe,
Out take the fethers and the tre.

THE fwiftif of thefe arowes five
Out of a bowè for to drive, 950
And the beft fethered for to flie,
And fairift eke, was cleped Bentie.

That othir arowe, that hurteth leffe,
Was clepid (as I trowe) Simpleffe.

The thirde yclepid was Fraunchife,
That fetherid was in noble wife
With valour and with curtilie.

The foweth was clepid Companie,
That hevic for to shotin is, 960
But who fo shotith right i-wis
Maie therwith doen grete harme and wo.

The fift of thefe, and lafte alfo,
890 Faire Semblaunt men that arowe call; Beau Semblant
'Tis the lefte grevous of hem all,
Yet can it make a full grete wounde,
But he maie hope his foris founde,

That hurte is with that arowe' i-wis,
His wo the bette bellowid is,
For he maie soner have gladnesse,
His langour ought to be the lisse.

FIve arowes were of othir gise,
That ben full foule for to devise,
For shaft and ende, sothe for to tell,
Were all so blacke as fende in hell.

The first of 'hem is callid Pride;
That othre' arowe next him beside
It was yclepid Vilanie,
That arowe was with felonie
Envenimed, and with spitous blame;
The third of 'hem was clepid Shame;
The fowerth Wanhope yclepid is,
The fift the Newe thought iwis.

These arowes, that I speke of here,
Werin all five on one manere,
And all were thei resemblable;
To them was well siting and able
The foule crokid bowe hidous,
That knottie was, and all roinous;
That bowe yfemid well to shete
The arowes five, that ben unmete
And contrary to that othir five;
But though I tellin not as blive
Of ther powir, ne of ther might,
Hereaftir shall I tellin right
The sothe, and eke signifiante,
As ferre as I have remembraunce;
All shall be saied I undirtake,
Er of this boke an ende I make.

Now come I to my tale againe,
But aldirfirst, I woll you saine
The fasshion and the countenaunces
Of all the folke that on the daunce is;
The God of Love, jolife and light,
Ladde on his honde a Ladie bright
Of high prife, and of grete degre,
This Ladie callid was Beutye;
And an arowe, of whiche I tolde,
Full well ythewid was she holde;
Ne she was derke ne broune, but bright
And clere as is the Monè light,
Again whom all the Sterris semen
But small candelis as we demen;
Her fleshe was tendre' as dewe of floure;
Her chere was simple' as birde in boure;
As white as Lillie' or Rose in rise,
Her face was gentill and tretise;
Fetis she was, and smale to se,
No Wintrid browis haddè she,
Ne popped here, for it nedid nought
To windir her, or to paint ought;
Her tressis yelowè, and long straughten,
Unto her heles doune thei raughten;
Her nose, her mounthe, and eye and cheke
Well wrought, and all the remnaunte eke,
A full grete favour and a sote
Me thoughtin in mine hertè rote,
As helpe me God, whan I remember
Of the fasshion of every member;
In worlde is none so faire a wight;
For yong she was, and hewid bright
Sore plefant, and fetis with all,
And gent, and in her middle small.

Beside Beutye yede richesse,
And hight Ladie of grete noblesse,
And grete of price in every place;
But who so durst to her trespace,
Or till her folke, in werke or dede,

He were ful hardie out of drede;
For bothe she helpe and hindir maie;
And that is not of yesterdaie
That riche folke havin full grete might
To helpe, and eke to greve a wight.

The best and gretist of valour
Diddin Richesse full grete honour,
And busie werin her to serve,
For that thei would her love deserve;
Thei cleped her Ladie grete and small;
This wide worlde her dredith all,
This worlde is all in her daungere;
Her courte hath many' a losingere,
And many' a traitour envious,
That ben full busie' and curious
For to dispreisin and to blame
That best deservin love and name;
To forne the folke, 'hem to begilen,
These losengeours 'hem prife and smilen.

And thus the worlde with worde anointen,
But aftirward thei prill and poincten
The folke, right to the bare bone,
Behinde ther backe whan thei ben gone,
And foule abatin folkis prife;
Full many' a worthie man and wife
Han hindrid, and idoen to die
These losingeours with ther flart'erie,
And makith folke full straunge be,
There as 'hem ought to ben prive;
Well evill motè thei thrive,
And evill arived more thei be,
These losingeours, full of envie,
No gode man loveth ther companie.

Richesse a robe of purple' on had;
Ne trowe not that I lie or mad,
For in this world is none it liche,
Ne by a thousande dele so riche,
Ne none so faire, for it full wele,
With Orfreis laigd was every dele,
And purtraied in the ribaninges
Of Dukis stories, and of Kinges,
And with a bend of golde tassiled,
And knoppis fine of golde amiled;
About her necke of gentle' entaile
Was shet the richè Chevesaile,
In whiche there was full grete plentè
Of stonis clere, and faire to se.

Richesse a girdle had upon,
The bokill of it was of ston
Of vertue grete, and mokil might;
For who so bare the ston so bright,
Of venim durst him nothing doubt
While he the ston had him about;
That ston was greterly for to love,
And till a riche mann'is behove

Worth all the golde in Rome, and Frise;
The Moyrdaunt wrought in noble gise
Was of a ston full precious,
That was so fine and vertuous,
That whole a man it couth ymake
Of palfie, and of the tothe ake;
And yet the ston had soche a grace
That he was likre' in every place
All thilkè daie not blinde to ben,
That fasting might that ston sene;
The barris were of gold full fine,
Upon a tisse of Satin,
Full hevie, grete, and nothing light,
In everiche was a besaunt wight.

Upon the tressis of richesse
Was set a circle of noblesse
Of brende golde, that full light yshone,
So faire trowe I was nevir none;

1110
But

1. Prudence.
2. Villany.
3. Sloth.
4. Desperance.
5. Conscience.

as

x f. dove. i.e. dough.
1 bride.

f. (dove). i.e. dough.

sh.

h. hope. i.e. hope.

R

as high la.

But he were konning for the nones
That could devisin all the stones,
That in that circle shewin clere,
It is a wondir thing to here;
For no man could or preise or gesse
Of 'hem the value or richesse;
Rubies there were, Saphirs, Ragounces,
And Emcraudes, more than two unces,
But all before full subtilly
A fine Carboncle set sawe I,
The stone so clere was and so bright,
That all so sone as it was night
Men mightin sene to go for nede
A mile or two, in length and brede,
Soche light ysprang out of the stone,
That richesse wondir bright yshone,
Bothe on her hedde, and all her face,
And eke about her all the place.

Dame Richesse on her honde gan lede
'A yong man full of semelyhede,
That she best loved of any thing;
His lust was moche in housholding,
In clothing was he full fetise,
And loved well to have hors of prife,
He wende to have reprovied be
Of theif or murder, if that he
Had in his stable an hackenaie,
And therefore he desirid aie
To ben aqueintid with Richesse;
For all his purpose, as I gesse,
Was for to makin grete dispence
Withoutin warning or defence;
And Richesse might it well sustain,
And her dispences wele maintain,
And him alwaie soche plentie fende
Of golde and silvir for to spende,
Withoutin lacking or daungere,
As it were pourde in a garnere.

And aftir on the daunced went
Largeesse, that set all her entent
For to ben honourable and fre,
Of Alexander's kinne was she,
Her moste joie it was i-wis
Whan that she yafe, and saied, 'have this;
Not Avarice the foule caitife
Was halfe to gripe so ententise,
As Largeesse is to yeve and spende,
And God alwaie inowe her fende;
So that the more she yave awaie
The more i-wis she had alwaie;
Grete loos hath Largeesse, and grete prife,
For bothe the wise folke and unwise
Were wholly to her bandon brought;
So well with yeftis hath she wrought.

And if she had an enemye,
I trowe that she couth craftily
Make him full sone her frende to be,
So large of yestes, and wise was she,
Therefore she stode in love and grace
Of riche and pore in every place.

A full grete sole is he i-wis
That riche, and pore, and nigard is:
A Lorde maie have no manir vice,
That grevith more than Avarice;
For Nigarde ner with strength of hande
Maie winne him grete lordshipe or lande;
For frendis all to fewe hath he
To doen his will performid be;
And who so woll have frendis here
He maie not holde his trefour dere;
For by ensample tell I this,
Right as an Adamant i-wis
Can drawin to him subtilly

The Iron, that is laiid therby;
So drawith folkis hertes i-wis
Silvir and golde that yevin is.

Largeesse had on a robe freshe
Of riche purple Sarlinishe;
Well formid was her face and clere,
And opened had she her colere;
For she right there had in present
Unto a Lady made present
Of a Gold broche, ful wel ywrought,
And certis it mistate her nought,
For through her smocke ywrought with silke
The fleshe was sene as white as milke.
Largeesse, that worthy was and wise,
Helde by the honde a knight of prife,
Was sibbe to Arthour of Breteigne,
And that was he that bare the enseigne
Of worship, and the Gonfannoun,
And yet he is of such renoun,
That menne of him say faire thinges
Before Barons, and Erles, and Kinges.

This knight was comin al newly
Fro tourneying there faste by,
Where he had done grete chivalry
Through his vertue and his maistrice,
And for the love of his lemman
He caste doune many a doughty man.
And next him dauncid dame Franchise
Arayid in ful noble gise;
She n'as not broune ne dunne of hewe,
But white as snowe ifallin newe;
Her nose was wrought at point devise,
For it was gentill and tretise,
With eyin glad, and browis bent,
Her here doune to her helis went,
And she was simple as dove on tre,
Ful debonaire of hert was she.

She durste neither say ne do
But that, that hir belongith to;
And if a manne were in distresse,
And for her love in heviness,
Her hert would have ful grete pite,
She was so amiable and fre,
For were a manne for her bestadde
She woulde ben right fore a dradde,
That she did ovir gret outrage,
But she him holpe his harme t' aswage
Her thought it all a vilanie;
And she had on a sugkiny,
That not of hennep herdis was,
So faire was none in all Arras;
Lorde! it was riddlede fetisly,
There ne was not a point truly,
That it n'as in his right assise;
Ful wel iclothid was Fraunchise,
For there n'is no clothe sittith bette
On damosell, than doth rokette;
A woman wel more fetise is
In rokette, than in core i-wis,
The white rokette riddilid faire
Betokenith that full debonaire
And swete was she that it ybere.

By her dauncid a Bachelere,
I can not tell you what he hight,
But faire he was and of gode hight,
Al had he ben, I saie no more,
The lord's sonne of Windesore.

And next that dauncid Curtisy;
That preisid was of lowe and hie,
For nethir proude ne fole was she;
She for to daunce callid me,
I praie God give to her gode grace;
For whan I come first to the place

She

She n'as not nice, ne outrageous,
But wise and ware, and vertuous,
Of faire speche, and of faire answere,
Was never wight mistaide of here,
She bare no rancour to no wight;
Clere broune she was, and therto bright
Of face, and body avenaunt;
I wotte no lady so pleisant,
She werin worthy for to bene
An Emperesse or crounid Quene.

And by her went a knight dauncing,
That worthy was, and wel speking,
And ful wel coude he don honour;
The knight was faire and stiffe in flour,
And in armure a semely man,
And wel beloved of his lemman.

Faire Idilnesse than nexte saugh I,
That alway was me faste by; For. le. him.
Of her have I withoutin faile
Tolde you the shape and appareile;
For (as I said) Lo! that was she,
That did to me so grete bounte;
She me the gate of that gardin

Undid, and let me passin in;
[And althir dauncid, as I gessé,
And she fulfilled of lustinesse,
That n'as not yet xii. yere of age,
With herte wilde, and thought volage;
Nice she ywas, but she ne mente
None harme ne sleight in her entente,
But onely luste and jolite;
(For yonge folke, wel wetin ye,
Have litill thought, but on ther play;)
Her lemman was beside alway
In suche a gise, that he her kilte
At alle times that him lise,
That al the daunce might it se,
They make no force of privite;
For who spake of hem ill or wele,
Thei were ashamid here a dele,
But men might sene hem kisse there,
As though it two yonge doves were,
For yonge was thilke Bachilere,
Of beute wot I non his pere,
And he was right of suche an age
As Youthe his lese, and suche corage.

The lusty folke that dauncid there,
And also othir that with hem were,
That werin all of ther meine,
Ful hendé folke, bothe wise, and fre,
And folke of faire porte truly
There werin alle cominly.

Whan I had sene the countenaunces
Of them that laddin thus these daunces,
Than had I will to go and se
The gardin that so likid me,
And lokin on these faire Laureres,
On Pine trees, Cedres, Oliveres,
The dauncis than endid ywere,
For many of hem that dauncid there
Were with ther lovis went away,
Undir the trees to have ther play.

A Lorde thei livid lustily!
A grete sole were he sikirly
That n'oude his thanks suche life to lede;
For this dare I saine out of drede,
That who so might so well yfare
For bettir life durst him not care;
For there n'is so gode paradise
As to have a love at his devise;
Out of that place went I tho,
And in that gardin gan I go,
Playing a long full merily.

The God of Love full hastily
Unto him Swete Loking yclept, 1330
No langir would he that she kept he
His bowe of Gold, that shone so bright.
He haddin him bent anon right, f. bad him bend it a .v.
And he full soné set an ende, it
And at a braide he gan it bende;
And toke him of his arowes five, f. He. v. e. Cupid.
Ful sharpe and redy for to drive.

Now God, that sitteth in majeste,
Fro dedly woundis he kepe me, 1340
If so be that he had me shete,
For if I with his arowe mete, f. Or
It had me grevid fore i-wis,
But I, that nothing wist of this,
Went up and doun, ful many a waic,
And he me folowed fast alwaic,
But no where would I reste me
Til I had in all the gardin be.

THE Gardin was by mesuring
Right even and square in compassing, 1350
It as longe was as it was large;
Of fruite had every tre his charge,
But it were any hidous tre,
Of whiche there werin two or thre.

There were (and that wore I full wele)
Of Pomgranetts a full grete dele;
That is a frute ful wel to like,
Namely to folke whan thei ben fike;
And trees there werin grete foison,
That berin nuttes in ther seson, 1360
Suche as menne nuttemiggis ycall t
That sote of favour ben withall,
And of Almandris grete plente,
Figgis, and many a Date tre,
There werin, if that menne had nede,
Through the Gardin, in length and brede.

There was eke waxing many a spice,
As Clowe, Gilofre, and Licorice,
Gingiber, and Grein de Paris,
Canell, and Setewale of pris, 1370
And many a spice delitable
To eten whan men rise fro table.

And many homely trees there were,
That Peches, Coines, and Apples bere,
Medlers, Plommis, Peris, Chesteinis,
Cherise, of whiche many one faine is,
Notis, and Aleis, and Bolas,
That for to sene it was solas;
With many high Laurer, and Pine,
Was rengid clene all that gardine 1380
With Cipris, and with Oliveris,
Of whiche that nigh no plenty here is.

Ther werin Elmis grete and strong,
Maplis, Ashe, Oke, Aspe, Planis long,
Fine Ewe, Popler, and Lindis faire,
And othir trees full many a paire.

What should I tell you more of it?
There werin so many trees yet, i
That I should al encombrid be
Er I had rekenid every tre. 1390

These trees were set, that I devise,
One from an othir in a se
Five fadome or sixe, I t. owe so, 1320
But they were hie and et also,
And for to kepe out wel the Sunne
The croppis were so thicke ironne,
And every braunche in othir knitte, f. knitte. - velle.
And ful of grené levis fitte,
That Sunne might there none discende,
Lest that the tendir grassis shende. 1400
There might men Does and Roes ise,
And of squirels ful grete plente,

From

From bow to bow alwaie leping;
 Connis there were also playing,
 That comin out of ther clapers,
 Of sondry colours and maners,
 And madin many' a tourneying
 Upon the freshe grasfe springing.
 In placis sawe I wellis there,
 In whichè there no froggis were,
 And faire in shadowe was eche wel;
 But I ne can the nombre tel
 Of stremis smal, that by devise
 Mirth had done come thorough condise,
 Of whiche the watir in renning
 Gan makin a noise ful liking.
 About the brinkis of these wellis,
 And by the stremes ovir al ellis
 Sprange up the grasfe, as thicke iset
 And soft eke as any velvet,
 On which men might his lemman ley,
 As on a fethirbed to pley;
 For the erth was ful softe and swete,
 Thorough moisture of the wel were
 Sprong up the sofe grenè gras,
 As faire, as thicke, as mister was;
 But moche amendid it the place
 That the erth was of suche a grace,
 That it of flouris hath plente,
 That both in somre' and wintir be.
 There sprange the violet al newe,
 And freshe pervinkè riche of hewe,
 And flouris yelowè, white and rede,
 Suche plente grewe there nèr in mede;
 Ful gaie was al the grounde and queint,
 And poudrid, as men had it peint,
 With many' a freshe and sondry floure,
 That castin up ful gode savour.
 I wol not longe holde you in fable
 Of al this gardin delytable,
 I mote my tonge stintin nede,
 For I ne maie withoutin drede
 Naught tellin you the beutie all,
 Ne halfe the bounte there withall.
 I went on right honde and on lefte
 About the place, it was not lefte,
 Till I had al the gardin bene
 In the efris that men might sene.
 And thus while I went in my playe,
 The God of love me folowed aye,
 Right as an Hunter can abide
 The beste till he seith his tide
 To shote at godenesse to the dere,
 Whan that him nedith go no nere.
 And so befil, I restid me
 Besides a wel undir a tre,
 Whiche tre in Fraunce men cal a Pine;
 But sithe the time of king Pepine
 Ne grewe there tre in mann's sight
 So faire, ne so wel woxe in hight,
 In al that yarde so high was none;
 And springing in a marble stone
 Had nature set, the sothe to tell,
 Undir that Pine tre a well;
 And on the bordir al without
 Was writtin in the stone about
 Letteris smal, that saidin thus;
 Here whilome starfe faire Narcissus.
 Narcissus was a bachilere,
 That love had caught in his daungere,
 And in his nette gan him so straine,
 And did him so to wepe and plaine,
 That nede him must his life forgo;
 For a faire lady hight Echo,
 Him loved ovir any cature,
 And gan for him suche paine endure,

That on a timè she him tolde
 That if he her ne lovin wolde,
 That her behovid nedis die,
 There laie none othir remedie. 1480
 But nathèlesse for his beaute
 So feir and daungerous was he,
 That he n'olde grauntin her asking,
 For weping, ne for faire praying. 1410
 And whan she herde him werne her so,
 She had in hert so gretè wo,
 And toke it in so grette dispite,
 That she withoutin more respite
 Was ded anon; but ere she deide 1490
 Ful pitously to God she preide,
 That the proude-hertid Narcissus,
 That was in love so daungerous,
 Might on a day ben hampered so
 For love, and ben so hote for wo,
 That ner he might to joie attaine;
 Than should he fele in every vaine
 What sorowe trewe loveris maken,
 That ben villainously forsaken.
 This prayir was but resonable,
 Therefore God helde it ferme and stable; 1500
 For Narcissus, shortly to tell,
 By aventure came to that well,
 To rest him in the shadowing
 O day, whan he came from hunting.
 This Narcissus had suffrid paines
 For renning al daie in the plaines,
 And was for thurst in grette distresse
 Of herte, and of his werinesse,
 That had his breth almost benomen;
 Whan he was to that wel icomen, 1510
 That shadowed was with braunchis grene,
 He thought of thilke watir shene
 To drinke, and freshe him wele withall;
 And doune on knees he gan to fall,
 And forth his necke and hedzoutfraught,
 To drinkin of that well a draught;
 And in the watre' anon was sene
 His nose, his mouthe, his eyin shene,
 And he therof was all abashed,
 His owne shadowe had him betrashed; 1520
 For wel wende he the forme to se
 Of a childe of full grette beaute;
 Full well couth love him wreke tho
 Of daungir and of pride also, 1530
 That Narcissus somtime him bere,
 He quyte him well his guerdon there;
 For he musid so in the well,
 That shortly, the sothe to tell,
 He lovid his owne shadowe so,
 That at the last he starfe for wo; 1540
 For whan he sawe that he his will
 Might in no manir way fulfill,
 And that he was so faste caught,
 That he him couthè comfort naught,
 He lost his witte, right in that place,
 And deide within a litill space;
 And thus his warison he toke
 For the lady that he forsoke. J. guerdon as it is in the original
 Ladies, I praie ensample taketh,
 Ye that ayenst your love mistaketh, 1550
 If of ther deth you be to wite,
 God can ful wel your wilè quite.
 Whan this letter, of whiche I tell,
 Had taught me that it was the well
 Of Narcissus in his beaute,
 I gan anon withdrawe me,
 Whan it fel in my remembraunce
 That him beride suche a mischaunce;
 M m m But

But at the laste than thoughtin I,
That scathelke full sikirly
I might unto the welle go,
Wherof shul I abasshin so?
Unto the welle than went I me,
And doun I loutid for to se
The clere watir in the stone,
And eke the gravel, whiche that shone,
Doun in the botome, as silvir fine,
For of the welle this is the fine;
In world is none so clere of hewe,
The watre' is evir frish and newe,
That welmith up with wavis bright
The mountenaunce of two fingir hight,
About it is the grasse springing,
For moiste so thicke and well liking,
That it ne may in wintir die
No more than may the sey be drie.

DOunc at the botome set sawe I
Two cristall stonis craftily
In thilke freshe and faire well;
But o thinge sothly dare I tell,
That ye wol holde a grete mervaille
Whan it is tolde, withoutin faile;
For whan the sunne clere in sight
Cast in that welle his bemis bright,
And that the herte descendid is,
Than taketh the cristall stone i-wis
Againe the sunne an hundrid hewis,
Blewe, yelow, red that freshe and new is;
Yet hath the mervailous cristall
Suche strength, that the place ovir all,
Both soule and tre, and levis grene,
And all the yerde in it is sene;
And for to don you to' undirfonde
To make ensample wol I fonde;
Right as a mirroure opinly
Shewith al thing that stonde there by,
As well the colour, as figure,
Withoutin any covirture,
Right so the cristall stone shining,
Withoutin any disceving,
The entrees of the yerde accuseth
To him that in the watir museth;
For evir in whiche halfe ye be
Ye may wel halfe the Gardine se;
And if ye turne, ye may right wele
Sene the remenaunt every deles;
For there is none so litil thing
So hid ne closin with shitting,
That it n'is sene, as though it were
Ypainted in the cristall there.
This is the mirroure perillus,
In whiche the proude Narcissus
Sey al his faire face so bright,
That made him sith to lie upright;
For who so loke, in that mirroure, th
There may nothing ben his socour,
That he ne shal there se somthing,
That shal him lede into laughing;
Ful many' a worthy man hath it
Yblent; for folke of gretist wit
Ben sone yeaught here and ywaited,
Withoutin respice ben thei baited:
Here comith to folke of newe rage,
Here chaungith many wight corage,
Here lith no rede ne witte therto;
For Venus sonne, dan Cupido,
Hath sowin there of love the fede,
That helpe ne lith there none, ne rede;
So cerelith it the welle about,
His ginnis hath ne fet without,
Right for to catche in his panter

1550 These Damofels and Bachilers;
Love wil none othir birdis catche;
Though he set eithir nette or lache,
And for the fede, that here was sowen,
This welle is cleped, as well is knowen,
The welle of Love, of very right,
Of whiche there hath ful many wight
Spekin in bokis diversely;
But thei shul ner so verily ye
1560 Discrpcion of the welle here,
Ne eke the sothe of this matere,
As ye shul, whan I have undo
The crafte that here belongith to.

ALway me likid for to dwell,
To sene the cristall in the well,
That shewid me ful opinly
A thousande thingis faste by;
But I may saie in sory houre
Stode I to lokin or to poure;
For sithin I fore have yfiked,
That Mirroure hath me now entriked;
1570 But had I first knowen in my wit
The vertue and strengthis of it, the strength
I n'oldè not have musid there,
Me had bettir ben ellis-where;
For in the snare I fell anone,
That had bitreshid many one.

In thilke Mirroure sawe I tho
Among a thousande thingis mo
A rofir chargid ful of rofis,
1580 That with an hedge aboute enclosed is;
Tho had I suche lust and envie,
That for Paris ne for Pavie
N'olde I have left to gone and se,
There gretist hepe of rofis be,
Whan I was with this rage yhente,
That caught hath many' a man and shente,
Towarde the Rosir gan I go;
And whan I was not ferre there fro,
The favour of the rofis fore
Me smote right to the herte rote,
1590 As I had all enbaumid me;
And if I n'ad endoutid me,
To have ben harid or assailed,
My thankis wol I not have failed,
To pull a rose of al that route;
To berin in mine honde aboute,
And smellin to it where I went,
But er I dredde me to repent, a
And leste it grevid or forthought
The lorde that thilke gardin wrought;

1600 Of rofis there werin grete wone,
So faire werin nevir in Rone;
Of knoppis close some sawe I there,
And some wel bettir woxin were,
And some there ben of othir moison,
That drowe nigh to ther seson,
And spedde hem faste for to spredde;
I love wel suche rofis redde,
For brode rofis, and open' also
Ben passid in a daie or two,
1610 But knoppis wollin freshe be
Two daies at lest, or 3 is thre;
The knoppis gretely likid me,
For fairir maie there no man se,
Who so might havin one of all
It ought him ben ful lese withall;
Might I garlondè of hem getten,
For no richesse I wolde it letten.

1620 Amonges the knoppis I chese one
So faire, that of the remenaunt none
Ne preise I halfe so wel as it,
Whan I avisin in my wit,

1630

1640

1650

1660

1670

1680

1690

It

It so well was enluminid,
With colour red, as well finid
As nature couth it makin faire,
And it hath levis wel foure paire,
That kind hath set through his knowing;
About the redde rosis springing
The stalke ywas as rishe right,
And theron stode the knoppe upright,
That it ne bowed upon no side,
The sote smell ysprong so wide
That it died al the place aboute;
Whan I had smelled the savour sote,
No will had I fro thence yet go,
But somdele nere it went I tho
To take it, but mine honde for drede
Ne durst I to the Rose bede
For thistles sharpe of many maners,
Netlis, thornis, and hokid briers;
For muche they distourblid me,
For fore I dradde to harmid be.

THE God of Love, with bowe ybent,
That al daie set had his talent
To pursue and to spyin me,
Was stondin by a figge tre;
And whan he sawe how that I
Had chosin so ententifely
The bothum more unto my pay (bottom, throughout).
Than any othir that I say,
He toke an arowe, sharply whette,
And in his bowe when it was sette,
He streight up to his ere ydrough
The stronge bowe, that was so tough,
And shotte at me so wondir smerre,
That through mine eye unto mine herte
The takil smote, and depe it wente,
And therewithal such tolde me hente,
That undir clothis warme and softe
Sin that day I have chivered ofte.
Whan I was hurt thus, in stounde
I fell doune plat unto the grounde,
Mine herte failid, and faintid aie,
And longè time in swoune I laie;
But whan I came out of swouning,
And hadde my witte, and my feling,
I was all mate, and wende full wele,
Of blode t' have lorne a full grete dele,
But certes the arowe, that in me stode,
Of me ne drew no droppe of blode;
For why, I founde my woundes all drie.
Than toke I with mine hondis tweie
The arowe, and full fast it out plight,
And in the pulling sore I sight;
So at the last the shaft of tre
I drough out, with the fethirs thre;
But yet the hokid hedde i-wis,
The whiche beaute ycallid is,
Gan so depe in mine herte pace,
That I it ne might nor arace,
But in mine herte still it stode,
All bledde I not a droppe of blode;
I was bothe anguishous and trouble
For the perill, that I sawe double,
I ne wist what to saie or doe,
Ne get a leche my woundis to;
For neither thorough grasse ne rote
Ne had I helpe of hope ne bote,
But to the bothum evir mo
Mine herte dregge; for all my wo,
My thought was in none othir thing,
For had it ben in my keping,
It would have brought my life again,
For certis evenly, I dare sain,
The sight onely, and the savour

Aleggid moche of my langour.
Than gan I for to drawe me
Toward the bothum faire to se;
And Love had gette him in this throwe,
An othir arowe into his bowe,
And for to shotin gan him dresse;
The arowes name was Simplenesse;
And whan that Love gan nigh me nere,
He drowe it up withoutin were,
And shotte at me with all his might,
So that this arowe anone right
Throughout myne eigh, as it was founde,
Into mine herte hath made a wounde;
Than I anone did all my craft
For to ydrawin out the shaft,
And therewithall I sighid eft,
But in mine hert the hedde was left,
Whiche aie encrefid my desire,
Unto the bothum drowe I nere, f. nigher.
And evir mo that me was wo, a the
The more desire had I to go
Unto the Rosir, where that grewe
The freshe bothum, so bright of hewe,
Bettir me were to have lettin be,
But it behovid nedis me
To doen right as mine herte badde,
For er the body must be ladde
Aftir the herte, in wele and wo,
Of force togethir thei must go;
But never this archir would fine
To shotte at me with all his pine,
And for to make me to him mete.
The thirde arowe he gan to shete,
Whan bell his time he might elpie,
The whiche was namid curtisic, C. it
Into mine herte he did avale,
A swoune I fell, bothe dedde and pale,
Long time I laie, and slirid nought;
Till I abraied out of my thought,
And felle than I avifid me
To drawin out the shaft of tre,
But aye the hedde was lste behinde,
For ought I couthe pull or winde;
So fore it stiked whan I was hit,
That by no cratte I might it lit,
But anguishous and full of thought,
I felt soche wo, my wounde aie wrought,
That somoned me alwaie to go
Toward the Rose, that pleted me so;
But I ne durst in no manere;
Bicause the archir was so nere.
For evir more gladly, as I rede,
Brent child of lye hath mochil drede.
And certis yet for all my pain
Though that I sigh, yet arowes rein,
And ground quarels, sharpe of stele,
Ne for no pain that I might fele
Yet might I not my self with hold
The faire Rosir to behold;
For Love me yave soche hardiment
For to fulfill his commaundement,
Upon my lere I rose up than
Feble, as a forwounded man;
And forthe to gon my might I set,
And for the Archir n'olde I let;
Toward the Rosir fast I drowe,
But thornis sharpe mo than inow
There were, and also thistles thicke,
And breris burnme for to pricke,
That I ne might ygettin grace
Through the rough thornis for to pace
To sene the Rosir freshe of hewe,
I must abide, though it me rewe;
The

The hedge about so thickè was,
 That closed the Rosis in compas.
 But o thing likid me right wele,
 I was so nigh that I might fele
 Of the bothum the sore odour,
 And also se the freshe coloure,
 And that right gretely likid me
 That I so nere mightin it se,
 Soche joie anon thereof had I,
 That I forgate my malady,
 To sene it I had soche delite
 Of woe and angre I was all quite,
 And of my woundes that I had thore,
 For nothing likin me might more
 Than dwellin by the Rosir aie,
 And thens nevir to passe awaie;
 But whan a while I had be thare,
 The God of love, whiche ail to share
 Mine herte with his arowis kene,
 Casteth him to yeve me woundis grene,
 He shote at me ful hastily
 An arowe namid Companie,
 The whiche takil is full able
 To make these Ladies merciabie;
 Than I anon gan chaungin hewe
 For grevaunce of my wounde newe,
 That I again fell in swouning,
 And sighid fore in complaining.
 Sore I complainid that my lore
 On me gan grevin more and more;
 I had none hope of Allegiaunce,
 So nigh I drowe to desperaunce,
 I ne rought of deth, ne of life,
 Whether that love ywould me drife;
 If me a martir would he make,
 I might his powir not forsake;
 And while for angir thus I woke,
 The God of Love an arowe toke,
 Full sharpe it was and full pounant,
 And it was callid Faire semblaunt,
 The whiche in no wise would consent
 That any lovir him repent
 To serve his love, with herte and all,
 For any perill that maie fall:
 But though this arowe was kene grounde,
 As any rasour that is founde,
 To cutte and kervin at the point,
 The God of Love it had anoint
 With a full precious ointment,
 Some dele to yeve alegement
 Upon the woundis, that he hade
 Thorough the eye in my herte made,
 To helpe ther foris, and to cure,
 And that thei maie the bette indure,
 But yet this arowe, without more,
 Made in mine herte a large fore
 That in full grete pain I abode,
 But aie the ointment went abroad;
 Throughout my woundis large and wide
 It sprede about in every side,
 Thorough whose vertue, and whose might
 Mine herte joifull was and light,
 I had ben dedde and ail to shent
 But for the precious ointment.
 The shaft I drowe out of the arowe,
 Roking for wo right wondir narowe,
 But the hedde, whiche that made me smerte,
 I left behind in mine herte,
 With othir fower, I dare well saie
 That nevir will be toke awaie:
 But the ointment halpe me wele,
 And yet soche sorowe did I fele,
 That allè daie I chaungid hewe,
 Of my woundis so freshe and newe,

As men might se in my visage,
 The arowes were so full of rage,
 So variaunt of diversite,
 That men in evèriche might se
 Both grete anoie, and eke swetenesse,
 And joie ymeint with bittirnesse;
 Now were thei esy, and now wode,
 In them I felt bothe harme and gode,
 Now fore without alleggèment,
 Now softning with the ointment,
 It softenid here, and prickid there,
 Thus ese and angir were yfere.

1850

1929

1860

1930

1870

1940

1880

1950

1890

1960

1900

1970

1910

1980

THE God of Love delivirly
 Came lepande to me hastily,
 And sayid to me in grete jape
 Yelde The, for thou maie not escape,
 Maie no defence availe The here,
 Therefore I rede make no daungere;
 If thou wolt yelde The hastily,
 Thou shalt the rathir have mercie;
 He is a sole in sikirnesse
 That with daungir or with stoutnesse
 Rebelligith, there that he should plese,
 In soche folie is little ese;
 Be meke, where thou must nedis bowe,
 To strive ayen is not thy prowé,
 Come at onis, and have idoe,
 For I wollè that it be so,
 Than yelde The here debonairly:
 And I answerid full humbly,
 All gladly, sir, at your bidding
 I woll me yelde in allè thing,
 To your service I woll me take;
 For God defende that I should make
 Ayen your biddin-resistence;
 I woll not doen so grete offence,
 For if I did, it were no skill,
 Ye maie doe with me what ye will,
 Or save or spill, and also slo,
 Fro you in no wise may I go,
 My life, my deth, is in your honde,
 I maie not laste out of your bonde;
 Plaine at your liste I yeldè me,
 Hoping in hert, that somtime ye
 Comforte and ese shul to me sende,
 Or els shortly, this is the ende,
 Withoutin helth I mote aie dure,
 But if ye take me to your cure:
 Comforte or helth how should I have,
 Sithe ye me hurte, but ye me save?
 The helth of Love mote be yfounde
 Where as thei token first ther wounde;
 And if ye liste of me to make
 Your prisoner, I woll it take
 Of herte and will fully at gre;
 Wholy and plaine I yeldè me,
 Withoutin feining or feintise
 To be governed by your emprise;
 Of you I here so mochil prife,
 I wol ben whole at your devise,
 For to fulfill all your liking,
 And to repent in for nothing,
 Hoping to have yet in some tide
 Mercy, of that that I abide;
 And with that covenant yelde I me,
 Anon doune kneeling on my kne,
 Proffring for to kisse his fete,
 But for nothing he would me lete.

And said, I love The both and preise,
 Sens that thine answere doth me ese,
 For thou answered so curtisly;
 For nowc I wote well uttirly

That

That thou art gentil by thy speche,
For though a man ferre wou'de seche,
He should not findin in certaine
No suche answere of no vilaine,
For suche a worde ne mighte nought
Issue out of a vilaines thought;
Thou shalt not lesin of thy speche,
For thy helping wollin I eche,
And eke encrefin; that I maie;
But first I woll that thou obaie
Fully for thine own avauntage
Anone to do me here homage,
And sithin kisse thou shalt my mouthe,
Whiche to no vilaine was ner couthe
For to' aproche it, ne for to touche;
For sause of cherlis I ne vouche
That thei shal nevir neigh it nere;
For curteis, and of faire manere,
Wel raught, and ful of gentilnesse
He must yben, that shal me kisse,
And also of ful highe fraunchise,
That shal atte'ne to that emprise.

And first of o thing warne I The,
That paine and gret adversite
He mote endure, and eke travaile,
That shal me serve, withoutin faile;
But there against The to comforte,
And with thy service to disporte,
Thou maist ful glad and joyfull be,
So gode a maistr to' have as me,
And lordè of so high renoun,
I bere of love the Gouernoun,
And of Curtisie the banere,
For I am of selfe 'the manere,
Gentill and curteis, meke, and fre;
That who evir ententise be
Me to honour, re-doute, and serve,
And also that he him observe
Fro trespase and fro villanie,
And him governe in curtisie,
With will and with entencion,
For when he first in my prison
Is caught, than must he uttirly
Fro thennis-forth ful besily
Ycast him gentill for to be,
Yf he desire helpe of me.

Anone withoutin more delaie,
Withoutin daungir or affaie,
I become his vassal anone,
And gave him thankes many a one,
And knelid doune with hondis joint,
And made it in my porte full quent;
The joye went to my hert's rote,
Whan I had kised his mouthe so sote,
I had suche mirth and such liking,
It curid me of languishing;
He asked of me than hostages,
I have takin fele homages
Of one and othir, where I have bene,
Distreinid ofte, withoutin wene;
These felons ful of falsite
Have many fithes begilid me,
And through falsheid ther lust achived,
Wherof I repent, and am greved,
And I'hem gette in my daungere,
Ther falsheed shul thei bie ful dere;
But for I love The, I saie The plaine,
I woll of The be more certaine;
For The fore I woll now ybinde
That thou away ne shalt not winde,
For to denien thy covaunt;
Or done that is not avenaunt;
That thou were false, it were grete ruth,
Sithen thou semist so ful of truth.

1990 Sir, if The liste to understaunde,
I merveile The' asking this demaunde;
For why or wherefore shoulde ye
Hostage or borowes aske of me,
Or any othir sikirnesse,
Sithin ye wote in sothfastnesse
That ye me have surprisid so,
And whole mine herte takin me fro,
That it woll doe for me nothing,
But if it be at your bidding?
2070 Mine hert is yours, and mine right nought,
As it behoverth, in dede and thought,
Redy in all to worche your will,
Whethir so tourne to gode or ill;
So fore it lustith you to plesse,
No man therof maie you disesse,
Ye have theron set soche justice,
That it' is werried in many wise,
And if ye doubt it n'olde obaie,
Ye maie therof doe make a kaie,
And hold it with you for hostage.
Now certis this is none outrage
(Qd Love) and fully I accorde,
2010 For of the body' he is full Lorde
That hath the herte in his trefore;
Outrage it were to askin more.

2020 THan of his aumener he drough
A little keie fetise inough,
Whiche was of gold polishid clere,
And saied to me; with this keie here,
Thine herte to me now woll I shet,
For all thy joifull loke, and knet,
I binde undir this little keie,
That no wight maie cary awaie.

This keie is full of grete postè,
With whiche anone he touchid me
Undir the side full softly,
That he mine hertè sodainly
Without any doute hath so spered,
That yet right nought it hath me dered.
2100 Whan he had doen his will all out,
And I had put him out of dout,
Sir I saied: I have right grete will
Your lust and plesure to fulfill,
Loke ye my service take at gre.
By thilkè faith'ye owe to me,
I saie nought for recreaundise,
For I nought doubt of your service.

But the servaunt travaileth in vain,
That for to servin doeth his pain
Unto that lorde, whiche in no wise
Conne him no thanke for his service.

2040 LOve sayid thò, dismaie The nought,
Sithen thou for succour hast me sought,
In thanke thy service woll I take,
And high of degre woll The make,
If wickidnesse ne hindir The,
But (as I hope) it shall nought be;
To worship no wight by' aventure
Maie come, but that he pain endure.
2120 Abide and suffre thy distresse,
That hurtith now, it shall be lesse;
I wote my self what maie The save,
What medicine thou wouldist have.

And if thy truth to me thou kepe,
I shall unto thine helping eke,
To cure thy woundes and make 'hem ciene,
Where so that thei be old or grene,
Thou shalt be holpen' at wordis few;
For certainly thou shalt well shewe
Where that thou servist with gode will,
For to accomplishe and fulfill

N n n

My

My commaundementis daie and night,
Whiche I to lovirs yeve of right.

Ah sir, for Godd'is love (saied I)
Er ye passe hens, ententifely
Your commaundementes to me ye saie,
And I shail kepe 'hem if I maie;
For them to kepen' is all my thought,
And if so be I wote 'hem nought,
Than maie I erre unwittingly;
Wherfore I praie you entirely
With all mine herte, me for to lere;
That I trespase in no manere.

The God of love than chargid me
Anon, as ye shall here and se
Worde by worde, by right emprise,
So as the Romaunt shall devise.

The maistris lestith time to lere
Whan the disciple woll not here;
It is but vain on him to swinke
That on his lerning woll not thinke;
Who so lust love, let him intende,
For now the Romance ginneth to amende.

Now is gode to herin in faie
If any be that can it saie,
And pointit it as the reson is,
Yfer; for othir gate, i-wis,
It shall nat well in alle thing
Be brought to gode understanding;
For a rede, that pointith ill,
A gode sentence maie oftin spill.
The boke is gode at the ending,
Ymade of newe and lustie thing;
For who so woll the ending here,
The craft of love he shall now lere;
If that he woll so long abide
Till I this Romance maie unhide,
And undoe the signifiante
Of this dreme into Romaunce;
The sothfastnesse, that now is hid,
Without coverture shall be kid,
Whan I undoen have this dremin,
Wherein no worde is of lesing.

Villanie at the beginning
I woll, saied love, ovir all thing
Thou leve; if that thou wolt, not, or, but, if-
False, and trespase ayenist me,
I curse and blame generally
All them, that lovin villanie;
For villanie makith villaine,
And by his dedes a chorde is seine.

These villains arne without pite,
Frendship and love, and all bounte,
I nill receive to my service
Them that ben vilains of emprise.
[But undirstonde in thine entent,
That this is not mine entendement
To clepin no wight in no age,
Onely gentill for his linage,
But who so that is vertuous,
And in his port not outrageous;
Whan soche one thou seest The beforen,
Though he be not gentill yborne,
Thou mayist weil seine this in soth
That he is gentill, bicause he doth
As longith to a gentil man,
Of them none othir deme I can;
For certainly withoutin drede
A chorde is demid by his dede,
Of hie or lowe, as ye maie se,
Or of what kinrid that he be;]
Ne saie nought for none evill will Thing which that is to holdin still,

It is no worship to misseie;
Thou maiest ensample take of Keie,
That was somtime for mislaying
Yhatid bothe of old and yong,
As ferre as Gawein the worthie
Was praied for his curtise,
Kaie was hatid, for he was fell,
Of worde dispitous and cruell;
Wherefore be wise and aqueintable,
Godelie of worde, and resonable,
Bothe to lesse and eke to mare;
And whan thou comist there men are,
Loke that thou have in custome aie
First to salve 'hem if thou maie,
And if it fall that of 'hem somme
Salve The first, be thou not domme,
But quite him curtisly anon,
Without abiding, er thei gon.

2140 For nothing eke thy tong applic
To spekin wordes of ribaudrie,
To vilaine speche, in no degre,
Late not thy lippe unboundin be;
For I nought holde him in gode faith
Curteis, that foule wordis saith)
And alle women serve and preise,
And to thy power ther honour reise;
And if that any mislayere
Dispise women, that thou maist here,
2160 Blame him, and bidde him holde him still,
And sette thy might, and al thy will,
Women and ladies for to plesse,
And to do thing that may 'hem esse,
That thei evir speke gode of The;
For so thou maist best praied be.

Loke that fro pride thou kepe The welc,
For thou maist both perceive and fele
That pride is both foly and sinne,
And he, that pride hath him within,
Ne may his herte in no wise
2170 Mekin, ne souplin to service;
For pride is founde in every part;
Contrarie unto Lov'is art;
And he that lovith truily
Should him contene jolily
Withoutin pride in sondry wise,
And him disguis in queintise;
For queinte aray, withoutin drede,
Is nothing proude, who takith hede,
For freshe aray, as men may se,
2180 Withoutin pride may oftin be.

Maintaine thy selfe afir thy rent
Of robe and eke of garment;
For many a sithe faire clothing
A man amendith in mucche thinge.

And loke alway that thei be shape,
(What garment that thou shalt The make)
2190 Of him that can the best ydo,
With al that parteinith therto;
Pointis and flevs be wel sittande,
Ful right and streight upon the hande;
Of shone and botis, newe and faire,
Loke at the lest thou have a paire,
And that thei sitte so setously,
That these rude men may uttirly
Mervaile, sith that thei sitte so plaine,
How thei come an or of againe. on or off
Were streight gloris with aumere. laumiere, as 1278
Of ilke, and alway with gode chere
Thou yeve, if that thou have richesse;
2200 And if thou have nought, spende the lesse;
Alway be mery, if thou maie,
But wastte not thy gode alwaie;
Have hatte of flouris freshe as May,
Chapelet of Rosis of Whitsondaie,

2210

2220

2230

2240

2250

2260

2270

For

For soche araie costeth but lite.
Thine hondis washe, thy tethe make white, 2280
And let no filthe upon The be;
Thy nailis blacke if thou maiest se,
Voide it awaie delivirly,
And kembe thine hedde right jolily;
Farce not thy visage in no wife,
For that of love is nat th' emprise,
For love doeth hatin, as I finde,
A beautie, that cometh nat of kinde;
Alwaie in herte I redè The Full glad and mery for to be,
And be as joifull as thou can,
Love hath no joie of sorowfull man;
That ill is full of curtisie,
That knowith in his maladie;
For evir of love the sickenesse
Is meint with swete and bittirnesse;
The fore of love is mervailous,
For now the lovir is joious,
Now can he plain, now can he grone,
Now can he singe, now makin mone,
To daie he plaineth for hevinesse,
To morge' he playeth for jolinesse;
The life of love is full contrarie
Whiche stounde mele can oftin varie;
But if thou canist mirthis make,
That men in gre woll gladly take,
Doe it godely, I commaunde The;
For men shold, where so er thei be,
Doe thing that hem besittin is,
For therof cometh gode loos and pris;
Wherof that thou be vertuous
Ne be nat straunge ne daungerous,
For if that thou gode ridir be,
Pricke gladly that men maie The se;
In armis also if thou conne,
Pursue till thou a name hast wonne;
And if thy voice be faire and clere,
Thou shalt makin no grete daungere,
Whan The to sing thei godely praie,
It is thy worship for to obaie;
Also to you it longith aie
To Harpe and Giterne, daunce and plaie;
For if he can well fote and daunce,
It maie him gretely doe avaunce;
Emong eke for thy Ladie sake
Songis and complaintes that thou make,
For that woll merin in her herte,
Whan that thei redin of thy smerte;
Loke that no man for scarce The holde,
For that maie greve The manifolde;
